For a time Cowper insisted on the name of the author being withheld. He fancied he had penned it in a mood of the deepest depression. He doubted its gentility. "I little thought," said Cowper, when he was writing the history of "Johnny Gilpin," "that he would appear in print; I intended to laugh, and to make two or three others laugh; but now all the world laughs. . . ."

Gilpin did not at once become famous. The author remained undiscovered, although the versatile Henderson, three years later, was delighting thousands by giving recitations at Freemason's Hall, Great Queen Street, in conjunction with Thomas Sheridan, the father of the great lessee of Drury Lane. When he delivered "John Gilpin" the whole audience chuckled, and "Mrs. Siddons lifted her unequalled dramatic hands and clapped as heartily as she herself used to be applauded in the same manner." The ballad was soon reprinted from the newspaper in which it had laid dormant for three years, and was to be seen in every shop-window, first in London, and then in the provinces. Still Cowper's secret was kept, and he writes to his friend Mr. Newton: "You tell me that I am rivalled by Mrs. Bellamy, and I hear that I have a competitor for fame, not less formidable, in the 'Learned Pig.'" Cowper was pressed to deal with other adventures of the "citizen of credit and renown" in verse, but seems to have decided to rest on his laurels.

Messrs. Sotheran recently secured two John Gilpin broadsides of 1785, the year in which Henderson was drawing crowds to listen to the ballad which was taking London by storm. The first is headed by a well-executed illustration of the scene at the Bell Inn, Edmonton: the other bears a delightful picture in colour of Mr. and Mrs. Gilpin on their way by water to Vauxhall. This sheet is of great rarity. It is entitled "A Second Holiday for John Gilpin, or a voyage to Vauxhall, where, though he had better luck than before, he was far from being contented." It contains exactly forty verses. The first verse is identical with Cowper's original. The writer continues thus:

"Most folks have heard of Gilpin's fame,
And of the race he won,
When he on horse back did set out
All unto Edmonton.

. . . . . .

And never since that luckless time,
Which gave him such dismay,
For ten whole years had he and spouse
Enjoy'd a holiday."

. . . . . .

Quoth Mrs. Gilpin:

"Amusements round the town are found.
Delighting unto all,
Therefore with me, if you'll agree,
We'll go to sweet Vaux-hall.

"A sculler, sure, will take us all.
The purchase can't be great,
And then along the silver Thames
How we shall ride in state."

Digitized by Google

John replies:

" Thy will be done, John Gilpin cry'd,
I like thy thought in this,
The ev'ning is not all the day,
Much bus'ness we can't miss.

Then Mistress Gilpin said to John,
That we may all be gay,
Your very suit you shall have on
Made for your wedding day.

Your lac'd cravat, and beaver hat,
Your cane, with head of gold,
With roll'd up hose, and then you'll be Most charming to behold."

. . . . . .

At length the happy time arriv'd
John Gilpin neatly dress'd,
Look'd like a citizen indeed,
Arrayed in all his best.

The Misses with their kind Mama
All furbelow'd about,
With proper cloaks, in case of rain,
In joyful mood set out."

. . . . . .

The rest of the story is excellently told, and at last we hear:

" He eat and grumbl'd all the while,
He grumbl'd, yet he paid,
For still to pay was Gilpin's way,
By ev'ry one 'tis said.

A coach was call'd, which grieved him sore,
And so they went away;
And Gilpin thought he ne'er would have Another holiday."

JOHN GILPIN'S ROW TO VAUXHALL.
(From a colour-print heading a very rare ballad broadside, dated July 2, 1785.)

The last verse scarcely differs from the conclusion of the ballad "delivered by Mr. Henderson, with great applause, at Freemason's Hall."

' Now let us sing, long live the King,
And Gilpin! long live he;
To Vaux-hall shou'd he go again,
May I be there to see."

The sheet was printed July 2, 1785, for E. Tringhan, No. 36, Hosier Lane, West Smithfield; the Henderson ballad appeared April 5, 1785. The publisher of the latter was W. Holland, 66, Drury Lane. Could the success of the one have possibly induced William Cowper to write the other?

It is curious to note that although Cowper persistently denied the paternity of the poem which has just afforded a fertile theme for a stirring and successful musical composition, the year 1785 abounded in what may be called Gilpin literature. In an interesting catalogue lately issued by Mr. A. Russell Smith of Great Windmill Street, may be noted the presence of that extremely rare little book the "Life of John Gilpin, taken from divers MSS. in the possession of the family, and now published for the first time; with an appendix of his celebrated journey to Edmonton, as read by Mr. Henderson at Freemason's Hall." As this quaint little volume saw the light in Dublin, the fame of the citizen of credit and renown must have bridged the Irish Channel.

A. M. B.

JOHN GILPIN'S RIDE TO WARE.
(From the engraved heading of a ballad broadside dated April 5, 1785.)

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

IT must have been a matter of some difficulty for the sport-loving dwellers in the county of Yorkshire to make up their minds whether they would go to the races, or betake themselves to the cricket match at Sheffield to see how their representatives would shape against the Australian team. The latter attraction proved to be the stronger of the two, and the attendance when racing commenced on the Knavesmire was distinctly below the average.

The Zetland Stakes on Tuesday, and the Eglinton Stakes and Flying Dutchman's Handicap on Wednesday, recall many memories of the past. The Zetland Stakes and the Eglinton Stakes derived their name from the noblemen who were respectively the owners of Voltigeur and the Flying Dutchman, and the victory of the latter in the great match between them was celebrated by the founding of the handicap which bears his name. What a match that was! One thousand guineas a side, over two miles, the Flying Dutchman, five years old, 8-st. 8½-lb., and Voltigeur, four years old, 8-st. It was the outcome of the desperate struggle between the two in the Doncaster Cup of the previous year. Never was such keen rivalry as that between the partisans of the two cracks. From the day the match was announced until they went to the post the betting was fast and furious, with not a shade of odds between them. Voltigeur made the running at a tremendous pace, and, as they rounded the turn, was three lengths to the good; but Marlow called on the Dutchman for an effort, and as they passed the stands they were level. Stride for stride they swept towards the winning-post; but the young horse was the first to tire, and the Flying Dutchman avenged his Cup defeat by a length victory. This was the Flying Dutchman's last race, and he withdrew to the stud, having only lost one out of the sixteen races in which he took part. The colt by Galloping Lad out of Evelyn won the Zetland Stakes on the 23rd inst. for Mr. J. T. Whipp, beating Lord Derby's Pleiades II. and Mr. J. Joicey's Albertist; but it should be worth remembering that Pleiades II. seemed to be chopped for speed in the early stages of the race, and did not get fairly going until too late. A curious contretemps occurred in the Knavesmire Plate; nearly all the field got through the tapes, and a strong race over the full course took place between Best Friend and Medusa. On the real start taking place Sonnet jumped off clear of Glucose, and so they ran to the finish, Cawkwell being third. The mischief arose through the Lady Carlton filly catching one end of the tapes in her teeth, which prevented them from flying up on the outside. Fermoyle scored an extremely popular win for Mr. George Faber in the Great Northern Handicap Plate, and the following day Mr. J. Joicey's Orpheus had a very easy task in the Eglinton Stakes, which he won by three lengths from Crank and Jubilation. The Flying Dutchman's Handicap proved to be a very interesting race, and resulted in the placing of William's Hill (7-st. 13-lb.), Esquire (8-st. 2-lb.), and Catty Crag (10-st.) as first, second, and third. The meeting came to a conclusion with the unexpected victory of Pretty Dick in the Melrose Handicap.

W. A. Rouch.

MR. W. BASS'S CYLLENE, BONAVISTA—ARCADIA.

Sire of Cicero, and lately purchased from Mr. C. D. Rose for 30 000-guineas

W. A. Rouch.

LORD ROSEBERY'S GAS, AYRSHIRE—ILLUMINATA.

Dam of Cicero the Derby favourite.

The programme for the Doncaster Meeting did not hold out much promise of good sport, which probably accounted for the scant attendance in the stands; but the presence of some 600 of the West Riding Yeomanry under canvas in the centre of the course lent an added liveliness to the proceedings, which commenced with the Municipal Selling Stakes, won by Mr. W. Alderson's St. Bernard II. Mr. Lambton turned out His Majesty in rare fettle for the Portland Stakes, and Maher had to show him the whip just below the distance. He scored readily enough at the finish from Bonny Rosila and Killigrew. Andria must have been rather a disappointing horse to Mr. Henning, and after looking at one time like a winner, he had to put up with second place to Chaucer in the Doncaster Spring Handicap. Six to five was laid on Galhampton for the Hopeful Stakes, but he could only finish third, and Noisy Bill had no difficulty in disposing of Quick March. Mr. Larnach's colt by Jeddah out of Rondino won the Stockil Stakes, which brought the day's racing to a close, and recalled memories of the day when his sire won the Derby, starting at 100 to 1.

So quiet and peaceful was the old-fashioned town that, strolling about on Thursday night, one could hardly realise that there was a race-meeting in progress at Doncaster, and, as a matter of fact, the racing on the concluding day of the meeting was very much of a picnic character, and was mainly noticeable from the fact that A Skipper, the only winner got in England by that sterling good horse Merman, scored another victory in the Scurry Stakes. I believe this horse will yet make a name for himself at the stud, and owners of Merman fillies will find them of inestimable value.

CAURIRE.

Digitized by Google

THE CRICKET SEASON.

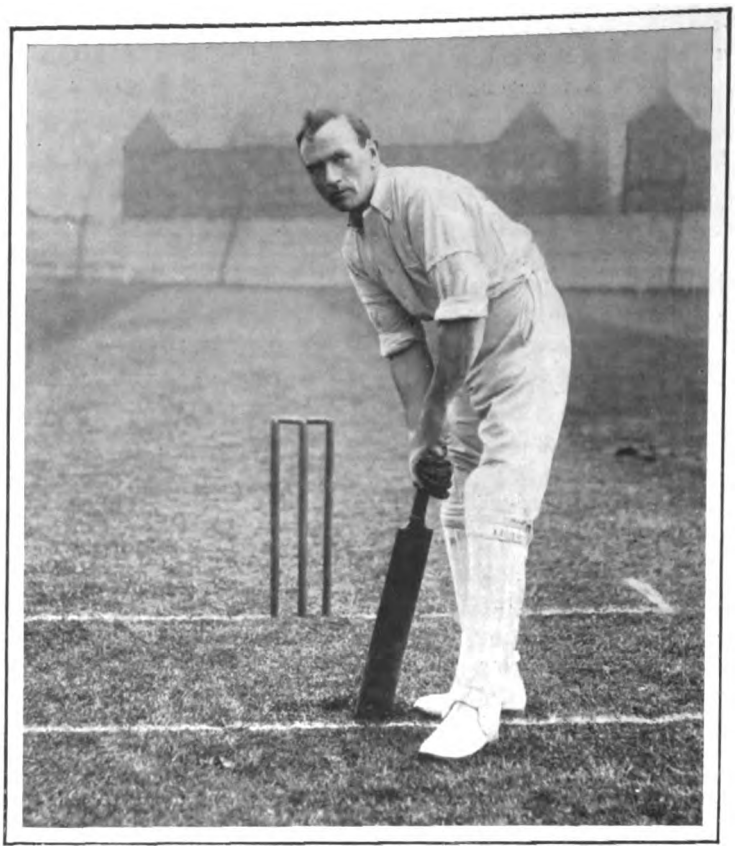
GREGOR McGREGOR

The captain of the Middlesex XI., is an Old Uppinghamian, who received his early training at the preparatory school of Cargilfield, Edinburgh. From Uppingham he found his way into the Cambridge XI. and XV., and was in his day the best amateur wicket-keeper in the country. Not that his day is by any means over yet, for he still captains the Middlesex XI. with pads and gloves on, and his well-known silent arrangement of his field, with a beckon here and a nod there, is one of the remarkable features of the county cricket season at Lord's, so much is so effectively and so unostentatiously done. As a bat he has still to be reckoned with.



C. McGAHEY.

This season McGahey has just eclipsed all his previous records with a very fine score of 277 last week at Leyton against Derbyshire. Sometimes these long scores are made when runs are not particularly of much account, and when the bowling is tired, or before the captain of the side has the power to declare. In McGahey's case Essex had lost a good wicket for 12 runs, in face of a score of 367, and three more wickets fell for 42 on the evening of the first day; so that his side was in sore straits when he went on batting on the second day, and made his record score and the highest that has ever been hit on the Leyton ground.

LORD HAWKE

The head of cricket. Lord Hawke's word may not necessarily mean law in cricket, but what the popular Yorkshire captain does not know about the game of cricket and its management is seldom worth troubling about. Strange to relate, he has never been president of the M.C.C. An Old Etonian and Cambridge captain, Lord Hawke has hit over 21,000 runs for his beloved Yorkshire, of the cricket of which he is the life and soul. He is a rare good captain, and there is no other who has done so much for the proper type of professional player, not only of Yorkshire, but of many another county. He is one of the three members of the Selection Committee to choose the England teams for the five Test matches, and this week-end will be playing at Lord's for Yorkshire v. Middlesex.

LORD DALMENY.

Whether Lord Rosebery has this week led in his third Derby winner or not is at the moment of writing on the knees of the gods; but this much is certain: his son scored his first century in first-class cricket—and such a rattling good one, too—last week at the Oval. His 112 against Warwickshire was quite Jessopian in its rapid and hard hitting. Of muscular build, his lordship, who was in the Eton XI. and has played for Middlesex, has a very strong forearm off-drive. In fact, his strokes are nearly all forearm; there is a lack of shoulder and body work about them. He is temporary captain of Surrey, but the probability is, if he can spare the time, that he will be the regular leader of the fortunes of the Oval team, which is due this week-end at Leyton, to play Essex.

Digitized by Google

Letters to Stage Favourites.

XXIV.—TO Mr. BEERBOHM TREE.

DEAR MR. TREE,—Some time ago I ventured to express the opinion that actor-managers ought not to have wives. I am now convinced that they would be better without daughters as well.

Miss Viola Tree as Viola in "Twelfth Night" was passable. Many people admired her when she played Ariel in "The Tempest." I never go to your Shakespearian performances if I can help it, so I did not see her in that part. In "Agatha" she had scarcely a fair chance. Mrs. Humphry Ward's piece was so undramatic and uninteresting that no actress could have done much with it.

"Business is Business" gives Miss Tree a very fair chance. It is true that Mr. Sydney Grundy has turned the eloquent French of M. Octave Mirbeau into the English of the police-court reporter. Still, there remains a part for Inez Izard which offers good opportunities, and is of importance to the play. Miss Tree's inexperience prevents her from making the most of these opportunities, and shifts our sympathies, which ought to go out to the revolting daughter, entirely on to the father's side.

I do wish you would apply to Miss Viola your excellent principle that actors and actresses ought to be trained for the stage. Put her into your Academy of Dramatic Art for a couple of years. With so clever a father and mother, she will profit rapidly by instruction, though her height will always be a handicap. But no more big parts for her yet; it is not fair to the girl herself to put upon her young and slender shoulders a burden far greater than she can bear.

It is a pity you did it in this case, for your own part and hers are the only two really good ones in the piece. The others count for very little. Mr. Dawson Milward, though he only has one scene, makes all he can of the Earl of Hathersage, the penniless peer whom the Jew financier has got completely into his power. Mr. Robb Harwood is very funny as a German who has exceedingly little either to do or to say. Mr. Trollope gives a neat thumb-nail sketch of the millionaire's rakish and undutiful son. But the rest are simply actors.

Take Mr. Basil Gill, for example. He comes on and tells us (as the playbill tells us) he is a chemist. We don't for a moment believe it. He is an actor, and could never by any possibility be mistaken for anything else. He walks, talks, looks, stands, sits, breathes like an actor. He has his calling stamped all over him. He cannot escape recognition.

Now, one great merit of your own performance, my dear Mr. Tree, is that you do escape recognition. I have always thought that, however cleverly you made up, there were two things certain to betray you—your eyes and your voice. I was wrong. What you have done to your eyes I don't know, but you have certainly disguised them. Your voice, too, is wonderfully altered. Now and then the familiar tones ring out. But most of the time your German-cum-Bermondsey accent is kept up with perfect consistency.

Your Isidore Izard is, indeed, as nearly perfect (according to your conception) as any stage impersonation can be. He is not the financier of the original French play. He is a German Jew, whose ancestors for some generations have inhabited South London. He is not so much a brutal as a good-natured bounder. I for one found it impossible to hate him. I rather liked him—at a little distance. Even if I had been staying with him in his gorgeous Surrey palace, and had been compelled to listen to his endless talk about himself and his 500-guinea cattle and his estate and "his horizon," and had had his ruler poked into my ribs whenever he wanted to emphasise a remark, and had watched him turning the electric light on to his life-size portrait with rollicking self-complacency—even then I fancy I should have been more amused than disgusted.

Johnston and Hoffmann.

MISS MAUD LESLIE

Who is playing Mrs. Fraser in "Business is Business," at His Majesty's Theatre.

This is not the type of financier M. Mirbeau drew, but it is quite a recognisable type, one that you have evidently studied, and one which delights your audiences. I have never seen you do anything cleverer, anything more artistic in its completeness and unity of idea. The only drawback is that you are too entertaining, too bounderishly cheerful and engaging. No shadow of impending disaster broods over you. There is no feeling of tragedy in the air. We are not prepared for the sudden disastrous turn which your affairs take at the end of the piece.

You yourself are real enough, but the play is utterly insubstantial. It is useless to ask us to believe in the "Derbyshire mountain" around which the financial intrigue is woven, or in your shadowy wife, who in all her years of splendour has not yet got accustomed to the idea of there being enough for dinner, or in your preposterous daughter, who shouts abuse at you for being rich, though she doesn't forget, when she is running away, to tell her maid to pack up her jewels! They do not impress us as having any real existence at all.

The piece ought to have ended, therefore, on some fantastic note. To be plunged without warning into grim tragedy is a shock from which we do not recover until the curtain has come down. Your amazingly realistic study of a rather fat man in a fit interests, but does not thrill us, as it should. Yet it was for this scene that you bought the play. You should have got some author not quite so out-of-date as Mr. Grundy to turn it into English. Then this tremendous finish would have been properly led up to.

Still, nothing can spoil the recollection of your inimitable portrait of "the man with the money nose"—not even the painful memory of Mr. Grundy's "topical allusions." Φ

Digitized by Google

HARLEQUIN FLAKE

A Pure Concentrated Pipe Tobacco.

Sold Everywhere in 1, 2, & 4-oz. Tins.

HARLEQUIN yields you a comfortable smoke. It is so deliciously cool, fragrant, and exquisitely balanced that it makes you feel at peace with all mankind.

GALLAHER, Ltd., The Independent Firm

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

MESSRS. CONSTABLE have done good service by publishing Mr. F. S. Delmer's admirable translation of "Gustav Frenssen's Jörn Uhl." No less than 120,000 copies of this work were sold in Germany within a year of its publication. At first sight it is difficult to understand what should have caused this book to have such an enormous vogue. The secret of it is twofold. It is a very close reproduction of a life which is well known to most people, in Germany and in all other countries—the struggling life of an honest, hard-working peasant; and, secondly, there is a fine courage about the story which will undoubtedly brace its readers to bear their troubles small and great, and hang on pluckily in the hope of better times. This is a loosely-constructed novel, and, for that reason perhaps strikes one more forcibly as a true picture of life; and here and there the writer rises to great intensity, as in the description of the battle of Gravelotte. Sympathetic and touched with humour, and full of quiet poetry, it is a remarkable book that no one should fail to read.

A Famous German Novel.

* * *

WE cannot congratulate Mr. Arthur H. Beavan on anything but the pictures in his book "Animals I Have Known" (Unwin). Some of these are quite interesting as portraits of the animals discussed, and others are reproductions of old prints, which are always welcome. The literary part of the work seems to us to fall between two stools. It is not sufficiently scientific to be valuable, nor sufficiently amusing to be good fun. These criticisms, however, only apply to the case of readers who are adults. We imagine that there are many boys who will find the book delightful, and it would not be a bad present to make to anyone under the age of, say, fifteen. Mr. Beavan has seen a great number of animals in many parts of the world, and such passages as those on Vampires will cause a thrill to young readers.

Animal Chatter.

* * *

WE are glad to see that Messrs. A. and C. Black are completing their pictorial description of British Isles with a work on Wales. The letterpress is by Mr. Edward Thomas, who is, to begin with, a Welshman, and, moreover, a writer who has proved himself, by his little volume of essays, "Horae Solitariae," his book on Oxford in Messrs. Black's series of picture books, and many contributions to the periodical press, to be exceptionally fitted for the task of describing his beautiful and mysterious native land. The illustrations are the work of Mr. Robert Fowler, R.I., on whose art Mr. A. G. Finberg contributes a note.

A Picture Book of Wales.

* * *

AMONG the reprints on our table is a very handy edition of Thackeray's "Esmond," published by Messrs. Nelson at the astonishingly low price of 6d. The book is clearly printed on opaque paper, and is firmly bound in neat dark blue cloth. The latest of Messrs. Newnes's sixpenny illustrated novels is "In Kedar's Tents," by the late Henry Seton Merriman. Here again paper and print are all that could be desired, and eight full-page illustrations by Mr. A. S. Hartrick add considerably to the pleasure of the novel.

Reprints.

* * *

MR. WERNER LAURIE has started his new Music Lover's Library with Miss Olga Racster's book, "Chats on Violins." Under this title is grouped a series of pleasant chats telling the early history of the violin, and also dealing with all the better known forms. All the great makers, from Gaspar di Salo, Maggine, Amati, to Stradivarius are described, the whole being interspersed with many anecdotes about makers and players, and useful chapters on violin music and playing. The pictures are uncommon, comprising as they do representations of all the ancient members of the violin family from the ninth century.

The Music Lover's Library.

* * *

AN important military work has just been published by Messrs. Longmans. "The Science of War" is a collection of essays and lectures by the late Colonel G. F. R. Henderson, C.B., well known as the author of "Stonewall Jackson and the American Civil War." It was Colonel Henderson's intention, had he lived, to collect and publish these papers himself; since his death the task has been very ably carried out by Captain Neill Malcolm, D.S.O. Of special interest at the present moment, in view of the existence of what is known as the "Blue-water School," are Colonel Henderson's opinions on the relative value of the Army and Navy. "Even to maritime empires," he says, "an efficient army is of the first necessity. A navy can protect, but it cannot destroy. It can ward off attack, but counter-attack is beyond its scope." But Colonel Henderson is not unduly prejudiced in favour of his own Service. "An army," he writes, "supported by an invincible navy, possesses a strength which is out of all proportion to its size. Even to those who rely on the big battalions and huge fortresses, the amphibious power of a great maritime state may be a most formidable menace; while to the state itself it is an extraordinary security." Field-Marshal Lord Roberts contributes a brief but appreciative memoir of the author.

The Science of War.

THE LATE COLONEL GEORGE FRANCIS ROBERT HENDERSON, C.B.
Whose important work on "The Science of War" has lately been published by Messrs. Longmans, with a memoir by Lord Roberts.

* * *

THERE is always a good deal of the "I" in Miss Henriette Corkran's titles, but it is a very pleasant "I," and we have no objection to meeting it as often as she likes. In her new volume, "Lucie and I" (Unwin), she departs from professed reminiscence for something that reads like part fact, part fiction. "I" in this case is a charming girl called Gabrielle Amory, and Lucie is her cousin, an artful minx, who tries to steal her lover. The book contains some pleasant descriptions of life in London and Paris, and is throughout very light and amusing. Miss Corkran knows how to get the most meaning out of the fewest words.

"Lucie and I."

* * *

WE have received from Mr. C. F. Dowsett a striking little pamphlet called "Æsthetic Acres." Mr. Dowsett, who is a Fellow of the Surveyor's Institution and a member of the Royal Agricultural Society, lives himself in one of the most beautiful parts of England, at Winklebury, near Basingstoke; and the object of his pamphlet is to advise the acquisition of land, not for immediate profit, but for health and æsthetic pleasure, and also for ulterior profit. In spite of Mr. Dowsett's arguments, we cannot see how such an enemy of cities as he is can justify to himself the acquisition of land for ulterior profit, since it can only be by the growth of cities that that land can come to have its ulterior value. But on the æsthetic side of the question we are heartily in agreement with the author's statements. There are moments when we all feel with Mr. Kipling, as quoted by Mr. Dowsett, "a very fine contempt for painted shows and the smeared things that are called pictures." Nature, after all, is the mother of Art, and a few hours in the country, especially at this time of year, give one more æsthetic satisfaction than all the pictures in the world.

Æsthetic Acres.

* * *

THE "One and All" Garden Books, issued at popular prices under the editorship of Edward Owen Greening, F.R.H.S., have a distinct character of their own. We have received No. 2 of the penny handbooks published by the Agricultural and Horticultural Association. Mr. T. W. Sanders, the writer, is the well-known President of the National Amateur Gardeners' Association. He has taken pains to state in simple terms all the most important information on the culture of hardy and half-hardy annuals. The editor has fully illustrated the handbook with about thirty pictures of easily grown plants, adding cultural directions to each illustration, a very useful plan.

For the Garden.

---

BOOKS TO READ.

Filippino Lippi. Introduction by P. G. Konody. (Newnes's Art Library.)
The Early Work of Titian. Introduction by Malcolm Bell. (Newnes's Art Library.)
The Book of Photography, by Paul N. Hasluck. (Cassell.)
The Earl of Elgin, by G. M. Wrong, M.A. (Methuen.)
Rambling Recollections, by Pearce Morrison. (Sonnenschein.)
The Barber of Saville, by Beaumarchais. Translated by Arthur B. Merick. (Dent.)
Baliol Garth, by Algernon Gissing. (Chatto and Windus.)
A Prince of Lovers, by Sir George Magnay. Bart. (Ward, Lock.)
When a Girl's Engaged, by Hope Merrick. (Chatto and Windus.)
Stingaree, by E. W. Hornung. (Chatto and Windus.)
The Friendships of Veronica, by Thomas Cobb. (Rivers.)
The Upton Letters. T. B. (Smith, Elder.)
Main Currents in Nineteenth Century Literature, by George Brandes. Vol. IV.—Naturalism in England. (Heinemann.)
The Science of War, by the late Colonel G. F. R. Henderson, C.B. (Longmans.)
Chats on Violins, by Olga Racster. (Laurie.)
The Poems of Ernest Dowson. (Lane.)
A Southern Garland, Australian Poets. (Edwards, Dunlop.)

Digitized by Google

FOR DISCRIMINATING SMOKERS.

STATE EXPRESS CIGARETTES.

Absolutely unique in their qualities

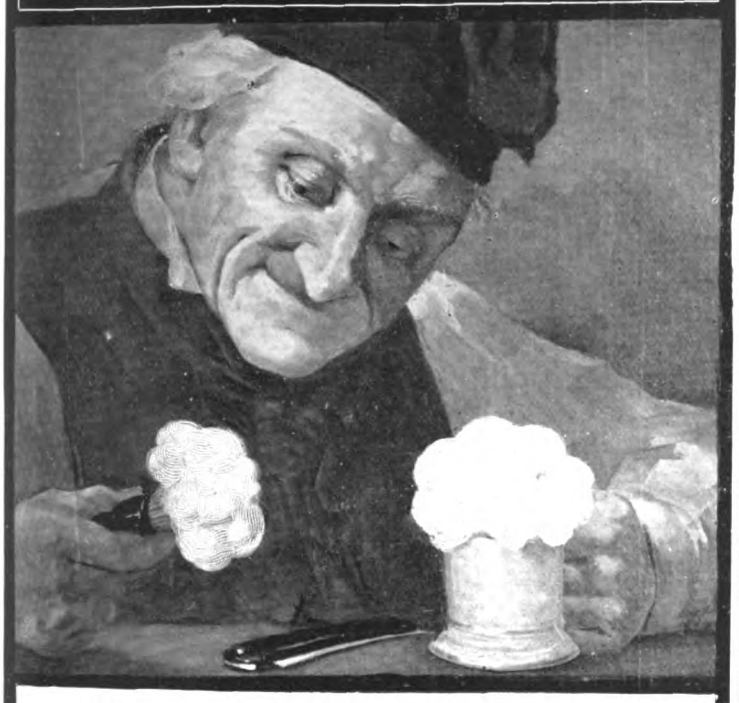
STATE EXPRESS CIGARETTES

No. 555:
4/9 per 100;
1/3 per 25.

SOLD BY ALL GOOD-CLASS TOBACCONISTS AND STORES AT HOME AND ABROAD.

Manufacturers: ARDATH TOBACCO CO., State Express Works, London, E.C.

WILLIAMS' SHAVING SOAP



Did you ever try to see what a big, thick mass of lather you could make with Williams' Shaving Soap? Try it and then apply it to your face—see how long it remains moist and how soothing, cooling and comforting its effect is.

Sold by Chemists, Hairdressers and Perfumers, all over the world, or mailed to any address on receipt of price in stamps.

Williams' Shaving Sticks, 1s. Williams' Luxury Tablets, 1s.
Williams' American Shaving Tablets, 6d.

(Trial Size) of Williams' Shaving Stick, 4d. Trial Tablet Williams' Shaving Soap for 1d. stamp by addressing

THE J. B. WILLIAMS CO., 65 Great Russell St., LONDON, W. C.; 161 Clarence St., SYDNEY. Main Office and Factories, GLASTONBURY, CONN. U. S. A.

РУБЛЬ КОФЕ

(Roub'e Coffee) is fresh roasted the day it is sent out. Ground coffee is sent only when specially asked for. Rouble Coffee is

The Coffee of the Epicure because there is no better.

5lb. sample to readers of this Paper in return for 10/- cash.

The METATA AGENTS 17b, Devonshire Sq., London, E.C.

HOW TO MAKE COFFEE. Our handbook gives detailed directions.—Write for it.

| Price per lb. | Samples post free |
|---|---|
| 2/4 | 8d. |
| 1/10 | 6d. |
| 1/6 | 4d. |

ROUBLE COFFEE

PLEASURE TOURS, Etc.

ORIENT-PACIFIC LINE.

Delightful PLEASURE CRUISES to
NORWAY
by the twin-screw ss. OPHIR, 6,914 tons, 10,000 h.p.

Sailings, June 24, July 8, 22, Aug. 5, 19.

13 DAYS for £12 12 0 and upwards.

Managers, F. Green & Co., and Anderson, Anderson & Co., Fenchurch Avenue. For passage apply to the latter firm at 5, Fenchurch Avenue, E.C., or to the West End Branch Office, 28, Cockspur Street, S.W.

HANSEN'S UNKET TABLETS.

A SEASONABLE CHANCE.

Hansen's Junket Tablets are double the value of the next best. They make junket better than any other preparation and are always reliable. Housewives everywhere are adding this delicious dish to the day's menu. Be sure you get Hansen's.

Sold by all Grocers, Chemists, etc., in Glass Tubes, containing 24 Tablets, each sufficient to make a quart of Junket. Sample Tube and Book of over 30 Recipes, 6d. post free from Hansen's Depot, 77, St. Thomas's Street, London, S.E.

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S

HIGH-CLASS

CIGARETTES.

TEOFANI'S Cigarettes receive the Highest Awards at all International Exhibitions, and are Sold by Leading Purveyors throughout the WORLD.

TEOFANI & CO., LONDON.

BORWICK'S

5 GOLD MEDALS

FOR MAKING BREAD, CAKES & PASTRY

BAKING POWDER

GUARANTEED PURE & WHOLESOME

THE GARDEN.

WEEKLY, PRICE 1d.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, LTD., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

SPA, BELGIUM.

(10 Hours from London.)

The Oldest Chalybeate Springs in the World.

Finest Bathing Establishment in Europe. Best cure for Anæmia, Chlorosis, and Heart Affections. Countless attractions, Steeplechases, Horse Show, Concerts, Theatre, Automobile Races, Golf, Balls. For programme write

BUREAU DE PUBLICITE, SPA.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
The charmingly situated Seaside Resort on the Dorsetshire Coast.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Unequalled for its Marine and Land Excursions. Golfing and Fishing.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Beautifully Illustrated Guides sent free of charge by the Town Clerk, on receipt of cost of postage, 3d.

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

WELSH PORCELAIN: SWANSEA

SOUTH WALES played an all-important part in the production of the finest kinds of porcelain at the end of the eighteenth century and during the first two or three decades of the nineteenth. To realise the full beauty of the masterpieces of the Swansea potter, and to learn to distinguish genuine specimens from shams and to differentiate the china of Swansea from that of Nantgarw, the collector should pay a prolonged visit to the Cardiff Museum, after carefully reading the magnificent work of Mr. William Turner on the history of the once famous factories of Swansea and Nantgarw. He should also master the contents of the excellent little booklet on the subject written by Mr. John Ward, the able Curator of the priceless Cardiff Collection, by whose kindly aid the accompanying illustrations are reproduced for the first time. The careful inspection of typical specimens of undoubted genuineness enables the buyer of old china to detect fraud and imposition far better than any amount of theoretical study. Mr. Ward might well follow the example of Mr. Haywood of the Royal Worcester China Works and place a small case of condemned "duffers" at the entrance of his china gallery.

It is proposed to consider briefly in this article the high-class porcelain of Swansea. Other articles will be devoted in due course to the porcelain of Nantgarw; to the work of Pardoe and Billingsley, the greatest of all the masters of the art; and finally to the early earthenware for which the "potworks" of Swansea were renowned long before the golden age of the Dillwyns and the Bevingtons. The expert can easily see the essential difference between the Swansea porcelain and that of its neighbour Nantgarw. The white ground of the former lacks the transparency and lustrous appearance of the latter. In 1790 the works were in the hands of Mr. George Haynes, who invented what he termed "opaque china," which he prophesied would some day vie with "Sieve (sic) pottery." "His prophetic soul," says Mr. Turner, "may have seen the real porcelain of 1814-17 arise in the then future; but though some of it" (such as is shown in the illustrations) "rivalled the pâte tendre of Sèvres, it was never developed from the evolution of the 'opaque china.'" Ten years later the Dillwyns acquired the works, Mr. Haynes remaining there as manager. Mr. William Weston Young was engaged as "decorator," and with his advent came the age of unconventional painting, of natural history subjects of all sorts, of shells, birds, butterflies, and insects. A very few pieces are marked "Young pinxit" or "Young f." It was not till 1810 that the Bevingtons succeeded Haynes as managers of the Cambrian Pottery, holding three shares to Mr. Dillwyn's seven. In 1817, Messrs. Walker and Bailey migrated from Nantgarw to Swansea. Mr. Bailey is responsible for some of the finest painting to be seen on the more important specimens of this beautiful china. Good work was also performed by the artist Baxter, who had been a student of the Royal Academy, by De Iunic from the Royal manufactory at Paris, and other artists, some of them natives of Swansea. The most noted buyers of Swansea china in those halcyon days were Lord Ilchester, Lord Dynevor, Sir Christopher and Lady Mary Cole, Sir John Morris, and Sir W. W. Wynne. The making of the elaborate kinds of Swansea china, beloved of the collector, ceased about 1823.

THREE MAGNIFICENT VASES OF SWANSEA CHINA
Decorated with flowers and foliage, painted unconventionally. In the Cardiff Museum.

In 1870 the works themselves were sold to Messrs. Cory for a patent fuel works and coal wharf. A great deal of genuine Swansea china bears no mark. Some of it was marked, when soft, with a stamp; a few specimens bear the word "Swansea," put in after glazing with a pencil and red paint. It often happened that Swansea porcelain was sent to London to be decorated. The plates with birds, in the illustration now given, were painted in London by Bradley and Co., and by Colcleugh. It is believed that those displaying botanical specimens with dark leaves are the work of W. W. Young. It is quite possible that the products of both Bristol and Llanelly may be mistaken for inferior Swansea, for at the dissolution of the works a large number of copper plates for transfers were sold. Some fine examples of Swansea porcelain are also to be seen in the Museum of the Royal Institution at Swansea. Mr. Turner reproduces in his exhaustive work some superb plates decorated with fruit and flowers by Morris. Excellent heraldic work was done by Beddoes, Baxter is responsible for figures, and Jenny for gold tracery. Billingsley will be spoken of on another occasion. Collectors of Welsh porcelain are most likely to pick up genuine pieces of Swansea china in North Somerset, Devon, or in Bristol. Mr. Mallett of Bath and Mr. Franklin of Taunton are rarely without one or two specimens, and a dainty posset oup, charmingly decorated with roses, was lately in the possession of Mr. Baker of Weymouth.

B.

SOME VERY FINE EXAMPLES OF SWANSEA CHINA.
Specimens of the more beautiful kinds of thi ware now in the Cardiff Museum.

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

told and offer for sale specimens of the
HIGHEST QUALITY
OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE
as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.
EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.
AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.
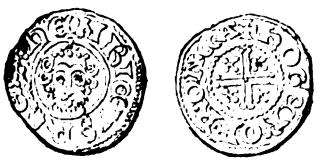
(Two hours from Paddington.)



PENNY—HENRY III.

RARE COINS & MEDALS
(AT MODERATE PRICES)
SPINK & SON LTD.
17 & 18, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.

AUTOGRAPHS—HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS.
The oldest Dealers in Europe. For Catalogues, issued monthly, and all information write at once to
M. NOEL CHARAVAY,
3, RUE DE FURSTENBERG, PARIS,
where the "AMATEUR DES AUTOGRAPHES," a valuable Monthly Publication, may also be obtained

Old Brass Stand and Lamp.

THE MISSES
H. & I. WOOLLAN
(Under Royal Patronage)
are showing a
UNIQUE
Collection of
Antiques.
Chippendale, Sheraton, and Hepplewhite Furniture. . . Worcester and Lowestoft Services. Lace, Glass, etc.
Showrooms: First Floor.
28, BROOK STREET, GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

JAMES TREGASKIS,
"The Caxton Head," 232, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.
RARE BOOKS, MEDIÆVAL MANUSCRIPTS, DOCUMENTS OF LITERARY & HISTORICAL INTEREST, ORIGINAL DRAWINGS, ENGRAVINGS, AMERICANA, CURIOSITIES, ANTIQUITIES, OBJECTS OF ART.
Catalogues Price Sixpence.

PORTRAITS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.
ENGLISH—FOREIGN—AMERICAN.
RARE ENGRAVINGS OF ALL SORTS.
WRITE FOR CATALOGUES OR VISIT THE SHOWROOMS OF
M. GODEFROY MAYER,
41, RUE BLANCHE, PARIS.

WEYMOUTH, DORSET.
CURIOSITY SHOP.
Finest collection of Genuine Curios in West of England.
Amongst other items on sale—Unique Inlaid Escritoire-Cabinet formerly property of Frederick the Great, presented by successor to Sir Evan Nepean, Secretary of Admiralty at time of Trafalgar.
BAKER, 2, Charlotte Row, Close Old Palace George III.
DESCRIBED BY MADAME D' ARBLAY.

CATALOGUES OF
ILLUSTRATED BOOKS, VIEWS, PORTRAITS, etc.,
GRATIS.
Books and Engravings Bought.
JAMES RIMELL & SON,
DEALERS IN OLD BOOKS AND ENGRAVINGS,
53, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON, W.

The Bedford Bindery.
OLD-ESTABLISHED BOOKBINDERS.
VERY MODERATE PRICES. Special attention paid to extra-illustrated works.
SPECIMENS ON VIEW.
G. F. AYLING, 1A, CAMBRIDGE ST., EDGWARE ROAD, W.

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

For Spaces in the Register apply to "THE EDITOR."

WANTED.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

Following autograph letters wanted : — Beau Brummel, Captain Gronow, Frederica, Duchess of York, Mary Anne Clarke. Good prices given.—823, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Letters of Mrs. Delaney to Mrs. Frances Hamilton; 1 vol., small 8vo., with silhoutte portrait, First edition. £1 offered. — 824, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Lord Nelson, autograph letters of Lady Nelson.—825, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Catalogues, in good condition, of the Naval Exhibition at Chelsea in 1891.—167, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Guides and Histories of the Isle of Wight.—168, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Boxiana, vols. IV. and V., in boards. 30/- each offered.—169, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Almanach de Gotha, 1814. £4 offered.—170, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old Dorset Bank Notes prior to 1816. Time Tables of Great Western Railway prior to 1847.—171, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Battersea Boxes, with views of Bath and Bristol Hot Wells.—520, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old XIVth or XVth Century Stained Glass Good specimens.—521, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Worcester China, Binn's "Century of Potting." Reports invited. 12/6 offered.—522, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Naval Prints published by any of the following :—C. Sheppard, 74, Little Britain ; C. Taylor, Holborn (date 1791) ; J. Fairburn, 110 and 146, Minories (1800-1838) ; Tabart and Co., London ; E. Rushton, Paradise Street, Liverpool ; W. Belch, Bridge Street, Boro' ; I. Houlston, Strand ; R. Sly, 41, Union Street, Somers Town ; J. Marshall, Aldermary Churchyard, London.—237, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Theatrical Prints by any of the following publishers :—Bailey, 1802-1808 ; West, 1811 ; Clark, 1821 ; Hodgson, 1822-1838 ; Dyer, 1825-1840 ; Fairburn, 1800-1837 ; Straker, 1829 ; Floyd, 1830 ; Skelt, 1832-1870 ; Green, 1834-1860 ; or Webb, Park, Reddington, and Matthews.—248, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good Impressions with good margins of engravings of old London, especially Covent Garden, the Temple, the Strand, Lincoln's Inn.—249, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Views of Bath, Six, by Samuel Cousins. £4 offered. Cir. 1776.—250, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old Views of the Commanderie at Worcester, or MSS. or Tracts relating to. — 251, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Portrait of Bishop Conybeare, of Bristol, 1756. 4to. 7/- offered.—252, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Naval Portraits, period 1756 :—Captain Charles Holmes, Admiral West, Philip Darell, Charles Buckner, and Captain Ouvry, also Earl of Holdernesse.—253, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Portrait, Bubb Dodington, Lord Melcombe. Also autograph letter.—254, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

TAPESTRY, FURNITURE, Etc.

A good Specimen of Rock Tapestry. Period about 1640.—410, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Bath Tokens issued by Turner, coach contractor, between 1770 and 1800.—747, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Original XVIIIth Century Drawings of Bath or Brighton. Also Caricatures relating to.—221A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

A fine copy of Nafte's Bath, or would accept copy of Genest's British Stage, or good extra illustrated Life of Garrick.—129A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

A very fine old Staffordshire Dinner Service of 160 pieces, in perfect condition. Crown Derby pattern, marked with crown. Sample plate on approval. Deposit.—520A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Staffordshire Ware, Busts of famous people.—521A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Life of Mrs. Frances Sheridan. Collection of Portraits from Oxberry.—744A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

BEFORE many weeks are past the automobile corps which the Russian Government has equipped and sent to the front will be engaged on active service in Manchuria. The results will be watched with the greatest interest by military authorities throughout the world, as the present is the first occasion on which the motor-car has been employed on a large scale in warfare. According to The Times, the firm of A. C. Warnecke, Hanover, received at the beginning of the present year an important commission to organise a large automobile corps, and supply the necessary cars suitable for the Manchurian roads. The delivery of the order was made at the end of March, the cars having been previously tested in the most thorough manner. The trials were conducted upon rough tracts over open country instead of ordinary roads, and in order to prove the strength of the cars they were considerably overloaded, and a high speed maintained. The drivers have been drawn from the Russian railway regiments, and the training was superintended by Herr Warnecke himself.

* * *

The Paris police have recently been taking active steps to put a stop to the selfish habit so common among the professional class of motorists of allowing clouds of smoke to issue from the exhaust pipe. A large number of summonses have been issued against offenders, and convictions and fines will doubtless follow in due course. Up to the present the London police have shown great forbearance in this respect, but unless something is done voluntarily by motorists to abate what is a growing nuisance, a campaign against the smoky exhaust is sure to follow. Carelessness in the matter of over-lubrication is not confined to the drivers of new cars, for whom some excuse may be found in their desire to keep their engines well supplied with oil at a somewhat critical period of their existence, as one often sees well-worn vehicles of antique pattern proceeding down a crowded London street, and leaving a pungent cloud of blue smoke in their wake.

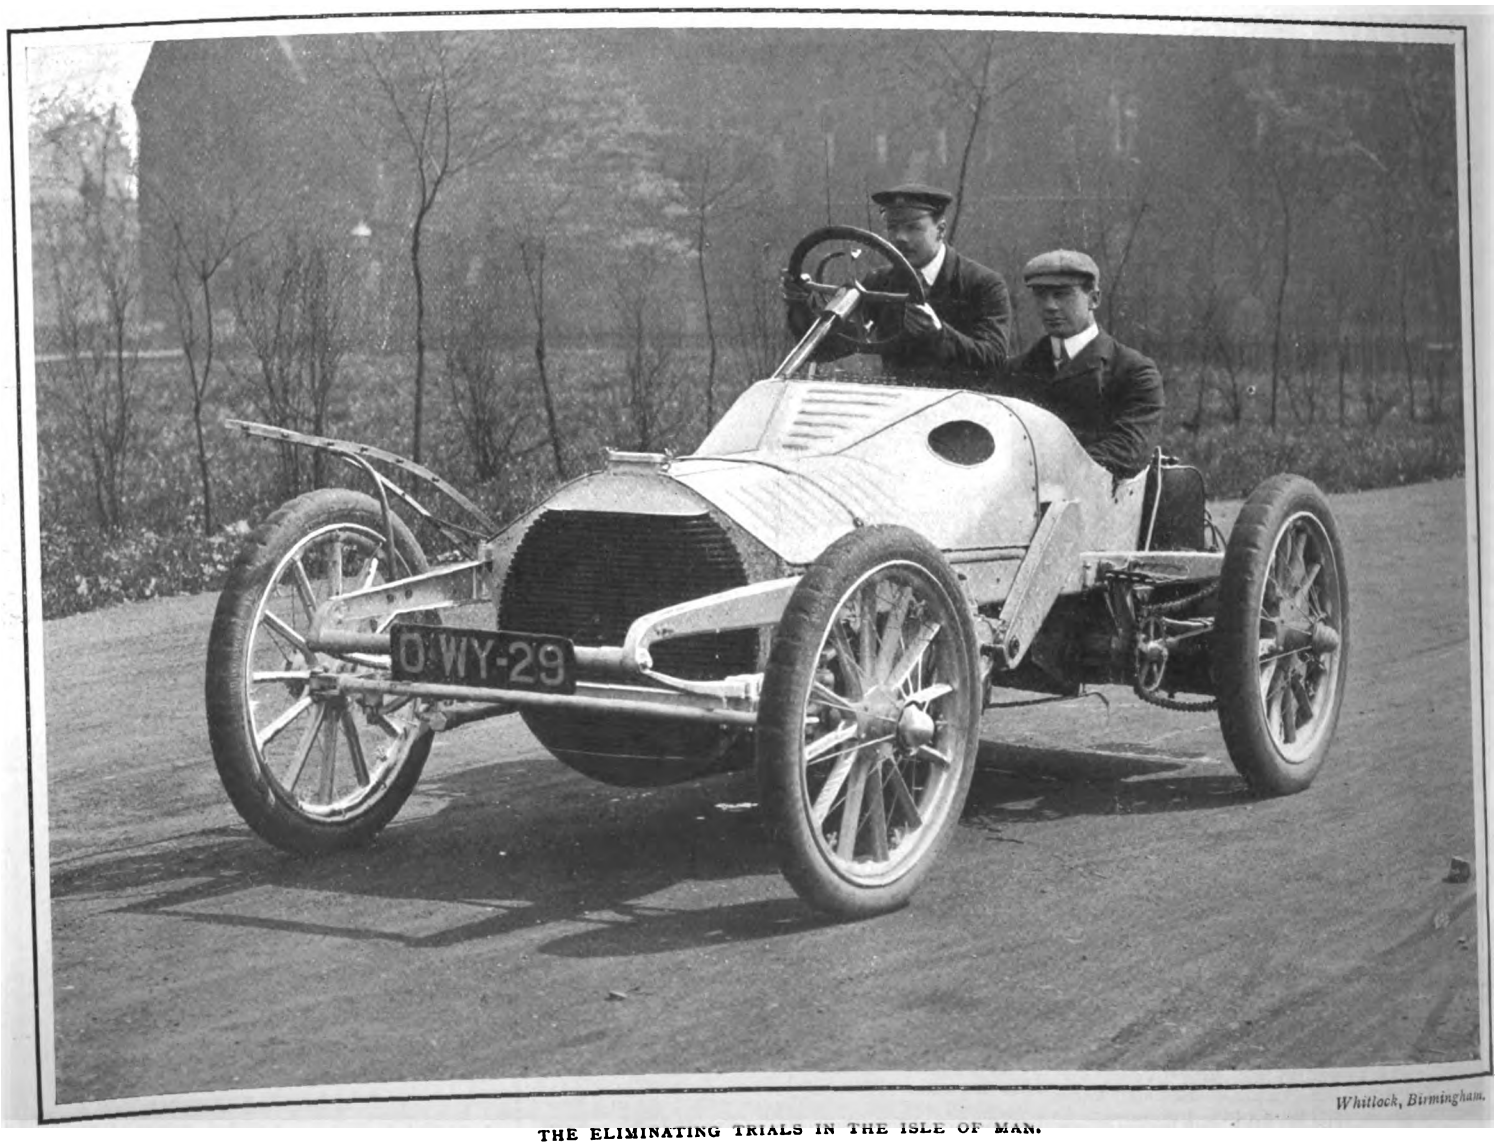
* * *

Mr. Paris Singer, who for some years past has occupied the post of hon. treasurer to the Automobile Club, has undertaken to offer a reward of £100 for the identification of any motor driver who drives off without stopping after causing an accident. He suggests that the rules under which the money will be awarded shall be drawn up by the committee of the Automobile Club. Although there is at the present moment a disposition to exaggerate the actual number of cases of the nature to which Mr. Singer refers, and to ascribe unjustly to motorists accidents in which they were in no way concerned, yet it is an undoubted fact that drivers have on several occasions recently shown a cowardly and disgraceful reluctance to face the consequence of their acts. The knowledge that a large reward will in every instance be offered where a driver makes off unidentified after causing an accident will certainly help to reduce the number of these cases, which more than anything have served to excite public feeling against the motor-car.

Several chief constables and other public officials have recently written to the Automobile Club, requesting it to impress upon its members, and motorists generally, the urgent need for careful and considerate driving, and also pointing out danger-spots where slow speeds are essential. The reluctance with which some enlightened members of the police force are compelled to institute "traps" is illustrated by the remarks of the chief constable of Lincolnshire in his letter to the club. "I would ask the Automobile Club to use their best endeavours towards securing a more satisfactory state of affairs as regards the use of the road in question, and so enable the police to avoid employing harshly repressive and vexatious measures, which are so much to be deprecated in principle, and are repugnant to all concerned." It is to be hoped that motorists will take heed to his friendly warning and drive with the utmost discretion, not merely in the neighbourhood of Grantham, to which it particularly refers, but also on all the roads of the county.

* * *

The Continental Tyre Company have recently issued a second edition of their "Handbook for Automobilists," which proved so popular last year. It is a compact volume, of handy size, and full of the kind of information that the motorist requires when touring through Great Britain and Ireland. A special feature is a list of convenient tours, with a map of Great Britain. The guide can be had free of cost (except 6d. for postage) on application to the firm at 104, Clerkenwell Road, London.



THE ELIMINATING TRIALS IN THE ISLE OF MAN.
M. Bianchi, in his Wolseley racing car, starting for a practice drive.

Digitized by Google

AGAIN SUCCESSFUL.

ITS

THE 20 H.P. FOUR-CYLINDER

ARIEL

IN THE

SCOTTISH AUTOMOBILE TRIALS.

"The successful vehicles in the four-cylinder class, the British-built Ariel. . . . The 20 h.p. Ariel made four mechanical non-stop runs."
—Morning Post, May 15th, 1905.

Fastest Car in the . . . Aberfeldy Hill Climb.

3¼ miles of continuous rise, average gradient 1 in 17.

Trials by Arrangement.

Booklet of Ariel Achievements on Request.

THE ARIEL MOTOR CO., LTD.,
Showrooms: 127-130, Long Acre, London, W.C.

SCOTTISH RELIABILITY TRIALS.

Double Success of Humber Cars.

IN THE HILL-CLIMBING COMPETITIONS THE

TWO HUMBER CARS

BEAT

ALL OTHER CARS

of equal or less horse power, and also many MORE POWERFUL AND MORE COSTLY CARS, and THE NEW BEESTON HUMBER CAR went through the whole of the Four Days' Trials WITHOUT LOSING A MARK!

Prices - 225 to 45 Guineas.

HUMBER, LTD., BEESTON (NOTTS.) & COVENTRY.

DEPOTS:—LONDON (Cycles and Motor Cycles) 32, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.; (Motor Cars) 13, Cambridge Place, Paddington, W. LIVERPOOL: 73, Bold Street. MANCHESTER: 5, Deansgate. BIRMINGHAM: 4, Victoria Square. NOTTINGHAM: Grey Friargate. SOUTHAMPTON: 27, London Road.

UNDOUBTEDLY

over indulgence in paper Cigarettes is injurious. Medical men emphatically state that it is responsible for much ill-health. A hygienic substitute is the Flor de Dindigul Cigarette, all tobacco leaf, no paper. It is far more satisfying, is deliciously mild, mellow to the palate, pure, and dispenses with the evil effects of paper. Doctors recommend and smoke them. They are truly a delightful Whiff. You should try them! Awarded 10 Gold Medals. Sold everywhere 1d. each, 8/- per 100; and by BEWLAY, 49, Strand.

FIELD'S CANDLES.

NIGHT LIGHTS.

TOILET SOAPS.

LIGHT. LIGHTFUL. DELIGHTFUL.

Grand Prize, St. Louis, 1904.

J. C. & J. FIELD, Ltd., LAMBETH, S.E. Established 1642.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

HATS AT THE MAISON LEWIS, PARIS.

THE latest Parisian hats have all the decided tilt to one side; they are immensely stylish when worn in the right way. What is the right way? you may ask, and indeed it is a somewhat difficult question to answer with any satisfaction. But you cannot fail to discern the difference in the way a Frenchwoman puts on a hat and the manner in which an Englishwoman carries out the same operation. There would seem to be only two modes of doing this, the wrong and the right; and yet what vastly different effects we may obtain! I happened to have this brought directly under my notice this week when I went to several of our first milliners with some provincial ladies to oblige some friends of mine. The elegant assistant, whose patience we sorely tried, was French—with her hair dressed to perfection; she brought us all her most charming hats and tried them on to show us the effect. We found them, one and all, sweet, delightful, charming, and a string of other gushing adjectives; but, alas! when my ladies from the North tried them on I confess I felt distressed as one after the other was discarded disdainfully as horrid, dowdy, ridiculously showy, etc., especially as I was fain to acknowledge that they did look very, very different on them. After spending two or three hours in this pleasant manner and buying nothing, I made a mental vow never to try such an experiment again. "Why, we can do better at home than this; our milliners are much smarter," was the opinion of these North Country ladies, expressed in a highly-indignant tone of voice to each other.

Two charming hats from the Maison Lewis of Paris and London are here illustrated. The one in pale pink fine straw, set daintily on the head, and much tilted on the one side by means of two white wings. A bandeau of pink liberty silk, the crown being draped with the same colour. What could be more simple than this?

IN PINK STRAW, TRIMMED WITH PINK LIBERTY SILK.
(Maison Lewis, Regent Street, W.)

And yet how chic and becoming. An ideal hat for the races, with one of the many delightful light summer toilettes. Then the second one in sky blue straw, with the white osprey aigrette and blush roses; it would be difficult to find anything more becoming. Another trying article that is much abused is the veil. So much depends on the adjustment of this, both for comfort and appearance. Some of the most stylish veils I have seen are to be had at Messrs. Charles Lee and Son's of Wigmore Street. The variety is very great, suitable for all occasions, and so easily donned too. These are all so neatly and practically arranged with a thread at the top that it is quite impossible to wear them incorrectly, and the saving of time is considerable. Nothing makes a woman come so near using bad language as a veil that will not go on properly; so I think we women owe Messrs. Charles Lee and Son a debt of gratitude for this.

I am glad to see that the question of crinoline "to be or not to be" has been satisfactorily settled. Our skirts are to fit tightly, and gracefully define the curves and lines of the figure, but they are fuller than ever round the lower part, and necessitate a great amount of skill in the cutting and fitting to obtain the correct effect. The under-skirts naturally must correspond in fulness, and thus hold the skirts away from the feet. For washing dresses, the under-skirts made of lawn with many full frills are the most practical and efficient for this purpose, especially as they take the starch so well after washing, and keep their shape beautifully.

IN SKY BLUE STRAW, WITH WHITE AIGRETTE AND ROSES.
(Maison Lewis, Regent Street, W.)

Some French blouses I have seen lately are really charming in laces and muslins of all descriptions, and they are practically adapted for keeping in their place at the waist. These have a shaped piece into which the fulness is gathered, and with the aid of a safety pin, or better still a loop, which can be attached to the corset hook, the bodices never wrinkle or get untidy, and always look trim and neat under the bolero or little coatee which will be so much patronised when the summer comes. A few days ago we all rushed to our dressmakers to hurry on our linen costumes, as we were simply unbearably hot in our cloths and tweeds—now we are only too glad to return to them and furs once more. And the cheery fire is more than welcome.

There are some sweetly pretty and at the same time extremely compact and useful bags to be seen now, and really until fashion decrees that we shall once again be allowed a pocket somewhere in our gowns these bags are a boon. The ones I like best are the flat leather ones, with many compartments; they will hold your letters, cards, purse, handkerchief, and other necessary articles, and yet not be too bulky, although one busy woman I know carries one of these, and it sometimes looks like a small portmanteau; but then she is, as I say, a very busy woman in the literary world, and has so many notes to make on her daily rounds.

R. D.

(From photographs by Reutlinger.)

Digitized by Google

HIGHEST QUALITY
TURKISH TOWELS
AND SIMILAR GOODS.

SOFT AND ABSORBENT.

THE "OSMAN" TURKISH TOWEL.
THE "OSMAN" TURKISH BATH SHEET.
THE "OSMAN" TURKISH BATH MAT.
THE "OSMAN" TURKISH BATH GOWN.

THE "OSMAN" Turkish Goods enumerated here are an absolute necessity in every household. They are a luxury, but not expensive, and can be obtained at prices within reach of every one. Be sure to buy the "Osman" brand and avoid imitations.

Made by BARLOW & JONES LIMITED, MANCHESTER;
And Sold by all High-class Drapers and Upholsterers.

DEWAR'S WHISKY

A GUID AULD SCOTCH DRINK

7/10ths of ALL

Your little ills will find relief in
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

For HEADACHE,
For BILIOUSNESS,
For INDIGESTION,
For TORPID LIVER,
For CONSTIPATION,
For SALLOW SKIN,
For the COMPLEXION.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

Very small, and easy to take as sugar. Purely Vegetable.

Genuine must have signature

PRICE 13½d.

Brent Good

FDB
FREEMANS' DARVEL BAY
SEGARS

Represent half-a-century's Reputation and Experience.

3d. each; 5 for 1/-; 9/6 per box of 50.
. . OF ALL PRINCIPAL DEALERS . . .

TRADE MARK

If any difficulty is found in obtaining these Segars, a Sample Box of five, together with the name of the nearest Agent, can be obtained by sending 1/- to the Manufacturers: J. R. FREEMAN & SON, London, N., or Grangetown, Cardiff.

If you want a friend on whom you can always rely, then possess a

'SWAN' Fountain Pen

10/6 to £20. All hands suited.
Of all Stationers. Catalogue free.
Mabie, Todd & Bard
79 & 80, High Holborn, W.C.
Branches:—
London:
93, Cheapside, E.C.
95A, Regent St. W.
Manchester:
3, Exchange Street.

FOR THE RACES.

LEATHER-COVERED
WALKING STICKS & UMBRELLAS.

With Pencil Attachment. In Gold or Silver Gilt.

Manufactured by—

BRIGG & SONS,
5, ST. JAMES'S STREET, S.W.,
or 33, Avenue de l'Opera, PARIS.

ESTABLISHED 1836.

MOTHS RUIN FURS AND BLANKETS
USE KEATING'S POWDER
KILLS MOTHS, BEETLES & FLEAS
Tins 3d., 6d. & 1/-

THE CHARING CROSS BANK. ESTABLISHED 1870.
119 and 120, BISHOPSGATE ST. WITHIN, E.C.
and 28, BEDFORD ST., CHARING CROSS, London.

Assets, £694,403. Liabilities, £372,291. Surplus, £322,112.

Loans of £30 to £2,000 granted at a few hours' notice in town or country, on mortgage of furniture, trade and farm stock, plant, crops, etc., without removal. Also on deeds, policies, and reversions. Distance no object. Easy terms.

2½ per cent. allowed on Current account balances.

DEPOSITS of £10 and upwards received on terms as under.
Subject to 3 months' Notice of Withdrawal, 5 per cent. per annum.
" 6 " " 6 " "
" 12 " " 7 " "

Special terms for longer periods. Interest paid quarterly. The Terminable Deposit Bonds pay nearly 9 per cent., and are a safe investment. Write or call for Prospectus.

A. WILLIAMS,
H. J. TALL, } Joint Managers.

BIRKBECK BANK

ESTABLISHED 1851.

Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.
Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.
Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

Icilma.

A clear, healthy complexion and white hands, proof against hard water, heat, cold wind, or fog, can only be obtained and kept by using Icilma Water, Cream, and Soap, Nature's remedies. Their cleansing, whitening, softening, and healing effect is unique and immediate. (Samples Soap and Cream, 2d.)

ICILMA CO., Ltd. (Dept. 43), 142, Gray's Inn Road, London, W.C.

Digitized by Google

Something Different . . in . . After-Dinner Sweets.

Day to day variety in after-dinner sweets may always be secured with Brown & Polson's 'Patent' Corn Flour. Such delightful dishes as

Vanilla, Chocolate, and Fruit Souffles, | Orange, Prune, and Coffee Jellies, Caramel Custards, | Vanilla Tartlets,

and the celebrated

Corn Flour Blancmange or Blancmange Sponge

are first favourites whenever tried.

Prunes and Blancmange is better than Prunes and Rice.

Brown & Polson's A Recipe Book is full of useful recipes for such delicious and wholesome fare. A copy will be posted to every lady sending 1d. stamp to Brown & Polson, Paisley. It is well worth the trouble of writing for it at once.

Brown & Polson's "Patent" Corn Flour.

'DAREN' BREAD.

Awarded 37 HONOURS.

One doctor writes: "'DAREN' is 20 per cent. more nourishing than white bread." Another writes: "'DAREN' Bread is delicious. If it were in more general use there would be much less indigestion and other sufferings." Most Towns have one or more bakers making 'DAREN.' It is sold in 2d., 3d., and 4d. Loaves. Each loaf is stamped 'DAREN.' Ask your baker to supply you. If any difficulty is experienced in obtaining 'DAREN' Bread, apply the 'DAREN' Flour Mills, Dartford, Kent, for name of nearest agent. A dainty Sample Loaf of 'DAREN' will be sent on receipt of four penny stamps to defray cost of postage.

THE WHITE WINES OF ENGLAND.

BULMER'S Famous Herefordshire CIDERS and PERRY.

For a beautifully illustrated booklet on Cider, price list, and special booklet for invalids, apply to

H. P. BULMER and CO., HEREFORD.

BUTLER'S "KEEN" RAZOR

HOLLOW GROUND. SPECIAL STEEL. HAND FORGED.

"I know that Razor, it comes from Sheffield."

HIGHEST AWARDS. GUARANTEED PERFECT, AND BRITISH MADE THROUGHOUT.

"Keen as this razor' edge invisible." (Love's Labour's Lost.)

Black Handles ... ... each 3/- & *5/- | Ivory Handles ... ... each 5/- & *7/6
*Per pair, in best Case, 15/-; 7-day set, 50/- | *Per pair in Russia Case, 21/-; 7-day set, 70/-
"CAVENDISH" CARVERS (Regd. brand) keep "an edge that won't come off."
Fine Ivory, 20/-; Imitation ditto or Stag, 10/6 per pair. Post Free of all Dealers.
Sole Makers, GEORGE BUTLER & CO., Trinity Works, SHEFFIELD.

THE KING'S MENU.

TO-DAY'S menu is well adapted for either a Sunday supper or for a little luncheon party in a modest establishment. Given a couple of chafing-dishes and a casserole, everything can be prepared beforehand with the exception of the eggs, and these can be scrambled in the chafing-dish in the dining-room.

With regard to the sweets, the compôte could be of cherries, green gooseberries, or any other fruit procurable. It is a great improvement if a little liqueur be added to the syrup the fruit is cooked in.

The advantages of junket are that it is very cheap and very easy to make, provided a really reliable brand of junket tablets is used, while if the junket is stood on ice for half-an-hour before serving—of course after properly coagulated—it makes a very dainty dish, especially if whipped or clotted cream be put on the top. If whipped cream, sweetened, flavoured, and coloured a pretty pale pink, pistachio green, or apricot yellow, is piped round the edge of the junket in its glass dish, in a ring of little roses, with one big rose in the centre, a very pretty dish is the result, and one, moreover, that can be varied almost indefinitely, as the junket and cream can both be flavoured with any of the liqueur syrups now obtainable for a shilling or so the large bottle, or of course liqueur itself can be used, or a simple essence such as vanilla, almond, or lemon.

For the junket tablets I have found Chr. Hausen's the most uniformly reliable, as well as extremely economical. Most good grocers and stores keep them now, but if any of my readers have any difficulty in procuring a specimen tube they can obtain one direct from the London depôt at 77, St. Thomas's Street, London Bridge, S.E., if they enclose 6d. in stamps, and mention this paper when they write. Each tube contains twenty-four tablets, each of which will convert a quart of new milk into a perfect junket, if the directions enclosed in each tube are followed.

A JUNE LUNCHEON OR SUNDAY SUPPER.

ŒUFS BROUILLES AUX POINTES D'ASPERGES.

PETITS PAINS DE SAUMON A LA RUSSE.

PIGEONS EN CASSEROLE.

SALADE D'AGNEAU A LA PRINTANIERE.

JUNKET.

COMPOTE DE FRUITS.

CROUTES D'ANCHOIS.

Junket is such a valuable article of diet, especially for all sufferers from nervous and wasting diseases, including consumption, that one wonders it is not more common on our tables, not only in the summer but in the winter months as well, especially now that doctors here are awaking to the wonderful cures effected by the Weir Mitchell treatment, in which milk plays so large a part. Offered as junket, it is always popular with children as well as with many people who find fresh milk difficult to digest—a difficulty usually entirely obviated by the action of the rennet composing the tablets, as this, comprising, of course, the gastric juices of calves stomachs, relieves the human stomach of most of its work, as it partly digests the milk when it coagulates it.

Speaking from personal experience I would counsel every sufferer from nervous exhaustion and dyspepsia to give a good trial to junket having it, variously flavoured, with a fresh fruit salad compôte or macedoine three or four times a week, with the addition, if possible, of whipped or clotted cream. While trying it, avoid rich indigestible puddings, pastry, and sugary sweets, pickles, and vinegary sauces, and a distinct improvement in health will be experienced in nine cases out of ten. The reason, of course, is that new whole milk (which must, of course, be used for junkets) is rich in easily digested and assimilated fat (i.e., the cream), and as healthy nerves should contain 22 per cent. of fat, while the muscles contain but 3 per cent., it is very evident that sufferers from nervous exhaustion and kindred disorders arising from this soon find the benefit of "scientific stoking" of their bodily machinery, when they recognise the necessity of an increased supply of fat for the proper nourishment of the nerves and brain. Its need, of course, is indicated by this very high percentage of fatty matter, which must be present if they are to be healthy and normal.

Cod liver oil has been, and still is, greatly used for the purpose, but a dainty junket, accompanied by cream and fruit, is surely a much pleasanter way of increasing the proportion of the right kind of fat in our regular diet.

And now to revert to the recipes for the other dishes in the menu.

ŒUFS BROUILLES AUX POINTES D'ASPERGES.

Break into a basin as many eggs as you require, and allow a dessertspoonful of fresh cream and a heaped dessertspoonful and a-half of asparagus tips for every two eggs used. The second chafing-dish is to prepare the tips in before adding them to the scrambled eggs, but if they could be brought in ready in a hot legumiére only one would be needed. After cooking the asparagus as usual—or the heads can be cut off and boiled separately in salted water when prepared specially for this dish, and not rechouffé from a previous meal, while the stalks are cooked much longer and used for a purée—cut off the heads, drain well, then toss them in a pan with a little butter, an ounce to the gill of tips (which would be right for six eggs) being the usual allowance. The beaten eggs and cream are seasoned with salt, pepper, and a dust of nutmeg when this is not objected to. Have the inner dish of the chafer ready in the outer one filled with boiling water and the lamp lit, pour in the eggs and cream and stir steadily till they begin to thicken, then add the hot asparagus tips, stir again till the eggs are on the point of setting, then serve at once straight from the pan. Green peas are equally good with eggs like this, a spoonful of grated ham or tongue can also be added as well, flaked cold salmon, lobster, shrimps, etc., in fact, it is a most useful dish in the hands of a good manager, as in it all sorts of odds and ends can be used in appetising form.

Digitized by Google

PETITS PAINS DE SAUMON A LA RUSSE.

Make a salmon forcemeat, fill some little moulds with it, poach them till the centre feels firm when touched with the finger, then set aside till cold. They are then unmoulded, masked with mayonnaise aspic, and then when this is set served on a mound of lettuce or other suitable salad, or on rounds of cucumber, and garnished with seasoned water-cress and chopped aspic. In any case, put a spoonful of horse-radish or Suédoise sauce on the top of each little mould. Lobster or other fish can be used for the forcemeat, or a mixture which makes this a very useful little dish—as trimmings from fillets, etc.—can be used for the forcemeat, and this eked out with some pounded sieved shell-fish.

SALADE D'AGNEAU A LA PRINTANIERE.

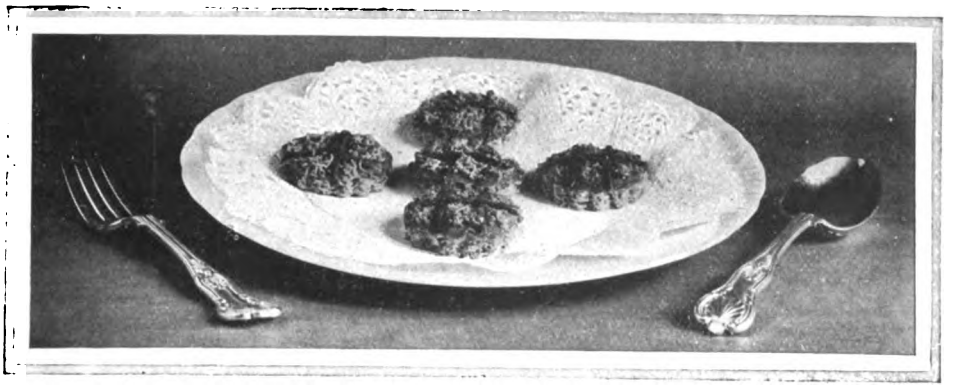
Braise the best end of a neck of lamb and set aside till cold. It is then divided into neat little cutlets, and then coated with mint jelly. For this stir two large tablespoonfuls of mint sauce into half a pint of aspic jelly, and use just as it is setting. When the coating on the cutlets is set arrange these en couronne, and fill the centre of the dish with a lettuce salad, dressed with mayonnaise and garnished with plovers' eggs. Garnish round the cutlets with chopped mint jelly. Another nice version of this dish is obtained by coating the cutlets with tomato aspic, then arranging them in a circle and filling the centre with a salade cuite to taste, or simply cold asparagus tips or green peas tossed in either a plain oil and vinegar dressing or a mayonnaise. Use equal parts of tomato purée and aspic jelly mixed together for the tomato aspic.



CROUTES D'ANCHOIS.

(Specially prepared and photographed for this paper.)

ANSWER TO CORRESPONDENT.

COLD SAVOURIES (Juanita).—How will these do? Shrimp Darioles: Line some little moulds with aspic cream (one part thick sweet cream to two parts of just liquid aspic jelly, and a few drops of tarragon vinegar, using just as the mixture is getting cold), fill these moulds with shrimps, pounded to a paste with a little thick cream or butter and a drop or two of anchovy essence, and a seasoning of mace and cayenne. The tops of the moulds when full are run over with a layer of the aspic cream, then set aside till firm, preferably on ice or in the cave. Have ready either some little rounds of fried bread or savoury paste biscuits to taste, dust with coralline pepper and minced parsley, put a slice of cucumber on each, after first seasoning it with a few drops of oil and vinegar, then turn out a little dariole on each. Mock Caviar Balls: For these wash and bone some anchovies, rub over a mortar with a freshly-cut clove of garlic, then pound the anchovies in it together with just enough fresh olive oil to make a smooth paste, and a seasoning of dried powdered parsley, coralline pepper, salt, and lemon juice. Now form this paste into balls, and set them on ice for an hour or so before serving accompanied by a rack of hot dry toast. This mixture is also very good spread on thin slices of brown or Hovis bread and butter, and then rolled up before serving. Very similar is the following: Pound smoothly four washed and boned anchovies, two small shallots or four chives, and a teaspoonful of mustard with sufficient rich cheese and butter to make a smooth, strongly-flavoured paste. Serve like the mock caviar. SYBARITE.

BEWARE OF COPIES!

CHEF Sauce

Improves hot and cold joints, curries, stews, etc.

Makes a meal more appetising, and improves the digestion.

LAZENBY'S Sauce.

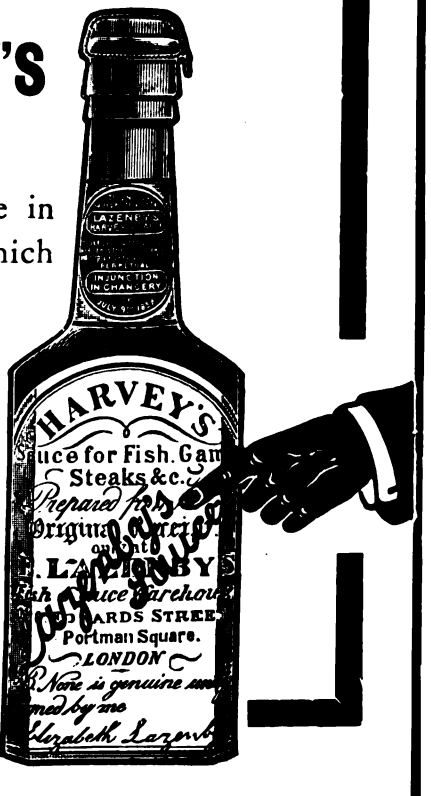
The only sauce in the market which is the original Harvey's Sauce, and not a copy, bears the signature of Elizabeth Lazenby.



Prepared by
E. LAZENBY & SON, Ltd., 18, Trinity Street, London, S.E.

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

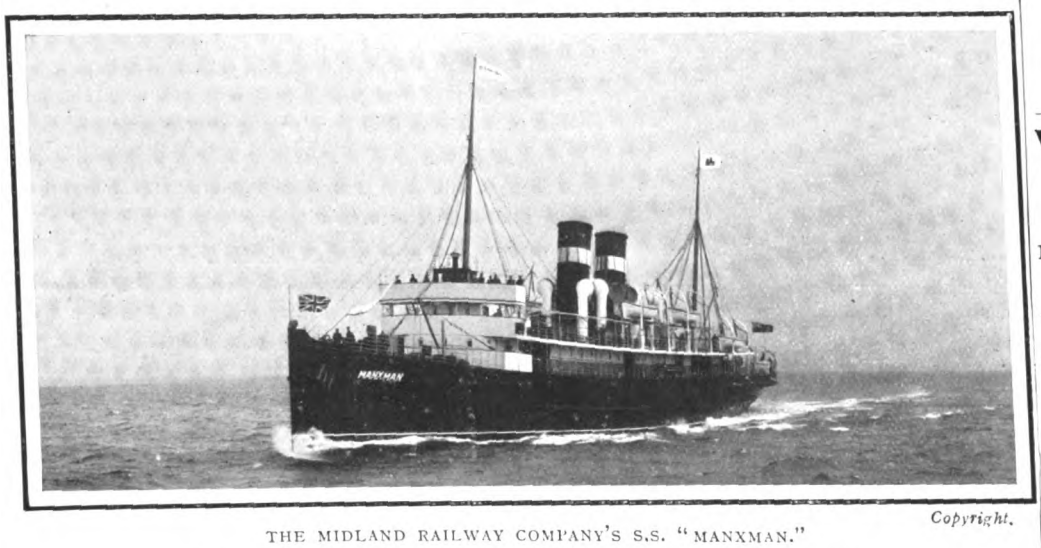
THE Midland Railway have recently had built for their cross-channel service between Heysham and Belfast and the Isle of Man four large steamers, two of which, the "Antrim" and the "Donegal," are twin-screw steamers, whilst the other two, the "Londonderry" and the "Manxman," are propelled by turbines. The vessels are the fastest afloat, being easily capable of attaining a speed of between 22-knots and 23-knots, and are provided with every modern convenience for day and night services. The "Manxman," which has been built by Messrs. Vickers, Sons, and Maxim, Limited, at their Naval Construction Works, Barrow-in-Furness, is owned by the Midland Railway Company, and is intended specially for the Douglas service from the new harbour at Heysham. The accommodation consists almost entirely of large saloons, with a number of state rooms to suit night service, should it be desired to have an extended trip. There are three complete decks, the main, upper, and promenade, while above the latter there is a shade deck, which forms a splendid unobstructed promenade. In regard to the state rooms, the Midland Company, acting on the advice of Mr. John Mathieson, have introduced the single-berth arrangement, which has been found so acceptable in the case of railway travellers. The second-class accommodation usually provided in such ships is given over to the third-class passengers, the state rooms, dining-room, smoke-room, and other conveniences excelling what has hitherto been done. The 23-knot speed was obtained without any undue pressure of boilers or machinery, so that there will be no difficulty in getting a similar satisfactory result when the vessel goes into service. The 23-knots is about one sea mile per hour better than has been attained by any previously built turbine merchant ship.



Copyright.

THE MIDLAND RAILWAY COMPANY'S S.S. "MANXMAN."
One of the new turbine steamers plying between Heysham and Douglas.

MR. ROBERT ARTHUR presents at Kennington Theatre this week Arthur Shirley's well-known drama, "The Grip of Iron," in which Mr. Fred Powell will again be seen in his original part of Simonet the Strangler. The week following he has arranged for the first English production of a very successful American comedy-drama, called "Human Hearts." At the Coronet Theatre Miss Ada Reeve will present the musical play "Winnie Brooke, Widow," in which she so charmingly fills the title rôle. By arrangement with Miss Julia Neilson and Mr. Fred Terry, "Sunday" is staged at Fulham Theatre, and played by a first-class company, including Miss Jean Stirling Mackinlay, who will take Miss Neilson's original part.

THE Whitsuntide holiday programme of the Great Northern Railway aims this season at being more extensive and varied than usual. Cheap tickets and quick trains are features in the arrangements. The company announce that they will run special cheap excursion trains from London and suburban stations. The attractions of the Lincolnshire Coast are being prominently brought under the notice of the public, for special excursions are leaving King's Cross for Skegness, Sutton-on-Sea, and Mablethorpe, and a special opportunity for Londoners to spend a few hours at the seaside will be afforded by the express half-day excursion leaving King's Cross at 11.40 a.m. on Whit-Monday for Skegness. For this train the extraordinarily low fare of 3s. will be charged.

CHEAP tickets available for eight days will be issued by the Great Eastern Railway to Brussels and Liége, viâ Harwich and Antwerp, for Whitsuntide. Passengers leaving London in the evening reach Brussels next morning and Liége at noon, after a comfortable night's rest on board the steamer. For visiting The Hague, the Rhine, North and South Germany, and Bale for Switzerland, special facilities are offered viâ the Great Eastern Railway Company's Royal British Mail Harwich—Hook of Holland route.

THE cigarette to-day is ubiquitous. On the 'bus and in the cab, after meals and even during meals, early in the morning and late at night, men may be seen smoking cigarettes, and for people who smoke so continuously something really pure and reliable is wanted. The Salonica Cigarette Company have been well advised in taking premises in Piccadilly, for a readier supply of their cigarettes will certainly lead to increased demand. And unlike most really good cigarettes, the Salonica brands are not expensive, ranging from 12s. a hundred for the Extra Fine, to 7s. for the Divan. Moreover, these cigarettes are supplied in three sizes, grand, medium, and petit format.

A VISIT to Dieppe, Rouen, or Paris just now is indeed delightful. You cross from Newhaven in well-appointed turbine and twin-screw steamers, and in about three hours land on foreign soil. From Dieppe the journey to Paris is made through the charming Seine valley and the ancient city of Rouen. To enable the journey to be performed economically the Brighton Railway Company have arranged to run a special fourteen-day excursion, viâ the Newhaven-Dieppe Royal Mail route, and the tickets will be issued on Saturday, June 10.

SPECIAL excursion tickets will be issued by the South Eastern and Chatham Railway Company to Paris viâ Folkestone and Boulogne, by the service leaving Charing Cross at 2.20 p.m. on June 8, 9, and 11, and by trains leaving Charing Cross at 10 a.m. and 2.20 p.m. on Saturday, June 10. They will also be issued by the night mail service leaving Charing Cross at 9 p.m. and Cannon Street at 9.5 p.m., each evening, from June 8 to 11 inclusive, viâ Dover and Calais, returning from Paris at 2.40 p.m. viâ Boulogne, or 8.40 p.m. viâ Calais, any day within fourteen days. A cheap excursion to Boulogne will leave Charing Cross at 2.20 p.m. on Saturday, June 10, and Sunday, June 11, returning at 12.5 or 7.10 p.m. on Whit-Monday. The home arrangements made by the company are also excellent, and full particulars may be obtained in the special holiday programme and bills.

Amusements.

HIS MAJESTY'S. MR. TREE.
EVERY EVENING AT 8.50.
BUSINESS IS BUSINESS.
A new play in three acts, adapted by Sydney Grundy from "Les Affaires sont les Affaires," by Octave Mirbeau.
MATINEE TO-DAY (SATURDAY) AND EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.30.
Preceded every evening at 8.15 by THE BALLAD MONGER.

CRITERION THEATRE, W.
Sole Lessee: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
To-night at 8.30.
Saturday Matinees at 3.
An entirely new and original Comedy, entitled
WHAT PAMELA WANTED.
By Fred de Gresac, Author of "The Marriage of Kitty," and Paul Veber. Adapted by Charles Brookfield. Cast includes Miss Lottie Venne, Miss Vane Featherstone, Maud Wynter, and Miss Ethel Irving; Messrs. Frank Cooper, Lennox Pawle, John Tresahar, and Leslie Faber. Box Office now open.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Lessee and Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
To-night at 8.45.
MR. HOPKINSON.
An original farce in three acts by R. C. Carton.
Preceded at 8.15 by Mr. Nelson Jackson.
Matinee every Saturday at 3.

APOLLO THEATRE.
HENRY LOWENFELD, Sole Proprietor.
TOM B. DAVIS, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
Every Evening at 8.15.
The Comic Opera, in Three Acts,
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Wednesday at 2.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.
Managers: A. & S. GATTI & CHARLES FROHMAN.
Every Evening at 8.15,
THE CATCH OF THE SEASON,
By Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton.
Mr. Seymour Hicks and the Vaudeville Theatre Company.
Matinees every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15

COMEDY THEATRE.
Lessee: Mr. WM. GREET.
Under the Management of Mr. FRANK CURZON.
Every Evening at 9, Wed. and Sat. Matinees at 3
The Times says: "Riot of high spirits, perpetual laughter."
The Daily Telegraph says: "Uproarious, bright, and mirth provoking, hard to beat."
THE GREAT SUCCESS.
CHARLES FROHMAN presents WILLIAM COLLIER and the entire American Company in the delightful Farce, in Three Acts,
"THE DICTATOR."
"THE DICTATOR."
By Richard Harding Davis.
At 8.30, "The Philosopher in the Apple Orchard."

EMPIRE THEATRE.
New Fairy Divertissement
"THE DANCING DOLL."
Special Attractions.
Doors open 7.45. Manager: Mr. H. J. HITCHINS.

NAVAL, SHIPPING, AND FISHERIES EXHIBITION, EARL'S COURT.
Open 12 noon to 11 p.m. Admission 1s.
Season Tickets, 10s. 6d.
Naval Construction, Armaments, Shipping & Fisheries.
NELSON'S CENTENARY RELICS, and of all Naval Events from the 15th to 20th Century.
FISHING VILLAGE. Working Exhibits. Model of "Victory."
GRAND NAVAL AND MILITARY CONCERTS
Go on board the full-size Cruiser.
Real Batteries of 4.7 Guns, Hotchkiss and Maxims
The Cruiser is manned by a crew of 150 Handy-men.
Go on board and visit the Mediterranean ports.
Trafalgar 1805—Professor Fleischer's Great Work. Death of Nelson. West's "Our Navy." Maxim's Captive Flying Machine. Fairy Grotto. Indian Canoes. Great Canadian Indian Village—Chiefs, Squaws, and Papooses. Voyage in a Submarine. Vanderdecken's Haunted Cabin. Famous Sea Fights. Miss de Rohan's Musical and Dramatic Sketches. Tillikum Canoe. Auto-Photographic Portraiture. Switchback. Chutes.
FISH RESTAURANT IN QUEEN'S COURT.

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. | | PAGE. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Mr. Silas K. Hocking | 307 | More Green-room Gossips—XXV.—With Mr. William Collier | 332 |
| The March of Events | 308 | In the Land of the Midnight Sun | 333 |
| On the Links | 314 | The Services | 334 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 319 | Japan's Great Naval Victory | 335 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 320 | The Racing Season | 336 |
| The Parisians of Paris—Mme. Simone Le Bargy | 322 | Costumes at the Tournament | viii. |
| Parisian Players | 323 | Literary Notes | x. |
| Under the Burgee | 324 | Leaves from a Collector's Note-book—Welsh Porcelain: Nantgarw China | xii. |
| Yachts of the Year | 325 | Motoring Notes | xiv. |
| Plays and Players | 326, 327 | Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xvi. |
| The Traveller—A Holiday in Ireland | 328 | The King's Menu | xviii. |
| The Australasian Lawn Tennis Team | 330 | Here, There, and Everywhere | xx. |
| The Cricket Season | 331 | | |

TO LIBRARIES, CLUBS, HOTELS, ETC.

A Reading Case for THE KING can be had post free on application to the Publishers, George Newnes, Limited, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

HOTELS, etc.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

TORQUAY (Population 33,625).—PREMIER HEALTH RESORT. Unrivalled climate. Warm in winter. Sunshine-land. Charming drives and sheltered walks. 120 acres of public gardens. Piers.

TORQUAY. Irreproachable water supply and perfect sanitation. Theatre, concerts, and other musical attractions. Medicated baths of all kinds. Express trains from all parts.

For Illustrated Descriptive Books of Torquay, apply FREDK. S. HEX, Town Clerk.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524.
Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. ,, 858.
Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. ,, 641. Kensington.

Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date. First-class cuisine.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence.

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hôte or à la Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Close to Parades. Week End terms. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address: "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne.

FOREIGN HOTELS.

BIARRITZ.

GRAND HOTEL.—Winter Season.—First-class establishment. Splendid situation, facing the sea. Patronised by the elité; rendezvous of English Society. Every comfort; excellent attendance and cooking.—MONTENAT, Manager.

AXENSTEIN (Lake Lucerne; 2,350ft. above sea level; electric railway Brunnen-Axenstein).—First-class Hotel. World-renowned climatic health resort; patronised by English society. "Axenstein is the loveliest spot I met with on my journey through Switzerland."—QUEEN VICTORIA.

TENERIFFE.

HAS THE FINEST WINTER CLIMATE IN THE WORLD.

THE First-class HOTELS there are the QUISISANA at Santa Cruz,
the AGUERE and CONTINENTAL at La Laguna, and
the MARTIANEZ (late Grand) at Port Orotava.
All under the Management of C. H. TRENKEL. Prospectus, etc., on application.

SHIPPING.

MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

SPLENDID STRETCH OF THE RIVER COLNE, at Wraysbury, to be LET, or the Freehold would be SOLD.—Full particulars of P. and G. GEEN, Surveyors, 57, Waterloo Road, S.E.

GREAT NORTHERN & NORTH EASTERN RAILWAYS.

"Twixt Humber & Tweed"

SPLENDID CLIFFS & SANDS, BRACING MOORS, LOVELY DALES.

CHEAP FARES FAST TRAINS

APPLY TO CHIEF PASSENGER AGENT G.N.R. KING'S CROSS, OR ANY G.N. AGENT FOR FURTHER INFORMATION.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

THE COLONEL TAKES THE 19TH (WHOLE IN ONE)

Head Office: 11, SO. EXCHANGE PLACE, GLASGOW.

J. H. ROGER PROPR.

LESSEE OF

H.M. CUSTOMS (No. 15) BOND. JAMES WATT STREET, GLASGOW.

Special Quotations to Golf Clubs.

"COLONEL BOGEY" WHISKY.

GUARANTEED 7 YEARS OLD.

42/- PER DOZEN. CARRIAGE PAID.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS of every description, including TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT. MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.

Handsome Public Rooms, including 2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.

Terms from MANAGER.

ST. ANNE'S-ON-THE-SEA

(Near BLACKPOOL).

Contains

FOUR GOLF LINKS (18 Holes each).

Also facilities for

BOATING, BATHING, FISHING, CYCLING, TENNIS.

Splendid Beach. Ideal Holiday Resort.

ILLUSTRATED GUIDE FREE on application to

SECRETARY, Advertising Committee, Public Offices, St. Anne's-on-the-Sea.

LELANT, ST. IVES BAY, CORNWALL (close to golf links and station).—Furnished HOUSE, with plate and linen, to LET for Summer months; two large sitting rooms, six bedrooms, one dressing room, bathroom.—"T.B.H.," "Evelyns," Uxbridge.

SOUTHWOLD (best position on the Common; close to Golf Links).—To be LET, well Furnished, for June, July, and August, the pretty and artistic HOUSE known as "Link's Cottage," containing square hall, two sitting and large recreation rooms, servants' sitting room, seven bedrooms (fourteen beds), bathroom; electric light and telephone.—Apply to Mrs. ROBINSON, on Property.

THE LINKS, LLANGAMMARCH WELLS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

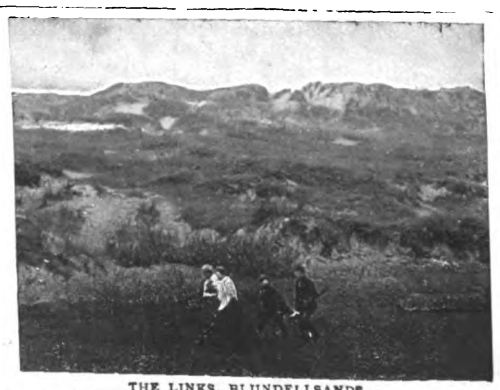
Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hôte, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.



THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.

THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.

A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.

Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads. Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.

Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.

Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.

New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,

Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.

To be obtained from Thos. Cook, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.

Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.

Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL.

SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.

Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head.

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.

Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 30s. Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address: "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY, Within easy access of London.

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers, inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable being on sand.

GENTS' GOLF GARTERS. NON-ELASTIC; Nickel Lever Buckle, no teeth; Fine Tan Webb, ⅞ in. wide; instantly adjusted to any TENSION; ensures comfort and smartness in appearance, 1/- per pair post free.—DAN MOODY & Co., Egyptian Works, TROWBRIDGE.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer)

"'Is it a Private House or an Hotel?' is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

Club Houses can be efficiently and economically lighted by

ACETYLENE.

Write H. BAKER, 49, Victoria Street, S.W.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. Cox, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.
MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL.—Brinklea, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY.

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method).—Manager, E. DIELMANN.

SHERINGHAM, NORFOLK.

THE SHERINGHAM HOTEL,

ADJOINING GOLF LINKS (18 HOLES).

LARGEST HOTEL IN SHERINGHAM. Open all the year round. Handsome Dining Hall, 67ft. long. Numerous spacious Suites of Rooms commanding beautiful Sea and Land Views. Billiard and Smoking Rooms. Excellent and Improved Sanitary arrangements. Extensive Private Grounds. Lawn tennis, croquet. First-class Stables. Accommodation for Motors and Cycles. Through Trains from King's Cross, Peterborough, Birmingham, Leicester, etc.

Telegrams: "Sheringham Hotel, Sheringham."
National Telephone: No. 3. F. EDENS, Manager.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.

Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.

Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.

Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.

MODERATE TARIFF.

Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months.

Perfect Sanitary arrangements.

Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE

Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit.

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL.

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Digitized by Google

DR. J. M. BARRIE says—"What I call the 'Arcadia' in My Lady Nicotine is the CRAVEN Mixture and no other."

"CRAVEN"—acknowledged throughout the World the Mixture of Merit and Purity. The Favourite Tobacco since its invention in 1857.

Do not fail to give a trial to the "CRAVEN" Cigarette — "The Cigarette of Distinction."

Whitsuntide Excursions

BY THE

BEST ROUTE

FOR COMFORTABLE TRAVEL AND PICTURESQUE SCENERY.

In connection with the Whitsuntide Holidays, the MIDLAND Company will issue cheap tickets from LONDON (St. Pancras), Moorgate Street, Aldersgate Street, Farringdon Street, King's Cross (Metropolitan), Greenwich, and Woolwich Stations, to the principal provincial towns and holiday resorts in the United Kingdom and Ireland, including . . .

PEAK OF DERBYSHIRE. — Matlock, Rowsley (for Haddon and Chatsworth), Buxton, Bakewell, Chapel-en-le-Frith, Hayfield, &c.

LANCASHIRE. — Manchester, Liverpool, Bolton, Preston, Blackburn, Bury, Rochdale, Oldham, Southport, Blackpool, St. Anne's-on-Sea, Lytham, &c.

YORKSHIRE. — Sheffield, Leeds, Bradford, Harrogate, Ilkley, Ben Rhydding, Scarborough, Bridlington, Whitby, Filey, &c.

LAKE DISTRICT. — Morecambe, Windermere, Grange, Bowness, Coniston, Furness Abbey, &c.

IRELAND. — Belfast, Londonderry, Portrush (for Giant's Causeway), Dublin, &c.

SCOTLAND. — Edinburgh, Glasgow, Perth, Aberdeen, &c.

Full particulars of these with fares and every information will be found in the Company's Whitsuntide Programmes to be had free on application to the District Superintendent, Midland Railway, St. Pancras; THOS. COOK & SON, Ludgate Circus, or to any Midland Station Master or Agent in the London District.

Extension of Week-End Tickets.

The short date Tickets issued on June 9th and 10th will be available for returning on Sunday (where train service permits), Monday, Tuesday, or Wednesday, June 11th, 12th, 13th, or 14th.

DERBY. JOHN MATHIESON, General Manager.

SKIN LIFE

Cook's THRONE SOAP adds life to the skin!
Why?
Because it is thoroughly prepared from skin-nourishing constituents by scientific methods (under scientific control).

Six dainty samples sent post free for six penny stamps.

EDWARD COOK & CO., Ltd., The Soap Specialists, London, E.

"The House for Veils."

Largest Selection in London.

CHARLES LEE & SON,

The Royal Specialists for Ladies' Wear, . .

98 & 100, Wigmore St., LONDON, W.,

famous for

The Royal Crescent Veil,

a shaped Patent adjustable Veil, at prices and quality showing a great saving over veiling purchased by the yard.

9d., 1/-, 1/3, 1/6, 1/9, 2/-, 2/3, 2/6, etc.

MOTOR VEILS.
MOTOR HATS.
MOTOR VEILS.

The latest and largest selection in London.

Messrs. LEE & SON continue to send a box containing a good assortment by post; boxes ready for return, no trouble after selecting.

ORIENT-PACIFIC LINE.

Delightful PLEASURE CRUISES to

NORWAY

by the twin-screw ss. OPHIR, 6,914 tons, 10,000 h.p.

SAILINGS, JUNE 24, JULY 8, 22, AUG. 5, 19.

13 DAYS for £12 12 0 and upwards.

Managers, F. Green & Co., and Anderson, Anderson & Co., Fenchurch Avenue. For passage apply to the latter firm at 5, Fenchurch Avenue, E.C., or to the West End Branch Office, 28, Cockspur Street, S.W.

ST. JACOBS OIL

CURES

LUMBAGO, SCIATICA,

RHEUMATISM,

Neuralgia | Soreness
Bruises | Stiffness

And Bodily Aches and Pains.

In 1/1½ and 2/6 sizes.
Of all Chemists.

CONQUERS PAIN!

Digitized by Google

ON THE LINKS—GOLF AT CROMER.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

VOL. XX. No. 436. SATURDAY, JUNE 10th, 1905. PRICE 6d.

Sarony.

MR. SILAS K. HOCKING

Prospective Liberal Candidate for Mid-Bucks.

(See page 319.)

Digitized by Google

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 486. Saturday, June 10, 1905.

Editorial Offices—3, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephone—No. 2,748, GERRARD.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

EDITORIAL.

photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

KING EDWARD AND KING ALFONSO.—Fresh from his triumphs in the French capital, the King of Spain has been welcomed in England with all the sincerity and hospitality that sunshine and crowded streets, gay decorations, and brilliant pageants can signify. But underlying all the pomp and circumstance of the visit is a feeling of friendliness for the young man, called upon at so early an age to assume the cares and burdens of a crown. The five days of his visit have taken him through many parts of London, and everywhere he has found a great crowd waiting to cheer him. From the time the thunder of the cannon of the Channel Fleet welcomed him in Spithead cordiality has been in the air, and his obvious pleasure at all that has been done for his entertainment has been noted with as much satisfaction here as it was in Paris. King Alfonso goes back to his own country knowing that here in England there are many thousands watching with friendly eyes the progress his country is making in the reawakening of commerce and art. Spain has a glorious past. There is no reason why, under the guidance of a keen and enthusiastic monarch, the future should not be equally bright.

End, Sunningdale.

H.M. BRIG "KING EDWARD VII."

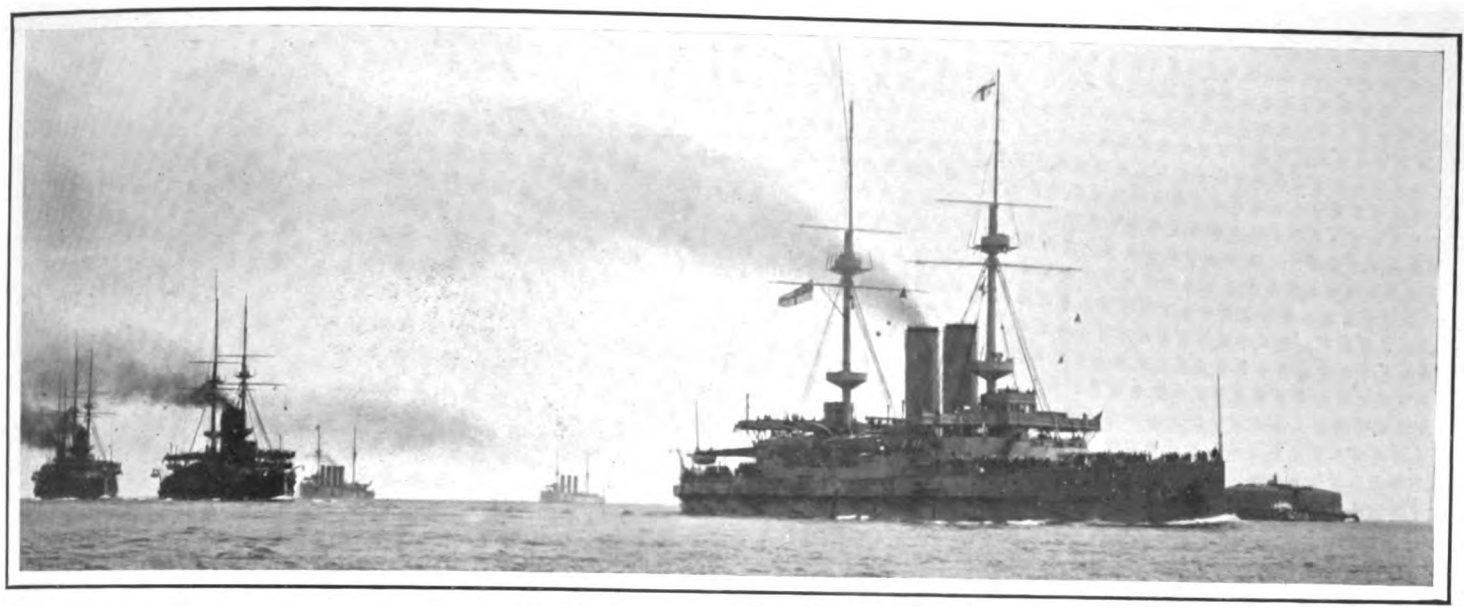
After the launch at Virginia Water last week. The brig, which was taken by road from Brentford to Virginia Water, was under the charge of Messrs. John Tims and Sons, the King's watermen. It is 48-ft. in length, has a beam of 13-ft., and has been fitted up for the use of Prince Edward and his brothers, who will receive their first instruction in seamanship on board her.

THE KING AND THE ROYAL WEDDING.—Next week the great social event of the year takes place at Windsor, and the Royal borough will be more crowded with scions of reigning houses, envoys extraordinary, and members of the nobility than it has been since the Duke and Duchess of Connaught were married. At the end of this present week the Court removes to Windsor Castle, and there all the distinguished guests bidden to the marriage of Princess Margaret of Connaught and Prince Gustav Adolf of Norway and Sweden will be received by the King and Queen. All the arrangements for the ceremony and the attendant festivities are complete. From Windsor the newly-married couple will cross to Ireland for the honeymoon, and after spending a fortnight there will journey to Sweden, possibly in the "Victoria and Albert," escorted part of the way at least by the Swedish coast squadron.

PRINCE ARTHUR IN BERLIN.—Once again Prince Arthur of Connaught has been to Germany, this time to represent King Edward at the wedding of the Kaiser's eldest son. The brilliant ceremony in the venerable Court Chapel of the Schloss, the quaint and picturesque ceremonies which have accompanied the solemnisation of the wedding, and the intense enthusiasm with which the Prince and his bride were greeted in the streets have served to make the visit to Berlin a pleasant one for all the Royal delegates. The revival of many old and curious customs has made the marriage a peculiarly interesting one. One ceremony, that of "crowning" the bride before she starts for the Chapel, is as ancient as Prussia itself. Each Princess bride has had one of these "bridal crowns," but for one of them the crown had a real and not a merely honorary significance. Princess Sophia Louise of Mecklenburg, when she was married to Frederick I. of Prussia in 1708, was given an Imperial crown, and the ceremony before the wedding was not part of the bridal adornment but an actual corona tion.

THE KING AND AMERICA. — Though in sending a Royal carriage and escort for Mr. Whitelaw Reid when the new American Ambassador presented his credentials, the King made no departure from the formalities usual to the reception of a new ambassador, the warmth of the greeting accorded to Mr. Whitelaw Reid will not be lost upon the citizens of the great Republic. At the Diamond Jubilee and again at the Coronation he was over here as the representative of the President. Born in Ohio in the year Queen Victoria came to the throne, Mr. Reid has in his time played many parts. He began as a school teacher, became a journalist and newspaper proprietor before he was twenty-five, was war correspondent, then leader-writer, and then took up cotton growing. But journalism soon reclaimed him; he joined the staff of the New York Tribune, and later bought the paper. In 1890, however, he took up the duties of Minister to France, and he has now come to this country to foster and extend the good relationship already existing between the two great Anglo Saxon nations.

Digitized by Google



Cribb, Southsea.

THE CHANNEL FLEET AT SPITHEAD.

The Fleet was assembled off Portsmouth to welcome the King of Spain on Monday, when his Majesty crossed from Cherbourg in the "Victoria and Albert." At Portsmouth the Prince of Wales met the King and accompanied him to London.

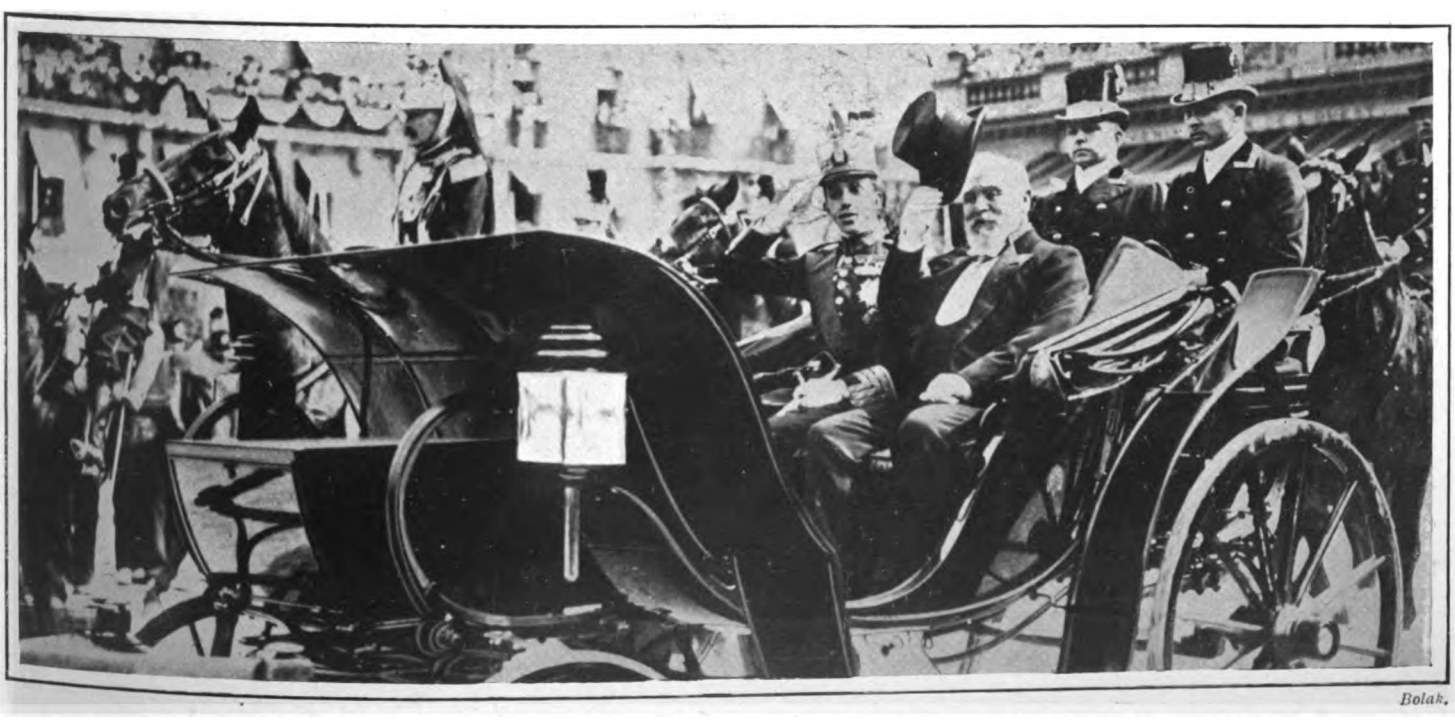
Chusseau.

THE KING ATTENDING MASS.

During his stay in Paris an attempt was made to assassinate King Alfonso with a bomb. On the following day he attended mass to offer thanks for his escape.

KING ALFONSO IN PARIS.

The first ex-territorial tour of the young King of Spain began with a visit to France, where he was received with great cordiality. He had a busy week, attending receptions and reviews, banquets and gala performances.



Bolak.

THE KING OF SPAIN AND PRESIDENT LOUBET.

The King and the President drove about Paris very freely during the visit, and large crowds gathered wherever the Royal visitor was expected. This week the King has been in London as the guest of King Edward, and has had a very crowded programme to get through.

Digitized by Google

THE LADIES' GYMKHANA AT RANELAGH.

THE RESCUE RACE ON THE ORNAMENTAL WATER.

In this event, the great success of the afternoon at Ranelagh last Saturday, a lady riding one pony and leading another had to go to the lake, dismount and cross in a punt, return with a gentleman, who on arrival at the bank, mounted the second pony, both lady and gentleman then riding hard for the winning-post.

TEA-TIME ON THE LAWN.

There was a brilliant concourse of spectators at Ranelagh for the ladies' gymkhana on Saturday last, and a number of wonderful confections were to be seen. The lawns at tea-time presented a most animated sight, and the whole afternoon was most successful. The Duchess of Roxburghe presented the prizes to the winners of the various events.

Digitized by Google

THE FOURTH OF JUNE AT ETON.

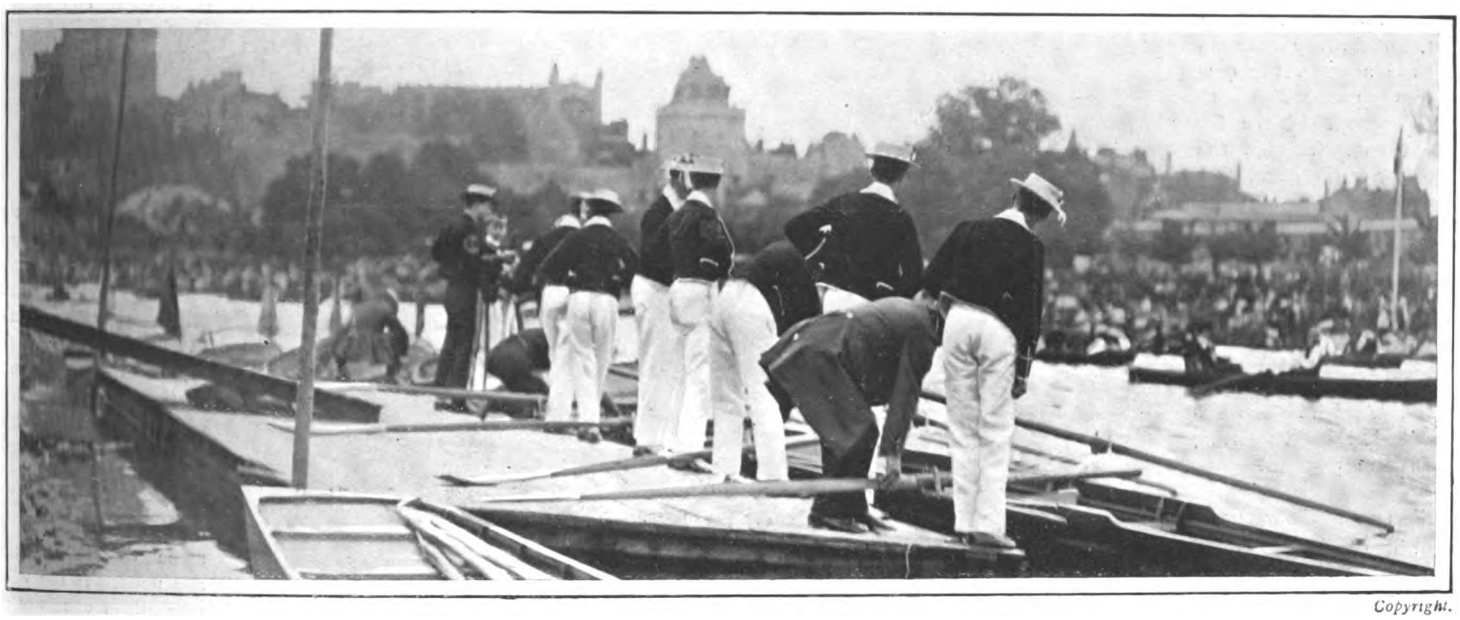
Copyright

THE PROCESSION OF BOATS, WITH "MONARCH" IN THE VAN.



Copyright.

THE CREW OF "DEFIANCE" READY TO LEAVE THE RAFT.

Copyright.

WATCHING THE CRICKET MATCH BETWEEN ETON AND NEW COLLEGE.

Last Saturday, the Fourth of June celebrations at Eton were marked by a note of farewell to Dr. Warre, the retiring head-master, and a firework portrait of him which was lighted in the evening was the signal for an outburst of cheering, which was an eloquent token to his popularity.

Digitized by Google

THE MALL.—So the name of the old road from Buckingham Palace to Whitehall is not to be changed after all. The King has expressed the desire that it shall be known still as The Mall, and the crude and inartistic Processional Road goes by the board. We do not, nowadays, give good names to our new streets (though Kingsway and Aldwych may be said to be exceptions to the rule), and it would have been sad indeed if the historic name of King Charles's playground should have been lost. The Mall, however, was not the original site of the game of pell-mell, the street in which the War Office now stands claiming that honour. Pell-mell resembled, as has often been pointed out, both croquet and golf, and remained for some time literally the sport of kings. And though the newly-completed road may often be the scene of processions, the fact need not be indicated in its name. Indeed, only last week a wonderful array was seen in the avenue, the carriages proceeding to Buckingham Palace for the Court. Though the number of spectators was large, there must be thousands of Londoners to whom this brilliant sight is absolutely unknown, and yet as a pageant, as a panorama of wealth and beauty, it would be difficult to rival. And The Mall is precisely the right setting for such a pageant.

PRINCE EDWARD'S BRIG.—In the "Naval intelligence" of last week was a little item of great interest, though perhaps internationally it was not of great significance. It was the addition of a new war-ship to the Navy List, a second "King Edward VII.," and a fair-sized boat, though no rival to the battle-ship in which flies Admiral May's flag as Admiral of the Atlantic Fleet. The 48-ft. brig, which has been prepared for Prince Edward's use on Virginia Water, was taken last week to its station by the King's Waterman, Tims of Staines, and the commander of the vessel will take over his duties during the next few days, and sail his little craft, with the aid of a petty officer, over the usually placid waters which the Duke of Cumberland and Paul Sandby, the water colourist, evolved to replace a morass some 150 years ago. William IV. always maintained a frigate there, and Queen Victoria had a State barge on the water for many years. Virginia Water is a beautiful spot. Whatever his faults, Cumberland was not a bad judge of effect in landscape gardening, and the arrangement of the lake, which is some 150 acres in extent, is such as to give the appearance of a boundless expanse of water. And upon this Prince Edward will get his first practical instruction in seamanship. The duties of the teaching staff at Osborne should become a sinecure, so far as he is concerned, when the petty officer of the "King Edward VII." brig has shown his Royal Highness the ropes, in a literal sense.

Thomson.

MRS. RANDELL

Who was one of the principal stall-holders at the "Noah's Ark" Bazaar, which was opened on Monday by the Duchess of Portland.

THE SHAH'S TOUR.—The Shah of Persia is to European eyes a picturesque figure. We read of his "Peacock Throne," in form like a trestle-bed, 9-ft. long by 6-ft. wide, the woodwork studded so thickly with precious stones that it is well-nigh invisible beneath the coating of rubies, diamonds, emeralds, and sapphires. And the treasures of his palace, carved ivory models of the most exquisite workmanship, wonderful carpets, to put the exact value of which into figures were to raise smiles from the incredulous—all these have been described to us by the facile pens of those who have been able to obtain sight of them. The other side of the picture, too, has not been neglected. The poverty of the country-folk, the corruption of the ruling governors and their entourages, and the vileness of their prisons, have received equally graphic and illuminating treatment at the same hands. But through it all there is very little mention of the Shah himself, the ruler of 8,000,000 people, and a factor of no little importance in the Asian question. Perhaps the reason is that we in Europe know him better than do his own people, to whom he shows himself only on rare and ceremonious occasions. The Shah of Persia has visited us before, and in Europe even Persian majesty cannot hide itself altogether from the eye of the general public.

CANALS.—The waterways of England are at present, if the metaphor may be allowed, standing with one foot in the grave. They have fallen into disuse, and though some of them are picturesque enough, and some of those who still make a living by them are, as a race, most interesting to the student of human nature, yet some drastic measures are needed if the whole network of canals is not to be swept ruthlessly away. Lord Roberts once said that, as a means of transport for troops and munitions of war, canals were safer than railways; and though there is perhaps something bizarre about the slow-moving barge in this age of rapid transit and perpetual motion, there is much that is still useful in these waterways. In the Midlands there are nearly 600-miles of canals which could be easily turned to very good account, and which, though they need not and could not compete with railways for the transit of light or perishable goods, could be very well utilised for the transport of heavier wares. There is evident a desire to revive the canal as a working partner in the great business of the distribution of our produce, which may rescue it from the weeds and the anglers to whom it is now abandoned. Or our canals might be turned into safe and comfortable courses for motor-boats to race along.

Digitized by Google

AN AUSTRALIAN ARTIST.—Though there are many Australian artists of repute, foreign governments are not exactly competing with one another for the possession of their works. But this is the happy position of Mrs. Ellis Rowan. For her paintings the Germans are prepared to pay £15,000, the Americans have made an offer for them, and the Victorians are equally on the alert to secure them for their National Gallery. The collection, which includes a picture of every Australian wild flower, has been exhibited in every European capital, in New York, and in the Colonies. To ensure fidelity to Nature, Mrs. Rowan took long journeys to the remotest parts of her native land, and her success as an artist has been admitted by the first critics of the day. It would be a pity if such a peculiarly national collection should go to a foreign country, and so Australia is likely to become the possessor. Mrs. Rowan is a daughter of Mr. Charles Ryan of Victoria, and a sister of Lady Charles Scott. Her husband was an officer in the 43rd Regiment.

THE COLONIAL CONFERENCE.—The Colonies will hardly feel complimented to learn that the Government had forgotten all about the Conference of 1906. Acting on a suggestion made by Mr. Seddon, the Premiers came to an agreement with the Colonial Secretary that they should meet automatically every four years. Therefore, in the natural order of things, a Conference will meet next June. But at Edinburgh Mr. Balfour made it obvious that the fact had escaped his memory, and Mr. Lyttelton has been writing despatches to the Colonial Governments, which prove that he is in the same case. Not that this is anything new. But Colonials would prefer a little less talk about the Imperial spirit, and a little more practice. Such a confession as Mr. Balfour's is not likely to impress them with the inefficiency of the Government, particularly when it has been tacitly made by the Colonial Secretary, who of all Ministers should know better.

Thomson.

MRS. LEONARD AVERY

Who presided at the toy stall at the "Noah's Ark" Bazaar, held this week at Prince's Skating Rink, under distinguished patronage, in aid of Our Dumb Friends' League.

A NEW HOSTESS.—The ball given by Mrs. Marshall Roberts in Grosvenor Square last week was a great success, and one of the fairest figures there was the hostess herself. She is one of the many Englishwomen married to American millionaires, though, with the exception of Mrs. McCormick, none of them does much entertaining in the London season. Mrs. Roberts is beginning her career as a hostess early, for she was married only three years ago this month. Her husband, who came over to England with his mother at the close of the late reign, is now half an Englishman, for he was an officer in the Scots Guards. His father, according to a list drawn up by Mr. Henry Clews, the well-known New York banker, was among the six richest men in the United States. He was, too, a personality with charm as well as force. His widow married Colonel Vivian.

LORD SELBORNE IN SOUTH AFRICA.—Lord Selborne has begun well. His first speech at Cape Town was as tactful as it was to the point. There was something graceful as well as illuminating in his reference to the four figures who stand out in the history of South Africa. For in paying a tribute to them, he suggested that he would follow in their steps. That two of them were Van Riebeck and President Brand is a compliment to the Dutch, which they will not fail to note. The first was the founder of the Cape Colony, since it was he who planted a settlement at the foot of Table Mountain in the seventeenth century. President Brand was the most enlightened statesman the Dutch have yet produced in South Africa. In thus emphasising the essential oneness of the Africander people, English and Dutch, Lord Selborne has struck a right note.

CADET BATTALIONS.—The Prince of Wales never loses an opportunity of impressing on us the value of Colonial experience. At Hampstead, the other day, he returned to the subject. The occasion was the opening of the headquarters of the 1st Cadet Battalion of the Royal Fusiliers. He began with the impression of the Cadets he received in the Colonies four years ago, and ended with the opening sentence of a memorandum lately issued by the Federal Government of the Commonwealth: "The training of the young is the foundation of any sound system of national defence." A nation in which the rising generation is a Cadet Army is never likely to conceive the duties of citizenship lightly. How valuable such training can be we proved in the South African War, since nearly all the Colonial contingents consisted of men who had been Cadets.

A SOCIETY DANCE.—Lady Cooper is the wife of Sir Daniel Cooper, who succeeded to the title a year or two ago. His father was one of the richest Australians of his time. Like the late Lord Sherbrooke, he was one of the ground landlords of Sydney, having bought land for a song in the old days with an eye to the city's future development. His generosity was princely, and he and his comely wife were typical Colonists of the fine old school. Sir Daniel is best known as an owner of race-horses. His wife is a sister of Sir George Grant Suttie and of the Countess of Stair. The dance she gave at her house in Hill Street is her first essay at London entertaining on a large scale.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

THE Ladies' Championship was won at Cromer last week by Miss Bertha Thompson of the Beverley and East Riding Golf Club, who defeated Miss M. Stuart of the Royal Portrush Club in the final by 3 up and 2 to play. The new lady champion has long been known as one of our best match players, and, though a frequent winner of tournaments, she has never been able hitherto to do her game justice in the principal ladies' competition of the year. This year, however, Miss Thompson's game appears to have been particularly sound and steady, reaching occasionally to some brilliant efforts when her various matches became critical. It was not until the fourth round that the new lady champion began to feel the pressure of the draw, for in this round she had to meet Miss Dod, the holder of last year's championship. Miss Dod, however, did not appear to be playing the consistently strong game that won her the championship at Troon last year, and Miss Thompson beat the Open Champion rather easily by 4 and 3 to play. Then in the fifth round Miss Thompson had a very stiff match against Miss M. Curtis of the Essex Club, America, who was one of the finalists in the American Ladies' Championship of 1900, held at Shinnecock Hills, Miss Frances Griscom, one of the American lady players at Cromer, being the winner. Miss Thompson only won at the nineteenth hole, and then in the sixth round she had even a stiffer match against Miss Steel of Sheffield, who carried the lady champion to the twentieth hole. The semi-final also produced an admirably-contested match against Mrs. F. W. Brown of Wimbledon, who at one time was looked upon as a likely winner. But Miss M. E. Stuart having beaten Miss Dorothy Campbell of North Berwick, the final was played between representatives of England and Ireland, with the result already stated.

* * *

Miss Thompson, therefore, secured her first championship through the sterling merit of her play, and in no degree owing to what has come to be known as "the luck of the draw." That the win was a very popular one may be accepted from the fact that when her victory was secured, it is reported that two stalwart Scottish ladies insisted, in the fervour of their enthusiasm, upon carrying the new lady champion shoulder high for a short distance, and that thereafter one of the American ladies shook Miss Thompson's hand warmly with the greeting, "Let me shake you for America." There was this year a record entry of 137 for the Championship, and only two of the competitors who entered scratched. It was a busy week's golf at Cromer, and the smoothness with which all the arrangements of the gathering were carried through speaks highly for the organisation and administrative methods of the officials of the Ladies' Golf Union, aided by the willing assistance of the executive of the Royal Cromer Club. At the close of the competition the Championship cup and medals were presented to the winners by Lord Suffield. Next year's Ladies' Championship will be held at Burnham in Somerset.

* * *

The Open Championship at St. Andrews this week has drawn together a very large and representative gathering of professionals from the three countries. The play began on Saturday last with the England v. Scotland International match promoted by the Professional Golfers' Association. A great deal of public interest was taken in the match in which Taylor played Braid. Both players were at the top of their game, and a very fine struggle for supremacy was witnessed. Braid carried off the first two holes, and completed the first half in 37, to Taylor's 38. Coming home, however, Taylor drew out a magnificent game, whereby he soon wiped off his arrears, and beat Braid by 3 and 1 to play. Taylor did eight holes in 34 strokes. Harry Vardon beat Herd by 5 and 3, Tom Vardon and Jack White, the Open Champion, halved their match, Toogood beat Willie Park by 3 and 2, and Andrew Kirkaldy beat Sherlock by 4 and 2 to play. On the day's play England won the singles by one point, while in the foursomes Scotland won by two matches to one. The result of the competition was, therefore, a tie on the day's play.

* * *

The nine-hole course of the Coombe Wood Golf Club was formally opened a week ago by the Prime Minister. The course is primarily Tucker Brothers, Cromer.

THE LADIES' CHAMPIONSHIP.

The Semi-Finalists and Finalists—standing (left to right)—Mrs. F. W. Brown (Wimbledon) and Miss Dorothy Campbell (North Berwick); sitting (left to right)—Miss Bertha Thompson (the Open Champion and winner of the Cup) and Miss M. E. Stuart (Royal Portrush).

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

intended for the enjoyment of the tenants and residents on the Coombe Wood Estate, which is quite close to Norbiton. The holes are varied in point of play, and the surroundings are charming and picturesque. From the verandah of the club-house the Rev. Ewart Barter explained the circumstances in which the club had been formed, and thereafter Mr. Balfour (as will be seen by the illustrations on another page), formally opened the course by driving the first ball. A foursome was organised, in which the Prime Minister, partnered by the Rev. Mr. Barter, played Sir Edgar Vincent, M.P., and the Hon. Evan Charteris. The match was halved after the last-mentioned couple were 1 down and 2 to play. Among those present were Lord and Lady Armstrong, Prince Francis of Teck, Sir Augustus FitzGeorge, Sir Adolphus and Lady FitzGeorge, and Sir William and Lady Vincent. The president of the club is Lord Charles Beresford, and among the patrons are Lord Archibald Campbell, the Duke of Fife, Earl de Grey, Mr. R. C. de Grey Vyner, and Mr. Hwfa Williams. Among the patronesses are Lady Magdalen Williams-Bulkeley, Baroness de Brienen, Lady Archibald Campbell, Georgina Countess of Dudley, and Mrs. Leopold de Rothschild.

* * *

The London Solicitors' Golfing Society held their annual dinner last week at the Café Royal, Regent Street, Mr. Thomas Rawle, the President of the Law Society, in the chair. After the loyal toasts had been proposed and honoured, Mr. G. A. Riddell proposed the toast of the society in a racy and humorous speech, and presented in his own name a handsome challenge cup for competition among the members. Mr. Tanner proposed "The Visitors," and Mr. Beale "The Captain and Officers," the last-named toast being replied to by Mr. Murray Smith, the captain, and Mr. Fenwick, the hon. secretary and treasurer. All the speakers laid stress on the value of the society, not only as a means of promoting more intimate social intercourse among the members of a busy profession, but in fitting every member of it by wholesome recreation on the links to withstand the growing strain of modern legal work. The speeches, which were brief, crisp, and humorous, were pleasantly interspersed by some admirable singing and sketches from Miss Grainger Kerr and Mr. Kenna Lawson. The Solicitors' Society has now a list of nearly 250 members.

THE LADIES' CHAMPIONSHIP.
Miss Thompson, the winner, bunkered on the way to the 3rd green.

* * *

There was a large attendance of members at the general meeting of the Tooting Bec Golf Club held recently, the chair being taken by Mr. S. T. Fisher, the captain of the club. The chairman congratulated the members on meeting under so much happier circumstances than in March last, when it appeared that the club was likely to come to an end on December 31 next. He described the conditions under which the land had been acquired by the new Tooting Bec Golf Company, Limited, and on which they proposed to lease it to the club for forty-two years, pointing out to the members that, as this company was composed of members of the club, they were in an unique position as a golf club, being practically the owners of their course. The report of the committee was unanimously adopted, and the necessary alterations in the rules of the club were unanimously agreed to. The chairman reminded the members that it was the present intention of the committee to elect 100 new members, at an entrance fee of five guineas, after which it would be at their discretion to raise the entrance fee. Judging from the fact that during the last three weeks over 70 nominations of new members had been put on the notice board, he expressed the opinion that in a very short time the 100 new members would be elected. In replying to a vote of thanks, the chairman congratulated the club on the interest shown by the members in the new scheme, as was proved by the fact that whereas the committee had asked them to subscribe for debentures to the extent of £10,000, debentures to the amount of over £17,000 had been applied for.

THE OPEN CHAMPION IN DIFFICULTY.
Miss Thompson makes a good recovery from a pulled shot in front of the 14th green.

REVIEWS.

THE GOLFERS' YEAR BOOK FOR 1905 (Edited by John L. Low, with numerous contributions from prominent golfers. James Nisbet and Co., 3s. 6d).—Those who know Mr. J. L. Low would hardly select him as the man to edit a work of reference, although he deservedly bears the reputation of being one of the wittiest and best-informed writers about the game of golf. His best friends would not have imagined that the work of arranging statistics, and doing the vast amount of dull drudgery inseparable from the production of a book like the recently-published "Golfer's Year Book," would have suited his genius. But the book proves that he has the infinite capacity for taking pains, which is the accepted definition of true genius. A careful perusal of the "Club Directory" and the golfers' "Who's Who," which necessarily form the main part of the book, has failed to reveal any error of commission. Errors of omission there must be, since it is impossible, humanly speaking, to insert a notice of every golf course, and of every noted golfer, but serious errors are few. Two suggest themselves to the writer. In the "Who's Who" there is no biography of Mr. W. Greig, and in the list of clubs, Westward Ho! certainly one of the best, if not the very best, course, barring St. Andrews, is only mentioned, not described. The descriptions of the best-known courses, which are appended to the usual information about the clubs playing over them, the

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

Miss M. B. Adams (Wollaston, U.S.A.), who played against Miss A. Roberts, Mid-Surrey, in the opening round, and won at the 19th hole.

green fees demanded from visitors and the neighbouring hotels, should be invaluable to those who are thinking of taking a golfing holiday, as they are written by experts, not with a view to advertise the greens, but to state honestly their characteristics, good or bad. The holiday golfer can also verify the impressions gained by reading the "Club Directory," if he turns to the "Who's Who," and sees which courses are preferred by which players. The "Club Directory" contains all the information necessary for the non-member, and rigidly excludes anything in the shape of advertisement, so that the reader feels that it forms a really trustworthy guide, and that for once "statistic" is not the superlative of "lie." The book also contains accounts of the championships, the international matches, and the News of the World tournament, written for the most part by men who played prominent parts in those events; and there is an article on the rules of the game by the editor, which alone is pretty well worth the 3s. 6d. charged for the book. Probably the ideal which he sets before the golfing public is too aristocratic to be realised in these democratic days, but his article will, it is to be hoped, do much towards making people observe the spirit of the laws rather than endeavour to wrest the letter of them to their own advantage. The accounts of the big events give the reader a unique opportunity of realising what it feels like to take a prominent part in them, and he can hardly fail to be struck by the way in which the great players combine the opposite virtues of dourness and charity. To sum up, the "Golfer's Year Book" is good, and as the editor would say, "the thing is right."

---

"Golf and How to Play It" is the title of a little book which has just been published by Mr. Horace Cox at the Field Office. The author describes himself as "An Old Player," and the purpose of the book is to examine in a philosophic and reasoned spirit the underlying scientific principles of how best to learn the game, and to educate the beginner in grasping a few cardinal points which long observation and experience have established as absolute essentials. It is not easy to say whether the author is an "old player" in point of years only, or whether he has grown grey and stiff in assiduous practice of the game during a varied lifetime spent on the links. The text of his work occasionally leads to both conclusions, for though he has absorbed the essential spirit and tradition of the game in its practical outcome of precept and principle, he now and again writes like one who is essentially familiar with the game in its latest modern developments only. Thus, on page 6, he writes of a tee being "formed of a small pat of mud placed between marks on the teeing ground." Now a real "old golfer" could never ally golf with a "pat of mud," except on an English course in a wet and muddy winter; and when the mud is thus interposed as a necessary element in the game, the conclusion seems to be obvious that the writer has had little acquaintance with Scottish golf, and not much of seaside golf. Neither is it quite safe guidance for an "old golfer" to allege, as he does, that "the holes are placed at distances varying from, say, 110-yds. to 350-yds. apart," when experience of the game ought to have told him long ago that very many holes on the majority of golf courses are 400 yds., 500-yds., and over 600-yds. apart. Again, what clear idea is to be gained by this description of the method of playing the game: "The side may consist of one, 'a Single'; a match may be played by three, each, playing with his own ball, strikes the ball alternately; in this way three can play, also one player may play against two, playing one ball between them, when the match is called a 'Threesome.'" Is that description worthy of the lucidity of knowledge which an "old golfer" instructing beginners should possess of the methods in which the game may be, and is, played in a single, a three-ball match, and a threesome? Again, he writes of the jigger being used in approach play to give "top spin" to a ball, when, if he has any claim to antiquity of experience he must know that the use of the jigger is to impart "under spin" to prevent the ball from rolling too far. But worse than these blemishes is the dictum which he lays down (obviously without taking Lord Salisbury's advice to verify his references) that the rules of golf lay down a size for the greens, the holes, "and the balls." Where in the rules does the author find any definition of the "size" of the balls? One other dictum is too delightful to leave unburied. The author says: "While the novice must learn to strike the ball true, the expert player can take liberties. As he exercises command over it, he may strike it below the belt if he likes. 'but this is scarcely a fair stroke.'" How chivalrous in golfing behaviour is our "old golfer" to be sure!

While the advice given in the book to the beginner as to the spirit in which the game should be approached and played is admirably sound and practical, it is a pity that the "old golfer" should not have taken more pains to see that his statements of fact, at least, were beyond cavil.

Miss Ethel Barnet, of the Misquamant Golf Club, America, who played against Miss Andrews, of Ashdown Forest, in the first round, and won by 5 and 3

THE AMERICAN LADIES AT CROMER.

Mrs. Durlacher (Prince's), the celebrated lawn tennis player, who was beaten on the second day by Mrs. F. W. Brown (Wimbledon), by 6 and 4.

Miss E. Lockwood (Lexington, U.S.A.), the opponent of Miss E. Steel, Sheffield, who won by 4 and 3.

Miss F. C. Griscom (Merion, U.S.A.), who met Mrs. G. Hunter, Woking, in the opening round, and was defeated by a hole.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

COOMBE WOOD GOLF CLUB.

(1) Sir Edgar Vincent, M.P., in a foursome. (2) The Prime Minister playing off the tee in the foursome. (3) Mr. Balfour and Sir Edgar Vincent listening to the opening address. (4) The opening ceremony at the club-house, the Rev. Ewart Barter addressing the assembled golfers. (5) The Prime Minister playing the first ball at the opening ceremony a week ago.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

The opening ceremony connected with the new 18 hole course of the St. Cuthbert Club, Prestwick. Mrs. Weir, the wife of the Provost, has just driven the first ball.

THE AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP.

Mr. E. D. Prothero (Prestwick), who was beaten in the fifth round by the Hon. Osmund Scott by 2 and 1.

Mr. A. R. Aitken (Prestwick), who was beaten in the semi-final by the Hon. Osmund Scott by 2 and 1 to play.

Correspondence.

THE BEHAVIOUR OF A GOLF CROWD.

To the Editor of "The King."

Sir,—As your most interesting paper circulates largely among golfers and their friends interested in the game, may I, as an old player, appeal to ladies and gentlemen in these days of mammoth crowds at great golf matches, to show some of the traditional decorum of behaviour when critical shots have to be played. I appeal more particularly in the interest of our great professional and amateur players, who naturally enough have no desire to be querulous or to find open fault there and then with many stupid, if well-meaning, spectators.

The other Saturday I was one of the crowd at the great Bushey Hall Professional Tournament, and I could scarcely restrain my impatience at the needlessly disconcerting behaviour of many ladies and gentlemen, who presumably knew something about the game, whenever one of the professionals had to play a shot. The Bushey Hall executive had wisely enough refrained from imposing any restriction on the spectators by sending out caddies with ropes to keep the crowd back following Taylor, Braid, and Vardon. But over and over again I saw lamentable instances of inconsiderate behaviour on the part of members of the crowd. One can excuse a great deal in a gushing, excitable lady who will not be restrained from showing the elegance of her toilet on putting green, tee, and bunker; but no golfer can pardon the implied ignorance of her cavalier, in Panama and immaculate flannels, who will persist, like the Derby dog, in always moving about the spots with his female retinue where the golfing instinct would counsel him to remain stationary, and to keep a firm controlling hand on the flounced skirts that flutter near him. This precaution he rarely attempts to observe, with the result that the harassed player has to stop his game, and politely ask the embarrasing cohort to stand aside from his tee shot or his critical putt.

If knowledge of the game is absent—and that is the charitable view to take—then the smallest grain of common-sense ought to tell such spectators that there is only one way of seeing a golf match with comfort to themselves and the general body of players—and that is to stand in those spots where they cannot be seen by the players, and in which no eye either marks their coming or their going.—I am, etc., An Old Golfer.

FIXTURES.

June 10.—Hanger Hill, Medal.
June 10.—New Luffness, Trayner Cup.
June 10.—Cinque Ports, Captain's Prize.
June 10.—Hythe, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 10.—Royal St. George's, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 10.—Rye, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 10.—Glasgow, Garroway Cup (at Killermont).
June 10.—Frinton, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 10-13.—Tooting Bec, Foursome Tournament.
June 10-16.—Bushey Hall, Whitsuntide Open Meeting.
June 12.—Hanger Hill, Whit-Monday Competition.
June 12.—Portmarnock, Cup Competition.
June 12.—Cinque Ports, Scratch Challenge Cup.
June 12.—Royal Isle of Wight, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 12.—Royal North Devon, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 12-14.—Le Touquet, Whitsuntide Open Meeting.
June 13-15.—Royal Cromer, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 14.—Hanger Hill, Evening Fête.
June 15.—Hastings and St. Leonards, Ladies' Open Meeting.
June 15-17.—Bar Golfing Society, Annual Tournament, at Sandwich.
June 17.—Hanger Hill, "Bogey."
June 17.—Bushey Hall, Vice-Captain's Prize.
June 17.—Tooting Bec, Victoria Diamond Jubilee Cup.
June 17.—Royal Portrush, Midsummer Meeting.
June 17.—Wembley, Open Amateur Meeting.
June 19.—Hanger Hill, Ladies' Open Competition.
June 19.—St. George's Challenge Cup, at Sandwich.
June 19-20.—Scottish Ladies' Championship, at North Berwick.
June 19-24.—Yorkshire Union Championship Meeting, at Redcar.
June 22.—Hanger Hill v. Wembley.
June 24.—Hanger Hill, Open Amateur Meeting.
June 24.—Sudbrook Park, Rube Challenge Shield.
June 24-25.—Le Touquet v. Press Golfing Society.
June 26.—Highgate and East Finchley, Ladies' Summer Meeting.
July 31.—Irish Open Amateur Championship, at Dollymount.
October 7.—New Luffness Autumn Meeting.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. XLVI.—Mr. Silas Kitto Hocking, Prospective Liberal Candidate for the Aylesbury Division of Buckinghamshire (Mid-Bucks).

OF the numerous candidates for Parliamentary honours who are waiting with pardonable impatience for Mr. Balfour's decision "to return to a simple life and go to the country," few possibly are more widely known or have done more good in their generation than Silas Hocking, who is an adept at the rare art of teaching without preaching, and of writing with absolute purity of thought without being either prolix, dull, or uninteresting. The yearly book which Messrs. Frederick Warne and Co. generally publish from the fertile pen of the prospective Liberal candidate for Mid-Bucks is always eagerly looked forward to by a countless number of readers, who have remained faithful to him ever since the success of "Her Benny"—now in its thirtieth edition, and translated into nearly every European language—won him fame with a suddenness which very few writers, except Lord Byron, have ever experienced. For over twenty years the sales of his books have averaged 1,000 a week, and the circle of his admirers is ever increasing. "I have aimed at one thing," says Mr. Hocking with perfect frankness, as you talk to him in his picturesque home amongst the Northern Heights of London, high up on the slope of the breezy ridge popularly known as Hornsey Lane, looking towards Shepherd's Hill and the Crouch End Playing Fields, "and that is to tell a story which should be wholesome and entertaining, that should convey a useful lesson, and leave behind it a pleasant flavour. I have written about what I knew for people whom I understand. That they have appreciated my efforts has been my abundant reward. I have realised more than I ever expected, and yet I am not without hope that my best is yet to be accomplished."

After half-an-hour's chat with Mr. Hocking you are not in the least astonished that the House of Warne were able to certify six years ago that the sales of his books, exclusive of publications other than fiction, had already reached a total of more than 1,000,000 copies. Nor do you find it at all difficult to understand why the devotion of the honest, sensible, clean-living farmers of Mid-Bucks to the learned zoologist who now represents the wealth and influence of the Rothschilds, as well as the hereditary traditions of aristocratic Conservatism in that part of the world, has been rudely shaken, and that the result of the poll in the Aylesbury Division at the next General Election is likely to be as great a surprise as the recent Liberal victory at Brighton. Like a good many other men who have made their mark in the world, Silas Hocking was the son of a Cornish mining "Captain"—a man of more than ordinary ability, who had studied mineralogy in his leisure hours, and was reputed to be able to "dowse" a tin-lode better than any of his fellows. It was in the year before the first Great Exhibition that the People's Story-teller was born in the village of St. Stephen's, in the fair country of "Tre, Pol, and Pen"—the Cornish Riviera, he has never ceased to love with all his heart. Before he went to the Grammar School at St. Austell he had drank deeply at the well of Cornish folk-lore (for Cornwall is still a very fairy-land of romance), and had derived his first inspirations from the pages of the "Arabian Nights," "Gulliver's Travels," and the "Pilgrim's Progress"—a curious, but by no means infelicitous, combination. In course of time Mr. Hocking resolved to become a minister of the Methodist Free Church of his forefathers, and the best years of his life were devoted to pastoral work at Pontypool, Spalding, Liverpool, Burnley, Manchester, and Southport. As he preached as well as he wrote, Mr. Hocking's services were always in request on special occasions, but ten years ago he determined to retire from "circuit" work and devote his attention exclusively to literatare and politics. While working in Lancashire he had the rare good fortune to marry Miss Esther Lloyd, the daughter of a Liverpool merchant, who is in keen sympathy with all her husband's aspirations. Their elder son is now an electrical engineer, their younger a promising student at University College School. Their eldest daughter is married. Their second daughter is working for her final B.A. at University College. In the course of a brisk walk over the crest of Hornsey Lane, and while breathing the finest air to be found within five miles of the City, Mr. Hocking relates the story of how he came to write his first book, "Alec Green," and how he thought out the pathetic story of Liverpool slum life which laid the foundation of his fortunes. From the backwoods of Canada, the crowded cities of America, the South African veldt, and outlying stations of India, letters are constantly arriving at Heatherlow (Mr. Hocking's Highgate home) full of grateful help for comfort, consolation, and encouragement from the perusal of his writings.

Chapman.

MRS. SILAS K. HOCKING
Wife of the Prospective Liberal Candidate for Mid-Bucks.

Silas Hocking, to those who know him, is a patriot imbued with the sternest sense of duty, the broadest sympathy for the oppressed of every nation and creed, and the deepest of love of his country. He was strongly opposed to the war in the Transvaal. Those who praised him to-day dubbed him "Pro-Boer" in the dark days of Ladysmith and Mafeking. He did not hesitate to call a spade a spade, and his outspokenness cost him the seat for the Camborne Division of his beloved Cornwall, which he might otherwise have occupied at the present moment. The jingoes of the Northern Heights smashed his neighbour's windows on the opposite side of the Avenue Road in mistake for his, but Silas Hocking only smiled grimly and continued his denunciations of what he believed was wrong. To-day nine out of the ten rioters confess him to have been right, and the Camborne prospective candidate is quite as strongly opposed to the war policy of 1899 as his predecessor. The study at Heatherlow, in which Mr. Hocking works, is adorned with portraits of his literary contemporaries, a special place of honour is reserved for Mr. Gladstone, beneath whose picture hangs the original of Mr. Gould's caricature of the late Secretary of State for the Colonies as the Sphinx. It is now nearly two years since the appearance of Silas Hocking, on the platform of Mid-Bucks, first roused Mr. Walter Rothschild from an attitude of scientific somnolence and rudely interrupted the course of his etymological study. As it is, resolutions in favour of Mr. Hocking's candidature have been passed with enthusiasm in every part of the constituency. Lord Buckinghamshire (president of the Mid-Bucks Liberal Association), Lords Carrington and Battersea, Mr. J. Lawson Walton, K.C., M.P., Mr. Walter Hazell, and Mr. J. C. Hedderwick have all spoken in his favour, and before the time for the final struggle arrives "a pronouncement" may also be confidently expected from Lord Rosebery, for Mentmore lies within the boundaries of the Aylesbury Division. In the person of Mr. W. N. Marshall Mr. Hocking has secured an agent of more than ordinary ability and skill.

To-day Mr. Hocking is putting the final touches to a story of the struggle for freedom in Russia, the MS. of which is anxiously expected in Beford Street. To-morrow night he is due to address a meeting in one of those delightful Buckinghamshire villages in which the name of the writer of "Her Benny" is already something more than a household word. Mr. Hocking's personal knowledge of every topic connected with the social condition of the people is unique, and it is almost safe to prophecy that the much-anathematised "Pro-Boer" of 1900 will be one of the most popular and useful members of the next House of Commons.

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

THE uncertainty of motor-racing was well exemplified in the Isle of Man Trials, as both the cars from which the best results were expected failed to secure places in the team which will represent this country in the Gordon Bennett race. The famous six-cylinder Napier, which played such havoc with existing records at the Ormond Daytona Meeting on the coast of Florida, early this year, is certainly one of the fastest cars in the world, and there are good reasons for supposing that it is something better than a mere "sprint" machine without any staying powers. The flexibility of its engine, moreover, and its undoubted powers of rapid acceleration, seemed to mark it out as a car eminently suited to the Auvergne Circuit, and its inclusion in the British team was popularly regarded almost as a foregone conclusion. Luck, however, was against it, for once, in the Isle of Man, and it would have reduced the trials to a mere farce if cars which proved themselves more reliable on that occasion had been passed over in its favour. The other racer which disappointed popular expectation was the Siddeley, which had been regarded somewhat in the light of a very dangerous "dark horse." The general interest in its behaviour arose from two causes. In the first place, it had been built and run at the expense of an amateur, Mr. Lionel de Rothschild, although at the last moment the name of the entrant was changed to that of Mr. Siddeley himself, owing to a death in the owner's family. In the second place, it marked the first attempt of the Wolseley Company to build a racer on conventional lines, the ordinary Wolseley machines following the usual design of the Wolseley touring cars. It was an imposing-looking monster, and was fitted with the largest engine in the trials, and the bore and dimensions of its cylinders are only surpassed by the Hotchkiss and the De Dietrich among the French Gordon Bennett cars. Its performance was a disappointing one, although it started handicapped by a hastily-replaced gear-box and badly-worn tyres.

The chosen team consists of two Wolseleys and a Napier, as was the case last year, and although the cars selected may not be the fastest available, yet there is no doubt that the quality of the drivers is beyond all question. Mr. Rolls is a veteran of considerable experience, who can be trusted to keep a cool head and get the best possible results out of his car. His last big event was the Paris-Berlin in 1901, and his reappearance in the racing world came as a general surprise. Earp, who drives Mr. Edge's 1904 Napier, is probably the most promising professional in this country, although his experience in actual racing is somewhat limited. He was only excluded from last year's team by the accident at the Ramsey speed trials, which caused so much controversy at the time. Lastly comes Bianchi, Mr. Jarrott's diminutive ex-mechanic, who in the past has shared with his old employer in many a hard-fought contest, and has doubtless learnt from him the value of dogged perseverance under adverse circumstances.

With commendable promptitude the committee of the Scottish Automobile Club has issued its report on the recent trials. As so many cars obtained full marks for reliability, by making non-stop runs on all four days, the gold medal in each class has been awarded on the results of the timed hill-climbs as worked out by the club's somewhat peculiar formula. The laden weight of each car in pounds was divided by the aggregate of times taken in hill-climbs in minutes and multiplied by the total petrol consumption during the whole trial in gallons, the results, for convenience sake, being multiplied by a thousand. In the single-cylinder class, the Wolseley firm added to its remarkable series of successes in competitions of this description, the 6-h.p. car of that make being awarded a gold medal. Non-stop certificates were granted to the 8-h.p. De Dion and the 9-h.p. Cadillac.

In the class for two-cylinder machines, the 16-h.p. Albion, a solid-tyred Scotch car, which was geared to a maximum of 20-miles an hour, was awarded the gold medal, no other vehicle having made four non-stops, though several obtained considerably higher marks for hill-climbing, notably the Wolseley, which was fifth in order of merit of all the cars entered for the trial in this respect, and only lost one mark for reliability. In the four-cylinder class eleven cars obtained non-stop certificates, namely, the 16-h.p. Beeston Humber, 20-h.p. Ariel, 24-h.p. Mors, 24-h.p. Germain, 24-h.p. Thornycroft, 12-h.p. Richard Brasier, 30-h.p. Belsize, 15-h.p. Brooke, 20-h.p. Vinot and Deguingand, 12-h.p. Gladiator, and 12-h.p. Argyll. A gold medal was awarded to the Ariel, and a silver medal to the Mors, these two cars being first and second respectively in the hill-climbing results. The Glasgow Cup, for the car most economical in petrol consumption, went, appropriately enough, to the 12-h.p. Arrol-Johnston, a Scottish-built solid-tyred car of original design, which bears an excellent name for reliability in the North. It made an average of over 31-miles to the gallon, although its laden weight was 28-cwt., the consumption per ton mile working out at ·023-gal. These results must be regarded as constituting a sweeping victory for the British makers. Forty-three cars started, of which twenty-two were wholly foreign, while another two were of doubtful extraction, but may, perhaps, for the purposes of this comparison be included amongst the British cars, although they brought no credit on the home industry. Seven cars failed to complete the trials, four being of foreign manufacture. Of the fifteen non-stop certificates, eight were awarded to British-built machines, which also obtained all three gold medals. Finally, the most economical car in the whole competition was also of native origin.

Copyright.

THE ELIMINATING TRIALS IN THE ISLE OF MAN.
Earp on the winning Napier passing the Bungalow.

Illustration Bureau.

THE MANX ELIMINATING TRIALS.
The Dunlop depôt at Quarter Bridge

Digitized by Google

One of the greatest evils of the "trap" system is that it is instilling into the minds of a large and influential section of the population, a serious doubt as to the fairness of police methods, and the accuracy of police evidence. There is hardly a motorist in the country who cannot quote some case either within his own personal experience, or that of some friend, where grave injustice has been done to a law-abiding citizen, in face of disinterested evidence which no unprejudiced tribunal could possibly ignore. One is loth to question the fairness of our administrators of justice, but motorists know by sad experience that in certain districts, when the word goes forth, no driver of an automobile can take the road in safety. Even if one disregards the cases where there has been merely a conflict of evidence, between the police on the one hand and the occupants of the car on the other, there yet remain the preposterous stories of under-powered and overloaded voiturettes attaining enormous speeds which any intelligent person would know to be a mechanical impossibility.

The latest example of the hopeless inaccuracy of police timing occurred in a recent case at Bishop's Stortford, which, however, differed from many others of a similar character in that the magistrates dismissed the summons. The defendant was charged with driving at 43½-miles an hour, not over a short stretch of downhill road, as is usually the case, but continuously for no less a distance than 4-miles. Four constables solemnly testified to this effect, and an air of scrupulous accuracy was given to their timing methods by the odd half mile. From the purely speed point of view the performance was really an excellent one, and no doubt the Court anxiously waited to hear who was the maker of the road-monster that achieved it. The defendant went into the box and confessed to a modest 7-h.p. Panhard, which, encumbered by a high Cape hood, and carrying a full load of passengers, he had been driving, on the day in question, on wet roads against a strong head wind! He had timed himself over the same stretch of road on a subsequent occasion under most favourable conditions, and had averaged 17-miles an hour with difficulty. After hearing expert evidence, the Bench dismissed the case, the chairman remarking that the police evidence and their watches were not at all satisfactory. This self-evident fact, however, did not prevent them convicting in other cases where the defendants were unluckily not in a position to establish a reductio ad absurdum, although the measured distance and the timing methods employed were precisely the same.

RADIATOR.

Rapid Photo. Co.

MISS MORYSS CLARK ENTERING HER ELECTRIC LANDAULETTE.

Miss Clark, who is an American, has been one of the most successful of the "Gibson girls" of this year's theatrical season.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

MME. SIMONE LE BARGY.

It wants a fair amount ot courage for a Parisian actress to appear on an English stage and play the leading part in a strange language. Yet this is what Mme. Simone Le Bargy is preparing to do on June 13 in London, at the St. James's Theatre, in "The Man of the Moment," Mr. Melvill's adaptation of "L'Adversaire." It will be remembered that M. Capus' comedy was originally produced at the Renaissance, with M. Guitry and Mlle. Brandés in the rôles that will shortly be interpreted by Mr. Alexander and Mme. Le Bargy. Who cannot picture the state of mind of a Frenchwoman, no matter how great her talent, at the moment she embarks on such a sensational enterprise! The day before her departure for London, I saw Mme. Le Bargy at her home in the Rue du Cirque, and heard how she came to the decision—I should say how she agreed to her husband's decision; for it was he, with finger aloft and resolute mien, who said, "You go to London." And what can a wife do, and the wife of a Sociétaire of the Comédie Française, professor of the Conservatoire for the Propagation of Dramatic Art, under the circumstances? Any lingering doubts were dispelled. "He ought to know," she said, in all modesty, "and here I am, ready to go."

The way the matter came to be discussed is amusing. Mr. Alexander had travelled from London to see "Le Bercail," the play wherein Mme. Le Bargy was appearing as the intellectual and fascinating Eveline. During an entr'acte Mr. Tarride came to Mme. Le Bargy's dressing-room, and told her how much Mr. Alexander admired her talent, and how he would have liked to have talked to her. "But of what use?" said Tarride. "Mr. Alexander doesn't speak a word of French, and you don't speak English." "You're an ass," said Mme. Le Bargy; "I speak English fluently. Go and fetch him." And this is how the popular actor-manager and the charming Parisienne became acquainted.

Mme. Le Bargy is making her first visit to England, yet she has studied English, the language and literature, all her life. As a child she had an English maid, and later an English governess, and there is not a modern or classical author of any celebrity that she has not read; and strange as it may seem, she speaks with scarcely any accent—a slight one, of course, but then at times it is almost imperceptible.

Boi sonnas et Taponier.

MME. SIMONE LE BARGY

Who will appear shortly at the St. James's Theatre, in "The Man of the Moment," Mr. Melvill's adaptation of "L'Adversaire."

How will she please London audiences? that is the question that troubles her. As a Frenchwoman in a play adapted from the French, in a French atmosphere, there can be no possibility of a doubt of her success; her accent can only give an added touch of realism to the scenes. As an actress, she will charm them in London as she charms in Paris. She will show them the essence of French art, the natural easy grace, the unaffected enunciation, the simplicity of the French school of acting. Yet she has had no academical training. When M. Le Bargy married Mlle. Binda there was no thought of a stage career. Mme. Le Bargy had not passed through the Conservatoire. Her natural gifts were perfected by the judicious advice of her distinguished husband no doubt, but as an actress she made a brilliant apparition at the Gymnase in M. Bernstein's "Le Detour," almost untrained.

Mme. Le Bargy is highly emotional. In all the parts she has played she acts, as she expresses it, with her "nerves," and suffers and lives the rôles she creates. How is it we have so few actresses of this calibre in England! With the exception of Miss Terry and Mrs. Patrick Campbell, have we any emotional actresses? Do we find the most admired among them with tear-stained cheeks and troubled hands, beautiful in sorrow, magnetic in passion? Is it because the modern English drama does not comport such rôles that we have no passionate emotional actresses? Or that the actresses are not emotional enough to warrant the modern dramatist to write emotional parts?

When "Le Retour de Jerusalem" was produced, there was an outcry in a certain section of the Paris Press, echoed in the London papers. Here was an anti-Semitic play, it was said, brought out at a theatre managed by a Jew, and the heroine impersonated by a Jewess. I have no intention to renew this discussion. But I must say that Mme. Le Bargy was so convinced that M. Donnay's work was not of an anti-Semitic character, that she unhesitatingly accepted to appear therein. This fact alone should disculpate M. Donnay from having attempted to incite race hatred, although it must be acknowledged that, owing to a certain unskilfulness in the treatment of his subject, he laid himself open to such suspicion. Mme. Le Bargy is not only fully aware that she owes her remarkable powers of assimilation to her Jewish descent, but she mentions the fact with undisguised pride. She is deeply interested in the condition of the Jews. Mr. Zangwill little thinks that this talented lady is thoroughly acquainted with all he says and does in the Zionist Movement, and that in her hours of leisure her thoughts are with those of her co-religionists so cruelly tortured. Mme. Le Bargy is wonderfully gentle, but injustice arouses her anger; and as, unfortunately, she has quite recently witnessed some deplorable scenes in her own country which deeply impressed her, we cannot but admire her for the attitude she takes—an attitude which might serve as an example to others. A very bright, very versatile conversationalist, she talks quickly, like the majority of Parisiennes. She is aware, however, that she must modify her natural flow of words, as the English speak so slowly, especially upon the stage. Is it generally known that an adaptation from the French is composed of one half the words of the original play, in accordance with the time the English actors take to deliver them? Mme. Le Bargy will, however, surely do the right thing. She will act as she acts in Paris—with fervour, with sincerity, with passion, and she will speak on the English stage with perfect knowledge of English requirements.

FRANCES KEYZER.

Digitized by Google

PARISIAN PLAYERS.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

MLLE. ROBINNE Reutlinger.

One of the most versatile and popular of Parisian actresses.

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

IF the Ocean Race failed to arouse any considerable amount of enthusiasm amongst yachtsmen in this country, the phenomenally fast passage made by the winning schooner, Atlantic, will at any rate serve to make it a memorable contest. It is well-nigh impossible in such a race to obtain a connected account of the whole contest, and to obtain any idea of incidents during its progress one can but have recourse to the log-books of the different competitors.

In this respect I was particularly favoured in the case of the Atlantic, and, as the winning vessel, her log will naturally be read with the greatest amount of interest. With the object of giving the earliest tidings of the incoming boats, several vessels were cruising in the Channel, and I was fortunate in having a berth in the vessel which was first to greet her as she slowly made her way up Channel. She was abreast of Bishop's Rock at 9.37 on the morning of May 29; but with a very light air she was over six hours accomplishing the next twenty-five miles. Getting alongside her off Mounts Bay, I was able to hail those aboard, and carried on conversation for several minutes. After congratulations had been offered, and a few questions relative to the passage, I asked where they had last seen a competitor, to which the prompt and amazing reply was "Sandy Hook." All looked well, and said the passage had been an enjoyable one. The log of the voyage is interesting. Starting at 12.15 on May 17, she covered 165-miles on the first day in a fresh easterly breeze. The weather was cold and disagreeable, with variable winds, during the night. During the 18th they sighted one of the competitors, Hamburg, about six miles to leeward. The second day's record was 222-miles, with the weather gradually improving, and balloon staysails and spinnaker were carried. With an increasing breeze on the morning of the 19th, her spinnaker was lowered and squaresail hoisted instead. The westerly breeze continued to freshen in fair weather, and on the following day, the 20th, she logged 229-miles. When the breeze permitted balloon staysails were carried, and throughout the afternoon and night of the 19th full sail had been carried, and early in the morning her spinnaker was boomed out again. Towards night the wind was taking off, with a bad look in the sky towards the south-west, and at nine o'clock a heavy southerly squall was experienced, mainsail and spanker being lowered an hour later. On May 21 full sail, including balloon staysails, was carried. The distance covered during the day was 270-miles. The weather was fair, with a temperature during the daytime of 55-deg. Towards the morning of the 22nd the wind fell very light again, and the total distance logged for the twenty-four hours was only 113-miles, full sail, including jib, topsail, staysails, and squaresail, being carried. During the afternoon the breeze improved, light canvas being still carried. About 10.30 at night they passed within a mile of an iceberg, the temperature being 42-deg., and that of the water only 35-deg.

Illustration Bureau.

HAMBURG PASSING THE MARK.

This German schooner, which was designed by the late Mr. Watson, was second in the Ocean Race, and succeeded in covering 316-miles in one day during her voyage. She has now left for Germany, with a new suit of racing sails, to take part in matches during the Kiel Week.

The next day, the 23rd, was fair and clear, and with all light sail set, the distance covered was 243-miles, but later in the day the wind increased and the weather became squally; late in the afternoon another large iceberg was passed, about five miles to the north of the yacht's track. The sea was smooth, and a good run was made.

On the 24th the distance covered was 341-miles, which exceeds the record for a day's run made by Dauntless by 13-miles. The breeze was fresh to strong from southward; the wind began to increase in the afternoon, and canvas was reduced. During the night there was a moderate gale with a fair sea. On the morning of the 25th sail was still further reduced, foresail, mainsail, and jib being taken in, and fore and mizen trysails set. Notwithstanding the heavy weather the vessel behaved remarkably well, shipping no water, and at noon a full foresail was hoisted again, also mainsail and topsails. A little later the mizen topmast staysail was set, but was lowered again, with the wind and sea increasing. On the 26th, 276-miles were covered; with wind and sea gradually increasing, sail was reduced, and with a heavy following sea it was a question for some time whether to heave to or run. But little water was shipped, and the vessel was kept going all through the night, which was a bad one. Stormsails were carried on the 27th, and 243-miles were logged for the day, with both wind and sea moderating. In the afternoon mizen trysail and foresail were set, and later the foresail was set double-reefed in place of the fore-trysail. The ship was behaving splendidly in the heavy running sea, the wind hauled more southerly, and the squaresail was lowered, and as the wind and sea continued to moderate reefs were shaken out. The breeze was now fresh from the south-west.

Another fine run was made on the 28th, when 309-miles was the distance logged; the weather was generally improving and the sea had moderated. At noon the vessel was 303-miles from the finish. The night was squally. On the morning of the 29th the Bishop's Rock was sighted at 9.37. The breeze was very light from the south-west throughout the day, and she crossed the line at 9.16 p.m.

The majority of the yachts seem to have experienced much the same sort of weather, although they steered different courses. Valhalla, with her owner, the Earl of Crawford, on board, was the victim of ill-luck, being becalmed for over sixty hours during the race. She gave good proof of her sailing powers in a breeze, covering 310 miles in one day, and 599 miles in two consecutive days. It is reported that she will compete for the German Emperor's Heligoland Cup.

CORINTHIAN.

OPENING REGATTA FIXTURES.

June 10.—Royal Corinthian Yacht Club.
June 13.—Royal London Yacht Club.
June 14.—New Thames Yacht Club River Matches.
June 17.—Royal Thames Yacht Club, Nore to Dover.
July 14.—Royal Cinque Ports Yacht Club Regatta.

SOLENT CLASSES.

June 10.—Royal Southampton Yacht Club.
June 12.—Castle Yacht Club.
June 19.—Island Sailing Club.
June 20.—Southampton Corinthian Yacht Club.
June 21.—Royal London Yacht Club.
June 24.—Royal Southampton Yacht Club.
June 26.—Castle Yacht Club.

Digitized by Google

YACHTS OF THE YEAR.

Copyright.

ATLANTIC

Winner of the Ocean Yacht Race for the German Emperor's Cup. Mr. Wilson Marshall's schooner, commanded by Captain Barr, succeeded in crossing the ocean in record time, maintaining an average speed of 10½-knots throughout the voyage. Although fairly heavy weather was experienced at times, the Atlantic successfully accomplished the journey from Sandy Hook to Bishop's Rock in 12-days 4-hr. 3-min., and made a record sail of 341-miles in one day.

Digitized by Google

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

Burford.

MISS MARGARET LESLIE.

The comparatively short run of "The Talk of the Town" in London has not militated against its chances on tour, and the wonderful dresses and "effects" with which it is provided are likely to cause considerable sensation in the towns the company visits. Miss Leslie, who was entrusted with a small part at the Lyric, has been promoted to more important duties in the touring company.

Digitized by Google

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

Draycott Galleries.

MISS BILLIE BURKE.

The song with which Miss Billie Burke made her first London success is now almost forgotten; but the singer has gone from one success to another, and her performance in "The Duchess of Dantzig," which continues to tour with enormous success, has secured her the place in light opera which discerning critics foresaw for her during her brief appearance on the music hall stage.

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

A HOLIDAY IN IRELAND

CARLINGFORD LOUGH.

On the banks of this fine stretch of water, much resorted to by yachtsmen and holiday-makers, are situated a number of popular watering-places, including Greenore, with its fine golf links and splendid scenery. Greenore, which is the nearest point to Liverpool, is reached by a daily steam-boat service from Holyhead.

THOSE who require entire change of scenery and surroundings without incurring the inconvenience and expense of going abroad, will find a tour in Ireland a most excellent substitute. Compared with other parts of the United Kingdom, the beautiful Green Isle has been sadly neglected by the tourist, though, as a matter of fact, it offers perhaps in even greater abundance the materials necessary to a thoroughly enjoyable holiday.

If you want to see the Emerald Isle at its fairest no better time could be chosen than the present. Everything appears so fresh and green that one no longer wonders why it has been dubbed the beautiful Green Isle. Visit Ireland, and you will never have cause to regret it. The tastes of practically every class of holiday-maker are catered for, from the golfer down to the student of antiquarian remains. The loughs and rivers of Ireland are the delight of the angler, while the scenery will challenge comparison with that of any other part of the United Kingdom.

A TYPICAL IRISH MUD CABIN.

From a photograph taken at the village of O'Muth, near Carlingford. These cottages are characteristic of the peasant dwellings of Ireland, and though perhaps less picturesque than those in this country, frequently form a subject for the brush of the artist.

From England the traveller has a wide choice of routes; but those who elect to make Dublin their centre will naturally choose the Royal Mail route, viâ Holyhead. Of the journey but little need be said, beyond that the traveller is afforded every possible comfort and convenience, from the time he leaves Euston till his journey's end. One can travel either by night or by day, the North Western Company maintaining two services daily between Holyhead and Kingstown.

Another excellent route is that of the North Western, which lands the traveller at Greenore. The journey by water is longer by some nineteen miles; the district, however, is an ideal one, both for the golfer and yachtsman, for here is situated one of the finest golf courses in Ireland, overlooking Carlingford Lough, a favourite rendezvous of the yachtsman. Greenore will be found a convenient halting-place, especially for those desirous of making excursions in the North of Ireland and the picturesque Mourne Mountains. One can also make short steam-boat trips on Carlingford Lough, in connection with which cars run to Warrenpoint, at the head of the lough, Rostrevor, Greencastle, Kilkeel, and Newcastle. The Greenore Hotel is perhaps one of the most comfortable in Ireland, and belongs to the North Western Railway. Visitors have free use of the splendid golf course, which has been laid out at the company's expense. Quite a feature of this delightful little holiday retreat is the pretty bungalows facing the lough, which can be hired for the season.

Digitized by Google

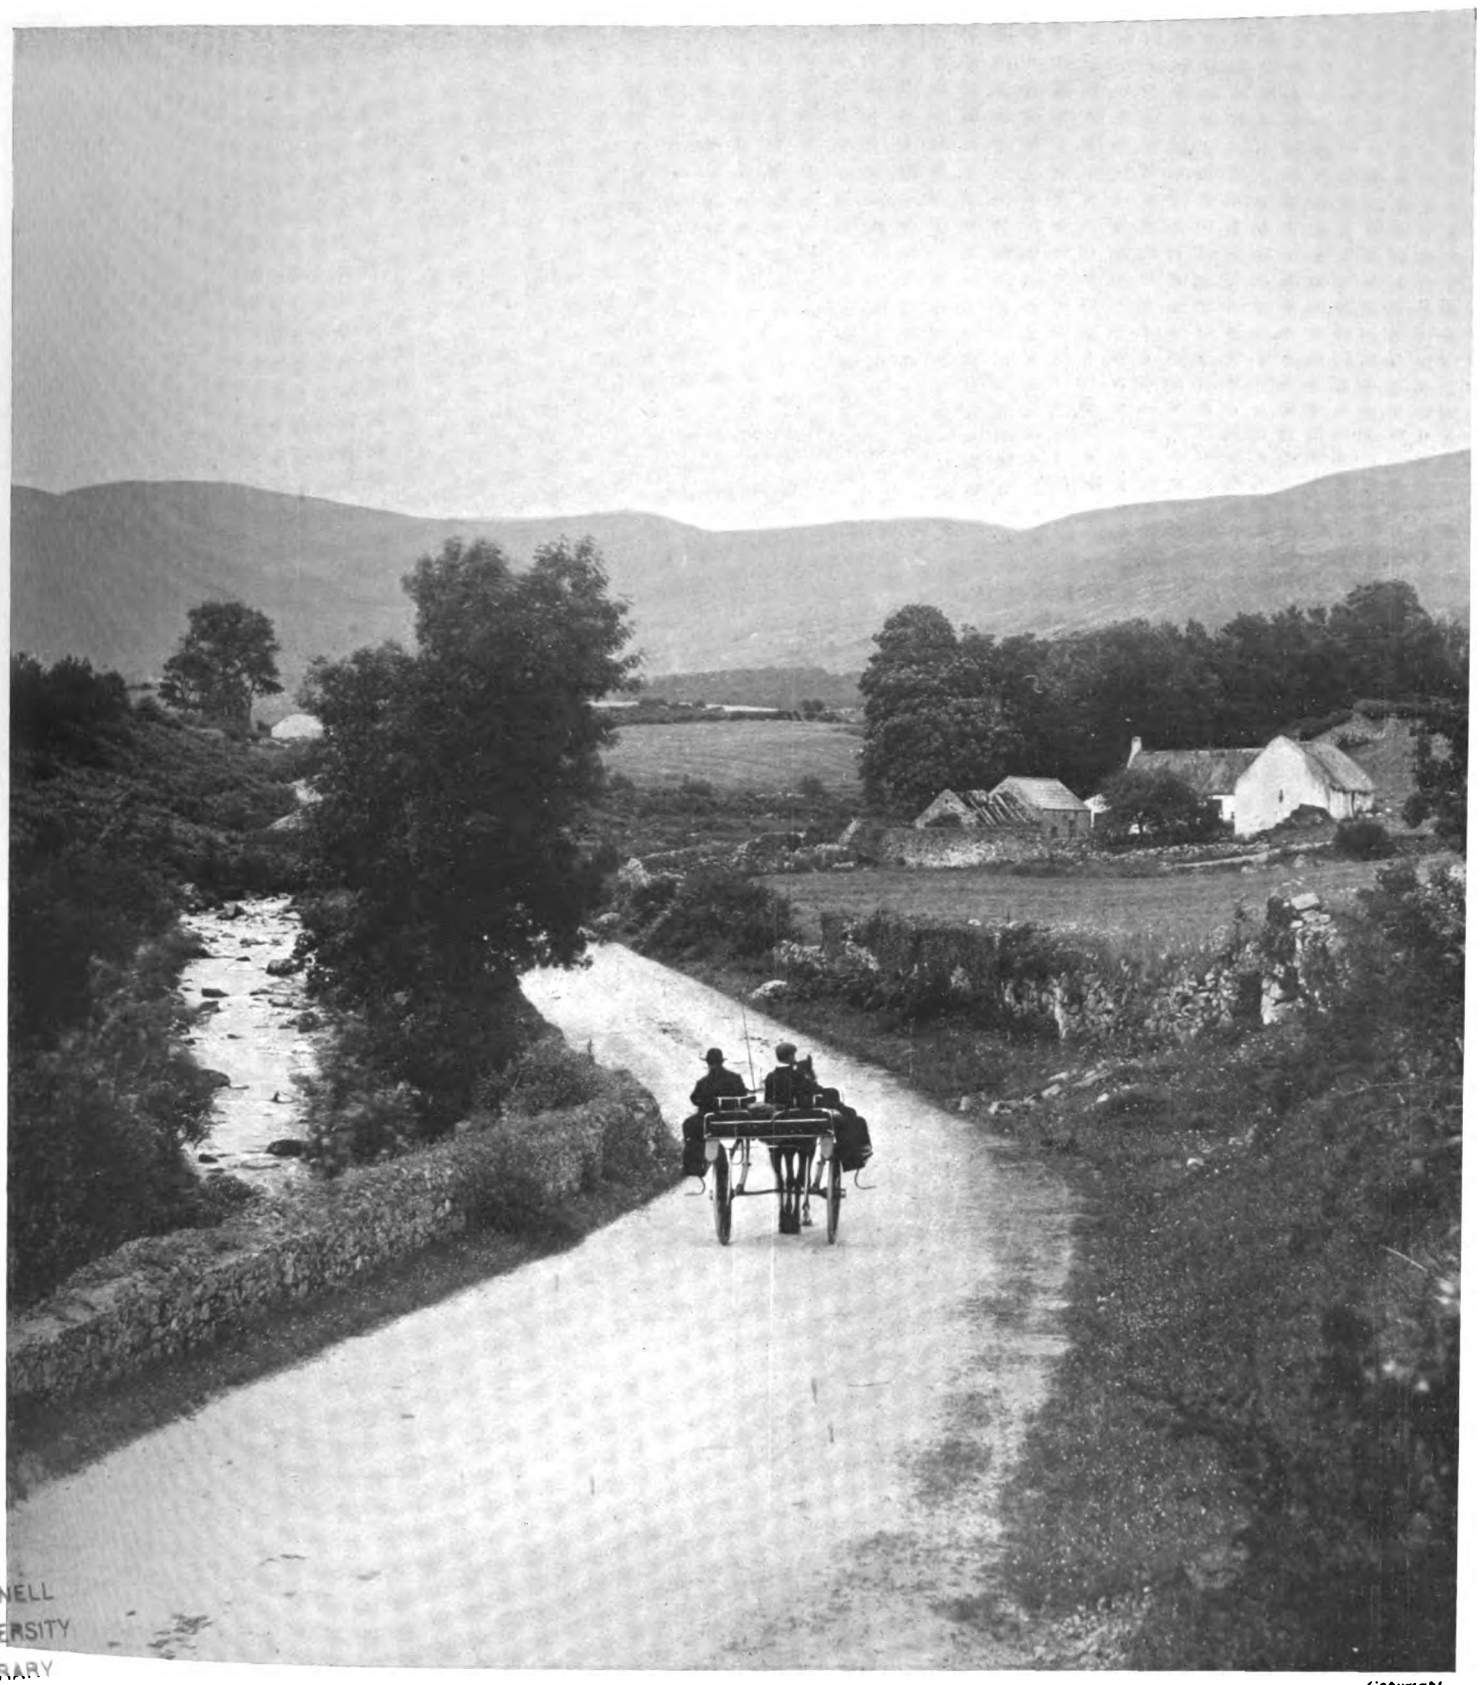
Dublin, besides being the most convenient centre for the excursionist wishing to explore the more picturesque portions of central and southern Ireland, is an interesting spot in itself, and had one the time to spare, many days could be devoted to sight-seeing. There is railway communication with practically every part of Ireland. For example, one can reach, by means of the Dublin, Wicklow, and Wexford Railway, such interesting spots as Kingstown, Glendalough, the lovely Vale of Ovoca, Bray, Arklow, Enniscorthy, Waterford, and Wexford. Again, one can take trips by Great Northern Railway to Howth, the seat of the Earl of Howth, also celebrated for its magnificent views, embracing the counties of Dublin, Wicklow, Meath, and Louth. On the same line is Malahide, which contains the castle of the Talbots. The journey may be continued by the Great Northern Railway to the ancient town of Drogheda, which has figured in Irish history from the earliest period. The excursion to the Boyne Valley should on no account be omitted. In the neighbourhood some remarkable caves are to be seen, also the ruin of a Cistercian monastery. Proceeding along the Boyne Valley we reach Kells, where St. Columba founded a monastery in the sixth century.

The Great Southern and Western Company's line from Dublin takes the traveller to the picturesque districts of Killarney and Limerick, to Kildare, Portarlington, Maryborough, Cork, Carlow, and Kilkenny.

Yet another line by which those starting from Dublin can travel is the Midland Great Western Railway, which takes the traveller to Tara, Trim, Maynooth, Mullingar, Athlone, Galway, Roscommon, Westport, Achill Isle, and Sligo.



CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Copyright.

NEAR BELLURGAN, COUNTY LOUTH.

A view showing a portion of the Ballymascanlan River. In the vicinity is a massive Cromlech, known as the "Giant's Load," the upper portion of which weighs about 30 tons. Several Danish remains also exist in the neighbourhood.

Digitized by Google

The Australasian Lawn Tennis Team.

LAWN TENNIS may not be as widely patronised in Australasia as cricket, nor has it as yet garnered as many traditions; nevertheless, it is a force sufficiently potent to be able to send a representative team across the world to the Mother Country. This combination, fit and ready to do battle, has just arrived in London, and, judging by the form already displayed by its members on the courts, is at least capable of extending the best talent England can produce.

Progressive as are all foreign and Colonial votaries of the game, they always have this disadvantage with which to contend when they come over full of keen determination to this country—that the surface of the courts over here is of grass, whereas on the Continent, in India, and in Australia, either sand, gravel, asphalte, or a combination of the first two forms the composition of the "floor." In Australia, or at any rate in the region of Melbourne, whence come two of the leading players, it happens to be asphalte, and in consequence the new conditions require more than a nodding acquaintanceship. The grass court, with all its virtues, does not tend to promote speed, and though the Americans play on grass and know as much about rapid methods and hustling as anybody, it may be doubted whether even they can display as much mobility and dash as the Colonials. On grass there is a possibility of recovering lost ground after a toss or a slow drive; on asphalte or wood there is practically none. Before you can move your racket the ball has passed and the stroke is gone. As I say, this "easier" tennis—if you like to call it so—requires knowing.

In their endeavour to win the Davis Cup the Australasians are relying on two representatives from Victoria and two from New Zealand, and of these four men, Mr. A. W. Dunlop, captain of the team, is paying his first visit to England. By the best judges in Melbourne Dunlop is considered an artist of the game. His accomplishments are many, and his strokes varied. A persistent volleyer, and a sound one, he is, nevertheless, safe and accurate off the ground. Moreover, he can take his own time to win. Not so very long ago he found himself in New Zealand participating in a big tournament, at which rain and mud were the chief elements. He was drawn against a man whose aptitude for rushing his opponent often won him success. In this case it nearly did so, but not quite. Dunlop had four great blisters on his hand, and after each stroke found it necessary to pause and tie up his skin-torn member. He was one set and five—two down; every turn of the racket meant a twitch of pain. Nevertheless, he pulled that match out of the fire, and came out of the ordeal with flying colours. That is the sort of captain an International lawn tennis team requires.

Mr. Brookes, his fellow-clubmate, is, perhaps, the best player in Australia to-day. He is the Larned of the Commonwealth. Some people would call him a "slasher," but his hitting is so consistently fine that it lacks the slasher's qualification—the tendency to be erratic. Brookes has an express service—a veritable American Pullman, which rushes and curves down the line. Some of his net strokes would do Dwight Davis good to see. He has come on wonderfully of late. Brookes and Dunlop are likely to form a very doughty team in the doubles.

Mr. H. A. Parker hails from Christchurch, N.Z. He received his tuition at the hands of Mr. J. Marshall (champion in 1890) at Wanganui College, and expanded at Wellington as a member of the Thorndon Club. Short and slight of build, resourceful and energetic, he has a natural aptitude for the game, and through his glasses surveys every corner of the court with a keen and experienced eye. He has cultivated a peculiar fore-hand drive, which perplexes most cracks and completely "downs" the novice. He is strong on the smash, and has a useful twist service. Whether Parker is selected for the singles depends upon the form he shows during the next month, but at any rate he will appear in many of the leading tournaments this season.

Of A. F. Wilding, the fourth player, I have written before in THE KING. He is at present president of the Cambridge University Lawn Tennis Club, and by some distance the best man at either 'Varsity. As keen as a knife, he will go the fullest measure to win. Young, strong, and optimistic, he has a personality which spells success.

Without imagining that they are going to carry back the Davis Cup to Australia, the team confidently hope to get as far as the round which brings them into line against the Americans. Belgium might conceivably frustrate this scheme, but I rather fancy the Cornstalkers will win the odd event in the doubles. Then they will dispute the right to challenge England for the "pot" at Wimbledon.

In addition to the Davis Cup competition, our Colonial visitors are booked for another engagement, not quite so exacting in its demands, but none the less a contest which cannot fail to evoke considerable interest. This is a six a side Test Match against Great Britain, which will probably be played at Wimbledon in the first week in July. The Australasians will, of course, depend upon the four players selected for the Davis Cup affair, and besides these are expected to co-opt the services of Messrs. D. Murphy (Victoria) and Doust (New South Wales), both of whom are now in this country. Such a six as this ought to acquit themselves with credit, and England will need her best exponents in the field if she is to keep her standard flying.

Copyright.

MR. A. W. DUNLOP

Captain of the Australasian Tennis Team, which has just arrived in London.

---

ALTHOUGH it is a little early in the season yet to gauge the relative form of the leading players, there have, nevertheless, been three or four notable performances both at home and abroad which can assist the handicapper. Up to date H. L. Doherty has not lost a set in a first-class engagement, and can already place to his credit the Monte Carlo, Nice, and Covered Court trophies. It may be that the champion, because he has not been thoroughly extended, has not exhibited his best form this season, and the slight illness from which he has just recovered may keep him back a little in the near future; nevertheless, it will be a great surprise if he does not emerge victorious from the coming all-important matches at Wimbledon, when his powers are likely to be severely tested. The champion's brother, Mr. Reginald Doherty, made his first appearance this year on grass at Leicester last week, and although the entry included such redoubtable exponents as G. W. Hillyard, W. V. Eaves, and C. H. L. Cazalet, the ex-champion stood out strikingly above the whole field.

New blood is still a drug in the market, but there are signs that a few young players are now taking a progressive march to the front. In A. E. Crawley, who won the open Berkshire Singles and subsequently nearly beat E. R. Allen at Surbiton, there is splendid material for a really first-class player—stamina and a comprehensive knowledge of the game. A. E. Crawley is a brother of the young Oxonian, W. C. Crawley, who made such a good impression two years ago, and who has now gone to Switzerland to take up an appointment. Another Berkshire man, G. B. Vernon, is likely to be heard of again. At Leicester he gave Eaves quite a fright in the open singles, and is pretty sure to go higher up the ladder. R. W. Kendall of Leicester, too, has a style, neat and aggressive, which ought to mean future fame.

A. WALLIS MYERS.

Digitized by Google

THE CRICKET SEASON.

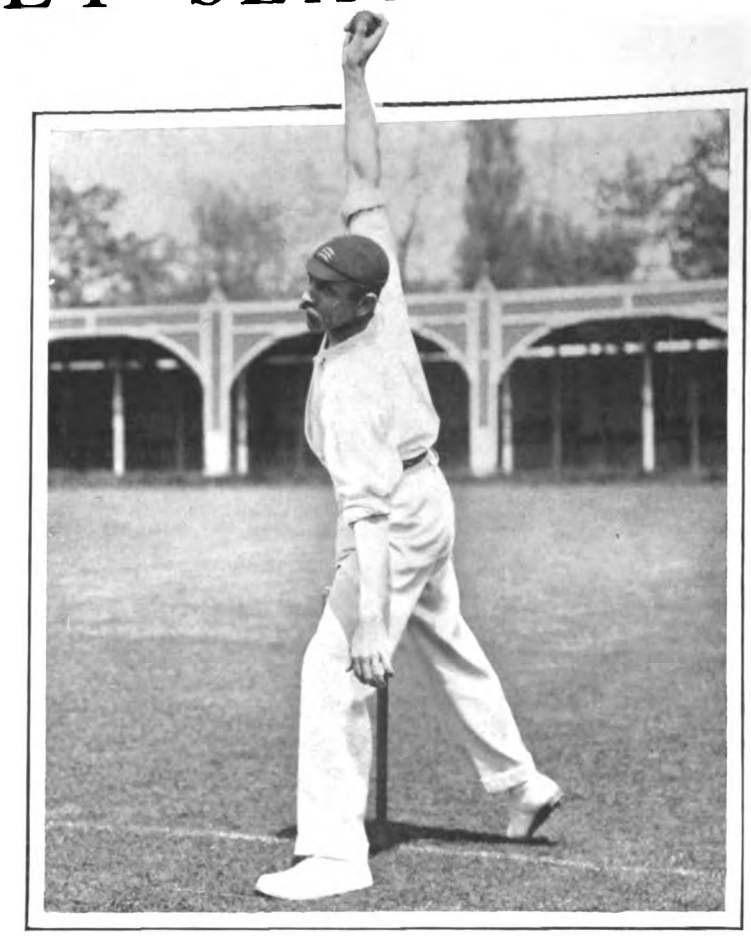
Copyright.

G. E. DENNETT.

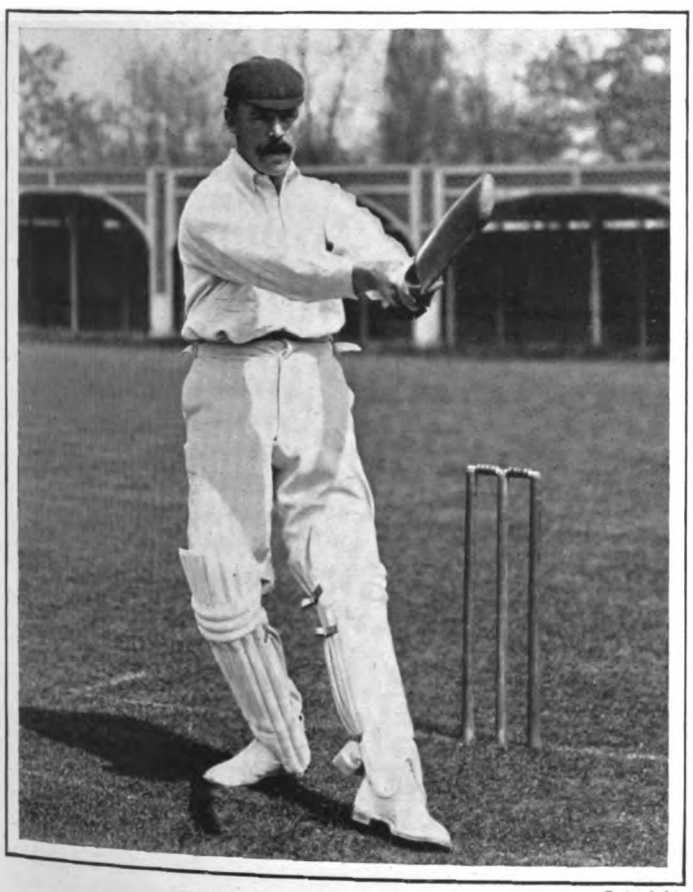
In the ex-soldier, Dennett, Gloucestershire possesses a slow left-hand bowler who may work his way into the England XI. before September. He is, perhaps, just a shade too slow to be a really high-class left-hander like Peate, Peel, and Rhodes, as, in consequence of his pace, so much depends upon his field. This should not be a drawback with ten England cricketers to back him up, but this dependence on his field always has been something of a drawback in the characteristics of a left-hand slow bowler; so that Dennett is, perhaps, only in the fashion. He has a long way to go to get selected before Rhodes, as, to-day, we must have all-rounders in Test cricket, but more unlikely things have happened.



Copyright.

J. T. HEARNE.

Popular Jack Hearne. Never has a professional more thoroughly deserved the epithet which nearly always accompanies the name of the best bowler Middlesex ever possessed, and one of the best right handers that has ever bowled for England. He is one of the few men, some four or five in all, who have performed the hat trick in a Test match. In this gallery we find F. R. Spofforth, H. Trumble, Bates, and Johnny Briggs, a goodly company indeed. Few, if any, medium right-handers have ever been able to bowl with such nip and break back on a plumb wicket. His fine open-shouldered swing and delivery, which is as regular as the best time-piece, is chiefly responsible for this.



Copyright.

CAPTAIN E. G. WYNYARD.

A splendid bat, one of the finest fields in his day that the game has known, possessor of the D.S.O. for service in the field in Burma, and of the Royal Humane Society's Medal for saving life by diving through a hole in the ice, finding his man some way from the hole, and bringing him back to it, also a champion on the toboggan, we have here in Captain E. G. Wynyard one who may truly be called an all-rounder. Many of Captain Wynyard's strokes remind one of the sword exercise, and no more careful watcher of the ball on a difficult wicket has ever played. He has played for England and Hampshire, is qualified for Essex, and might play for Middlesex, and his run-getting days are by no means over.

Copyright.

G. L. JESSOP.

So far the cricket season, which has been so very fine, has lacked something. G. L. Jessop's name has been missing from the contents bills of the evening papers. In fact, the absence of his and Trumper's name in that position during a whole month of an Australian season is really quite remarkable. But Jessop is not a dead letter yet; indeed, he may have done something out of the ordinary before these lines are printed. In his case it has always been unsafe to conjecture. W. P. Howell, the Australian, is regarded in his native land as a far superior hitter to Jessop. We in this country have yet to see him approach Jessop in any branch of the art of "gentle tapping."

Digitized by Google

More Green-room Gossips.

XXV.—WITH Mr. WILLIAM COLLIER.

"Of Some Reminiscences."

IF collectors of theatre programmes have in their possession any playbills of the first production in America by Mr. Augustin Daly of "The Taming of the Shrew," they will see in the Induction "A Page, Master Collier." That same Master Collier is to-day the star of "The Dictator" company, which is on a short but merry visit to this country, and few men, even from the United States, have a more interesting history than Mr. Collier. Like most comedians from the other side, his humour is of the short, sharp, dry order, and he is off the stage very much what he is on, bubbling over with fun.

As I sat chatting with him one evening, and he brought out one reminiscence after another, he laughed as heartily over each story as if it were quite new to him. And, considering that he has played in every part of the United States without exception, and in the whole of his stage career has only missed one performance through illness, it may be judged that he has an interesting history.

"When I was ten years old," he told me, "I ran away from school to join a children's company that was playing in 'Pinafore.' I suppose that was only to be expected, for all my family were connected with the theatre, and I had the acting fever in my veins. However, two years later, I was quite willing to go back to school for a while, and when I had finally done with copy-books and pedagogues, arithmetic and slates, I joined Augustin Daly as call-boy. I served with him for six seasons, and came over to London for a little while in the same capacity. But after a while I was given extra work to do. I played two, and sometimes three, parts a night, eight performances a week, held the prompt-book, and continued to do call-boy's work as well.

"That was not in New York. We used to tour pretty well all over the States, and the parts we didn't go to then I've visited since with my own companies. At Philadelphia I remember once a funny thing happened to me. I was playing, in 'Mankind,' the part of a shoeblack, and after I'd come off and was waiting behind for my next cue, the back-door-man (what you call over here stage-doorkeeper) came up to me, and putting his hand on my shoulder, said, 'Now then, out you go, you rascal!' I said nothing, but let him lead me away to the door, and just as we got there we met Mr. Daly. 'Hello! what's the matter?' cried the manager. 'Just putting out a boy that had sneaked in while I wasn't looking,' said the back-doorman. 'Just putting out one of the actors,' said Mr. Daly. 'Why, man, it's Willie Collier, and the best make-up I've ever seen him in,' he added.

"Another time, in the same play, there was an awful row one night. In the scene in Leicester Square a lot of street urchins were fighting as the curtain went up. I was boss of the gang, and we used to rough and tumble pretty freely. Something happened to make one or two of them out of temper on the night in question, and they went for me hammer and tongs. I knew a bit about the noble art, and before we were separated there was a most realistic stand-up fight. The audience were most enthusiastic, but Daly came up afterwards and pinched my ear. 'A little too energetic, Willie,' he said. 'Don't be too realistic. It doesn't pay. And I'm inclined, in view of subsequent experience, to agree with him.

"After I left Daly I joined the company in 'Little Christopher,' which had already been played in England as 'Little Christopher Columbus.' But my first big hit was in 'The Man from Mexico,' an old play, but one that bears revival. Then I wrote a play myself, called 'Hoss and Hoss,' and, with Charles Reed, I toured the States in that for three years. It is a funny thing, but almost all the parts I have had to play since I left off being 'Master' Collier have been old men characters, until the last year or so."

Ellis and Walery.

MR. WILLIAM COLLIER

Who, with Miss Marie Doro, is appearing in "The Dictator," at the Comedy Theatre.

Around his dressing-room Mr. Collier has photographs of himself at various stages of his career, and a glance at these served to bear out his statement: Mr. Collier as a doddering grandfather, Mr. Collier as an elderly churchwarden, Mr. Collier in a make-up that might be meant for Mr. Squeers or Mr. Tackleton. But always Mr. Collier; for there is that in his personality which refuses to be hidden by wig or whiskers, paint or powder, and that something is in the main the twinkling humorous eye, and the short, almost curt way of speaking, so characteristic of the best American comedians of the day.

Mr. Collier has come and seen, and has undoubtedly conquered. "Laughter holding both his sides" characterises the scene at the Comedy Theatre from nine o'clock each evening, and as Brooke Travers, in the person of Mr. Collier, runs rapidly and lightly through his adventures, from escaped convict to Dictator in a South American Republic, the crowded house has to laugh. Mr. Collier does not, like Juanita, ask them to "choosse," he compels them to hilarity, and they prove willing to be coerced. He scores everywhere, whether when fraternising with his valet, making love to Miss Sheridan, welcoming President Santos Campos at the American Consulate, or playing poker with his army (which he has purchased for 3-pesetas a day), and winning the money back from them. Poker, with seven kings in the pack, is a game which even the Heathen Chinee of immortal memory understood.

F. E. R.

Digitized by Google

In the Land of the Midnight Sun.

Underwood and Underwood.

THE NAIRD FJORD, GUDVANGEN.

One of the most beautiful of the inland seas which attract thousands of holiday-makers to Norway and Sweden every year during the holiday season. Gudvangen and Odde, two popular centres for excursions, are within easy reach of Bergen, where the majority of the pleasure steamers call on their voyage north.

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES.

THE recent inspection by the King of the new Army guns is an apt reminder to the world at large of the singularly practical and well-focussed interest which his Majesty takes in all that relates to the real efficiency of his Fighting Services. We in this country do not require to have our memories refreshed or our intelligences quickened on this point, for it is very clearly "understanded by the people," as well as an article of faith in the Services themselves, that the King since his accession has had his finger on the pulses of our Naval and Military systems, and has scrutinised their condition still more closely than he was accustomed to do as Prince of Wales. But it is well that Europe should comprehend that, in the process which Great Britain is now undergoing of preparing for all possible eventualities, the King is taking a part which is altogether distinct from, and in its way very much more important than, any effort which, unaided, the Imperial Defence Committee or the Army Council can make. Nor, we may be sure, does Europe fail to perceive that such driving power as King Edward exercises by his attention to just the right Naval and Military details is worth far more to England than would be the parental control and omniscience affected by at least one Continental Sovereign.

As for the guns themselves, they represent the forceful application of the principle demonstrated in South Africa and confirmed in Manchuria, that, as The Times correspondent formerly with Kuroki's army tersely put it, the most effective gun is the biggest gun compatible with the field artillery degree of mobility. To many it will seem that five-and-twenty or thirty years is a short period in which to have increased the weight of the horse artillery projectile from 6-lb. to 13-lb., and that of the field artillery projectile from 9-lb. to 18½-lb. But the graver reflection is whether in the next quarter of a century we shall not see far greater changes, not only in the weight of projectiles, but in the "field artillery degree of mobility." It is said that some remarkable developments in this direction are in progress in India; but, without reference to concrete examples, it goes without saying that the whole question of mobility may be influenced by the capacity to bring into action at long ranges guns so powerful and destructive that field artillery of the present type will not be able to live within several miles of them. Is this not the old, old question of battle-ship versus fast cruiser in another shape?

A GOOD deal of personal and Society interest is attached to three recent important cavalry appointments, two to brigade commands and the third to the Netheravon School of Instruction. Brigadier-General J. R. P. Gordon, C.B., who has vacated the A.A.G.-ship of Cavalry at Headquarters — an appointment now abolished—in order to take over the Colchester Brigade, is an Old Wellingtonian and 15th Hussar, with a first-rate all-round record, in which, by the way, is included the Adjutancy of Methuen's Horse in the Bechuanaland Expedition of 1884, besides fighting service in Afghanistan, Burma, and South Africa. General Gordon is the son of that fine veteran, now in his seventy-third year, Sir Benjamin Lumsden Gordon, who was a very distinguished Horse Gunner, and commanded the Artillery in Roberts's advance on Cabul, later holding an important command in Burma. Brigadier-General the Hon. Julian Byng, who has left the Netheravon School to go to Canterbury, is the seventh son of the second, and half-brother of the present, Earl of Strafford. He is an ex-10th Hussar, and fought at El Teb and Tamai, as well as winning distinction in the last South African War. Colonel the Hon. J. E. Lindley, who succeeds General Byng at Netheravon, also did extremely well in South Africa. He was formerly in the Royal Dragoons, and is the eldest son of a well-known Lord of Appeal.

THE remarks made the other day by Lord Selborne as to the strategic importance of the Cape of Good Hope were full of instructiveness, and usefully pointed the moral of Admiral Rozhdestvensky's choice of the Cape route to the Far East for the major portion of the Baltic Fleet. At the same time, it will not be altogether surprising if Cape legislators have drawn from the latter circumstance an inference not exactly in harmony with Lord Selborne's further contention that there can be for South Africa no such thing as local defence. The writer of these notes does not, of course, presume to speak contentiously on such a subject; but it must be remembered that apprehension may have been created at the Cape, not so much by the mere apparition of the Baltic Fleet, as by the fact that that fleet was rendered by its colliers entirely independent of British coaling stations. Apart from hostile fleets, which our Navy can always be trusted to meet and crush, the place of the old privateers may be taken by the modern auxiliary cruiser collier-coaled, and whether a useful long-range gun or two at certain ports would be an altogether contemptible precaution against such visitors is something of an open question.

THE alterations which are taking place in the "Renown" with a view to providing suitable accommodation for the Prince and Princess of Wales in their Indian tour are not likely to escape some criticism, on the ground that a battle-ship more or less in these critical times may "make all the difference," and that the nation would more willingly have paid for the conversion of the finest liner afloat to the purposes of the Royal visit. But we may take it that the Admiralty understands uncommonly well the making of "alterations" which at a pinch would interfere very little indeed with the "Renown's" reappearance at the shortest notice in a fighting rôle. Moreover, it is obvious that there are contingencies in connection with the forthcoming tour which would render the presence of their Royal Highnesses in a liner, however powerfully escorted, a source of some anxiety. Things are different—very different—to-day from what they were when our present King made his memorable voyage to India in the old "Serapis," and there are possibilities to be reckoned with which were absent when our present Prince and Princess of Wales visited the Colonies in the "Ophir." Hence, doubtless, a decision not likely to be modified at the call of ignorant and careless critics.

Elliott and Fry.

THE KING AND THE OFFICERS OF THE PRINCE OF WALES'S OWN NORFOLK ARTILLERY.

From a photograph taken on the occasion of the recent inspection by the King at Dovercourt. The names of the officers are, reading from left to right, back row—Captain L. Buxton, Lieutenant L. Cranworth, Lieutenant Hon. G. Keppel, Hon. J. G. Ward, Colonel A. Davidson, Colonel the Earl of Kintore, Major R. F. Boileau, Lieutenant C. E. Trafford, and Second Lieutenant W. M. Banbury. Front row—Captain Twiss, Major Sir A. C. Thornhill, Captain C. H. Walter, Colonel Viscount Coke, King Edward, Lieutenant-Colonel T. L. Hare, Major E. H. Evans-Lombe, Lieutenant F. R. Rippingall, and Captain J. M. Wilson.

Digitized by Google

Japan's Great Naval Victory.

ADMIRAL TOGO.

From a new photograph of the victor in the battle of the Sea of Japan. The picture was taken outside his residence during his recent visit to Tokio.
(From copyright stereograph, H. C. White Co., London.)

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

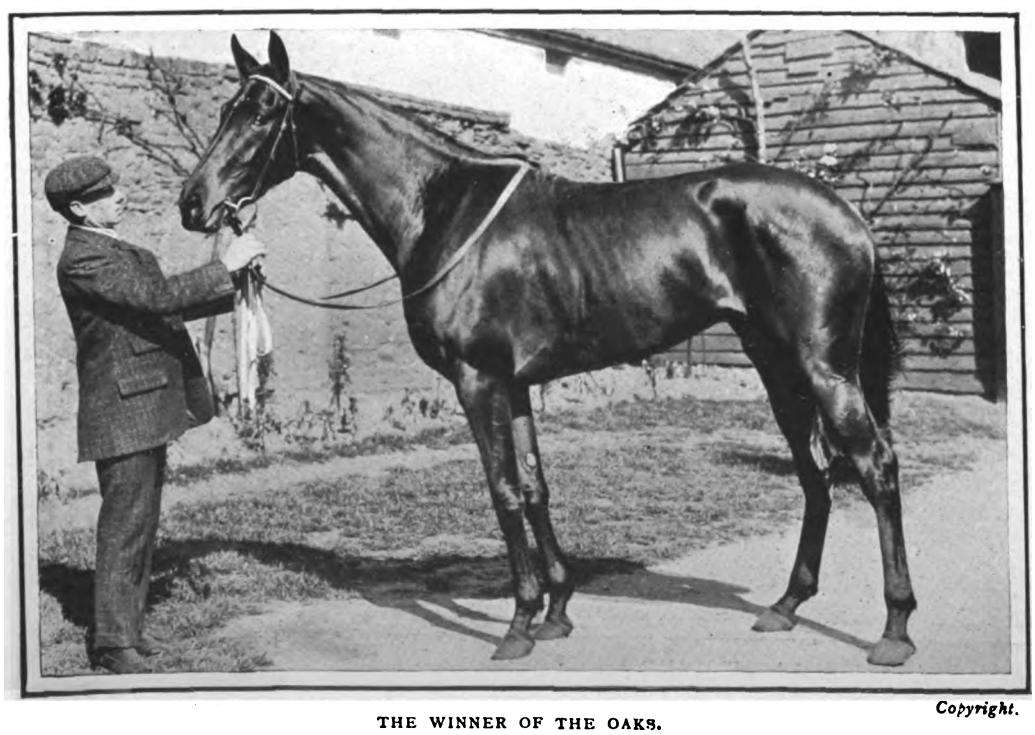
DERBY Day broke bright and fine, and the attendance when the horses went down to the post for the great race must have been almost a record one. Previous to the race a look round in the paddock showed us Jardy in the light of a much-improved horse since he won the Middle Park Plate last year, and he has all the appearance of a race-horse of the highest class; but the dull, dry look of his coat showed only too plainly that he was not in the best of health. Cicero, on the other hand, was brimful of health and vigour, and is a totally different type of horse to the lengthy, wiry, and elegant son of Flying Fox and Airs and Graces. Chevalier Ginistrelli had effected a marvellous improvement in Signorino, who seemed to have gained in length and scope, and was certainly looking far better than I have ever seen him do before. Rouge Croix has not done well, but he showed such speed in the race that he must always be kept on the right side, and he is sure to win a good race sooner or later. Jardy led the parade, and was accorded a hearty greeting from the crowd along the rails, but he hardly cantered down with the fire and swing we had seen him show at Newmarket. Cicero swept by in the most business-like style, and of the others, perhaps the most taking runner was Shah Jehan. There was very little delay at the post, and the nine runners were sent away on very level terms. Jardy, who had the outside berth, immediately dashed to the front in order to secure a good place at the turn, and after going about a quarter of a mile still held a slight lead of Cicero, Liao, Silver Streak, and Shah Jehan. At the mile post Silver Streak raced to the front, and was followed by Jardy, Liao, Rouge Croix, and Cicero. Jardy was now steadied back, Rouge Croix shot up to Liao, and they rounded Tattenham Corner in close company; but Cicero and Signorino were always lying handy. On they came, and a roar went up, "The Frenchman's beat. Cicero wins!" Nearer and nearer come the flying hoofs, Signorino challenges, Cicero, nothing loth, strides on more resolutely than ever and maintains his ground. Suddenly Stern and his "sick" horse appear once more on the scene. Jardy wins! does he? Stride after stride he gains; he reaches Cicero's girths, and by a supreme effort holds him for a few strides; his courage never fails or falters, but he cannot overcome the weakness of disease, and Cicero is no faint-hearted antagonist. That challenge is stalled off, as is that of Signorino, and amid the cheering of the multitude Lord Rosebery sees his horse sweep past the winning-post three-quarters of a length in front of the gallant Frenchman, who only kept Signorino out of second place by a short head. The race for the Juvenile Plate, which was won by Mirida, will not readily be forgotten, owing to the sad accident which caused the death of poor little Evans, whose mount stumbled and came down crossing the tan road, bringing with her the Childhood filly, ridden by Murray, who fortunately escaped with a shaking. Evans was very popular, and much esteemed and respected by all who knew him, and the expressions of regret and sympathy when the sad news became known were universal and very sincere.

W. A. Rouch.

THE WINNER OF THE DERBY.
Lord Rosebery's Cicero, Cyllene—Gas.

The racing on Thursday was extremely good, and a programme which included four races of the value of 1,000-sovs. each left nothing to be desired. The antics of Orchid and Out o' Sight occasioned some delay at the post for the Royal Stakes of 1,000-sovs., but eventually Orchid got away a trifle in front of Melayr. It was only just on the post that Golden Gleam, splendidly ridden by Plant, managed to get his head in front. The excitement of this race had barely subsided when Zinfandel, Caius, and Pretty Polly came out to do battle for the Coronation Cup—and what a race it was! Caius made the running at a tremendous pace, followed by Zinfandel, with Pretty Polly last, and so they ran till coming into the straight, when Zinfandel closed up to the leader. On they strode till, about a quarter of a mile from home, Pretty Polly swept by them like a flash, and won as she liked by four lengths in the extraordinary time of 2min. 33 4-5sec., or nearly 6sec. faster than all previous records over the same course. Sir E. Vincent's Donnetta beat Ambition and Sir Daniel for the last of the 1,000-sovs. races, the Durdans Handicap Plate.



Copyright.

THE WINNER OF THE OAKS.
Mr. W. Hall-Walker's Cherry Lass, Isinglass—Black Cherry.

Of the Oaks on the following day there is little to be said, except that Mr. W. Hall-Walker's Cherry Lass, trained by Robinson and ridden by H. Jones, won as she liked, followed respectfully home, at a distance of four lengths, by Queen of the Earth, some six or seven lengths in front of Amitie, who filled the third place. Cythera, Gemma, and the filly by St. Simon out of Splendid finished in the order named for the Acorn Stakes, and one of the most entirely successful meetings ever known at Epsom came to an end with the victory of Corœbus in the Belmont Plate.

At Alexandra Park on Saturday the following horses may be worth noticing: Pollion in the June Handicap, Rather Warm in the Finsbury Handicap, Sarcelle, with a run, will win the Maiden Plate, and Aggressor should go very close for the Islington Plate. CAURIE.

Digitized by Google

THE DERBY AND THE OAKS.

W. A. Rouch.

THE FINISH OF THE DERBY: CICERO BEATS JARDY BY THREE-QUARTERS OF A LENGTH.

For the third time Lord Rosebery has succeeded in winning the Derby Stakes, Cicero carrying his colours to victory last week in the famous race. M. Edmond Blanc took second place with Jardy, and Chevalier Ginistrelli's Signorino was third, the race this year being, therefore, thoroughly cosmopolitan.

W. A. Rouch.

AT THE DERBY: FULL GALLOP UP THE HILL.

The glories of Epsom Downs have been sung so often that it must be unnecessary to say anything further. Coaching parties are just as fashionable as ever, and crowds invariably gather on the hill to watch each new arrival drive up.

W. A. Rouch.

IN THE PADDOCK ON OAKS DAY.

As with the Derby, so with the Oaks this year, the favourite won, Cherry Lass romping home. The crowds of ladies who attended the meeting this year were favoured with brilliant weather for the display of their frocks. The favourite colours seem to have been silver-grey and white.

Digitized by Google

The Uniform of the Marine.

AT THE ROYAL NAVAL AND MILITARY TOURNAMENT.

(Drawn for this paper by J. Jellicoe.)

Digitized by Google

Rosy Cheeks

Made by a good food.

An old saying is that the human body entirely changes every seven years; that is, we now have no elements in our system which were there seven years ago. It is certain that we can change from the vigour of buoyant health to a debilitating illness in a very short space of time, and sometimes, if we are fortunate in finding just the proper re-builder, the disease is driven out and health returns just as quickly.

A lady living in Acton, W., writes:—

"It is with both pleasure and gratitude I write to tell you of the splendid results we have derived from Grape-Nuts. For years, almost since childhood, have I suffered from nerve troubles, neuralgia, etc. Some months ago my husband persuaded me to give Grape-Nuts food a trial. The first packet I had I felt the benefit of, and since, needless to say, I have never been without it, using it in many of the delightful little recipes given with each packet. These wonderful little recipes prevent the monotony felt so often by other foods. I sleep better, feeling refreshed in the morning, I have also gained both flesh and rosy cheeks, lost my neuralgia, and, generally speaking, feel in the best of health. I feed my little girl with it also; she, like myself, suffered from anæmia, and was a constant worry and trouble to me, but now I am delighted to say she is the picture of health. I strongly recommend all mothers to use Grape-Nuts, and they cannot fail in getting the happiest results, for it is certainly the most palatable food I have ever tried for children, and they thrive wonderfully on it."

No more certain re-builder can be found than Grape-Nuts, for it contains the elements necessary to renew the nerve and brain tissues, and the starch in the grains, from which it is made, is changed, in the manufacture, to a form of sugar, and this renders it easy of digestion to invalids and children, as well as those in the prime of health.

Name given by Grape-Nuts Co., 66 Shoe Lane, E.C.

There's a reason for

Grape-Nuts

GREAT EASTERN RAILWAY.

THE EAST COAST

FOR THE

WHITSUNTIDE HOLIDAYS.

TOURIST, FORTNIGHTLY, and FRIDAY to TUESDAY or WEDNESDAY TICKETS available by all trains.

ADDITIONAL TRAINS to all parts of the EASTERN COUNTIES.

MIDNIGHT TRAINS SATURDAY, JUNE 10th TO Ipswich, Cambridge, Norwich, Lowestoft, Yarmouth, etc., ALSO Supper Train to Clacton-on-Sea.

EXCURSIONS To all parts of the EASTERN COUNTIES, also the Principal Stations in LINCOLNSHIRE, LANCASHIRE, YORKSHIRE, NORTH-EASTERN DISTRICT, and SCOTLAND.

CROMER
MUNDESLEY-on-Sea
YARMOUTH
LOWESTOFT
GORLESTON-on-Sea
HUNSTANTON
SOUTHWOLD
ALDEBURGH
FELIXSTOWE
DOVERCOURT
CLACTON-on-Sea
FRINTON-on-Sea
WALTON-on-Naze
SOUTHEND

THE Fastest and Most Convenient Route.

Write to the Superintendent of the Line, Liverpool Street Station, E.C., for a Whitsuntide Holiday Programme.

WHITSUN HOLIDAYS.

TRAVEL BY THE

G.W.R.

WHITSUN EXCURSIONS to about 500 Towns and Seaside and Inland Health and Pleasure Resorts in the Cornish Riviera, Devon, Dorset, Somerset, Channel Islands, Berks, Bucks, Wilts, Wales, Ireland, Midlands, Worcester, Gloucester, Shropshire, Warwick, Hereford, etc.

WHITSUN EXCURSION FARES from PADDINGTON.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Penzance | 27/- | Newquay | 25/- | Weymouth | 13 6 |
| Falmouth | 26/- | Plymouth | 21/- | Swansea | 17/6 |
| St. Ives | 27/- | Exeter | 16/- | Cardiff | 15/- |
| Helston (for the Lizard) | 26/- | Ilfracombe | 20/6 | Tenby | 22/3 |

For particulars of train service and all other information, send a post-card to the SUPERINTENDENT OF THE LINE, Paddington Station.

JAMES C. INGLIS, General Manager.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS,

CENTRAL WALES.

The British Nauheim.

An Ideal Spa for the Treatment of Heart Disease, Gout, and Rheumatism.

THE LAKE HOTEL.

A first-class Hotel situated in extensive Private Grounds and lighted throughout with Electricity.

Telegraphic Address: "BARIUM," LLANGAMMARCH WELLS.

Apply MANAGEMENT.

Golf Club within five minutes' walk.

GT. NORTHERN RAILWAY (IRELAND).

WHITSUNTIDE, 1905.

THE MAIL AND EXPRESS ROUTE, ENGLAND with BELFAST and the NORTH of IRELAND, via HOLYHEAD and KINGSTOWN.

TRAINS ALSO RUN IN CONNECTION WITH THE EXPRESS SERVICES via HOLYHEAD & DUBLIN (North Wall), and HOLYHEAD and GREENORE.

FOUR CROSS-CHANNEL SERVICES DAILY.

Breakfast and Dining Cars are run between Dublin and Belfast, and between Belfast and Greenore.

MOUNTAIN, LOUGH, RIVER, AND SEA.
GOLFING, FISHING, COACHING, CYCLING.

SPECIAL CHEAP EXCURSIONS AT WHITSUNTIDE TO FOLLOWING PLACES OF RESORT.

| | |
|---|---|
| BUNDORAN (on the Atlantic Coast). | Famed Health Resort; within easy reach are Loughs Melvin and Erne. Sea Bathing. Golf (18-hole Course). Fishing. |
| ROSAPENNA. | Donegal Highlands; Mountain and Lake Scenery. Motor Coaches ply between Rosapenna and Strabane Railway Station. Golf (18-hole Course). Fishing. |
| PORTSALON (Head of Lough Swilly). | Fishing and Boating. Golf (18-hole Course). |
| ROSTREVOR and WARRENPOINT. | On Carlingford Lough. Mourne Mountains District. Balmy and restorative climate. |
| BOYNE VALLEY. | Famed River Excursions. Drives through Historical and Antiquarian Districts. |
| ENNISKILLEN. | Island Town. Lake Fishing, Boating, &c. |

DONEGAL, GLENTIES, KILLYBEGS, &c., &c.

HOTELS.—The Company own and manage Hotels at Bundoran, Rostrevor, and Warrenpoint.

Illustrated Guides sent on application to Superintendent of the Line, Amiens Street, Dublin, or Irish Railways Office, 2, Charing Cross, London.

DUBLIN, June, 1905. HENRY PLEWS, General Manager.

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

ONE of the most interesting biographies of a season that has been rich in biography is the reminiscences of Sir John Furley, which Messrs. Smith, Elder have published under the title of "In Peace and War." Sir John is the greatest living authority on Red Cross work in war. He helped to found the National Red Cross Society in 1868, having seen the need of such an organisation during the war between Denmark, Prussia, and Austria in 1864. He served throughout the Franco-German War, first on the side of France, and after Sedan on that of Germany. He was present during the outbreak of the Commune, went through the Carlist War of 1874, during which he rescued O'Donovan, the Daily News correspondent, from a Carlist prison, and after many other adventures in aid of the sick and wounded, and sufferers from natural catastrophes, was Chief Commissioner of the Central British Red Cross Committee during the South African War. The story of this varied and eventful life spent in the service of other people, Sir John Furley tells in a modest, straightforward, and often humorous manner, and no one should neglect his book.

A Red Cross Knight.

* * *

MIXED feelings are aroused by a perusal of "The Poems of Ernest Dowson," which Mr. John Lane has recently published, with two portraits (one from a photograph, the other from a drawing by Mr. Will Rothenstein), and the reprint of a memoir by Mr. Arthur Symons. On the one hand, the exquisite beauty of most of Dowson's lyrics produces nothing but pure æsthetic pleasure. His range was small, but within his limits he was as true a poet as ever wrote, and one of his poems at least, that "To Cynara," is in its way perfect. On the other hand, it is sad to think that the juice should have been crushed out of the grape through so much folly and suffering. The story of Dowson's life is told sympathetically and sanely by Mr. Symons. It is a story of ill-health, intemperance, and a constant struggle, in which the volition of the subject counted practically for nothing, between exquisite sensibility and gross appetite. Poetry, as we know, is often the child of suffering, but we cannot help thinking that Dowson might have been just as good a poet if he had lived a more normal life. After all, perhaps, the whole thing is a question of health.

Ernest Dowson.

* * *

TWO new books on the Russo-Japanese War have lately been published. The first is "With the Russians in Manchuria" (Methuen), by the Hon. Maurice Baring, who is correspondent for the Morning Post, and has reprinted his letters with some amplification from that paper. The other is "Empire in the East, or Japan and Russia at War, 1904-5" (Chapman and Hall), by Mr. Bennet Burleigh, the well-known correspondent of the Daily Telegraph. Mr. Baring's book is one that would do a great many people good. The war correspondent, he says in effect in his preface, has ceased to be so much a reporter of events as a kind of umpire or impartial witness, who can tone down the exaggerations and correct the misstatements of violent partisans. Mr. Baring is not a Russophil, but he was so disgusted at the conduct of certain Dutch and German newspapers during the South African War, that he made a vow to remember that there are two sides to every question; and at the present moment, when our national fairness and sporting instinct seem, to tell the truth, to be a little clouded, it is well to have a book before us by an author who, without sacrificing his patriotism, is ready to acknowledge all the good points of our allies' enemies. Mr. Bennet Burleigh also is temperate, and his last chapter is likely to prove something of a cold douche to a good deal of hot-headed enthusiasm. It is to be hoped that his reader will not be content with his vigorous and graphic descriptions of the war, but will go on to read his opinions as there expressed. His book is profusely illustrated from portraits, and contains half-a-dozen valuable maps.

Books on the War.

* * *

MESSRS. CONSTABLE announce two books that should be of exceptional interest. One is a posthumous novel by the late George Gissing, entitled "Will Warburton." It was obvious to all readers of Gissing that during his later years some of his pessimism was leaving him; and though "Will Warburton" is again a tale of life in London among the lower middle classes, it is not so depressing as "Demos" or "New Grub Street." That being so, it will not improbably turn out to be the best novel that Gissing ever wrote. The other book is a war book by a popular novelist, Mr. John Fox, jun., the author of "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come." The title of the book is "Following the Sun Flag; A Vain Pursuit through Manchuria," and we gather that its object is rather to amuse than to instruct.

The New Gissing.

SIR JOHN FURLEY, K.C.B.

After the painting by Hugh de T. Glazebrook. Reproduced from "In Peace and War," Autobiographical Sketches. Smith, Elder and Co.

* * *

THE scene of her new novel, "Life of My Heart," has been laid by Miss Victoria Cross in India, a suitable climate for a novel of this character. The book is dedicated to "the young, the romantic, those who possess beauty, and those who believe that love is the best gift of life." "They alone," says the author, "should read it, for they alone will understand it." What the story of this novel is, it is best to let readers discover for themselves; and all that we need say here is that the Anglo-Indian does not come off very well at Miss Victoria Cross's hands, and that the book is one that shows all this author's store of energy and passion, and will advance her reputation as a writer of fiction of a certain order.

Life of My Heart.

MESSRS. GEORGE NEWNES AND CO. have issued at 6d. a popular edition of Mr. Osborne's most interesting life of Father Dolling, with a portrait on the cover of the strangely ugly, but yet attractive, face of a man who had a quite unusual amount of personal fascination. The present writer had the privilege of knowing him well, quarrelling with him, and making it up again; and he cannot remember ever laughing so heartily as he did when Dolling was in the mood to be funny. Mr. Osborne's book is a most interesting story of an extraordinary life. No man was better loved, and in some quarters, perhaps, better hated, than "Brother Bob," the intimate friend and counsellor of unnumbered people from pickpockets through undergraduates to distinguished men of letters and science.

Brother Bob.

* * *

"PRINTERS' PIE," which, as our readers will doubtless remember, is an annual founded by Mr. W. Hugh Spottiswoode, and Mr. Arthur Croxton, to help the funds of the Printers' Pension, Almshouse, and Orphan Asylum Corporation, is this year even larger than it was last, though the price still remains at 1s. net. It is an admirable number, containing literary contributions from all sorts of well-known people, from the Duke of Argyll and General French to Mr. G. R. Sims and Mr. Pett Ridge. The illustrations include seven coloured plates, by Mr. Cecil Aldin, Charles Buchel, Dudley Hardy, the late Phil May, and several members of the "London Sketch Club," and with the generous aid of Messrs. W. H. Smith and Sons in the distribution, the corporation ought to benefit by a handsome sum.

Printers' Pie.

* * *

THE latest volume of Messrs. Heinemann's "Contemporary Men of Letters" Series is a little work on Bret Harte, by Mr. Henry W. Boynton. Mr. Boynton certainly does not fall into the error commonly committed by biographers, that of over praise. He is, if anything, a little "superior" and hard upon his subject. Granted that Bret Harte was sentimental, and granted that his range was narrowly limited, the author of "The Luck of Roaring Camp" was at times all but a perfect artist on his own ground, and has had more influence on some of our most popular later writers than is generally recognised. Still, Mr. Boynton's book, if a little sharp, shows discrimination and critical power, and should be read by all who like Bret Harte without quite knowing why they like him.

Bret Harte.

---

BOOKS TO READ.

Ivories, by Alfred Maskell, F.S.A. (Methuen, the Connoisseur's Library.)
Bygone Years' Recollections, by the Hon. F. Leveson-Gower. (Murray.)
Demeter, A Mask, by Robert Bridges. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)
Poverty Bay, a Nondescript Novel, by Harry Furniss. (Chapman and Hall.)
The Country-House Party, by Dora Sigerson Shorter. (Hodder and Stoughton.)
The Day's Journey, by Netta Syrett. (Chapman and Hall.)
It's a Way they have in the Army, by Lady Helen Forbes. (Duckworth.)
Love in June, a Pastoral Comedy, by Keble Howard (Chapman and Hall.)
The Memoirs of Constantine Dix, by Barry Pain. (Unwin.)
The Grand Duke, by Carlton Dawe. (Hutchinson.)
Life of My Heart, by Victoria Cross. (Walter Scott Publishing Company.)
Later Peeps at Parliament, by Henry W. Lucy. (Newnes.)
Pictures in Umbria, by Catharine S. Macquoid. Illustrations by Thomas R. Macquoid, R.I. (Laurie.)

Digitized by Google

FOR THE RACES.

LEATHER-COVERED
WALKING STICKS & UMBRELLAS.

With Pencil Attachment. In Gold or Silver Gilt.

Manufactured by—

BRIGG & SONS,
5, ST. JAMES'S STREET, S.W.,
or 33, Avenue de l'Opera, PARIS.

ESTABLISHED 1836.

---

You avoid Dinginess by using a Bissell.

The Bissell Carpet Sweepers are noiseless, dustless, and more durable than brooms.

The Spring selection is now being shown by all Ironmongers, Stores and House Furnishers at 10 6 11/3, 14/-, 15/6 & 18/-
SAME PRICE EVERYWHERE.

---

The Crown Stopper ensures Perfection.
Look for the Crown Stopper on every bottle of
CROWN LAVENDER SALTS.
A delightfully refreshing addition to the toilet.
Of all Chemists, 1/- and 2/-, or direct, 1/2 and 2/3, post free.
The Crown Perfumery Co.
108, Fore Street, London.
Paris. New York.

---

EXPRESS SERVICES to BERLIN, DRESDEN, Leipsic, Munich, Vienna, Stockholm, Moscow, etc, by the ROYAL BRITISH MAIL ROUTE, via Harwich-Hook of Holland, daily (Sundays included).

Through Carriages and Restaurant Cars between the Hook of Holland, Berlin, Cologne, and Bale.

UNIVERSAL EXHIBITION at Liége—Cheap Tickets—via Harwich-Antwerp every week-day.

London (Liverpool Street Station) dep. 8.30 p.m. for the Hook of Holland. CORRIDOR TRAIN, Dining and Breakfast Cars, Table D'Hôte Dinner and Breakfast. London (Liverpool Street Station) dep. 8.40 p.m. for Antwerp. Dining and Breakfast Cars. Direct service to Harwich from Scotland, the North and Midlands. Restaurant Car from York. Combination Tickets and Cheap Tours.

HAMBURG by G.S.N. Co.'s fast passenger steamers Wednesdays and Saturdays.

Particulars of the Continental Traffic Manager, Great Eastern Railway, Liverpool Street Station, E.C.

LIVERPOOL STREET HOTEL, one of the finest in London, adjoins Terminus.—H. C. AMENDT, Manager.

---

MOTHS RUIN FURS AND BLANKETS
USE KEATING'S POWDER
KILLS MOTHS, BEETLES & FLEAS
Tins 3d., 6d. & 1/-

---

SPA, BELGIUM.

(10 Hours from London.)

The Oldest Chalybeate Springs in the World.

Finest Bathing Establishment in Europe. Best cure for Anæmia, Chlorosis, and Heart Affections. Countless attractions Steeplechases, Horse Show, Concerts, Theatre, Automobile Races, Golf, Balls. For programme write

BUREAU DE PUBLICITE, SPA.

---

BIRKBECK BANK

ESTABLISHED 1851.

Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.
Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.

Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

---

SULPHOLINE SKIN LOTION.

Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, Entirely fade away.

---

MEDICAL GALVANISM

HAS CONQUERED some of the most obstinate complaints after all other remedies have failed.

HALE'S IMPROVED ELECTRIC BELTS and BATTERIES for wearing next the body without blistering or injuring the skin. These appliances are

PERFECT GENERATORS OF ELECTRICITY, and are most comfortable in wear. Price One Guinea.

RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, and GOUT are speedily REMOVED by this powerful Agent.

ELECTRIC BELT and SUSPENSOR, price 42s., for MEN, for VARICOCELE, Nervous Debility, and Exhaustion, Bladder Weakness, etc.

Pamphlets Gratis. Consultations Free.

HALE & SON, Medical Galvanists,
117, CHANCERY LANE, LONDON.

---

MAGNA CIDER.

"The Sparkling Wine of Somerset."

A delicious appetising beverage. Guaranteed genuine apple juice. Declared by Lancet absolutely pure. Strongly recommended by doctors in cases of Gout, Rheumatism, and Obesity. Brut Cider a speciality. Send 22s. for specimen case, containing 1 doz. quarts of Speciality and 1 doz. quarts of a sweeter blend; or 25s. for 2 doz. pints of each quality. Carriage, bottles, and cases included.—MAGNA CIDER CO., Marston Magna, Somerset.

---

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Prevents the Hair from falling off.

Restores Gray or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.

Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no unpleasant odour.

IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin, or even white linen.

Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

Ask your Chemist or Hair-Dresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.

Prepared only by the . . .

ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd.,
33, Farringdon Road, London, E.C.

---

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S

HIGH-CLASS

CIGARETTES.

TEOFANI'S Cigarettes receive the Highest Awards at all International Exhibitions, and are Sold by Leading Purveyors throughout the WORLD.

TEOFANI & CO., LONDON.

---

"MY OWN"
THE PERFECT TOBACCO

A Superb Mixture of Matchless Tobacco.

Sold in 2oz., ¼-lb., ½-lb., and 1-lb. Tins. 6/8 per lb. Post Free.

'Mexdolla' Mexican Cigars

Composed of the Choicest Mexican Leaf raised upon Virgin Soil from Picked Leaves of the young Tobacco Plant.

Price 25/- per 100, post free.

Shipped direct from Vera Cruz by

FREDK. WRIGHT,
Cigar Importer, Cheltenham: 112, High St.; Gloucester: The Cross; and Bath: 17, Northgate

---

HANSEN'S JUNKET TABLETS.

A SEASONABLE CHANCE.

Hansen's Junket Tablets are double the value of the next best. They make junket better than any other preparation and are always reliable. Housewives everywhere are adding this delicious dish to the day's menu. Be sure you get Hansen's.

Sold by all Grocers, Chemists, etc., in Glass Tubes, containing 24 Tablets, each sufficient to make a quart of Junket. Sample Tube and Book of over 30 Recipes, 6d. post free from Hansen's Depot, 77, St. Thomas's Street, London, S.E.

---

THE CHARING CROSS BANK. ESTABLISHED 1870.
119 and 120, BISHOPSGATE ST. WITHIN, E.C.
and 28, BEDFORD ST., CHARING CROSS, London.
Assets, £694,403. Liabilities, £372,291. Surplus, £322,112.
Loans of £30 to £2,000 granted at a few hours' notice in town or country, on mortgage of furniture, trade and farm stock, plant, crops, etc., without removal. Also on deeds, policies, and reversions. Distance no object. Easy terms.

2½ per cent. allowed on Current account balances.
DEPOSITS of £10 and upwards received on terms as under.
Subject to 3 months' Notice of Withdrawal, 5 per cent. per annum.
" 6 " " 6 " "
" 12 " " 7 " "
Special terms for longer periods. Interest paid quarterly. The Terminable Deposit Bonds pay nearly 9 per cent., and are a safe investment. Write or call for Prospectus.

A. WILLIAMS, H. L. TALL. } Joint Managers.

---

WHELPTON'S PURIFYING PILLS

For Indigestion, Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Sea Sickness.

INVALUABLE FOR LADIES.

8, 14, and 33 stamps.

G. WHELPTON, 4, Crane Court, Fleet St., London.

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

WELSH PORCELAIN: NANTGARW CHINA.

AS Mr. Ward very rightly points out, if the factory at Swansea possessed greater commercial importance, that of Nantgarw appeals with greater interest to the enthusiastic lover of old porcelain. It may even be said to hold a high place in the annals of English ceramics. The name of Billingsley, or Beeley, of Derby is mixed up inextricably with the story of Nantgarw, although the writer is desirous of reserving a detailed notice of his work, as well as that of Pardoe, for further consideration. It may, however, be as well to say at once that the extraordinary talents of Billingsley contributed more than anything else to the success of Nantgarw between 1811 and 1814, and again in 1817-19.

Nantgarw is a small village of a few hundred inhabitants at the present day, and, probably, never contained more. It is situate about eight miles to the north of Cardiff, in a position of singular picturesqueness, with the "Mynydd Maio" immediately behind it, the Garth Mountain nearly opposite, and the Rhondda Hills to the north-west. The name signifies "rough brook." Dr. Lardner unceremoniously converted it into Nantgarrow! In 1819 Mr. W. W. Young, who had advanced money for carrying on the concern, obtained the assistance of Mr. Thomas Pardoe, a notable Bristol potter, to conduct it; but Pardoe failed to achieve a financial success, and the quaint little "potworks" on the banks of the "rough brook" were closed in 1822, to be reopened in 1833 by Mr. W. H. Pardoe, a son of Thomas Pardoe, for the making of earthenware and tobacco pipes. It results from this that it was only in the years 1812, 1813, 1814, 1817, 1818, and 1819 that the finest "body" of the rare and beautiful Nantgarw porcelain was produced. The sort produced in 1820-21-22 by Young and Pardoe is difficult to identify, but is supposed to have been of a "harder" nature than Billingsley's ware. The collapse of Nantgarw after the briefest possible period of prosperity would have afforded a complete illustration of Sir Henry Doulton's observation that "as schools of philosophy, poetry, and painting are subject to rise, culmination, decline, and fall, so in the art of pottery there are many striking instances of this law." The demise of Nantgarw was certainly more sudden than the lingering deaths which marked the close of the glorious careers of Chelsea, Bow, Lowestoft, Liverpool, Bristol—and even Swansea. It is said that some of Billingsley's best handiwork was passed off by London dealers as veritable "Old Sèvres" pâte tendre ware of the Louis XV. period. Some connoisseurs believe the best Nantgarw to be equal to the best "Old Sèvres," both in the body and decoration. Mr. Deane, a very notable and competent authority, declares that this is only true of the "body," but not of either the glaze or the decoration. The beautiful specimens figuring in the accompanying illustration are in the china gallery of the Cardiff Museum. Mr. John Ward (by whose kindness they have been photographed for reproduction in THE KING) writes as follows:

"The typical product of Nantgarw has a soft body of fine granular texture, closely resembling the celebrated pâte tendre of Sèvres, and the glaze is thick and glassy, not given to crasing, with an ivory-like smoothness and warmth. The whiteness of its surface is mellowed by its extreme translucency, and an almost imperceptible rosy or violet tinge. The pieces are usually rather thick, probably in order to withstand the danger of distortion in the firing, a liability which Billingsley never succeeded in remedying, and consequently the manufacture was commercially a failure. The articles were, as a rule, of a useful rather than ornamental character, consisting of dinner, dessert, and tea services, and such other forms as were likely to meet with a rapid sale. Simple spill vases are occasionally met with, but the elaborate vases and other ornaments frequently offered by dealers as 'genuine Nantgarw' should always be regarded with suspicion. The mark, which is by no means always present, and is subject to few modifications, consists of the impressed words 'NANTGARW. C.W.' (the C.W. standing for 'China Works'). The Nantgarw folk naturally relied upon the excellence of their porcelain for success and fame. The decoration of their more perfect articles was almost invariably of a sort to accentuate the beauty of the surface. One favourite pattern (copied from Sèvres) consisted of small daintily-painted bouquets strewn over the white ground; another—and it represents their best decorative work—of large flowers, delineated with a charming decision as to form and absence of labour, rich in colour, and soft and velvety in general effect. The flowers were usually disposed in a free and unconventional manner—a loose group or two, and a few detached flowers being irregularly scattered over the ground. The gold work rarely exceeds a simple plain or enamated edging. The decoration executed at London and elsewhere on Nantgarw porcelain may generally be distinguished from the better work executed at the factory by its greater sumptuousness. The artists, having no particular interest in the factory and its products, naturally only had 'eyes' for what they themselves put on; hence their work was not calculated to show off the white porcelain to the best advantage; on the contrary, it often wholly covered it."

SOME SPECIMENS OF NANTGARW PORCELAIN IN THE ART GALLERY AND MUSEUM AT CARDIFF.
(Reproduced by permission of the Curator, Mr. John Ward.)

The dainty "Sèvres" bouquets so conspicuous in the dish to the left of the illustration are supposed to have been painted by Iunic. The view of Pontypridd Bridge on the dish to the right is possibly by Pardoe.

Several of the small plates are examples of Nantgarw pottery decorated in London. The successful efforts of the Cardiff authorities to illustrate and hand down to posterity the past glories of the great potters of South Wales should count for something in considering the claim of that prosperous town to become the site of the Welsh National Museum as well as the capital of South Wales.

B.

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

hold and offer for sale specimens of the
HIGHEST QUALITY
OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE
as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.

EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.
AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.
(Two hours from Paddington.)

Old Brass Stand and Lamp.

THE MISSES
H. & I. WOOLLAN
(Under Royal Patronage)
are showing a
UNIQUE
Collection of
Antiques.
Chippendale, Sheraton, and Hepplewhite Furniture. . . Worcester and Lowestoft Services. Lace, Glass, etc.
Showrooms: First Floor.
28, BROOK STREET, GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

PENNY—HENRY III.

RARE COINS & MEDALS
(AT MODERATE PRICES)
SPINK & SON LTD.
17 & 18, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.

AUTOGRAPHS—HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS.
The oldest Dealers in Europe. For Catalogues, issued monthly, and all information write at once to
M. NOEL CHARAVAY,
3, RUE DE FURSTENBERG, PARIS,
where the "AMATEUR DES AUTOGRAPHES," a valuable Monthly Publication, may also be obtained.

JAMES TREGASKIS,
"The Caxton Head," 232, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.
RARE BOOKS, MEDIÆVAL MANUSCRIPTS, DOCUMENTS OF LITERARY & HISTORICAL INTEREST, ORIGINAL DRAWINGS, ENGRAVINGS, AMERICANA, CURIOSITIES, ANTIQUITIES, OBJECTS OF ART.
Catalogues Price Sixpence.

PORTRAITS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.
ENGLISH—FOREIGN—AMERICAN.
RARE ENGRAVINGS OF ALL SORTS.
WRITE FOR CATALOGUES OR VISIT THE SHOWROOMS OF
M. GODEFROY-MAYER,
41, RUE BLANCHE, PARIS.

WEYMOUTH, DORSET.
CURIOSITY SHOP.
Finest collection of Genuine Curios in West of England.
Amongst other items on sale—Unique Inlaid Escritoire-Cabinet formerly property of Frederick the Great, presented by successor to Sir Evan Nepean, Secretary of Admiralty at time of Trafalgar.
BAKER, 2, Charlotte Row, Close Old Palace George III.
DESCRIBED BY MADAME D' ARBLAY.

CATALOGUES OF
ILLUSTRATED BOOKS, VIEWS, PORTRAITS, etc.,
GRATIS.
Books and Engravings Bought.
JAMES RIMELL & SON,
DEALERS IN OLD BOOKS AND ENGRAVINGS,
53, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON, W.

Bookbinding.—The Bedford Bindery.
OLD-ESTABLISHED FIRM.
VERY MODERATE PRICES. Special attention paid to extra-illustrated works.
SPECIMENS ON VIEW.
G. F. AYLING, 1A, CAMBRIDGE ST., EDGWARE ROAD, W.

BATH.
GEORGE GREGORY,
BOOKSELLER, Etc.
Write for Catalogues. An inspection of Mr. Gregory's shop should not be omitted by any visitor to Bath. Speciality—Americana. Old Bath. Colour-plate books. Autographs.
Address: 5, ARGYLE STREET.

MAGGS BROS.,
109, STRAND, W.C., LONDON, ENGLAND.
Dealers in RARE BOOKS AND FINE LIBRARY EDITIONS OF STANDARD AUTHORS, Voyages and Travels, Early Printed Books, 1st Editions of 17th, 18th, and 19th Century writers, Illustrated Works. Also Rare Portraits, Line, Stipple, Mezzotints, and Colour Engravings, and Autographs.
Recently issued—Illustrated Catalogues of Rare Books, Voyages and Travels, Engravings, Autographs. Price 6d. each.

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

For Spaces in the Register apply to "THE EDITOR."

WANTED.
AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

Following autograph letters wanted: — Beau Brummel, Captain Gronow, Frederica, Duchess of York, Mary Anne Clarke. Good prices given.—823, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Letters of Mrs. Delaney to Mrs. Frances Hamilton; 1 vol., small 8vo., with silhoutte portrait, First edition. £1 offered. — 824, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Lord Nelson, autograph letters of Lady Nelson.—825, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Catalogues, in good condition, of the Naval Exhibition at Chelsea in 1891.—167, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Guides and Histories of the Isle of Wight.—168, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Boxiana, vols. IV. and V., in boards. 30/- each offered.—169, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Almanach de Gotha, 1814. £4 offered.—170, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old Dorset Bank Notes prior to 1816. Time Tables of Great Western Railway prior to 1847.—171, THE KING'S EXCHANGE

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Battersea Boxes, with views of Bath and Bristol Hot Wells.—520, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old XIVth or XVth Century Stained Glass. Good specimens.—521, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Worcester China, Binn's "Century of Potting." Reports invited. 12/6 offered.—522, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.
PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Naval Prints published by any of the following:—C. Sheppard, 74, Little Britain; C. Taylor, Holborn (date 1791); J. Fairburn, 110 and 146, Minories (1800-1838); Tabart and Co., London; E. Rushton, Paradise Street, Liverpool; W. Belch, Bridge Street, Boro'; I. Houlston, Strand; R. Sly, 41, Union Street, Somers Town; J. Marshall, Aldermary Churchyard, London.—237, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Theatrical Prints by any of the following publishers:—Bailey, 1802-1808; West, 1811; Clark, 1821; Hodgson, 1822-1838; Dyer, 1825-1840; Fairburn, 1800-1837; Straker, 1829; Floyd, 1830; Skelt, 1832-1870; Green, 1834-1860; or Webb, Park, Reddington, and Matthews.—248, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good Impressions with good margins of engravings of old London, especially Covent Garden, the Temple, the Strand, Lincoln's Inn.—249, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Views of Bath, Six, by Samuel Cousins. £4 offered. Cir. 1776.—250, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old Views of the Commanderie at Worcester, or MSS. or Tracts relating to. — 251, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Portrait of Bishop Conybeare, of Bristol, 1756. 4to. 7/- offered.—252, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Naval Portraits, period 1756:—Captain Charles Holmes, Admiral West, Philip Darell, Charles Buckner, and Captain Ouvry, also Earl of Holdernesse —253, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Portrait, Bubb Dodington, Lord Melcombe. Also autograph letter.—254, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.
TAPESTRY, FURNITURE, Etc.

A good Specimen of Rock Tapestry. Period about 1640.—410, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Bath Tokens issued by Turner, coach contractor, between 1770 and 1800.—747, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.
PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Original XVIIIth Century Drawings of Bath or Brighton. Also Caricatures relating to.—221A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

A fine copy of Natte's Bath, or would accept copy of Genest's British Stage, or good extra illustrated Life of Garrick.—129A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

A very fine old Staffordshire Dinner Service of 160 pieces, in perfect condition. Crown Derby pattern, marked with crown. Sample plate on approval. Deposit.—520A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Staffordshire Ware, Busts of famous people.—521A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Life of Mrs. Frances Sheridan. Collection of Portraits from Oxberry.—744A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Ancient Greek, Roman, English, Scotch, Irish Gold and Silver Coins.—745A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

SEVERAL important motoring competitions have been arranged for this Whitsuntide, the most important of which is the South Harting Hill-climb, open only to members of the Automobile Club and its affiliated clubs. South Harting is about 3¾-miles from Petersfield and 9-miles from Liphook, and being therefore within easy reach of London, a large gathering is expected to-morrow (Saturday) afternoon. The course is a winding one, about a mile in length, and the average gradient for more than half the distance is 1 in 9·3, with several portions as steep as 1 in 7. There are three classes—for vehicles costing £150 and not more than £350; for cars the chassis price of which is £300 and not more than £500; and for cars the chassis price of which is over £500 and not more than £850. A cup and the club's silver medal are offered in each class, and in addition the club's gold medal will be given for the best performance, irrespective of class, on a handicap by the club's formula.

* * *

Another important event is the Speed Trials organised by the Yorkshire Automobile Club for Monday next over the Filey and Muston Sands. The course will be about 1½-miles in length, and the beach is said to offer a splendid surface for high speed. A full programme has been arranged, and there will be both open and restricted events for touring and racing cars, for which some valuable prizes have been offered. On Wednesday, June 14, the Bexhill Meeting will take place.

* * *

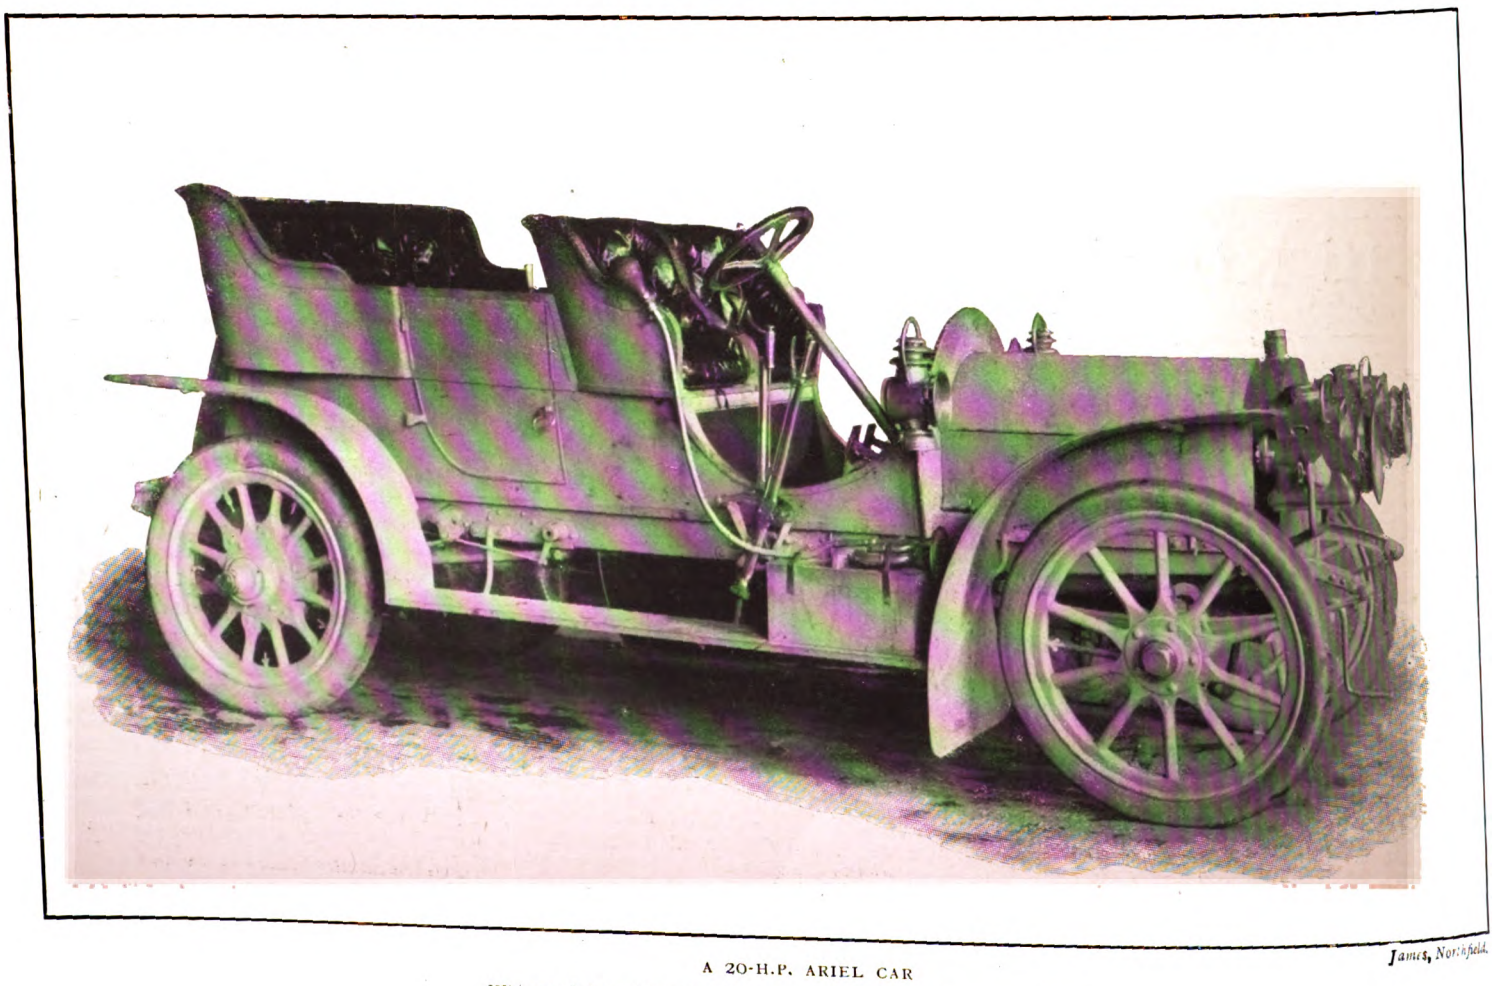
By a curious coincidence all the important automobile organisations in France have recently approved and adopted a code of "road conventions," which are not dissimilar from the "road maxims" of the "Considerate Driving League" of Mr. Scott Montagu, in that the underlying principle is that every motorist should show the utmost consideration for other users of the highway. They are somewhat wider in their scope, however, than the English code, as they include certain practical rules to be observed when another car is seen to be in distress. These might well be adopted by automobilists in this country, as at present there is no generally recognised means whereby one motorist can signify to another that he is in need of assistance. The rules are as follows: (a) Every automobilist must give assistance to any other motorist who requests it. (b) If a car is broken down the driver should ask for assistance by the following signals: By day, by waving the right hand perpendicularly to the road, the face turned towards the car whose aid is asked, or by waving over the broken-down car a white flag, made if necessary from a handkerchief. At night by waving a lantern across the road. (c) In case a car should run short of petrol, the driver of a passing car, on being asked, must deliver the quantity not strictly required by himself. The petrol must be paid for at once.

* * *

The figures relating to tyre troubles in the report of the Scottish Trials are of interest, as it is possible to deduce from them the probability of burst or puncture when travelling over the mountainous roads of the Highlands. It will be remembered that thirty-six cars completed the competition, which extended over 600-miles. The total mileage run by the successful vehicles was therefore about 21,600-miles. Against them were recorded thirty-seven stoppages due to tyre troubles, so that on an average a puncture or burst occurred once in every 583-miles. The total time spent by these thirty-six cars in tyre repairs during the four days was 12-hr. 5-min., which makes the average duration of each halt just under 20-min. The various makes represented among the thirty-six cars were as follows: Two were fitted with Shrewsbury and Challiner Solids, seventeen with Dunlops, most of which were of the very excellent corrugated pattern, ten with Michelins, and seven with Continentals.

* * *

All street accidents which by any stretch of imagination can be ascribed to the motor-car are always reported at length in the columns of those papers which live on sensationalism; but it rarely happens that the true facts of the case, when they become known, are given an equal amount of prominence, while in many cases they are absolutely ignored. In the Automobile Club Journal a firm of solicitors requests that publicity may be given to the verdict of the jury in an inquest on the body of a boy who was generally reported to have been killed by a motor-car at Hendon. From the evidence of disinterested witnesses it was made clear that he was riding his bicycle down a hill at a furious speed, with his feet up, without a brake, that the tyre burst, and that he suddenly rushed from behind a van which he was overtaking, and fell from his bicycle upon his head, receiving injuries from which he died. A motor-car was coming up the hill slowly at the time, but was in no way concerned in the accident. A verdict was returned in accordance with the evidence, and a rider was added that the driver of the car was in no way to blame



James, Northfield.

A 20-H.P. ARIEL CAR

Winner of the gold medal (first in its class) in the recent Scottish Trials.

Digitized by Google

"FIAT" MOTORS, Ltd.

37 & 38, LONG ACRE, W.C.

Telegraphic Address: "FIATISM, LONDON."
Telephone Nos.: 3171 and 1849 GERRARD.

WORLD'S TRACK RECORD BROKEN BY

75-h.p. F.I.A.T.

STANDING MILE 52⅘ SECONDS. AT NEW YORK.

MILAN RELIABILITY TRIALS.—Class 1.—24-h.p. FIAT, 1st, 2nd & 3rd.
Class 2.—24-h.p. FIAT, 1st & 2nd.
Class 4.—16-h.p. FIAT, 1st.

Brighton Depot:

Brighton and South Coast Motor Garages, Ltd., St. James's Street, Brighton.

Sole Concessionnaires for Great Britain and Ireland

Fiat Motors, Ltd., 37 & 38, Long Acre, W.C

Agents for Yorkshire: H. JOHNSON & CO., 28, Montpellier Parade, Harrogate.
Agents for Northamptonshire and Warwickshire: Pytchley Autocar Co., Northampton.

MERCÉDÈS

H.M.
EDWARD VII.
King of England has just had delivered at Buckingham Palace his new 40-h.p.
Mercédès Car.

Sole Concessionnaires:
Cannstatt Mercédès, Ltd.,
127, Long Acre,
W.C.

H.I.M. WILHELM II.,
German Emperor.

H.M. LEOPOLD,
King of the Belgians.

H.M. EDWARD VII.,
King of England.

H.M. CARLOS,
King of Portugal.

Catalogue sent on request.

THE KING'S CAR

Booklet entitled "Mercédès Points" supplied on request.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

ELBOW sleeves, puff sleeves, short sleeves, and fancy sleeves of all varieties form the chief novelty of summer blouses, and, combined with broderie Anglaise, Irish lace, and embroideries, some of the daintiest and smartest bodices are the happy results. Messrs. Robinson and Cleaver of Regent Street have some of the most delightful creations, and an enormous choice in all descriptions, from the simple and practical to the most elegant. Their hand-embroidered linen bodices and skirts are charming and most inexpensive. They have also some very pretty muslins with lace insertions that will prove very useful for country wear this hot weather. A pale pink silk blouse, very prettily made with Irish lace, motives, and red velvet straps, is a charming example. Also the quaint lace bodice, with the reseda silk plaited trimmings, and the full puffed sleeve, makes a deliciously cool and tempting addition to your collection of blouses; and yet a third, in cream fancy net, with its handsome lace ornamentations, is a creation that ought not to be overlooked in completing your stock for all occasions. Some exquisite gowns were worn at the different race-meetings this last week, and also some of the most simple linen and muslin gowns were worn. I say simple, but the great charm of these was in the cut and fit. I notice that English people are very much more particular over the cut of their gowns than they used to be, and as a natural result the effect is delightful and most artistic.

Some very lovely gowns were worn at their Majesties' Court. Amongst them were the following, which were very happy creations of Messrs. Paquin, Limited, of 39, Dover Street. Lady Eden wore an exquisite Empire gown of pale green lace over white satin and chiffon. The sash was of embroidered gold galon. The train from the shoulders, of gold tissue, lightly and gracefully draped with mousseline de soie of the same colour. Lady Borthwick was gowned in pink satin. The bodice was of white spotted tulle, with point à l'aiguille lace; narrow folds of pink velvet and a deep belt of pink satin completed the charming effect. The white satin train was draped most artistically with the same lace and mousseline de soie. Mrs. Tempest-Hicks's gown of white satin Duchesse and beautiful old Brussels lace was immensely admired, the bodice having a very handsome berthe of the same lace. The white satin train was lined with gold tissue, and rolled back, forming revers of gold. A lovely scarf of the same fine old lace was also worn, and sprays of La France roses. A gown of white Oriental satin was worn by Mrs. Lawson Johnston, which had a deep border of pink and blue roses, richly embroidered on white lace, the draped bodice trimmed with appliqués of lace embroidered to correspond.

A SMART BLOUSE OF CREAM NET AND LACE.
(Messrs. Robinson and Cleaver, Regent Street, W.)

A SUMMER BLOUSE OF LACE AND RESEDA SILK.
(Messrs. Robinson and Cleaver, Regent Street, W.)

The train of Oriental satin was trimmed with mousseline de soie and silver galon. Another much-admired gown was the one worn by Mrs. Wilfred Ashley. This was of silver embroidery on white taffetas, the skirt opening over a front of white chiffon strewn with brilliants. The bodice was trimmed with rich lace, and embroidered to correspond. The pink broché velvet train was draped with lovely old lace and roses.

Flowers are very plentifully used, both as trimmings for gowns and as nosegays, roses in every imaginable shade being the favourite blooms. Sunshades are beginning to make a noble show; indeed, these have rarely been so charmingly dainty and elaborate as they promise to be this season. The only pity is that they are too dainty to be of much material protection from the hot rays of the sun. They certainly look most fascinating, and cast a most becoming shade over the face, and I suppose, after all, that is something to be desired. For those who are more careful of their complexions and comfort, there are of course more substantial, if not quite such beautiful, examples, in silks of all shades and descriptions. Those in chenie silk, with their delicate colourings and chiffon frills, are quite charming.

In the new Gaiety production, "The Spring Chicken," Miss Olive Morrell wore some most delightful gowns, which also emanated from the artist Paquin. One a white mousseline de soie evening dress with graduated tucks, the low bodice very becomingly trimmed with Valenciennes lace and satin ribbon in fichu effect, and a grey crêpe de chine afternoon gown, the bodice having a yoke of Malines lace and a soft satin sash. Another delightful creation was the white cloth mantle, tastefully trimmed and lined with white mousseline de soie and satin ribbons.

R. D.

(From photographs specially taken for this paper by Miss Mabel Lomnitz, 26, Victoria Street, S.W.)

Digitized by Google

SCOTTISH RELIABILITY TRIALS.

Double Success of Humber Cars.

IN THE HILL-CLIMBING COMPETITIONS THE

TWO HUMBER CARS

BEAT

ALL OTHER CARS

of equal or less horse power, and also many MORE POWERFUL AND MORE COSTLY CARS, and THE NEW BEESTON HUMBER CAR went through the whole of the Four Days' Trials WITHOUT LOSING A MARK!

Prices - 225 to 45 Guineas.

HUMBER, LTD., BEESTON (NOTTS.) & COVENTRY.

DEPOTS:—London (Cycles and Motor Cycles) 32, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.; (Motor Cars) 13, Cambridge Place, Paddington, W. Liverpool: 73, Bold Street. Manchester: 5, Deansgate. Birmingham: 4, Victoria Square. Nottingham: Grey Friargate. Southampton: 27, London Road.

MODES.

MAISON LEWIS,

16, Rue Royale, PARIS.

Entrance, 422, Rue St. Honoré.

Place du Casino, MONTE CARLO.

7, Place de la Mairie, BIARRITZ.

210, Regent Street, LONDON. W.

PHOTOGRAPHY WITH ROLL FILMS.

FOR THE BEST RESULTS USE THE NEW

KODAK TANK

DEVELOPING MACHINE

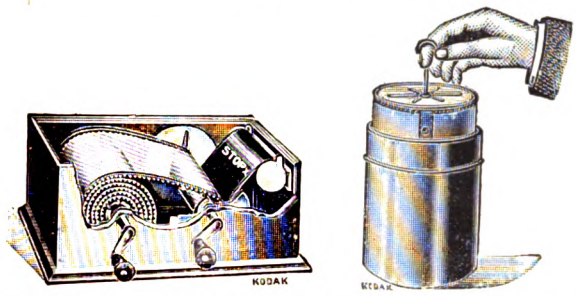
THE DARK ROOM ABOLISHED—ALL IN DAYLIGHT.



Snapshots or time exposures are all the same to the machine. It develops them perfectly, and gives equal printing quality right through the band of film. No stains, no finger marks, no scratches, and no unevenness.

The exposed film is wound within a red celluloid band or apron in the box figured above, and then immersed as shown in the cylindrical metal tank containing the developing solution. There is no longer any turning of a handle during development The film slowly develops itself with practically no attention.

The Acme of Simplicity and Perfection for Beginner and Expert alike.

PRICES FROM 10/-

Descriptive Pamphlet of all Dealers and

KODAK, LTD. 57, 59, 61, Clerkenwell Rd., LONDON, E.C., AND BRANCHES.

SUPPORT HOME MANUFACTURES

Fry's

"FIVE BOYS" MILK CHOCOLATE.

"Unrivalled as a chocolate confection."
—MEDICAL MAGAZINE.

"Highest Standard of purity."—A. B. GRIFFITHS, Ph.D., etc.
Analytical Chemist, London.

British Milk and British Labour.

Digitized by Google

THE KING'S MENU.

A SEASONABLE LITTLE DINNER.

CONSOMME CRECY.

BARBUE A LA PROVENCALE.

POITRINE D'AGNEAU A LA TARTARE.

CAILLES ROTIS.

SALADE.

FLAN AUX CERISES.

BISCUITS A LA FERMIERE.

CONSOMME CRECY.

For this flavour a nice clear light stock rather strongly with young carrots, and serve with a garnish of little pea shapes of young carrots carefully cooked and then glazed.

BARBUE A LA PROVENCALE.

Fillet the brill and use the trimmings, head, and bones to make a well-flavoured fish stock, adding about three ounces of sliced onion, a bunch of herbs, an ounce of carrot, a pinch each of celery salt and mignonette pepper, with the trimmings, etc., and enough cold water to cover all, and then simmering together (after bringing to the boil and skimming) for thirty minutes or so. The stock is then strained, brought to the boil again, then poured thus over the fillets of fish, which have ready in a shallow sauté-pan large enough for them to be arranged in it without overlapping. Simmer the fillets in the stock till done (for from twelve to fifteen minutes), then place them in the hot dish they are to go to table in and keep hot. Have ready three-quarters of an ounce each of onion and flour fried gently in an ounce of butter, frying the sliced onion gently for five minutes before adding and frying the flour. To these stir in two gills of the stock the fish was cooked in and a gill of light white wine (or if wine is not at hand, substitute another gill of stock, but the wine is a very great improvement), and either four ounces of skinned and seeded sliced tomato or a tablespoonful of tomato conserve. Add a bunch of herbs tied up with a small bay leaf and a strip of lemon peel, bring to the boil, then simmer for a quarter of an hour, when the bunch of herbs is lifted out, the rest rubbed through a tammy or fine hair sieve, seasoned to taste, reheated, and part of the resulting sauce used to mask the fish with, and the rest served with it.

POITRINE D'AGNEAU A LA TARTARE.

Melt two ounces of butter in a fricandeau pan large enough to take the breast of lamb whole, then fry in it three ounces each of finely-minced young carrot, onion, and turnip, one ounce of celery (or failing this, tie a little of the seed up in a small muslin bag, and put it in with the stock later on), and a bunch of herbs tied up with a small bay leaf, a strip of lemon peel, and two or three peppercorns, and fry them all together till they just turn colour, then lay the breast on the bed of vegetables, and moisten with sufficient warm stock to just cover the meat. Bring to the boil, skim, then simmer as gently as possible till the meat is done sufficiently for the bones to be removed easily. Now lift it out of the pan, pick out the bones, and lay the meat flat on a dish, cover with a board, and weight heavily. Strain off the stock, put this aside to cool, and put the vegetables aside also. When the meat is quite cold unweight it, and divide the meat into even-sized slices, trimming them neatly. Now brush over with beaten egg, dip in fine dry bread-crumbs, and stand aside for an hour, after which repeat the process, recrumbing them again. They are then fried in deep smoking fat a delicate golden brown, drained well, then sent to table on a purée of the vegetables the meat was braised with. For the sauce tartare make a mayonnaise sauce with the yolks of two raw eggs, a teaspoonful of French mustard, a little salt, a gill of fine fresh olive oil, and a dessertspoonful of tarragon vinegar, then add to this a tablespoonful of very finely-minced mixed green herbs, which should include tarragon, chervil, chives, and parsley.

CAILLES ROTIS.

The quails should be wrapped in bacon and vine leaves before roasting, then served on croûtes spread with a paste made by lightly frying the livers of the quails with that of a chicken in butter, with a teaspoonful of minced onion, a pinch of powdered sweet herbs, pepper and salt, and half an ounce of glaze, after which the livers, etc., are rubbed through a fine wire sieve, and the resulting purée used as above. Send a good brown sauce to table with the birds, also a nut sauce, the following being a very good one: Scald and peel three ounces of Indian cashu nuts, mince them coarsely, then fry gently in an ounce of butter till a light brown, then pour off all the butter, stir in half a pint of thin creamy white or fawn-coloured sauce, made with either milk or light stock, and simmer all together for about a quarter of an hour, then rub the sauce and nuts through a fine wire sieve, reheat, add a spoonful or two of cream, and use.

SALADE.

For this take the hearts of a couple of cos lettuce, and after washing and wiping carefully break up the leaves and dress simply with oil and vinegar, and freshly ground black pepper. A fourniture of finely-minced chives and tarragon leaves, about a teaspoonful of each for two small lettuces, is a great improvement to most tastes, though often neglected by English salad-makers.

FLAN AUX CERISES.

(Specially prepared and photographed for this paper.)

FLAN AUX CERISES.

To make any flan, which is one of the open tarts more general in French households than our covered ones, stand a fleur ring on a baking sheet and line with good short or rough puff paste, bringing up the edge well, and pinching it into shape with the thumb and forefinger. Now prick the inside all over, fill up with rice or dried peas, and bake in a fairly hot oven till well coloured. Have ready a compôte of any nice fruit, Kentish cherries, which will be in very soon now, or the French bottled ones being particularly nice, especially if the syrup is flavoured with a little Kirsch (not necessarily the liqueur itself, but a little of one of the liqueur syrups now obtainable very cheaply). Two or three sheets of fine leaf gelatine should be dissolved in a little hot water and mixed with the syrup while this is still hot. The compôte is then poured very carefully into the case (emptying it of the rice or peas first, of course, and removing the ring and baking sheet), and it is then served as it is, either hot or cold. At the same time, it may be pointed out that it greatly improves a hot flan to heap a meringue of white of egg and sifted sugar on it and stand it in the oven till this is set, or if the tart is to be served cold, sprinkle it with shredded sweet almonds and then pile on stiffly-whipped cream, sweetened and flavoured to taste with either vanilla (which always brings out the flavour of fruit so well) or a little of the liqueur used to flavour the syrup for the compôte.

BISCUITS A LA FERMIERE.

Heat some plain unsweetened biscuits in hot butter, turning them over, and then add a seasoning composed of three teaspoonfuls of salt, one of freshly-ground black pepper, and half one of Nepaul pepper mixed together. The biscuits are then served with a grilled mushroom on the top of each and a dust of the seasoning over. Serve as hot as possible.

---

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

POMMES DE TERRE A LA LYONNAISE (Piquet).—Young kidney potatoes are the best for this, and should be chosen as much of a size as possible. Three parts boil them, then lay them in a well-buttered sauté pan with a spoonful each of finely-minced parsley and chives or shallot, the size of the spoon depending on the quantity of potatoes. For four people a dessertspoonful of each herb to the right quantity of potatoes for a party of this size will do. Now stir till the potatoes have finished cooking, then serve with the butter and herbs poured over them. Potatoes sauté like this are particularly good, you will find, with spatch-cocked chicken.

SPAGHETTI WITH LIVER AND MUSHROOMS (Wanderer).—I think what you mean is spaghetti fourré à la Borghése. This is the nicest recipe I have for it, but if not what you want let me know, as I have others. Melt an ounce of butter in a stewpan, then add, minced very small, two ounces each of onion, carrot, and turnip, and half an ounce of celery, a pinch of dried powdered sweet herbs, a spray of parsley, a seasoning of salt, and freshly-ground black pepper. Fry these for a few minutes, turning and stirring so that the vegetables may be evenly coloured without burning, then add the trimmings, finely minced, from a quarter of a pound of mushrooms, well washing and drying them before peeling and stalking them, so that the trimmings are quite free from grit, etc., and dry before they are minced. Add with these trimmings an ounce of meat glaze, and cook till this has melted. Now put in threepennyworth of chickens' livers and cook all together very gently till these are done. Now lift out the livers and set aside, then rub the vegetables and moisture from them through a fine sieve, then set this purée aside also. Now mince roughly the ready-trimmed mushrooms and fry them lightly in butter. They are then drained from this and put aside also. Meantime boil four ounces of spaghetti, drain it, and toss it in a clean dry pan with two ounces of fresh butter, and two tablespoonfuls of freshly-grated Parmesan cheese. When this has melted put the spaghetti in a fireproof china dish, making a hollow in the centre of the spaghetti. Now mix into the vegetable purée the minced mushrooms and the livers, which should also be roughly minced, and put this mixture into the centre of the spaghetti. Cover over with spaghetti, sprinkle with grated cheese, and dot a few tiny bits of butter about on the top, and put the dish in the oven till the surface is nicely browned and the contents thoroughly hot. Serve as hot as possible.

SYBARITE.

Digitized by Google

CUSTARD WITH FRUIT

Copyright.

Nature provides the fruit:
"BIRD" supplies the custard:
Try them together.

BIRD'S CUSTARD POWDER.

'DAREN' BREAD.

Awarded 37 HONOURS.

One doctor writes: "'DAREN' is 20 per cent. more nourishing than white bread." Another writes: "'DAREN' Bread is delicious. If it were in more general use there would be much less indigestion and other sufferings." Most Towns have one or more bakers making 'DAREN.' It is sold in 2d., 3d., and 4d. Loaves. Each loaf is stamped 'DAREN.' Ask your baker to supply you. If any difficulty is experienced in obtaining 'DAREN' Bread, apply the 'DAREN' Flour Mills, Dartford, Kent, for name of nearest agent. A dainty Sample Loaf of 'DAREN' will be sent on receipt of four penny stamps to defray cost of postage.

РУБЛЬ КОФЕ

(Roub'e Coffee) is fresh roasted the day it is sent out. Ground coffee is sent only when specially asked for. Rouble Coffee is because there is no better. 5lb. sample to readers of this Paper in return for 10/- cash.

The Coffee of the Epicure

The METATA AGENTS
17b, Devonshire Sq., London, E.C.

HOW TO MAKE COFFEE.
Our handbook gives detailed directions.—Write for it.

| Price per lb. | Samples post free |
|---|---|
| 2/4 | 8d. |
| 1/10 | 6d. |
| 1/6 | 4d. |

ROUBLE COFFEE

THE WHITE WINES OF ENGLAND.

BULMER'S Famous Herefordshire CIDERS and PERRY.

For a beautifully illustrated booklet on Cider, price list, and special booklet for invalids, apply to

H. P. BULMER and CO., HEREFORD.

BUTLER'S "KEEN" RAZOR

HOLLOW GROUND. SPECIAL STEEL. HAND FORGED.

"I know that Razor, it comes from Sheffield."

HIGHEST AWARDS.
GUARANTEED PERFECT, AND BRITISH MADE THROUGHOUT.

"Keen as this razor's edge invisible." (Love's Labour Lost.)

Black Handles ... ... each 3/- & 5/- | Ivory Handles ... ... each 5/- & 7/6
*Per pair, in best Case, 15/-; 7-day set, 50/- | *Per pair in Russia Case, 21/-; 7-day set, 70/-
"CAVENDISH" CARVERS (Regd. brand) keep "an edge that won't come off."
Fine Ivory, 20/-; Imitation ditto or Stag, 10/6 per pair. Post Free of all Dealers.
Sole Makers, GEORGE BUTLER & CO., Trinity Works, SHEFFIELD.

7/10ths of ALL

Your little ills will find relief in

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

For HEADACHE,
For BILIOUSNESS,
For INDIGESTION,
For TORPID LIVER,
For CONSTIPATION,
For SALLOW SKIN,
For the COMPLEXION.

Very small, and easy to take as sugar. Purely Vegetable.

Genuine must have signature

PRICE 1½d.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

As regular as the seasons themselves is the recommencement of the sailings by the New Palace Steamers on the Saturday preceding Whit week. Consequently on that day (June 10) this year, the popular passenger boats "Royal Sovereign" and "Koh-i-noor" will sail to Southend, Margate, and Ramsgate, from Old Swan Pier, London Bridge. There will be in addition a Husbands' Boat Trip to Margate in the afternoon. Whit-Sunday will see the commencement of the now much-patronised Dover trips, the company wisely following up their venture last year and continuing the four days a week service to Deal and Dover. Special trains will run to connect with these steamers at Tilbury, from Fenchurch Street and St. Pancras, calling at intermediate stations en route. A feature of these steamers' trips is the excellent catering on board, and as the company again carry on this department themselves, the same liberal treatment as hitherto is assured for the coming season. The company announce that the steamers have been thoroughly overhauled during the past winter months, and everything put in order for the season's working. Intending trippers will do well to write to the company at their offices, 50, King William Street, E.C., for details of the various trips and fares and their illustrated guide.

FROM to day, throughout the year, motor-omnibuses are to connect the romantic neighhood of Chagford in South Devon with the main line of the London and South Western Railway at Exeter. Hitherto a coach has run from Yeoford Junction to Chagford, but that service is now discontinued, and visitors to a district which in the variety of its scenery is held to be unrivalled on the borderland of Dartmoor, will henceforth be able to travel by the fast express trains from Waterloo, and reach their destination in a much shorter time than has hitherto been possible.

AT the Grand Theatre, Croydon, next week a dramatised version of Mr. Baring Gould's "Mehalah" will be produced. The version has been prepared by Mr. Matheson Lang and Mr. A. E. Anson, both of whom are well-known Bensonians, and the title rôle will be supported by Miss Hutin Britton, another member of the famous company. Mr. Lang will appear as Elijah Rebow, and a capable company has been engaged to support him.

THE first edition of a useful little illustrated guide entitled "Week-end Holidays from London" has just been issued. It contains precisely the information which the week-end traveller needs, namely, brief particulars of a large number of the most popular South, West, and East Coast resorts, the fares and train services, as officially supplied by the railway companies, and the week-end charges made at hotels, hydros, and other establishments. Mr. W. T. Perkins is the editor of the book, a second edition of which will be published in October next.

Illustration Bureau.

THE PYGMIES IN LONDON.

These little people, inhabitants of one of the dense forests of Central Africa, who are quite primitive in their ways, are appearing at the Hippodrome.

THE publishers of the well-known "Peacock" brand of post-cards have just completed a special set of ten views for the Lynton and Barnstaple Railway Company. The cards depict typical scenes on this picturesque narrow-gauge line connecting Lynton and the "Lorna Doone" country with Barnstaple and the busy outer world. It is said that this railway runs through twenty miles of the loveliest scenery in Devonshire, and the post-card views certainly give colour to the statement.

THE King's Royal Warrant of appointment as salt purveyors to his Majesty has been granted to the proprietors of Cerebos Salt, who already hold similar appointments from H.R.H. the Prince of Wales and H.M. the King of Portugal. When an article of daily necessity comes in for so much honour from illustrious personages it is small wonder that it should be in almost universal use.

MR. H. G. DUDLEY BENNETT has taken over the management of the Alexandra Theatre, Stoke Newington, and inaugurates his management with an exceptionally fine attraction by arrangement with Miss Julia Neilson and Mr. Fred Terry in the production of "Sunday." One of the most interesting features of the production will be the appearance of Miss Jean Sterling Mackinlay, a daughter of the celebrated vocalist the late Mme. Antoinette Sterling, as Sunday.

THE GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY have made complete arrangements for the rapid and comfortable conveyance of the thousands of holiday-makers using their line at Whitsun. Many of the principal expresses will be run in two parts, and several additional long-distance non-stop expresses are being run this week.

M. COQUELIN is giving, previous to his departure for South America, six performances at the Shaftesbury Theatre, by arrangement with Mr. B. A. Meyer. Supported by M. Coquelin cadet, M. Jean Coquelin, Mlle. Marguerite Moréno, Mlle. Louise Sylvie, and a powerful company from the Théâtre Municipal de la Gaîté, Paris, under the direction of M. Henri Hertz. The performance of "Notre Jeunesse" will be particularly interesting, as in it the three Coquelins—M. Coquelin aîné, M. Coquelin cadet, and M. Jean Coquelin—will appear together.

Amusements.

HIS MAJESTY'S. MR. TREE.
EVERY EVENING AT 8.50.
BUSINESS IS BUSINESS.
Adapted by Sydney Grundy from "Les Affaires sont les Affaires," by Octave Mirbeau.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.30.
At 8.15 THE BALLAD MONGER.

CRITERION THEATRE, W.
Sole Lessee: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
To-night at 8.30.
Saturday Matinees at 3.
An entirely new and original Comedy, entitled
WHAT PAMELA WANTED.
By Fred de Gresac, Author of "The Marriage of Kitty," and Paul Veber. Adapted by Charles Brookfield. Cast includes Miss Lottie Venne, Miss Vane Featherstone, Maud Wynter, and Miss Ethel Irving; Messrs. Frank Cooper, Lennox Pawle, John Tresahar, and Leslie Faber. Box Office now open.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Lessee and Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
To-night at 8.45.
MR. HOPKINSON.
An original farce in three acts by R. C. Carton.
Preceded at 8.15 by Mr. Nelson Jackson.
Matinee every Saturday at 3.

APOLLO THEATRE.
HENRY LOWENFELD, Sole Proprietor.
TOM B. DAVIS, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
Every Evening at 8.15.
The Comic Opera, in Three Acts,
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Wednesday at 2.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.
Managers: A. & S. GATTI & CHARLES FROHMAN.
Every Evening at 8.15,
THE CATCH OF THE SEASON,
By Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton.
Mr. Seymour Hicks and the Vaudeville Theatre Company.
Matinees every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

COMEDY THEATRE.
Lessee: Mr. WM. GREET.
Under the Management of Mr. FRANK CURZON.
Every Evening at 9. Wed. and Sat. Matinees at 3.
The Times says: "Riot of high spirits, perpetual laughter."
The Daily Telegraph says: "Uproarious, bright, and mirth provoking, hard to beat."
THE GREAT SUCCESS.
CHARLES FROHMAN presents WILLIAM COLLIER and the entire American Company in the delightful Farce, in Three Acts,
"THE DICTATOR."
"THE DICTATOR."
By Richard Harding Davis.
At 8.30, "The Philosopher in the Apple Orchard."

EMPIRE THEATRE.
New Fairy Divertissement
"THE DANCING DOLL."
Special Attractions.
Doors open 7.45. Manager: Mr. H. J. HITCHINS.

NAVAL, SHIPPING, AND FISHERIES EXHIBITION, EARL'S COURT.
Open 12 noon to 11.0 p.m. Admission 1s.
Season Tickets, 10s. 6d.
Naval Construction, Armaments, Shipping & Fisheries.
NELSON'S CENTENARY RELICS, and of all Naval Events from the 15th to 20th Century.
FISHING VILLAGE. Working Exhibits. Model of "Victory."
GRAND NAVAL AND MILITARY CONCERTS.
Go on board the full-size Cruiser.
Real Batteries of 4.7 Guns, Hotchkiss and Maxims
The Cruiser is manned by a crew of 150 Handy-men.
Go on board and visit the Mediterranean ports.
Trafalgar 1805—Professor Fleischer's Great Work, Death of Nelson. West's "Our Navy." Maxim's Captive Flying Machine. Fairy Grotto. Indian Canoes. Great Canadian Indian Village—Chiefs, Squaws, and Papooses. Voyage in a Submarine. Vanderdecken's Haunted Cabin. Famous Sea Fights Miss de Rohan's Musical and Dramatic Sketches. Tillikum Canoe. Auto-Photographic Portraiture. Switchback. Chutes
FISH RESTAURANT IN QUEEN'S COURT.

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Mr. Hamar Greenwood | 337 |
| The March of Events | 338 |
| The Theatrical Motor Meet | 343 |
| On the Links | 344 |
| "The Complete Golfer" | 348 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 349 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 350 |
| The Parisians of Paris—En Fête | 352 |
| Under the Burgee | 354 |
| Yachts of the Year | 355 |
| The River Season | 356 |
| Plays and Players | 358, 359 |
| The Traveller— | |
| A Holiday in the North of Ireland | 360 |
| The Cricket Season—England v. Australia | 362 |
| The Racing Season | 364 |
| The "New Costume Play" | 365 |
| Literary Notes | 366 |
| The Services | vii. |
| Royal Leamington— | |
| The Historical Regent Hotel | viii. |
| Decorated London | x. |
| Leaves from a Collector's Note-book— | |
| Waterloo Medals—British and Foreign | xii. |
| Motoring Notes | xiv. |
| Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xvi. |
| Paris Restaurants | xviii. |
| Here, There, and Everywhere | xx. |

TO LIBRARIES, CLUBS, HOTELS, ETC.

A Reading Case for THE KING can be had post free on application to the Publishers, George Newnes, Limited, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

HOTELS, etc.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

TORQUAY (Population 33,625).—PREMIER HEALTH RESORT. Unrivalled climate. Warm in winter. Sunshine-land. Charming drives and sheltered walks. 120 acres of public gardens. Piers.

TORQUAY. Irreproachable water supply and perfect sanitation. Theatre, concerts, and other musical attractions. Medicated baths of all kinds. Express trains from all parts.

For Illustrated Descriptive Books of Torquay, apply FREDK. S. HEX, Town Clerk.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524.
Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. ,, 858.
Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. ,, 641. Kensington.

Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date. First-class cuisine.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence.

ENGLISH HOTELS—Continued.

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hôte or à la Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Close to Parades. Week End terms. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address: "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne.

FOREIGN HOTELS.

BIARRITZ.

GRAND HOTEL.—Winter Season.—First-class establishment. Splendid situation, facing the sea. Patronised by the elité; rendezvous of English Society. Every comfort; excellent attendance and cooking.—MONTENAT, Manager.

AXENSTEIN (Lake Lucerne; 2,350ft. above sea level; electric railway Brunnen-Axenstein).—First-class Hotel. World-renowned climatic health resort; patronised by English society. "Axenstein is the loveliest spot I met with on my journey through Switzerland."—QUEEN VICTORIA.

FOREIGN HOTELS—Continued.

TENERIFFE.

HAS THE FINEST WINTER CLIMATE IN THE WORLD.

THE First-class HOTELS there are
the QUISISANA at Santa Cruz,
the AGUERE and CONTINENTAL at La Laguna, and
the MARTIANEZ (late Grand) at Port Orotava.
All under the Management of C. H. TRENKEL. Prospectus, etc., on application.

SHIPPING.

MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

SPLENDID STRETCH OF THE RIVER COLNE, at Wraysbury, to be LET, or the Freehold would be SOLD.—Full particulars of P. and G. GEEN, Surveyors, 57, Waterloo Road, S.E.

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY.

ROSES FOR ENGLISH GARDENS.

By Miss GERTRUDE JEKYLL and Mr. E. MAWLEY.

Illustrated with 190 full-page Plates. 12s. 6d. Net.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, LIMITED, 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY.

3rd EDITION. NOW READY.

GARDENING FOR BEGINNERS.

A Handbook to the Garden.

BY E. T. COOK, EDITOR OF "THE GARDEN."

12/6 NETT.

So great has been the success of this gardening book for beginners, that a third edition has been called for and is now ready. This work is for those who are about to begin gardening, nothing that will help the beginner over first difficulties being omitted.

About 100 diagrams will explain certain practical operations better than mere descriptions. There are also nearly 200 illustrations, prepared in the best style, of flowers, fruits, vegetables, and trees and shrubs.

WALL AND WATER GARDENS.

By Miss GERTRUDE JEKYLL, Author of "Wood and Garden."

Containing instructions and hints on the Cultivation of suitable plants, on Dry Walls, Rock Walls, in Streams, Marshpools, Lakes, Ponds, Tanks and Water Margins. With 133 full-page Illustrations. Large 8vo, 186 pp., Buckram, 12s. 6d. Nett.

Times.—"'WALL AND WATER GARDENS.'—He who will consent to follow Miss JEKYLL aright will find that under her guidance the old walls, the stone steps, the rockeries, the ponds or streamlets of his garden will presently blossom with all kinds of flowers undreamed of, and become marvels of varied foliage. More than a hundred photographs help to enforce Miss JEKYLL's admirable lessons."

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, LIMITED, 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

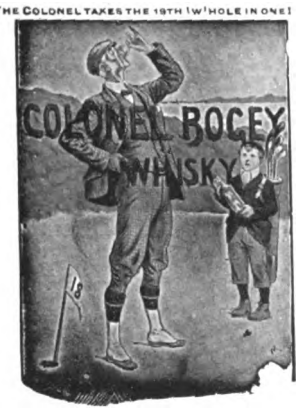
FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

THE COLONEL TAKES THE 19TH (W)HOLE IN ONE!



Head Office: 11, SO. EXCHANGE PLACE, GLASGOW.

J. H. ROGER PROPR.

LESSEE OF

H.M. CUSTOMS (No. 15) BOND, JAMES WATT STREET, GLASGOW.

Special Quotations to Golf Clubs.

"COLONEL BOGEY" WHISKY.

GUARANTEED 7 YEARS OLD.

42/- PER DOZEN. CARRIAGE PAID.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS of every description, including TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT. MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.

Handsome Public Rooms, including 2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.

Terms from MANAGER.

ST. ANNE'S-ON-THE-SEA

(Near BLACKPOOL).

Contains

FOUR GOLF LINKS (18 Holes each).

Also facilities for

BOATING, BATHING, FISHING, CYCLING, TENNIS.

Splendid Beach. Ideal Holiday Resort.

ILLUSTRATED GUIDE FREE on application to

SECRETARY, Advertising Committee, Public Offices, St. Anne's-on-the-Sea.

LELANT, ST. IVES BAY, CORNWALL (close to golf links and station).—Furnished HOUSE, with plate and linen, to LET for Summer months; two large sitting rooms, six bedrooms, one dressing room, bathroom.—"T.B.H.," "Evelyns," Uxbridge.

SOUTHWOLD (best position on the Common; close to Golf Links).—To be LET, well Furnished, for June, July, and August, the pretty and artistic HOUSE known as "Link's Cottage," containing square hall, two sitting and large recreation rooms, servants' sitting room, seven bedrooms (fourteen beds), bathroom; electric light and telephone.—Apply to Mrs. ROBINSON, on Property.

THE LINKS, LLANGAMMARCH WELLS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hôte, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.

THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.

THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.

A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.

Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads. Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.

Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.

Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.

New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,

Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.

To be obtained from Thos. Cook, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.

Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.

Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL

SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.

Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.

Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill.

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 30s. Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address: "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY, Within easy access of London.

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers, inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable, being on sand.

GENTS' GOLF GARTERS. NON-ELASTIC; Nickel Lever Buckle, no teeth; Fine Tan Webb, ¾ in. wide; instantly adjusted to any TENSION; ensures comfort and smartness in appearance, 1/- per pair post free.—DAN MOODY & Co., Egyptian Works, TROWBRIDGE.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer)

"'Is it a Private House or an Hotel?' is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

Club Houses can be efficiently and economically lighted by

ACETYLENE.

Write H. BAKER, 49, Victoria Street, S.W.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. Cox, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.
MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL.—Brinklea, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY.

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method).—Manager, E. DIELMANN.

SHERINGHAM, NORFOLK.

THE SHERINGHAM HOTEL,

ADJOINING GOLF LINKS (18 HOLES).

LARGEST HOTEL IN SHERINGHAM. Open all the year round. Handsome Dining Hall, 67ft. long. Numerous spacious Suites of Rooms commanding beautiful Sea and Land Views. Billiard and Smoking Rooms. Excellent and Improved Sanitary arrangements. Extensive Private Grounds. Lawn tennis, croquet. First-class Stables. Accommodation for Motors and Cycles. Through Trains from King's Cross, Peterborough, Birmingham, Leicester, etc.

Telegrams: "Sheringham Hotel, Sheringham."
National Telephone: No. 3. F. EDENS, Manager.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.

Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.

Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.

Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.

MODERATE TARIFF.

Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months.

Perfect Sanitary arrangements.

Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE
Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit.

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL.

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

HARLEQUIN FLAKE

A Concentrated Tobacco.

SOLD EVERYWHERE, IN 1, 2, AND 4 OZ. TINS.

GALLAHER, Ltd. The Independent Firm.

TRAVEL BY
WEST COAST ROUTE
BETWEEN . .
ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND.

Ellen's Isle. Loch Katrine.

SPEED and COMFORT.

Hundreds of Pleasure Tours Daily by Rail, Coach and Steamer, on London & North Western and Caledonian systems.

FISHING, SHOOTING, GOLFING, &c., &c., &c.

ACCELERATED TRAIN SERVICE:
LONDON (EUSTON), BIRMINGHAM, LIVERPOOL, AND MANCHESTER
WITH
GLASGOW (CENTRAL), EDINBURGH (PRINCES ST.), ABERDEEN, INVERNESS, OBAN, AND THE NORTH.

Descriptive Guide Books of West Coast Route on application to Mr. R. TURNBULL, Euston Station, London.

For Tourist Programmes and "Summer Tours in Scotland," "Oban and the Land of the Gael," "Through Scotland" Descriptive Guides, apply to Mr. G. Calthrop, Caledonian Railway, Glasgow.

Frederick Harrison, General Manager L. & N.W. Ry.
R. Millar, General Manager Caledonian Ry.

"The House for Veils."
Largest Selection in London.

CHARLES LEE & SON,
The Royal Specialists for Ladies' Wear, . .
98 & 100, Wigmore St., LONDON, W.,
famous for
The Royal Crescent Veil,
a shaped Patent adjustable Veil, at prices and quality showing a great saving over veiling purchased by the yard.
9d., 1/-, 1/3, 1/6, 1/9, 2/-, 2/3, 2/6, etc

MOTOR VEILS.
MOTOR HATS.
MOTOR VEILS.
The latest and largest selection in London

Messrs. LEE & SON continue to send a box containing a good assortment by post; boxes ready for return, no trouble after selecting.

When selecting from your Jewellers a Patent
GOLD "SELF-CLOSING" BRACELET
be SURE that you get
SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD'S.

THE ORIGINAL MAKE, UNSURPASSED FOR BEAUTY OF DESIGNS, WORKMANSHIP AND FINISH.

N.B.—These Bracelets have for some time been stamped inside with S. & S's Trade Mark "FLEXINE."

Wholesale only—SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD, LTD., LONDON.

CORNWALL

LONDON TO PENZANCE & BACK, 40/-

What the celebrated author, Mr. MAX PEMBERTON, says about CORNWALL:—
"I was delighted with the place and the people, and I can quite see the numerous possibilities of Cornwall as a Pleasure Resort both for Winter and Summer. Cornwall astounded and delighted me."

Thousands of delighted travellers acknowledge it to be the ideal home
SUMMER, HEALTH, & PLEASURE RESORT.

Why incur the trouble and expense of a long Foreign Journey when the
GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY
can take you in a few hours to the DELIGHTFUL

PADDINGTON to
Falmouth in 7 HRS. 10 MIN.
St. Ives „ 8 „ — „
Penzance „ 7 „ 40 „

Cornish Riviera?

Fast and Luxurious Trains. Cheap Fares.

G.W.R. Co.'s Tregenna Castle Hotel at St. Ives.

Write to SUPERINTENDENT OF THE LINE, PADDINGTON STATION, W., for Illustrated Booklet Free. JAMES C. INGLIS, General Manager.

ST. JACOBS OIL

THE ESTABLISHED CURE FOR
RHEUMATISM
LUMBAGO, SPRAINS, SCIATICA.

"I should like to tell the public of the good St. Jacobs Oil has done me. When quite a boy I had a severe attack of Rheumatism, and could only walk with the aid of crutches, and in consequence I was obliged to give up my work. My parents used nothing but St. Jacobs Oil, and in a very short time I was again able to follow my occupation, and walk morning and night to work and home again, without using the crutches. I have felt nothing of the Rheumatism since, until last November, when I got very wet; but I am glad to say that with a few appliances of your Oil I was again set free.

"(Signed) W. DEACON,
"Rose Cottage, Bradford Street, Eastbourne."

January 12th, 1905.

Price 1/1½ and 2/6; of all Chemists.

CONQUERS PAIN!

Digitized by Google

THE VISIT OF KING ALFONSO.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

VOL. XX. No. 437. SATURDAY, JUNE 17th, 1905. PRICE 6d.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

MR. HAMAR GREENWOOD

Prospective Liberal Candidate for the City of York.

(See page 349.)

Digitized by Google

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 487. Saturday, June 17, 1905.

Editorial Offices—3, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephone—No. 2,748, GERRARD.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

EDITORIAL.

photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING AT WINDSOR.—To many of his Royal visitors this week King Edward's river-side palace will be no new experience; but some have not previously visited Windsor, and to them the King will have shown with justifiable pride the many beauties and art treasures of the residence. For there is no doubt that Windsor stands as high in the King's favour as any of the Royal palaces. The King has on more than one occasion personally conducted distinguished and favoured guests over the Royal apartments, State and private, pointing out the Gainsboroughs and the Lawrences, the beautiful collection of French miniature Sèvres porcelain, and the furniture. There are some pieces in particular to which an interesting history attaches. They were formerly in the Royal apartments at Versailles, and a French cook, hearing that they were for sale, apprised George IV., who straightway despatched an agent, who effected a purchase at a very low figure. There are wealthy collectors to-day who would give phenomenal prices for these few pieces of furniture.

THE KING OF SPAIN AND WESTMINSTER ABBEY.—Though his visit to the venerable pile neighbouring the Houses of Parliament was quite unexpected and very informal, the King of Spain did not have any difficulty in getting into the Abbey. Westminster Abbey is now as open to the public as the streets around it. But it was not always so. Lamb once wrote: "In no part of our beloved abbey now can a person find entrance out of service time under the sum of two shillings." And ten years later he repeated the statement. Whether he exaggerated or not, the fact remains that Dean Ireland carried out several reforms while he was in charge there, and among them is stated to have been a reduction of the fees, as well as the institution of a regular corps of guides. King Alfonso had not certainly time to mark all the points of interest in his hasty passage "thro' rowes of Warriors and thro' Walkes of Kings," but his keen sense of humour may have caused him to note some of the discrepancies in the monuments to great men there. Sir Cloudesley Shovell in periwig and Roman toga, the contorted face of Wilberforce, who has apparently just heard one of Sheridan's stories, and the naked figure of Wolfe, supported by one of his staff in full uniform—these will often cause the most reverent-minded to smile.

Stuart, Richmond.

KING ALFONSO IN THE UNIFORM OF A BRITISH GENERAL.

King Alfonso early displayed a fondness for the Army, and the honour that King Edward has conferred upon him, by his appointment to the rank of General in the British Army, is likely to be keenly appreciated by the Spanish nation. The young King is now honorary Colonel-in-Chief of the 16th Lancers.

PRINCESS MAY.—H.R.H. the Princess of Wales has settled at Sandringham for the summer, and though the Prince is at Windsor this week for the Royal Wedding, it is his intention as soon as the ceremonies are over to return to York Cottage. In view of the exertions they will be called upon to make during their tour in India, both the Prince and Princess are anxious to spend the summer as quietly as may be, and there is in addition a happy family event to be looked for shortly. The two elder boys are to spend some time with "Grandpa" at Windsor, and on Virginia Water they will have a splendid time with their new brig. Like all boys, they have a great liking for the sea, strengthened perhaps in their case by their father's devotion to the profession he was called upon to give up when the death of his elder brother brought him into the direct line of descent for the Crown.

ROYALTY AND TIPPING.—At the conclusion of his visit the King of Spain conformed to the custom, most irksome to many, but apparently ingrained in human nature, of bestowing largesse upon the numerous retinue that had ministered to his wants. Although King Edward on one occasion made public a vigorous denunciation of the custom, he still gives tips. The Duke of Fife has a dislike to any of his guests giving a tip to one of his servants, looking upon it as a slight upon his hospitality. Knowing this, the King, when he used to stay with the Duke for deer-stalking and was particularly pleased with any servant, adopted a quaint ruse for conveying his monetary approval to the favoured man. Calling for a pipe, and selecting that belonging to the gillie or loader he desired to honour, he filled the pipe, deftly slipping a sovereign in among the tobacco. When he came to light the pipe there was "something wrong"; it was returned to the owner for investigation, and the King smilingly accepted a cigar from his host. It was a long time before the Duke of Fife discovered the little deception, and when he did he merely remarked: "The King can do no wrong."

Digitized by Google

THE ROYAL REVIEW AT ALDERSHOT.

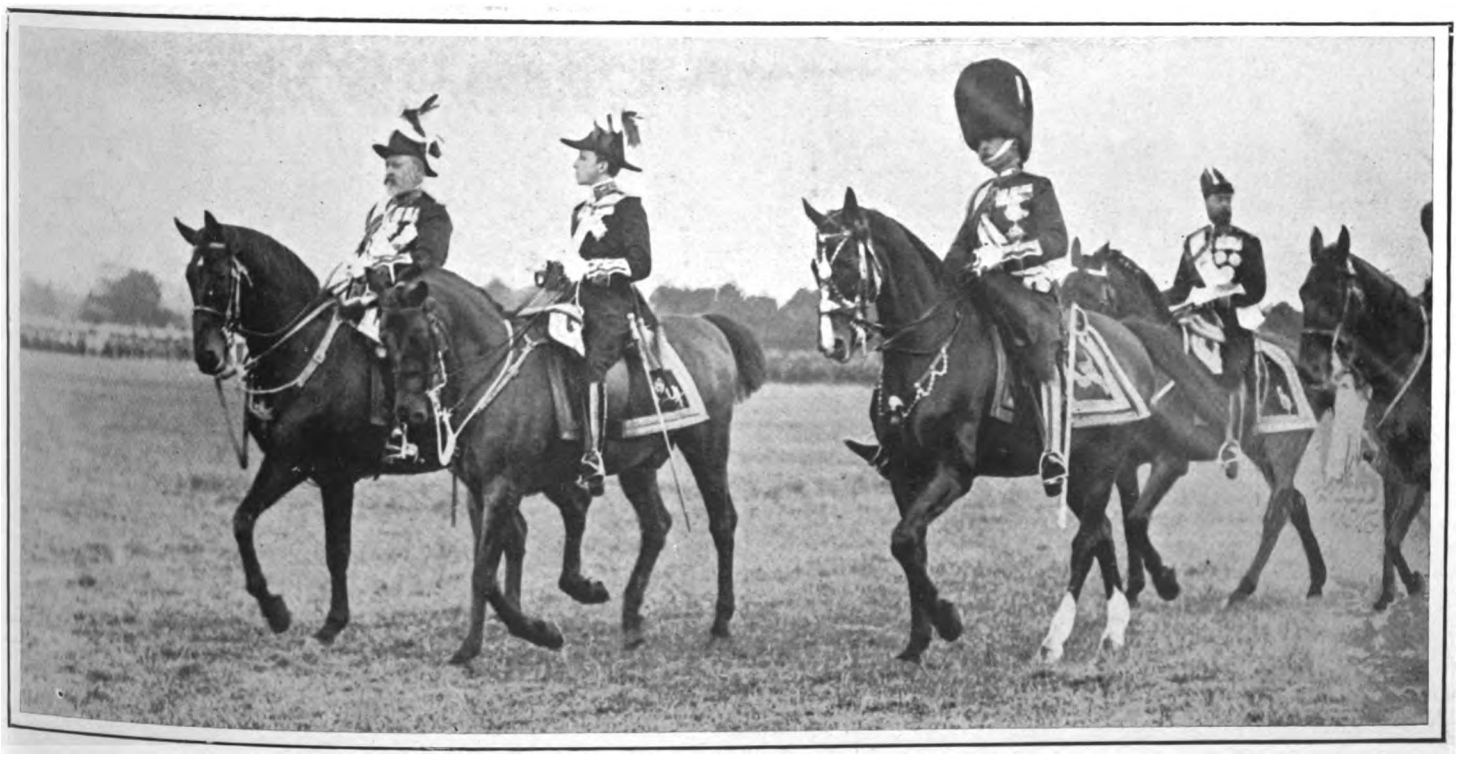
Copyright.

THE MARCH PAST OF THE ROYAL HORSE ARTILLERY.

One of the principal events held last week in honour of the King of Spain was the review at Aldershot. The Royal Horse Artillery gave a remarkable display in marching and galloping.

THE NAVAL BRIGADE AT ALDERSHOT.

A notable feature of the review was the interesting display given by the Naval Brigade, which was under the command of Rear-Admiral Percy Scott.



THE REVIEW AT ALDERSHOT.

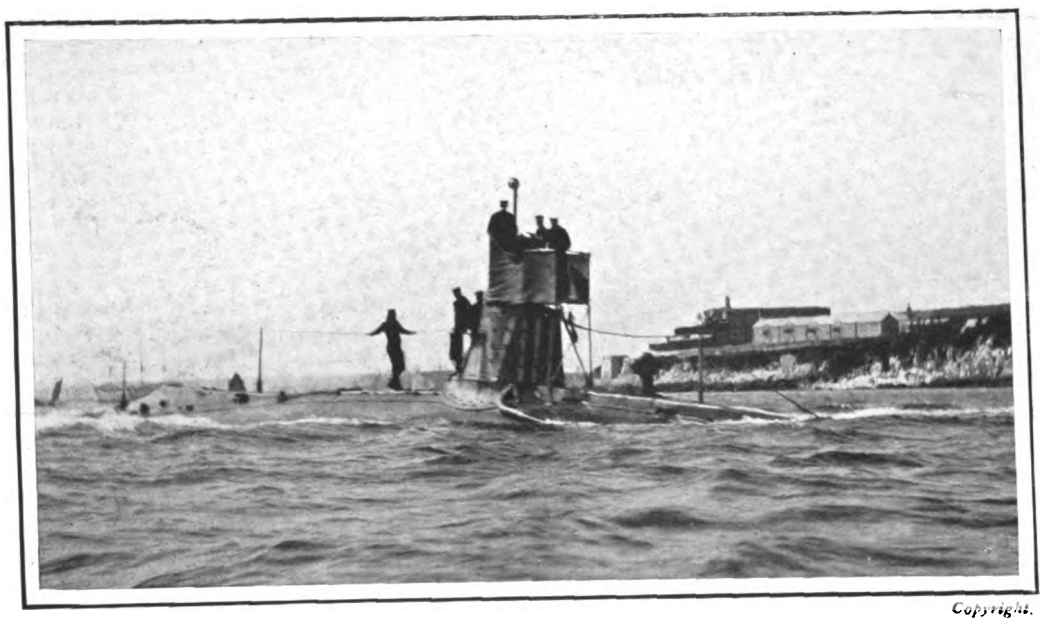
King Alfonso and King Edward approaching the saluting base. Immediately following King Alfonso is the Duke of Connaught, in the uniform of the Grenadier Guards, and a little further in the rear is the Prince of Wales.

Digitized by Google

LORD KITCHENER AND THE THEATRE.—Though he has now been away in India many months, the British public has by no means forgotten Lord Kitchener, and it is certain that not even the news of the war in the Far East has been read with greater interest than the recent accounts of slight friction between the Commander-in-Chief and other officials in India. No doubt when he returns to England we shall have another crop of Kitchener stories similar to that which broke outwhen the "organiser of victory" came back from South Africa. Meantime, there is one about his younger days which will doubtless be new to many people. The great attention paid to detail at Drury Lane during the régime of Sir Augustus Harris led him, when planning the production of a military play, to obtain the best expert advice possible. And for some weeks Major Kitchener, as he then was, drilled and manœuvred the supers at the Lane until their bearing was as martial as his own, and, in the words of the famous manager, "such fighting and marching was never seen on the stage before." And it was all done in the quiet and imperturbable manner that is characteristic of the Kitchener of to-day. Had he not been a soldier he would have made a great "producer."

THE GARDEN FETE IN AID OF THE LONDON HOMŒOPATHIC HOSPITAL.

A view of the grounds and the Æolian Ladies' Orchestra at 11, Kensington Palace Gardens, on the occasion of the recent Bazaar which was opened by Countess Cawdor.



THE SUBMARINE DISASTER.

The ill-fated submarine A8 entering the "Hamoaze," Devonport, on her arrival from Barrow. Her number can be plainly seen marked in Roman figures on the conning-tower.

COLONIAL CANDIDATES.—One of the new features of the next General Election will be the number of Colonial candidates in the field. There are eighteen of them, including Mr. J. Baker Allen, who is contesting East Finsbury in the Liberal interest. He is a Canadian, and a Free Trader. The fight promises to be exciting, like several other bye-elections in which Colonials have taken part. It is curious that though preferentialists are largely in the majority in Greater Britain, eight out of the eighteen Colonial candidates for Parliamentary honours in the Mother Country are Cobdenites. When Queen Victoria came to the throne there were only two Colonial Members of the House of Commons. Now there are fourteen. The most distinguished native-born Colonials who ever sat at Westminster were Ellice the Elder, Williams of Kars, and Haliburton, all Canadians. The most distinguished Anglo-Colonials were Childers and Lowe, who, as young men, made a fortune and a career in Australia.

TO BE OR NOT TO BE?—If anyone knows with any certainty whether or not there is to be a Colonial Conference in 1906 he must have the intuition of genius. The question is a plain one, and could be answered in three or four sentences; but this would not be politics. Hence Ministers have told us nothing in long speeches, out of which the public may take any meaning they please. In this way we read in our favourite journal that the Conference of 1906, arranged in 1902, will not be held; but there will be a special Conference after the General Election next year. In another we read that the Premiers will meet as they suggested four years ago, and that a special Conference will be called later on should the country decide in favour of Preference. It is a good thing that the Colonies are too busy with their own affairs to follow the tortuous mazes of the Conference question in England, though there is not the least doubt that they take an enormous interest in what is, to them, a very vital question. The to be or not to be habit of mind makes no appeal to a Colonial; he is far too hard headed and practical.

THE BRITISH MISSION TO FEZ.

The British Minister and the members of the British Embassy in Tangier, who were recently received in audience by the Sultan of Morocco. A French Military Mission, and a German Mission under Count von Tattenbach, are also at Fez. It is proposed to form an International Conference of the different Powers on the subject of Morocco.

Digitized by Google

THE ROYAL WEDDING.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

SOME INTERESTING PORTRAITS OF H.R.H. PRINCESS MARGARET OF CONNAUGHT

Who was married on Thursday to Prince Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden. The ages at which the various photographs were taken are as follows: No. 1, two years old; No 2, thirteen years; No. 3, fifteen years; No. 4, nineteen years; No. 5, twenty years.

(From Photographs by H. S. Mendelsshon.)

Digitized by Google

LORD SHERBROOKE AND SYDNEY.—The Sydney newspapers announce that the estate of the late Lord Sherbrooke is about to be sold. As Robert Lowe he was, perhaps, the most inconsistent statesman of the nineteenth century. As an Australian M.P. he was "the Tribune of the People," as a British M.P. he was democracy's bitterest enemy. He was a Liberal who should have been a Tory, a Colonist who should have been a Little Englander, a fighting politican who should never have been an administrator. His sympathy with the Colonies was scant, yet his fame owes more to the eight years he spent in Sydney than to the forty years he spent in England—an irony of fate which is enough to make him turn in his grave. It was in Sydney, too, that he made the wealth which enabled him to enter public life in this country. For he shrewdly invested his savings at the Colonial Bar in property which has enormously increased in value during the past fifty years. It is this property which is now being sold for the benefit of his heirs.

THE KOREAN CONSUL-GENERAL.—The suicide of the Korean Chargé d'Affaires has brought Mr. Pritchard Morgan to the front, for it is he who, as Consul-General for Korea, will take over the Embassy. He is a Welshman with a Colonial training. In Queensland he practised as a lawyer for many years, making for himself an excellent reputation in mining cases. Later on he acquired large interests in mining properties when he returned to England. As head of the mercantile firm of W. Pritchard Morgan and Co. he has included China and Korea in the sphere of his operations. Hence his position as the Hermit Kingdom's commercial representative in London. In 1885 Mr. Morgan was anxious that Queensland should send a contingent to the Soudan, and offered to pay a large subscription towards its expenses. From 1888 to 1900 he sat in Parliament for Merthyr Tydvil. He was at one time much before the public eye through his efforts to develop the gold deposits of Wales, and his crusade against the antiquated system of gold-mining royalties.

Copyright.

MISS H. E. RIVES

Who comes from Virginia, was recently presented at Court. Miss Rives is a clever author ss, and many of her novels have been published in England and America.

GERMAN RECIPROCITY.—It is not so many years since we had a dispute with a usurping Sultan of Zanzibar and bombarded his palace. He fled to German territory, where he was received with open arms, and where he has remained ever since. In South-West Africa Germany has been fighting with the natives for eighteen months, and now wants Great Britain to give her what she refused to give Great Britain in similar circumstances. Not content with the privilege granted her by the Cape Colony of drawing supplies from British territory, her Press is crying out that we should surrender or execute insurgent Hottentots who take refuge over the border. When any dominion under the English Crown agrees to such a demand the day of the British Empire is over. For anything more foreign to our ideas of justice and fair play can hardly be conceived. What we do in our own interest is to disarm every native who is driven into the Cape Colony. Whatever the extremity of Germany in South-West Africa may be, we shall absolutely refuse to act as police in her interest.

LADY GORST AND HER FATHER.—Mr. Rudd has presented Kilchoan, on the border of his Argyllshire estate, to his only daughter, Lady Gorst, as an autumn residence. Since the erection of Mount Stuart no finer house has been built in Scotland than Ardnamurchan, at whose house-warming Dr. Jameson and the late Cecil Rhodes took part. Mr. Rudd is supposed by those in the know to be the hero of "The God in the Car." At any rate, the story of his life is romantic enough to justify the imputation. His daughter, who married Sir Eldon Gorst a few years ago, met her husband in Egypt, where he was Financial Adviser to the Khedive. He is now, however, an official at the Treasury. When he was in the land of the Pharaohs his chief recreation was the Turf, for which he bred and trained his own horses, but since his return to England he has done little in this direction. He was born in New Zealand, where his father, Sir John Gorst, was Civil Commissioner.

A COLONIAL AT COURT.—The only Colonial who was present at the State Banquet given at Buckingham Palace in honour of King Alfonso was Lady Clarke, and a very distinguished representative she was. "Uncommon tall," dignified in carriage, and crowned with silvery hair, which is in striking contrast to her dark eyes, she is a noticeable figure anywhere. As the wife of Sir Stanley Clarke she has lived in the atmosphere of the Court for nearly thirty years, for Sir Stanley was equerry to the Prince of Wales from 1878 up to 1901, when he was made chief equerry. He was also private secretary to the Queen for twenty years. In attendance on the King he has visited nearly every Court in Europe, and has been decorated by every reigning sovereign. He was one of those appointed by the King to wait on King Alfonso during his late visit. Lady Clarke is a Canadian, and a sister of that popular sportsman, Mr. Charles Rose, M.P. for Newmarket.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Digitized by Google

THE THEATRICAL MOTOR MEET.

Bassano.

ACTRESSES AND THEIR CARS AT MAIDENHEAD.

The second annual meeting of the theatrical profession at the Riviera Hotel, Maidenhead, last week-end was an even greater success than the previous event, and many well-known actresses were present. Our illustrations show (1) The party in the launch going from Maidenhead to Bourne End; (2) Mme. Réjane; (3) Miss Dancrey, Miss Alice Crawford, and Miss Mabel Love in the Rolls-Royce car; (4) Miss Clare Rickards and Miss Hilda Harris in a Gladiator car.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

THE Open Championship at St. Andrews, whose final result was extremely uncertain until the last scoring round of eighteen holes were played on Friday afternoon, has resulted in a victory for James Braid of Walton Heath with an aggregate score of 318 for the seventy-two holes, an average slightly over 79 strokes a round, and considering the high wind, the frequency with which Braid was bunkered, the missed putts, and other vexatious elements in the three days' play, the score of the new Open Champion must be pronounced a remarkably fine one. This is Braid's second win of the Open Championship, his first success being at Muirfield in 1901. All golfers in the South, at all events, who know Braid's modesty of character and the sterling quality of his game, especially as it has been revealed in tournaments this year, will heartily congratulate him on the second distinction which he has thus added to his name.

* * *

It was curious to hear among those who discussed the prospects of the players at St. Andrews that Braid was by no means a favourite when the last rounds had to be entered upon on Friday morning. Critics seemed to think that he was completely out of the running, and that the narrow margin of a stroke or two that separated a small bunch of players at the end of the third round seemed to point clearly to the conclusion th there would be a tie for the first place and a "play off" on Saturday morning. But the weather conditions at St. Andrews, which told so disastrously against the maintenance of a consistent game among the bulk of the leaders, had no serious effect on Braid's game. The weather on the opening day was particularly prejudicial to low scoring. The couples began to leave the tee at nine o'clock in the morning, and it was between six and seven in the evening before all the cards were handed in. In the early morning of Wednesday the wind blew strong, almost due north, and later in the day the breeze veered round to the east, being almost half a gale. The result was that the wind from both quarters of the compass was exceedingly troublesome to all the players, whether they started early or late. The north wind blew across the course nearly all the way out and in, while the east wind blew behind the players the first seven holes out, and was dead in their teeth the last six holes home. It was the prevalence of the wind and the frequency with which the majority of the players got bunkered off the tee that caused so many scores to mount to figures between 80 and 90.

THE OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP AT ST. ANDREWS.

Willie Anderson of New York, American Open Champion, driving at the 12th hole, his partner, C. R. Smith (West Middlesex), watching the shot.

* * *

Taylor, Herd, H. Vardon, and Walter Toogood led the field on the opening day with scores of 80 each, while Braid was one stroke more. The crowd of spectators was fairly well broken up among Taylor, Herd, Braid, and Vardon, though the last-named had probably the largest following. Taylor played a remarkably steady game, and had it not been for an unfortunate 7 at the Road hole through a too strong approach, he might easily have finished in 77 or 78. The second day saw Rowland Jones of Wimbledon Park force his way into the place of leader by a brilliant round of 77, Braid coming next with 78, mainly due to magnificent recoveries after being bunkered off his long shots. Taylor could only compile an 85, and was thus seven strokes

THE FIRST TEE AT ST. ANDREWS.

Braid driving in the Professional International Match, Taylor on the left. Tom Morris (in overcoat) standing on the right watching the shot.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

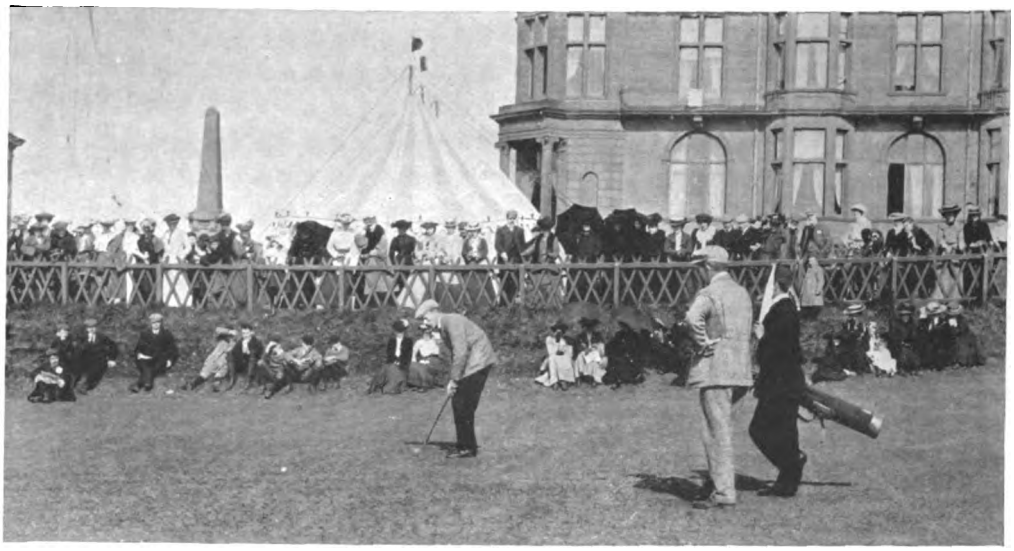
behind Jones and six behind Braid, and though Taylor played a magnificent game all through the last day, he never could quite make up the leeway separating him from Braid. Driving fine, raking balls against the wind, and following these up with steady and accurate approaching and putting, Braid kept his lead, and eventually obtained a very hard-fought victory. The feature of the tournament may be described as the failure of the amateurs.

* * *

The annual competition of the members of the Golfer's Club, Whitehall Court, for the challenge shield, held by Mr. N. L. Jackson, will take place on the links of the West Herts Golf Club at Cassiobury on Thursday, June 22. The winner of the challenge shield receives a silver cup, and another silver cup will be played for during the afternoon of the same day. There will also be a prize for the best scratch score for the 36 holes played in the morning and afternoon rounds.



THE OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP.

The home hole in front of the club-house; C. Burgess putting; Jack White on the right.

THE CHAMPIONSHIP AT ST. ANDREWS.

David Cuthbert putting on the 16th green; A. Herd watching the stroke.

The hot summer weather always brings a craving need on the part of the golfer to vary the quality as well as the brand of a refreshing drink after a hard match in the sun, and a parched tongue is often heard to cry "What shall I drink in this hot weather?" The answer is easily given. Drink cider, good Devonshire cider, which, with a little seltzer water, is one of the most cooling and refreshing drinks any thirsty golfer can desire to partake of. The Devonshire cider of H. Whiteway and Co., Whimple, Devon, has a long historic past behind it to gurantee its purity and quality; and at this time of the year, whether still or champagne, it is the golfer's ideal drink.

* * *

The summer meeting of the London Solicitors' Golfing Society will be held on the links of the Manor Golf Club, Ashford, Middlesex (by kind permission of the committee of that club), on Saturday, July 8, when the following prizes will be competed for: (1) The Riddell Challenge Cup; (2) silver cup presented by the president of the society (Mr. T. Rawle) for the best score under full handicap for a round of eighteen holes; (3) prize to be given by the society for the best net score for nine holes, out or in, under half-handicap. Members of the society desiring to compete must send their names to the hon. secretaries not later than Saturday, July 1, in order that the necessary arrangements may be made.

* * *

After two unsuccessful attempts to establish a golf course at Aix-les-Bains a nine-hole course has at last been opened at that fashionable resort in Savoy. The golf course of nine holes is situated on the race-course at Marlioz, about a mile from the town. Among those who are looking after the interests of the club are M. Mottet, Mayor of Aix-les-Bains, the honorary president, Rear-Admiral Primrose, the president, Mr. W. Cagger, the captain, and Messrs. Domenget and Rossignoli, secretaries. The first opening competition took place a little over a week ago in wet weather, when the Mayor formally opened the links. The monthly medal was won by Mr. A. H. Potter, an American player, with 93 - 14 = 79. The only scratch player was Mr. F. Davidson, and his score was 87.

THE OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP.

A portion of the crowd on the way to the 13th green.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

LADIES' CHAMPIONSHIP AT CROMER.

The crowd following the match of Miss Stuart and Miss Maitland to the 14th green. The village of Overstrand is seen in the background.

THE LADIES' CHAMPIONSHIP.

Miss Steel (Sheffield) driving from the 1st tee; Mr. Talbot Fair and Mr. H. Kelly looking on.

THE LADIES' CHAMPIONSHIP.

A view of the Cromer Links during the play in the direction of the 15th green.

GOLF PHILOSOPHY IN SLIPPERS.

I.—On the Origin of Golf.

THE origin of this, the most ancient of all games, is lost in the mists of antiquity. Not only is it impossible to state with precision, but no one can say within several hundred years, when the game came into existence. Probably the earliest recorded fact is that close upon 500 years ago the aid of the Scottish legislature had to be called in to curtail the people from its undue indulgence. Consequently the origin of the game dates further back than that—and probably much further back — since at that period, when fashions necessarily travelled slower than now, it would take many years to work up the game to such a state of popularity as to call for legislation on the subject. Five hundred years hence, with the exception perhaps of cricket, posterity will have very vague ideas as to the exact date of the origin of those games we play now, and this with all the improved facilities for recording and preserving records. Ask any ten people you meet when lawn tennis was first invented, and not two of them will be able to tell you even that—a matter of less than forty years. What wonder, then, that the origin of Golf should be lost in obscurity.

I have heard it stated, and by those who ought to have known better, that Golf derived its origin from a Dutch game called Kolf, which was played in Holland in the sixteenth century, and which remotely resembled golf, in that a ball was knocked with a club about a circumscribed area. To this I will only remark that at the time this Dutch game is represented as being played in Holland there was reposing in a room in Edinburgh, where the Scottish archives were kept, an edict—already grey with the dust of more than 150 years—promulgated by a former Scottish King (James II.), prohibiting his subjects from playing their ancient and favourite game more than a certain number of times a week. This King saw what a desperate hold golf had taken of the Scottish people, and he feared that they were in consequence neglecting their shooting at the butts, and that the Scottish archers would come off second best in the event of another war with England.

Then "Schole" has been suggested as an origin. This recreation consisted, I believe, in a player driving a ball, somewhat after the manner of golf, from one town or village to another, across country, in as few strokes as possible, a curious variation being introduced, consisting of another player driving the ball back one stroke in the contrary direction after every three strokes forward. This is so obviously the emanation of some restless and unorthodox spirit seeking to free itself from the trammels of the orthodox game as to call forth no serious comment.

The same sort of idea can be found recorded in the annals of the Honourable Company of Edinburgh Golfers of a century or so ago, where one may read such extracts as this: "Mr. A. did wager one dozen bottles of claret that he would drive a golf ball to the top of Arthur's Seat in fewer strokes than Mr. B." There one sees the same restless spirit seeking some innovation—as in "Schole." Such abortive offshoots cannot seriously be confounded with the parent stem.

My own opinion is that the origin of golf dates from an early period of the sojourn of our first parents in the Garden of Eden—I say an early period, because they could not have been there very long before they went out for a walk. Adam would not have been a man if he had not carried a stick in his hand, and with it must have struck at various objects as he passed along, among them round stones, horse-chestnuts, or what not. Sooner or later some round object struck by him would have rolled into some hole, and Eve, observing it, would not have been a woman if she had not said, "You wont do that again." Adam would not have been a man if he had not tried, and whether he succeeded or not is immaterial.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

I am not antiquarian enough either to assert or to disprove that a "wee bit burn" there was in the Garden of Eden called the Bâh-fi, and that the laid-back wooden club was the prototype of the Baffy spoon; but few will be found bold enough to assert that our forefathers used iron clubs before the days of Tubal Cain. And yet there is in the Chapter House of Salisbury Cathedral a frieze, setting forth in stone the principal events in Bible history, and there is a representation of Cain killing Abel with an instrument so like a niblick as to make no difference—at all events to Abel.

C. DE LACY LACY.

Correspondence.

AN INTERESTING POINT IN A THREESOME.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE KING."

SIR,—I was playing last week at Muirfield in East Lothian in a threesome match. I was on the home green in four strokes. Mr. A. was in the bunker facing that green in the like, while Mr. J., the third player, was over the green in five. I am afraid that Mr. A. lost his temper after three or four fruitless strokes in the bunker, and he was eventually raining blows so fast that neither I nor the caddies could count the strokes. We guessed the number to be fourteen, but at Mr. A.'s last stroke the ball jumped up and fell into the pocket of my caddie, who had just then turned his back on Mr. A., and was walking up to the flag.

By the rules I lost the hole, but how was it with Mr. J.? The caddie walked up to the flag where the ball, which had lodged in his pocket, fell close to the hole, laying the ball of Mr. J. a stymie. I want to know how Mr. J. stood, supposing that Mr. A. had not played so many strokes in the bunker? Should he have played the ball back from where it entered the pocket of the caddie, or should it have been played where it was dropped at the hole side? If it had not fallen out of the boy's pocket, could the player have played it where it lay whether the caddie liked it or not?—I am, etc., W. H. C.

[Our correspondent is quite right in believing that he lost the hole to Mr. A., very hard

Copyright.

THE CELEBRATED "GREY POPLAR" AT THE 11TH GREEN.

and absolutely unforeseen though the penalty may be. As between Mr. A. and Mr. J. the incident was a rub of the green; but instead of the ball being played where it dropped from the pocket of the caddie at the hole side, thereby laying Mr. J. a stymie, it should be taken back as near as possible to the spot where it fell into the boy's pocket, and played from that point on the putting green. Police-court law would intervene as an effective deterrent in the other alternative contemplated by our correspondent.—ED.]

GOLF AT HYERES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE KING."

SIR,—A successful golfing season has just closed at Hyères, and the club finds itself in a position to build new premises, which are sadly needed. Next season visitors will find the long-promised building a substantial fact. In my opinion the latter end of the season is the best, and it might well be prolonged for another fortnight, say to May 15. It commences in September. The ground, as a rule, is rather hard and unyielding to your iron clubs; but after rains, which are by no means infrequent, it is quite playable, and you may rely on your iron shots.

The links are situated about two miles from Hyères in park-like grounds, and towards the end of the season, when the trees are bursting out, are exceedingly pretty. The landlord allows no alteration of the ground, and consequently the bunkers are of the irritating hurdle description.

There are eighteen holes, and, although the whole course is flat, one may say that they are all good, and provide a fair amount of variety. Some of the holes cross. For instance, the seventeenth crosses the thirteenth and the eighteenth; but one gets used to it, and no one ever appears to get hit. The French caddies are keen on the game, and some of them play a remarkably good game themselves, being "as imitative as monkeys." The subscriptions are rather high—60-fr. for one month. There are several competitions throughout the season.

Golfers, as a rule, stay at the Hotel Palmiers, whence a brake runs frequently to the course. The Costobelle Hotels also run a brake, but are further away. A delightful custom is to take your lunch with you and enjoy it al fresco between your single and your foursome.

Among the illustrations you will see one of the enormous new hotels, the Hotel du Golf, which is intended to attract all golf players. I think it will succeed, as I already hear of many rooms being engaged for next season.

Altogether one may say that for Continental golf Hyères is good, especially after rains. The putting greens are fair, and the lies generally good. One can use the brassie occasionally, as at the third hole, which is over 500-yds., and the iron nearly always. For a man who is fond of golf, but cannot stand the home climate, Hyères is just the place.—I am, etc., H. T.

THE MOST PICTURESQUE AND DIFFICULT HOLE—THE 16TH—ON THE HYERES LINKS.

Copyright.

THE OLD CLUB-HOUSE WITH FREMANTLE, THE PROFESSIONAL, AND HIS DAUGHTER ELSIE.

Digitized by Google

"The Complete Golfer."

(By HARRY VARDON, Open Champion, 1896, 1898, 1899, and 1903, with sixty-five illustrations. Methuen and Co., Essex Street, W.C. Price 10s. 6d. net.)

THE publication of this extremely well-written book is a sign that the professional has not only established his playing supremacy as against the amateur on the links, but that he is falling into his natural position of becoming the literary instructor of the learner of the game. Books by professional golfers have been published in years gone by, and Willie Park, Taylor, and Fernie have all endeavoured to give the learner at golf the benefit of long and varied experience in playing the game, and of their careful thought and illustrations in thinking out the most useful and helpful conclusions. These works are still of great help to the learner, and it does not detract in the least from their value when it is said that they do not reach quite the same high standard of practical excellence and rich variety of material as may be found in almost every page of the present volume. It used to be said in earlier years that the great defect of the professional, when he set himself to the task of teaching learners, was that he erred lamentably in explaining the rationale of any particular stroke which the beginner had an invincible difficulty in acquiring. His vocabulary was apparently not rich enough to explain to the learner the reason why he or she had gone wrong in striking the ball, while he had an imperfect power of analysis in fixing attention on the movements of the hands or body to show how the stroke had been wrongly made. That reproach, if it ever had any extended application to professional teachers, has long ago been removed, for in Vardon, Taylor, and Willie Park we have at least three professionals in the front rank as players who can write of the faults of the beginner with the fulness, clearness, and analytical power of the skilled literary author. In many respects Vardon's book is an absorbing study to any golfer of experience. Everyone who reads his chapters carefully cannot but admit the soundness of his criticisms. This is especially true of his chapter wherein he playfully chides lady and gentlemen beginners who will persist in sinning against the light of common-sense and of experience by looking upon golf as a too supremely easy game to need any instruction at all. Vardon shows by many passages throughout his book, wherein the point of his golfing philosophy probes a little more deeply than the irony of his quiet humour, that no lady or gentleman who takes up the game in the hope of being able to play it gracefully and well can ever expect to realise the humble ambition of a learner without first of all receiving a great deal of salutary instruction at the hands of the professional teacher. Not the least charm of Vardon's useful treatise designed to put the learner on the safe road of instruction is the wealth of photographic illustration, by means of which the beginner is shown how to stand to the ball, how the feet should be placed, the number of inches by which the fork of the leg should be separated in taking up the stance, how the club should be gripped by the hands, and how the club is brought back and carried through. These photographs, taken together with the clear explanation of principles set out in the letterpress, must appeal with convincing force to the mind of every learner, and leave him in little doubt as to the essential point which he should seize upon at the very outset of his golfing career.

The quiet modesty of Vardon's book is perhaps one of its chief recommendations. As every teacher must have an ideal upon which to fix the attention of the learner, it will not seem in the least inappropriate to the golfing reader that Vardon should set up his own style of play as the one which should be laboriously analysed and commended as an example to follow. He states that his own style of play, which has earned for him the commendation of the highest authorities as being that of the best player golf has yet produced, is not the result of any conscious imitation of any particular golfer, but a blend of a large number of styles consolidated at last by practice and experience into the rich and unique scientific methods of play which denote the individual genius of the man. Vardon, naturally enough, in effect says: "Here is the style of play that I have painfully evolved for myself through observation, study, and careful practice; it has brought me rich rewards as a golfer, and no little renown over the world as a player; the best legacy that I can give to the widening world of golfers is to explain my own methods of play, and to teach others if possible to attain the same high standard of efficiency." And in the process of his analysis he gives a death-blow to some of the ancient but apparently erroneous precepts of the early text-book writers. He counsels the learner, for example, to grip tight with both hands, to turn the toes outwards in playing off the tee and through the green, to keep the head steady when playing a shot, and to get rid of the persistent error that it is necessary to glue the eye to the ball, that there is no wrist shot in golf except on the putting green, that the half shot with the cleek or iron should be cultivated in preference to full shots with either club, that the distance to which a ball will be driven is governed entirely by the extent of the backward swing of the club, and that putting is largely a matter of confidence on the part of the player, that there is no rule and no best way of acquiring the art which, after all, is really a matter of nature and instinct.

Amid the wealth of material and sound precept of instruction scattered throughout the various chapters of the book, there is one doctrine which Vardon preaches that will not find the ready assent given to the majority of his precepts. It is the doctrine that one of the alternative methods of playing the stymie is that the ball of the opponent should be "run through" like the follow-through shot in billiards. In the older codes of rules it was distinctly forbidden to play on the opponent's ball with greater strength than was necessary to carry your own ball to the hole; and golfers are justified in holding that the spirit of that rule and tradition still holds good. By knocking your opponent's ball away by a follow-through shot in the violent manner that Vardon advocates, it is doubtful whether he has any justification for the teaching, even although the existing rules are unhappily silent on what used to be looked upon as a distinct breach of the game. Vardon's book, indeed, has all the charm of an interesting autobiography as well as of a scientific manual of instruction. It is replete with many humorous golfing stories and shrewd pieces of observation and criticism, while looked at as a whole the volume is by far the most fruitfully instructive of its class that has hitherto been published.

"THE COMPLETE GOLFER" 100 YEARS AGO.

This is a portrait of Alexander Mackellar, known a century ago on Bruntsfield Links, Edinburgh, as the "Cock o' the Green." He was one of the most enthusiastic golfers that ever lived. He spent the whole day playing golf alone, and even after darkness set in he could be seen putting by lantern light at the short holes. Snow on the links in winter did not deter him from having a round; and it is related that on one occasion his wife, who kept a small tavern in the town while Mackellar played golf all day, and hated the very name of golf, tried to shame her husband out of his devotion to the game by carrying his dinner and his night-cap to the links. He was one of the best-known characters in Edinburgh a century ago, and the above etching was made by Kay in 1803, after an actual study of the old enthusiast as he was absorbed in his favourite game. The shape of the clubs is an interesting study in evolution, compared with those that, for example, Vardon plays with. His favourite expression was, "By gracious, gentlemen, here's a boy and I that'll play you for a guinea."

(From an old print in the collection of Mr. Breun, of 4, Greek Street, Soho.)

FIXTURES.

June 17.—Hanger Hill, "Bogey."
June 17.—Bushey Hall, Vice-Captain's Prize.
June 17.—Tooting Bec, Victoria Diamond Jubilee Cup.
June 17.—Royal Portrush, Midsummer Meeting.
June 17.—Wembley, Open Amateur Meeting.
June 19.—Hanger Hill, Ladies' Open Competition.
June 19.—St. George's Challenge Cup, at Sandwich.
June 19-20.—Scottish Ladies' Championship, at North Berwick.
June 19-24.—Yorkshire Union Championship Meeting, at Redcar.
June 22.—Hanger Hill v. Wembley.
June 24.—Hanger Hill, Open Amateur Meeting.
June 24.—Sudbrook Park, Rube Challenge Shield.
June 24-25.—Le Touquet v. Press Golfing Society.
June 26.—Highgate and East Finchley, Ladies' Summer Meeting.
July 1.—Rye, Monthly Medal.
July 1.—Rye, Silver Cleek ("Bogey").
July 3-4-5.—Borough of Hythe, Challenge Trophy.
July 8.—Sundridge Park, Treasurer's Cup.
July 10.—Folkestone, Summer Meeting.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. XLVII.—Mr. Hamar Greenwood, the Liberal Candidate for York.

MR. HAMAR GREENWOOD, the Liberal candidate for York, is a true Canadian. He was born in the town of Whitby, situated some thirty miles east of Toronto, on the north shore of Lake Ontario. His father, a well-known Canadian barrister, was by birth an Englishman; and his mother was of that United Empire Loyalist stock which is to the Canadian what the Pilgrim Father stock is to the American. Her American ancestor was one of those British soldiers who lived in the New England Colonies until the Stars and Stripes supplanted the Union Jack, when, with thousands of other loyalists, he moved into Canada to live and to die under the old flag.

Mr. Greenwood was educated at the Public School and High School of his native town, and at the University of Toronto. Like so many other men, he showed his bent at college, where he made his mark as a speaker, and, incidentally, as a cricketer. He took his degree in 1895, with first-class honours in Political Science and Law. Whilst still a student, like the energetic Canadian he is, he developed his love for soldiering by joining the Active Militia of Canada, and held a commission in that notable service for seven years. It is interesting to note that he qualified for his commission at the Royal Military School, Toronto, which was then, and is now, under the command of Colonel Otter, the hero of Paardeberg, and a good friend of the Liberal candidate for York.

At a time when, to quote the present Secretary for War, "the state of the Army is a danger to the Empire," it is vitally important that members of the House of Commons should have some practical acquaintance with military matters, and especially that experience with these matters in the Homeland and in the Colonies that enables one to approach the question of Army Reform from the point of view of the British Empire as a whole. We might point out that Mr. Greenwood, like all Canadian schoolboys, was trained in military drill at the Elementary and Secondary schools; and undoubtedly such a training makes for the improvement of the physique, and the preparation, in case of need, of the rising generation in the Dominion. This training does not encourage jingoism, which is quite foreign to the feelings of all self-governing Colonials. There are many military experts who believe that the Canadian system of training, and of defence, is a good model for us to follow in the creation, at any rate, of a Home Army. A member like Mr. Hamar Greenwood would, therefore, be a distinct acquisition to the House in a truly Imperial sense.

If ever a man held his political creed with the force of religion, that man is Mr. Hamar Greenwood. Hence politics are more to him than a mere game—they are the serious business of life; and so they must be to any man or body of men who wish to command the respect and improve the conditions of the vast majority of their fellow-men. Westminster can do with all the earnestness and enthusiasm it can get, for amongst ourselves these qualities are a trifle anæmic. It will be all to the good in the House of Commons, and in the Homeland, and, indeed, in the Empire, to have a number of strenuous Colonials who really believe in the efficacy of democratic legislation because they have seen it work well in their own Colonies. The gradual increase in the number of our kinsmen from beyond seas in the House of Commons marks the growth of the Imperial idea, and points to the evolution of a Parliament that will some day be truly Imperial.

In the General Election of 1900 Mr. Greenwood was urged to stand for Grimsby, but declined the cordial invitation. Nevertheless, he took an active part in opposing the return of the Government. In February, 1903, he received the unanimous invitation of the York Liberals to fight for that historic city, so long represented by that genial personality the late Sir Frank Lockwood. He and his loyal supporters are undoubtedly preparing for the General Election with Japanese thoroughness. "Lockwood yesterday, Greenwood to-day and to-morrow," so runs the motto for York.

It is given to some men to be fortunate enough to find the road through life made interesting by notable incidents, and by the elements of romance. The Liberal candidate for York is one of these lucky men. His invitation to contest York was itself one of those happy incidents. He was asked to take the place of a distinguished politician whose illness prevented him from making the speech of the evening. Although a perfect stranger to York, Mr. Greenwood's obvious sincerity and stirring speech so appealed to the York Liberals that he was forthwith invited to become their candidate.

The picture of Mr. Hamar Greenwood on the first page shows him in his uniform as an officer in the King's Colonials, Imperial Yeomanry, of which corps he was one of the first officers. It was started in 1902 under the honorary Colonelcy of the Prince of Wales, and consists of Colonials and men connected with the Colonies now living in the Motherland.

In physique Mr. Greenwood is like those Canadians whose fine appearance in the contingents at the Jubilee of 1897, and at the Coronation in 1902, made such an impression on Londoners. He is 6-ft. tall and distinguished in presence. The slight twang reminiscent of the West, and the possession of that great gift, the saving grace of humour, together with the mastery of the subjects in hand, and the power of lucid exposition, put Mr. Greenwood well to the front among political speakers.

"You ask me if I like York. Like is not the word—I almost revere the ancient city. It is to me the most interesting place in the world. Just think of it! York was a thriving town before the Romans came, and they, in turn, made it one of their great centres under the name of Eboracum. It was the northern and western outpost of the Empire of the Cæsars, and I must confess it is with a thrill that I realise that I, a Canadian, am fighting to win a city that was ancient in its history before Columbus discovered America. The Roman remains, the Minster, the Walls, the Bars, the streets, all remind one that this great city knew England in the beginning and in the making. No political battleground could be more inspiring than this capital city of the premier county of the realm."

Copyright.

At the age of five.

Copyright

At the age of twenty-five.

Copyright.

At the age of thirty-five.

THREE CHARACTERISTIC PORTRAITS OF MR. HAMAR GREENWOOD.

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

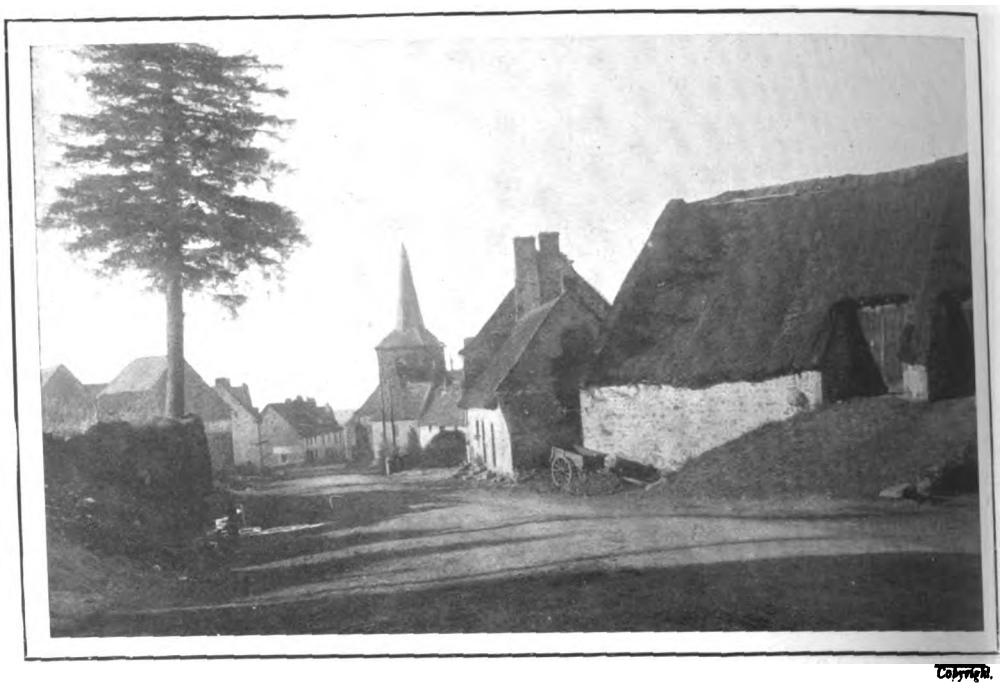
THE Auvergne Circuit has been described on many occasions, but it may be of interest to recall its leading features at the present moment, as the French Eliminating Trials will be in full swing on the day (Friday) that these lines appear in print. The course is a rough oblong, 137 kilomètres in circumference, which will be covered four times, making the total length of the race 548 kilomètres, or 341 miles. The start and finish will be on the Plateau de Laschamps, where the road is nearly 4,000-ft. above sea-level, the highest point on the circuit. From Laschamps to the outskirts of Rochefort (21 kilomètres from the starting point) the road is comparatively free from dangerous turnings, but after the latter point the difficulties commence. All the cars will be required to halt momentarily at Rochefort, so that a particularly difficult turn in the town may not be taken at excessive speed. At Laqueuille, about 9 kilomètres further on, they will be stopped and restarted at intervals of three minutes, in order that a reasonable distance may be maintained, so far as is possible, between the competitors while they are negotiating the narrow and twisting road between Bourg Lastic (45 kilomètres) and Le Chambon (77 kilomètres).

This portion has been described by some of the French drivers as the "bouchon" of the course, and it is prophesied that any attempt at overtaking will result in inevitable disaster. From Le Chambon to Pontgibaud (99 kilomètres from the start) is another winding stretch, but the road is wider, and the danger accordingly less. Pontgibaud is a control, and the cars will be stopped, and restarted at intervals of three minutes, as at Laqueuille. For 12 kilomètres or so onwards there will be a chance for the cars to show their real paces; but from the fork near Volvic commences a steep and winding descent to the cross-roads of Clermont Ferrand (127 kilomètres). The last 10 kilomètres back to Laschamps is fairly straight, but the road rises in a few miles from 1,443-ft. to nearly 4,000-ft. at the Col de Moreno, just beyond the starting point. Of the total distance of 137 kilomètres, only about 88 kilomètres consists of "route nationale."



Copyright.

THE COMING GORDON BENNETT RACE.

The street of Laqueuille, one of the villages on the chosen course.

One of the French drivers—I think it was Rigoly—has stated that there are 145 difficult corners on the circuit, so that each competitor who finishes the race will have negotiated 580 danger spots, each requiring the exercise of the greatest skill and nerve, and the practical certainty of the direst results in case of any mistake on the part of the driver or failure of the steering gear. The race will, therefore, constitute the severest test for both men and machines ever devised in the history of automobilism, and one can only hope that those who have prophesied a repetition of the Paris-Madrid disasters will prove to have been mistaken.

Twenty-four cars will compete, representing practically all the important manufacturers in France. The firms of Panhard, Richard Brasier, Renault, Bayard, Hotchkiss, Darracq, and De Dietrich have entered three machines apiece, and the total is made up by a C.G.V., a Gobron Brillié, and an Automoto. Only eight cars out of the twenty-four, the Richard Brasiers, the De Dietrichs, the Automoto, and the Gobron, are fitted with the side-chain system of transmission, the remainder being of the live-axle type. The biggest engine is that of the De Dietrich which has a bore of 190-m.m. and a stroke of 100-m.m., and is reputed to give 130-h.p. This monster, however, is run very close by the 185-m.m. by 160-m.m. of the Hotchkiss, and the 185-m.m. by 160-m.m. of the Bayard, which. I believe, are the dimensions of the Siddeley, the most powerful of the four-cylinder cars in the British Trials.

All the French machines, with the exception of the Gobron, are fitted with magneto ignition, though in several instances accumulators are carried as a reserve source of current. The great majority of the British racers, on the other hand, retain the old coil and accumulator system of ignition, the only exceptions being the Siddeley and the Weir-Darracq, which were fitted with low and high tension magneto respectively. Eight of the French makers adhere to the leather-covered cone clutch, and only two, Panhard and Bayard, have adopted the metal to metal disc type. In this respect the British cars would appear more advanced, as only the Wolseleys were fitted with leather clutches in the Isle of Man, all the Napiers and the Darracq having the metal to metal cone clutch, while the two Stars and the Siddeley were fitted with clutches of the disc type. In the matter of wheel-base length the French cars exhibit a remarkable diversity. The shortest is the 2-m. 40 of the Darracq, which is equivalent to 7-ft. 10½-in., or less than that of a medium-powered modern touring car. At the other extreme is the veteran Gobron Brillié, built long before the Auvergne Circuit was thought of, which has a length of 2-m. 90, or 9-ft. 6 in., between the axles. The Richard Brasier firm, which won the cup last year, has given its new machines a wheel-base of 2-m. 65, or 8-ft. 8-in., and, which is somewhat curious considering the winding nature of the course, a track of

Copyright.

THE COMING GORDON BENNETT RACE.

An awkward corner in Rochefort, a village on the selected route.

Digitized by Google

only 4-ft. 1½-in., whereas the other racers are from 4-in. to 12-in. wider between the wheels.

The race will be a hard-fought contest, and it is impossible to forecast the result. Personally, however, I shall be much surprised if the Panhards do not show well to the front, as they are the same machines which ran so well last year in the Ardennes Circuit and the Vanderbilt Cup, and only failed in the French Eliminating Trials by reason of defective water cooling, a matter which was subsequently remedied. Those competent to judge expect the winner to average 80 to 85 kilomètres an hour over the whole course; but the latter figure seems somewhat high, as Théry on the much easier Taunus Circuit last year did rather less than 88 kilomètres, or 54½ miles, an hour. The French drivers, however, have been living on the Auvergne roads for months past, and know every turn and twist of the course by heart, so that its difficulties and dangers will be minimised as far as possible.

In this connection there is likely to be serious trouble between the French club and the foreign competitors. The French drivers having learnt all they require about the course, the "Sporting Commission" of the French club has passed a resolution closing the roads to racing cars from June 2 onwards. The chairman of our own club immediately telegraphed to the president of the French club pointing out that such a prohibition would render it impossible for the British team to compete in the Gordon Bennett, as it would be the height of folly for a driver to race on such a course without several weeks of hard practice. Baron de Zuylen replied, throwing the responsibility on the Minister of the Interior, and holding out no hope that the regulations would be relaxed. Furthermore, he solemnly begs Mr. Stanley to impress on the British drivers the necessity of observing the legal speed limits when they visit the Auvergne Circuit. I sincerely pity the Auvergnats, who seem to have had a very exciting time since the French racers began to monopolise their principal roads some months ago; but if a deliberate attempt is to be made to prevent the English competitors from gaining experience of the 140 odd corners of the course, the British club had better withdraw its challenge at once. The German and Italian teams are not so seriously affected by the prohibition, as, having no selection trials of their own to prepare for, they have already had ample opportunities for studying the Auvergne Circuit.

RADIATOR.

W. A. Rouch.

THE MEET OF THE LADIES' AUTOMOBILE CLUB IN BATTERSEA PARK.

Mrs. Gerard Leigh, vice-president (steering), on her 25-h.p. Charron, with Lady Scott-Montagu, president of the club.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

EN FÊTE.

"FIFTY francs for the Society of Modern Education! My dear friend, you don't mean it. You don't really want me to give fifty francs to a society I never heard of, and that doesn't interest me for two sous!" "Ma très-chère, listen to me. You care nothing for the society—neither do I; but Chartran has lent his studio and his grounds, and there is to be a fête that everybody is talking about, and we are all going." "Theodore Chartran, who painted the Pope and the Roosevelts, who went to America and turned all the women's heads. Why didn't you say so before? Of course I will give fifty francs for a ticket. You're a dear to have thought of asking me. I wouldn't miss such an opportunity for the world." So talked two friends, and two more, and two more, and finally all who wanted to help the society, and all who didn't; all the little ladies, and all the big ones; the Spanish Colony and the American, the English and the Dutch paid their 50-fr. because it was the smart thing to do, to have been to the Fête at Chartran's in the company of dukes and duchesses, academicians and actors. Parisian, ma chère, so Parisian!

The electric landaulettes, the Panhards, and the Renaults, whirled up to the Boulevard Victor Hugo, to the corner house in the wooded grounds, where the fashionable painter has pitched his luxurious tents. A portrait painter must study his locality. He cannot live in a second-rate quarter. Princesses do not climb fifth floors at Clichy or Montparnasse. The painter who aspires to Royalty must be prepared to receive them. Sometimes they come, sometimes they do not; but there is more chance to paint a crowned head in appropriate surroundings. That we all know. So Theodore Chartran settled in the Boulevard Victor Hugo, and painted the Princess of Saxony, the Duchess of Rohan, the Marquis de Rederseaux, the Austrian Ambassador, the Marquis de Montesquiou, and all the celebrities, political and aristocratic, of France. To-day he is a man of some fifty odd years, tall and erect, with iron grey hair, a black moustache, and brilliant dark eyes, as handsome as ever.

It was a charming sight, such as you rarely get out of Paris. The studio with its rich hangings and monster palms made a splendid background for the pretty women in muslins and laces, and young girls as fresh as the roses in their hands; the marble steps and gallery facing the platform reserved for the frock-coated, leaving the body of the hall like a bed of flowers. But the entertainment begins. One after the other the favourites of the Paris public come forward and recite, sing, or play. Mme. Bartet of the Comedie Français, Mme. Réjane, Mlle. Cavalieri, the opera singer who was once on the music-hall stage, Mme. Litvinne, Kubelik, Risler, and Coquelin aîné. How they were applauded! How charming they were! Bartet was serious, Réjane was humorous, but I think Coquelin amused us most with an imitation of an American with an English accent. We all recognised the popular journalist. Coquelin has studied him well. I wonder if he recognised himself. Then the last words were said and the last bouquet handed to the ladies, and everyone passed into the grounds, took a cup of tea or a sandwich, talked a little scandal, and drove off.

Geniaux, Paris.

AT A PARISIAN FLOWER FETE IN HONOUR OF KING ALFONSO.
Mlle. Cleo de Merode driving on the Bois de Boulogne.

Chusseau-Flaviens.

AT THE AUTEUIL RACES.
The dernier cri in summer frocks.

The entire week has been en fête. The galas at the Opera and the Français, the receptions at the Foreign Office, the Invalides and the Hotel de Ville, the dinner and ball at the Elysées, the rush from Vincennes to Versailles, the hurried walk through the Louvre, and the final drive to Auteuil will not soon be forgotten. The young King smiled and waved his hand and looked happy through it all, excepting the quarter of an hour in the storm that broke over the city as, with M. Loubet and the generals, he drove to the races. The King crouched on one side, M. Loubet on the other, the generals opposite in the landau as green as the trees they passed. It was in truth a bad quarter of an hour. Eventually, however, the sky cleared and the King followed the race won by Canard in duck's weather.

But the fêtes ended sadly for the women. The beautiful dresses, the dainty millinery, the long white gloves, the feathers, the shoes—all ruined! The water poured down as if thrown from a huge bucket and rebounded mètres high. Nothing could shelter the crowd from such a rainfall. A few in the tribunes were somewhat more protected, but in the paddock women ran about as demented. What was to become of them? Where could they go? Nowhere under shelter. They had to remain in the pelting rain, their thin dresses sticking to their backs and sides, outlining their forms, their skirts heavy with the weight of water hung like rags dipped in mud, feathers fell like strings about their necks, they stood in pools. Neither umbrellas nor sunshades were of any use; they held them over their heads, of course, but so closely wedged that there was no possibility of moving them to the back as the rain suddenly was blown to their backs and ran in streams through the opening of the bodices as they bent their throats.

When the storm subsided there was time to laugh, and occasion too. One quondam élégante tore her hat from her head, rolled it in a ball, and threw it away, a hat that had, a few minutes before, been a becoming mass of lace and tulle, that had been a "creation." Another woman cried through the crinoline straw that masked half her face, her mauve veil discolouring her cheeks, her hair hanging in a wet mass over her eyes. A third I saw looked pitiful; her blue muslin and ribbons had coloured her arms, neck, and the rest; she looked like a mermaid in a blue sea. But; "it's an ill wind . . . " The dressmakers and milliners are smiling broad smiles. There were sixty hats brought to the Rue de la Paix to be renovated, and orders are pouring in like the rain for the Grand Prix at all the big establishments. It is estimated that damage to the amount of £40,000 was done in that quarter of an hour to women's clothing.

FRANCES KEYZER.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Briaun, Clement et Cie.

MME. CHARTRAN

From the portrait by Chartran, now in the Paris Salon.

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

TWO important events in the yachting calendar are fixed for to-day. These are the time-honoured matches from the Nore to Dover, which will be sailed under the flag of the Royal Thames Yacht Club, and the start of the race for the Heligoland Cup from Dover. It is unfortunate that two such events should clash, although under existing circumstances it is improbable that either is affected prejudicially. Efforts have been made to keep English yachts at home this year, and it has been understood for some time past that in some instances at least these efforts have proved successful. On the other hand, it is only to be expected that the majority of those vessels which took part in the race for the Ocean Cup will cross the North Sea to be present at the Kiel Regatta, if they do not actually race across, and given fine weather the Kiel Week of 1905 should be as brilliant as any of its predecessors.

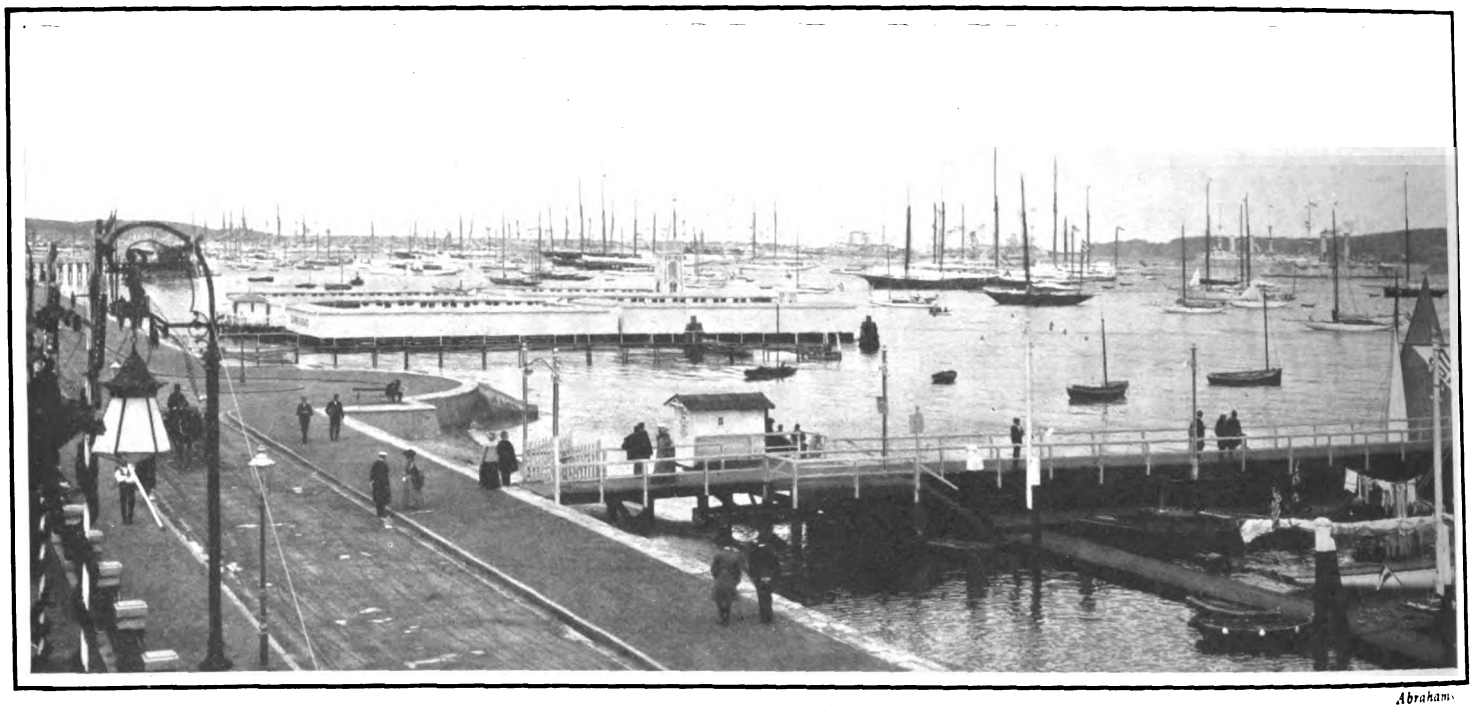
Many of the larger craft are commanded and manned by Englishmen, while the smaller boats are sailed by amateurs, and it is a recognised fact that the finest yachtsmen are those who have learned their sailing in small craft. Bearing this in mind, the Emperor is well advised in devoting special attention to the small vessels, and a series of races for what is termed the Sonderklass forms a prominent feature in each year's programme. This class consists of boats a trifle bigger than our 24-footer, manned by a crew of three amateurs, and is open to any nationality. It was as a member of the crew of one of these boats that I first made acquaintance with the Kiel regattas a few years ago, and on that occasion there were no less than fourteen competitors in the races in question, including representatives of Germany, Sweden, Denmark, France, America, and England.

While the management of the regattas may be open to criticism on some points, details on the whole are carried out with a completeness often wanting in our own regattas. There is also a pleasing variety in the arrangement of the various courses, and a fair proportion of the matches are from port to port. Thus there are always races from Kiel to Eckernförde and back, and from Kiel to Travemünde, a distance of about 90 miles, for which a very early morning start is always made, and again from Travemünde to Warnemünde.

This variety of courses adds enormously to the interest of the actual racing, and there is always some social function at every port at the end of the day's racing, at which the Emperor is usually present.

The chief event ashore is always the banquet at the Kaiserlicher Yacht Club, presided over by the Emperor, who presents the prizes for the Dover-Heligoland Race. This year the Ocean Cup and prizes for the Atlantic Race will also be presented, so that the banquet will assume a special interest.

Then, during the fortnight over which the racing extends, there are several occasions upon which the presentation of prizes is made the occasion of a ceremony at which the Kaiser officiates, while on most evenings there is a "herren abend," at which his Majesty is also usually present. This takes the form of an informal gathering of yachtsmen and those having the entrée to the club. There are no toasts, and no formalities of any description. The Emperor sits at the head of the table surrounded by a few intimate friends, and prominent yachtsmen are presented in an informal manner. The few hours of the evening are passed in the pleasures of general conversation, and the consumption of lager beer, sandwiches, and cigars. None of the entertainments is prolonged to a late hour. Early morning starts are quite a feature of the racing on the Baltic, and recognising that crews require a certain amount of rest, the Emperor sets the example of retiring at a reasonable hour, and the gathering usually breaks up soon after his departure.



Abraham.

KIEL HARBOUR.

This view was taken from the balcony of the Kaiserlicher Yacht Club during last year's regatta week, and gives some idea of the numbers of yachts that take part in the annual fixture.

The Baltic regattas have become popular amongst yachtsmen, and as long as they are conducted on similar lines as in the past they will continue so. The reason is not far to seek. The attractions do not begin and end with the yacht-racing; the Kiel Week is one of the big social functions in the German calendar, and the Kaiser does all in his power to promote the welfare of the sport. He has set himself the task of inculcating a love of the sea amongst his subjects, and one of the means whereby he seeks to attain his end is the encouragement of yachting. How far he has succeeded may be judged from the fact that two years ago more yachts started in the various races on one day than have ever taken part in a regatta in this country, including a magnificent fleet of schooners, in addition to such well-known craft as Comet (ex Thistle), Orion, Navahoe, and Thérese, to name only a few of the more important boats sailing under the German ensign. But that which augurs best for the future of German yachting is without doubt the hold which small-class sailing seems to have obtained.

The more important functions ashore usually include a garden party in the grounds of the Schloss, the Kiel residence of Prince and Princess Henry of Prussia, while receptions and dances take place on board many of the battle-ships, of which there are always a fair number in Kiel Harbour.

With so many entertainments provided, it is hardly to be wondered at that a certain number of yachts forsake the regattas at home for those of the Baltic, and thus make a pleasant break in the ordinary routine of a season's racing.

CORINTHIAN.

---

OPENING REGATTA FIXTURES.

June 17.—Royal Thames Yacht Club, Nore to Dover.
July 14.—Royal Cinque Ports Yacht Club Regatta.

SOLENT CLASSES.

June 19.—Island Sailing Club.
June 20.—Southampton Corinthian Yacht Club
June 21.—Royal London Yacht Club.
June 24.—Royal Southampton Yacht Club.
June 26.—Castle Yacht Club.

Digitized by Google

YACHTS OF THE YEAR.

West, Southsea.

BRYNHILD.

Yawl, 153 tons. For the past six seasons this fine vessel has been one of the best-known yachts, sailing at all the principal regattas. She was built at Gosport for Mr. Calverley, but is now owned by Sir James Pender, Bart. She was one of the many English yachts present at Kiel last year. Her hull is now painted white on the topsides.

Digitized by Google

The River Season.

A VIEW FROM RICHMOND HILL.

With the coming of Whitsuntide the river season opens in real earnest, and from Richmond up to Oxford each fine week end will see the broad bosom of the "most placid of rivers" laden with pleasure craft and studded with gay costumes and light sunshades. The natural beauty of the Richmond Reach marks it as the starting point, going up-stream, of the Thames as a river of pleasure, and from the hill there is a wonderful view over picturesque and lovely country, with the river winding along between Surrey and Middlesex.

(From a copyright photograph specially taken for this paper.)

Digitized by Google

The River Season.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

SUNDAY AFTERNOON AT MOLESEY LOCK.

A busy crowded scene it is at Molesey on a warm summer afternoon just by the lock. Boats of all sizes and types are continually passing up and down stream, either through the lock itself or over the rollers. Molesey, too, is a favourite resort for fishermen, and with both Kempton Park and Hurst Park race-courses in the neighbourhood, Molesey may be said to be quite a headquarters of sport. Higher up the gentle beauty of the river grows gradually, and in the course of the summer we shall endeavour to illustrate many of the famous resorts in their most attractive aspect.

(From a copyright photograph specially taken for this paper.)

Digitized by Google

THE SHERBORNE PAGEANT.

Copyright.

FIRST EPISODE: ST. EALDHELM BLESSING THE CHILDREN.

Copyright.

EIGHTH EPISODE: THE BISHOP OF SARUM ADDRESSING THE TOWNSFOLK.

There was celebrated this week at the quiet little town of Sherborne in Dorset the 1,200th anniversary of the foundation of the town by St. Ealdhelm, who was Bishop of the See in 705. The occasion was commemorated by a wonderfully picturesque pageant, carried out in the grounds of the ruined castle. The performance consisted of a review of the history of the town in eleven episodes and a final tableau, and showed the progress of the town through the 1,200 years. The pictures show two of the interesting episodes in the pageant, which was arranged by Mr. Louis N. Parker.

Digitized by Google

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

Foulsham and Banfield.

MISS DAISY LE HAY

Who has been playing the part of Nan in "The Country Girl" on tour. The popularity of this delightful musical comedy shows no signs of abating, and Miss Le Hay's performance has probably had not a little to do with the cordial reception the play has met with in the provinces.

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

A HOLIDAY IN THE NORTH OF IRELAND.

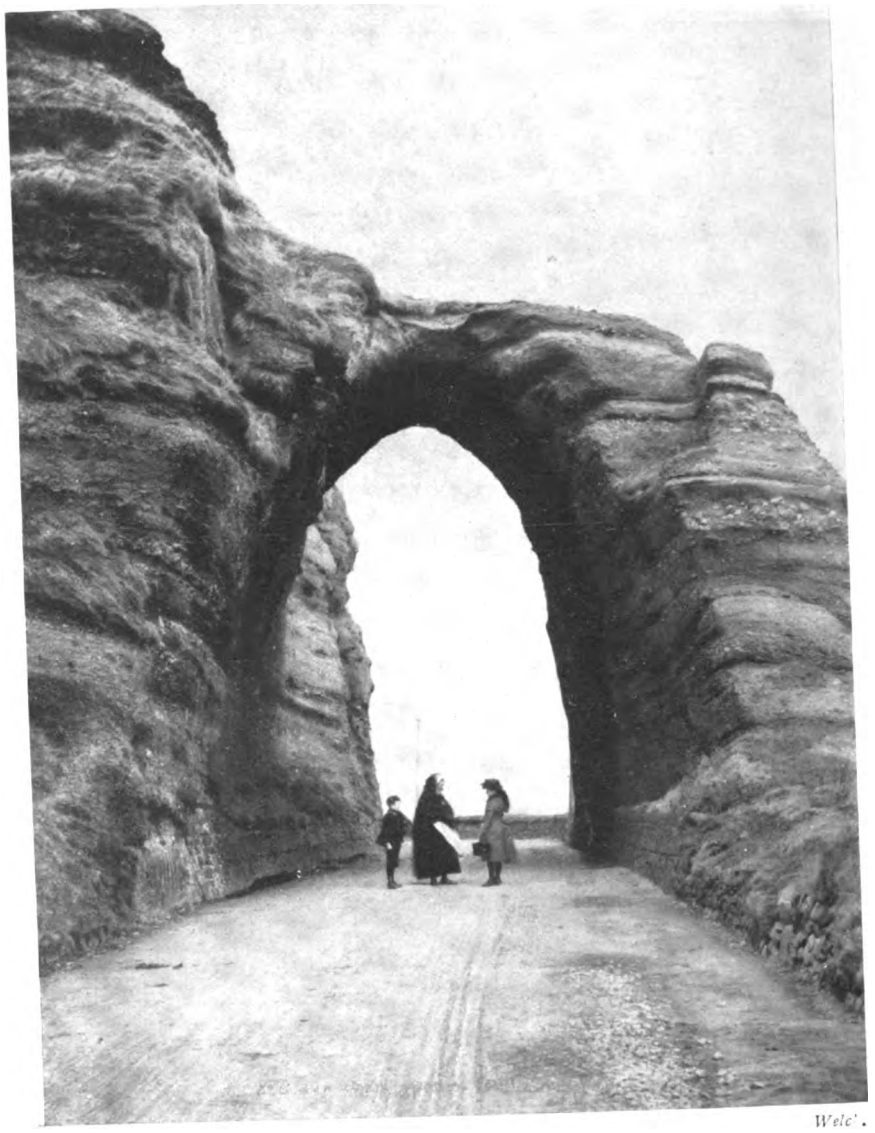
HAVING shown in a previous article what an ideal resort Ireland is for practically all sorts and conditions of holiday-makers, we propose to take the traveller this week to some of the less-frequented—nevertheless beautiful—portions of the Emerald Isle. Though less famous, perhaps, than the south-west of Ireland, the north-east corner, comprising the counties of Antrim and Londonderry, has much to commend it to the favourable notice of those for whom quiet combined with bracing air and lovely scenery are a sine quâ non. For in addition to these much-sought-after conditions the northern extremity of the Green Isle boasts of an almost unequalled coast-line, extending from Belfast round to Donegal.

The brilliance of the atmosphere of this Northern Riviera is so remarkable that one can only liken it to that of the South, and on a fine day, looking across the still, blue ocean, one might easily imagine it were the Mediterranean. Like the East Coast of England, there is a "something" in the air for which no expression can be found. As a well-known writer once remarked, it is like "champagne without headache," and we can think of no more terse way of giving expression to the sensation one first experiences. Great tree-fuchsias, now ablaze with colouring, and giant laurels, 20-ft. high and more, grow down to within half a mile of the seashore, while hydrangeas flourish out of doors even during the winter, so mild is the climate.

Before proceeding further with our subject, a hint may be given as to the best way of reaching this delightful retreat. Belfast, Londonderry, and Larne are equally good centres from which to start for a tour in north-east Ireland. Those who make for Belfast—and the great majority do, now that the new harbour at Heysham has been completed and brought into use—will cross in one of the splendid 20-knot turbine vessels of the Midland Company. These vessels—four in number—are the fastest afloat, and in the matter of comfort are scarcely surpassed. The journey across the Irish Sea, which in the past has hindered so many people from visiting the beautiful Emerald Isle, is now an actual inducement to holiday-makers to visit Ireland. You can leave St. Pancras in the afternoon, and, if you are so minded, dine well on the train, arriving at Heysham about 10.45 p.m. The steamer leaves soon after the arrival of the train, and, turning into a comfortable berth, you find yourself early next morning alongside Donegal Quay. Continuing the journey—still by "Midland," for the company recently purchased the line of the Belfast and Northern Counties Railway—you reach York Road Station, Belfast, at 6.10 a.m., in "Midland" time, which means punctuality. A yet shorter sea journey is from Stranraer to Larne, while those who regard a sea voyage as a pleasure—which undoubtedly it is to those who can stand it—the Heysham-Londonderry service, which lands the traveller within easy reach of Portrush, is to be recommended. Little further remains to be said as regards the comfort and general excellence of "Midland" travel. Whichever route be chosen, one will find but little ground for complaint.



Welc'.

RED BAY ARCH, ANTRIM COAST.

A curious natural arch in red sandstone, almost Gothic in appearance, near Red Bay, about a mile from Cushendale, County Antrim. In the neighbourhood are the ruins of Red Bay Castle, formerly the residence of the MacDonnel family.

Arrived in Ireland, the first question is where to go, a point that may quickly be settled by selecting one of the many admirably-planned circular tours over the Belfast and Northern Counties line. Holders of Midland tourist tickets can obtain at the Midland Company's Belfast and other offices cheap eight-day contract tickets at nominal rates, entitling them to travel to and fro over 200 miles of the best tourist country in Ireland. If you are a golfer, your objective will most likely be Portrush, for here is situate the most perfect golf links in Ireland. Moreover, Portrush is one of the most popular watering-places, and an ideal centre to work from. It is built on a rather narrow promontory, with a seafront looking across the mouth of Lough Foyle to the blue mountains of Donegal, with Malin Head in the distance; and another with the bold stretch of cliffs and headlands terminating in what is known as the Giant's Causeway. The latter ranks among the world's most remarkable basaltic formations, and is therefore an object of considerable admiration and wonderment. Good bathing can be enjoyed from either shore, and the walks and drives in the neighbourhood, not to mention innumerable excursions by rail and motor, are to be reckoned among the attractions of Portrush. Visitors to this pretty watering-place will find no lack of accommodation, for in addition to the many houses which "let," there is the comfortable Northern Counties Hotel, under "Midland" management and control.

Among the different places of interest which can be conveniently reached from Portrush are Londonderry, or Derry, whose historic associations are legion, and Coleraine, a pretty river-side ramble, with a salmon-leap on the Bann, affording exciting sport. Carrick-a-Rede is chiefly remarkable for its rope bridge and curious rock scenery; and White Park Bay, with its fine reach of sands, should appeal to those with young families. Caves and natural arches, startling chasms in which the restless sea roars and whistles, queer and uncanny rock bridges and legendary spots galore abound all along the coast. Inland, too, the scenery is most picturesque, and in the course of a day's ramble many a trim little wayside farm, brilliantly whitewashed, and with roses in abundance, will be encountered. The cromlechs are a feature of this part of Ireland, Antrim in particular boasting of a large number of them.

In the South of Ireland Glengarrif is a name familiar to most tourists; not so, however, Glenariff, which is about as far removed as could be from the other glen so similarly named. For the picnicker Glenariff is a favourite spot. Thanks to the ingenuity of Mr. Berkeley Wise, the engineer of the Belfast and Northern Counties Railway, the narrow gorge leading to Glenariff has been made accessible to the tourist by means of a series of pathways and galleries and bridges constructed the entire length of the ravine. By means of the narrow-gauge line which runs from Ballymena to Parkmore, the excursion has now been brought within the scope of a day's outing either from Belfast or Portrush.

Digitized by Google

IN THE NORTH OF IRELAND.

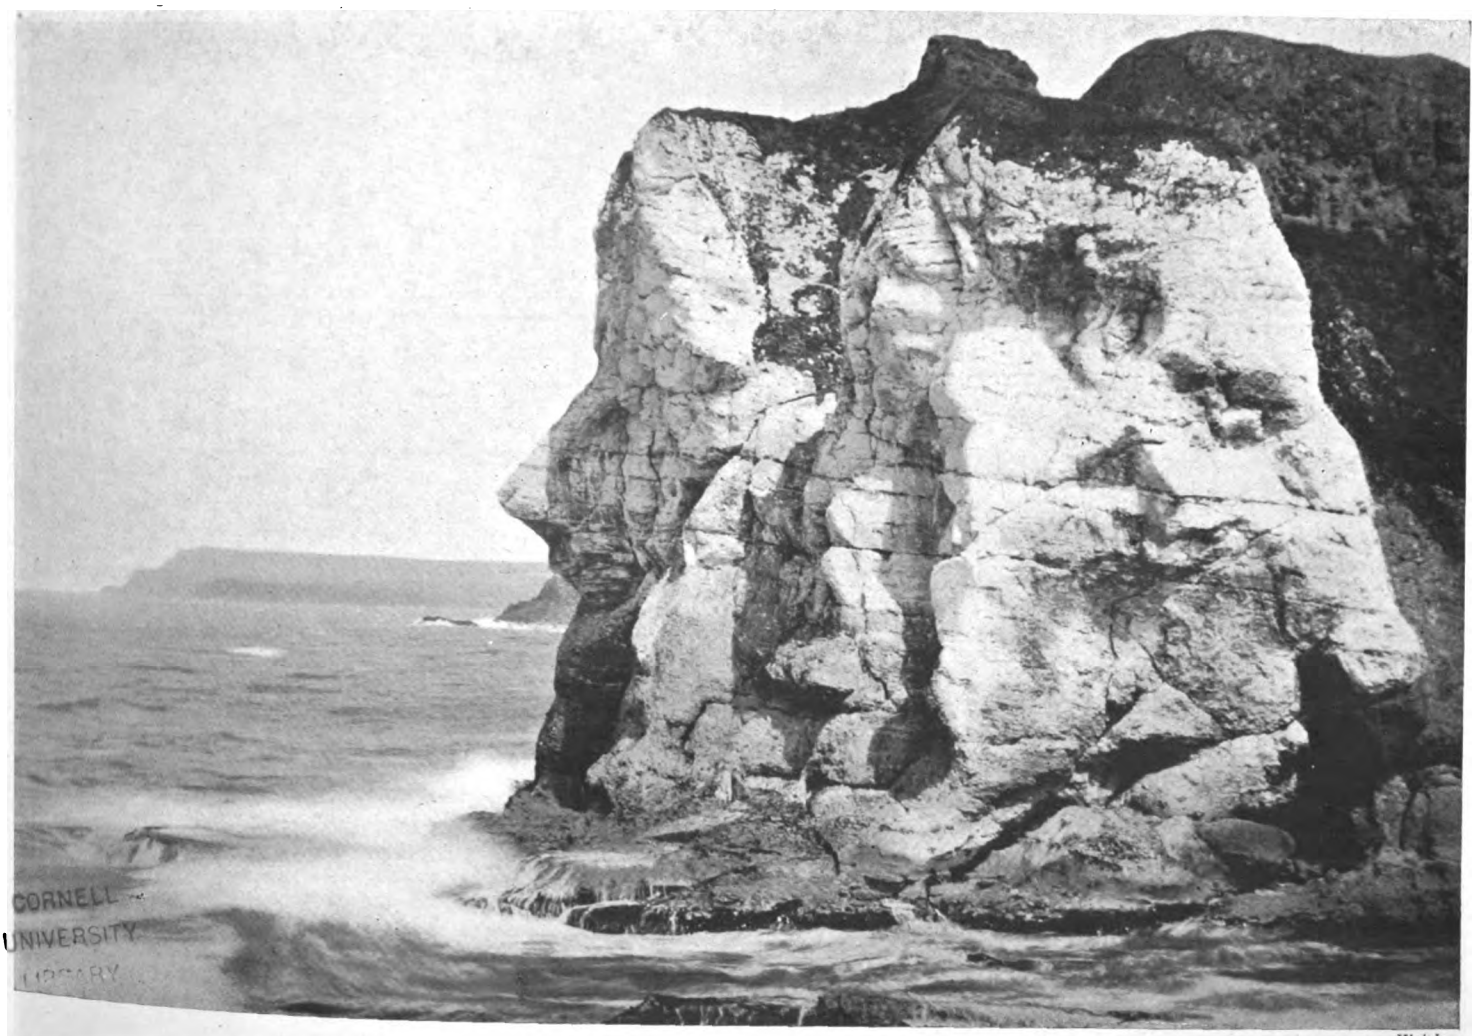
Welch.

CARRICK-A-REDE AND THE LARRIBAN CLIFFS.

A view of the celebrated swinging bridge constructed of wood and rope, crossing a chasm at a height of 80-ft. above the sea-level. The bridge, which is only in use during the salmon-fishing season, connects the mainland with the huge rock, whence the place derives its name.



Welch.

THE GIANT'S HEAD, PORTRUSH.

One of the most striking features of the long stretch of limestone cliffs known as White Rocks. The cliffs have been worn by waves and weather into the most fantastic shapes, and the Giant's Head shown in the picture is one of the most remarkable, by reason of its resemblance to a human profile.

Digitized by Google

The Cricket Season.

ENGLAND v. AUSTRALIA.

TO-DAY'S great match at the headquarters of cricket is the seventy-third of the series of matches between teams representing England and Australia, which series commenced on March 15, 16, and 17, 1877, at Melbourne, when Lillywhite's team was defeated by 45 runs. Since then, and up to May 31 of this year of grace, England has won thirty-two and lost twenty-eight, while the remaining dozen of the seventy-two matches have been drawn. Tabulated according to the country in which they have been played, these results read as follows:

IN ENGLAND.

| Played. | Won. | Lost. | Drawn. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 30 | 14 | 6 | 10 |

IN AUSTRALIA.

| Played. | Won. | Lost. | Drawn. |
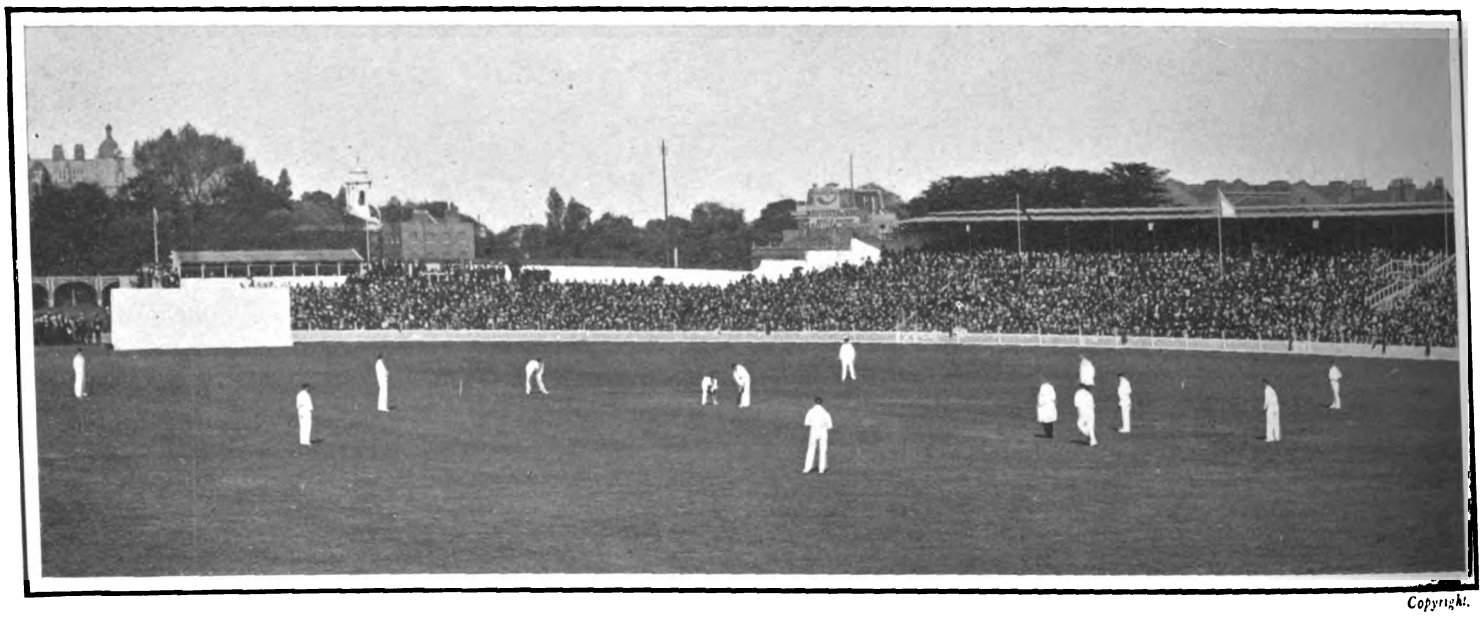
|---|---|---|---|
| 42 | 18 | 22 | 2 |

The Australians, therefore, hold a good lead in victories in their own country, but, as is only to be expected under the frequently very different conditions of wicket under which the great games have been fought out in this country, they have still a good deal of leeway to make up on English grounds. The reason is obvious to the cricketer, but not so to the lay mind, so a few lines of explanation are necessary.

In Australia the light is always better, and the wickets harder and faster and truer, as a general rule, than in this country. Consequently the success of an Australian team over here depends to a very great extent on the weather. Much more so than that of an English team in Australia, as English cricketers are more used to batting on slow or difficult wickets than are their Australian kinsmen. So that when rain occurs during the tour of an English eleven in Australia, the fact is generally hailed with acclamation. Not so by the Colonial teams in this country, for they know our best batsmen are, as a rule, much superior to theirs when the ball is breaking and jumping about, while their bowlers are not under similar circumstances any better than ours. Where their bowlers are usually superior to the best of ours is in their rapid discovery of a batsman's weakness, and the persistence with which, when discovered, they play upon that weakness. Also, their cleverness in at once utilising any advantage wind or weather or crumbling wicket may offer. A case in point is provided by the dismissal of the Gentlemen at Lord's on May 20, on an apparently perfect wicket. Very slight rain had fallen in the early hours of that eventful day, and, by the time the Gentlemen went on with their innings, the wicket, however slightly the rain may have affected it, had to all intents and purposes quite recovered. But there was just a little of what is technically known as "pop" and "kick" left in it, and of this both Howell and Laver made the utmost use. Naturally, there was a contributory cause in the shape of some bad batting, and also in everything coming off in favour of the Colonials, but it is probable no pair of English bowlers would have quite so successfully seized the hand of help held out to them by the wicket on that morning as did Laver and Howell. It is just this power possessed by Australian bowlers—and they always have possessed it—which makes it quite impossible for Englishmen to be at all sure at the commencement of a match of its result, however much form at the time may point to our men winning.



Copyright.

A TEST MATCH AT LORD'S

The historic cricket ground during an important game.

MATCH PROSPECTS.

After the good win at Nottingham on the 31st ult.—a victory won when the Australians were practically one short, as Trumper was only at the wicket a very brief while in the first innings of the Australians—it was widely suggested in cricket circles that the England team should remain unchanged, but this was probably far from the intentions of the Selection Committee, excellently well though all our men performed on that occasion. The inclusion of C. B. Fry and Hirst was certain to take place directly either or both were physically fit to play. The public must not anticipate many wickets from Hirst, for there is every reason to believe his bowling days are numbered. He cannot take the run to deliver the ball he used to when his leg was thoroughly fit and could stand the strain of a long run up to the wicket and the weight of a tough little Yorkshire body, chiefly thew and sinew, thrown upon it six times every other two or three minutes. For some little time now this state of things has been feared, as towards the end of each of the past two or three seasons he has had to slow down considerably. That he can still bowl enough to get county batsmen out is certain, but it is highly improbable he can ever again be an England bowler for more than a very few overs. C. B. Fry's inclusion was, of course, merely a question of fitness. Numberless followers of the game hope he will yet in the international matches reproduce much of that facility for getting runs on all sorts of wickets, against all sorts of bowling, which has been the most marked feature of his cricket for several seasons past. He has not only the Australian attack to cope with, but also that something supernatural known as luck, which so often dogs the fine cricketer's footsteps. He has always been more or less unlucky against Australian teams. He gets out in unlucky ways—run out, played on, caught off a good stroke, and so forth. And when, as in his second innings against them this season at the Crystal Palace, he really has got into his stride, the arrival of the invincible Scythe Bearer has nipped a long innings in the bud.

At the time of writing, eight days before the event, of course the England Eleven has not been chosen, but that it will consist of the Hon. F. S. Jackson (captain), A. C. MacLaren, C. B. Fry, B. J. T. Bosanquet, A. O. Jones, Hirst, Hayward, Lilley, Rhodes, Tyldesley, and W. Brearley is quite probable. Wet weather would probably mean the exclusion of the latter in favour of G. L. Jessop, who may, however, be chosen in any case. A rare good eleven in any case. The Australian selectors—Darling, Noble, and Hill—make their final selection just before noon on the first day of the match, but it is quite likely the same men who were beaten by 213 runs at Nottingham will again do duty. At the time of writing none of the four who stood down on that occasion have shown any form to justify the triumvirate above in altering their team. Wet weather might mean the inclusion of Howell to the exclusion of McLeod.

Digitized by Google

THE CRICKET SEASON.

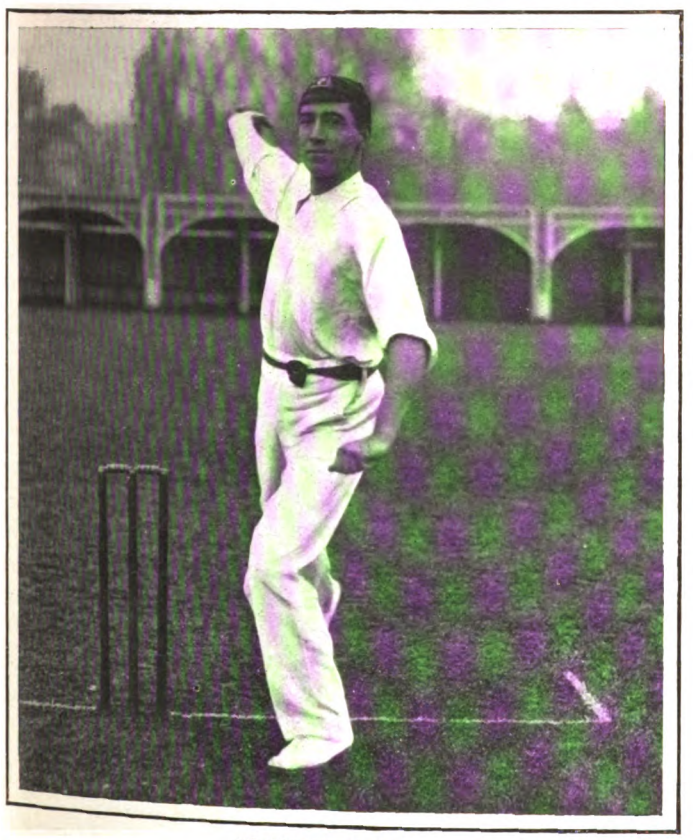
B. J. T. BOSANQUET.

As all the world knew by June 1, this famous Old Etonian took 8 wickets for 107 in the Australians' second innings at Trent Bridge, on May 31, and won the match for England. In the seventy-two Test matches played only seven men have taken 8 wickets in a Test-match innings—the late George Lohmann, T. Richardson, H. Trumble, W. Rhodes, L. C. Braund, A. E. Trott, and Bosanquet. It would not be the curious game it is if the Australians will not sooner or later hit him to all parts of the ground, but we must hope that the glorious uncertainty will be on his side. At Trent Bridge the Australians were cornered, having to play a whole afternoon against him with really only a draw to play for, and it is almost impossible for a whole side to play good leg-breaks for safety for so long. They were also watching for the ball to break from the off, which it did not do.

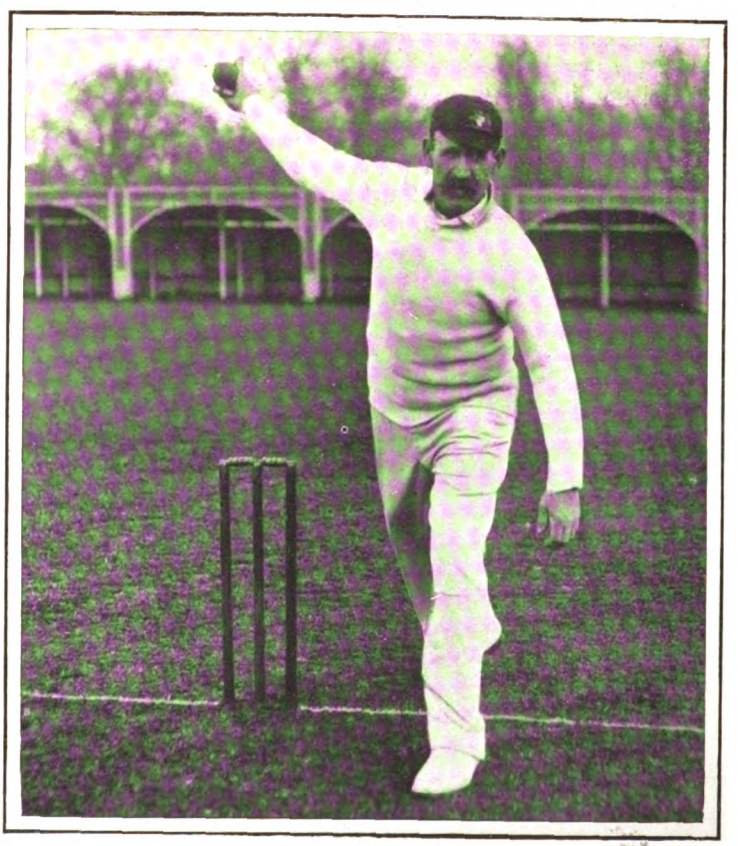
A. A. LILLEY.

In his recent form the Warwickshire wicket-keeper rivals the great McArthy Blackham, the best wicket-keeper the game has known, not excepting Ernest Halliwell. It was fortunate for England that Lilley was in such form at Trent Bridge. He stumped and caught behind the wicket as though it was the easiest thing imaginable to take the ball and whip the bails off before the batsman could regain his crease. Lilley is the model all rising wicket-keepers should watch and mould themselves on. Note how invariably he handles the ball. There is hardly ever any pad-play about him. When the ball is thrown in by the fieldsman Lilley takes it at every conceivable angle and pitch with his hands. This is high art with the gloves, and is, in fact, wicket-keeping proper. Lilley has "kept" for years for England, and will probably keep for many years more.



FRANK LAVER.

Chosen as manager to the twelfth Australian team, Laver, the tall Victorian batsman and bowler, has rapidly shown himself to be one of the most valuable cricketers on the side. It is not given to managers as a rule to be two-thirds of the way towards taking 100 wickets as the result of only a quarter of the tour's work. Darling is known to have expected Laver to do well with the ball, for he said so before this cricketer, who, with Armstrong, is one of the two giants of the team, had commenced to put on himself the mantle of Trumble. That he is a second Trumble he has yet to prove So far the imitation has certainly been as good as many of those for which mimes on the stage have become famous. Last season in Victoria 11 wickets for 26·34 runs apiece were his figures for seven matches. He has, over here, taken over 70 wickets in eight matches.



W. P. HOWELL.

This useful right-hand medium-paced bowler and hard-hitting left-hand bat, has been so far rather in the background owing to the vein of form F. Laver has been in, but he has not by any means lost his length and spin, as the Gentlemen of England at Lord's on the 20th of the merrie month knew to their cost. Should Laver fall off at all or lose his form entirely, we may anticipate several wickets being taken by this, the most genial cricketer Australia has ever sent over here. Familiarly known as "the bee-farmer," Howell is really no bee-farmer at all, though he confesses to having had a beehive or two in his time. His bowling figures in New South Wales cricket last season were 10 wickets for 32·8, and in batting he scored 333 runs for six completed innings, highest score 128, average 55·5. But he has never done his hitting powers justice in this country.

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

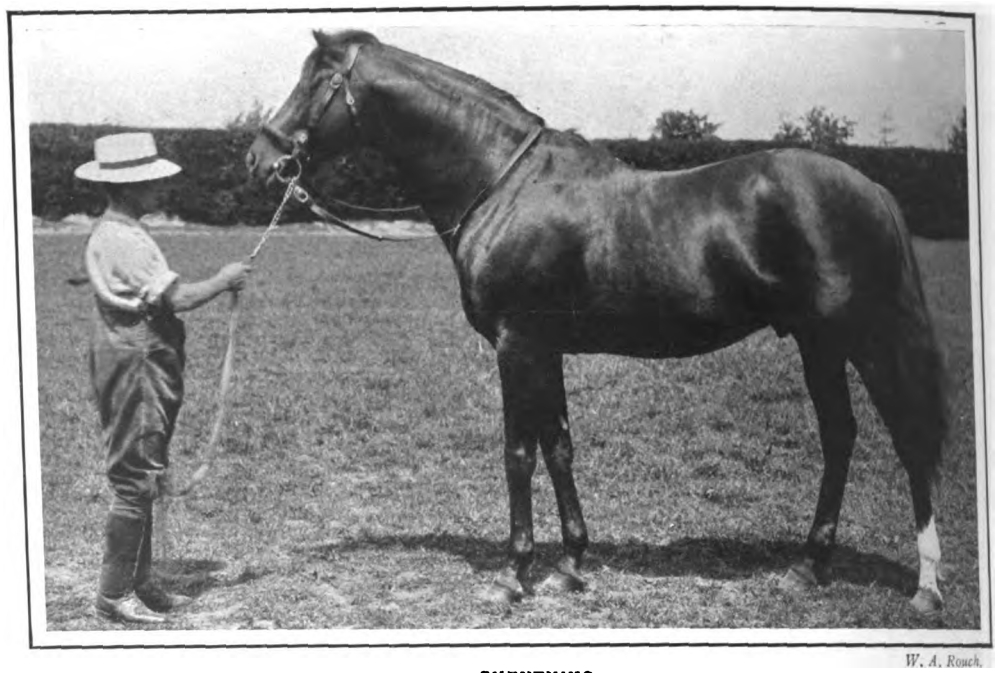
OWING to the limited space available, no mention was made of the Woodcote Stakes in last week's notes, but the race is worthy of more than passing notice. It was founded not far short of 100 years ago, and has been won from time to time by some of the most famous racers of their day. Sceptre, Rock Sand, and Cicero are recent winners of the Woodcote; and going further back in the annals of the race one finds the names of Dundee, Lord Clifden, Achievement, Belladrum, Sunshine, Cremorne, and Cantinière inscribed upon the roll of winners. Whether Serenata, this year's winner, is destined to emulate the fame of many of her predecessors is a matter of considerable doubt; but she is a beautifully-bred filly by Chevening out of Meldola, and she certainly won in good style, beating Black Auster by four lengths. This colt, however, should not be lost sight of; he is a big, commanding animal, and I do not think he gave his true running on the hard ground. Some interest attaches to Charcot, the winner of the Epsom Plate; this horse is quite a citizen of the world. He was bred in South America, where he won several races; from there he journeyed to South Africa, in which country he carried off many of the most important handicaps; and he has now commenced a winning career in this country as well.

In the bustle and excitement of a day's racing few of us, perhaps, ever realise what beautiful places some of our race-courses really are. A few days ago I found myself at Lingfield on an off day, and cannot remember ever having seen such an extraordinary profusion of roses as those which were growing at the back of the stands. Beautifully-laid-out beds of flowers, trim, well-kept lawns, and the emerald-hued track of the straight mile stretching away into the heart of the trees in the distance, made up a scene of which Mr. R. Fowler, the popular clerk of the course, may well feel proud, for is it not the result of his work?

Chevening, the sire of Serenata, is a young sire who is deserving of more patronage from breeders than has hitherto fallen to his share.

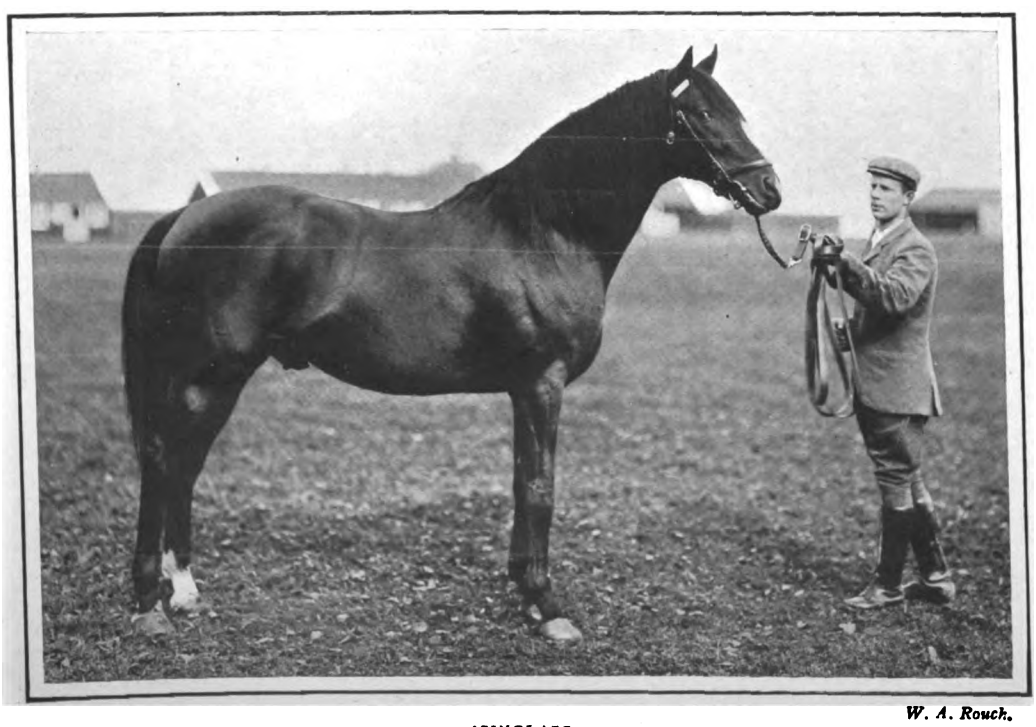


W. A. Rouch.

CHEVENING

Sire of Serenata, winner of the Woodcote Stakes.

He is by Orion, by Bend Or out of Shotover, his dam Simenia, by St. Simon out of Flying Footsteps, and he was a good race-horse himself, winning the Mostyn Plate, Kempton Park Nursery, the Free Handicap, Newmarket, and the Queen's Prize, Kempton Park; he also ran second to Diamond Jubilee for the Newmarket Stakes and the Eclipse Stakes. Mr. W. A. Rouch has also been able to show us a capital likeness of Isinglass, the sire of Mr. W. Hall-Walker's winner of the Oaks. The fame of this stout-hearted son of Isonomy and Deadlock will endure to the end of time; he won the Two Thousand Guineas, the Derby, the St. Leger, and eight other races. His son, John o' Gaunt, would have been a really good race-horse had all gone well with him, and if the time-test is of any value, his daughter Cherry Lass must be an exceptionally brilliant mare, for she covered the Derby distance, one mile and a-half, in less time than Cicero, who had himself completely beaten all existing time records for the Derby. The meeting of the colt and the filly in the St. Leger will be looked forward to with unusual interest, especially if, as we all hope may be the case, M. E. Blanc's champions are in fit condition to enter the lists.



W. A. Rouch.

ISINGLASS

Sire of Cherry Lass, winner of the Oaks.

Our Royal visitor the King of Spain honoured the Auteuil Meeting on June 4 to witness the race for the Grand Steeplechase de Paris, the "Grand National" of France. Wolf's Folly, the solitary representative of England, could do no better than finish fifth; but he had none the best of the luck during the race. He was knocked out of his stride by the falling of some of the other runners at the stone wall, and had barely recovered the lost ground when Dandolo fell in front of him and nearly brought him down. All things considered, he ran a remarkably good race; but the 5,000 sovs. and the object of art went to M. Ruddock's Canard, four years old, 9-st. 12-lb., ridden by Percy Woodland, who finished three lengths in front of M. R. de Salvertes's Jusque Au Bout, six years old, 11-st. 6-lb., with M. R. Bally's Hipparque, five years old, 11-st., third, five lengths away.

The trustees of the Ascot Race-course and the London and South Western Railway Company are sincerely to be congratulated upon the joint enterprise which has led to the construction of a covered way from the railway station to the grand stand. The general public will also benefit by this improvement, holders of grand stand tickets passing through the turnstiles on the right, and those going to the open course leaving the rotunda by the exit doors to the main road.

The splendid style in which Pretty Polly won the Coronation Cup at Epsom seems to indicate very clearly that she will also win the Gold Cup at Ascot, for which Cherry Lass is also entered.

The near approach of the Whitsuntide holidays compels the closing of these notes before the appearance of the Calendar containing the weights for the Royal Hunt Cup and the Ascot Stakes. Royal Arch is not unlikely to be returned the winner of the Manchester Cup.

CAURIRE.

Digitized by Google

Plays and Players.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

THE "NEW COSTUME PLAY" AT THE CRITERION THEATRE.

Some of the principal characters in "Brooke of Brazenose," the new play in three acts by Mr. Neville Doone and Mr. T. R. F. Coales, which was produced last week at the Criterion Theatre. The play deals with the time when George III. was King, and the authors have aimed at a picture of Oxford College life in those good old days, one which if not, perhaps, quite historical, and with more of the hilarious and boisterous element than was quite typical of the time, is, at any rate, extremely amusing. The comedy was well received, and the acting was excellent throughout.

(Drawn by Saville Lumley.)

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

THE King of Spain, who has just left England, is among the recent subscribers to the unique edition of Shakespeare's Works now being issued by the Shakespeare Head Press, Stratford-on-Avon. Other well-known subscribers are the Empress of Germany, the Grand Duke Michel Alexandrovitch, the Grand Dukes of Hesse and of Baden, the President of the Swiss Republic, and Duc de Gramont, on the Continent; while at home the Duke of Devonshire, the Duke of Portland, the Duke of Buccleuch, Sir George Trevelyan, Sir Henry Irving, Mr. Sidney Lee, and Mr. E. S. Willard have signified their interest in the undertaking by securing copies of this interesting and handsome edition, of which the third volume has just been issued.

The Stratford Shakespeare.

* * *

ONE of the most important books of the season—indeed, of many seasons—is Mr. H. B. Walters' "History of Ancient Pottery," which has been published by Mr. Murray in two very handsome volumes, richly illustrated. The work is founded on the famous book of Dr. Samuel Birch, which was published in 1857 and reissued in 1873; but, as Mr. Walters points out, the last thirty years have not only enormously increased the amount of pottery that has been discovered, but have revolutionised the whole study of the subject. Greek pottery is, in a way, far more interesting than English, French, or even Chinese, because it can be regarded not only as a work of art, but as a work of history, folk-lore, and legend. How much, for instance, the modern study of Homer owes to the discoveries of ceramics made by the various schools of archæology at work on excavation in various parts of Greece, only specialists really know. Mr. Walters is the Assistant to the Keeper of Greek and Roman Antiquities in the British Museum; he has devoted a great deal of his life to the study of this subject, and his work is likely to merit the often-abused title of "monumental."

Ancient Pottery.

* * *

MESSRS. CASSELL have produced in the form of a large and very handsome quarto volume Milton's "Paradise Lost," with the famous illustrations by Gustave Doré. The work has been printed by Messrs. Cassell themselves, and the type is a joy to the eyes. Doré was not, as all are agreed, so much a great artist as a great visionary; and whatever the technical faults in these illustrations may be, there can be no question that they are full of ardent and appropriately terrific imagination. They are excellently reproduced, and though they perhaps never rise to the full height of the incomparable majesty of Milton's verse, they do much to express in line the mighty conceptions of the poet of Heaven and Hell. We have only one slight criticism to make. It was rather a pity, perhaps, to include footnotes, however useful, on pages of such beauty as these.

Milton and Doré.

* * *

THE prolific but ever-interesting Mr. Baring Gould has just published with Messrs. Methuen a "Book of South Wales," which is intended to be a companion to his "Book of North Wales." No better book could be found by those who intend to spend any part of their summer holidays in that beautiful and interesting country. Mr. Baring Gould is an ardent archæologist, and is quite at home in a country so full of strange romantic history as this. On every page the reader will find some quaint or stirring legend or story; and beautiful as any place may be, one never can really find one's self in complete sympathy with it until, thanks to Mr. Baring Gould or some other guide, one has learned something of the famous events that have happend there, its literary and artistic associations, and the legend that has grown up about it. The book is fully illustrated, and the frontispiece, which shows a view of Ogmore Castle, that most secluded and fascinating spot, has particularly taken our fancy. When we say secluded, we are referring to thirty years ago; but we understand that within recent years a railway has been run from Bridgend to Southerndown; and those stepping-stones across the Ogmore that were the delight and terror of the present writer's childhood may now, for all he knows, be thronged with visitors or threatened with destruction.

A Book on Wales.

* * *

MISS CLARA TSCHUDI has added one more to those fascinating biographies of Queens and Empresses which have made her name so well known in England. Maria Sophia, Queen of Naples, was daughter of the Bavarian House of Wittelsbach, and married in 1859 the heir to the throne of Naples. She was a sister of the Empress Elisabeth of Austria, who fell under the assassin's dagger on the shores of Lake Geneva in 1897, and of the Duchesse d'Alençon, who was burned to death in the fire at the bazaar in Paris only a few months before. She was a member, in fact, of an unfortunate family, and her own life-story, much of which is bound up with the story of the independence of Italy and of Naples, has been far from a fortunate or happy one. But throughout it, as Miss Tschudi points out in her very interesting narrative, she has preserved a youthful heart and a youthful spirit; and now, in her seclusion, the heroic defender of Gaeta preserves the radiant smile of the eighteen year old Queen of Naples. Miss Tschudi's book has been admirably translated from the Norwegian by Ethel Harriet Hearn, and is illustrated with a portrait, which we reproduce on this page.

Maria Sophia.

MARIA SOPHIA, QUEEN OF NAPLES

"The Heroine of Gaeta," from the frontispiece to Miss Clara Tschudi's new life of the "Duchessa di Castro" (Swan Sonnenschein).

* * *

ANYONE who wants a hearty laugh can find one without fail between the pages of Mr. G. F. Bradley's new novel, "The Marquis's Eye," published by Messrs. Smith, Elder, and Co. It is one of the few books that positively make one laugh out loud while reading it. The facts of the case are simply these: A very worthy and priggish young man, who squints, goes to Paris inter alia to have his squint removed by an operation. The French doctor substitutes for his patient's faulty eye the eye of a marquis, who is willing, for his own reasons, to sell it for a thousand pounds. Now that marquis's eye is a very dashing, roving, and eloquent eye; and it carries with it into the composition of its new owner some of the very sportive and worldly characteristics of its original possessor. The reader who can follow the unfortunate young man's adventures after the introduction of this foreign matter without splitting his sides, must be, as Mr. George Meredith would say, an agelast of the most hopeless description. It is pure farce, of course, but some of the funniest farce we have ever met with.

The Marquis's Eye.

* * *

TWO little books on chess have lately appeared. One is a reprint from the Manchester Guardian of the historic games played in the winter and early spring between the American, Mr. F. J. Marshall, and the Frenchman, M. D. Janowski, perhaps the most interesting encounter since that in which Lasker defeated Steinitz. The notes on each game are contributed by Mr. Marshall himself, whose portrait forms the frontispiece of the pamphlet. The publishers are Messrs. Kegan Paul. The other book is more for beginners, being the volume on chess in Mr. Henry Drane's admirable little A.B.C. Series. This book is the work of Mr. Howard Staunton, a name which needs no recommendation. It contains the elementary portion of his well-known "Chess-player's Handbook," and forms only another instance of the excellence of this most useful little series.

Chess

* * *

A "MEMORIAL OF NELSON" is to be published shortly by Messrs. Skeffington, with special reference to the Trafalgar Centenary. It has been written by the Rev. S. Baring Gould, and is richly illustrated. The book is dedicated by permission to Lord Charles Beresford.

A Memorial of Nelson.

* * *

AN extraordinary amount of public interest was evidenced in the discussion on "The Simple Life," which ran through a contemporary for nearly six weeks. Messrs. S. W. Partridge and Co. are about to issue in book form a carefully-edited selection of the more notable letters contributed to this remarkable discussion. Among the contributors are Miss Marie Corelli, Mme. Sarah Grand, "John Oliver Hobbes," the Queen of Roumania, Lady Archibald Campbell, Mr. W. Pett Ridge, the Bishop of London, Sir A. Conan Doyle, Sir Lewis Morris, Sir James Crichton Browne, Rev. S. Baring Gould, and many other distinguished writers.

The Simple Life.

---

BOOKS TO READ.

Who Giveth this Woman? by William Le Queux. (Hodder and Stoughton.)
The Regent of the Roués, by Lieutenant-Colonel Andrew C. P. Haggard. (Hutchinson.)
The Times History of the War in South Africa, Vol. III. (Sampson Low, Marston.)
My Garden in the City of Gardens. A Memory, with illustrations. (Lane.)
G. F. Watts, Reminiscences, by Mrs. Russell Barrington. (Allen.)
Maria Sophia, Queen of Naples, by Clara Tschudi. Translated from the Norwegian by Ethel Harriet Hearn. (Sonnenschein.)
Grand Relations, a Rustic Comedy, by J. S. Fletcher. (Unwin.)
A Grand Duke of Russia, a Story of the Upheaval, by Fred Whishaw. (White.)
The Marquis's Eye, by G. F. Bradby. (Smith, Elder.)
The Complete Golfer, by Harry Vardon. (Methuen.)

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES.

Johnson and Logan.

THE "ROXBURGH."

The new cruiser "Roxburgh," which recently completed her official speed trials in the Clyde with most satisfactory results. The "Roxburgh" maintained an average speed of 23·6 knots, the highest yet attained by a cruiser of the "Devonshire" class.

Johnson and Logan.

THE "HAMPSHIRE."

The cruiser "Hampshire," which was recently completed at Newcastle-on-Tyne, is one of the latest additions to the British Fleet. Her gun trials, which were conducted in the Channel, gave very satisfactory results.

Digitized by Google

Royal Leamington: The Historical Regent Hotel.

THE OLD PUMP-ROOM IN THE HIGH STREET, LEAMINGTON SPA.

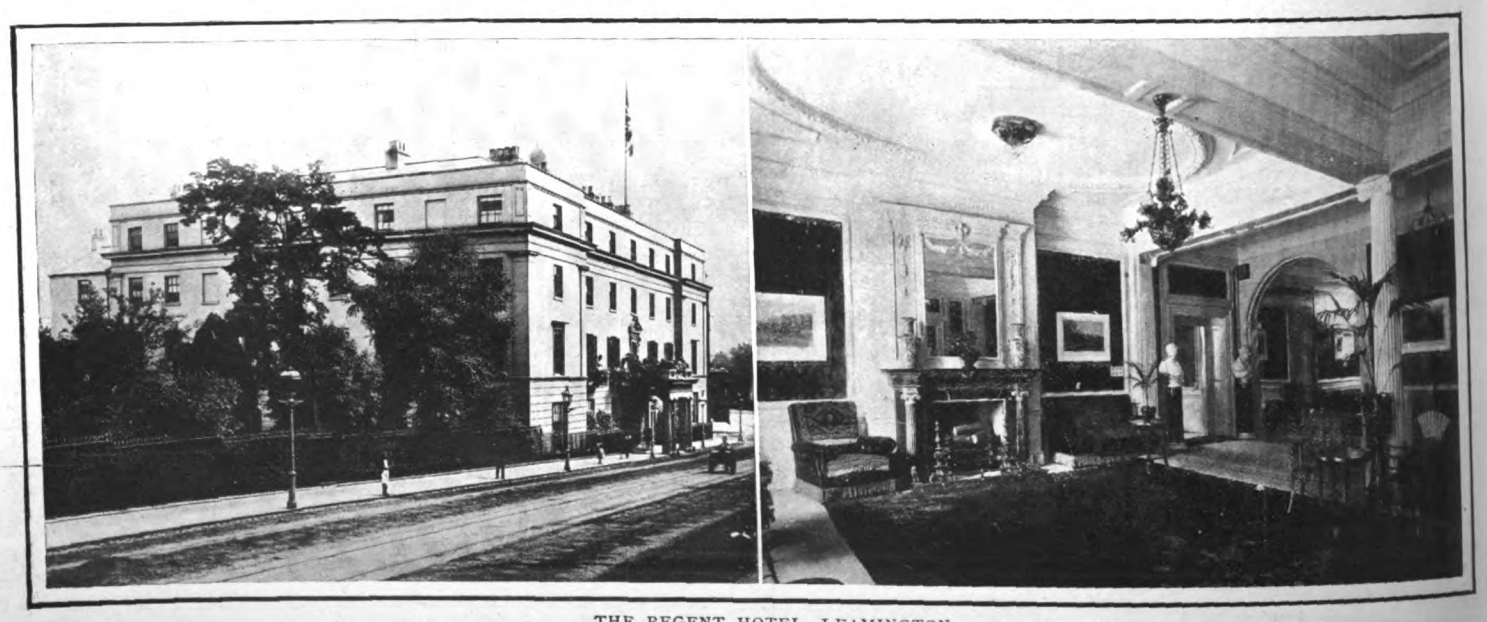
Both for drinking and bathing, the saline waters of Leamington are held in high esteem, and since the discovery of the springs the picturesque town has been the centre of attraction for visitors from all quarters of the globe.

THERE are probably few, if any, towns within such easy reach of the metropolis that can compare with Leamington in point of general interest and attractiveness. It is, perhaps, one of the very first places after London to which the average American is attracted when visiting this country. Situated in the heart of the beautiful Shakespeare country—Stratford-on-Avon is less than ten miles distant, while Kenilworth and Warwick are quite close at hand—the Great Western Company will run you down there in under a couple of hours from Paddington. But Leamington's attractions do not by any means end here. The town itself contains mineral springs of no mean order, and of these four are still in use at the present time. To this factor alone is due its raison d'etre as a watering-place and present prosperous and flourishing condition.

Among the earlier visitors to this quiet Warwickshire watering-place was the King of Saxony, who arrived there in the month of June, 1844. It is said that the King derived great benefits from his cure, and before taking his departure from the old Regent Hotel remarked to Mr. Geffrey, its then proprietor, "I have never been in so comfortable a hotel in my life." This same hotel, which has been a famous landmark in Leamington during no fewer than four reigns, during which time it has passed through many hands, has just been almost entirely remodelled and refurnished, and brought thoroughly up to date. In a word, it is now certainly one of the most comfortable hotels to be found anywhere outside of London. The original building first saw the light eighty-six years ago, when scarcely a month after its opening, following the visit of the Prince Regent, it acquired its present name. This event proved a happy augury, for in the following year this Royal sponsor became King of England, and the Regent Hotel at once took its place as "one of the most splendid, complete, and best-conducted establishments of the kind in Europe."

For sixty years the Regent was a favourite resort of the élite, during which time it afforded accommodation to many crowned heads. Among its illustrious visitors may be mentioned Queen Victoria and her mother, the Duchess of Kent, the King of Saxony, the Empress Eugenie, their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Gloucester and Princess Augusta Sophia, his Royal Highness Prince George of Cambridge, his Imperial Highness the Grand Duke Constantine of Russia, his Royal Highness Prince Waldemar of Prussia, and an interminable string of "Serene Highnesses" from the petty States of Prussia, Mehemet Ali, Prince Clary of Austria, Princess Dolgerouchi, Prince Paul Esterhazy, Prince Gagarin (Prime Minister to the Emperor of Russia), Prince and Princess Schwartzenberg, Prince Louis Napoleon, together with members of the ducal houses of Wellington, Argyle, Grafton, Northumberland, Hamilton and Brandon, Richmond, Marlborough, Montrose, Somerset, Bedford, Newcastle, Leeds, etc. To the foregoing may be added other celebrities such as Longfellow, Jenny Lind, Sir Robert Peel, Harrison Ainsworth, and Balfe. But with these illustrious guests departed the glory and fame of the Regent. In a word the old place had become sadly out of date.

In 1880 a strong effort was made to resuscitate this historical hostelry, but without success. Recently it was once more put up for auction, and found a purchaser in Mr. John Cridlan, who secured the place on favourable terms. Mr. Cridlan, who is a shrewd man of business, quickly realised the need in Leamington for a really first-class hotel, and at once set to work to thoroughly remodel the place. In the work of just over a twelvemonth he has wrought wonders, and no one acquainted with the original would hardly believe that it were possible to have converted it into so comfortable and roomy a hotel as the new Regent. Leamington being situated in the centre of a district long famous for its hunting, before Somerville wrote "The Chase," the new proprietor has thoughtfully provided stabling for ninety horses. Then, again, he that cares to motor down will find a very complete garage, where repairs of all kinds can be executed. The reception, dining-rooms, and bedrooms at once indicate the good taste of the new proprietor, while the smokeroom with its wainscot, lately taken from the old St. James's Hall, has an air of great comfort. In the ballroom there is a curiosity in the shape of the electroliers which were bought at the recent sale at Anglesey Castle.



THE REGENT HOTEL, LEAMINGTON.

One of the oldest landmarks in the town. Recently it passed into the hands of a well-known capitalist, who has entirely remodelled and refurnished the establishment. The hotel, originally built in 1819, was for some sixty or seventy years a favourite resort of the élite of English and Continental Society, and among others it has sheltered a King of Saxony, Queen Victoria and her mother, the Duchess of Kent, and the Empress Eugenie.

Digitized by Google

BENGER'S FOOD

For INFANTS and INVALIDS.

Benger's Food with Milk forms a dainty, delicious and most easily digested cream.

"Retained when all other foods are rejected." London Medical Record.

Benger's Food is sold in tins by chemists, etc., everywhere.

DEWAR'S WHISKY

A GUID AULD SCOTCH DRINK

ALWAYS READY FOR USE. NEVER REQUIRES GRINDING.

KROPP RAZOR

Each Razor in a Case.

BLACK HANDLES, 5/6. IVORY HANDLES, 7/6.

A PLEASURE TO USE.

ROBINSON & CLEAVER, LD., BELFAST.

REGENT ST. & CHEAPSIDE, LONDON; and LIVERPOOL.

Manufacturers to His Majesty the King and H.R.H. the Princess of Wales.

Carriage paid on orders of 20s. upwards in the United Kingdom.

IRISH Collars—Gentlemen's 4-fold, from 4/11 per doz.
Cuffs—For Ladies or Gentlemen, from 5/11 per doz.

COLLARS, CUFFS, AND SHIRTS.

Samples and Illustrated Price Lists Post Free.

Shirts—Fine Quality Long-cloth, with 4-fold pure Linen Fronts and Cuffs, 35/6 per half-doz. (to measure, 2/- extra).

Old Shirts made good as New with good Materials in neckband, cuffs, and front for 14/- the half-doz.

N.B.—To prevent delay all Letter Orders and Enquiries for Samples of above goods should be sent direct to Belfast.

GRANDE·MAISON·DE·BLANC

PARIS. 6, BOULEVARD DES CAPUCINES.

LONDON, W. 62, NEW BOND STREET.

(No Branch in America)

Table & Bed Linen, Handkf's, etc.

Woven by Hand on our own Looms.

LADIES' LINGERIE

LOUVET Frères, Proprietors. O. BOYER, Director, formerly of New York.

Digitized by Google

DECORATED LONDON.

IN spite of the most unfortunately dull and depressing weather which prevailed during the King of Spain's visit to this country, the decorations on the various routes made a brave show; and more especially this was the case in some of the main business arteries, where the great merchant princes and commercial magnates made the very best of their opportunity. Oxford Street was a blaze of colour, and one of the most tastefully decorated establishments was that of Messrs. Waring, where the long gallery on the first floor level was crowded with fair Englishwomen anxious to obtain a glimpse of the youthful monarch. Further Citywards, the private decorations were on a very lavish and extensive scale, and in Holborn, especially, the large firms had taken an immense amount of time and trouble in making their establishments look smart in honour of the Royal visitor. Messrs. Buchanan's fine building was one of the most noticeable on the route, and was decorated from top to toe in the hand-somest manner, the lofty mast with its fluttering bannerets forming a fine finish to the whole scheme. Further on, in the City itself, the display of Venetian masts, festoons, and flags was simply gorgeous; indeed, the whole of the arrangement and design of the decorations on the route reflect the highest credit on all concerned.

Copyright.

THE OFFICES OF MESSRS. JAMES BUCHANAN AND CO., HOLBORN BARS
One of the most tastefully-decorated buildings on the route of the procession.

One of the most interesting features of the Royal visit to the Guildhall was the presentation to the young King of a gold casket, by the Corporation of the City of London. The casket, which was a replica of a Spanish treasure-chest, was a remarkably fine piece of workmanship, bearing upon its front panel the inscription "From the City of London to his Majesty Alfonso XIII., King of Spain. Guildhall, London, June 7, 1905." The top of the box was adorned with the national emblems of England and Spain, in diamonds; and the casket was supported on a silver-gilt plinth, with a winged dragon at each corner. Messrs. Skinner were the jewellers responsible for the design and the production.

Copyright.

THE PREMISES OF MESSRS. WARING IN OXFORD STREET
Showing the accommodation for spectators and the well-designed scheme of decoration.

Digitized by Google

FOR THE RACES.

LEATHER-COVERED
WALKING STICKS & UMBRELLAS.

With Pencil Attachment. In Gold or Silver Gilt

Manufactured by—

BRIGG & SONS,
5, ST. JAMES'S STREET, S.W.,
or 33, Avenue de l'Opera, PARIS.

ESTABLISHED 1836.

IS YOUR PENCIL A KOH-I-NOOR OR ONLY AN IMITATION?

They Glide along beautifully Hardtmuth's
KOH-I-NOOR
P ENCILS.

In Seventeen Degrees for all Pencil Purposes. Pronounced best by Artists, Students, Teachers, and Business Men. They are famed for their consistent reliability and excellence.

Of Stationers, Artists' Colourmen, and Photographic Dealers. A Dainty Illustrated Booklet, in Colours, post free from

L. & C. HARDTMUTH,
12, Golden Lane, London, E.C.

The Crown Stopper ensures Perfection.
Look for the Crown Stopper on every bottle of
CROWN LAVENDER SALTS.
A delightfully refreshing addition to the toilet.
Of all Chemists, 1/- and 2/-, or direct, 1/2 and 2/3, post free.
The Crown Perfumery Co.
108, Fore Street, London.
Paris. New York.

MOTHS RUIN FURS AND BLANKETS
USE
KEATING'S POWDER
KILLS MOTHS, BEETLES & FLEAS
Tins 3d., 6d. & 1/-

Preserve your Teeth!
BY USING FRAGRANT
FLORILINE

It imparts a
FRAGRANCE TO THE BREATH
that is rare and delightful,
IT PREVENTS ALL TARTAR and COMPLETELY ARRESTS DECAY.
IS THE CHOICEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.
PRICE Per bottle 2/6 in case.
SOLD EVERYWHERE. THE ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd., Proprietors.
33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE TOOTH-POWDER.
For use with or without FLORILINE.
1/- per large Jar.

FDB
FREEMANS' DARVEL BAY
SEGARS

"Discriminating smokers will be well advised in trying these delightful weeds."—THE KING.

3d. each, 5 for 1/-, 9/6 per Box of 50.
OF ALL PRINCIPAL DEALERS.

TRADE MARK

If any difficulty is found in obtaining these Segars, a Sample Box of five, together with the name of the nearest Agent, can be obtained by sending 1/- to the Manufacturers: J. R. FREEMAN & SON, London, N., or Grangetown, Cardiff.

OONNOISSEURS SMOKE
TEOFANI'S
HIGH-CLASS
CIGARETTES.
TEOFANI'S Cigarettes receive the Highest Awards at all International Exhibitions, and are Sold by Leading Purveyors throughout the WORLD.
TEOFANI & CO., LONDON.

A merciful man is merciful to his face. He uses Williams' Shaving Soap.

Williams' Shaving Sticks and Tablets sold everywhere. Trial sample for 1d. stamp to pay postage. Write for Free booklet, "How to Shave."
The J. B. Williams Co.,
65 Great Russell St., London.

BIRKBECK BANK
ESTABLISHED 1851.
Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.
Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.
Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

HANSEN'S
UNKET
TABLETS.
A SEASONABLE CHANCE.
Hansen's Junket Tablets are double the value of the next best. They make junket better than any other preparation and are always reliable. Housewives everywhere are adding this delicious dish to the day's menu. Be sure you get Hansen's.
Sold by all Grocers, Chemists, etc., in Glass Tubes, containing 24 Tablets, each sufficient to make a quart of Junket. Sample Tube and Book of over 30 Recipes, 6d. post free from Hansen's Depot, 77, St. Thomas's Street, London, S.E.

SULPHOLINE SKIN LOTION.
Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, Entirely fade away.

THE CLOTH FOR GOLF SUITS.
"Hydea"
is the best English cloth—made of the best English wool—grown on the HYDE Farm, Gloucestershire. It is delightfully soft and elastic—absolutely the best for sportsmen—most durable for out-o'-doors—most handsome for town suits—long thread—refined finish.
THE KING WEARS IT,
and pays no more than you—because there's only one quality at one price. "HYDEA" is stamped on every two yards of the selvedge—that's how you may know it—that, and its excellent surface! Send for FREE Booklet:—
APPERLY, CURTIS & Co., Ltd.,
Dudbridge Mills, Stroud, West of England.

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

WATERLOO MEDALS—BRITISH AND FOREIGN. THE LAST SURVIVORS OF WELLINGTON'S ARMY.

IT is by no means an unfortunate coincidence that the publication of Mr. Henry Gaskell's elaborate catalogue of his unrivalled collection of Waterloo medals—"British, Hanoverian, and others"—should have appeared within a few weeks of the ninetieth anniversary of the "Battle of Giants." Wellington and Waterloo collectors are fairly numerous, and Mr. Gaskell's book will be cordially welcomed by many readers who are not medallists. The anniversary of to-morrow (Sunday, June 18) falls on the same day of the week as that on which Napoleon's power was finally broken, and the trophies now reposing in Mr. Gaskell's cabinets were won. The interest of the book is very materially enhanced by a chapter, with many illustrations, on the survivors of Waterloo, contributed by Mr. Kynaston Gaskell. It is from this that the portrait of the late Lieutenant-Colonel William Hewett, the last surviving Waterloo officer, who died on December 26, 1891, in his ninety-sixth year, is now reproduced. The last of the combatants, Private Samuel Gibson, had died eleven days previously at the patriarchal age of 101. Two persons—non-combatants—who claim to have witnessed the battle are, however, still living. Portraits of both have appeared in THE KING. One of these is Mr. John F. Robinson, who now resides in Ballina, N.S.W. The other, Mme. Marie Thérèse Dupuis of Chapelle-lez-Charleroi, celebrated her 103rd birthday on the 6th ult. She was able to attend the unveiling of the French Memorial last year, and appeared to enjoy excellent health.

Mr. Gaskell begins his book with a short essay on military awards generally, and an estimate of the contending forces of Napoleon and Wellington. Few people are probably aware that the first medal conferred in England for services in the field was given by Charles I. in 1643 to those soldiers who might distinguish themselves in "forlorn hopes." Mr. Gaskell describes at length the copper Waterloo medal struck by T. Wyon, jun., for the "rank and file," but never issued, as it was (after a passing economical fit apparently) finally decided that silver should be uniformly adopted for every class of combatant. Then came a large silver medal, ultimately abandoned as too weighty, and at last the one now illustrated, which was issued after a period of unjustifiable delay, to every man present at Quatre Bras on the 16th, the engagement of the 17th, or at Waterloo on June 18, 1815. Included in this distribution were the troops of the King's German Legion, forming part, as they did, of the British Army. It seems also to have been resolved that a Waterloo medal should be "presented" to certain persons in honour of the great event. The chosen recipients were all, more or less, associated with those who took a leading part in the battle. Mr. Gaskell possesses medals belonging to this category, awarded to the Duke of Kent, the Countess of Mornington (Wellington's mother), and the Dowager-

Obverse. Reverse.

BRITISH AND KING'S GERMAN LEGION WATERLOO MEDAL.

Duchess of Beaufort, who had no less than three sons in the battle, viz., Lords Edward, Fitz Roy, and John Somerset. The second afterwards became Lord Raglan. In the Gaskell collection are to be found Waterloo medals, given either to officers or men of nearly every regiment engaged in the battle, and their present owner has often some interesting information to give of the original possessor. Here is an instance of this. Mr. Gaskell has acquired the medal of Lieutenant R. P. Campbell, of the 7th Foot, who, on June 18, 1815, acted as Aide-de-Camp to Major-General F. Adam, commanding the 3rd Brigade under Lieutenant-General Sir H. Clinton, G.C.B. General Adam's widow lived to see the beginning of the twentieth century, and his son still belongs to the Diplomatic Service. According to Siborne, Campbell fired the last gun on the evening of June 18, which he seems to have captured from the French in the general confusion, and then turned on the retreating masses. Lieutenant Campbell died ten years subsequently a Captain in the Ceylon Rifles. The medal of Surgeon James Hagan of the 2nd Battalion of the 59th Foot had a strange history. It was won by Mr. Hagan for services performed as one of the reserved forces at Hal, some miles from the scene of action. Before the medal was issued he had perished in the wreck of the "Seahorse" transport, so it was sent to his relations. This ill-fated vessel was proceeding from Dover to Ireland in January, 1816, when it was driven ashore during a heavy gale in Tramore Bay, County Waterford. Of 389 officers, non-commissioned officers, and men there were only four survivors. Mr. Gaskell has secured no less than 132 Waterloo medals. It is difficult to surmise what has become of the 45,000 (roughly speaking) which should have been issued. Messrs. Spink, from whom Mr. Gaskell's book may be obtained, make a special feature of Waterloo medals and trophies. Quite recently the medals and decorations of Count d'Alten, a combatant of 1815, were purchased by the German Government for over £800, Messrs. Spink being the next bidders.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL WILLIAM HEWETT

Who died on December 26, 1891, in his 96th year, was the last surviving Waterloo officer.

Probably the finest collection of Waterloo relics of every description—arms, helmets, uniforms, portraits, etc.—is that began many years ago by Sergeant-Major Cotton (himself a Waterloo veteran), and continued by his descendants and successors, the proprietors of the Hotel du Musée, in the very centre of the battlefield. Even after the lapse of ninety years, trees still riddled by bullets are occasionally cut down, while cannon balls, military buttons, swords, etc., are not unfrequently turned up by the ploughshare. The greater part of the mementoes offered to unsuspecting English and American visitors by guides and others are of pure Birmingham origin. False Waterloo bullets and buttons are as abundant as spurious toby jugs and sham Battersea boxes. There is a regular season for their importation and sowing. A twelve month or more in the ground gives them the respectable appearance of age, and helps to veil the deception practised. The owners of the Cotton collection have refused more than one tempting offer to transfer their treasures to the other side of the Atlantic. The due appraisement of bullet-pierced skulls and thigh bones shattered by grape shot would somewhat puzzle the officials of the American Custom Houses.

The Waterloo medal (owing to the great pressure bought to bear on the authorities by the Duke of Wellington) was issued in 1816; those for Trafalgar and the Peninsula were not granted until the first years of the reign of Queen Victoria. The average value of a Waterloo medal to-day is about 30s. or £2. The more valuable medals are those belonging to regiments in which a great number of casualties occurred. In some instances they are worth £6 or £7.

B.

Obverse. Reverse.

HANOVERIAN WATERLOO MEDAL.

Obverse. Reverse.

SAXE-GOTHA ALTENBURG WATERLOO MEDAL.

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

hold and offer for sale specimens of the

HIGHEST QUALITY

OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE

as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.

EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.

AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.

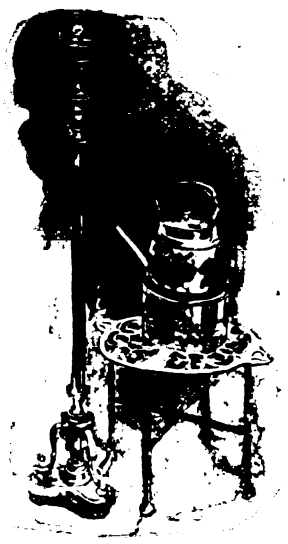
(Two hours from Paddington.)



Old Brass Stand and Lamp.

THE MISSES

H. & I. WOOLLAN

(Under Royal Patronage)

are showing a

UNIQUE

Collection of

Antiques.

Chippendale, Sheraton, and Hepplewhite Furniture. . . Worcester and Lowestoft Services. Lace, Glass, etc.

Showrooms: First Floor.

28, BROOK STREET, GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

PENNY—HENRY III.

RARE COINS & MEDALS

(AT MODERATE PRICES)

SPINK & SON LTD.

17 & 18, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.

AUTOGRAPHS—HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS.

The oldest Dealers in Europe. For Catalogues, issued monthly, and all information write at once to

M. NOEL CHARAVAY,
3, RUE DE FURSTENBERG, PARIS,

where the "AMATEUR DES AUTOGRAPHES," a valuable Monthly Publication, may also be obtained.

JAMES TREGASKIS,

"The Caxton Head," 232, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.

RARE BOOKS,
MEDIÆVAL MANUSCRIPTS,
DOCUMENTS OF LITERARY & HISTORICAL INTEREST,
ORIGINAL DRAWINGS,
ENGRAVINGS,
AMERICANA,
CURIOSITIES,
ANTIQUITIES,
OBJECTS OF ART.

Catalogues Price Sixpence.

PORTRAITS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.

ENGLISH—FOREIGN—AMERICAN.

RARE ENGRAVINGS OF ALL SORTS.

WRITE FOR CATALOGUES OR VISIT THE SHOWROOMS OF

M. GODEFROY MAYER,
41, RUE BLANCHE, PARIS.

WEYMOUTH, DORSET.

CURIOSITY SHOP.

Finest collection of Genuine Curios in West of England.

Amongst other items on sale—Unique Inlaid Escritoire-Cabinet formerly property of Frederick the Great, presented by successor to Sir Evan Nepean, Secretary of Admiralty at time of Trafalgar.

BAKER, 2, Charlotte Row, Close Old Palace George III.

DESCRIBED BY MADAME D'ARBLAY.

BATH.

GEORGE GREGORY,

BOOKSELLER, Etc.

Write for Catalogues. An inspection of Mr. Gregory's shop should not be omitted by any visitor to Bath. Speciality—Americana. Old Bath. Colour-plate books. Autographs.

Address: 5, ARGYLE STREET.

Bookbinding.—The Bedford Bindery.

OLD-ESTABLISHED FIRM.

VERY MODERATE PRICES. Special attention paid to extra-illustrated works.

SPECIMENS ON VIEW.

G. F. AYLING, 1A, CAMBRIDGE ST., EDGWARE ROAD, W.

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

For Spaces in the Register apply to "THE EDITOR."

WANTED.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

Following autograph letters wanted: — Beau Brummel, Captain Gronow, Frederica, Duchess of York, Mary Anne Clarke. Good prices given.—823, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Letters of Mrs. Delaney to Mrs. Frances Hamilton, 1 vol., small 8vo, with silhouette portrait, First edition. £1 offered. — 824, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Catalogues, in good condition, of the Naval Exhibition at Chelsea in 1891.—167, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Guides and Histories of the Isle of Wight.—168, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Boxiana, vols. IV. and V., in boards. 30/- each offered.—169, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Almanach de Gotha, 1814. £4 offered.—170, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old Dorset Bank Notes prior to 1816. Time Tables of Great Western Railway prior to 1847.—171, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Sporting Magazine, vol. 30, April-Sept., 1807, and vol. 37 (1810 and 1811). Good price offered.—172, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Jest Books, with coloured plates.—173, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Battersea Boxes, with views of Bath and Bristol Hot Wells.—520, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old XIVth or XVth Century Stained Glass. Good specimens.—521, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

China, Glass, Earthenware—continued.

Worcester China, Binn's "Century of Potting." Reports invited. 12/6 offered.—522, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Swansea China, marked pieces, plates or vases.—523, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Naval Prints published by any of the following:—C. Sheppard, 74, Little Britain; C. Taylor, Holborn (date 1791); J. Fairburn, 110 and 146, Minories (1800-1838); Tabart and Co., London; E. Rushton, Paradise Street, Liverpool; W. Belch, Bridge Street, Boro'; I. Houlston, Strand; R. Sly, 41, Union Street, Somers Town; J. Marshall, Aldermary Churchyard, London.—237, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good Impressions with good margins of engravings of old London, especially Covent Garden, the Temple, the Strand, Lincoln's Inn.—249, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Views of Bath, Six, by Samuel Cousins. £4 offered. Cir. 1776.—250, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old Views of the Commanderie at Worcester, or MSS. or Tracts relating to.—251, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Portrait of Bishop Conybeare, of Bristol, 1756. 4to. 7/- offered.—252, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Portrait, Bubb Dodington, Lord Melcombe. Also autograph letter.—254, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Boxing. Small old portraits, Cribb and Molyneux.—255, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

TAPESTRY, FURNITURE, Etc.

A good Specimen of Rock Tapestry. Period about 1640.—410, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

XVIIIth Century Mantel Glass. Must be in three panels, and in good condition.—411, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Original XVIIIth Century Drawings of Bath or Brighton. Also Caricatures relating to.—221A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Large coloured print of Blanchard in "The Maid of the Mill." What offers? From "Bell's Library."—222A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

A fine copy of Natte's Bath, or would accept copy of Genest's British Stage, or good extra illustrated Life of Garrick.—129A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Eyton's "Antiquities of Shropshire," in good condition. Scarce.—130A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Bell's British Poets. Complete Set.—131A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

A very fine old Staffordshire Dinner Service of 160 pieces, in perfect condition. Crown Derby pattern, marked with crown. Sample plate on approval. Deposit.—520A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Staffordshire Ware, Busts of famous people.—521A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Life of Mrs. Frances Sheridan. Collection of Portraits from Oxberry.—744A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Ancient Greek, Roman, English, Scotch, Irish Gold and Silver Coins.—745A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

To Americans in London.—Antiquities, Greek, Roman and Mediæval Pottery, Fine Collection of Old English Pottery and Figures, China, Oil Paintings, Prints, Coins, Flint Implements, Tinder Boxes, Savage Weapons, and General Antiquities for disposal; part of my private collection; single specimens or otherwise. An inspection invited.—746A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

ONE of the most thoroughly useful competitions ever organised by the Automobile Club will be the Light Delivery Van Trials, which are to be held in the coming autumn, commencing on September 19. The vehicles will be divided into four classes: A, for vans designed to carry a load not exceeding 5-cwt.; B, for loads not exceeding 10-cwt.; C, for loads up to 1 ton; and D, for loads up to 1½ tons. The trials will consist of 30 days' service of each vehicle under conditions as nearly approaching their normal work as possible, followed by an examination by the judges. The daily mileage for classes A and B will be 80 miles, the heavier vehicles in classes C and D being required to cover only 60 miles.

* * *

A maximum period of 30-min. each morning and evening will be allowed for replenishment and adjustments, and all involuntary stops on the road will be recorded by the observers. The awards will take into consideration the performances of the vehicles under a number of heads, such as silence, durability, reliability, price, ease of manipulation, restarting on hills, ease of repairs, brakes, consumption of fuel, etc. There is little doubt that the trials, if satisfactory in their results, will give great impetus to the employment of the light delivery van, which has hitherto been a somewhat neglected side of the automobile movement.

* * *

The awards in the Midland Automobile Club's hill-climb, held on June 3 in the private grounds of Middle Hill House, Broadway, have been published. A 10-h.p. De Dion was first, with a 8-h.p. Rover second, the 30-h.p. Daimler third, and a 6-h.p. Wolseley fourth. These results, of course, are based on the handicap formula, the actual fastest time in the competition being achieved by two Daimlers and a 20-h.p. Ariel. The cup offered by the club goes to Mr. H. P. Barker, the owner and driver of the De Dion.

* * *

The Marine Motor Club has already arranged a programme for this year, which includes the following events: July 25, races at Plymouth; August 1, Eliminating Trials for the British International Cup off Bembridge, which will be followed by a handicap for bonâ fide cruisers, and races for the 25-ft. and 30-ft. restricted M.M.A. classes; August 2 and August 3, Reliability Trials in Southampton Water; August 8 (subject to alteration), regatta in connection with the visit of the French Fleet. Last week in August, Windermere Regatta; races for the 40-ft. open racing class, and also for the 25-ft. and 30-ft. restricted M.M.A. classes, together with a handicap for cruisers. The club now numbers over 100 members.

* * *

The Daimler Company seems likely to make a clean sweep of the hill-climbing competition this season. At the Huddersfield Automobile Club hill-climb on May 27 the 28-h.p. Daimler made the fastest time. On the same day, at Kettleby Hill, the 30-h.p. Daimler also made the best time, a 28—36-h.p. Daimler being second. On Saturday, June 3, the 30-h.p. Daimler, as we have already stated, made the fastest time in the Midland Automobile Club's hill-climbing contest at Broadway. The merits of the Daimler by no means stop at hill-climbing, as, in spite of its high power, there is no car on the market easier to drive, either in traffic or on the high road, or one whose reliability is more certain under the most trying circumstances.

* * *

The imports of foreign-built motor-cars continue to increase in a manner which indicates that our manufacturers are as yet totally unable to cope with the demand in this country for high-class automobiles. During the past month 728 cars were imported from abroad, of a value of £327,008, as compared with 530 cars, valued at £227,129, for the corresponding month of 1904. For the five months ending May 31 last, the figures are 2,625 cars, of a value of £1,136,667, while the total motor imports, including cyles and parts, amount to £1,488,530, or an increase of nearly £500,000 over the same period in 1904.

* * *

The stopping tests carried out last week at the Crystal Palace between motor-cars and horse-drawn vehicles, should have an excellent effect on the minds of the public, as they demonstrated once more in a most conclusive manner that a motor-car pulls up in about a third of the distance required by a horse-drawn vehicle proceeding at the same speed. The tests were conducted on perfectly fair lines, and the conditions of the road surface were distinctly in favour of the horse. A 15-h.p. Napier, travelling at 13·84 miles an hour, pulled up in 14-ft. 3-in., while a butcher's cart at the same speed required 38-ft. 5-in. before it came to rest. A 15-h.p. De Dion, at 11 miles, stopped in less than 8-ft., while a London hansom cab took 33½-ft. The other tests showed in an equally convincing manner the immense superiority of the motor in stopping power.

W. A. Rouch.

THE LADIES' AUTOMOBILE CLUB IN BATTERSEA PARK.
Mrs. Bruce Porter's 14-h.p. Daimler is the leading car.

Digitized by Google

FOUR RECENT ARIEL SUCCESSES.

THE GOLD MEDAL. Scottish Reliability Trials.

THE SILVER CUP. Petrol Consumption Trials. Wolverhampton and District A. C.

THE ALL-BRITISH ARIEL CAR.

FASTEST TIME, GATACRE HILL CLIMB. Wolverhampton and District A. C.

International Cup Race. Eliminating Trials. ARIEL MOTOR CYCLE Fastest Time.

EARLY DELIVERY OF THE 20-25 h.p. Model. A Splendid Touring Car.

Free trials by appointment.

Illustrated particulars post free.

The ARIEL MOTOR CO., Ltd.,
127-130, LONG ACRE, LONDON, W.C.

A. J. W.

HUMBER

CYCLES ALL OVER THE COUNTRY.
"They make Life's Journeys easy."
Prices: £8 8s. to £18 18s.
Catalogues post free from
HUMBER, Ltd., BEESTON (Notts) and COVENTRY.
LONDON: 32, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.
Depots—Manchester, Nottingham, Liverpool, Birmingham, Southampton
Agents Everywhere.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS,
CENTRAL WALES.

The British Nauheim.

An Ideal Spa for the Treatment of Heart Disease, Gout, and Rheumatism.

THE LAKE HOTEL.

A first-class Hotel situated in extensive Private Grounds and lighted throughout with Electricity.

Telegraphic Address, "BARIUM," LLANGAMMARCH WELLS. Apply MANAGEMENT.

Golf Club within five minutes' walk.

LEAMINGTON SPA.
REGENT HOTEL.

Garage and Resident Engineer.

ENTIRELY RECONSTRUCTED.

DECORATIONS BY MAPLE.

Electric Light, Telephones in Every Room. Lift. Stabling for 90 Horses.

APPLY FOR TARIFF

ORIENT-PACIFIC ## LINE.

Delightful PLEASURE CRUISES to

NORWAY

by the twin-screw ss. OPHIR, 6,914 tons, 10,000 h.p.

SAILINGS, JUNE 24, JULY 8, 22, AUG. 5, 19

13 DAYS for £12 12 0 and upwards.

Managers, F. Green & Co., and Anderson, Anderson & Co., Fenchurch Avenue. For passage apply to the latter firm at 5, Fenchurch Avenue, E.C., or to the West End Branch Office, 28, Cockspur Street, S.W.

Digitized by Google

A Paris Toilette.

A GREY AND BLACK STRIPED WOOLLEN TAILOR-MADE COSTUME, FRONT OF EMBROIDERED PEARL-GREY CLOTH. MAISON REDFERN.

(From a photograph by Reutlinger.)

Digitized by Google

IF YOU ARE BUYING

Any kind of Requisite for Travelling, it will pay you to send for

W. H. SMITH'S

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF

PORTMANTEAUX
TRUNKS
BAGS

And every description of Leather Goods and Travelling Requisites for Home and the Colonies.

Opposite the Abbey, BATH.

Maker of the ROSEBERY HAT BOX.

LORD ROSEBERY says: "It is an ingenious and useful Hat Box."

ARE YOU ALIVE

to the fact that thousands of people who were inveterate smokers of extensively advertised cheap paper cigarettes (which are so harmful to the health) have discontinued same, and are now smoking

FLOR DE DINDIGUL

CIGARETTES (All Tobacco Leaf—No Paper.)

They are far more satisfying, mild, delightful in flavour, pure, and last much longer than ordinary paper cigarettes. Doctors strongly recommend them. These delightful Whiffs are on sale everywhere. 1d. each, 8/- per 100. Awarded 10 Gold Medals for excellence.

Importer: BEWLAY, 49, STRAND, LONDON.
Established 125 Years.

BORWICK'S

5 GOLD MEDALS

FOR MAKING BREAD, CAKES & PASTRY

BAKING POWDER

GUARANTEED PURE & WHOLESOME

TOOTH-ACHE

CURED INSTANTLY BY

BUNTER'S NERVINE

Prevents Decay. Saves Extraction. Sleepless Nights Prevented.

Neuralgic Headaches and all Nerve Pains removed by BUNTER'S NERVINE. All Chemists, 1s. 1½d., or on receipt of stamps to 13, St. George Street, Norwich.

THE CHARING CROSS BANK. ESTABLISHED 1870.
119 and 120, BISHOPSGATE ST. WITHIN, E.C.
and 28, BEDFORD ST., CHARING CROSS, London.
Assets, £694,403. Liabilities, £372,291. Surplus, £322,112.
Loans of £30 to £2,000 granted at a few hours' notice in town or country, on mortgage of furniture, trade and farm stock, plant, crops, etc., without removal. Also on deeds, policies, and reversions. Distance no object. Easy terms.
2½ per cent. allowed on Current account balances.
DEPOSITS of £10 and upwards received on terms as under.
Subject to 3 months' Notice of Withdrawal, 5 per cent. per annum.
" 6 " " 6 " "
" 12 " " 7 " "
Special terms for longer periods. Interest paid quarterly. The Terminable Deposit Bonds pay nearly 9 per cent., and are a safe investment. Write or call for Prospectus.
A. WILLIAMS, H. J. TALL, } Joint Managers.

Beauty.

Icilma Fluor Cream prevents the skin from shining when warm, checks the growth of superfluous hair, and suppresses the abuse of powder. No woman can hope to preserve free from lines a delicate transparent complexion without Nature's marvellous skin tonic Icilma. Send 2d. stamps for two samples (different scents). ICILMA CO., Ltd. (Dept. 43), 142, Gray's Inn Road, London, W.C.

THE FINISH.

A well-polished boot alters the whole appearance—puts the finishing touch to the well-dressed man or woman.

WREN'S BOOT POLISHES

will do it! JUST A SMEAR AND A RUB. They will give a smooth glossy surface to anything leather.

Send 7½d. in stamps for samples (black and brown), and test them!
WREN & CO., NORTHAMPTON.

SPA, BELGIUM.

(10 Hours from London.)

The Oldest Chalybeate Springs in the World.

Finest Bathing Establishment in Europe. Best cure for Anæmia, Chlorosis, and Heart Affections. Countless attractions, Steeplechases, Horse Show, Concerts, Theatre, Automobile Races, Golf, Balls. For programme write

BUREAU DE PUBLICITE, SPA.

Is Golf an Old Man's Game?

A UNIQUE SYMPOSIUM GIVING THE VIEWS OF

MR. BALFOUR,
MR. ALFRED LYTTELTON, M.P.,
MR. MARSHALL HALL, K.C.,
MR. MAX PEMBERTON,
MR. LESLIE BALFOUR-MELVILLE,
JAMES BRAID,
MR. J. E. LAIDLAY,
MISS MAY HEZLET,
AND OTHERS,

APPEARS IN THE JULY NUMBER OF

Ready June 17.

C. B. FRY'S MAGAZINE.

Sixpence Net.

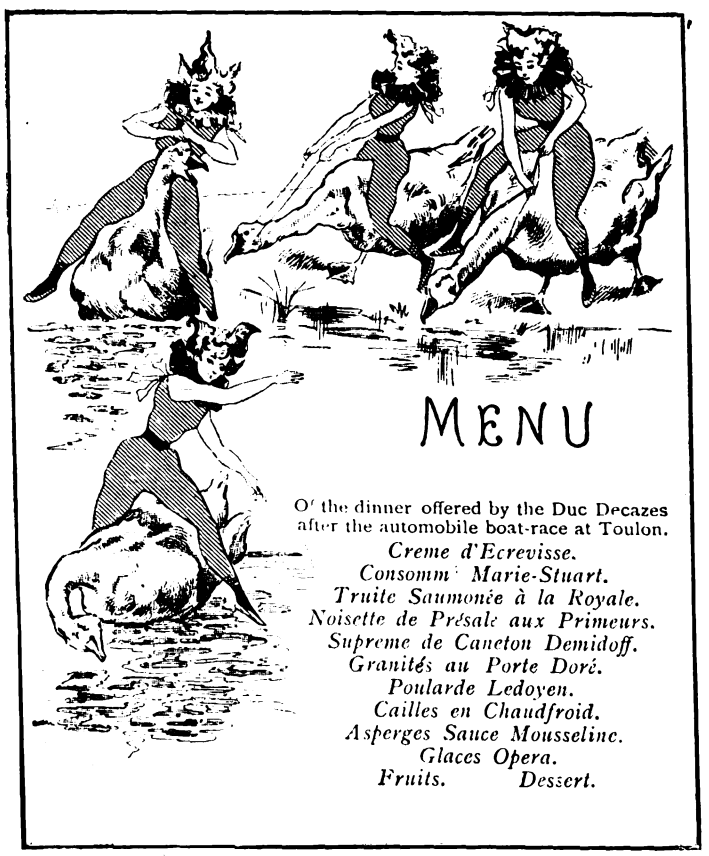
Digitized by Google

IN the course of my frequent interviews with the great Paris restaurateurs I have observed the curious fact that the interest they take in the history of their house only dates from the moment their establishment has become great. What happened before does not appear to trouble them. And yet, if they only took the pains to dive into the past, what singular events would be brought to light, what wonderful anecdotes could be offered to the world!—a gold-mine to novelist and playwright. But no! Like the proud mule in one of La Fontaine's fables, who always spoke of his mother the mare and never of his father the ass, the Paris restaurant proprietor shows little or no anxiety to know anything about the humble origin of his house.

Here we have Ledoyen in the Champs Elysées, known to every stranger, the famous and fashionable restaurant where in summer one can luncheon or dine in the open air. Ledoyen's was founded many years before the great revolution. It lived all through those troubled times; yet no record has been kept of the rôle it must have played in history, nor of the people who visited it. All I have been able to find out is that already at that period the cuisine was of a high order, much appreciated by the bloodthirsty patriots, which may account for the fact that the proprietor's head remained safe on his shoulders. In the course of years Ledoyen's, of course, changed hands, but the cooking remained excellent, and Alexandre Dumas père, fond of good living, became a daily guest there. He often said that he had some of his happiest inspirations in the popular inn, and, whilst waiting for his omelette or matelotte d'anguilles would take a piece of paper from his pocket and hurriedly scribble down some notes. When in 1830 the July Revolution broke out which cost Charles X. his throne, Alexandre Dumas made Ledoyen his headquarters. Dumas owed the King a grudge, because that monarch had refused to decorate him with the Legion of Honour; and when the people had started erecting barricades, Dumas, a born actor, called out to Joseph, his servant, who had taken him a letter to Ledoyen's: "Bring me my rifle and two hundred rounds of cartridges!" Everybody in the restaurant looked with awe on the fierce dramatist, and the proprietor timidly asked Joseph how many people his master intended to kill. "Not one," said Joseph; "it is only his little coup de théâtre."

Ledoyen's greatness dates from 1855. The Second Empire was in the zenith of its glory, and the house was patronised by the brilliant throng that constituted the Court. Baron Hausmann, Duc de Morny, M. de Persigny, Maréchal Canrobert, etc., were daily guests. Beautiful Blanche d'Antigny, the notorious Cora Pearl, and other ladies of the half-world could be seen there in all their splendour. Nor must I forget the famous Mme. de Païva, who dined every day at Ledoyen's whilst her mansion in the Champs Elysées was being built. The fall of the Empire made no difference to Ledoyen, except that the political celebrities of the day belonged to another category. The Imperial régime made room for Gambetta, Jules Ferry, Spuller; and Victor Hugo, returned from exile, could be seen there occasionally. But the most welcome guest at Ledoyen was, of course, King Edward, then Prince of Wales. His Royal Highness liked the place, and on a hot summer's day not unfrequently could be seen in a secluded corner of the garden. The French portion of the public, with great tact, pretended to ignore his presence, an example which might have been advantageously followed by many Englishmen and Englishwomen, whose loyalty was apt to run away with their discretion.

To-day Ledoyen ranks foremost among the great Paris restaurants. The cuisine is still faultless, the wines are excellent, and the establishment has become the favourite place for what we call here des fetes intimes, celebrated by a luncheon or dinner such as only Ledoyen can provide. It was here that Floquet gave a magnificent dinner to his friends after his duel with General Boulanger, whom he had wounded in the throat. It is here also that playwrights celebrate their successful "first-nights" by a luncheon offered to their exponents. But if you want to see Ledoyen in all its glory visit it on Varnishing Day, when tables have to be retained as long as a week in advance. You will then meet really what is sometimes too rashly called "all Paris." Last year's Varnishing Day at Ledoyen's will be remembered on account of the impromptu ovation accorded to Harpignies, the painter. Someone having perceived the veteran artist—then in his eighty-fourth year—seated with some friends, proposed his health, whereupon everybody rose and lifted their glasses, whilst many of the ladies went up to him and kissed him. As I said before, at Ledoyen's they may not know anything of their past history, but they know how to cook; and the present management fully succeeds in keeping the house up to the high standard to which it owes its fame.



It was here that the celebrated sauce verte was first served with boiled salmon, the colour, as everybody knows, made by squeezing the juice of freshly-boiled spinach leaves into a mayonnaise sauce. The delicate green was the delight of strangers, who were always interested to know how it was obtained. Pink salmon and green sauce on a white plate was a picture that Parisians loved to offer their foreign friends a few years ago. To-day everybody knows all about it, and a new colour will have to be invented to make a sensation. At one time hard-boiled eggs in jelly upon a bed of sliced ham was a favourite hors d'œuvre, and if I am not mistaken this dish, that is now universal, originated with the chef at Ledoyen's.

In the menu offered by the Duc Decazes after the automobile boat-race at Toulon there are two specialities of the house.

Truite Saumonée à la Royale.—The trout is poached in Sauterne, the skin is removed, and the pink fish lies blushingly surrounded with bouquets of truffles, quenelles, and crayfish. It is served with a sauce made with port.

Poularde Ledoyen.—This is a wonderful capon, abundantly truffled, but a truffled capon is not a Poularde Ledoyen. In addition is added a stuffing of foie gras, and this highly-seasoned bird is then served with a timbale of truffles cooked in champagne. A third speciality is the Homard à la Newburg, a variation on the Homard à l'Americaine, improved by mixing a quantity of double cream in the sauce of the hot lobster. Most excellent!

Digitized by Google

THE WHITE WINES OF ENGLAND.

BULMER'S Famous Herefordshire CIDERS and PERRY,

For a beautifully illustrated booklet on Cider, price list, and special booklet for invalids, apply to

H. P. BULMER and CO., HEREFORD.

BUTLER'S "KEEN" RAZOR

HOLLOW GROUND.
SPECIAL STEEL.
HAND FORGED.
"I know that Razor, it comes from Sheffield."

HIGHEST AWARDS.
GUARANTEED PERFECT, AND BRITISH MADE THROUGHOUT.

"Keen as this razor's edge invisible." (Love's Labour Lost.)

Black Handles ... ... each 3/- & 5/-
*Per pair, in best Case, 15/-; 7-day set, 50/-
Ivory Handles ... ... each 5/- & 7/6
*Per pair in Russia Case, 21/-; 7-day set, 70/-

"CAVENDISH" CARVERS (Regd. brand) keep "an edge that won't come off."
Fine Ivory, 20/-; Imitation ditto or Stag, 10/6 per pair. Post Free of all Dealers.
Sole Makers, GEORGE BUTLER & CO., Trinity Works, SHEFFIELD.

РУБЛЬ КОФЕ
(ROUBLE COFFEE)

is fresh roasted the day it is sent out. Ground coffee is sent only when specially asked for. Rouble Coffee is because there is no better.

THE COFFEE OF THE EPICURE

5lb. Sample to readers of this Magazine in return for 10/- cash.

THE METATA AGENTS, 17b, Devonshire Sq., LONDON, E.C.

HOW TO MAKE COFFEE.
Our handbook gives detailed directions. Write for it.

'DAREN' BREAD.

Awarded 37 HONOURS.

One doctor writes: "'DAREN' is 20 per cent. more nourishing than white bread." Another writes: "'DAREN' Bread is delicious. If it were in more general use there would be much less indigestion and other sufferings." Most Towns have one or more bakers making 'DAREN. It is sold in 2d., 3d., and 4d. Loaves. Each loaf is stamped 'DAREN.' Ask your baker to supply you. If any difficulty is experienced in obtaining 'DAREN' Bread, apply the 'DAREN' Flour Mills, Dartford, Kent, for name of nearest agent. A dainty Sample Loaf of 'DAREN' will be sent on receipt of four penny stamps to defray cost of postage.

"Tears never yet wound up a clock or worked a steam ingin'."
—PICKWICK PAPERS.

FRY'S PURE CONCENTRATED COCOA gives the feeling of "briskness," without which work or recreation may become irksome.

"My Ideal of Perfection."
—DR. ANDREW WILSON, F.R.S.E., &c.

NOURISH & FLOURISH!

FREE!

FRAME-FOOD

succeeds when other Foods fail. Babies who, from digestive or other trouble, cannot assimilate their food, quickly thrive on FRAME-FOOD (containing Wheat Phosphates which Build up the Frame).

Hundreds of Mothers' letters testify to this.

REPORT Particulars of CASE
when a Shilling 1-lb. Tin shall be promptly sent
FREE for TRIAL.
(Mention this paper.)

FRAME-FOOD CO., LTD.,
The Famous Factory,
SOUTHFIELDS, LONDON, S.W.

Extracted from wheat, Spread on your bread
Delicious to eat; Then you're well fed!

FRAME-FOOD JELLY

A nutritious and delicious WHEAT-substitute for jam, free from seeds and skins. Children LIKE it and THRIVE on it! Its easy digestibility makes it a GRAND food for Children, Invalids and Convalescents. Order a 1-lb. jar (price 10d.) from your Grocer or Chemist, or send 3d. stamps for postage and we will forward a 5-oz. FREE sample jar. (Mention "The King.")

FRAME FOOD CO., LTD., The Famous Factory, Standen Rd., Southfields, LONDON, S.W.

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

THE North London Operatic Society brought their third season to a conclusion with three performances of "San Toy." The stage management of Mr. Lynn Royd had no doubt a great deal to do with the success of the production; but the principal parts were so well taken by many excellent actors and actresses that nothing but success was to be expected. Miss Katherine Craig as San Toy and Miss Nellie Craig as Dudley were both admirably suited; and among the men Mr. A. Phillips and Mr. Murray Short both distinguished themselves. The society will hold their first Garden Fête, July 1, at Ebor House, Stamford Hill, which has been generously placed at their disposal by Dr. James. Full particulars can be had from Mr. Frank Craig, hon. secretary, 5 Fairholt Road, Stamford Hill.

Anthony.

LA TORTAJADA

The celebrated Spanish dancer and singer, who is appearing at the Palace Theatre in a new pantomime play.

MISS ETHEL IRVING has arranged with Mme. Georgette Leblanc-Maeterlinck for a series of matinées to be given at the Criterion Theatre, commencing this week. Mme. Leblanc-Macterlinck, who is the wife of the author of "Aglavaine and Selysette," the unlicensed "Monna Vanna," and the still better known "Pelleas and Melisande," calls her afternoon entertainment "Dramatic, Musical, and Literary Causeries."

THE Tivoli has again a strong programme for its Whitsuntide patrons. Alice Hollander (the charming Australian vocalist) is remaining in the bill, with new songs; Vesta Victoria, Laura Bennett, Edie King, George Robey, Ernest Shand, Harry Tate (in "Fishing"), George Bastow, Mike Whallen, Brown and Le Clerq, the Wania Trio, Collins and Hart, and the three Laurels, whilst last, but not least, Clark and Hamilton, complete a splendid programme.

THE Peak of Derbyshire, which the late Mr. John Ruskin described as "the most educational of all English landscapes," and for which other notable writers have claimed pre-eminence for natural beauty, is the subject of a new illustrated hand-book which the Midland Railway Company have issued for the present tourist season. The little volume is handsomely illustrated, and contains short descriptive notes, maps, tables of fares, and other information. The Midland Company have introduced circular tour tickets enabling the holder to visit most of the places of interest, and facilities are given by means of which the tourist may make himself better acquainted with the Northern Peakland.

THE elaborate preparations for the comfort of those visiting the historical spectacle presented in celebration of the twelfth hundredth anniversary of the founding of the bishopric, town, and school of Sherborne, by St. Aldhelm, A.D. 705, made by the London and South Western Railway, added not a little to the enjoyment of the persons who went down to Dorsetshire for the occasion.

THE annihilation of the Russian Fleet has aroused extraordinary interest in the perfect models of the Japanese war-ships exhibited at the Naval Shipping and Fisheries Exhibition, Earl's Court, by the English firms that built the battle-ships, cruisers, and torpedo-boats responsible for Rojestvensky's downfall. Since the eventful news arrived, the Queen's Palace and Ducal Hall have had large numbers of visitors to see these beautiful miniature replicas. Among others displayed are the battle-ships "Asahi," by John Brown and Co., Clydebank, and the "Shikishima," by the Thames Ironworks and Shipbuilding Company, torpedeo-boats and torpedo-boat destroyers, by Yarrow and Co., the torpedo-boat destroyer "Shirakumo," by J. J. Thornycroft and Co., and the battle-ships "Hatsuse" and "Tatsuta," by Sir W. G. Armstrong, Whitworth and Co.

ALTHOUGH considerable progress has been made by voluntary subscriptions in aid of the Weymouth Sailors' Home Fund, of which H.M. the King is patron and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales vice-patron, the hon. secretary makes an urgent appeal for further funds to enable the committee to continue the good work. Subscriptions or donations should be sent to the hon. secretary, H. A. Huxtable, Esq., town clerk, Bank Chambers, Weymouth.

THERE are remarkably good programmes at the leading variety theatres just now. At the Palace, La Tortajada has made a welcome reappearance, and makes a very decided impression in her new pantomime play. Another most excellent turn is that of Malcolm Scott, whose dry humour is irresistible. The Alhambra has several new items in the programme, including the charming Dutch dancers, "Les Fleurs d'Orange," and a return visit of those incredible illusionists, Le Roy, Talma, and Bosco. The wonderful Port Arthur photographs and the brilliant ballet are as popular as ever. At the Hippodrome the weird pigmies from Central Africa, and the Polar bears from quite "another place," are drawing large audiences.

THE Marine Society, "Warspite" training-ship, is one of the exhibitors in the Queen's Palace at the Naval, Shipping, and Fisheries' Exhibition at Earl's Court. The society's exhibit is of a somewhat unusual character, and consists of a waxwork group of Britannia and four boys. The group is emblematical of the society's work from 1756 to 1905. In the centre stands the Marine Society as Britannia, with trident and shield, on the left and in the rear a poor boy in rags, and in front of him a Marine Society boy in the uniform of 1756. On Britannia's right a boy in civilian dress 1905, and in front of him a boy in the "Warspite" uniform. On the front part of the platform are framed pictures of the "Warspite," the boys on board, etc. The exhibit is particularly interesting, since the society's uniform, which has been copied as correctly as possible, is the same as that supplied by the society from 1756 to the end of the French wars to landsmen volunteering to serve in the ships of the fleet. Pictures of the dress of seamen in the Royal Navy in 1756 are very scarce, and the reproduction of the society's uniform, as there shown, gives a good idea of what it was like at that period.

Amusements.

HIS MAJESTY'S. MR. TREE.
EVERY EVENING AT 8.50.
BUSINESS IS BUSINESS.
Adapted by Sydney Grundy from "Les Affaires sont les Affaires," by Octave Mirbeau.
NEXT MATINEE, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 21ST, AT 2.30.
At 8.15 THE BALLAD MONGER.

CRITERION THEATRE, W.
Sole Lessee: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
To-night at 8.30.
Matinees Wednesday at 2.30.
WHAT PAMELA WANTED.
By Fred de Gresac, Author of "The Marriage of Kitty," and Paul Veber. Adapted by Charles Brookfield. Cast includes Miss Lottie Venne, Miss Vane Featherstone, and Miss Ethel Irving; Messrs. Frank Cooper, Lennox Pawle, John Tresahar, and Leslie Faber. At 10.30, COMEDY AND TRAGEDY,
by W. S. Gilbert. Miss Ethel Irving as Clarice.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Lessee and Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
To-night at 8.45.
MR. HOPKINSON.
An original farce in three acts by R. C. Carton.
Preceded at 8.15 by Mr. Nelson Jackson.
Matinee every Saturday at 3.

APOLLO THEATRE.
HENRY LOWENFELD, Sole Proprietor.
TOM B. DAVIS, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON
Every Evening at 8.15.
The Comic Opera, in Three Acts,
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Wedne day at 2.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.
Managers: A. & S. GATTI & CHARLES FROHMAN.
Every Evening at 8.15,
THE CATCH OF THE SEASON,
By Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton.
Miss Ellaline Terriss, Mr. Seymour Hicks.
Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

COMEDY THEATRE.
Lessee: Mr. WM. GREET.
Under the Management of Mr. FRANK CURZON.
Every Evening at 8.30, Wed. and Sat. Matinees at 3.
The Times says: "Riot of high spirits, perpetual laughter."
The Daily Telegraph says: "Uproarious, bright, and mirth provoking, hard to beat."
THE GREAT SUCCESS.
CHARLES FROHMAN presents WILLIAM COLLIER and the entire American Company in the delightful Farce, in Three Acts,
"THE DICTATOR."
"THE DICTATOR."
By Richard Harding Davis.

EMPIRE THEATRE.
New Fairy Divertissement
"THE DANCING DOLL."
Special Attractions.
Doors open 7.45. Manager: Mr. H. J. HITCHINS.

NAVAL, SHIPPING, AND FISHERIES EXHIBITION, EARL'S COURT.
Open 12 noon to 11.0 p.m. Admission 1s.
Season Tickets, 10s. 6d.
Naval Construction, Armaments, Shipping & Fisheries.
NELSON'S CENTENARY RELICS, and of all Naval Events from the 15th to 20th Century.
FISHING VILLAGE. Working Exhibits. Model of "Victory."
GRAND NAVAL AND MILITARY CONCERTS
Go on board the full-size Cruiser.
Real Batteries of 4.7 Guns, Hotchkiss and Maxims
The Cruiser is manned by a crew of 150 Handy-men.
Go on board and visit the Mediterranean ports.
Trafalgar 1805—Professor Fleischer's Great Work, Death of Nelson. West's "Our Navy." Maxim's Captive Flying Machine. Fairy Grotto. Indian Canoes. Great Canadian Indian Village—Chiefs, Squaws, and Papooses. Voyage in a Submarine. Vanderdecken's Haunted Cabin. Famous Sea Fights Miss de Rohan's Musical and Dramatic Sketches. Tillikum Canoe. Auto-Photographic Portraiture. Switchback. Chutes.
FISH RESTAURANT IN QUEEN'S COURT.

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Mr. George Alexander Hardy, L.C.C. | 367 |
| The March of Events | 368 |
| The Royal Wedding | 369 |
| On the Links | 374 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 379 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 380 |
| The Parisians of Paris—At the Grand Prix | 382 |
| Parisian Players | 383 |
| Under the Burgee | 384 |
| Yachts of the Year | 385 |
| Plays and Players | 386, 387, 393 |
| The Traveller—A Holiday in South-East Ireland | 388 |
| In South-East Ireland | 389 |
| The Ninetieth Anniversary of Waterloo, 1815—1905—Some Rare Aquatints of Wellington's Great Victory | 390 |
| The Services | 391 |
| The Real Hamlet—A Fat Man's Tragedy | 392 |
| The River Season | 394 |
| The Cricket Season | 395 |
| The Racing Season | 396 |
| The Manchester Meeting | vii. |
| The Ladies' Clubs of London—IV.—The Writers' Club | viii. |
| Literary Notes | x. |
| Leaves from a Collector's Note-book—Jackfield Ware | xii. |
| Motoring Notes | xiv. |
| A Paris Toilette | xvi. |
| The King's Menu | xviii. |
| Here, There, and Everywhere | xx. |

TO LIBRARIES, CLUBS, HOTELS, ETC.

A Reading Case for THE KING can be had post free on application to the Publishers, George Newnes, Limited, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

MAGNA CIDER.

"The Sparkling Wine of Somerset."

A delicious appetising beverage. Guaranteed genuine apple juice. Declared by Lancet absolutely pure. Strongly recommended by doctors in cases of Gout, Rheumatism, and Obesity. Brut Cider a speciality. Send 22s. for specimen case, containing 1 doz. quarts of Speciality and 1 doz. quarts of a sweeter blend; or 25s. for 2 doz. pints of each quality. Carriage, bottles, and cases included.—MAGNA CIDER CO., Marston Magna, Somerset.

SULPHOLINE SKIN LOTION.

Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, Entirely fade away.

MEDICAL GALVANISM

HAS CONQUERED some of the most obstinate complaints after all other remedies have failed.

HALE'S IMPROVED ELECTRIC BELTS and BATTERIES for wearing next the body without blistering or injuring the skin. These appliances are

PERFECT GENERATORS OF ELECTRICITY, and are most comfortable in wear. Price One Guinea.

RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, and GOUT are speedily REMOVED by this powerful Agent.

ELECTRIC BELT and SUSPENSOR, price 42s., for MEN, for VARICOCELE, Nervous Debility, and Exhaustion, Bladder Weakness, etc.

Pamphlets Gratis. Consultations Free.

HALE & SON, Medical Galvanists, 117, CHANCERY LANE, LONDON.

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S

HIGH-CLASS

CIGARETTES.

TEOFANI'S Cigarettes receive the Highest Awards at all International Exhibitions, and are Sold by Leading Purveyors throughout the WORLD.

TEOFANI & CO., LONDON.

BIRKBECK BANK

ESTABLISHED 1851.

Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.

Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.

Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.

Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary, Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

WHELPTON'S PURIFYING PILLS

For Indigestion, Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Sea Sickness.

INVALUABLE FOR LADIES.

8, 14, and 33 stamps.

G. WHELPTON, 4, Crane Court, Fleet St., London.

You avoid Dinginess by using a Bissell.

The Bissell Carpet Sweepers are noiseless, dustless, and more durable than brooms.

The Spring selection is now being shown by all Ironmongers, Stores and House Furnishers at 10/6 11/3, 14/-, 15/6 & 18/-

SAME PRICE EVERYWHERE.

MOTHS RUIN FURS AND BLANKETS

USE KEATING'S POWDER

KILLS MOTHS, BEETLES & FLEAS

Tins 3d., 6d. & 1/-

HOTELS, etc.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

TORQUAY (Population 33,625).—PREMIER HEALTH RESORT. Unrivalled climate. Warm in winter. Sunshine-land. Charming drives and sheltered walks. 120 acres of public gardens. Piers.

TORQUAY. Irreproachable water supply and perfect sanitation. Theatre, concerts, and other musical attractions. Medicated baths of all kinds. Express trains from all parts.

For Illustrated Descriptive Books of Torquay, apply FREDK. S. HEX, Town Clerk.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524.

Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. „ 858.

Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. „ 641. Kensington.

Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date. First-class cuisine.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence.

ENGLISH HOTELS—Continued.

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hôte or à la Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Close to Parades. Week End terms. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address: "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne.

FOREIGN HOTELS.

BIARRITZ.

GRAND HOTEL.—Winter Season.—First-class establishment. Splendid situation, facing the sea. Patronised by the elité; rendezvous of English Society. Every comfort; excellent attendance and cooking.—MONTENAT, Manager.

AXENSTEIN (Lake Lucerne; 2,350ft. above sea level; electric railway Brunnen-Axenstein).—First-class Hotel. World-renowned climatic health resort; patronised by English society. "Axenstein is the loveliest spot I met with on my journey through Switzerland."—QUEEN VICTORIA.

FOREIGN HOTELS—Continued.

TENERIFFE

HAS THE FINEST WINTER CLIMATE IN THE WORLD.

THE First-class HOTELS there are the QUISISANA at Santa Cruz, the AGUERE and CONTINENTAL at La Laguna, and the MARTIANEZ (late Grand) at Port Orotava. All under the Management of C. H. TRENKEL. Prospectus, etc., on application.

SHIPPING.

MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

SPLENDID STRETCH OF THE RIVER COLNE, at Wraysbury, to be LET, or the Freehold would be SOLD.—Full particulars of P. and G. GEEN, Surveyors, 57, Waterloo Road, S.E.

CHEAP CONTINENTAL HOLIDAYS.

BRUSSELS FOR WATERLOO, THE ARDENNES, AND Liége Universal Exhibition

VIA HARWICH-ANTWERP every week-day.

Dining and Breakfast Cars.

Send post-card to the Continental Manager, G.E.R., Liverpool Street Station, London, E.C., for descriptive illustrated pamphlet (free).

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

THE COLONEL TAKES THE 19TH (W/HOLE IN ONE!

Head Office:
11,
SO. EXCHANGE PLACE,
GLASGOW.
J. H. ROGER
PROPR.
LESSEE OF
H.M. CUSTOMS
(No. 15) BOND,
JAMES WATT STREET,
GLASGOW.
Special Quotations to Golf Clubs.

"COLONEL BOGEY" WHISKY.

GUARANTEED 7 YEARS OLD.

42/- PER DOZEN. CARRIAGE PAID.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS of every description, including TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT. MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.
Handsome Public Rooms, including 2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.
Terms from MANAGER.

ST. ANNE'S-ON-THE-SEA

(Near BLACKPOOL).

Contains
FOUR GOLF LINKS (18 Holes each).

Also facilities for
BOATING, BATHING, FISHING, CYCLING, TENNIS.
Splendid Beach. Ideal Holiday Resort.
ILLUSTRATED GUIDE FREE
on application to
SECRETARY, Advertising Committee,
Public Offices, St. Anne's-on-the-Sea.

LELANT, ST. IVES BAY, CORNWALL (close to golf links and station).—Furnished HOUSE, with plate and linen, to LET for Summer months; two large sitting rooms, six bedrooms, one dressing room, bathroom.—"T.B.H.," "Evelyns," Uxbridge.

SOUTHWOLD (best position on the Common; close to Golf Links).—To be LET, well Furnished, for June, July, and August, the pretty and artistic HOUSE known as "Link's Cottage," containing square hall, two sitting and large recreation rooms, servants' sitting room, seven bedrooms (fourteen beds), bathroom; electric light and telephone.—Apply to Mrs. ROBINSON, on Property.

THE LINKS, LLANGAMMARCH WELLS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

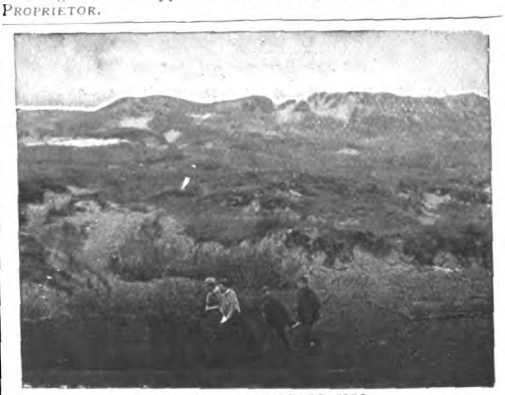
Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hôte, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.



THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.
THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.
A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.
Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads.
Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.
Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.
Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.
New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,

Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.

To be obtained from Thos. Cook, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON
Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.
Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL
SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.
Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head.

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.

Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill.

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 1st Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY, Within easy access of London

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable being on sand.

GENTS' GOLF GARTERS. NON-ELASTIC; Nickel Lever Buckle, no teeth; Fine Tan Webb, ⅛ in. wide; instantly adjusted to any TENSION; ensures comfort and smartness in appearance, 1/- per pair post free.—DAN MOODY & Co., Egyptian Works, TROWBRIDGE.

Rates of Advertising in this Journal can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer)

"'Is it a Private House or an Hotel?' is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

Club Houses can be efficiently and economically lighted by

ACETYLENE.

Write H. BAKER, 49, Victoria Street, S.W.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. Cox, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.
MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL.—Brinklea, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY.

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method).—Manager, E. DIELMANN.

SHERINGHAM, NORFOLK.

THE SHERINGHAM HOTEL,

ADJOINING GOLF LINKS (18 HOLES).

LARGEST HOTEL IN SHERINGHAM. Open all the year round. Handsome Dining Hall, 67ft. long. Numerous spacious Suites of Rooms commanding beautiful Sea and Land Views. Billiard and Smoking Rooms. Excellent and Improved Sanitary arrangements. Extensive Private Grounds. Lawn tennis, croquet. First-class Stables. Accommodation for Motors and Cycles. Through Trains from King's Cross, Peterborough, Birmingham, Leicester, etc.

Telegrams: "Sheringham Hotel, Sheringham."
National Telephone: No. 3. F. EDENS, Manager.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.

Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.

Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.

Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.

MODERATE TARIFF.

Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months.

Perfect Sanitary arrangements.

Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE

Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit.

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL.

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

DR. J. M. BARRIE says—"What I call the 'Arcadia' in My Lady Nicotine is the CRAVEN Mixture and no other."

"CRAVEN"—acknowledged throughout the World the Mixture of Merit and Purity. The Favourite Tobacco since its invention in 1857.

Do not fail to give a trial to the "CRAVEN" Cigarette — "The Cigarette of Distinction."

TRAVEL BY

WEST COAST ROUTE

BETWEEN . .

ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND.

Ellen's Isle. Loch Katrine.

SPEED and COMFORT.

Hundreds of Pleasure Tours Daily by Rail, Coach and Steamer, on London & North Western and Caledonian systems.

FISHING, SHOOTING, GOLFING, &c., &c., &c.

ACCELERATED TRAIN SERVICE:

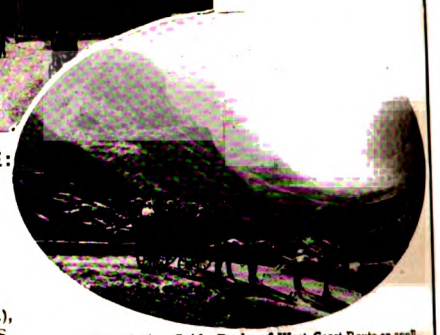
LONDON (EUSTON), BIRMINGHAM, LIVERPOOL, AND MANCHESTER

WITH

GLASGOW (CENTRAL), EDINBURGH (PRINCES ST.), ABERDEEN, INVERNESS, OBAN, AND THE NORTH.



Descriptive Guide Books of West Coast Route on application to Mr. R. TURNBULL, Euston Station, London.

For Tourist Programmes and "Summer Tours in Scotland," "Oban and the Land of the Gael," "Through Scotland" Descriptive Guides, apply to Mr. G. Calthrop, Caledonian Railway, Glasgow.

Frederick Harrison, General Manager L. & N.W. Ry.
R. Millar, General Manager Caledonian Ry.

"The House for Veils."

Largest Selection in London.

CHARLES LEE & SON,

The Royal Specialists for Ladies' Wear, . .

98 & 100, Wigmore St., LONDON, W.,

famous for

The Royal Crescent Veil,

a shaped Patent adjustable Veil, at prices and quality showing a great saving over veiling purchased by the yard.

9d., 1/-, 1/3, 1/6, 1/9, 2/-, 2/3, 2/6, etc.

MOTOR VEILS.
MOTOR HATS.
MOTOR VEILS.

The latest and largest selection in London.

Messrs. LEE & SON continue to send a box containing a good assortment by post; boxes ready for return, no trouble after selecting.

VOGELER'S CURATIVE COMPOUND

PURIFIES THE BLOOD

AND

CURES INDIGESTION,

CONSTIPATION, LIVER ILLS, SKIN DISEASES.

"I must honestly say your Vogeler's Curative Compound has done me a lot of good. My face and neck are quite clear of the Eczema, and I feel so much better in every respect since taking the medicine. I used to have indigestion and wind very bad after eating, but I am now quite free from both these ailments."

(Signed) Miss S. MORRIS,

June 2nd, 1904. Ash Cottage, Court Road, Malvern.

Price 1/1½ and 2/6; of all Chemists.

LARGE FREE SAMPLE

sent on receipt of penny stamp for postage (mentioning this paper) by the Sole Proprietors,

ST. JACOBS OIL, Ltd., 45, Farringdon Road, London.

PRICE'S CANDLES.

GOLD MEDAL PALMITINE — FOR DINING & DRAWING ROOMS

GRAND PRIZE PARASTRINE — FOR USE UNDER SHADES

Digitized by Google

THE ROYAL WEDDING.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

VOL. XX. No. 438. SATURDAY, JUNE 24th, 1905. PRICE 6d.

Elliott and Fry.

MR. GEORGE ALEXANDER HARDY, L.C.C.

Prospective Liberal Candidate for the Stowmarket Division of Suffolk.

(See page 379.)

Digitized by Google

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 438. Saturday, June 24, 1905.

Editorial Offices—20, TAVISTOCK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephone—No. 2,748, GERRARD.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

EDITORIAL.

photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING AND HARROW.—Next week King Edward goes down to Harrow-on-the-Hill, on the occasion of Speech Day, to open the new playing-fields there, where it is certain more games will be indulged in than the good yeoman John Lyon allowed when he founded the "Free Grammar School of John Lyon." Then the only amusements allowed to the scholars were "driving a top, tossing a hand-ball, running, shooting, and no other." How the modern youth, which upon visiting days amuses itself with a champagne luncheon at the King's Head, would regard the reintroduction of Lyon's statute may be guessed; but there is little likelihood of such a thing while playing-fields like those which are now awaiting use are available for cricket and football and other forms of schoolboy sport. But there is one old custom, which has long since fallen into disuse, that of holding every year a competition in archery. The revival of interest in this old-time pastime should surely lead to the renewal of this competition, which was one of the pet crazes of the founder of the school.

Russell.

THE ROYAL WEDDING AT WINDSOR.

The bride and bridegroom with the bridesmaids. On the left is Princess Ena of Battenberg, and next to her Princess Beatrice of Saxe-Coburg. Sitting down by Princess Margaret is Princess Mary of Wales, and on the extreme right is Princess Patricia of Connaught. The Royal couple are spending part of the honeymoon in Ireland.

THE KING AND ASCOT.—This year the party in the Royal enclosure at Ascot has been very select, by special command of the King, and though Viscount Churchill has been overwhelmed by demands for tickets, only those who are recognised members of the Court circle have been honoured with invitations. On the other hand, the King's party at Windsor has been an unusually large one, and with the Duke and Duchess of Connaught also entertaining at Bagshot, the Khedive staying at Ascot Heath House, there has been quite an array of Royalty at the famous race-meeting. Even the festivities in connection with the visit of the King of Spain and the wedding at Windsor do not appear to have drawn back to England all those who like to linger in the South until our summer here is safely established; but Ascot is an infallible magnet, and a large number of people who have not been seen in town during the season have now returned.

THE KING AND THE SHAH.—The wonderful carpet which the Shah of Persia has sent to King Edward as a token of his appreciation of the affectionate hospitality extended to him on the occasion of his last visit to this country, is the result of the labours of a small army of designers and weavers who have been constantly at work on the carpet for two years past. Such a gift is, apart altogether from the circumstances attending its presentation, all but priceless, for though the mechanical manufacture of carpets has been brought to a very high pitch of excellence in this country, we cannot attempt to rival the wonderful hand-woven fabrics of the East. Carpets of Oriental design, spoiled very often by the introduction of light delicate colour schemes quite foreign to the country of their origin, are well-known objects in the windows of the furnishers on the hire system, but they are to the genuine article as a village trundler to a member of the Australian Eleven. In addition to the present to King Edward, the Shah sent a magnificent diamond ornament to the Queen, and the Prince of Wales was invested with the Order of Tensal Homayoon, of the First Class.

Digitized by Google

THE ROYAL WEDDING.

Illustration Bureau.

THE KING DRIVING FROM WINDSOR STATION.

In the carriage may be seen King Edward, the Duke of Connaught, and Prince Gustav Adolph of Sweden. The bridegroom of last Thursday was very popular in Windsor, and met with a hearty welcome on every hand.

Russell.

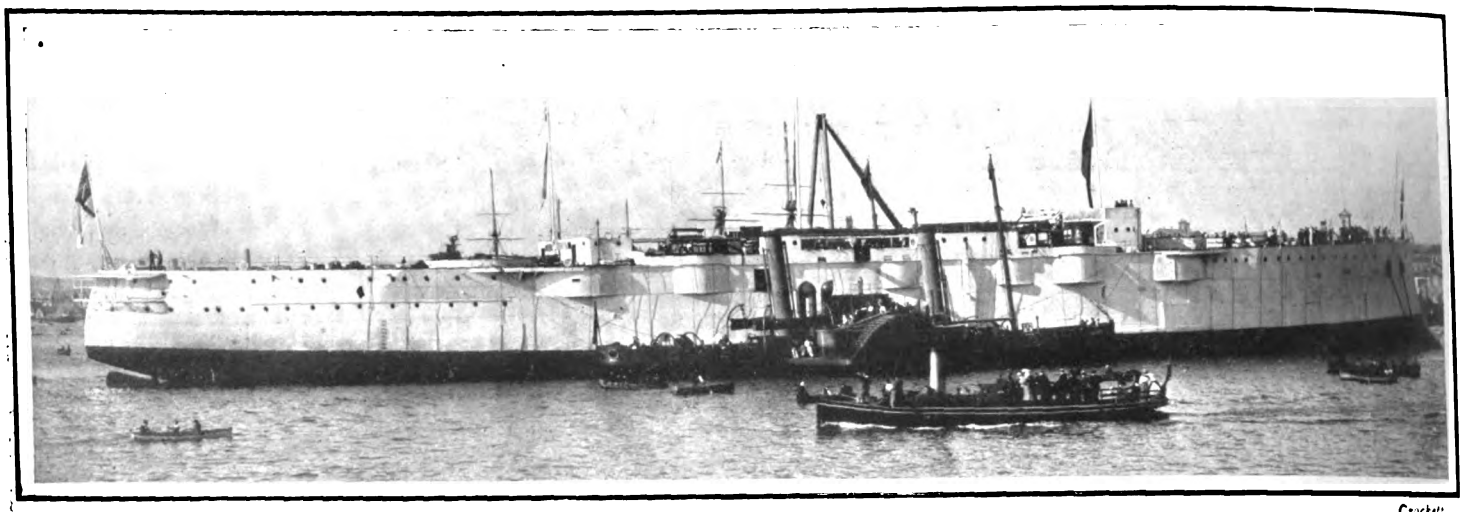
THE RETURN FROM THE CHAPEL.

On the conclusion of the marriage ceremony at St. George's Chapel the bride and bridegroom drove back to the Castle in an open carriage, and it was a matter of comment that all the other carriages in the procession were closed, the reception of the Royal couple being thus more marked.

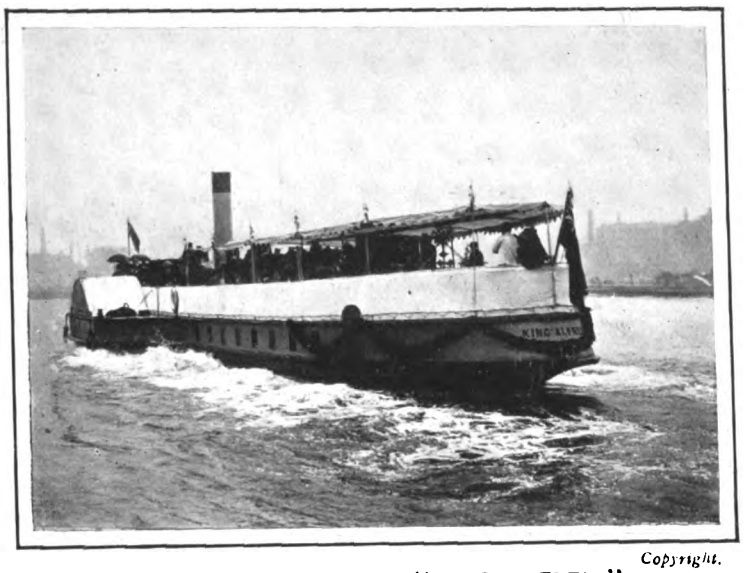
Digitized by Google



Crockett.

THE LAUNCH OF THE BATTLE-SHIP "HIBERNIA."

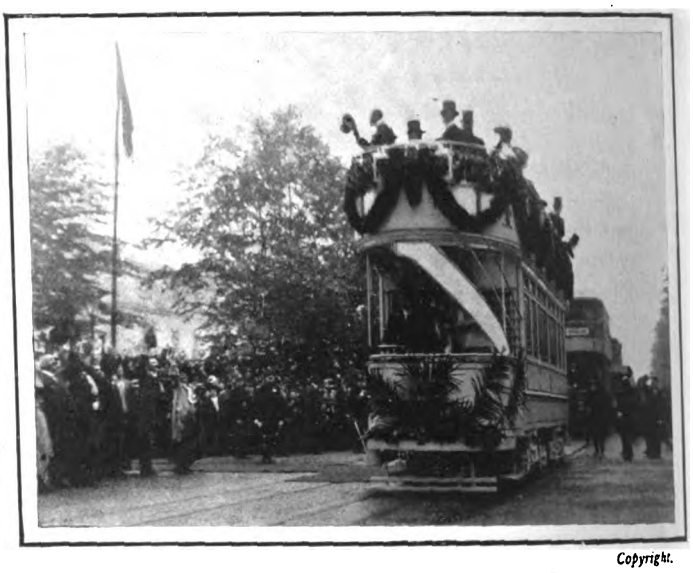
The naming ceremony at the launch ot the last battle-ship of the "King Edward VII." class to be put in the water was performed by the Marchioness of Ormonde on Saturday last at Devonport Dockyard. After the religious service the silk Union Jack, purchased out of the fund inaugurated by the Marchioness for the presentation of gifts to the ship, was also unfurled, and a carved oak casket, adorned with a water-colour drawing of the battle-ship as she will appear when completed, was given to the Marquess and Marchioness of Ormonde as a souvenir ot the occasion.



Copyright.

THE L.C C. STEAMER "KING ALFRED"

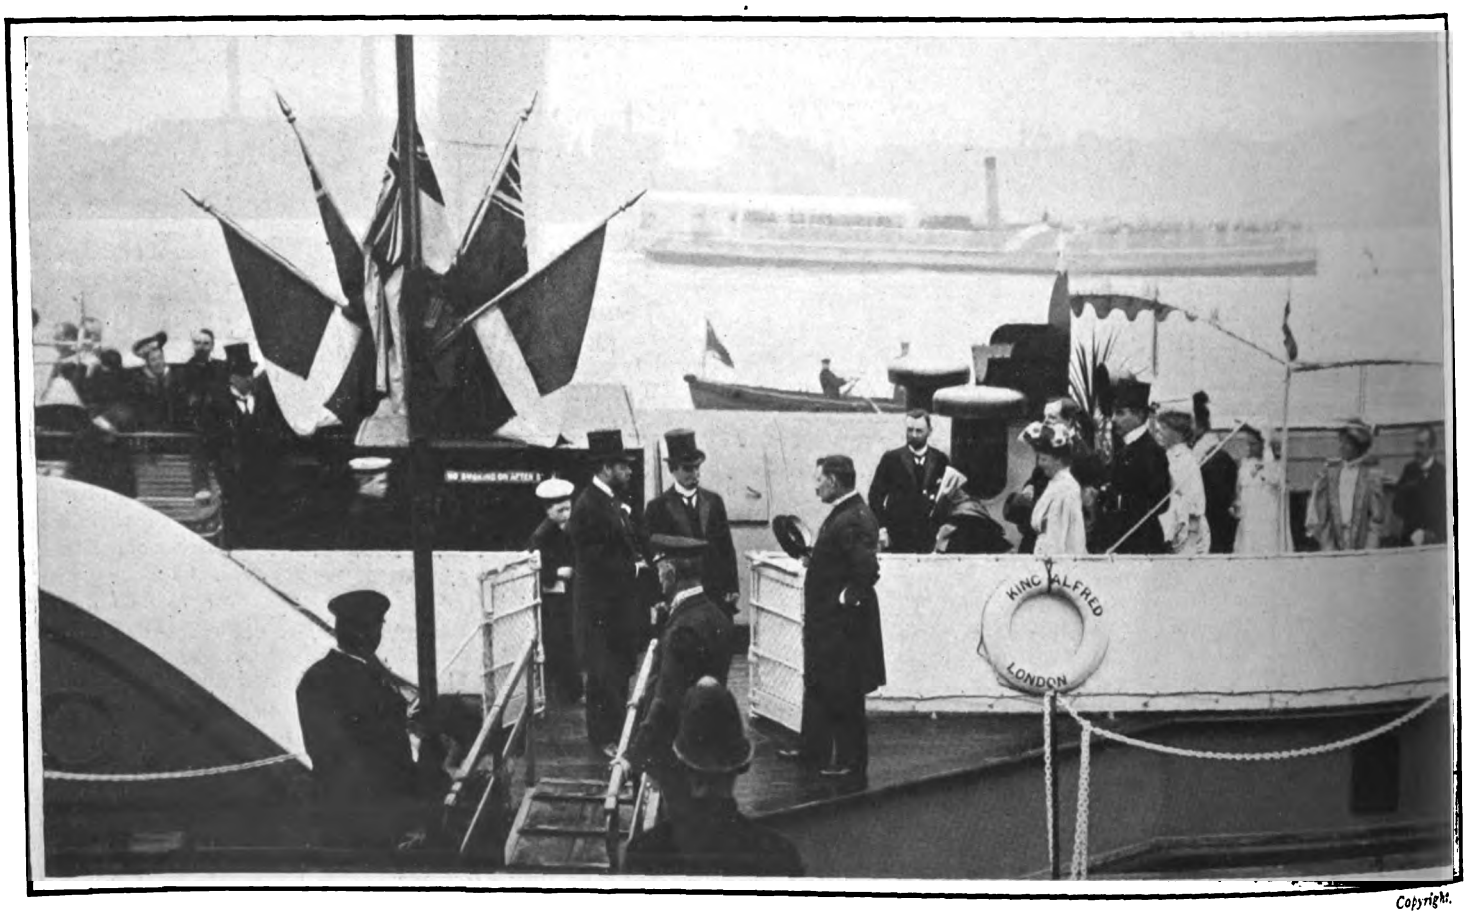
With the Prince of Wales on board, during the inaugural trip from Westminster to Greenwich. A procession of boats followed in the wake ot the "King Alfred," and the whole formed a picturesque spectacle despite the rain.



Copyright.

THE PRINCE ON A TRAM-CAR.

The return journey from Greenwich was made by road, a car richly decorated with evergreens being placed at the disposal of the Royal party. The Prince ot Wales travelled on top of the car for some part of the way, and his arrival everywhere was the signal for outbursts of cheering.

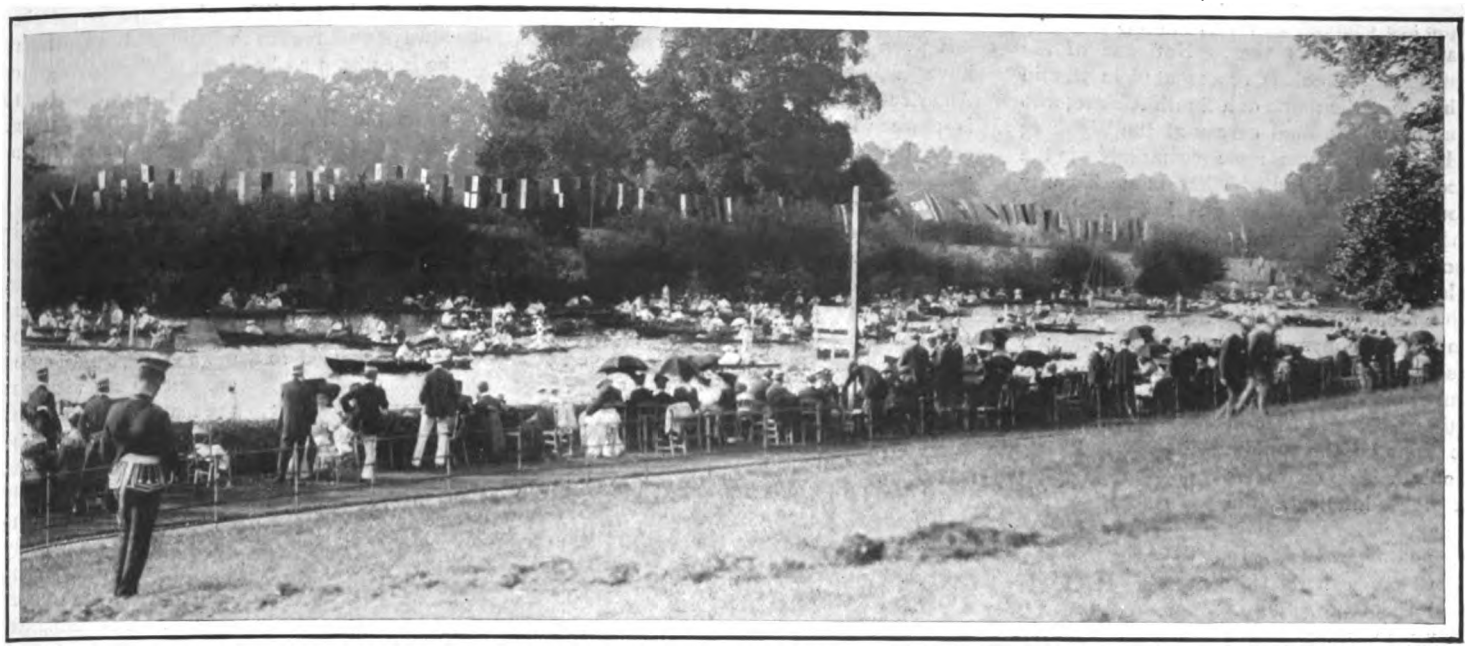


Copyright.

THE PRINCE OF WALES LANDING AT GREENWICH.

Accompanying the Prince on the round tour from Westminster on Saturday were Prince Edward and Prince Albert of Wales, and both boys enjoyed the experience immensely. The Prince of Wales was the only passenger who paid a fare, tendering a silver fourpenny piece and a silver penny, which will be retained by the County Council as a memento of the occasion.

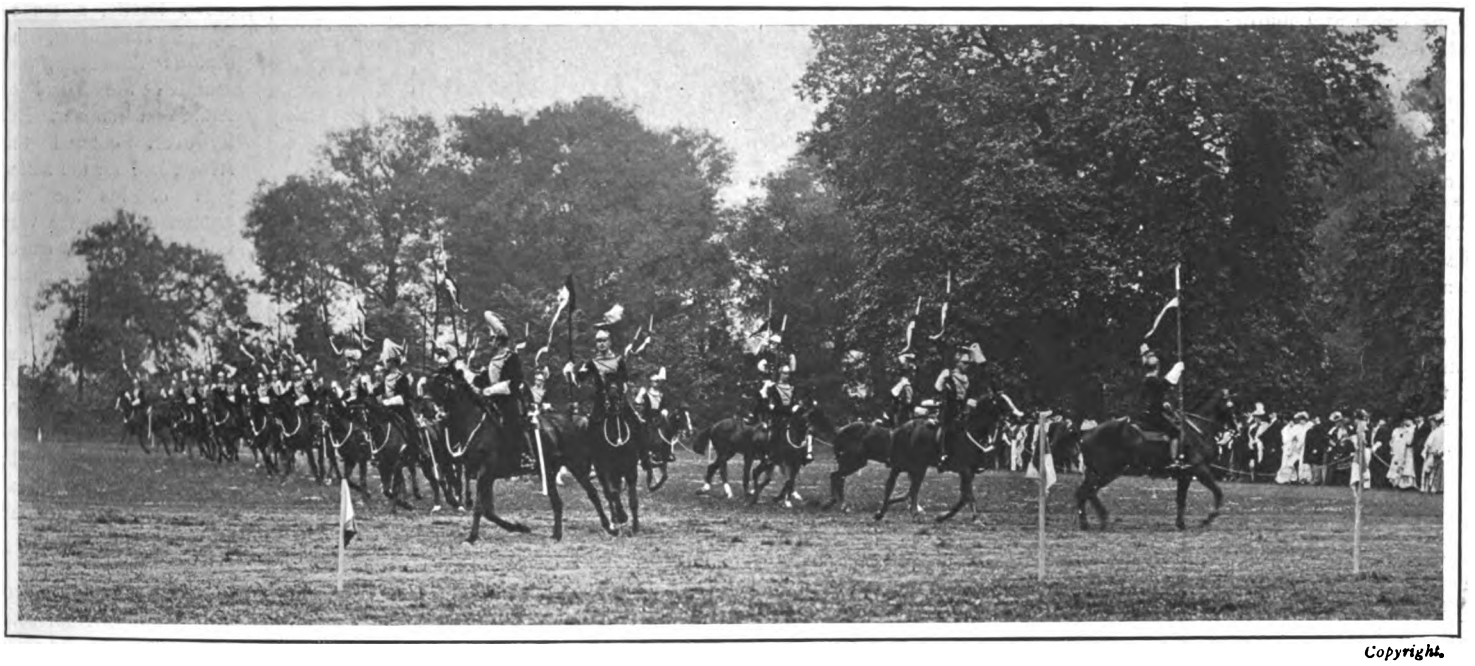
Digitized by Google



Copyright.

THE LAWN AT WALTON.

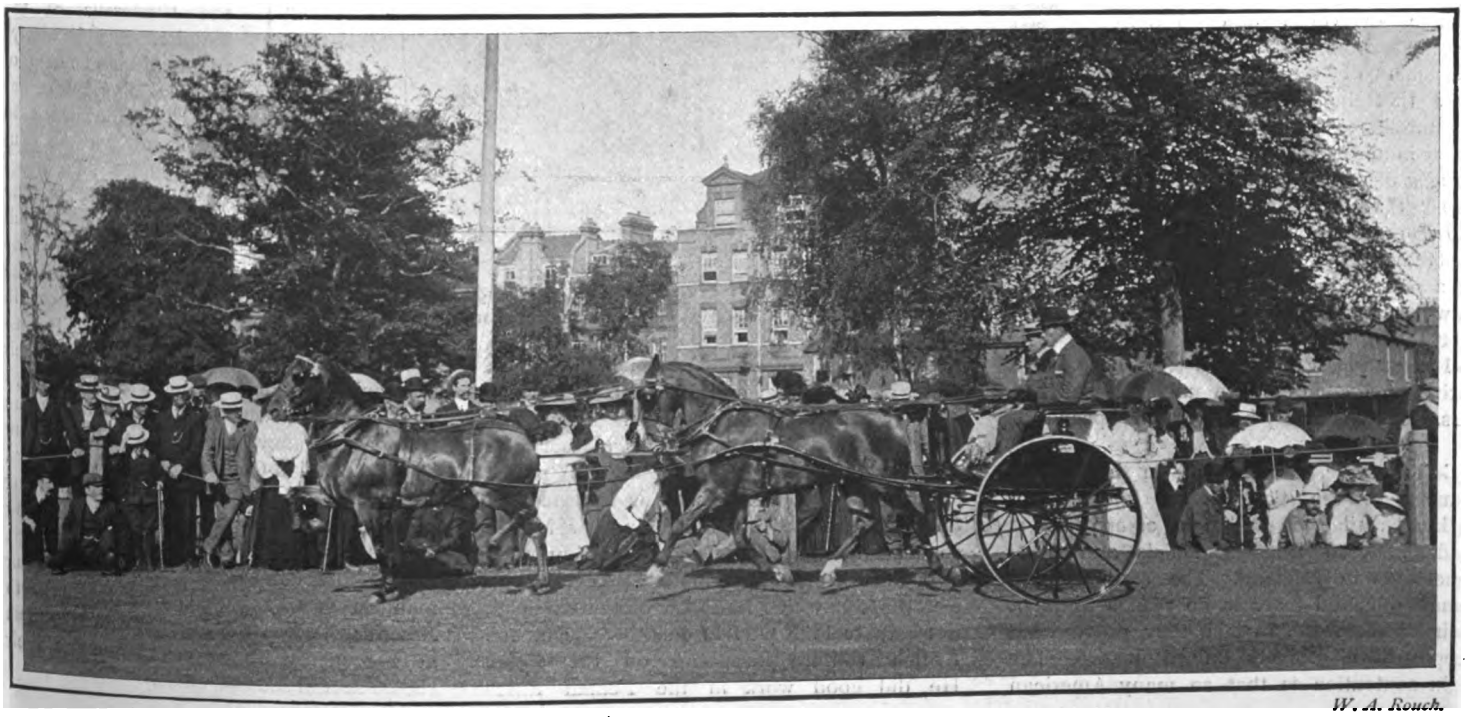
The opening of the Thames Regatta season at Walton on Saturday last was a distinct success in spite of the variable weather.



Copyright.

LANCERS AT THE RANELAGH CLUB.

On Saturday last the 21st Lancers gave an exhibition of their musical ride at Ranelagh in connection with the driving competition there.



W. A. Rouch.

THE RICHMOND HORSE SHOW.

Mr. W. S. Cunard's tandem, Wild Lucy and Jenny Lind, which tied with Mr. Konig's pair for 1st place in the tandem (any height) class.

Digitized by Google

THE WRANGLER LIST.—Many excellent people are exercised in their minds over the Wrangler List this year. Not one of the great public schools is represented in it, and at the top is the name of a South African, who began his educational career at the Wynberg High School. Even more remarkable is the place taken by a lad who has made his way through the County Council. In the Colonies this is an old story, and the wonder is that it is not familiar in England. For twenty years, at least, Board School boys have carried all before them when scholarships enable them to compete with boys of the better classes. One reason is given by a German in the current number of the National Review. He says that in this country the public schools develop character but not intellect, the primary schools intellect but not character. In the Colonies it is supposed that the mind of a boy who is thoroughly trained in English till he is fourteen comes to other subjects with a freshness unknown to a boy who begins Latin and mathematics early. Moreover, the pick of the masses naturally outnumbers the pick of a limited class. There is nothing to be alarmed about.

NEW ZEALAND'S HIGH COMMISSIONER.—In spite of a general belief to the contrary, Mr. Seddon is not coming home as High Commissioner. The post is to be filled by the present Agent-General, Mr. W. P. Reeves. The Colony and London are alike to be congratulated on the appointment, for he is not only a man of unusual ability, but a writer of distinction as well. His book on New Zealand, "The Long White Cloud," is the best of its kind on the subject. He has also published a volume of verse, and writes much on the social problems of the day. Now that he is High Commissioner with a salary in accordance with his new dignity, it is supposed that Mr. Reeves will do more in the social line than he has hitherto been able to do. In this he will be assisted by his pretty and clever wife and their young daughter. As becomes a native of a country with universal suffrage, Mrs. Reeves is a very happy public speaker.

COLONIALS v. AMERICANS.—In the current number of the Contemporary there is a striking article, in which a comparison is made between titled Colonials and titled Americans in England. The statistics are remarkable, and there is no reason to doubt their correctness. In fact, they prove what people have vaguely known before. The main contention is that so many American women either will not or cannot become mothers—a fact to which President Roosevelt has given publicity on the other side. Colonials have higher ideals, and as they outnumber Americans in the titled classes, their influence is more wholesome. Another fact brought out by the writer, who signs himself "Colonial," is interesting. He says that, whereas several sons of peers with a Colonial mother hold high position in the State, there is not one with an American mother.

A MISTAKE CORRECTED.—Through an unfortunate mistake Colonel S. Hughes was described in our issue of May 6 as "in his youth a Papal Zouave." This distinction belongs to Colonel G. E. D. Hughes, also a Canadian with a fine military record. Colonel "Sam" Hughes is an Orangeman, and through his mother is of Huguenot descent. He is a man of public spirit and wide interests. For instance, he does not believe that the Volunteer Militia should serve only in Canada, and in 1877 told the British Government that the 45th Battalion, of which he is Lieutenant-Colonel, is ready to take part in the defence of the British Empire anywhere on the globe. He did good work in the Fenian Raids and in the South African War. He is an ar'ent Imperialist, whose racy speeches always go direct to the point. As a sportsman he is as keen as he is on soldiering. By profession Colonel Hughes is a journalist, and owns the Warder, a weekly Ontarian paper. He is also a member of the House of Commons on the Conservative side.

LADY HALIBURTON'S ACCIDENT.—Lady Haliburton has had a nasty accident, which, if not so serious as Mrs. Arthur Paget's last year, is serious enough. The lift, in which she and her husband wanted to go upstairs, for some reason refused to work, and Lord Haliburton got out to see what was the matter. His wife was following him, when the lift began to move, and she was thrown violently out. Fortunately she sustained no injury except a shock to the system. The daughter of Mr. Leo Schuster, before she married Lord Haliburton she was the wife of Sir W. D. Clay. Her husband was born in Nova Scotia, a son of Judge Haliburton, the famous "Sam Slick," who founded the school of American humour. He, however, entered the Army, and for the better part of his life was connected with the War Office. He is now one of the most doughty champions of the old order of things, and, therefore, a trenchant critic of the present Minister for War. Unfortunately, Lord Haliburton has no heir, so that an honoured name in Imperial history is destined to drop out of the peerage.

THE HARMSWORTH CONCESSION.—Newfoundland, which is geographically a part of Canada, as Tasmania is of Australia, is aptly enough termed the Cinderella of the Empire. She is always in trouble, and much of it through no fault of her own. But the burden she bears through the concessionnaire she brings on herself. It is no time since she freed herself from the tentacles of the Reid contract. Now she is about to put herself in the power of the Harmsworths. Surely never did a people sell their birthright for such a worthless mess of pottage. Newfoundlanders rather pride themselves on the fact that they have been able to stand out of the Canadian Confederation all these years, but it may be doubted if they can do anything better than join it. Their island, unlike New Zealand, is not rich enough, nor large enough, nor remote enough to stand alone. Their manifest destiny is union with British North America. When the alternative leaves them at the mercy of the concessionnaire their choice should soon be made.

H. Walter Barnett.

LADY ALEXANDRA STANLEY

Who was married last Saturday to Captain the Hon. Frederick Stanley of the 10th Hussars. Lady Stanley is the daughter of the Earl and Countess of Gosford.

Digitized by Google

THE WAVENEY SAILING CLUB.
This club's race for 16-footers was held on Oulton Broad last week.

Illustration Bureau.

Hare, Bridport

THE JUBILEE OF A NEWSPAPER.
Mr. W. Frost, editor and proprietor of the Bridport News, and his staff. This popular Dorset newspaper was founded fifty years ago, and a public luncheon is being given to Mr. Frost this week.

Abeniacar.

A HORSE SHOW AT NAPLES.
The Italians are expert horsemen, and as may be seen by our illustration the ladies are equally keen. The Marchesa Bourbon del Monte is shown clearing a difficult obstacle, and her feat won for her the first prize at the meeting.

Copyright.

THE ROYAL THAMES YACHT CLUB RACE FROM THE NORE TO DOVER.
Unfortunately very bad weather prevailed during this race last Saturday, and there was little or no wind. "White Heather" won in the 100-ton class, and "Rosamond" in the 50-ton class.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

THE Open Amateur Championship of France was played a week ago on the course of the Société de Golf de Paris at La Boulie, near Versailles. There was a good entry for the competition, and a good deal of spirited play took place before the final round of 36 holes was reached. The final was played between Sir Edgar Vincent, M.P., and Mr. A. H. Crosfield of the Royal Liverpool Club, and well known for his promotion of the game at Cannes. This year Sir Edgar Vincent has been playing a very strong game, especially in the Parliamentary Tournament, and it looked at one time as if he might be the winner of the competition at Versailles. Though the match with Mr. Crosfield was all even at the turn in the second round Sir Edgar Vincent appeared to slack off in his game, and Mr. Crosfield beat him in the end rather easily by 5 up and 4 to play. Mr. J. B. Dudgeon, Mr. Mackie, and M. Francois de Bellet of Paris tied with a net score of 86 for the first prize in the International stroke competition. Among the other competitors at La Boulie were Mr. H. Mallaby-Deeley and Mr. J. Livingstone.

* * *

At the open meeting, which was held at Le Touquet, there was an entry of thirty-nine competitors, and as the result of the preliminary scoring rounds four competitors were left in to play off by match play for possession of the cup. These were Mr. J. Roberts, Mr. T. Marshall, Mr. R. Broun, and Mr. N. L. Jackson. In the semi-final, Mr. Roberts beat Mr. Jackson by 3 holes, and Mr. Marshall beat Mr. Broun by 2, while in the final Mr. Roberts beat Mr. Marshall by 6 up, and thereby secured the cup. One of the Bogey competitions was won by Sir Henry Seton-Karr, M.P., with 2 holes down.

THE BAR TOURNAMENT AT SANDWICH.

Sir Thomas Parkyns driving at the 1st tee. He was beaten in the semi-final by Mr. Whetstone.

* * *

The annual tournament of the Bar Golfing Society, for which there was a record entry of 103 players, was decided last week at Sandwich. There was a good deal of excellent play shown by many of the members, Mr. Mansfield Hunter going round in the very low score of 72 strokes. Going outwards he began with four 4's, then three 3's, a 4, and a 5, securing the sixteenth in a finely played 2. Mr. Darwin also played fine golf, one of his rounds being 74, despite the fact that he took 6 to the first hole. The players left in the semi-final were Mr. W. F. Whetstone, Sir Thomas Parkyns, Mr. B. Darwin, and Mr. G. Cave Orme. Mr. Whetstone had a very close match with Sir Thomas Parkyns, whom he beat by 1 hole, and Mr. Darwin (plus 2) only reached the final by beating Mr. Cave Orme at the twentieth hole. In going to the nineteenth hole in this tie Mr. Darwin holed his mashie shot for a half. The final between Mr. Darwin and Mr. Whetstone was not so well contested. Mr. Darwin was 4 up at the sixth hole, and, never losing his lead, he won rather easily by 5 and 4 to play.

* * *

The Leysdown Golf Club held its Whitsuntide meeting at the links, Leysdown, Isle of Sheppey, the players being favoured by fine weather. On Saturday the Captain's Prize, presented by Mr. J. A. Atherton, resulted in a win for Mr. T. H. P. Kolesar, Mr. J. Woodhouse being second. On Monday, a cup, presented by the Leysdown and Shellness Estates, Limited, for medal play under handicap, was won by Saturday's winner, Mr. T. H. P. Kolesar (7 Handicap), who went round in 83 net, the runner-up being Mr. J. Lancaster (receives 18) 88. The course is a difficult one, full of natural hazards, and with a good wind Mr. Kolesar made a very creditable

THE BAR TOURNAMENT.

Mr. G. Cave Orme, beaten at the 20th hole in the semi-final, makes a good recovery from an extremely bad lie.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

performance. The club-house is being enlarged so as to provide for additional numbers.

* * *

The Earl of Dunraven has lately been staying at Lahinch for golf, where the links are in capital order just now. The hotel was quite full for Whitsuntide. Lady Clarina and the Hon. Eyre Nathaniel Massey were there, and Lord and Lady Dunalley have taken a house a few miles off, so that Lord Dunalley is able to be on the links every day. The Hon. Kathleen Prittie is unfortunately still very delicate, notwithstanding her two years' sojourn at a German open-air sanatorium.

* * *

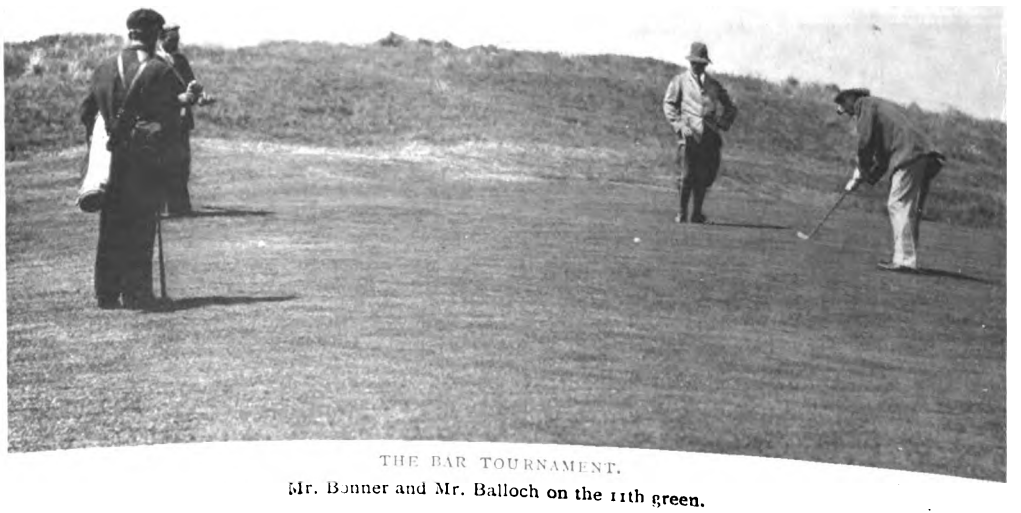
The annual match between the Bar Golfing Society against the London Solicitors' Golfing Society was played on Saturday at Sandwich. The players who won their matches for the Barristers were Mr. Ernley Blackwell, who beat Mr. Dallmyer by 6 and 5, Mr. L. Mossop, who defeated the Hon. D. K. Watson by 2 holes, Mr. D. Stephens, who beat Mr. Cyril Plummer, Mr. E. G. Rand, against Mr. K. C. Cobb, and Mr. F. H. Newnes, against Mr. C. T. Smith. For the Solicitors, Mr. Vivian Pollock won his match against Mr. Harold Beveridge by 1 hole after a very close match, and Mr. A. R. Price secured his match against Mr. T. A. Wright. Mr. Mansfield Hunter and Mr. H. E. Taylor halved their match, and the general result was that the Bar beat the Solicitors by 5 matches to 2.

* * *

Golfers who visit East Lothian this summer and autumn will find the means of communication between North Berwick and the surrounding golf greens very much improved. A supply of motor-omnibuses is being provided to run between North Berwick and Aberlady. The new development is due to the directors of the North British Railway Company, who are utilising in this way the motor-car to fill up the gap which exists in the local railway from Gullane to North Berwick.

* * *

"The Golfers' Handbook and Yearbook for 1905" (Golf Reporting Agency, 8, North Bridge, Edinburgh), is one of the most comp'ete books of reference for the golfer that could be consulted. In addition to a list of the golf clubs throughout the world, an attempt is made to give a list of hotels which are officially recommended by the local golf clubs themselves as suitably comfortable for the requirements of the average golfer. This recommendation of itself is a guarantee that the golfer's comfort will be attended to, and should house accommodation be wanted as well, the name of a local house agent is given who can supply the needed information either about lodgings or furnished houses. The decisions of the Rules of Golf Committee of St. Andrews are brought up to date; there is a pretty complete list of the winners of the men's and women's championships in this country and elsewhere, with a list of the professionals and the clubs to which they are attached. The book, in fact, aims at giving a very complete synopsis of the principal events of the year, thereby making it a most handy and trustworthy book of everyday reference. In the club directory, however, the editor should note that there are clubs at the Château d'Ardennes and Ostend in Belgium—both holiday resorts for the British golfer—and at Aix-les-Bains, one of the fashionable resorts for English and American golfers in Savoy. It should also be the aim of the editor to take the late Lord Salisbury's advice to verify all his published references. Thus, in the chapter chronicling remarkable incidents in golf, it would be much more satisfactory to have date, place, and name of the links where certain leviathans of the game are "said to have driven" certain elongated tee shots. If those enormous tee shots and other incidents cannot be verified by date, name, and place, it were better in a book summarising the year's historical events to refrain from mentioning them at all, for no authoritative value can be attached by the student to any event which "is said" to have occurred.



THE BAR TOURNAMENT.
Mr. Bonner and Mr. Balloch on the 11th green.

THE BAR TOURNAMENT.
Mr. T. Mansfield Hunter driving at the 1st tee.

THE BAR TOURNAMENT.
Mr. H. H. Game playing out of the rough, Mr. W. F. Whetstone watching the flight of the ball.

GOLF PHILOSOPHY IN SLIPPERS.

II.—On the Method of Playing the Game.

I REMEMBER reading in a magazine a few years ago, a most interesting article, written by a talented and enthusiastic Scotsman, on "The Invasion of the Englishry" into the realms of golf, in which he complained of the tendency introduced by the English to destroy all semblance of a game as between man and man, by their detestable habit of counting their strokes all round the green. He said (I am quoting merely from memory), "To arrive panting on the green, without having paid any attention to your adversary, and to gasp out, 'I have played five strokes; how many have you played?' is not a game; it is a diabolical invention calling for the interference of the police." There is much truth in this.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

I have no objection whatever to the English playing golf, for the same reason for which the gentleman refrained from wholly blaming his friend for want of veracity, namely, that he was a bit of a liar himself. But I very much fear that the tendency of the English, by their inveterate preference for medal play, as opposed to match play, is to destroy the best features of a game in which you pit your individual skill against that of another, which is the essence of all games. When you sally forth with another, on an ordinary day when no club competition is toward, to play this detestable medal play, each bent only on counting his own strokes, the partner of your guilt is no more your antagonist than are the couple ahead of you, or the couple following; and you have not the excuse of a possible medal in view. And yet I fear many a man goes home to the wife of his bosom, after a day thus ill-spent, and mendaciously asserts that he has been "playing a game of golf with old So-and-so."

It was conceded by them of old time that medal play was a deplorable evil, but they did not see any other way by which a whole club might play for a prize without taking a week or more to do it.

How much more interesting is match play—to so try to drive from the tee that your opponent shall find himself further from the hole than you, and so have to play "the odd." And then what joy if he should be compelled to play "the two more," and you feel for the rest of the hole that moral elation that playing "one off two" all through the green can only give. Then will you arrive on the putting green having two for the hole, and will not care whether you have played five strokes or fifty. The interest given by this kind of game will increase as your play improves, and a ding-dong match, playing "the odd" and "the like" all through, and won by one putt at the last hole, will prove intensely exciting. What matter whether the round was a good one or not. In medal play all is tinged with bitterness by the remembrance of a bad hole early in the round, while the ignominy of double figures at any one hole excludes all joy for the day. Oh! my friends, why doom yourselves to a state of perpetual medal play? A benevolent legislature only imposes a few years' penal servitude (a far preferable state) for the uttering of counterfeit coin, an occupation far more interesting and exciting, and offering possibilities of far greater recompense, than the pursuit of many medals.

C. DE LACY LACY.

THE OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP.

Arnaud Massey, of Biarritz, the first foreign professional to win a prize in the Open Championship.

THE OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP.

Braid in the bunker at the 11th hole.

Correspondence.

THE BEHAVIOUR OF A GOLF CROWD.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE KING."

SIR,—I was greatly delighted to read the spirited protest of "An Old Golfer" against the inconsiderate behaviour of many portions of a crowd who now seem to think that an important golf match is an interesting social function got up for their exclusive benefit at great expense and trouble. The protest has not come before it was needed; and I am inclined to agree with your correspondent that a good many of those who tack themselves on to many of the professionals with embarrassing enthusiasm neither understand the game nor care very much about it. In the first place, you will see men and women who, if they are golfers, ought certainly to know better than to stand behind the player's arm and restlessly to move about while he is in the act of making the swing. Whether the play is off the tee or on the putting green the same symptoms of downright and inherent stupidity are seen; and when one feels impelled to protest angrily against such a display of bad manners, as well as of absolute disregard of what is in fairness due to the players, one can only come to the charitable conclusion that those fussy cigarette young men and hysterical ladies are not golfers and do not wish to become golfers. Yet, with Molière, when one sees them displaying their graces all over a golf green, and talking at the top of their shrill voices during the progress of important matches, one feels inclined to ask, "Que diable allaient-ils faire dans cette galère?"

THE OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP.

Taylor in the bunker at the Railway hole.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

THE OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP.

(1) Arnaud Massey bunkered at the 15th hole. (2) Braid, the Open Champion, driving at the 7th hole. (3) Vardon approaching the 3rd hole; "it looks like a slice, methinks!" (4) Vardon putting on the 10th green. (5) Braid putting on the 16th green. (6) Mr. R. Maxwell finishing his second round. (7) The crowd on the last green.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

BRAID PUTTING.

The photograph shows the stance and grip of the Open Champion playing a critical putt on one of the greens at St. Andrews.

THE OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP AT ST. ANDREWS.

Nearly a breakdown! Braid on the railway at the 16th hole.

THE PRESENTATION CEREMONY.

Braid and the other professionals receiving their prizes in front of the club-house.

I notice in the interesting book which Harry Vardon has just published that he has something appropriate to say on this very important subject. It is not often that the long-suffering professional emits a growl of dissatisfaction and protest; but Vardon's point of view, about the behaviour of some portions of a golf crowd, agrees very thoroughly with that of "An Old Golfer." Here is what Vardon says in his book (page 263):

"I have generally found the crowds who follow a big professional match round the links both highly intelligent and exceedingly considerate. But sometimes we overhear some strange things said. Taylor and I were once fulfilling an important engagement together, and when my opponent had a particularly difficult shot to play, two ladies came up quite close to him and persisted in talking in a loud tone of voice. Taylor waited for a little while, in the hope that their chatter would cease, but it did not. Then in a feeling of desperation he attempted to address his ball; but the task was hopeless. The conversation went on more loudly than ever, and he was doomed to certain failure if he attempted his stroke in the circumstances. So he stood up again and looked round in the direction whence the voices came. 'Oh,' said one of the ladies then, 'you can go on now. We've quite finished.'

"James Braid and I were once playing down at Beckenham. At one of the putting greens we were both a long way from the hole. My ball was a trifle the more distant of the two, and so I played the odd, and managed to get down a wonderfully fine putt. Then Braid played the like, and holed out also. When his ball had trickled safely into the hole, and the spectators were moving towards the next tee, Braid and I were amused, but not flattered, by the words of a man who was speaking to a friend in such a loud voice that we could all hear: 'Oh,' he exclaimed deprecatingly, 'those fellows only do that sort of thing for the sake of the applause.'

"It was with Braid also that I was playing in a match at Luton towards the close of last year, when I overheard a singular remark. I happened to be bunkered at the fourteenth, and took my niblick to get out, but lost the hole. We walked on together to the next tee, and Braid was taking his stance, when we heard two gentlemen eagerly discussing and explaining the recent bunker incident. Evidently one of them was supposed to know something of golf, and the other nothing at all. 'You see,' said the former to his friend, 'there is really no rule in the matter at all. Vardon or any other player could have used a shovel in that bunker, and have simply shovelled the ball over on to the other side.' I was surprised that Braid got his next tee shot in so well as he did. And how very often have I heard the question asked in the crowd, 'Why do those fellows chalk the faces of their clubs?' And how invariably has the answer been, 'So that they can see afterwards where they hit the ball!'"

Vardon closes by stating that he is making no accusation against golf crowds generally. They are excellent, he says, from all points of view, "But it must inevitably happen that there are some people among them who know little of the game, and others who do not appreciate what a trying ordeal a hard-fought match usually is."—I am, etc.

A GOLFER'S WIFE.

FIXTURES.

June 24.—Hanger Hill, Open Amateur Meeting.
June 24.—Sudbrook Park, Rube Challenge Shield.
June 24-25.—Le Touquet v. Press Golfing Society.
June 26.—Highgate and East Finchley, Ladies' Summer Meeting.
July 1.—Rye, Monthly Medal.
July 1.—Rye, Silver Cleek ("Bogey").
July 3-4-5.—Borough of Hythe, Challenge Trophy.
July 8.—Sundridge Park, Treasurer's Cup.
July 10.—Folkestone, Summer Meeting.
July 12.—Beckenham, Ladies' Summer Meeting.
July 15.—Raynes Park, Summer Meeting.
July 15.—Hayling, Summer Meeting.
July 16.—Boulogne v. Le Touquet, at Wimereux.
July 29-31.—Lytham and St. Anne's, Summer Meeting.
July 31.—Irish Open Amateur Championship, at Ballymount.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. XLVIII.—Mr. George Alexander Hardy, L.C.C., Prospective Liberal Candidate for the Stowmarket Division of Suffolk.

ALTHOUGH Mr. George Hardy was born in London, and is at the present moment one of the most active members of the L.C.C., he comes of a good old Yorkshire stock. At the age of twenty-two George Hardy (whose grandfather had migrated to the metropolis from the North) became a partner in a London business, and six years later entered the arena of public life by joining the Greenwich Vestry. He very soon gave proof of the possession of the good fighting powers which distinguished the Thomas Masterman Hardy of Trafalgar times, as well as of that dogged determination to overcome all obstacles which has materially assisted his success in commerce. He was one of those who held the fort of Liberalism in Dulwich in the dark days of the omnipotence of the late Sir Blundell Maple, and in 1896 he boldly entered the lists against the late Captain Middleton, then the all-powerful chief of the Conservative executive in Victoria Street. He was beaten by a majority of 1,200, but three years later his adversary resolved to devote his energy and talents entirely to the interests of Tottenham Court Road, and George Hardy headed the poll against such powerful opponents as Mr. Thornhill and Mr. Radcliffe Cousins, the secretary of the Tariff Reform League. Since then very few men have done more useful work on the great council which is now responsible for the future of London. He has been chairman of several important committees with conspicuous success, and, in conjunction with Mr. Frank Trier, he has been instrumental in raising the sum of £50,000 (of which a moiety was voted by the L.C.C.), which has given the dwellers on Denmark Hill a beautiful park of twenty-five acres studded with forest trees and destined for all time to perpetuate the memory of Ruskin, who, like Mendelssohn and Browning, was once closely connected with this picturesque lung of London. As an organiser Mr. George Hardy has few rivals, and the influence of his strong and attractive personality has made itself felt throughout the length and breadth of the Stowmarket Division of Suffolk, where he has been assiduously fighting the battle of Liberalism and Free Trade for over two years, and where the sturdy peasants and their wives are content to tramp miles, night after night, to listen to his cheery and convincing speeches, which have won alike their affection and their confidence. The Stowmarket Division is quite forty miles long, and includes within its limits half of Newmarket, as well as the ancient borough of Thetford, the towns of Brandon and Mildenhall, and the county seats of Lords Bristol, Durham, Cadogan, and Iveagh, as well as Gidding Hall, the "moated grange" of that sturdy Liberal, Mr. Arthur Wakerley of Leicester.

Lord Bristol has refused to quit the Free Trade fold, and George Hardy has no more whole-hearted or loyal supporter than Lord Durham, who has taken the chair at Liberal meetings in North-West Suffolk, to the discomfiture of those who endeavoured to make unfair capital out of a supposed anathema on racing pronounced by Mr. John Burns, for whose views on other subjects Mr. Hardy had professed sympathy. At a certain political gathering in or near Newmarket a handbill was distributed, pointing out that if the race-courses were "ploughed up," in accordance with Mr. Burns's dictum, "every stableman would be thrown out of employment, hundreds of homes would be ruined, and families reduced to poverty." It was addressed to "all good and true sportsmen in Exning, Newmarket and District," and concluded strongly advising "all true lovers of sport" to withhold any kind of "support or encouragement" from Mr. Hardy. Lord Durham has ever been a lover of fair play, both in sport and politics, and when he held up the offending leaflet and declared, with no uncertain voice, that he was a senior Steward of the Jockey Club and stood by Mr. Hardy, whom he believed to be in every way worthy of their loyalty, a cheer was raised which could be heard half a mile off, and the whole conspiracy vanished into thin air. In private life Mr. George Hardy is a devoted Free Churchman, and continues to do much good work as a deacon of Camberwell Green Congregational Church, a director of the London Missionary Society, a trustee of Cheshunt College, a committeeman of the Religious Tract Society, vice-president of the Surrey Congregational Union, and president of the Free Church Council for South-East London. Notwithstanding the ever-increasing demands on his time and strength made by his duties at Spring Gardens and his labours in Suffolk, he has never thought of relinquishing the excellent work he has carried on every Sunday for well-nigh a quarter of a century in connection with the Sunday School Institute at Camberwell Green. Mrs. Hardy sympathises strongly in all her husband's self-imposed tasks, as well as his political aspirations. Their only son, a pupil at Guy's, is now a fully-qualified M.R.C.S. and L.R.C.P.

For twenty years North-West Suffolk has oscillated pretty regularly between the two poles of contemporary politics. In 1892 it accepted Baron Stern (Lord Wandsworth) and rejected Lord Chelsea; in 1895, and again in 1900, it preferred Mr. Ian Hamilton to either Mr. H. Walker or Mr. J. C. Horobin. If appearances can be trusted, the pendulum at the next election will swing back again to its old position. It will be a surprise to very few people if Mr. Hardy's majority is not larger than that achieved by Baron Stern in 1891 or 1892, for in many ways he is an ideal candidate for an agricultural constituency like that he hopes to represent. In the next House of Commons he would certainly be welcomed as a notable addition to the phalanx of educational experts now headed by such men as Mr. George White and Mr. A. E. Hutton. But this is not all. Mr. Hardy has made himself an authority on all subjects connected with the housing of the poor, the creation of small tenures, the enfranchisement of the tenant from the undue tyranny of the landlord, the granting of old-age pensions, and other kindred topics. Possibly they are of more real importance to those who are likely to send him as their representative to Westminster on the first available opportunity than any abstract question of national finance. As one might expect, Mr. Hardy is as orthodox a Free Trader as he is an uncompromising opponent to the Education Act now in force.

Elliott and Fry.

THE EARL OF DURHAM.

Senior Steward of the Jockey Club and a keen supporter of Mr. Hardy.

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

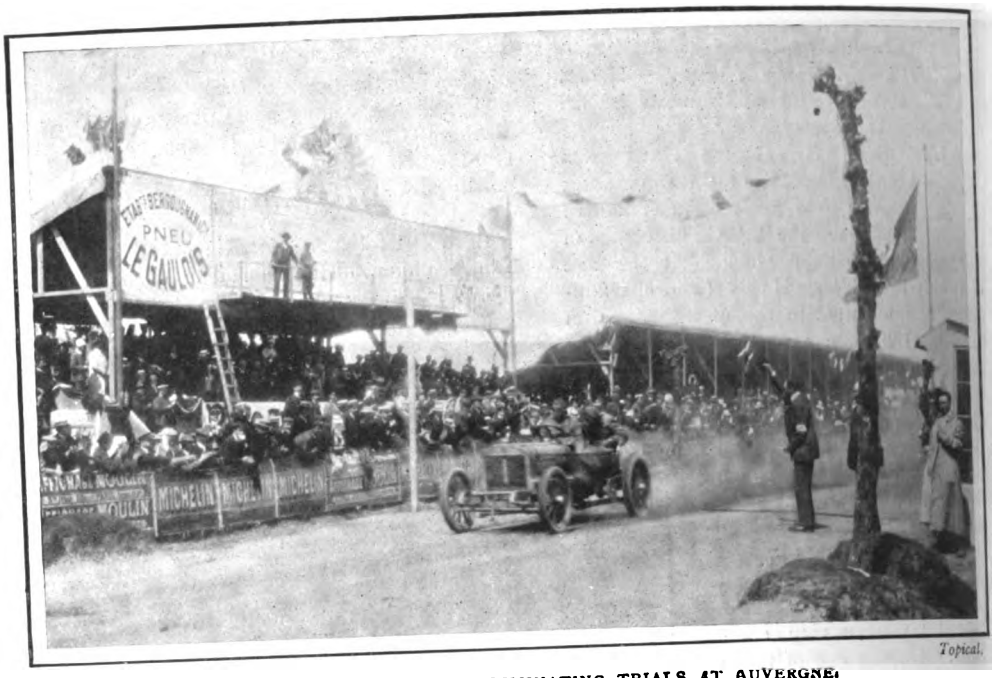
SOME weeks ago when motoring along the Thames Valley I paid a chance visit to one of the best-known launch-builders on the upper river, and heard and saw much that was interesting in regard to the rising popularity of the motor-boat. The yard was crowded with launches in various stages of construction, and, although it was a Saturday afternoon, nearly all the staff was hard at work. I was informed that steam and electric launches were almost unsaleable, and that many of the older type of river craft had been converted into motor-boats. The foreman, pointing out one of the firm's own electric launches of last year's build in process of conversion, told me that the saving in weight amounted to 35-cwt., with a corresponding decrease in draught, a matter of vital importance on the upper reaches of the Thames, where many of the most charming backwaters are closed to a boat drawing more than about 18-in. of water.

It is easy to understand why petrol should threaten to oust steam and electricity in the case of river boats. The steam launch requires from half-an-hour to an hour's preparation before it is ready to start, and an engineer must always be carried, as there are very few amateurs who possess the necessary skill to stoke a boiler and drive a steam engine, even if they were willing to undertake such a dirty and uncomfortable job for pleasure's sake. Moreover, small marine boilers have an unpleasant habit of "priming," with disastrous results to the dresses of the lady passengers, and in any case there is generally a constant rain of smuts from the funnel. The electric launch, in many respects, is ideal for river use, but it suffers from the constant necessity for charging, and its range is somewhat limited. Moreover, the batteries are a constant source of worry and expense, and a little carelessness or neglect will easily result in damage to the extent of a hundred pounds, or possibly a great deal more. Many an owner of an electric launch has had to face the cost of an entire renewal of his batteries owing to the failure to keep them properly charged during the winter months. The petrol motor has its own peculiar failings, but on the whole is far superior to steam or electricity for light-draught open boats used in an intermittent manner for pleasure purposes. If kept in proper order it is always ready for instant use, and anyone possessed of average intelligence can learn its management in two or three lessons. It is light in weight and takes up very little room, though it is somewhat inferior to the electric motor in the latter respect, as the accumulators of an electric launch are generally stowed under the seats in space which would otherwise be wasted.

A good four-cylinder petrol motor is at least as free from vibration as a steam engine, and with a really efficient silencer there is little to choose between the two in the matter of noise. The public are apt to judge the motor-boat by the fussy little single-cylinder dinghies which they see and hear panting up and down the river, and entirely forget that there is as much difference between these crude, if useful, little boats and a high-class up-to-date launch as there is between a run-about and modern high-powered touring car by a well-known maker. The only possible objections to the motor-boat are the danger of fire and the smell of the exhaust. The former may be reduced to an almost negligeable minimum if the motor and its accessories are installed by a firm who know their business; and the latter, which, however, does not affect the occupants, can generally be avoided by keeping the supply of lubricating oil within proper bounds.

The experiences of the present summer already go far towards demonstrating the difficulty of excluding the professional element from motor competitions. Reliability trials are obviously for the trade alone, and the Gordon Bennett race is admittedly merely an orgy of advertisement for the big makers, although two amateurs took part in the Isle of Man trials. There was, however, at least a hope that the amateur element might survive, and even flourish for a time, in the hill-climbing and other competitions organised by the provincial clubs. Instead one finds the same trade cars and the same trade drivers sweeping the board at one meeting after another, and hopelessly defeating the amateur owners who have entered their machines for the sake of sport and amusement. I know that in many cases the bonâ fide members of provincial clubs resent this invasion of the trade element, and the inevitable result will be the refusal of private owners to enter their cars at all in open competitions. Even "closed" events, restricted to the members of the organising body, are not exempt, as there are many professional or semi-professional drivers who join every provincial club which holds hill-climbing competitions during the summer. One can hardly blame the makers for seizing on every available opportunity for publicly demonstrating the capabilities of their machines, but there is little doubt that the provincial clubs will quickly tire of providing some half-a-dozen firms with an excellent free advertisement. The Automobile Club has



Topical.

THE GORDON BENNETT ELIMINATING TRIALS AT AUVERGNE.
Théry, the winner, passing the post.

Photo Press Co.

THE GORDON BENNETT ELIMINATING TRIALS AT AUVERGNE.
Théry passing Wagner in the third round.

Digitized by Google

recently been petitioned to relax the stringency of its competition rules in the case of closed events restricted solely to the members of the smaller motoring clubs, and the request has been complied with in a liberal spirit. I hope, however, that care will be taken to distinguish between genuinely private meetings and the big so-called closed events, the results of which are widely advertised, and where the necessity for guarding against fraudulent entries and other abuses is just as great as at an open meeting at some seaside watering-place.

MISS ELLALINE TERRISS AND MR. SEYMOUR HICKS ON A "WHITE" STEAM CAR. Burford.

(From a photograph taken outside their country house at Mersham, Surrey.)

The dust nuisance has not been very much in evidence of late, owing to the recent spell of wet weather; but at this time of year the respite from the great bugbear of motoring is likely to be only a temporary one. I often wonder why those who live close to a main road, and who complain so bitterly of the damage to their property and the personal inconvenience caused by the dust raised by passing motors, do not take active steps to solve the problem instead of writing to the newspapers, and wasting their time in vainly attempting to stem the advance of the automobile movement. The expenditure of a few pounds will secure relief from the nuisance for some months at least, and the outlay would in most cases be of small importance to those whose houses are beyond the area covered by the ordinary watering-cart. There are several patent preparations which have been proved to be reasonably efficacious in laying the dust, but the cheapest and the most permanent method is, according to my own experience, to tar the surface of the road. This gives relief for a twelvemonth at least, and has the added advantages of deadening the sound of the traffic and reducing the amount of mud in wet weather. The process is a simple one, and if properly carried out there is very little risk of damage being caused to clothes or carriages by the tar when first applied. The expense is small compared with the advantages obtained, as about £20 to £25 should suffice for a quarter of a mile of road of average width. If divided between a dozen householders the cost becomes almost a negligeable consideration, and no one who has secured such an inexpensive manner will object to the charge becoming an annual one, for a time at least. Tar and other dust-laying substances are, admittedly, merely temporary remedies, and the only permanent solution of the problem is to be found in the use of dustless material for the surface of all main roads. Experiments in this direction have already been made, and the day of dustless roads is not so distant as is generally supposed.

RADIATOR.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

AT THE GRAND PRIX

THE Grand Prix of 1905! A popular fête indeed. People of the people in crowds. The race-course at Longchamps was always accessible to Parisians. They made their preparations over-night, and walked in the dawn with their families in their arms and their dinners in a cloth; and at eight o'clock on the morning of the great race day there were picturesque groups of honest working folk resting under the trees, awaiting the arrival of the President and the "quality," lazily anticipating a day's pleasure. This was the story of preceding years, of former Grand Prix. To-day the Metropolitan Railway has changed the aspect of things. The Grand Prix is more popular than ever; but the night is no longer spent in preparation for the day. The routes are in the undisputed possession of market carts; the heaped-up, symmetrically-arranged carrots and turnips, with their layer of greens and their sleepy-eyed drivers, pass uninterruptedly on their way. The workman and his family arrive by train. For three sous they come from all parts of the capital to the entrance to the Bois—before nine o'clock for four sous "return"—and with a bottle of wine, a long bread, and various packages in the week's newspapers peeping through a brown twine net, the day begins later and less wearily.

The "quality" arrive in motors and hired victorias. But here also has come a change. As a sportive event the Grand Prix is less interesting year by year. The International character is gone. We had a couple of English horses, who looked as if the journey had disagreed with them, and a very second-rate field altogether, excepting Val d'Or, who should not have competed after his illness. The race was run in little excitement, and no cheers whatever broke the dead calm as Finasseur passed the post. It was intolerably warm, and the "field" could not move the aristocratic members of the sporting world to the smallest show of enthusiasm. Under the trees before the tribunes groups formed and people talked.

There was evidently something that caused the sunshades to be opened and the fans unfurled. It was certainly very warm. What were they talking about? Shall I tell you? Of an evening party at the house of an American woman; of costly jewels; of champagne in goblets; of a select few; of an intruder. The party was given exclusively to ladies, well known, the majority of them, in the theatrical world. There was a dark, Spanish-looking singer, and a fair, very fair, singer, a Santuzza and a Charlotte Corday; a handful of Society women, and an actress from the Boulevards, and there was a wolf in sheep's clothing. Did they know the white satin dress with its flounces of Chantilly hid the ugly frame of a wolf? How could they imagine that the large, innocent-looking blue eyes were a wolf's eyes? That the hands covered with rings, the full white arms and neck, were a wolf's; that the Venetian red hair, so softly waved and coiled about the head, was wolf's hair! But it appears it was no secret to the guests. They considered it a huge joke. One lady, however, resented the intrusion; but she was of no importance—she was the dancer who had been invited to entertain.

In every respect the Grand Prix has deteriorated. The refined Parisians, the elegant leaders of Society, who filled the tribunes and attracted the admiration of strangers by the quiet elegance of their toilettes, shun Longchamps on this day. Their places are taken by a noisier, more showy crowd. They dress in the richest of materials, in the finest of embroideries and laces; but there is a jarring note. They have not the art of wearing the beautiful clothes they buy, and the general aspect of the pesage suffers. Expensive dressing—very. But no elegance. In the crush from the gates to the green are women by the score, short and tall, fair and dark, with tinted lips and hennaed hair, with Doucet gowns and Reboux hats, but the stamp is wanting. You may think that a dress made by a big Paris tailor is always an attraction, but you are possibly not aware that there are failures in dress models as well as in other things, that there are "seconds" in gowns as well as in china. These "seconds" find their way to Vienna, to Berlin, to Brussels, to Liverpool, and come back to Paris covering the charms of Viennese, German, Belgian, and English. But they are "seconds" nevertheless, and who can say that it is not owing to these that the Grand Prix has become second-rate? The world of "little ladies" comes also more strongly into light. They were always frequenters of the fashionable race-courses, were these fractions of our sex. But they came escorted, brought by acquaintances and friends, in large and small parties, as if to help them "hold their own." To-day they come alone, walk unconcernedly through the gate, and seek a good position. Not to see the race, but to be seen by the crowd. They sit alone while the race is run, guarding their chairs, three or four around them, looking like exotic birds in a wooden cage. The grandes cocottes have forsaken the Grand Prix. They, who at one time were pointed out and curiously watched, now occasionally favour Auteuil and Chantilly on the great days, but the popular race no longer suits their taste. The company is too mixed. We find them dining at Armenonville on the night of the Grand Prix, and I may remark here that Armenonville, in the Bois, is the only fashionable restaurant where the upper demi-mondaines show themselves now and again in a public room. Lastly, there are the strangers. And here too is a distinct deterioration. The familiar sportive types belonging to the English smart set, who crossed religiously for this meeting, remain at home. Very few of the well-known sportsmen were at Longchamps this year. Strangers come in shoals, but they belong to the great unknown. The Grand Prix has deteriorated indeed.

FRANCES KEYZER.

THE GRAND PRIX OF 1905.

The ladies' tribune at Longchamps during the great race.

Digitized by Google

PARISIAN PLAYERS.

Rotary Photographic Co.

MLLE. GABRIELLE DORZIAT

The versatile and popular actress who is now appearing at the Gymnase Theatre. Paris.

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

IN these notes last week I referred to the Baltic regattas, and in view of the important position which the Kiel Week now assumes in the yachting world, no excuse is necessary for making further reference to one of the most enjoyable series of regattas of the whole year. English vessels are not so much in evidence as was the case last year owing to two reasons—firstly, the King's visit last year attracted an abnormally large number from this country; secondly, special efforts have been made to keep English yachts at home this season, the race from Cowes to the Clyde having for its special object the attraction of vessels North for the Clyde Fortnight.

It is most regrettable that two such important fixtures should clash, and one cannot help thinking that the awakening of Clyde yachtsmen to the fact that their historic "fortnight" has a serious and powerful rival in the Kiel Week, has come just a little late. The Baltic regattas have become thoroughly established, and many Englishmen who visited Kiel last year for the first time, were surprised, to say the least, at the extent to which yachting had developed in the few years during which it has attracted serious attention Germany.

It owes its development in no small measure to the interest evinced in the regattas by British yachtsmen, and the Kaiser, in seeking to promote the welfare of the sport, has put forward every inducement to our yachtsmen to be present at, and take part in, the Baltic fixtures. We have had instances of fine yachts being built in this country, and going straight away to fulfil their first engagements in German waters, and during some recent years the various regattas in the Baltic have been favoured with splendid entries, while in this country we have been complaining of the poverty of the sport.

This state of affairs has been viewed with apparent equanimity, if not apathy, by club committees, who would seem to have been imbued with a spirit of overconfidence in the belief that a revival of yachting was all that was needed for our more important fixtures to resume their old importance and attractiveness. The possibility of the Kiel Week proving a permanent attraction to Englishmen has apparently only just dawned upon us, and hence the special effort to induce our own yachtsmen to visit the Clyde this year in preference to crossing the North Sea.

It would, however, be more than ever unfortunate if any spirit of serious rivalry were engendered between the Baltic fixtures and any of our own; far better that some solution of the difficulty should be sought in a readjustment of dates, which would enable those who wished to do so to take the foreign fixtures in their season's engagements without forsaking any of importance at home. While it is quite true that the German regattas owe their success in no small measure to the presence of British yachts, there is, on the other hand, a point worthy of consideration which may have escaped notice, and that is, the extent to which English skippers and crews have found employment under German owners, and that, at a time when the sport was at its lowest ebb in this country, and when, but for these foreign engagements, some of our best skippers and large numbers of smart hands would have been growing stale for want of employment. Bearing this in mind, it behoves us, while safeguarding the interests of our own clubs, to endeavour to do so in such a manner as cannot be construed into a hostile opposition to those under the German ensign.

Debenham, Ryde.

ORION.

This vessel is better known to Englishmen as Meteor II. She was built for the German Emperor in 1893 from designs by the late G. L. Watson, and was originally rigged as a cutter. Sailed by Ben Parker, an Itchen Ferry skipper, she made a great reputation as a yawl in 1899. She is now manned by German Naval cadets.

It is, undoubtedly, the social side of the Kiel Week and the welcome extended to visitors that act so largely in attracting foreigners to the Baltic. All details calculated to add to the comfort of yachtsmen are carefully carried out. Thus, when yachts competing for the Heligoland Cup finish the race, they find tugs awaiting them to take them through the Canal into Kiel Harbour, and the same applies in other instances; the race from Kiel to Travemünde, for example. Three years ago, I remember sailing in this race. The course is a long one, over ninety miles, and the start is always an early one. After a long, trying race occupying sixteen hours, it was a relief to all aboard to find ourselves taken in tow up the harbour, where by the time we were moored our canvas was stowed, and the crew enabled to turn in.

In the matter of entertaining, there is a pronounced difference in the methods which obtain in the two countries. There may be no lack of hospitality in our own clubs, but it is individual in character, while in Germany it is more of an organised welcome, so that visitors are made to feel that they are guests of the club.

The Kaiserlicher Yacht Club has splendid quarters at Kiel. The building is, of course, modern, and was erected by the late Herr Krupp, and presented to the club. It contains a suite of apartments for the use of the Emperor, and a very fine banqueting hall, furnished in a tasteful and elaborate style, while the smoking-room, which runs the whole length of the building, commands a magnificent view of the harbour.

One feature of the building that appears at first somewhat strange to an Englishman, is that a portion of the ground floor is devoted to the purposes of a restaurant, to which the public has access on any day but that of the annual banquet. Naturally the principal patrons during regatta-time are yachtsmen and their friends, and the room presents a brilliant scene of an evening, when the seats at all the tables are occupied, and the sombre attire of Americans and Englishmen is relieved by the uniforms of the Naval and Military officers, who are always present in large numbers.

CORINTHIAN.

Digitized by Google

YACHTS OF THE YEAR.

Abraham.

KOMMODORE.

This cutter was built in Germany, and is a very smart craft of about 76 tons Thames measurement. She is owned by Herr A. Hasenclever. The above photograph was taken last year at the regattas of the Norddeutscher Regatta Verein, where the matches were sailed in half a gale.

Digitized by Google

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

Draycott Galleries.

MISS ENID LESLIE

Who is now appearing as one of the Gibson Girls in "The Catch of the Season" at the Vaudeville. Miss Leslie has previously appeared in "The Talk of the Town" and "The Earl and the Girl," and will, in all probability, be seen in some of Mr. Seymour Hicks's future productions.

Digitized by Google

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

Johnston & Hoffmann.

MLLE. ADELINE GENÉE

The charming première danseuse at the Empire Theatre, where she has been delighting the audiences for several seasons. Mlle. Genée, who is one of the daintiest dancers in Europe, made two of her greatest successes in "The Milliner Duchess" and "The Dancing Doll," the two famous ballets at the Empire.

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

A HOLIDAY IN SOUTH-EAST IRELAND.

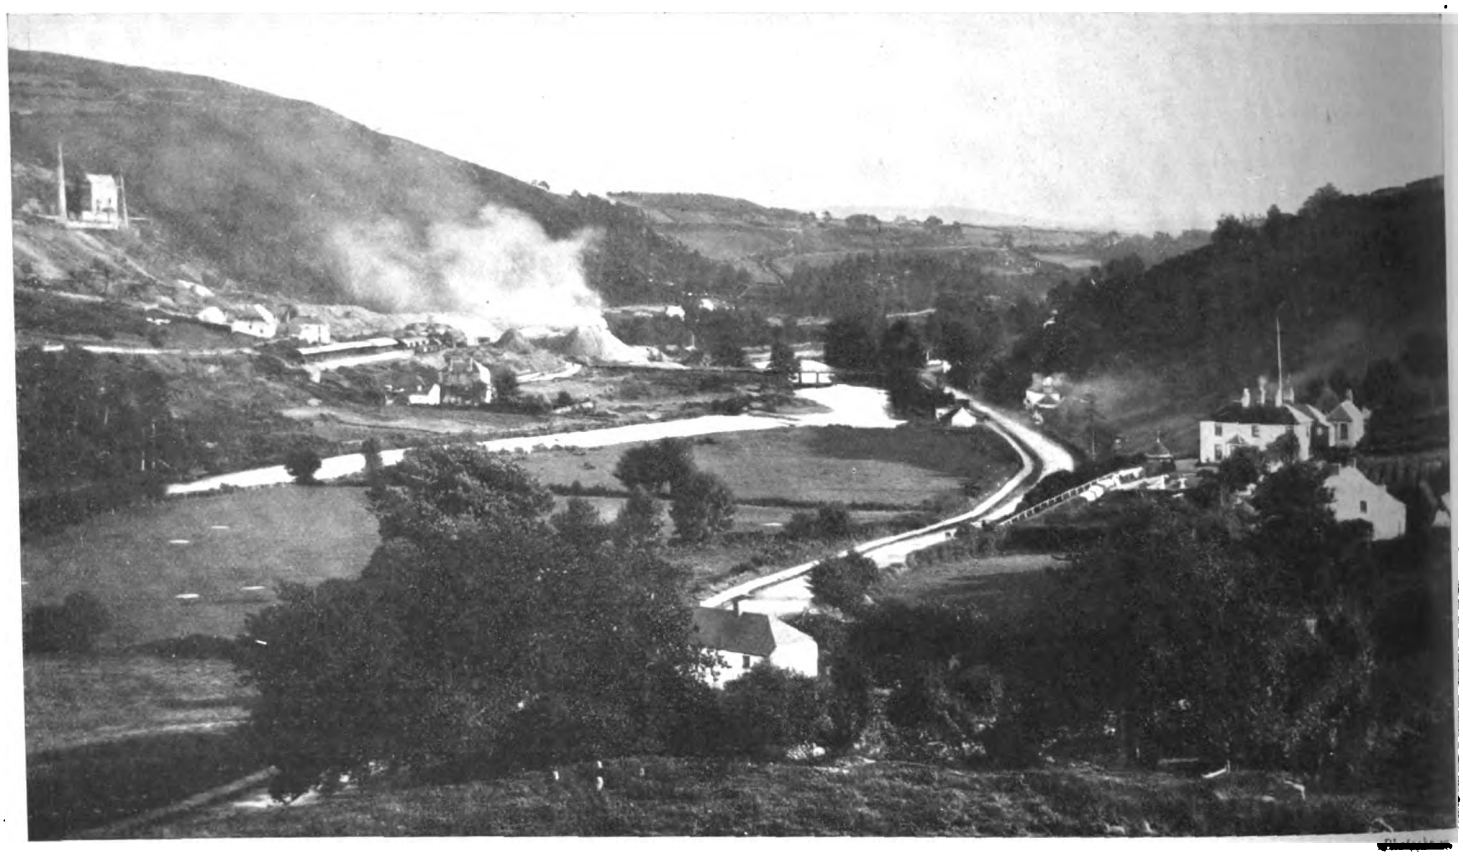
IN a country like Ireland, which is in reality one huge holiday playground, one could quite easily devote the entire summer to sight-seeing, without having to traverse the same ground twice over. But those who are anxious to see as much as possible of the beautiful Emerald Isle within the limits of an ordinary holiday, would do well to make Dublin their centre. From the traveller's point of view, Dublin corresponds more closely to London, perhaps, than any other city in Ireland, in that so many different lines of railway radiate from this point. Not the least attractive of these is the Dublin, Wicklow, and Wexford system, which offers to holiday-makers a very elaborate programme of combined rail and coach tours in the counties whence it takes its name. Bray, better known, perhaps, as "the Brighton of Ireland," is distant some ten miles from the capital, with which it is connected by two separate lines. The Irish Brighton, with its mile of sea frontage, is in every way worthy of its title, and even surpasses its English namesake in so far as natural environment is concerned. The short run from Dublin, which can be made either along the shores of Dublin Bay, or by another route through some pleasant inland scenery, is in striking contrast to the long and tedious journey which the Londoner must perforce undergo in order to reach "the Queen of English watering-places." Situated on the main line of the Dublin, Wicklow, and Wexford Railway, Bray will be found a first-rate centre for pleasant jaunts through the Vale of Shanganagh, the Dargle, the Scalp, the Rocky Valley, and the lovely Glen of the Downs. A charming day trip is the one to the Dargle—a ravine of great beauty, through which is a rapidly-running stream—and Powerscourt, the lovely estate of Lord Powerscourt, covering over 1,400 acres of land famed for its beauties of hill and dale, wood and water, and splendid mansion. The latter is open daily to visitors, with the exception of Sundays. There are many other beautiful country seats in the neighbourhood of Bray, including those of the Earl of Meath and Lord Monk. Bray Head is not only a notable landmark, but also a grand point of vantage from whence to view the surrounding country. In very clear weather Snowdon and the Welsh mountains are visible. The attractions of Bray will compare favourably with those of most of our English watering-places; if anything, it is more up-to-date than the great majority. About midway between Bray and Arklow is the quaint yet picturesque town of Wicklow, well deserving of a visit, if only for the sake of enjoying the beauty of its surroundings, and the excellent sea, river, and lake fishing. In many cases this sport can be indulged in without fee or payment of any kind. Wicklow is but one station from Rathnen, whence many people prefer to start for the famous excursion to Glendalough and its seven churches. This charming day's outing is perhaps best made by driving from Rathdrum and returning to Rathnen. In selecting this way one is able to view the celebrated Devil's Glen in the evening light, at which time the scene is far more impressive than in daylight.

A beautiful wooded road leads from Rathdrum through the Vale of Clara, until the village of Laragh is reached, keeping the river Avonmore in view most of the way. A few miles further along, and we reach the entrance to the famous valley. Standing close by is the Royal Hotel, which affords a variety of lovely views in every direction. At one corner of its garden is the ruined entrance to "the seven churches," while but a few yards distant are the churches themselves. The scenery of Glendalough—the glen of the two lakes—is singularly impressive; its wild and desolate grandeur is perhaps unsurpassed even in Ireland.

The "City of Glendalough," tradition has it, was founded early in the sixth century by St. Kevin, who was of the Royal house of Leinster. He became a hermit, and for seven years dwelt in the wilderness of Glendalough. The Round Tower, still in a fair state of preservation, is probably the most remarkable feature of the valley. The kitchen or cell of this saint is of peculiar interest, the stone roof being in a perfect state of preservation. County Wicklow has well been termed the Garden of Ireland, for valleys, glens, and mountains abound in the district. From Glendalough we can reach the Vale of Glendassan, with Lough Nahangan at its head, the Vale of Glenmacnass, and Glenmalure, with its peculiar geological features.

Among other points of interest on the Dublin, Wicklow, and Wexford line is the celebrated Vale of Ovoca, upon which Moore by his well-known lines has conferred immortal fame. Just a short walk from Ovoca Station takes us to the Valley of Cronbrane, where by the meeting of the waters—the Avonmore and the Avonbeg—Moore is said to have rested when he wrote his famous verses. The tour can be continued to Woodenbridge, which the Irish are pleased to claim as the "Balmoral of Ireland."



THE VALE OF OVOCA.

"There is not in the wide world a valley so sweet
As that vale in whose bosom the bright waters meet;
Oh! the last rays of feeling and life must depart,
E'er the bloom of that valley shall fade from my heart."—Moore.

Digitized by Google

IN SOUTH-EAST IRELAND.

Photochrom.

THE OLD BRIDGE AND WATERFALL, POULAPHUCA.

One of the most beautiful spots in the vicinity of Glendalough, whose famous valley and ruined churches form perhaps one of the greatest attractions in County Wicklow.

Digitized by Google

The Ninetieth Anniversary of Waterloo.

(1815—1905.)

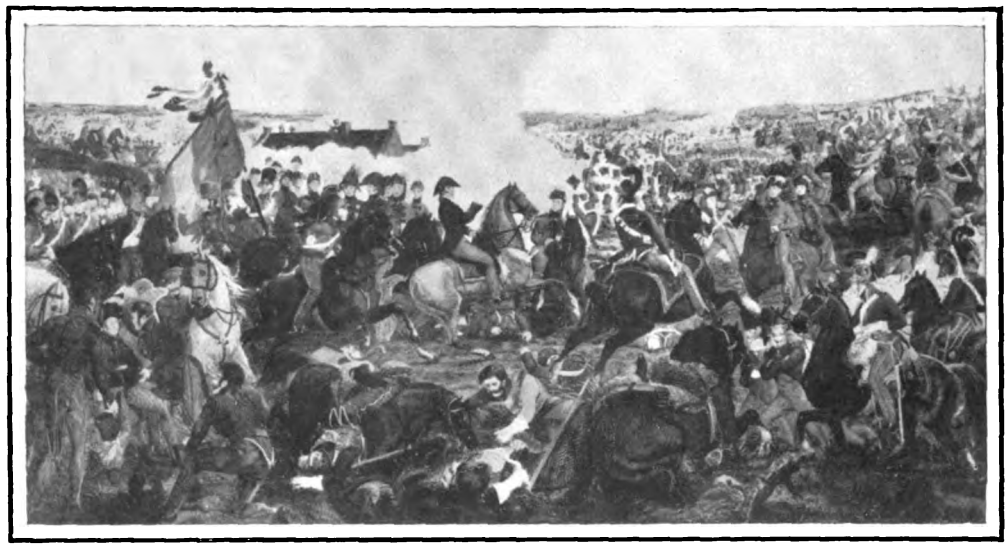
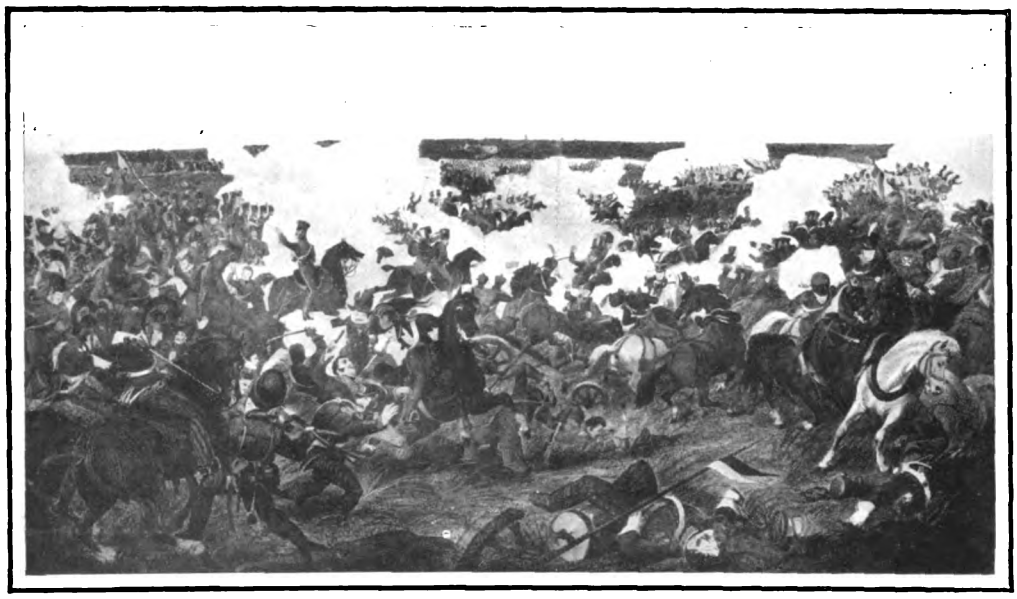
SOME RARE AQUATINTS OF WELLINGTON'S GREAT VICTORY.



WATERLOO, JUNE 15, 1815: THE FIGHT AROUND LA HAIE SAINTE.
From a large contemporary aquatint by H. A. Cook, after a painting by Alexander Sauerweid



WATERLOO, JUNE 18: THE LAST PHASE OF THE FIGHT.
From a painting by Alexander Sauerweid, aquatinted by H. A. Cook.

AFTER WATERLOO, JUNE 18, 1815: THE SCENE ON THE FIELD.
From a large and very rare contemporary aquatint.

ALTHOUGH the ninetieth anniversary of Waterloo is, for obvious reasons, overshadowed by the approaching centenary of Trafalgar, it should not be allowed to pass unnoticed. The three large aquatint views of different stages of the battle now reproduced are exceedingly rare, and were published in 1816. The one apparently portraying the meeting of Blücher and Wellington at the close of the "Conflict of Giants," was purchased by a Waterloo collector from Mr. Robson of Coventry Street; the other two were obtained from Mr. A. Baker, Weymouth. They show the fierce struggle for the possession of the farmhouse of La Haie Sainte, and the last charge of the Imperial Guard. Curiously enough, they are not quite finished, whereas the details of Mr. Robson's aquatint are unusually elaborate.

Neither of these striking contemporary colour-prints will be found in the interesting Waterloo Museum on the battle-field, formed some sixty years ago by Sergeant-Major Edward Cotton, and added to ever since by his descendants. Cotton fought at Waterloo in the 7th Hussars, and in 1845 compiled an exceedingly useful little handbook, entitled "A Voice from Waterloo," which was published in Brussels, and elicited commendatory letters from both Sir Hussey Vivian and Colonel T. H. Blair. The first edition of Cotton's guide is now rarely to be met with.

Cotton was born in the Isle of Wight about 1792, and is described in the Naval and Military Gazette of 1845 as "an intelligent, active, good-looking man of fifty-three years of age, and the very cut of a hussar." According to the Waterloo Roll Call he "had his horse killed under him" on the "ever-glorious eighteenth of June." He died on June 24, and, by his express desire, was buried by the side of Captain Blackwood in the historic orchard of Hougomont.

In 1890 their remains were removed to the crypt beneath the Waterloo Monument at Evere. Mr. Sidney Cooper relied very largely on the facts given by Cotton in the composition of the large picture he painted for exhibition in Westminster Hall. Any visit to the battle-field without an inspection of the Cotton collection of arms and other relics would certainly be incomplete. Since the gallant Sergeant first opened it some time in the early forties of the last century, the visitors' books have received over a million signatures, including those of many crowned heads and other illustrious personages. Of late years, at the suggestion of the late Sir W. Fraser, who supplied it, a register has been set apart for the descendants of Waterloo combatants. On an average, about 10,000 English and American visitors still find their way to Waterloo every summer. The Hotel du Musée (of which the Museum, as the name sufficiently indicates, forms an important feature) still belongs to Cotton's descendants. For many years past Mrs. Browne (the great-niece of Sergeant-Major Cotton, and herself the widow of a Naval officer) has been the hostess of the Hotel du Musée. After the ninetieth anniversary of Waterloo Day she retires, to the infinite regret of a whole generation of Waterloo visitors—British and foreign—who will always entertain a grateful recollection of her kindness and courtesy.

A. M. B.

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Ellis, Malta

WITH THE ATLANTIC FLEET.

Rear-Admiral Bridgeman, second in command of the Atlantic Fleet, with his staff, on board the flag-ship "Victorious."

Digitized by Google

THE REAL HAMLET.

A FAT MAN'S TRAGEDY.

THERE is, to borrow a phrase from the Money Market, a slump in Hamlets. "Anyone who produces 'Hamlet' in London within the next ten years" (a friend assures me) "must do it for his health; he will make no money by it." For myself, I confess I never want to see the traditional Hamlet again. He offends me to the soul with his prancings and sobbings and gibberings. He is a tedious mountebank, whose carefully-calculated passion stirs nothing in my breast but a feeling of wonder that King Claudius put up with him so long.

Quite the most interesting Hamlet I ever saw was Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, and the charm of her performance was that she cast tradition to the winds. She brought to the play a fresh mind, an imagination untrammelled by the cheap theatricality of generations of actors dead and gone. Mr. Forbes-Robertson added to the customary stage characteristics of the Prince—now those of a mute at a funeral, now such as would befit an inmate of Colney Hatch, and yet again the kind of idiosyncrasies which we connect with the typical actor-manager, greedy of the centre of the stage and all the limelight—to these, I say, Mr. Forbes-Robertson added such a gracious, winning personality, that his Hamlet almost made tradition tolerable—almost, but not quite. Sir Henry Irving's I never saw. As to all the others, non ragioniam di lor! They were all tedious, and I believe for this reason—that they never came near to the heart of the play. The real Hamlet, I suggest, has not been shown to us since Shakespeare was alive.

The question everyone asks about Hamlet is why he did not revenge his father's death at once. Why did he put off and put off the retribution which he planned immediately the Ghost had told its story? The usual reply is, "It was Hamlet's nature to shun action." That is scarcely an explanation, however; the query follows hard upon it: Why was it his nature? To that the Hamlet tradition supplies no answer. Let me try to clear up the mystery. "Hamlet," I am persuaded, after a study of the play extending over twenty years, is the tragedy of a fat man. Everybody knows how the expression used by the Queen about her son, "He's fat and scant of breath," has puzzled the commentators. I invite you to read it in its literal sense, then I feel sure the drama will strike you as being far clearer and far grander even than it has ever seemed before. Naturally you will ask for confirmation in the text. Let me deal with this most reasonable request at once.

First of all, consider what we know of Hamlet's father. Not much, it is true; but this amongst other things, that it was his custom always in the afternoon to sleep within his orchard. Evidently he was not a man of active habits; we know the kind of man who sleeps in the afternoon. He is of large bulk; indolent because it is a trouble to him to school his great person to energetic pursuits. We are given to understand, too, that the murdered King was a heavy feeder. This, no doubt, explains in part his regular afternoon nap. His son says of King Claudius: "He took my father, grossly full of bread."

The elder Hamlet was not of those who follow the rule to rise always from the table unsatisfied; and since he was of a sluggish nature, it could be only natural that he should both grow fat himself, and also transmit the tendency to his only son.

Again, before we leave Hamlet's father, notice one phrase he uses concerning his son:

> "And duller shouldst thou be than the fat weed
> That rots itself in ease on Lethe wharf,
> Wouldst thou not stir in this."

Now why does he choose the epithet "fat" if it be not his son's person that puts it into his mind? "Fat weed" is a curious expression. Depend upon it Shakespeare did not write "fat" there without intention.

Johnston and Hoffmann.

MR. H. B. IRVING AS HAMLET.

Coming now to Hamlet himself, observe the very first words he speaks when he is alone on the stage. Shakespeare nearly always chooses such a moment to give us the keynote of his theme. The courtiers clear off. We watch the subtle-costumed Prince intently. How will he reveal himself to us? Listen:

> "O, that this too, too solid flesh would melt, > Thaw, and resolve itself into a dew."

Can we imagine Shakespeare put these lines into this important position if he did not mean them to illuminate our minds concerning Hamlet's nature? It is as clear as daylight. Hamlet was too fat.

Many men are fat, yet not too fat. They are of a cheerful disposition. It is good temper which adds to their waist measurement. The unhappy fat man, the man who worries about his fatness (as Hamlet does in this speech), the man who feels his girth a handicap, the atrabilarious fat man, he is a tragic spectacle indeed.

Here was the cause of Hamlet's inability to act upon his decisions. We all know similar cases—of people who plan greatly, but never carry out their plans because they are too fat.

Next, recall the words of Ophelia, when she is telling her father how Hamlet declared his love:

> "He raised a sigh so piteous and profound
> That it did seem to shatter all his bulk."

Note the use of the word "bulk." Hamlet was "bulky," then. And you know how fat men sigh—just such upheavals as seem to bring them within danger of disintegration. The sighs of men of ordinary size (no pun intended) are not bulk-shattering. It would be absurd to speak so of them.

Passing on to the most famous of the soliloquies, we find that Hamlet had all his father's passion for repose. To die, he says, is to sleep, and the idea of sleeping fills him with content. "'Tis a consummation devoutly to be wished," of course, for while he sleeps he can forget his abnormal, torturing form, and the constant discomfort it inflicts upon him. Yet Hamlet, poor soul, could not be happy even with plenty of repose. He rails upon himself for eating and slumbering so much.

> "What is a man
> If the chief good and market of his time
> Be but to sleep and feed?"

He is in an agony of self-reproach when he utters these words. He means that he has been doing nothing but sleep and feed, and it is no more than reasonable to assume that heavy meals and lack of exercise had their natural result.

Once more, see how Hamlet's mind ran upon fatness. In the scene after the slaying of Polonius, his "wild and whirling words" have a curious significance:

> "We fat all creatures else to fat us, and > We fat ourselves for maggots."

Such an image would never occur to a thin man.

Finally, there is good ground for my assurance in the concluding scene of the play—ample ground for believing Hamlet to have been of unusual size and weight, even if the theory was not supported by the passages I have quoted already. Fortinbras, in giving directions for the funerals, says:

> "Let four captains > Bear Hamlet."

No Hamlet I have ever seen would have wanted more than two captains at the very outside.

I think I have put my case well beyond reach of disproof; but if any doubt still, let me remind them of the pregnant fact that Richard Burbage, the actor, whom Shakespeare chose to "create the part" of Hamlet, was a fat man by nature. Would that some player of our own time of equal bulk with the famous Burbage would show us the real Hamlet. Will no one make the attempt?

Φ

Digitized by Google

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

MISS LETTICE FAIRFAX Ellis and Walery.

As Leonora Dunbar in Mr. J. M. Barrie's successful play, "Alice Sit-by-the-Fire," which is still playing to crowded houses at the Duke of York's Theatre.

Digitized by Google

The River Season.

HAMPTON, FROM THE SURREY SHORE.

Although the farmers love a "dripping June," it is no joy to the riverside boat-builders and hotel-keepers, and they are all hoping that the next month will have something better in the way of weather and visitors to show them. In a few days Henley Regatta will be beginning, and the presence of the American crew this year will lend an International interest to the racing.

(From a copyright photograph specially supplied to this paper.)

Digitized by Google

THE CRICKET SEASON.

ARNOLD WARREN.

One of the most valuable properties of a fast bowler is what is known to cricketers as "devil." This property is not easy to define with any precision. Perhaps it will be understood better if one says that when a bowler is bowling with "devil," no batsman, even when set, is comfortable with this bowler's deliveries. Warren, of the Derbyshire County XI., possesses more of this property than any other bowler now playing. Properly speaking, he did last season, as this year he has not up to the time of writing shown, except on rare occasions, his best form. Had he done so he must, even despite the valuable opinion of men like A. O. Jones, who knows the Nottingham wicket well, have been chosen to play in the first Test match. He is the most likely successor we have to W. H. Lockwood, but he has yet to prove himself possessed of that bowler's faculty for rising to the occasion.

A. P. LUCAS.

"Bunny" to his intimates, the famous Old Uppinghamian is, without exception, one of the very soundest bats who have ever played in a Test match or made a tour in Australia. A man of many counties, "A. P." has played for Surrey, Middlesex, and latterly for Essex, and if there is one bowler he prefers to bat against more than another it is a really bad fast bowler. In his day he would probably have hit Cotter all over the field. While he was still at Uppingham, and a boy of fourteen or fifteen, H. H. Stephenson wrote to someone on the Surrey committee to say "We have here a young player on whom it is well worth your keeping your eye, for he will be playing for the Gentlemen before very long," which shows Stephenson to have been no bad judge. Possibly A. P. Lucas may be playing at Leyton to-day against the Australians in the first of the two Essex matches against our visitors.

C. J. BURNUP.

That nicknames follow popularity is indisputable. And there is no more popular cricketer, and few better, than "Pinkie" Burnup, the famous Old Malvernian-Cantab, who scored over 2,000 runs in 1902, and had very hard lines in not being included in a Test match in that season. He and Abel alone scored over 2,000 in that season, which, it is scarcely necessary to remind readers, was a very wet one, while in 1899 his bowling had much to do with the unexpected defeat of the Colonials at Canterbury. Since these seasons he has done admirably, and has always been one of the very best fieldsmen in the world. Last year absence abroad caused him to miss cricket, and his appearances this season in first-class cricket will, there is reason to fear, be only of a spasmodic nature. "More's the pity," all Kentish men and most other cricketers will say.

WALTER LEES.

A trier if ever there was one! This Yorkshireman, with the jerky run-up and medium fast right-arm delivery, has at last this season received the reward of the untiring hard work of several seasons past, for he was chosen among the first thirteen for the first Test match of the present Australian tour. He possesses the faculty of swerving either way at a good pace, and, at his best, pitches just short of a good length; a very likely bowler on a plumb wicket to get the best of batsmen out during those early five or ten minutes, before a sight of the ball has been obtained. As Lord Dalmeny said at the dinner given by the Surrey County Cricket Club to the Australians, Lees would like to bowl right through the innings from both ends. He is a cheery bat, who will have a rare good hit at the first ball you bowl him, and in the field is always saving runs. Aye, a trier indeed!

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

ONLY a few weeks ago it appeared to be something akin to a certainty that the English and French Derbys as well as the Grand Prix de Paris would be won by the representatives of M. E. Blanc's powerful stable; but in this case, as in many others, it is the unexpected that has happened, and the spoils have fallen to others. As regards the English Derby it will, in all probability, never be decided whether the victory of Cicero was owing to his own merits or to the illness of Jardy; and it certainly seems to be an especially unkind stroke of fate that not only should M. Blanc's champions have been prevented by sickness from proving their racing capabilities in the two great races of the year in France, but that both of these races should have been won by an animal bred by M. Blanc and drafted out of the stable as being unworthy of his companions. There has been much talk of late about the deficiency of Herod blood in this country, and on that account it may be of some interest to draw attention to the pedigree of Finasseur, the winner of the French Derby and the Grand Prix de Paris. He is by Winkfield's Pride out of Finande, by Clamart, her dam Fine Mouche, by Tristan out of Frivola, by George Frederick; in tail male Finasseur is of Matchem blood, but there are many strains of Herod blood, some of them quite close up, on his dam's side. Plum Centre and Shah Jehan, the representatives of England in the Grand Prix, made a very poor show in the race, and, taking such line as one can through the running of Shah Jehan in the Derby and in the Grand Prix, it would appear that, even with M. Blanc's cracks out of the way, the French three year old form is every bit as good as our own.

Unfortunately the pleasure of many holiday-makers on Whit-Monday was completely spoiled by the bad weather, which interfered not a little with sport in general and racing in particular, the proceedings at even such a popular resort as Hurst Park being anything but lively, the seven races on Monday only bringing out some forty-eight horses, although their value amounted to £2,000. Neither can it be said the lack of quantity was in any way

Copyright.

THE RACE FOR THE MANCHESTER CUP.
The competitors preparing for the start.

equalised by the quality of the runners. Backers fared badly in the first race of the day, Mr. C. Trimmer's Primerole, the outsider of the party, administering a hollow beating to Mr. S. Joel's Ardeer, who was a very strong favourite for the Sprint Selling Race, which, by the way, was the first race run over the new five-furlong course, which would, perhaps, be better described as the old five-furlong course, improved by the bend in the first furlong being practically done away with. Mr. G. H. A. Marshall's Poppits, a nice St. Angelo mare, won the All-aged Selling Plate, and the way was cleared for the Whitsuntide Plate of 1,000-sovs., for which only five horses came out, but a very pretty contest took place, Golden Measure winning by a neck from Cyanean, with Prudent King beaten into third place by the same distance. The winner has been running in the classic races of the year, and is either not so good as his connections imagine him to be, or Cyanean is coming back to the good form she showed at one time as a two year old. Should that be so, backers will do well to remember the daughter of Cyllene, who is also the sire of Goring Heath, the winner of the Holiday Handicap. Demure, a daughter of Blairfinde and Shy Lady, ran home an easy winner in the Hampton Court Stakes. Gallant old Ypsilanti had a pleasant task in the Open Plate, and "Mr. Jersey's" Vergia won the Vyner Handicap in a hack canter from Togo, who just kept Arid out of second place by a short head.

On the Tuesday the Palace Selling Plate went to Rayleigh, by St. Angelo out of Chemistry, and the principal race of the day, the Hurst Park Yearling Plate, was won by Thrush, by Missel Thrush out of the same mare, who, by the way, is full of Herod blood on both sides of her family. The remainder of the racing does not call for much comment.

The Manchester Whitsuntide Meeting took place under the most pleasant conditions, and the executive are to be congratulated on the improvements which have been made, which undoubtedly make for the comfort of visitors. Golden Table, by Count Schomberg, won the John o' Gaunt Plate for Mr. W. H. Hall-Walker; the Castle Irwell Handicap of 1,000-sovs. went to Mr. G. Edwards's Nutwith, after a pretty race with Kilteel, and Mr. S. Joel won the Trial Handicap of 300-sovs. with Horn Head, by Big Head out of Belrose. The Manchester Cup of 3,000-sovs. was the pièce de resistance on the Friday, and not a few of the twelve runners received substantial support from their adherents; in the event, however, Mr. R. H. Henning's Airship, by Ayrshire out of Silverling, ran home a gallant winner by a length from Whistling Crow and Thunderbolt. One of the most exciting finishes of the season took place in the Beaufort Handicap—Nirvanah, Electric Current, and Xeny finishing in the order named.

On Friday at Ascot the following horses should run well: Queen of the Earth in the Ascot High Weight Stakes, Delaunay or Thrush in the Wokingham Stakes, Imperial II. in the King's Stand Stakes, and Liao in the Fifty-Second Triennial.

CAURIRE.

Copyright.

THE WINNER OF THE MANCHESTER CUP.
Mr. R. H. Henning's Airship, by Ayrshire—Silverling.

Digitized by Google

THE MANCHESTER MEETING.

A VIEW OF THE LAWN, SHOWING THE FAMOUS RACE-COURSE. Baker and Dixon.

The meeting took place under almost ideal conditions, the Cup being won by Mr. R. H. Henning's Airship by a length.

Digitized by Google

The Ladies' Clubs of London.

IV.—THE WRITERS' CLUB.

AMONGST the many clubs for ladies in the metropolis the Writers ranks as of first importance. It is, perhaps, the most unassuming of all the feminine coteries, so far, at least, as externals are concerned. The club-rooms at 10, Norfolk Street, Strand, are unpretentious, but practical. Indeed, the keynote to the club is practicality. Its object is simply to provide a place in the neighbourhood of the Strand where women engaged in literary or journalistic work can write in silence, dine, see the newspapers, and meet their friends, and it fulfils its functions in the most admirable manner.

The president of the club is H.R.H. Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein. Mrs. Alfred Felkin (E. Thorneycroft Fowler) is chairman of committee, 1905, and amongst the vice-presidents are Mrs. Gertrude Atherton, Mrs. Hodgson Burnett, Mrs. W. K. Clifford, Mrs. Craigie, Lucas Malet, Mrs. Meynell, the Countess of Munster, Lady Paget, Mrs. Steele, and the Duchess of Sutherland. The hon. secretaries are Miss G. Ireland Blackburne and Miss L. R. Mitchell. From this it will be seen that the Writers can claim distinction second to none. The club was founded in 1891 by Miss Frances Low and Mrs. John Strange Winter, and the fourteen years of its life have been ripe with usefulness and prosperity.

The "At Home" teas, which take place once a week, are the only social event which the club permits itself to enjoy. That the members derive the keenest enjoyment from these teas, no one who has been privileged to attend can for a moment doubt. The secretary modestly describes them as "quiet" functions; but this description is totally inadequate, and cannot be taken literally. Members and their friends crowd the rooms, the men, who are, of course, in a helpless minority, feeling their appalling insignificance before such an array of beauty and brains. The ladies good-naturedly forbear to take undue advantage of their numerical strength, and content themselves by dispensing lavish hospitality to all comers.

For further proof of their impartiality the following fragment of conversation, accidentally overheard, may be taken as an example: "Every fool has a vote, but we women are not allowed to assert ourselves in any way. It is not the votes of the men which keep us back; it is the votes of the fools."

The value of a club like the Writers to the working woman journalist is unquestionable, and to the literary woman, who is, perhaps, too apt to see life from the standpoint of her own particular work, it will be readily understood that there is the great advantage of being able to exchange ideas with others of her craft, as the club is the means of bringing together literary women from all parts of the world; and hardly a week passes without a visit being received from a member residing abroad, often accompanied by a friend from the Colonies, to whom the assistance and advantages afforded by the club are extremely welcome.

Socially, the woman's club has many obvious advantages in enlarging the interests and scope of a woman's life, and increasing that gregarious spirit which is more pronounced amongst men, owing to the lack of opportunities from which women have suffered in this respect.

Collectively, the existence of such clubs demonstrates more than anything else the importance of the woman element in Society as a factor with vast possibilities in promoting social and educational advancement. Possibly the women themselves fail to realise the strength of their unity and organisation, and the immense power and influence for good they might wield.

The admirable arrangements, and the excellent rules of the institution, are doubtless responsible in a large degree for its success, and offer every facility to members for social intercourse, at the same time helping to exclude any undesirable influences which might be prejudicial to the welfare of the club. It is also the aim of the committee to keep the club as thoroughly up-to-date as possible, and the suggestions and recommendations of members are noted in a book set aside for the purpose, and carefully considered by the management, who are untiring in their efforts to further the interests of the club.

The success of the Writers' Club, and the fact that its membership represents alike the cream of intellectual and social womankind, as well as the rank and file, are the best evidence as to the need and utility of such an organisation.

AFTERNOON TEA AT THE WRITERS' CLUB, NORFOLK STREET, STRAND.
(From a photograph specially taken for this paper by Mr. F. G. Hodsoll.)

Digitized by Google

What it is.

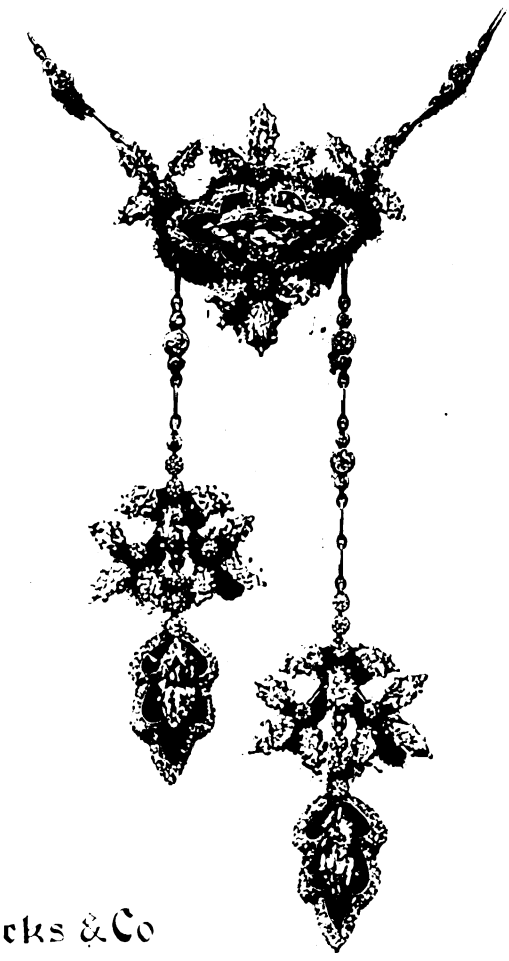
Composition of the Famous GRAPE-NUTS Breakfast Food.

A widespread interest has been created as to the composition of GRAPE-NUTS, the popular fully cooked food. It has long been known to physicians, chemists and food experts that the starchy portion of entire wheat flour and barley is transformed into a true and very choice sugar by the act of intestinal digestion in the human body. This sugar is identical with and is known as grape sugar, and it is in condition for immediate transformation into blood and the necessary structure from which the delicate nerve centres are built up.

A food expert followed a line of experiments until he produced the food called GRAPE-NUTS, of which grape sugar forms the principal part, and it is produced by following out nature's processes in a mechanical way. That is, heat, moisture, and time are the methods employed and directed by scientific facts gained in research.

GRAPE-NUTS food is probably entitled to the claim to be the most perfectly adapted food for human needs now extant. Certain it is that the users delight in the flavour. The perfect action of intestinal digestion during the use of GRAPE-NUTS is satisfying, and the added strength of body proves its merits.

Jewellers to all the Courts of Europe



Hancocks & Co

Corner of Bruton St

New Bond St London

DUBLIN, WICKLOW AND WEXFORD RAILWAY.

PROGRAMME OF TOURS—RAIL, COACH, AND HOTEL,

WICKLOW, WEXFORD, WATERFORD,

MAY TO OCTOBER, 1905.

DELIGHTFUL DAY TRIPS.

1. BRAY (The Brighton of Ireland). Rail, Coach, and Hotel for Bray Head, Bray Esplanade, The Dargle, Tinnahinch Bridge, Enniskerry, The Glen of the Downs, Shanganagh, Bride's Glen, The Scalp, Ballycorus, Powerscourt Waterfall, Rocky Valley, Kilmacanogue, and Holybrooke.
2. WICKLOW (The Garden of Ireland). Rail and Hotel for Wicklow Head, Ashford, and Devil's Glen.
3. RATHNEW. Rail, Car, and Hotel, for Ashford, Devil's Glen, Glendalough (The Seven Churches), Roundwood, Douce Mon (2,384ft.), Luggelaw (3051t.), Kippure (2,743ft.), Glencree Valley, Upper and Lower Loughs Bray, Vartry Waterworks. NOTE.—Tourists will be allowed through the Devil's Glen at 11 a.m. on Sundays, by purchasing a Ticket at Ashford Hotel for 2d.
4. RATHDRUM. Rail, Coach, and Hotel for Avondale, Vales of Clara, Laragh, Glendalough, and Glenmalure.
5. OVOCA. Rail and Hotel for Meeting of Waters, Crone Bane, Tom Moore's Tree.
6. WOODENBRIDGE (The Balmoral of Ireland). Rail, Coach, and Hotel for Glenart Castle, Lake and Gardens, Shelton Abbey, Vale of Ovoca, Meeting of the Waters, Croghan Mountain, and Glenmalure.
7. AUGHRIM. Rail, Coach, and Hotel for Lugnaquilla, Glen of Emael, Aughavanagh, Glenmalure, and Humewood.
8. ARKLOW. Rail, Coach, and Hotel for Castle of the Ormonds, Cordite Works, Seabeach.

Two, Three & Four Day, Seven Day, & Saturday to Monday Excursions to Wicklow.

Saturday to Monday Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets to Bray, Greystones, Delgany, Wicklow, Ovoca, Aughrim, Glenmalure, Rathnew, Rathdrum, Glendalough (Seven Churches), Arklow, Woodenbridge.

GRAND CIRCULAR CYCLING TOURS IN CO. WICKLOW AT REDUCED FARES.

Through WICKLOW, WEXFORD and WATERFORD, embracing Mountain, Valley, and River Scenery of the rarest description.

Through Tourist Bookings with English Railways.

FISHING. SHOOTING. BOATING. GOLF. HOCKEY.

GLENDALOUGH! GLENDALOUGH! GLENDALOUGH!

Special cheap Rail, Coach, and Hotel Excursions THIS SEASON to the World-renowned

VALLEY, LAKES, AND CHURCHES,

Via Rathnew, Ashford, Devil's Glen, returning via Vale of Clara to Rathdrum.

For full particulars see the Company's Tourist Programme, to be had free of charge at Stations, or on application to Mr. JOHN COGHLAN, Traffic Manager, Westland Row.

Dublin, May, 1905.

A. G. REID, General Manager.

LEAMINGTON SPA.

REGENT HOTEL.

ENTIRELY RECONSTRUCTED.

DECORATIONS BY MAPLE.

Electric Light, Telephones in Every Room. Lift.

Garage and Resident Engineer. Stabling for 90 Horses.

APPLY FOR TARIFF.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS,

CENTRAL WALES.

The British Nauheim.

An Ideal Spa for the Treatment of Heart Disease, Gout, and Rheumatism.

THE LAKE HOTEL

A first-class Hotel situated in extensive Private Grounds and lighted throughout with Electricity.

Telegraphic Address: "BARIUM," LLANGAMMARCH WELLS.

Apply MANAGEMENT.

Golf Club within five minutes' walk.

NORTH DEVONSHIRE

(within one-and-a-half miles of the East Anstey Station, on a Branch of the G.W. Ry., one hour from Exeter and Taunton, on the G.W. Ry. Main Line, and four hours from London).

Interesting and extensive Sale of a highly desirable Freehold MANOR, known as WEST ANSTEY, Devon, extending to an area of about 1,700 acres, with Manorial Rights and the WEST ANSTEY COMMON (about 400 acres).

There are eleven readily letable Farms, a Village, Public-house, Mill, Post Office, etc. The lands, mostly with Southern aspect, are extremely productive and healthy, and all in one of the finest sporting Districts in the Kingdom. Frequent Meets of Staghounds, Foxhounds, Harriers and Otter-hounds occurring on the Estates and in the immediate vicinity; abundance of Shooting (including Blackgame) with ample Fishing.

Messrs. BLACKFORD & SON,

honoured with instructions from the Rt. Hon. LORD CLINTON, will submit the above to public competition at the Carnarvon Arms Hotel, Dulverton Station, G.W. Ry., on Wednesday, 5th July, 1905, at 1.30 p.m.—Plans and particulars of the Auctioneers, South Molton and Barnstaple; of Messrs. FRERE, CHOLMELEY & Co., Solicitors, 28, Lincoln's Inn Fields, London, W.C.; or of E. H. HOULDITCH, Esq., The Close, Exeter.

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

THE subject of Mary Queen of Scots is inexhaustible. Only a few months ago Mr. J. J. Foster devoted one of his superb folios to her iconography alone (Dickensons), and now Mr. A. H. Millar adroitly sums up the story of her life, and the controversies, past and present, concerning it in a delightful little duodecimo volume of 217 pages, with a few excellent illustrations and a really good index. It is published by William Brown of Prince's Street, Edinburgh, at the almost nominal price of 2s. 6d. The frontispiece of it (which also figured in Mr. Foster's "True Portraiture of Mary Queen of Scots") is now reproduced. It is a charming specimen of sixteenth century art. Mr. Millar, whose "Castles and Mansions of Ayrshire" and "History of Rob Roy" are both deservedly popular, concludes his narrative of the luckless "petite Reinette Econaise" (as her enemy, Catherine de Medicis, called her) with the following lines:

Mary Queen of Scots.

"A queen by birth, a prisoner by mishap,
From crown to cross, from throne to thrall I fell;
My right, my ruth; my title wrought my trap;
My weal, my woe; my worldly heaven, my hell.

By death from prisoner to a prince enhanc'd,
From cross to crown; from thrall to throne again;
My ruth, my right; my trap my state advanc'd,
From woe to weal; from hell to heavenly reign."

The author is Robert Southwell, a young Jesuit missionary, who, in 1595, himself perished on the scaffold.

* * *

A VERY beautiful book, and in some respects a very important one, is "G. F. Watts, Reminiscences," by Mrs. Russell Barrington (George Allen). Mrs. Barrington and her husband lived close to Watts, and were close friends of his; and the author of this book often visited him, saw him at work in his studio, talked with him, and received a number of notes from him in illustration or continuation of some of their discussions. Her book gives a number of interesting details about the great painter, his thoughts, his aims, and his manner of work; but it is not a good contribution to our knowledge of Watts, and it errs now and then in the direction of chatter. Still, the future biographer will find it a useful mine of detail; and there can be no question that its illustrations—of which there are some forty "full-page" plates—are most interesting. A number of them are taken from unpublished and hitherto unknown drawings by Watts, studies, sketches, and so forth. They are mounted on tinted paper, and the very cover of the book is ornamented with a design taken from a wall-painting by Watts in. Leighton House. In this respect the volume is well worth the guinea charged for it.

G. F. Watts.

* * *

IT is but seldom we get so good a book of sport and travel as Captain A. I. R. Glasfurd's "Rifle and Romance in the Indian Jungle: A Record of Thirteen Years" (Lane). Men of letters who are also sportsmen are not rare, and yet sporting books that are also good literature are very scarce indeed. Captain Glasfurd is a master of the pen as well as of the spear and gun. His enthusiasm for the jungle is ardent; he has lived in it, studied it, searched into its mysteries, taken its kindness and unkindness, and loved it dearly throughout, and he makes of it a number of true stories which are, many of them, as he hints in his title, full of the charm and mystery of romance. The jungle is very old and very strange; it contains a world of things that philosophy and science have never fathomed, and perhaps never will fathom. Of these things Captain Glasfurd tells in a manner that will exercise a fascination over many who care little for the jungle and nothing for sport. Fine sportsman and naturalist as he is, he has also a number of stories for sportsmen; but whether he is writing of jungle mysteries, of his adventures, his bag, or his friends the beasts, the charm of his style never leaves him. His book is illustrated by his own drawings and from photographs, and should on no account be missed.

Rifle and Romance.

* * *

PROFESSOR LUIGI VILLARI has spent many months in Russia, travelling to and fro, to Moscow, St. Petersburg, Nijni Novgorod, the provinces, the Black Sea, the Crimea, and elsewhere, and studying, with special attention to economic problems and developments, the effect on the nation of the war, which is, perhaps, to end so soon and so disastrously for the Russians. Some of his impressions he contributed to The Times, and these, with a great deal of new material, he has published in a handsome volume, "Russia Under the Great Shadow," with Mr. T. Fisher Unwin. There is no need to remark that this book is a very different kind of thing from the mass of often trivial or undigested or extravagant stuff that has been published about Russia during the past twelve months. Professor Villari is a scholar, a statesman, and man of great knowledge and brilliant intellectual gifts, and what he says carries weight. He makes no attempt to disguise the gravity of the situation in Russia; but he is hopeful that after all she will be saved, "though as by fire." "The war in the Far East," he says, "should mark the transition of Russia from the Middle Ages to the twentieth century, from the Eastern to the Western world, from barbarism to civilisation. . . . Russia will probably have to go through a long period of turmoil and unrest before she can find lasting peace." A particularly interesting chapter in Professor Villari's vivid work is that on Kiev, "a Russian monastic city," and the illustrations to the book are often rare and always good.

The Great Shadow.

MARY QUEEN OF SCOTS

A portrait forming the frontispiece to her biography by Mr. A. H. Millar, recently published by Mr. William Brown, Edinburgh.

* * *

"MILES" has published with Mr. H. J. Drane a vigorous little pamphlet on "Military Surgery in its Relation to the Science and Art of War." If it be true, as Mr. Arnold-Forster has admitted, that 48 per cent. of the men recruited disappear absolutely before the period of reserve service is reached, there is clearly a vast leakage somewhere; and "Miles's" point is to show how this leakage may be stopped, with great benefit to the Army and to the surgical branch of the military profession. He pleads that the surgeon shall be more consulted than he is at present in the matter of recruiting, shall be allowed to exercise more supervision over the training of the men, and, to achieve these objects, shall be trained himself, both as soldier and as surgeon, and more fully recognised as a member of the military profession.

Military Surgery.

* * *

MESSRS. ROUTLEDGE send us a little book of sailors' poems, called "True to the Flag," compiled by Mr. E. C. Ommanney. Mr. Ommanney has divided his work into four sections—poems concerning the ocean and Nature at sea; heroic incidents at sea; songs of home, love, duty, death, etc.; and religious poems. On the whole we like his selections very well, for though we miss one or two poems that might have been included, Mr. Ommanney has introduced some, like William Cory's "The Two Captains," which are not easily accessible elsewhere. His limits are fairly lax, when they include Wordsworth's "Ode to Duty" and Sir Henry Wotton's "How happy is he born and taught" (the latter of which, by the way, seems to have been printed from an inaccurate text) among his sailors' poems; but he warns us in his introduction what to expect, and his little volume contains a vast deal of splendid stuff.

Sailors' Poems.

* * *

A DOUBLE number of "Bird Notes and News," the organ of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds (3, Hanover Square, W.), appears this month, having special reference to the International Ornithological Congress. Its contents include a four-page supplement, dealing with existing bird protection legislation throughout the British Empire, and also an article on international bird protection, pointing out the necessity for international agreement for the preservation, more particularly, of rare birds, plumage birds, and birds of passage. The paper rightly calls attention to the horrible device for exterminating jays, magpies, hawks, etc., which has recently been invented under the "appropriately hideous" name of "Snarglu," and the stand made against the wanton and cruel destruction of small birds is worthy of all support.

Bird Protection.

---

BOOKS TO READ.

Demeter, a Mask, by Robert Bridges. (Clarendon Press.)

The Loot of Cities, by Arnold Bennett. (Alston Rivers.)

A Doctor in Corduroy, by Max Baring. (Greening.)

Rose of Lorer Farm, by Eleanor G. Hayden. (Smith, Elder.)

The Marquis's Eye, by G. F. Bradley. (Smith, Elder.)

The Passenger from Calais, by Major Arthur Griffiths. (Nash.)

Hecla Sandwith, by E. U. Valentine. (Harpers.)

The Gardens of Italy, by Charles Latham. (Newnes.)

My Travels in China, Japan, and Java, 1903, by H.H. the Raja-I-Rajgan Jagatjit Singh of Kapurthala. (Hutchinson.)

Mirabeau and the French Revolution, by Charles F. Warwick. (Lippincott.)

The Fight for Canada, by W. Wood. (Constable.)

Italian Backgrounds, by Edith Wharton. (Macmillan.)

Trinity House, London, Past and Present, by Walter H. Mayo. (Smith, Elder.)

The Year of Trafalgar, by Henry Newbolt. (Murray.)

Lagden's Luck, by Tom Gallon. (Arrowsmith.)

Digitized by Google

The Correct Method OF Feeding

The old idea of trying to make a young infant adapt itself to an unsuitable food is wrong. Every sensible mother knows that a farinaceous food which nourishes a child of 12 months would make a baby of one month ill. Never give a starchy food to children under five or six months of age, as young infants cannot digest starch, and the giving of such foods has much to do with the illness and malnutrition amongst young children.

The only sensible and rational plan is to give suitable foods adapted to the age and growing needs of the child, and this is provided by

The 'Allenburys' Foods.

Milk Food No. 1.

For Infants from birth to three months of age. So like mother's milk that it can be given alternately with the breast with perfect comfort to the child.

The 'Allenburys'

Milk Food No. 2.

For babies between the ages of three and six months. Simply No. 1 strengthened to meet the increasing wants of the baby. It stimulates and strengthens the digestive organs.

The 'Allenburys'

Malted Food No. 3.

For children of six months and upwards. The best food for developing the digestive powers of the child. It promotes the formation of firm flesh and strong bone.

A Pamphlet on Infant Feeding and Management sent free on request.

ALLEN & HANBURYS Ltd.,
37, Lombard St., LONDON, E.C.

U.S.A.: Niagara Falls. Australia: Sydney. Canada: Toronto. S. Africa: Cape Town.

FOR THE RACES.

LEATHER-COVERED
WALKING STICKS & UMBRELLAS.

With Pencil Attachment. In Gold or Silver Gilt.

Manufactured by—

BRIGG & SONS,
5, ST. JAMES'S STREET, S.W.,
or 33, Avenue de l'Opera, PARIS.

ESTABLISHED 1836.

THE CHARING CROSS BANK. ESTABLISHED 1870.
119 and 120, BISHOPSGATE ST. WITHIN, E.C.
and 28, BEDFORD ST., CHARING CROSS, London.
Assets, £694,403. Liabilities, £372,291. Surplus, £322,112.
Loans of £30 to £2,000 granted at a few hours' notice in town or country, on mortgage of furniture, trade and farm stock, plant, crops, etc., without removal. Also on deeds, policies, and reversions. Distance no object. Easy terms.
2½ per cent. allowed on Current account balances.
DEPOSITS of £1 and upwards received on terms as under.
Subject to 3 months' Notice of Withdrawal, 5 per cent. per annum.
" 6 " " 6 " "
" 12 " " 7 " "
Special terms for longer periods. Interest paid quarterly. The Terminable Deposit Bonds pay nearly 9 per cent., and are a safe investment. Write or call for Prospectus.
A. WILLIAMS, H. J. TALL, } Joint Managers.

SPA, BELGIUM.

(10 Hours from London.)

The Oldest Chalybeate Springs in the World.

Finest Bathing Establishment in Europe. Best cure for Anæmia, Chlorosis, and Heart Affections. Countless attractions, Steeplechases, Horse Show, Concerts, Theatre, Automobile Races, Golf, Balls. For programme write

BUREAU DE PUBLICITE, SPA.

HANSEN'S UNKET TABLETS.

THIS IS THE TIME FOR DAINTY JUNKET.

Hansen's Junket Tablets are double the value of the next best. They are always reliable and up to their full strength, and keep their high quality. Junket, besides having a high food value, is a delicacy capable of a dainty variety in presentation, always appetizing.

Sold by all Grocers, Chemists, etc., in Glass Tubes, containing 24 Tablets, each sufficient to make a quart of Junket. Sample Tube and Book of over 30 Recipes, 6d. post free from Hansen's Depot, 77, St. Thomas's Street, London, S.E.

KOH-I-NOOR PENCILS are one price everywhere, 4d. each or 3/6 per doz. Of Stationers, Artists' Colourmen and Photographic Dealers. Booklet on Pencils post free from

L. & C. HARDTMUTH,
12, Golden Lane, London, E.C.

10/6 to £20. All hands suited.
Of all Stationers. Catalogue free.
Mabie, Todd & Bard
79 & 80, High Holborn, W.C.
Branches:—
London:
93, Cheapside, E.C.
95A, Regent St. W.
Manchester:
3, Exchange Street.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Prevents the Hair from falling off.

Restores Gray or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.

Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no unpleasant odour.

IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin, or even white linen.

Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

Ask your Chemist or Hair-Dresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.

Prepared only by the . . .

ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd.,
33, Farringdon Road, London, E.C.

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

JACKFIELD WARE.

ALTHOUGH there has been of late years a steadily-increasing demand for this curious and often most artistic eighteenth century English earthenware, scant justice has been done to its merits by the standing authors. Both Marryat and Barton dismiss the subject in less than a page; Mr. Hodgkin alone deems it worthy of any attempt at illustration, and the constant references made to Jackfield and its potters by Mr. L. Jewitt throughout his two bulky volumes might have been given more conveniently in a single chapter.

The brilliant, black, and shiny product of the Jackfield kilns is recognisable by the careful collector without much difficulty, although undoubted specimens of Whieldon ware are very frequently mistaken for it. The commoner forms of Jackfield, such as teapots, sugar-basins, etc., are now pretty extensively imitated, but it is excessively difficult to counterfeit successfully the more elaborate pieces decorated with gilding and painting – the latter often in oils. These can be distinguished by their extreme lightness, and the fact that the ornamentation is nearly always tarnished by time and wear. In the eighteenth century the "black decanters" of Jackfield, as they were called, enjoyed a very high reputation in the land of the potters.

Jackfield, like Broseley (the home of the historic pipes), Caughley (once a formidable rival to Worcester), Benthall "of the yellow ware," Ironbridge, Madeley, and last, but not least, Coalbrookdale, is situate in one of the most historically interesting districts of the kingdom, for they are all within easy reach of Boscobel and Tong, as well as of Buildwas Abbey and Wenlock Priory. The Jackfield pottery was in all probability the oldest of them all, for it appears to have been worked in some shape or another for centuries. An earthenware mug bearing the date 1634 was discovered in a local coal-pit, which had not been entered for nearly 200 years.

A VERY BEAUTIFUL JACKFIELD COFFEE-POT.

Decorated with raised flowers. In the collection of Mr. James Tregaskis of the Caxton Head, High Holborn.

The earliest of the Jackfield potters still remembered was one Glover, who used the old salt glaze for his ware. About 1730-50 Mr. John Thursfield came into possession of the works, and was succeeded in 1751 by his son Maurice or Morris, whose brother John established the pottery at Benthall. It was Maurice Thursfield, Mr. Jewitt says, who first made "the very superior black ware, highly vitrified and glazed." "The forms and the potting of these articles locally known as 'black decanters' were remarkably good, and on some specimens which I have seen," he adds, "ornaments have been judiciously introduced. On one a head and wreath are executed in gold and colour; and on others paintings in oils, both portraits and views, are introduced. Some good examples are preserved in the Museum of Practical Geology."

A TYPICAL JACKFIELD COFFEE-POT, TEAPOT, AND SUGAR-BASIN.
Circa 1780.

After Mr. Thursfield's death in America the works were carried on by Messrs. Rose and Blakeway, who began to make china, but they speedily removed to Coalport. In 1837 one Mr. John Myatt was making a white and yellow stoneware at Jackfield, where the Calcuts were manufacturing bricks and encaustic tiles. The best "period" of Jackfield was evidently the last half of the eighteenth century. Mr. Jewitt mentions several well-known artists as connected with the fortunes of Jackfield: Pierre Stephan, an expert French modeller, François Hardenburg, George Cocker, who set up a small manufactory of his own, and John Rose, prior to his migration to Coalport. The tea and coffee pots, mugs, jugs, etc., of Jackfield are by no means uncommon or difficult to procure, but the judicious buyer should keep a sharp look-out for pieces retaining their ornamentation comparatively uninjured, as in the case of the jug adorned with roses and rose-buds, acquired a short time ago from the collection of Mr. R. Elliott in the Camberwell Road, and shown in the accompanying illustration. "This brilliant black-glazed ware," writes Mr. William Burton, the latest authority on the subject, "was frequently decorated with oil gilding, and occasionally with paintings in oil colour. Of course, such painting and gilding could never have been fired, and is consequently much worn in the majority of specimens."

In Marryat's time Mr. Richard Thursfield of Broseley, the great-grandson and namesake of the founder of the Jackfield works, possessed an interesting collection of the ware, including a cup dated 1742. Messrs. Rose of Coalbrookdale also owned some good examples of it, while in the Franks Collection was a two-handled black cup, bearing the portrait of a lady on one side, and a view of a country house on the other.

Fanciers of Jackfield ware should carefully study the page devoted to the subject in Mr. J. E. Hodgkin's "Examples of Early Earthenware, Named, Dated, and Inscribed." Mr. Hodgkin also alludes to the constant disappearance of the ornamentation of Jackfield ware under the influence of constant use and frequent ablutions, but he gives us quite a delightful illustration of an elaborately-decorated black two-handled posset-cup, dated 1761, with the initials "M. H." He also describes two teapots dated 1766, and a jug made in the following year and decorated in oil gilding. Mr. Hodgkin is also the fortunate possessor of a large Jackfield teapot on which the name of Mrs. Elizabeth Rouse is inscribed, and a jug with the suggestive line (from the landlord's point of view), "May the tenant be ready when the Steward comes."

B.

SOME JACKFIELD JUGS: COW-MILK-JUG, JUG, AND CREAM-JUG.
The centre jug is exquisitely decorated with roses, and has sustained very little injury by wear and time.

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

hold and offer for sale specimens of the
HIGHEST QUALITY

OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE

as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.

EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.

AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.

(Two hours from Paddington.)

Old Brass Stand and Lamp.

THE MISSES
H. & I. WOOLLAN
(Under Royal Patronage)
are showing a
UNIQUE
Collection of
Antiques.

Chippendale, Sheraton, and Hepplewhite Furniture. . . Worcester and Lowestoft Services. Lace, Glass, etc.

Showrooms: First Floor.

28, BROOK STREET, GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

PENNY—HENRY III.

RARE COINS & MEDALS
(AT MODERATE PRICES)
SPINK & SON LTD.
17 & 18, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.

AUTOGRAPHS—HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS.

The oldest Dealers in Europe. For Catalogues, issued monthly, and all information write at once to

M. NOEL CHARAVAY,
3, RUE DE FURSTENBERG, PARIS,
where the "AMATEUR DES AUTOGRAPHES," a valuable Monthly Publication, may also be obtained.

JAMES TREGASKIS,
"The Caxton Head," 232, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.

RARE BOOKS,
MEDIÆVAL MANUSCRIPTS,
DOCUMENTS OF LITERARY & HISTORICAL INTEREST,
ORIGINAL DRAWINGS,
ENGRAVINGS,
AMERICANA,
CURIOSITIES,
ANTIQUITIES,
OBJECTS OF ART.
Catalogues Price Sixpence.

PORTRAITS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.
ENGLISH—FOREIGN—AMERICAN.
RARE ENGRAVINGS OF ALL SORTS.
WRITE FOR CATALOGUES OR VISIT THE SHOWROOMS OF
M. GODEFROY MAYER,
41, RUE BLANCHE, PARIS.

WEYMOUTH, DORSET.
CURIOSITY SHOP.
Finest collection of Genuine Curios in West of England.
Amongst other items on sale—Unique Inlaid Escritoire-Cabinet formerly property of Frederick the Great, presented by successor to Sir Evan Nepean, Secretary of Admiralty at time of Trafalgar.
BAKER, 2, Charlotte Row, Close Old Palace George III.
DESCRIBED BY MADAME D' ARBLAY.

CATALOGUES OF ILLUSTRATED BOOKS, VIEWS, PORTRAITS, etc., GRATIS.
Books and Engravings Bought.
JAMES RIMELL & SON,
DEALERS IN OLD BOOKS AND ENGRAVINGS,
53, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON, W.

Bookbinding.—The Bedford Bindery.
OLD-ESTABLISHED FIRM.
VERY MODERATE PRICES. Special attention paid to extra-illustrated works.
SPECIMENS ON VIEW.
G. F. AYLING, 1A, CAMBRIDGE ST., EDGWARE ROAD, W.

BATH.
GEORGE GREGORY,
BOOKSELLER, Etc.
Write for Catalogues. An inspection of Mr. Gregory's shop should not be omitted by any visitor to Bath. Speciality—Americana. Old Bath. Colour-plate books. Autographs.
Address: 5, ARGYLE STREET.

MAGGS BROS.,
109, STRAND, W.C., LONDON, ENGLAND.
Dealers in RARE BOOKS AND FINE LIBRARY EDITIONS OF STANDARD AUTHORS, Voyages and Travels, Early Printed Books, 1st Editions of 17th, 18th, and 19th Century writers, Illustrated Works. Also Rare Portraits, Line, Stipple, Mezzotints, and Colour Engravings, and Autographs.
Recently issued—Illustrated Catalogues of Rare Books, Voyages and Travels, Engravings, Autographs. Price 6d. each.

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

For Spaces in the Register apply to "THE EDITOR."

WANTED.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

Following autograph letters wanted: — Beau Brummel, Captain Gronow, Frederica, Duchess of York, Mary Anne Clarke. Good prices given.—823, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Letters of Mrs. Delaney to Mrs. Frances Hamilton; 1 vol., small 8vo, with silhouette portrait, First edition. £1 offered. — 824, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Sporting Magazine, vol. 30, April-Sept., 1807, and vol. 37 (1810 and 1811). Good price offered.—172, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Jest Books, with coloured plates.—173, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Battersea Boxes, with views of Bath and Bristol Hot Wells.—520, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old XIVth or XVth Century Stained Glass. Good specimens.—521, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Worcester China, Binn's "Century of Potting." Reports invited. 12/6 offered.—522, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Swansea China, marked pieces, plates or vases.—523, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Naval Prints published by any of the following:—C. Sheppard, 74, Little Britain; C. Taylor, Holborn (date 1791); J. Fairburn, 110 and 146, Minories (1800-1838); Tabart and Co., London; E. Rushton, Paradise Street, Liverpool; W. Belch, Bridge Street, Boro'; I. Houlston, Strand; R. Sly, 41, Union Street, Somers Town; J. Marshall, Aldermary Churchyard, London.—237, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good Impressions with good margins of engravings of old London, especially Covent Garden, the Temple, the Strand, Lincoln's Inn.—249, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old Views of the Commanderie at Worcester, or MSS. or Tracts relating to. — 251, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

TAPESTRY, FURNITURE, Etc.

A good Specimen of Rock Tapestry. Period about 1640.—410, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

XVIIIth Century Mantel Glass. Must be in three panels, and in good condition.—411, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Original XVIIIth Century Drawings of Bath or Brighton. Also Caricatures relating to.—221A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Large coloured print of Blanchard in "The Maid of the Mill." What offers? From "Bell's Library."—222A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

BOOKS.

A fine copy of Natte's Bath, or would accept copy of Genest's British Stage, or good extra illustrated Life of Garrick.—129A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Eyton's "Antiquities of Shropshire," in good condition. Scarce.—130A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Bell's British Poets. Complete Set.—131A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

A very fine old Staffordshire Dinner Service of 160 pieces, in perfect condition. Crown Derby pattern, marked with crown. Sample plate on approval. Deposit.—520A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Staffordshire Ware, Busts of famous people.—521A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Life of Mrs. Frances Sheridan. Collection of Portraits from Oxberry.—744A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Ancient Greek, Roman, English, Scotch, Irish Gold and Silver Coins.—745A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

To Americans in London.—Antiquities, Greek, Roman and Mediæval Pottery, Fine Collection of Old English Pottery and Figures, China, Oil Paintings, Prints, Coins, Flint Implements, Tinder Boxes, Savage Weapons, and General Antiquities for disposal; part of my private collection; single specimens or otherwise. An inspection invited.—746A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

THE French Eliminating Trials, which were held last Friday on the Ardennes Circuit, proved unexpectedly free from incident or accident. All the twenty-four cars entered for the race appeared at the start, and, headed by Théry, last year's winner, on a Richard Brasier, which had had the good fortune to draw first place, were despatched at intervals of 4-min. each. Théry maintained his lead throughout the four rounds of the course, and finished a somewhat easy winner, in the net time, excluding the waits in controls, of 7-hr. 34-min. 49 1-5-sec., equivalent to an average speed over the whole course of 72 kil. 555, or roughly 45 miles, per hour. Another Richard Brasier, driven by Caillois, was second in 7-hr. 43-min. 4-sec., which works out at 71 kil. 144 per hour. The third place in the team which will represent France in the Gordon Bennett Race fell to Duray on a De Dietrich, who was only 1¼-min. behind Caillois. Wagner and Sizsz, on a Darracq and Renault respectively, were fourth and fifth, and have therefore secured places in the team of five who will take part in the Vanderbilt Cup in the autumn.

* * *

Fifteen cars out of the twenty-four finished the race, a very high percentage on so difficult and dangerous a course. Only one serious accident occurred, the veteran Girardot, the winner of the Cup in 1901, coming to grief on a hill near Sayat, owing to the bursting of his front tyres. He broke his collar-bone and several ribs, but at the time of writing was said to be out of danger. Henri Farman, who was driving a Panhard, and his mechanic were thrown out of their car at the same spot, but suffered no injury, although the machine disappeared down a precipiece. Another Panhard, driven by Teste, was overturned near Volvic, but after a short delay was able to continue the race minus two spokes from one wheel. Théry himself is said to have had a very uneventful race, the sole causes of delay being five punctures.

* * *

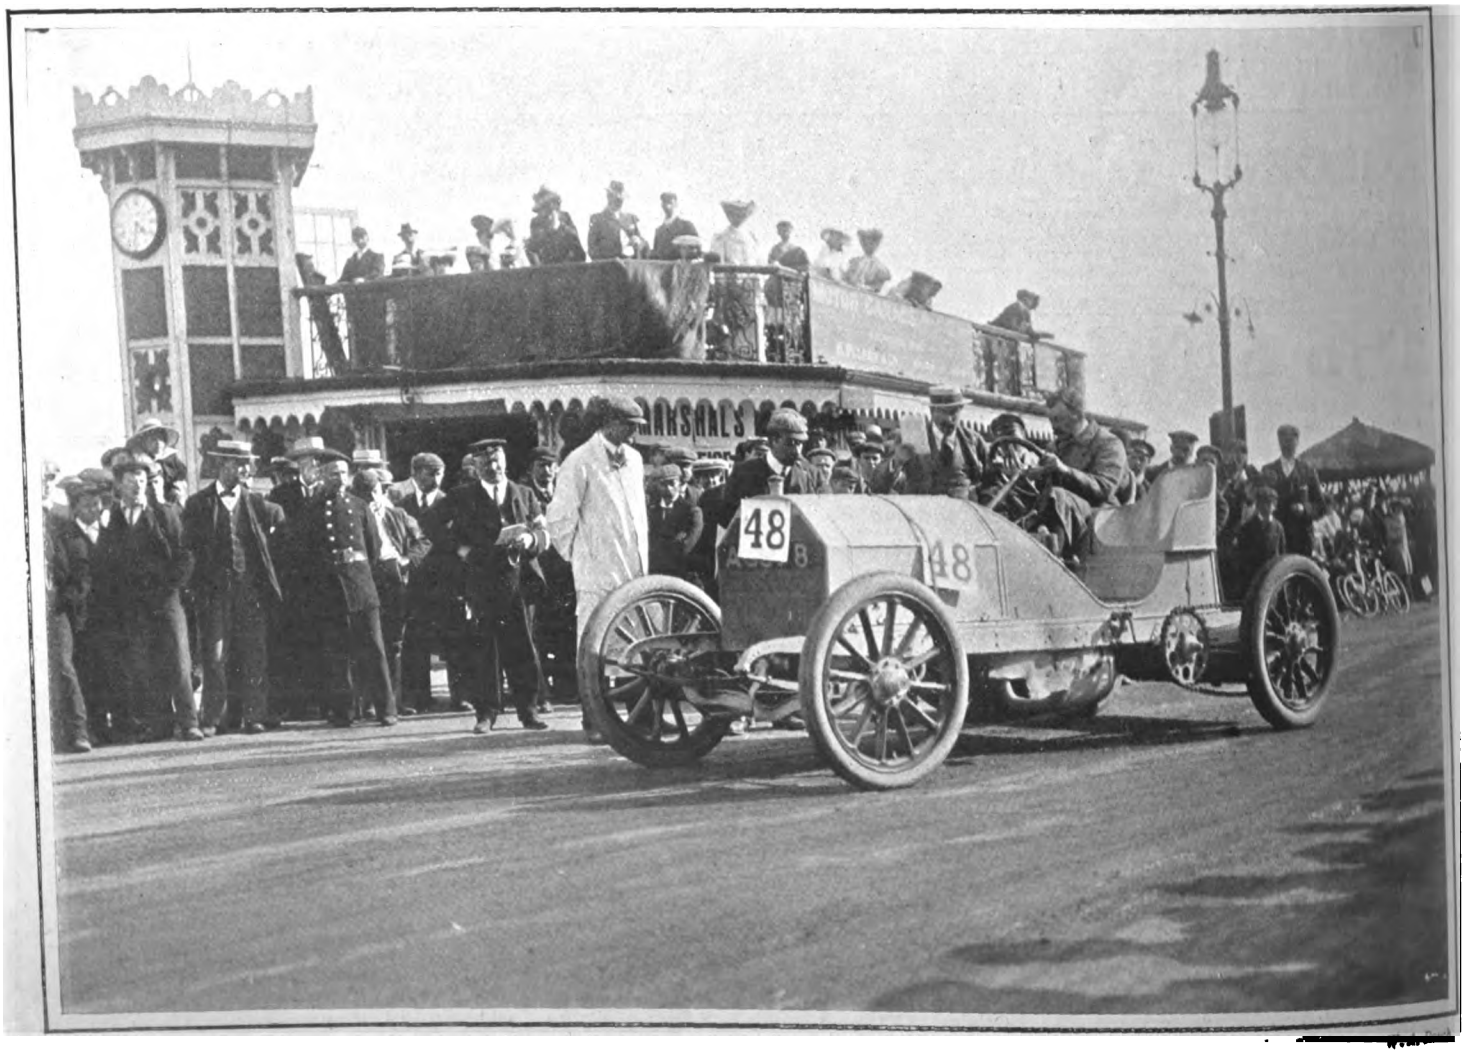
The arguments for and against the use of alcohol as a fuel for motor-cars would be put to a fairly conclusive test if the practical advice of Sir David Salomons were followed. In a letter to the president of the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders he says: "It appears to me the proper course to pursue is the following: To have an international competition of alcohol engines, say in two or three years' time, with substantial prizes, and announce the matter now, that inventors may start on the work. I would suggest two first prizes of not less than £1,000 each. That a committee of four or six experts be formed to draw up the conditions, amongst which the following should be a sine quâ non: (1) Engines for road carriages; (2) to be of no greater weight or size power for power than the best petrol engine of to-day; (3) that the starting, running, attention, etc., shall be as easy and convenient as to-day with the best petrol motors."

* * *

The Bexhill Meeting, which was held on Wednesday in last week, was favoured by brilliant weather, although the interest manifested in the event was hardly as great as was the case last year. In the racing class Mr. A. Lee Guinness, on his 100-h.p. Darracq, proved to be the winner, his best time over the standing half mile being 30 2-5 sec., equivalent to 59 miles an hour. The comparatively slow speed for so powerful a machine is accounted for by the shortness of the distance run. In the class for cars the chassis price of which is between £350 and £650, the first prize was won by a 28-h.p. Daimler, entered by Mr. G. McDonnell, whose speed over a flying kilomètre was returned at 40·2 miles an hour. A 24-h.p. Germain was second, the total number of competitors being nineteen. The class for touring cars the chassis price of which is over £650 but not more than £900, produced nine starters, seven of which were 30-h.p. Daimlers, the remainder being made up by a 40-h.p. Berliet and a 34-h.p. Beaufort. The first prize went to Mr. Percy Martin's Daimler, another car of the same make, entered by Mr. E. Manville, taking the second prize.

* * *

One of the great disadvantages of motor-cycling is the cramped feeling in the legs which is experienced towards the end of a long journey. In order to overcome this, a foot-rest has been devised by Mr. C. D. Clayton, which should greatly increase the comfort of the rider, The illustration on a succeeding page conveys an idea of the ease obtained. The foot-rests are fastened on to the bottom bracket by extended clips the ends of which take bolts, to which, wooden rests are secured. Between the clips and the underneath part of the foot-rests proper india-rubber buffers are placed. Vibrating shocks are also insulated by means of india-rubber fixed where the rider places his feet. The new foot-rest is marketed by Minerva Motors Limited of Holborn Viaduct.



THE MOTOR RACE-MEETING AT BEXHILL.

Mr. Orde starting the 100-h.p. Mercédès, driven by Sir Ralph Gore, who finished third. This was the first appearance of the car on a British track.

Digitized by Google

"FIAT" MOTORS, Ltd.

37 & 38, LONG ACRE, W.C.

Telegraphic Address: "FIATISM, LONDON."
Telephone Nos.: 3171 and 1849 GERRARD.

FILEY MOTOR TRIALS.

24-h.p. F.I.A.T.

1st IN TOURING CLASS.

MILAN RELIABILITY TRIALS.—Class 1.—24-h.p. FIAT, 1st, 2nd, 3rd.
Class 2.—24-h.p. FIAT, 1st, 2nd.
Class 4.—16-h.p. FIAT, 1st.

Brighton Depot:

Brighton and South Coast Motor Garages, Ltd., St. James's Street, Brighton.

Sole Concessionnaires for Great Britain and Ireland:

Fiat Motors, Ltd., 37 & 38, Long Acre, W.C.

Agents for Yorkshire: H. JOHNSON & CO., 28, Montpellier Parade, Harrogate.
Agents for Northamptonshire and Warwickshire: Pytchley Autocar Co., Northampton.

MERCÉDÈS

40-h.p. Mercédès Touring Car versus
Competitors in Isle of Man Gordon Bennett Eliminating Trials.

"I may mention that Mr. Campbell Muir, who went round the course with a playcard bearing the word 'finish,' covered the distance in 1hr. 14min. on a 40-h.p. Mercédès, a time which was only twice bettered by the competitors themselves."
"The Car," June 7th, 1905.

40-h.p. short Chassis, fitted with Roi des Belges coach body, with canopy and wind shield, painted and upholstered in Mercédès red; entrance through the front seat. Immediate delivery. Particulars on request.

AS USED BY
H.I.M. WILHELM II.,
German Emperor.
H.M. LEOPOLD,
King of the Belgians.

AS USED BY
H.M. EDWARD VII.,
King of England.
H.M. CARLOS,
King of Portugal.

Sole Concessionnaires:
Cannstatt Mercédès, Ltd.,

THE KING'S CAR

127, Long Acre, W.C.

Digitized by Google

A Paris Toilette.

AN ALMOND GREEN VOILE DRESS, TRIMMED WITH APPLIQUES OF IRISH LACE AND PLEATED SILK.
MAISON BÉCHOFF DAVID.

(Photographed by Reutlinger.

Digitized by Google

HUMBER

CYCLES ALL OVER THE COUNTRY.

"They make Life's Journeys easy."

Prices: £8 8s. to £18 18s.

Catalogues post free from

HUMBER, Ltd., BEESTON (Notts) and COVENTRY.

LONDON: 32, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.

Depots— Manchester, Nottingham, Liverpool, Birmingham, Southampton

Agents Everywhere.

IF YOU ARE BUYING

Any kind of Requisite for Travelling, it will pay you to send for

W. H. SMITH'S

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF

PORTMANTEAUX
TRUNKS
BAGS

And every description of Leather Goods and Travelling Requisites for Home and the Colonies

Opposite the Abbey,* BATH.

Maker of the ROSEBERY HAT BOX.

LORD ROSEBERY says: "It is an ingenious and useful Hat Box."

7/10ths of ALL

Your little ills will find relief in

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

For HEADACHE,
For BILIOUSNESS,
For INDIGESTION,
For TORPID LIVER,
For CONSTIPATION,
For SALLOW SKIN,
For the COMPLEXION.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

Very small, and easy to take as sugar. Purely Vegetable.

Genuine must have signature

PRICE 13½d.

Brent Good

ARE YOU ALIVE

to the fact that thousands of people who were inveterate smokers of extensively advertised cheap paper cigarettes (which are so harmful to the health) have discontinued same, and are now smoking

FLOR DE DINDIGUL

CIGARETTES (All Tobacco Leaf—No Paper.)

They are far more satisfying, mild, delightful in flavour, pure, and last much longer than ordinary paper cigarettes. Doctors strongly recommend them. These delightful Whiffs are on sale everywhere. 1d. each, 8/- per 100. Awarded 10 Gold Medals for excellence.

Importer: BEWLAY, 49, STRAND, LONDON.

Established 125 Years.

A KODAK KIT
FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

Complete Photographic Outfit for £2 2s.

No Dark Room and no Previous Experience required.

The Kit includes the New

No. 2 Folding Brownie

Fitted with our splendid Automatic Focussing Device and giving 3¼ by 2¼ pictures; the Kodak Tank Developer, in which the exposed film can be developed perfectly in daylight; Canvas case; Spools of film for 24 pictures; Developing and fixing salts; Printing frame; Solio paper; Toning and fixing solution; Dishes; Mounts, etc.

FULL INSTRUCTIONS ENABLING ANYONE TO COMMENCE AT ONCE, SUPPLIED WITH EVERY OUTFIT.

Write for the Kodak Book, Illustrated, post free.

Of all dealers and
Kodak, Ltd.,
57-61, Clerkenwell Rd.,
London, E.C.,
and Branches.

ARGYLL MOTOR CARS

A MOTOR EXPERT'S OPINION
OF THE

ARGYLL
MOTOR CARS.

HENRY NORMAN, M.P., who has made Motor Cars a special study, and is one of our best authorities on the subject, writing in "The World's Work" for February, says:—

The Argyll does "credit to British Workmanship, being constructed with both knowledge and conscience"; and speaks of its body, "of graceful shape and great strength."

SILENT IN RUNNING.
EASY TO CONTROL.
ELEGANT IN APPEARANCE.

Send for Illustrated Catalogue "F" for 1905 forwarded post free.

London Agents:
THE FARMAN AUTOMOBILE CO., LTD.
100, Long Acre, London, W.C.

ARGYLL MOTORS, LTD.,
Argyll Works, Bridgeton, Glasgow.

Built in the Worlds greatest engineering centre.

Digitized by Google

THE KING'S MENU.

A JUNE DINNER.

CREME D'ASPERGES.

FILETS DE SAUMON A LA DIABLE.

COTELETTES D'AGNEAU CLAMART.

TIMBALES A LA POMPADOUR.

CANETONS.

SALADE.

CHAMPIGNONS AU GRATIN.

SOUFFLE GLACE DE GROSEILLES VERTES.

AVELINES D'ANCHOIS.

CREME D'ASPERGES.

Take a good-sized bundle of fine well-grown asparagus, preferably the green and not the whitish kind, as the soup when finished should be a pretty pale green colour. Remove the heads, cutting them about half an inch in length, and put these aside to be cooked separately for the garnish. Cut off first the hardest bit at the other end of the stalks, then blanch the stalks and put them in an untinned stewpan (earthenware, copper, or an enamelled iron pan) with two ounces of butter, and stew over the fire, stirring well, for five minutes or so. Now stir in two and a-half pints of good white stock thickened with an ounce and a-quarter of Brown and Polson's patent cornflour. To do this mix the cornflour with a little of the stock cold, bring the rest of the stock to the boil, and stir it gradually into the cornflour paste. It is then poured as it is on to the asparagus, brought to the boil again, stirring well all the time, then simmered gently at the side of the stove till the asparagus is quite soft and pulpy, adding a little more stock from time to time if the soup seems to be getting too thick, as it may do if the asparagus is not quite young and takes some time to become soft. Now rub it altogether through a fine hair sieve, using a wooden spoon or pestle, and being careful to scrape into the soup all the thick part of the purée which adheres to the under-side of the sieve as the asparagus is being rubbed through. Unless this is done the soup will be thin and poor. When all the purée is through it is reheated and brought to the boil again, then simmered for another twenty minutes or so, taking care to stir it well. Now dilute it with a little cream, using four tablespoonfuls or more of this and stirring in at the same time an ounce or two of butter, broken up into tiny bits, and letting each bit dissolve before stirring in the next. This gives a very soft creamy taste to the soup. Care must be taken that it does not approach boiling point, as after the cream and butter are added, and directly the butter is all in, the soup must be served at once. To make a richer soup add a gill of chicken glaze with the thickened stock, and beat up the yolks of two eggs with the cream added at the last. To make the chicken glaze, strong chicken stock is reduced to a glaze-like consistency by rapid boiling. Even a tablespoonful only of this is a great improvement to the soup. If the colour of the soup is not good, bring it up with a little spinach or other vegetable greening. The asparagus heads are cooked in a little stock or water till tender, but not broken, and put hot into the hot soup tureen, and the crème poured over when ready to serve.

FILETS DE SAUMON A LA DIABLE.

Fry or grill some nicely-trimmed fillets of salmon and serve with a boatful of the Escoffier Sauce Diable. This is procurable in bottles all ready for use, after heating up with a little butter, according to the directions on the bottle. It is sold by most good grocers and stores all over the world, including our Colonies, India, the United States, and even Central and South America—in the large towns—in fact, wherever the magic of M. Escoffier's name is known. When any difficulty is experienced in obtaining this or other of the delicacies prepared from Maître Escoffier's recipes by the company which bears his name, a post-card addressed to "Escoffier Limited," Ridgmount Street, Tottenham Court Road, London, W., will bring the name of the nearest agent by return, or if the name of one's grocer is given arrangements will be made for him to stock the Escoffier specialités in future. Further, readers of THE KING who mention this paper when they write and enclose 1s. 9d. will be sent a trial bottle by post of the Sauce Diable. Price lists, containing a number of delicious recipes by Maître Escoffier of dishes well known to habitués of the Carlton Restaurant, as well as at the Savoy, when the famous chef reigned in the kitchens there, will also be sent free by return of post to those of our readers who ask for them. With one of these and a box of the various Escoffier sauces the veriest amateur can provide an almost endless variety of smart and toothsome dishes, including the favourite peaches and pears à la Melba, the Sauce Melba being prepared all ready for use at 1s. 6d. the bottle. Thanks to M. Escoffier one can even be independent and indifferent to the caprice and ignorance of the most exigeante cook. Certainly in the week-end cottage, bungalow, or house-boat no one should be without the Escoffier specialités. They now include a wide range of bottled soups, amongst them being the famous Bortsch, made with beetroot juice, which is such a favourite at the Savoy, its rich clear red contrasting so well with the boat of cream always handed with it for the diner to add a spoonful or two to the soup in his plate at the last moment ere partaking of it.

COTELETTES D'AGNEAU CLAMART.

These are lamb cutlets egged, bread-crumbed, and fried and served in a circle on a ring of mashed potatoes, with young green peas tossed in a little butter in the centre, and a rich tomato sauce round.

AVELINES D'ANCHOIS.

(Specially prepared and photographed for this paper.)

TIMBALES A LA POMPADOUR.

Take as many little timbale moulds as you require and line a third of their number with cream aspic, fill with minced lobster and shrimps tossed in aspic mayonnaise, running a layer of the cream aspic over the top. Another third of the moulds line with cucumber aspic, and fill these with cold cooked sweetbread, cut into dice and mixed with a little rich cold velouté sauce, stiffened by a little melted leaf gelatine being added to it in the proportion of a bare quarter of an ounce to each five full tablespoonfuls of the sauce, mixing also some cold cooked artichoke bottoms; run a layer of the cucumber aspic over the top of each little mould when full. The remaining third of the moulds line with ham cream, fill up with cold chicken cut into dice and mixed with minced truffle and the stiffened velouté sauce referred to. Stand the moulds on ice, then, when wanted for table, unmould and serve garnished with chopped aspic. When tomato has not appeared elsewhere in the menu, tomato aspic can take the place of the ham cream for lining some of the moulds. If more convenient, of course the little moulds could all be lined with cream aspic, and then filled up with a mixture of diced chicken, sweetbread, cold peas, or asparagus heads, artichoke bottoms, etc., mixed in a little chaud-froid sauce, only, unless a variety of differently coloured aspics is used for lining the moulds, they are no longer à la Pompadour. They could then be timbales de ris de veau or de volaille, etc., according to the filling used. If clear aspic jelly is used for coating, with a certain amount of decoration on this, such as stars of egg-white and truffle, ere the moulds are filled up with any dainty odds and ends, diced, and mixed with a good chaudfroid sauce or layers of ham cream, these little moulds can then be served as ris de veau en belle vue, or foie gras en belle vue.

SOUFFLE GLACE DE GROSEILLES VERTES.

Top and tail a pound and a-half of nice green gooseberries, and stew them with the juice of a lemon, three or four tablespoonfuls of water, and six or seven ounces of castor sugar till they are a pulp, then rub altogether through a tammy cloth. Meantime boil four ounces of best cane sugar and a gill of water for six or seven minutes, then mix it lightly with the whites of four eggs which have been beaten till perfectly stiff and standing up in points. When the gooseberry purée is cold stir in this meringue, together with a few drops of sap or apple green, a liqueur-glassful of maraschino or brandy, and a pint of stiffly-whipped cream, sweetened with an ounce and a-half of sugar. Pour this mixture into a papered soufflé case, and freeze it for about three and a-half hours in the charged ice cave, turning it now and then, so that it may be evenly frozen. When ready to serve remove the paper band, taking care not to tear any of the soufflé away with it as you do so, and sprinkle the top with a little finely-chopped pistachio.

AVELINES D'ANCHOIS.

For these make an anchovy paste, and roll this into tiny bâtons, stick these together in groups of three with raw white of egg, then fix a strip of devilled almond into each bâton, after which fix in the middle of each group of three a little bit of paste shaped to imitate a nut, using white of egg to fix this. Each filbert is then brushed over with egg and baked, then served, either hot or cold, with a garnish of parsley. For the paste mix four ounces of fine flour (which has been carefully dried and sifted in readiness) with a saltspoonful of baking powder, a pinch of coralline pepper, then rub in quickly and lightly (using the tips of the fingers only, mind, not the palms of the hands, or the paste will be heavy) an ounce and a-half of fresh butter, an egg, and mix with a dessert-spoonful of cold water, to which has been added a good eggspoonful of anchovy essence. Roll the paste out thinly, quickly, and lightly, and make up as quickly as possible, and bake without delay because of the baking powder.

---

CORRECTION.—Owing to a printer's error the name of the maker of the Junket Tablets recommended in these columns in THE KING of June 3 was spelt Hausen instead of Hansen. As our readers will find they are unequalled for reliability and cheapness—a 6d. packet containing twenty-four tablets, each of which will convert a quart of new milk into junket—they should see that the name Chr. Hansen is on every tube purchased. Most good grocers and the leading stores in London now stock these Rennet Tablets, but when one's local dealer does not, a sample tube will be sent on receipt of 6d. by Chr. Hansen's Depôt, 77, St. Thomas's Street, London, S.E. SYBARITE.

Digitized by Google

THE WHITE WINES OF ENGLAND.

BULMER'S Famous Herefordshire CIDERS and PERRY.

For a beautifully illustrated booklet on Cider, price list, and special booklet for invalids, apply to

H. P. BULMER and CO., HEREFORD.

BUTLER'S "KEEN" RAZOR

HOLLOW GROUND. SPECIAL STEEL. HAND FORGED.

"I know that Razor, it comes from Sheffield."

HIGHEST AWARDS. GUARANTEED PERFECT, AND BRITISH MADE THROUGHOUT.

"Keen as this razor's edge invisible." (Love's Labour Lost.)

Black Handles ... ... each 3/- & 5/- | Ivory Handles ... ... each 5/- & 7/6
*Per pair, in best Case, 15/-; 7-day set, 50/- | *Per pair in Russia Case, 21/-; 7-day set, 70/-

"CAVENDISH" CARVERS (Regd. brand) keep "an edge that won't come off."
Fine Ivory, 20/-; Imitation ditto or Stag, 10/6 per pair. Post Free of all Dealers.

Sole Makers, GEORGE BUTLER & CO., Trinity Works, SHEFFIELD.

Makes the Skin as soft as Velvet

BEETHAM'S LAROLA

REG.

PRESERVES the SKIN from the effects of the SUN, WINDS, and HARD WATER.
Entirely removes and prevents all REDNESS, ROUGHNESS, IRRITATION, TAN, etc., and KEEPS THE SKIN SOFT, SMOOTH & WHITE AT ALL SEASONS.
DELIGHTFULLY SOOTHING AND REFRESHING AFTER WALKING, GOLFING, CYCLING, MOTORING, ETC.
INVALUABLE FOR THE COMPLEXION.
Bottles, 1/-, 1/9 and 2/6 each, of all Chemists and Stores.
M. BEETHAM & SON, Cheltenham.

РУБЛЬ КОФЕ

(ROUBLE COFFEE)

is fresh roasted the day it is sent out. Ground coffee is sent only when specially asked for. Rouble Coffee is because there is no better.

THE COFFEE OF THE EPICURE

glb. Sample to readers of this Paper in return for 10/- cash.

THE METATA AGENTS, 17b, Devonshire Sq., LONDON, E.C.

HOW TO MAKE COFFEE.
Our handbook gives detailed directions. Write for it.

"Tears never yet wound up a clock or worked a steam ingin'."
—PICKWICK PAPERS.

FRY'S PURE CONCENTRATED COCOA gives the feeling of "briskness," without which work or recreation may become irksome.

"My Ideal of Perfection."
—DR. ANDREW WILSON, F.R.S.E., &c.

NOURISH & FLOURISH!

FREE!

FRAME-FOOD

succeeds when other Foods fail. Babies who, from digestive or other trouble, cannot assimilate their food, quickly thrive on FRAME-FOOD (containing Wheat Phosphates which Build up the Frame).

Hundreds of Mothers' letters testify to this.

REPORT Particulars of CASE
when a Shilling 1-lb. Tin shall be promptly sent
FREE for TRIAL.
(Mention this paper.)

FRAME-FOOD CO., LTD.,
The Famous Factory,
SOUTHFIELDS, LONDON, S.W.

Extracted from wheat, Spread on your bread
Delicious to eat; Then you're well fed!

FRAME-FOOD JELLY

A nutritious and delicious WHEAT-substitute for jam, free from seeds and skins. Children LIKE it and THRIVE on it! Its easy digestibility makes it a GRAND food for Children, Invalids and Convalescents. Order a 1-lb. jar (price 10d.) from your Grocer or Chemist, or send 3d. stamps for postage and we will forward a 5-oz. FREE sample jar. (Mention "The King.")

FRAME FOOD CO., LTD., The Famous Factory, Standen Rd., Southfields, LONDON, S.W.

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

"KELWAY'S MANUAL FOR 1905" is a distinct advance upon its predecessors, excellent as they were; and the proprietors are to be congratulated upon the issue of one of the most comprehensive garden guides extant. The garden calendar and the advice as to garden operations in general are some of the best helps to amateurs ever published, while the hundreds of photographs illustrating the catalogue show better than any description the nature of the countless varieties of flower-life referred to in the manual. The publication may be obtained from the establishment at Langport, Somerset.

THE "Taquta" Automatic Camera, which has just been placed on the market, seems a distinct advance on some of the present types. Instead of "You press the button, we do the rest," the makers claim that their instruction reads: "You press the button, and it does the whole thing." Particulars of this remarkably ingenious invention may be had from the Quta Photograph Machine Company, 34, Norfolk Street, Strand.

H.R.H. PRINCESS LOUISE, DUCHESS OF ARGYLL, has graciously promised to distribute the prizes at Speech Day at The Heritage, the Craft School of the Guild of the Brave Poor Things, at Chailey, Sussex, on Tuesday, July 25. Information with regard to the special train which will be run from London can be had on application to Mrs. C. W. Kimmins, Dame Armstrong House, Harrow-on-the-Hill.

THE 250th performance of "The Walls of Jericho" will take place at the Garrick Theatre on Wednesday next.

THE spectacle of Redskins tilting in canoes was recently witnessed for the first time in England on the Great Lake at the Naval, Shipping, and Fisheries Exhibition, Earl's Court. The tournament is contested between canoes each holding two Canadian Indians. One of these sits aft and paddles, while the other stands bare-footed on the gunwales armed with a long pole, padded at the end, with which he endeavours to push his opponent overboard. When one of the canoes has been upset it is declared "game." The tournament is a novel and amusing sight, and adds another to the numerous attractions at this, the most popular of all the Earl's Court exhibitions.

THE recent Royal garden party at Windsor was one of the most successful functions of the season, and, owing to the glorious weather which prevailed, the dainty summer costumes of the lady visitors gave just that touch of colour which was missing at some of the festivities of the week before. The catering was admirably carried out by Messrs. J. Lyons and Co.

Copyright.

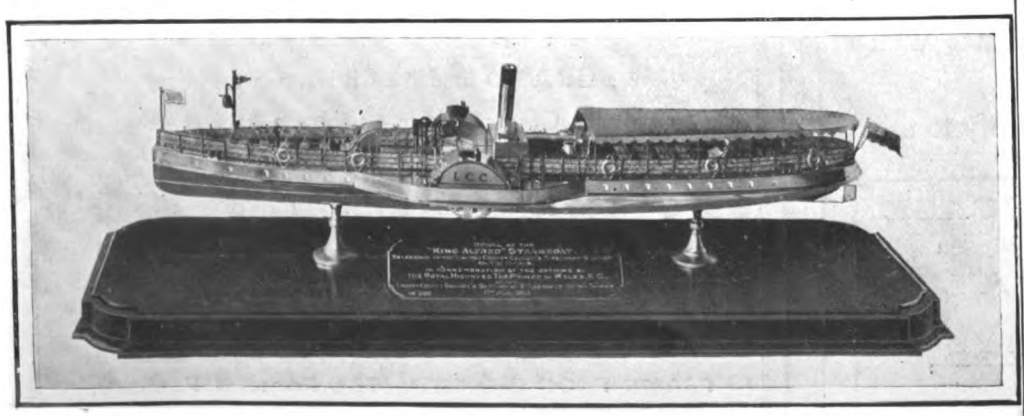
A NEW FOOT-REST FOR MOTOR-CYCLISTS.

This excellent device, the invention of Mr. C. D. Clayton, is described on page xiv.

THERE are some persons, even in these days of progress and enlightenment, so steeped in early-Victorian prejudice as to believe that cider as a beverage is unwholesome. But for some years past the medical faculty has been recommending it as a drink which is not only innocuous for those to whom wine is ordinarily poison, but as a drink of actual medicinal value. The great secret of cider buying is to get the best; it is a case of the best or nothing. And the three counties which are at present running a dead heat as the producers of pure and palatable cider are Devonshire, Somerset, and Hereford. At Marsden Magna in Somerset they brew a cider, such as equals the nectar the poets would have us believe the gods quaffed when they found the ruling of this world engendered thirst, and the cider of Marsden Magna as a cooling and delicious beverage is unequalled by any wine or other form of liquid refreshment. Clean and smooth to the palate, it has a delicate acidity which makes one glass serve to assuage the thirst that a bottleful of some preparations could not satisfy.

AT the Court Theatre, Sloane Square, two special matinées will be given on June 29 and June 30 at 2.30 p.m. in aid of the funds of the Passmore Edwards' Settlement, Tavistock Place, W.C. "Eleanor," by Mrs. Humphry Ward, will be presented.



THE L.C.C. STEAMBOAT "KING ALFRED," IN SILVER.

The model, which was presented to the Prince of Wales on the occasion of the inauguration of the new steamboat service, is the work of Messrs. Spink of Piccadilly.

Amusements.

HIS MAJESTY'S. MR. TREE.
EVERY EVENING AT 8.50.
BUSINESS IS BUSINESS.
Adapted by Sydney Grundy from "Les Affaires sont les Affaires," by Octave Mirbeau.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.30.
At 8.15 THE BALLAD MONGER.

AVENUE THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. FRANK CURZON.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.45.
A MESSAGE FROM MARS.
By Richard Ganthony, in which
Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY will appear.
Preceded at 8, by MISS BRAMSHOTT'S ENGAGEMENT.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 3.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. FRANK CURZON.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
To-night at 8.15,
LADY MADCAP.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.15.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Lessee and Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
To-night at 8.45.
MR. HOPKINSON.
An original farce in three acts by R. C. Carton.
Preceded at 8.15 by Mr. Nelson Jackson.
Matinee every Saturday at 3.

APOLLO THEATRE.
HENRY LOWENFELD, Sole Proprietor.
TOM B. DAVIS, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
Every Evening at 8.15.
The Comic Opera, in Three Acts,
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Wednesday at 2.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.
Managers: A. & S. GATTI & CHARLES FROHMAN.
Every Evening at 8.15,
THE CATCH OF THE SEASON,
By Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton.
Miss Ellaline Terriss, Mr. Seymour Hicks.
Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

COMEDY THEATRE.
Lessee: Mr. WM. GREET.
Under the Management of Mr. FRANK CURZON.
Every Evening at 8.30, Wed. and Sat. Matinees at 3
The Times says: "Riot of high spirits, perpetual laughter."
The Daily Telegraph says: "Uproarious, bright, and mirth provoking, hard to beat."
THE GREAT SUCCESS.
CHARLES FROHMAN presents WILLIAM COLLIER and the entire American Company in the delightful Farce, in Three Acts,
"THE DICTATOR."
"THE DICTATOR."
By Richard Harding Davis.

EMPIRE THEATRE.
New Fairy Divertissement
"THE DANCING DOLL."
Special Attractions.
Doors open 7.45. Manager: Mr. H. J. HITCHINS.

NAVAL, SHIPPING, AND FISHERIES EXHIBITION, EARL'S COURT.
Noon to 11.0 p.m. Admission 1s.
Naval Construction, Armaments, Shipping & Fisheries.
NELSON'S CENTENARY RELICS.
FISHING VILLAGE. Working Exhibits. Model of "Victory."
GRAND NAVAL AND MILITARY CONCERTS.
Go on board the full-size Cruiser.
Real Batteries of 4.7 Guns, Hotchkiss and Maxims.
The Cruiser is manned by a crew of 150 Handy-men.
PANORAMA OF THE BATTLE OF TRAFALGAR.
West's "Our Navy." Maxim's Captive Flying Machine. Fairy Grotto. Indian Canoes. Great Canadian Indian Village — Chiefs, Squaws, and Papooses. Voyage in a Submarine. Vanderdecken's Haunted Cabin. Famous Sea Fights. Miss de Rohan's Musical and Dramatic Sketches. Tillikum Canoe. Auto-Photographic Portraiture. Switchback. Chutes.
FISH RESTAURANT IN QUEEN'S COURT.

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Frontispiece: The Royal Party at Windsor | 397 |
| The March of Events | 398 |
| Sports and Pastimes | 400 |
| On the Links—Round the Home of the Premier | 404 |
| Actresses at Home: XVII.—Miss Ethel Keir | 409 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliamen | 410 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 412 |
| The Parisians of Paris—At Robinson | 414 |
| Under the Burgee | 416 |
| Yachts of the Year | 417 |
| Independence Day—The 129th Anniversary of American Independence, July 4, 1776—July 4, 1905 | 418 |
| The Traveller—The Rise of Llangammarch Wells | 420 |
| The Bathing Season | 422 |
| A Summer Supplement—Where and How to Spend the Holidays | 1—24 |
| Plays and Players | 423 |
| More Green-room Gossips—XXVI.—With Mr. Hubert Carter | 424 |
| Literary Notes | 426 |
| The Racing Season—At Royal Ascot | 428 |
| Leaves from a Collector's Note-book—American Rariora. The Relics and Iconography of Independence Day | 432 |
| The Services | 434 |
| The Cricket Season | 440 |
| Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | 442 |
| Motoring Notes | 446 |
| The King's Menu | xii. |
| Here, There, and Everywhere | xiv. |

TO LIBRARIES, CLUBS, HOTELS, ETC.

A Reading Case for THE KING can be had post free on application to the Publishers, George Newnes, Limited. Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

JAS. SHOOLBRED & CO.

LADIES' & CHILDREN'S BATHING COSTUMES, CAPS, GOWNS, ETC.

Girls' Costumes from 4/9 each.

No. 2. In Serge, Navy or Red, 15/9

Tottenham House, Tottenham Court Road.

AS PURCHASED BY ROYALTY & THE GREATEST MUSICIANS.
THE WORLD-FAMED

"Angelus" Piano-Player

"The Original Invention," and the first pneumatic Piano-Playing Instrument ever placed before the public. Since its introduction the "ANGELUS" has been often imitated but never equalled its unique system of pneumatics being protected by patents; besides which the "ANGELUS," since its invention, has undergone constant DEVELOPMENT BY ITS INVENTORS. None of its numerous imitators can say this. Inventive genius cannot be stolen. Month by month, and year by year, the "ANGELUS" has been elaborated and perfected—here a new touch, there a more responsive chord. Throughout it has been the pioneer instrument, and to-day it stands pre-eminent among Piano-Players as the most artistic, human-like, and complete. The

Phrasing Lever

(patented) is only to be found in the "ANGELUS," and gives the player the same interest in his performance as though playing with the hands. Another exclusive device is the MELODY BUTTONS, by means of which the player can subdue the accompaniment and at the same time accentuate the melody to any degree. The greatest living musicians have purchased the "ANGELUS," and agree that without these devices it is quite impossible to obtain the sensitive human qualities, and to banish all suspicion of mechanical effect.

Madame Clara Butt says: "I have heard all the other inventions of the kind, but the 'ANGELUS' is far and away the best."

Josef Hofmann says: "Listening to the Angelus affords exquisite pleasure, and is a boon to all lovers of music."

The "ANGELUS" is the only Piano-Player with ORCHESTRAL ORGAN COMBINATION, or may be obtained as Piano-Player only.

"Angelus Piano" (Drawing Room Upright Grand) with Player combined. Fitted with all the latest Expression Devices. Can be used as an ordinary Piano or with the "ANGELUS" Music Roll, in which form the "ANGELUS" cannot be seen even when being played.

DEFERRED PAYMENTS arranged if desired. DISCOUNT FOR CASH.

You are invited to write for our No. 41 Catalogue, or call and see the "ANGELUS."

J. HERBERT MARSHALL (Dept. 41), Angelus Hall, Regent House, 233, Regent Street, London, W.

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S

HIGH-CLASS CIGARETTES.

TEOFANI'S Cigarettes receive the Highest Awards at all International Exhibitions, and are Sold by Leading Purveyors throughout the WORLD.

TEOFANI & CO., LONDON.

MEDICAL GALVANISM

HAS CONQUERED some of the most obstinate complaints after all other remedies have failed.

HALE'S IMPROVED ELECTRIC BELTS and BATTERIES for wearing next the body without blistering or injuring the skin. These appliances are

PERFECT GENERATORS OF ELECTRICITY, and are most comfortable in wear. Price One Guinea.

RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, and GOUT are speedily REMOVED by this powerful Agent.

ELECTRIC BELT and SUSPENSOR, price 42s., for MEN, for VARICOCELE, Nervous Debility, and Exhaustion, Bladder Weakness, etc.

Pamphlets Gratis. Consultations Free.

HALE & SON, Medical Galvanists,
117, CHANCERY LANE, LONDON.

BORWICK'S

5 GOLD MEDALS

FOR MAKING BREAD, CAKES & PASTRY

BAKING POWDER

GUARANTEED PURE & WHOLESOME

Digitized by Google

Pure JAEGER Wool

EXCLUSIVE MATERIALS & DESIGNS.

Wool "Taffeta," "Cambric," "Lattice-Web," Fancy Flannels, etc., specially selected for wearing quality, smartness, and for their pleasant and soft handle.

The most comfortable Shirts, Pyjama Suits, and Night Shirts obtainable for gentlemen.

PURE WOOL is known and recommended by Medical Men to be the safest and best for Summer Wear.

SHIRTS, from 8s. 9d.
NIGHT SHIRTS, 12s. 9d.
PYJAMA SUITS, 15s. 9d.

JAEGER
Pure Wool Knitted Golfers,

in plain colours and with coloured collars and cuffs.

Price 10/6.

Pure Wool Sheets and Blankets a Speciality.

Write for PRICE LIST (No. 24) containing Patterns and 230 Illustrations, post free.

LONDON—
126, Regent Street, W.
456, Strand (Charing Cross), W.C.
30, Sloane Street, S.W.
115, Victoria St., S.W.
85 & 86, Cheapside, E.C.

The JAEGER GOODS are sold in most towns. Address sent on application to Wholesale and Shipping Office, 95, Milton Street, London, E.C.

LOOK FOR THE LABEL! To checkmate the dishonest use of the name of JAEGER, look for the label on each article, and insist that the goods be described as "JAEGER" on invoice.

Garden Houses

IN ARTISTIC & ORIGINAL DESIGNS. BEST

IMPROVED PORTABLE BUNGALOWS, PAV
BILLIARD ROOMS, MOTOR-CAR HOUSES, Etc.,
DESIGNS & ESTIMATES FREE.
STIMPSON & CHAMBERS, PO

THE WHITE WINES OF ENGLAND.

BULMER'S

Famous Herefordshire

CIDERS and PERRY.

Fôr a beautifully illustrated booklet on Cider, price list, and special booklet for invalids, apply to

H. P. BULMER & CO., HEREFORD.

A WONDERFUL REMEDY FOR

ECZEMA, RASHES,

Pimples, Spots, Sores, Ringworm, Chaps, Chilblains, Rough Skin, BAD LEGS.

The whole Treatment for 3/-, Ointment, Tablets, and Soap.

CURED by the

ECZOLINE
TREATMENT.

STOPS ALL IRRITATION AT ONCE.

WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD.

A Gentleman writes: "My sister was troubled for 20 years with Eczema; she only used half a pot when she was absolutely cured." A Lady states: "Your pots are worth 20/- each. I was cured when I had been sent home from the hospital as incurable." Ointment, 1/1½, 2/9, 4/6. Tablets same price. Soap 6d. per cake; Shaving Stick, 6d. Of any Chemist, or HUNTER, Regent Street, Swindon, Wilts, Eng. Animal Eczoline same price, but Soap, 1/- per lb. Book, "How Eczema is Cured," 1d.

HIGHLY RECOMMENDED BY MEDICAL MEN.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN Patent LEVER TRUSS

SCIATIC, RIDING, & other BELTS

All Kinds of ELASTIC GOODS.

Insist on having White's Truss.
Those bearing the Co.'s name are alone genuine.
All others are imitations. NOT sold by the Stores (Army & Navy, &c.).

Consultations & Price Lists free.
WHITE'S MOC-MAIN PATENT LEVER TRUSS CO., LTD.,
99, Shaftesbury Avenue, Piccadilly Circus.
Est. 50 Years. Female Attendant.

KINDLY MENTION THIS MAGAZINE.

SCOTCH WHISKY.

An old-established Firm of London Wine and Spirit Merchants holding agency for a high-class brand of Scotch Whisky, are prepared to give liberal remuneration to those introducing sound private business.

Gentlemen should have no difficulty in introducing this brand to their friends, and thus adding considerably to their income. — Apply "Three Star," c/o J. C. FRANCIS & Co. 14, Fetter Lane, E.C.

INVERGARRY & FORT AUGUSTUS
RAILWAY.

This new line from Spean Bridge to Invergarry and Fort Augustus runs through a part of the Highlands rich in the most delightful and varied scenery.

Tourist fares from principal Stations in England and Scotland.

Tourist Programme, also Time Table, sent on application.

T. A. WILSON,
General Manager
THE HIGHLAND RAILWAY,
INVERNESS.

SULPHOLINE
SKIN LOTION.

Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, Entirely fade away.

THE CLOTH FOR GOLF SUITS
"Hydea"

is the best English cloth—made of the best wool—grown on the HYDE Farm, Gloucestershire. It is delightfully soft and elastic—absolutely for sportsmen—most durable for out-of-doors handsome for town suits—Long thread—and pays no more than you—because one quality at one price. "HYDEA" is every two yards of the selvedge—that's how know it—that, and its excellent surface!

THE KING WEARS

FREE Booklet:—

APPERLY, CURTIS & Co., Ltd.,
Dudbridge Mills, Stroud, Glos.

"MY OWN" THE PERFECT TOBACCO

A Superb Mixture Matchless Tobacco

Sold in 2oz., 4oz., 8oz. Tins. 6d per oz.

'Mexdolia'

Composed of fine Cuban Leaf mixed with rare old Virginia from Picked Leaves of Tobacco

Price 2s/- per lb.

Shipped direct from Factory to Pipe.

Cigar Importers, 113, High Holborn, Cross, London.

PIKE & TU

IT MAY NOT MATTER TO YOU WHAT DOG BISCUITS

Our biscuits are made as nearly as possible to the Natural Food of the Dog, and contain fully an equal proportion of the Muscle-forming ingredients.

1qr. 6d. per cwt. discount for cash.

PIKE & T

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

TRY THESE !!!

7/- per doz. Post Free.

7/- per doz. Post Free.

There are seven known wonders in the world, the eighth wonder will be known by all Golfers who will send at once for a dozen

LOWNE'S SPECIAL RUBBERED GOLF BALLS

"A Marvellous Ball; will not Hack; Perfect Flight, and Putts True." 7/- per doz. 80/- per gross.
YOU ARE IN FRONT if you use our "D.L."
RE-COVERED HASKELLS, 12/- per doz. Every Ball Guaranteed.
Haskells and other Rubber-cored Balls Re-covered for 8/- per doz.

Donald Lowne & Co., Golf Ball Manufacturers,
84, 85 & 86, CHANCERY LANE, LONDON, W.C.

EASY, LIGHT and SELF-FIXING.
DUFF'S RING GRIPS.

per pair 2s. 6d. complete.
Of all dealers and
10, THROGMORTON AVENUE, LONDON, E.C.

Club Houses can be efficiently and economically lighted by
ACETYLENE.
Write H. BAKER, 49, Victoria Street, S.W.

THE COLONEL TAKES THE 19TH (W HOLE IN ONE!

Head Office: 11, SO. EXCHANGE PLACE, GLASGOW.
J. H. ROGER PROPR.
LESSEE OF
H.M. CUSTOMS (No. 15) BOND, JAMES WATT STREET, GLASGOW.
Special Quotations to Golf Clubs.

"COLONEL BOGEY" WHISKY.

GUARANTEED 7 YEARS OLD.
42/- PER DOZEN. CARRIAGE PAID.

ST. ANNE'S-ON-THE-SEA
(Near BLACKPOOL).

Contains
FOUR GOLF LINKS (18 Holes each).
Also facilities for
BOATING, BATHING, FISHING, CYCLING, TENNIS.
Splendid Beach. Ideal Holiday Resort.
ILLUSTRATED GUIDE FREE
on application to
SECRETARY, Advertising Committee,
Public Offices, St. Anne's-on-the-Sea.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.
BARTON COURT HOTEL.

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.
MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.
Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.
Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.
Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.
THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.
MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.
Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.
ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

"SPALDING WHITE" GOLF BALL.

DRIVES 25 YARDS FURTHER THAN ANY OTHER GOLF BALL.

A. G. SPALDING & BROS.,
53, 54 and 55, FETTER LANE, LONDON, E.C.

CONWAY.
OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.
One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.
Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.
GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.
Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.
Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method).—Manager, E. DIELMANN.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS
Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied.
Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,
Golf Ball Manufacturers,
1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

THE KITE Golf Ball

WON THE

AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP.

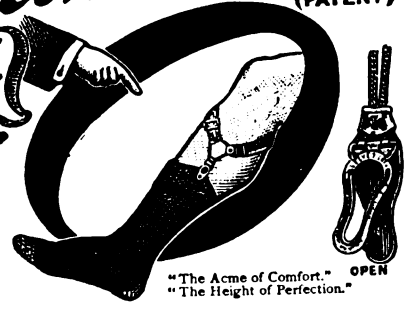
Digitized by Google

"Well, here's my comfort." SHAKESPEARE

FOR GENTLEMEN.

THE H.W. Velvet Grip (PATENT)

BOSTON GARTER



Will not tear or damage the socks.

Cotton (check) 1s. pair.
Cotton (plain) 1s. pair.
Silk plain) ... 2s. pair.
By Post, 1d. extra.

"The Acme of Comfort." "The Height of Perfection."

OPEN

If unable to procure from your hosier, apply to
THE VELVET GRIP MANUFACTORY, HACKNEY ROAD WORKS, LONDON, N.E.

7/10 ths of A

Your little ills will

CARTER'S LITTLE

For HEADACH
For BILIOUSN
For INDIGESTI
For TORPID L
For CONSTIPA
For SALLOW S
For the COMPL

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

Very small, and easy to take as sugar.

Genuine must have signa

PRICE 13½d.

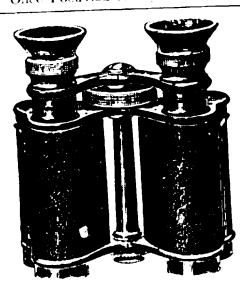
PATENT. LONDON MADE.

ROSS' Prism Binoculars.

"The Great Power and Large Field of a Telescope in the Compass of an Opera Glass."
"Once Focussed Always Ready."

IMPROVED MODEL.

With Simultaneous Focussing Adjustment.



REDUCED PRICES.

Focussing by Eyepiece Adjustment only.

| Mag. | £ | s. | d. | Mag. | £ | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 8 dia. ... | 7 | 5 | 0 | 8 dia. ... | 6 | 0 | 0 |
| 10 ,, ... | 8 | 10 | 0 | 10 ,, ... | 7 | 5 | 0 |
| 12 ,, ... | 9 | 10 | 0 | 12 ,, ... | 8 | 5 | 0 |

PHOTOGRAPHIC OUTFITS.
THE NEWEST CAMERAS FITTED WITH ROSS' CELEBRATED LENSES.
EVERY REQUIREMENT FOR PHOTOGRAPHY.

ROSS Ltd., Manufacturing Opticians,
111 NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.
31, COCKSPUR STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W.
OPTICAL WORKS: CLAPHAM COMMON, S.W.
SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE.

ARE YOU ALI

to the fact that thousands of people who were inveterate smokers of extensively advertised cheap paper cigarettes (which are so harmful to the health) have discontinued same, and are now smoking

FLOR DE DINDIGUL

CIGARETTES (All Tobacco Leaf—No Paper.)

They are far more satisfying, mild, delightful in flavour, pure, and last much longer than ordinary paper cigarettes. Doctors strongly recommend them. These delightful Whiffs are on sale everywhere. 1d. each, 8/- per 100 Awarded 10 Gold Medals for excellence.

Importer: BEWLAY, 49, STRAND, LONDON.
Established 125 Years.

The Milk Chocolate "PAR EXCELLENCE."

ASK FOR Fry's

"FIVE BOYS"

MILK CHOCOLATE.

"Unrivalled as a Chocolate Confection."—MEDICAL MAGAZINE.

BRITISH MILK AND BRITISH LABOUR.

Digitized by Google

WILLIAMS' SHAVING SOAP

Louder Than Words.

There is no more delightful sensation than that produced by the soft, creamy lather of Williams' Shaving Soap.

Shaving becomes so easy and agreeable that a man cannot help showing his satisfaction. His smile speaks louder than words.

Sold by Chemists, Hairdressers and Perfumers all over the world, or mailed to any address on receipt of price in stamps.

Williams' Shaving Sticks, 1s. Williams' Luxury Tablets, 1s.
Williams' American Shaving Tablets, 6d.

(Trial Size) of Williams' Shaving Stick, 4d. Trial Tablet Williams' Shaving Soap for 1d. stamp by addressing

THE J. B. WILLIAMS CO., 65 Great Russell St., LONDON, W. C.; 161 Clarence St., SYDNEY. Main Office and Factories, GLASTONBURY, CONN., U. S. A.

THE TRIP OF THE SEASON!

REGULAR WEEKLY SAILINGS FROM

LONDON and DARTMOUTH

TO GIBRALTAR MOROCCO COAST.

Canary Islands and Madeira

25 Days at Sea for 20 to 22 Guineas Inclusive.

FOR FURTHER PARTICULARS APPLY TO

THE MERSEY STEAMSHIP Company, Ltd.,
MOROCCO HOUSE, ST. MARY AXE, LONDON, E.C.
Or to the Offices of the Company BAYARD'S COVE, DARTMOUTH.

IF YOU ARE BUYING

Any kind of Requisite for Travelling, it will pay you to send for

W. H. SMITH'S

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF

PORTMANTEAUX
TRUNKS
BAGS

And every description of Leather Goods and Travelling Requisites for Home and the Colonies.

Opposite the Abbey, BATH.

Maker of the ROSEBERY HAT BOX.

LORD ROSEBERY says: "It is an ingenious and useful Hat Box."

ALWAYS READY FOR USE. NEVER REQUIRES GRINDING.

KROPP RAZOR

Each Razor in a Case.
BLACK HANDLES, 5/6. IVORY HANDLES, 7/6.

A PLEASURE TO USE.

Wholesale: OSBORNE, GARRETT & CO., London, W.

THE SCOTTISH HIGHLANDS.

DUNKELD. Charming woods and scenery. Rumbling Bridge Hermitage. Cathedral.
ABERFELDY. The famous "Birks." Loch Tay.
PITLOCHRY. Pass of Glenlyor. Golf. Fishing.
Falls of Tummel. Black Castle. Pass of Killiecrankie.
AVIEMORE.
KINGUSSIE.
BOAT OF GARTEN.
GRANTOWN.
Valley of the "Spey." Recommended by Medical Profession on account of salubrious climate. Loch. River. Mountain and Glen.
NAIRN. Lovely seaside resort.
FORRES. Dry, bracing climate. Romantic scenery.
STRATHPEFFER SPA. Medicinal Springs. Strathpeffer booklet sent on application.
DORNOCH. On Dornoch Firth. The Highland Ry. Co.'s handsome new Hotel now open.

Illustrated Tourist Guide sent on application.

T. A. WILSON, General Manager.
THE HIGHLAND RAILWAY, INVERNESS.

HOTELS, etc.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524
Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. ,, 858.
Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. ,, 641 Kensington

Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date.
First-class cuisine.

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hôte or à la Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Close to Parades. Week End terms. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address: "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne.

HOTELS, etc. continued.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence.

SHIPPING.

MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

SPLENDID STRETCH OF THE RIVER COLNE, at Wraysbury, to be LET, or the Freehold would be SOLD.—Full particulars of P. and G. GEEN, Surveyors, 57, Waterloo Road, S.E.

BIRKBECK BANK

ESTABLISHED 1851.

Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.
Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.
Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

Digitized by Google

TRAVEL BY

WEST COAST ROUTE BETWEEN ENGLAND & SCOTLAND

SPEED, COMFORT and PUNCTUALITY. FISHING, SHOOTING, GOLFING, &c., &c., &c.

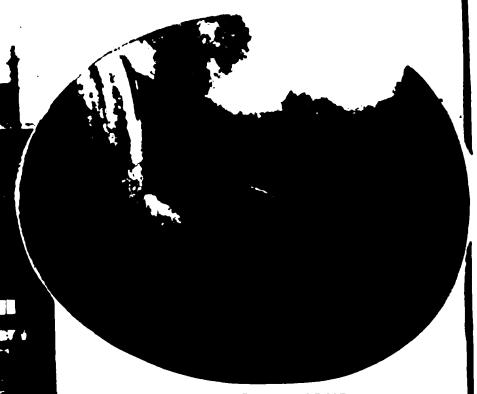
Hundreds of Pleasure Tours Daily by Rail, Coach and Steamer, on London & North Western and Caledonian systems.

GRASMERE.

DORIC ARCHWAY, EUSTON.



FALLS OF CLYDE.

Descriptive Guide Books of West Coast Route on application to Mr. R. TURNBULL, Euston Station, London.

ACCELERATED TRAIN SERVICE:

LONDON (EUSTON), BIRMINGHAM, LIVERPOOL, AND MANCHESTER } WITH { GLASGOW (CENTRAL), EDINBURGH (PRINCES ST.), PERTH, ABERDEEN, INVERNESS, OBAN, AND THE NORTH.

For Tourist Programmes and "Summer Tours in Scotland," "Oban and the Land of the Gael," "Through Scotland" Descriptive Guides, apply to Mr. G. Caithrop, Caledonian Railway, Glasgow.

Frederick Harrison, General Manager, L. & N.W. Ry.
R. Millar, General Manager, Caledonian Ry.

BY ROYAL WARRANT TO H.M. THE KING.

HOWARD'S
EASY CHAIRS,
26, BERNERS ST., W.

ENGLISH-MADE . . . .

INDIAN TEAK PARQUET FLOORING,

From 3d. a Foot.

NEW WALL PAPERS.

PLAIN AND DECORATIVE HOUSE PAINTING.

OAK PANELLING.

MODERN & ANTIQUE FURNITURE.

HOWARD & SONS, LTD., MANUFACTURERS, 25, 26, & 27, BERNERS ST., LONDON, W.

Digitized by Google

WHITTINGEHAME: THE HOME OF THE PREMIER.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 439. SATURDAY, JULY 1st, 1905. Price 1s.

Russell and Sons.

THE ROYAL PARTY AT WINDSOR.

The Queen, Princess Victoria, and Princess Louise, Duchess of Fife, who, with other members of the Royal family, have been staying at Windsor for Ascot week.

Digitized by Google

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 439. Saturday, July 1, 1905.

Editorial Offices—20, TAVISTOCK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephone—No. 2,748, GERRARD.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

EDITORIAL.

photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING'S BIRTHDAY.—This week the King came back to town for the official celebration of his birthday, which is a different thing to the family celebration in November. On his way the King paid a visit to Sandhurst and the Staff College, Camberley, and there carried out very thorough inspections, both of the establishments and those under instruction there.

Voight, Homburg.

PRINCE ARISUGAWA

Who arrived in London on Monday on a short visit to the King. A large programme of festivities has been prepared, which includes visits to the City and Windsor.

The King is intensely interested in the Army, indeed his interest in military matters is almost greater than that of the Prince of Wales in all that concerns the Sea Service, and from the words he addressed to the cadets at Sandhurst we get some idea of how desirous he is that all those in the commissioned ranks o the Army should not only know how to comport themselves as officers, but also how to behave as true and honourable gentlemen.

THE KING AND PARK ROYAL.—With that kindness and courtesy which makes all the members of our Royal Family ever ready to place themselves at the disposal of a deserving cause, both the King and the Prince of Wales have this week visited the annual exhibition of the Royal Agricultural Society, which has established itself definitely at Park Royal, and which is endeavouring to attract both the agricultural and the general public to that place. It is no secret that the initial ventures have not been crowned with success, but the show ground is now becoming better known as the three railway companies which serve the district have made every effort to assist in popularising the show by running frequent services of trains, and it seems quite possible that this year there may be a more promising showing in the patronage extended to the show by Londoners.

PRINCE EDWARD'S CRICKET MATCH.—It read well on the news bills last week: "Prince Edward's Cricket Match." Sportsmen bought the papers to see how the game at Windsor was progressing, ignoring the dangerous position of the Australians at Leyton, and the comfortable outlook for Surrey at the Oval. The occasion was an unusual one, scions of the reigning house figuring with professional cricketers in the stop-press columns of the halfpenny press, but it was an occasion that gave intense pleasure to the whole of the Kingdom, one might almost say of the whole Empire. For we are a sporting nation; our Kings, from the time when Canute made a bet he couldn't stop the tide, have been patrons of one or other of the prevalent sports, and we rejoice to see that our future ruler and his brother have thus early followed in the path so many illustrious ancestors have marked out for them.

THE HOLIDAY SEASON.—This is a time of year when Bradshaw, the A B C, and railway guides of every description are much in demand. People bent on holiday-making want to know how they may best get from London to the Isle of Arran, from Manchester to Bournemouth, and from Leeds to Pwllheli (which the porters at Paddington call "Poolheeley,") and they con many books, and finally, weary and hot and tired, draw up a programme of their trains, their expenditure, and their projected excursions. There are many to whom this is the most enjoyable part of the holiday season. There are others to whom it is most obnoxious. And to these we offer a supplement this week, where they may find set forth in simple terms the best way to set about enjoying a holiday in almost any part of the globe. From New Zealand to Brighton, from Switzerland to Blackpool, they have only to consult our pages (editorial and advertisement) to know exactly how to travel in comfort, where to stay when arrived in the town or country of their choice, and how to see best the manifold attractions which every holiday resort offers to the traveller.

Voight, Homburg.

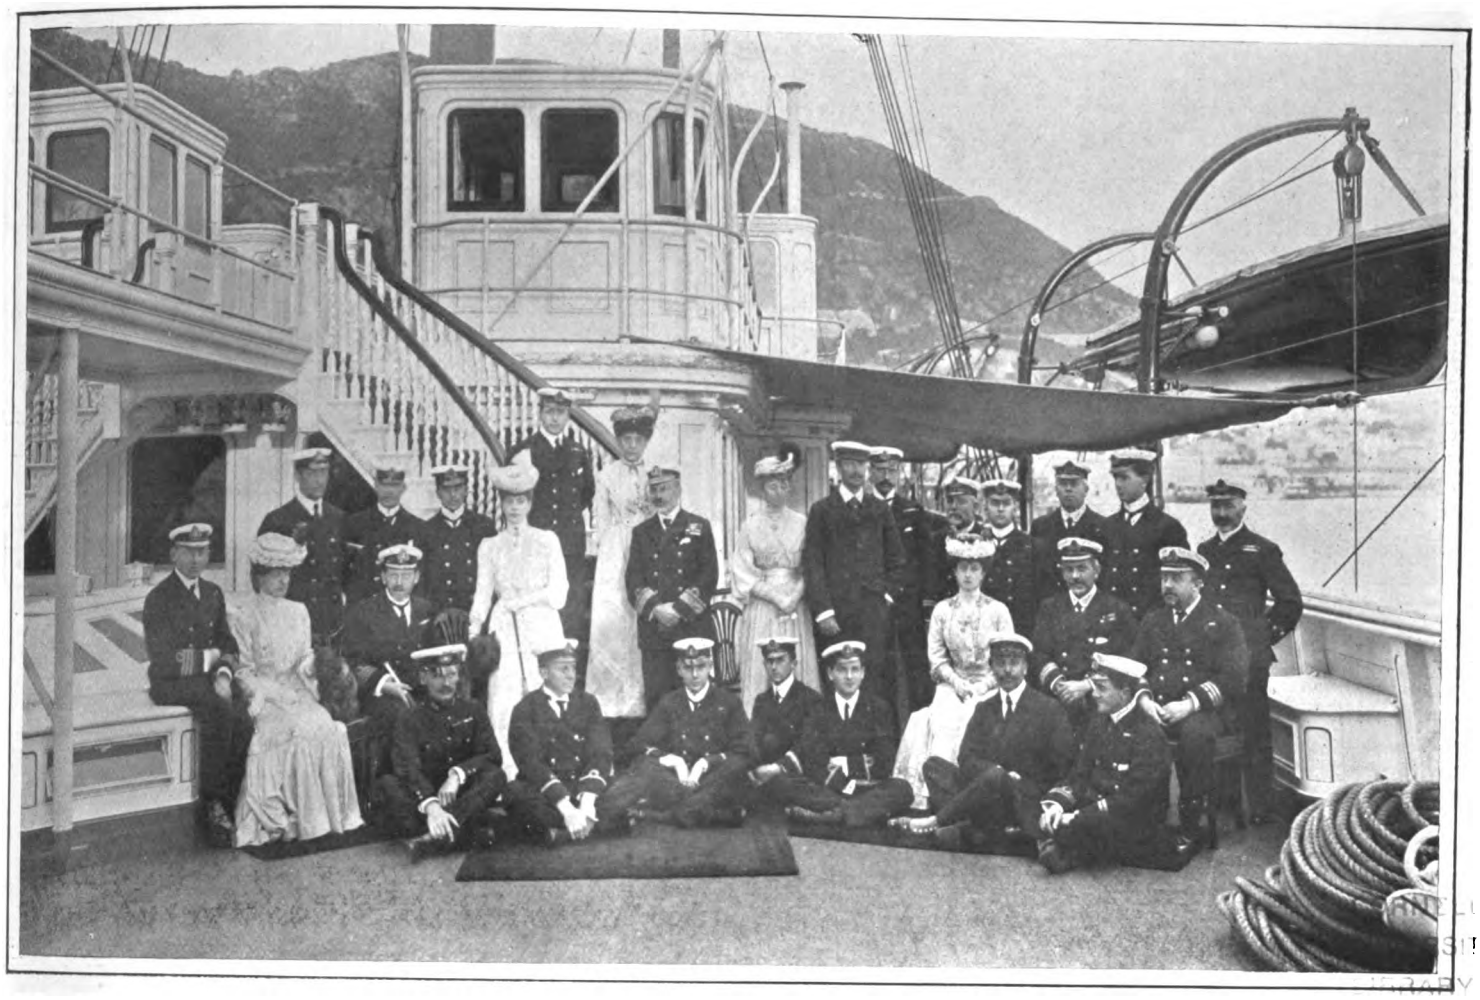
PRINCESS ARISUGAWA.

Next week the Prince and Princess will visit Barrow-in-Furness for the launching ceremony of the new Japanese battle-ship "Katori," which will be named by the Princess.

Digitized by Google



THE QUEEN ON BOARD THE ROYAL YACHT.

Photo Press Company.

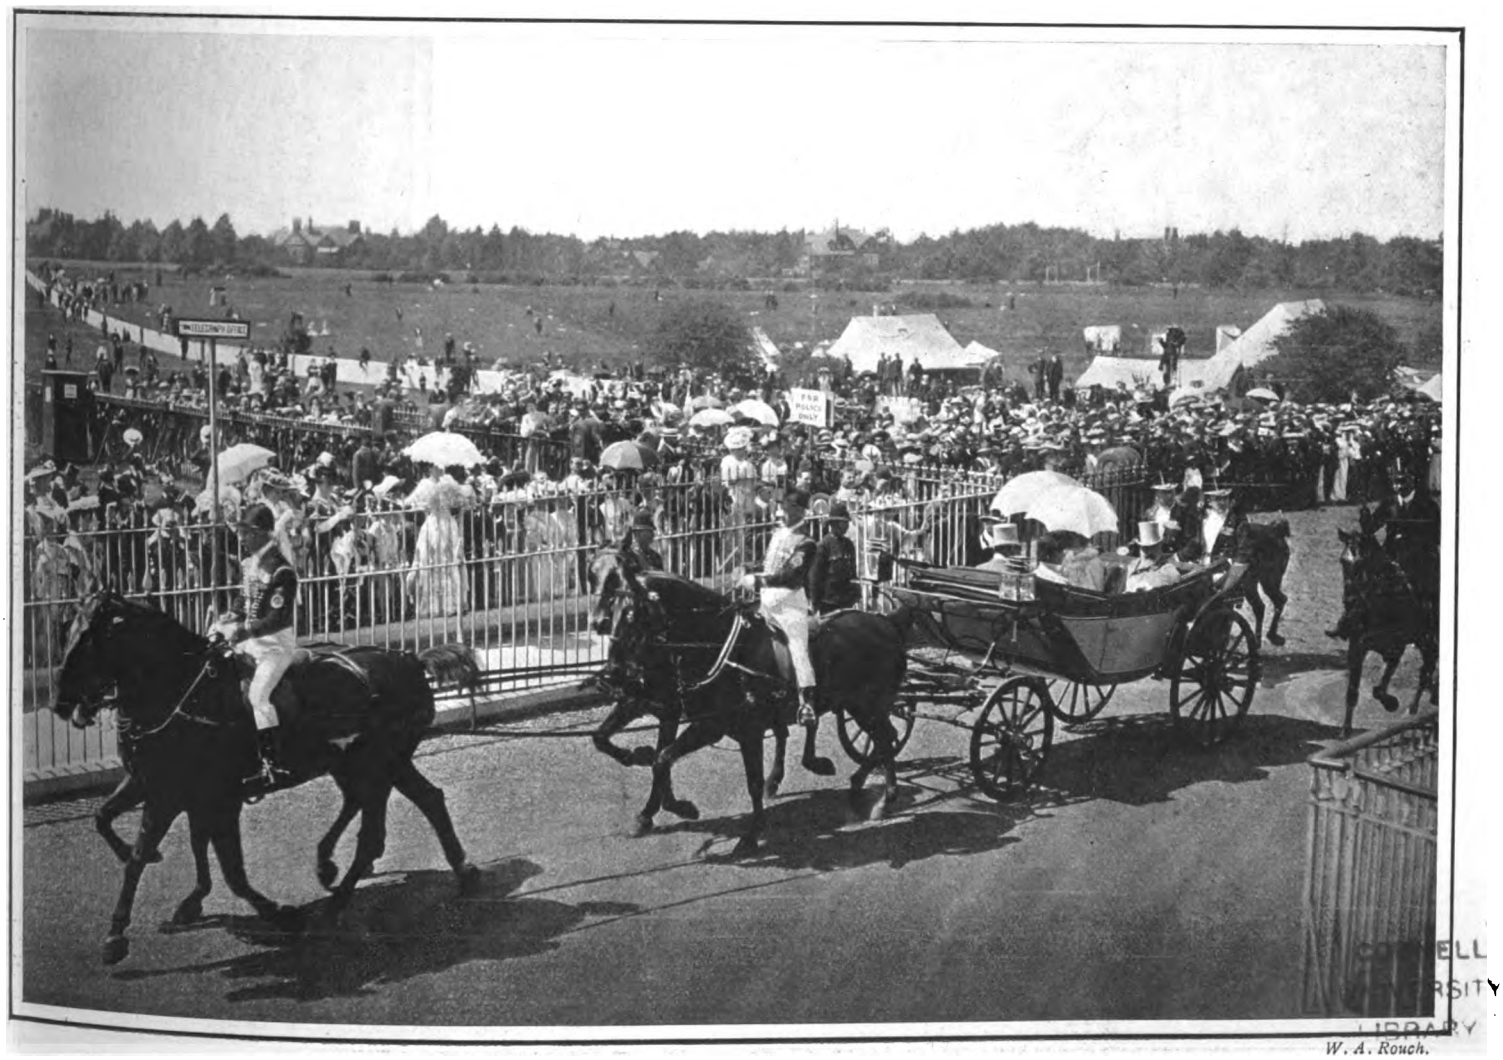
A reminiscence of the Mediterranean tour this spring, which restored Princess Victoria to health, and gave to the Queen renewed strength for the long programme of social events in which her position compels her to take part.



THE ROYAL PROCESSION AT ASCOT.

W. A. Rouch.

Glorious weather favoured the King and Queen during their visits to the Ascot Meeting this year. The picture shows the carriage approaching the gates of the Royal enclosure.

Digitized by Google

W. A. Rouch.

THE RANELAGH HORSE SHOW

Held at Ranelagh on Saturday last, when the Countess of Kimberley presented the prizes. Our illustrations show Mrs. E. H. Goad's Lord and Lady Pick-'em-Up, the winning pair in the Double Harness Class, and Mr. St. Leger Stephen's Cockfight, which took the first prize in the Jumping Competition.

W. A. Rouch.

THE CROQUET TOURNAMENT AT ROEHAMPTON.

The games for the Open Championships were played at Roehampton last week, and our illustrations show the principal winners: Miss L. Gower, Champion of All England; Mr. R. J. C. Beaton, who was Miss Gower's partner in the Mixed Doubles Championship, which they won; and Miss N. Coote, who won the Ladies' Championship.

W. A. Rouch.

FROCKS AND FRILLS AT ASCOT AND HURLINGHAM.

Ascot this year was favoured with warmer weather than in recent years, and the result was that the ladies were able to don their summer costumes without fear. The final for the Champion Cup was played at Hurlingham on Saturday last. Roehampton succeeded in beating Old Cantabs, the score being 5 goals to nil.

Digitized by Google

Copyright.

THE CROYDON AGRICULTURAL SHOW.

Mr. H. C. Marchant's tandem, with which he won the first prize at this meeting last week.

Workman.

AT CHRIST'S HOSPITAL.

The Lord Mayor at West Horsham on Speech Day.

Debenham, Surbiton.

THE LADIES' AUTOMOBILE CLUB AT KIDBROOKE PARK.

Last week a number of members of the Ladies' Automobile Club undertook a run to Mrs. Gerard Leigh's house at Forest Row, where they took tea on the lawns.

Copyright.

DIVING IN THE NAVY.

Gunnery officers in the Navy have to undergo training in diving, and our illustration shows a lieutenant coming up after his first descent in diving dress.

Copyright.

THE RAVENSBOURNE CLUB SPORTS.

The race for girls under twelve years of age. The handicaps were: Scratch, Eileen Firminger; 5-yds., Winifred Dring; 10-yds., Glenna Thomas, Marjorie Lee, and Ruby Matthews; 12-yds., Dorothy Miller; 16-yds., Vera Strout; 20-yds., Nellie Pragnell; 22-yds., Vera Pragnell.

Digitized by Google

GERMANS IN SOUTH AFRICA.—Perhaps because the Fatherland once had ambitions in the Transvaal, there are more Germans with distinguished names in South Africa than in any other British Colony. Count Moltke, who has just become engaged to Miss Rose-Innes, is in Pretoria. Count von Pfeil has had a romantic career in opening up the Zambesi region, where he came into collision with the late Cecil Rhodes. Major H. von Bülow, who died in Cassel the other day, was a popular Colonist in Natal. He was a farmer, and the largest exporter of wattle bark in the Colony. For many years he was the Commanding Officer of the Umvoti Mounted Rifles, which did such good service in the war. Major von Bülow, who was a nephew of the German Chancellor, went home in good health, and had made arrangements to return to Natal last month. His sudden death will be deeply regretted in the Colony.

AN ENERGETIC BARONET.—Sir John Swinburne, who was married for the third time recently, is a cousin of the poet. He is, however, quite capable of standing on his own two feet. He is a baronet who owns some 30,000 acres in Northumberland. He began his career in the Navy, has sat in Parliament in the Liberal interest, and was one of the early pioneers of Rhodesia. An apocryphal story is told of him in connection with South Africa. It is to this effect. At one time the smallest coin in circulation in Cape Town was sixpence, and, however small the purchase, that was the price. Sir John, knowing this, thought it would be a good thing to take out a big box of threepenny-bits. He did so, and to this day, all up and down South Africa, the coin is known as "Sir John." The bottom is knocked out of this pretty story by the fact that from Cape Town to Johannesburg a threepenny-bit is known as a "tickey."

THE FETE DES VIGNERONS.—At a time when many people are thinking of going to Switzerland for a holiday (and the way to get there and elsewhere is described in our supplement this week), it is interesting to learn that the famous Fête des Vignerons, which only takes place about five times in each century, is to be held at the beginning of August this year. Erroneously some English writers have been calling this the Swiss National Fête, but it is nothing of the sort. The Schutzenfest, or Swiss Bisley, is far more a national fête than the procession of vine-growers. But this latter celebration, which no doubt in its original form can be traced back to the pagan rites in honour of Bacchus, is of great antiquity, and, taking place in the open air in a magnificent natural amphitheatre seating 12,500 people, has the Alps and the lake at Vevey for a setting. Few more picturesque sights are offered even by Switzerland, and this year's celebration will no doubt be attended by large numbers of foreigners.

UNLUCKY THIRTEEN.—Why is thirteen unlucky? The question has been revived by the attempt last week to alter the number of a house which happened to stand next to Nos. 11 and 15 in a street in Hornsey, and which the landlord claimed would not let on account of its number. Superstition is an extraordinary thing. It can turn otherwise sane and respectable members of society into cranks of the most extraordinary kind. There are men who will not take a house because it has thirteen rooms, or because there is one room 13-ft. wide. And they will not sign the agreement on the thirteenth of the month, and in fact keep up, at considerable disadvantage to themselves, a perpetual boycott of this unoffending number. No amount of argument, of common-sense, or of ridicule will cure them of the fad, and it remains a mystery how in this materialistic age such relics of the ignorance and credulities of our forefathers can survive.

H. Walter Barnett.

MRS. LEBRETON

Who is the wife of Mr. Lebreton of San Francisco, was presented at the last Court. Mrs. Lebreton is the daughter of Rear-Admiral McDougal of the United States Navy.

SHAKESPEARE FINDS.—In a little Buckinghamshire village, with an appropriateness that Cibber would have appreciated, has been found a copy of the 1605 quarto edition of "The Tragedie of King Richard the Third," "newly augmented by William Shake-Speare." There are only forty-six leaves of it, yet probably they are each worth something like £14 sterling. For this edition is one of the rarest of the Shakespeare editions. There is one copy in the British Museum, and one in the Bodleian Library, but those are the only others known to be extant; and this particular copy is the more interesting in that it bears in five places the autograph of William Penn, an Admiral in the British Navy, and father of the man who founded Pennsylvania. And another interesting find in an old house recently was a copy of the 1605 quarto of "The True Chronicle History of King Leir," on which Shakespeare three years later founded his story of Lear and the three daughters. This 1605 "Leir" was acted at the Rose Theatre in 1593, and it is held by Collier to be a remarkable thing that at about the same time the company at the Rose were playing pieces very similar in story and title to the works which Shakespeare subsequently gave to the world.

THE APPEAL COURT.—There is something very attractive to "the man in the street" about the expression "the Court of Appeal." It gives him, perhaps, a feeling that the decision of the judge before whom he may at some remote date have occasion to appear is not final—that he can appeal if he does not like the verdict. There was a time when the Court of Appeal was terribly overcharged with cases, and the Master of the Rolls and his colleagues have had to work very hard to get the list of cases which are down for hearing during the term reduced to such comparatively moderate proportions. The famous Fraser v. Edwardes case will shortly come up for hearing, and there are several other interesting cases on the list; but only seven appeals under the Workmen's Compensation Act are entered. Mr. Justice Kekewich has had the largest number of decisions disputed. But there are in all only 213 appeals entered, as against 242 last year, and 300 the year before that.

Digitized by Google

ASCOT SUNDAY UP THE RIVER.

Copyright.

THE SCENE AT BOULTER'S LOCK.

The decree of Fashion has made the Sunday after Ascot the great day for the upper reaches of the Thames, and the brilliant sunshine and gentle breezes of last Sunday made the day an ideal one for river folk. The crush at Boulter's, which has become the great centre of the festival, was enormous, and both on the banks and in the lock itself a large congregation of people made the scene a bright and lively one.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

ROUND THE HOME OF THE PREMIER.

A BITTER wind of the Northern spring was chilling the grey Lothian landscapes as we drove over the varied country lying between the last stage of the railway and the secluded corner of Haddingtonshire which conceals Whittingehame, the family seat of the Prime Minister. We say conceals, because the word really describes the situation, the mansion and its surrounding demesne being located in scenery not at all of the typical Lothian type of far-stretching fields, gentle undulations, and well-regulated woodlands, over which the eye may rove easily and far, picking out mansions and homesteads readily. Beyond the rich valley of the eastward-flowing Tyne the ground changes quickly to meet the Lammermuir Hills. Rapidly the gradients sharpen. We scale crests that afford views as wide-stretching as Lord Marmion saw from Blackford Hill far westward by the grey capital, dim on its hazy skyline. Down into hollows sharp and deep, round curves that are the joy of the artist and the malediction of the motorist, and, before we are quite aware, the characteristics of the agricultural garden of Scotland are gone. We are on the skirts of the hills. There has been rude work here when ice-hulks ground and mighty currents swept this romantic corner of Scotland into shape.

Copyright.

CRAYON SKETCH OF MR. BALFOUR IN 1871

By G. Richardson. The sketch is in the possession of Miss Balfour, who kindly granted special permission for its reproduction in THE KING.

Fine pastoral and arable ground clothes these countless braes, and trim farms tell their comfortable story. The ragged tree-tops on the crest tell, too, of the rigour of the hill blasts in wintry days. And to-day is cold enough for winter, albeit the calendar says we are on the verge of summer. The trees are leafless, the streams full and "drumlie"— which is not a translatable descriptive—the ground is sodden, and trails of heavy rain are sweeping along the ochry sky above the hills. We fondle our cameras with a sigh which has two meanings, both of regret. For the light is of the dull even wanness that means pictures without variety and vigour, and there is so much around Whittingehame of both. The other regret is that photography has not yet captured colour, for the beauty of this grey spring world, with all its purples, russets, greys, and softening mists, is a thing of subtle wonders and quick surprises. A sudden break in the clouds, and a rich search-beam of sun gleams on the sword-flat of the North Sea, comes slowly inland over the tumbling uplands, and vanishes. But it has revealed the greens of spring on the fields, and the smoke-like nimbus of colour on the woods that tells of buds ready to burst and of earliest leafage already begun. The quick edge of the wind is forgotten. The spring day has its own glamour of light and colour, and so, suddenly, we once more dive down an almost break-neck declivity, woods and brae-tops leap above us, and we are into Whittingehame policies at last by the western entrance.

They say that Whittingehame is from the Saxon undefiled, as this territory certainly once was Saxon land, and that it signifies "the

Copyright.

THE SOUTH FRONT OF WHITTINGEHAME.

The lawn is part of the Premier's practising golf course. The trees to the left clothe the precipitous sides of Whittingehame Water Glen, a locality of great picturesqueness and beauty.

Digitized by Google

Copyright.

THE WHITTINGEHAME EMPIRE-CENTRE.

The Premier's private desk, which occupies a corner of his sanctum.

Copyright.

MR. BALFOUR'S "SANCTUM SANCTORUM."

The door behind the golf clubs leads into the Premier's bedroom.

Digitized by Google

place by, or on, the white mead"; which is all very well for a guess, but it does not account for the soft sound of the "g." The local pronunciation, always an important factor, is as nearly as may be "Whuttenjum," and up till a few years ago it was spelt as "Whittinghame," which tended to the hardening of the "g." Mr. Balfour observed this, and by his special desire the "e" was introduced after the "g," in order to absolutely preserve this important feature of the word. As events have shaped to bring the name before the public eye, it would be interesting if it took rise in some connection with the ancient "Witenagemot," or Parliament, which won its uncouth title from the fact that it was then regarded as the "meeting of the wise."

As we pass along the nearly two miles of beautiful avenue which lead through a delightful Lowland glen to the mansion, there are rapidly unfolded the scenic attractions for which Whittingehame is famous, which are so carefully regarded by Mr. Balfour, and no less by Miss Balfour, whose skilled brush has often dealt with the many beauty spots around her home. Along the bottom of the vale twines the silvery belt of the Whittingehame Water, a hill stream full of mossy boulders, and tempting pools and reaches. The soil and stone of the district are red, and this gives colour to the high banks and scaurs above the stream, topped and straggled with woods, and fringed with undergrowth. One could say much of the variety of the Whittingehame woods, and the rare artistic features of the noble oaks, beeches, and pines that clothe the precipitous sides of the glen, and shade the romantic avenue as it boldly climbs and descends the contours of the ground.

Copyright.

A CORNER OF WHITTINGEHAME HALL
Which is embellished with various designs of modern arms.

It is, indeed, a place of woods. The trees are with us right up to the house; they almost surround it, they embower it in summer, shelter it in winter. Their moaning cry when the tempest sweeps down from the hills is heard indoors, their rich hues and vistas in calmer days are the delight of every window. The "business" window of Mr. Balfour's study is within a few yards of the wood edge.

We were most courteously granted permission to photograph everywhere, but the dull light constrained us mostly out of doors, and we turned regretfully from the noble corridors and apartments, especially from the magnificent library. If one may use the phrase, the "atmosphere" of Whittingehame is books. The walls are built of books. Only the other day Mr. Balfour had a corner of his shelves cleared to make room for more books, and two cartloads of the ejected volumes were kindly sent to the public library of the county town. Every visit of the Premier brings more books. There should be a door in yonder wall, but the shelves of books are unbroken. Yet, presto! a touch, and slowly the shelves break, carrying their volumes with them, and there is a door after all, a secret that would work nicely into a well-spun tale.

Now we are in the study, in the lower portion of the eastern wing, on the north front. The walls may be described in a word—books. From floor to ceiling they are packed, they are on the tables, they are everywhere. The Premier's armchair is close to the fireplace, precisely as he uses it, and rows of volumes can be reached with his left hand. What are the favourites of the elbow-shelf? A row of the works of Robert Louis Stevenson, Keats's poems, a full parade of Kipling,

Copyright.

A CORNER OF WHITTINGEHAME GARDENS.

The tall, dark-plumed tree is the Eucalyptus Whittingehamiensis, unique of its kind in Britain, which was grown from a seed brought from Australia by Lord Salisbury when a miner there.

Copyright.

WHITTINGEHAME TOWER, THE HOME OF THE OLD LORDS.

The tall tree in the foreground is the first eucalyptus raised from seed ripened in this country. It is a seedling from Lord Salisbury's tree shown in another illustration. Mr. Balfour's mother is buried in the wood to the right of the picture.

Digitized by Google

Morris's "Earthly Paradise," Schaff's "Creeds of Christendom," Harnack's "History of Dogma," and scores of others quite as formidable-looking as the last named. It is a relief to note that the lower shelf is full of well-thumbed dictionaries and gazetteers, and that near at hand is a stand of well-used golf clubs, favourites tried and true.

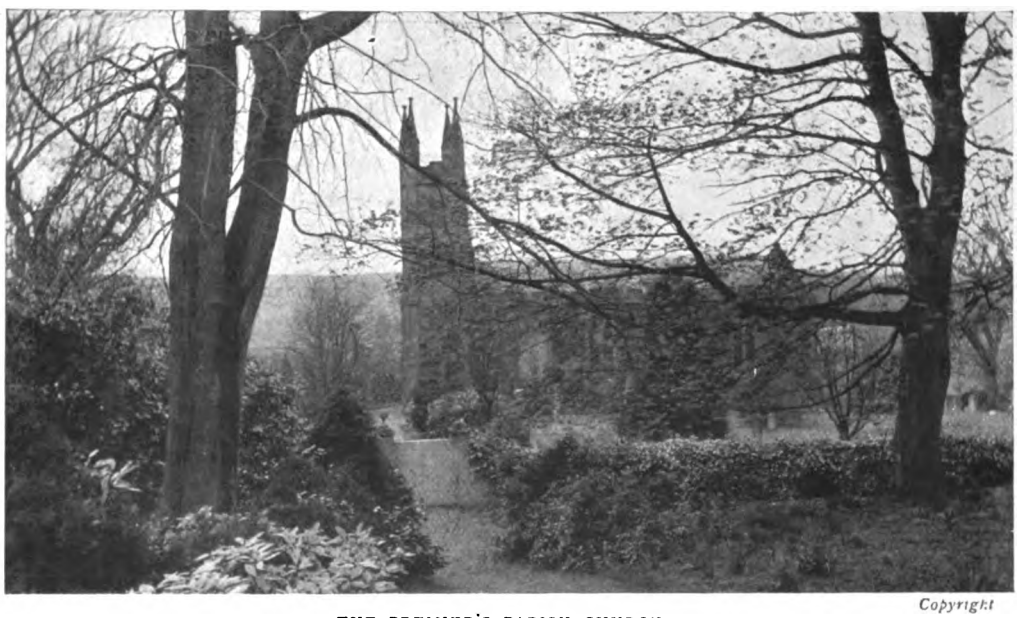
A plain but historic chamber this, yet chaste in every detail, for we have now time to observe the simple oak wainscoting enriched by touches of fine carving, and with an exquisite Madonna over the fireplace. Yet it is the most modest of snuggeries. A light stand at the side of the deep armchair is handy for the laid-down book. Over at the window is the business desk, which is the Whittingehame empire-centre when the Premier occupies the plain little chair beside it. The door two steps aside is the door of his bedroom. Nothing could be handier or more sufficient, scarcely anything plainer—undoubtedly a true keynote to the character of the philosopher-premier. How many secrets have these modest walls in their keeping—how many famous faces have they seen? Two pre-eminently step out, ghost-like, from the fast-gathering shadows — Lord Salisbury and William Ewart Gladstone, who both did more than any other men to shape the course of the dreaming studious youth who also was to lay commanding hand on the dangerous helm of State.

It is somewhat curious how few portraits or photographs of Mr. Balfour are visible. In the main corridor there is an oil of a good many years ago, close beside one of Lord Salisbury as a comparatively young man. In Miss Balfour's sitting-room, which contains many choice water-colours, in which medium Miss Balfour paints with quite exceptional skill, there is an old silver print of the Premier as a boy, which, along with a fine crayon head study of 1871, by G. Richardson, we are permitted to copy. A more recent photograph is also visible, but this is all in the way of portraiture.

From the grounds many striking views of the mansion can be enjoyed. Of Grecian design at once stately and suave, and all in unimpeachable keeping, it tops the crest of a hill spur high above the Whittinghame Water. The main front is to the north, and the pleasant south frontage has been made the most of by various alterations. The ample terrace drops by stairs to the lower level of the wide lawn, which runs right to the edge of an almost precipitous fall of the ground towards the main stream and a tiny torrent tributary. It is a most romantic and beautiful situation. Here, in the centre of the terrace, is the Premier's sundial bearing the lines from the "Rubáiyat":

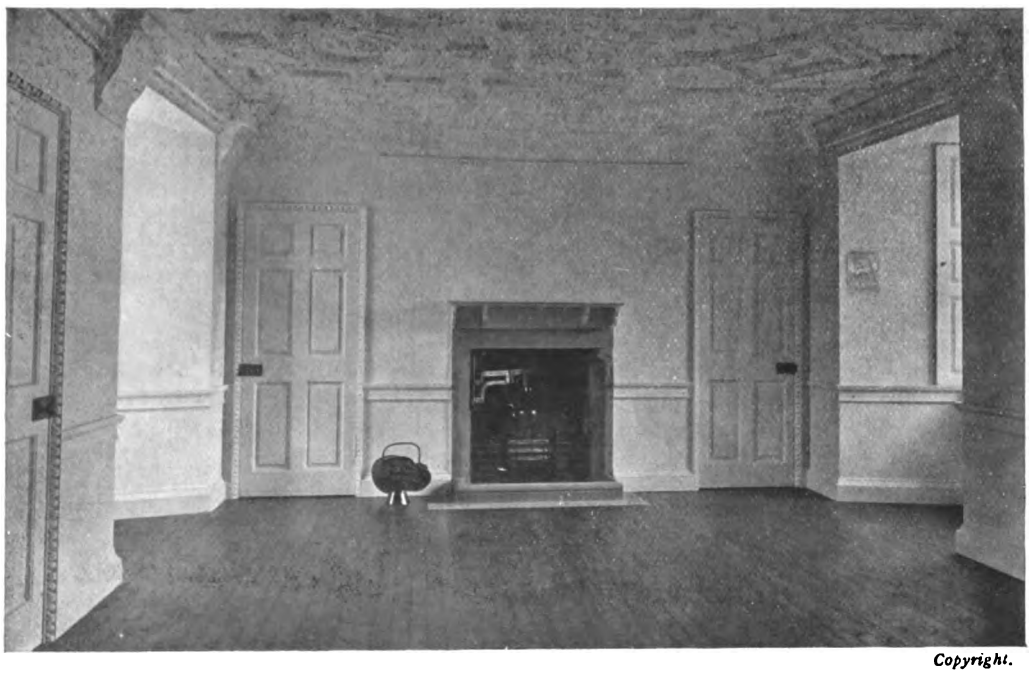
"The bird of Time has but a little way to fly,
And lo! the bird is on the wing."

From an arcade at the western end, amid grateful shade of tree and stone canopy, there is a choice peep of the terrace, with the white dial standing sharp against the green, a vista for a quiet and philosophic eye. But there is far more to see than we can speak of. The view from the terrace up the valley of the Whittingehame Water is Turneresque in the dipping sun. Tumbling woodlands roll down, in varying purples and delicate distances, from the high sides of the glen, and part sufficiently to show strips of sward and the glittering ribbon of the distant water. Over on the right crest, ruddy and four-square, stands the ancient keep of the forgotten lords of Whittingehame, ages before Scot and Southron learned the advantage of keeping the peace. Down by winding paths, across the water, and up the hill, and we are in its shadow. The



Copyright

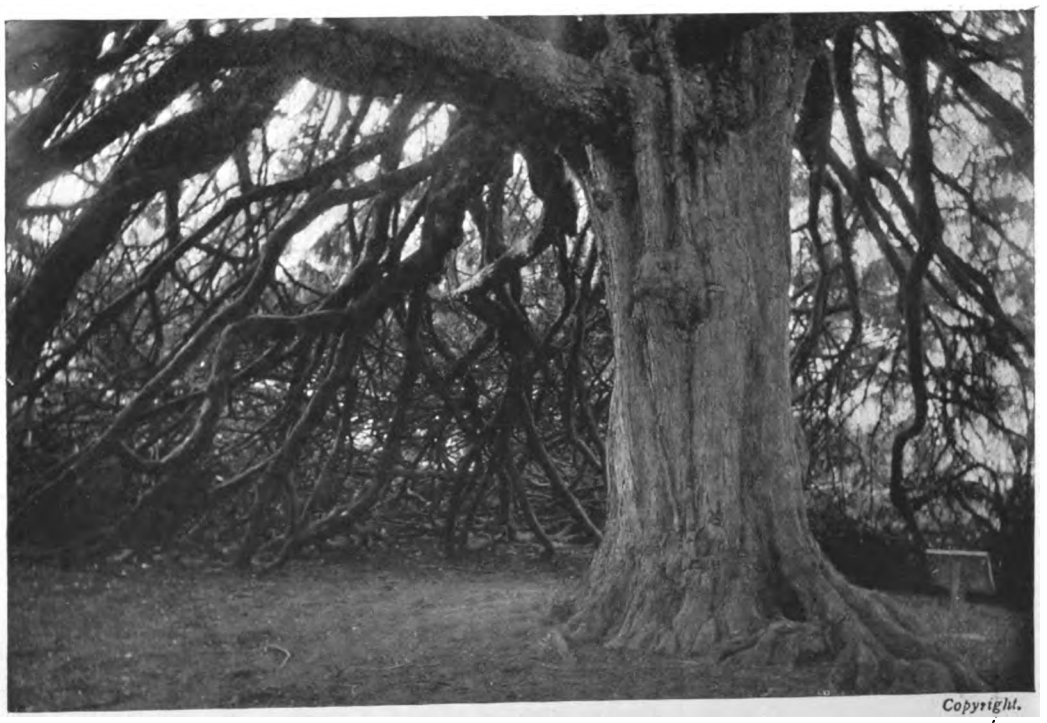
THE PREMIER'S PARISH CHURCH.
From the private path through Whittingehame grounds



Copyright.

A HISTORIC CHAMBER IN WHITTINGEHAME TOWER.

There can be little doubt that this, the main chamber of the Tower, knows the secret of the death of Henry Darnley. The chamber has a magnificent ceiling, and has been cleared out and restored by Miss Balfour, who intends furnishing it with ancient furniture from Whittingehame House.



Copyright.

BELOW THE FAMOUS WHITTINGEHAME YEW

Where the bond for Darnley's murder was signed by the conspirators. It is so dark underneath the tree that an exposure of half-an-hour was necessary in broad daylight to obtain this unique photograph of the interior of the tree-chamber.

Digitized by Google

dim light and heavy sky, and the deep rush of the chill wind, are all appropriate here. It is a weird spot of weird tradition.

Shadowy and high the gloom of the Tower lies on the famous yew close by, which is one of the sights of the Lothians. Its branches, close-knotted and woven, droop to the ground in a wide circle over 120 paces in circumference. Only by one narrow aperture can you enter into the gloomy chamber thus formed, and here in the intense silence fancy may run at will. The tradition is that in this strange spot, safe from prying eyes and ears, the murderers of the ill-fated and contemptible Darnley signed the bond that sentenced him to death, and sealed the course of the tragedy of Mary Stuart. Gloomy and cavernous, it homes the grim tradition well. Hardy Earl Morton, lord of the Tower, might emerge from the gloom, white-browed, iron-handed. We are glad to breathe the outer air again.

The Tower is finely preserved and very carefully looked to. The main chamber inside, which could tell some of the most-debated secrets of Mary Stuart's story, has lately been entirely renovated by Miss Balfour, a singularly beautiful ceiling in old plaster-work having been restored out of coats of whitewash and grime. It is a chamber as interesting as any connected with the lurid past of Scottish history, and it is deeply gratifying to all lovers of such relics to know it is so carefully preserved.

Tall grey beeches, just breaking into leaf, are on a wide knoll close by. Here, neath a square obelisk, lie the old Douglases and Setons and Hays of the Tower, with their predecessors and successors, all forgotten, with the grass woven above them and the tree roots among their dust. Here was the family and parish burial-ground so far back as 1300, and by a little red granite cross rests Lady Blanche Balfour, mother of Mr. Balfour, who died on May 16, 1872. Here, too, lie the Premier's brother Cecil Charles Balfour, who was killed by a fall from his horse in Australia on April 4, 1881, and Professor Francis Maitland Balfour, who was killed on July 19 the following year by a fall near the Aiguille de Penteret in Switzerland.

Copyright

THE PREMIER AT THE AGE OF 16.
From a photograph in the possession of Miss Balfour.

Of much more we might tell—of the ample and picturesque gardens, the dozen miles of twining and lovely walks that are a feature of the policies, of the plain little parish kirk over the hill which the Premier reaches by his private path, of the varied features of one of the most beautiful dwelling-places in broad Scotland. Let us pause, however, by the shadowy plumes of the fine Eucalyptus Whittingehamiensis. Tree specialists, from far and near, come to see it. It was grown from a seed brought from Australia by the late Lord Salisbury when he was a miner in Ballarat. Not far off is one of its offspring, also a goodly tree, which has the distinction of being the first eucalyptus raised from seed ripened in this country. It was saved and sown in September, 1887, by Mr. John Garrett, Mr. Balfour's well-known gardener, who has served his distinguished master for thirty-two years. To the right is the dark mass of the Tower, beyond its famous yew. At our feet is the deep glen, and beyond, gleaming in the setting sun, the Premier's home tops the high ground looking far over the lovely and romantic country-side.

R. A. Dakers.

Copyright.

VIEW FROM WHITTINGEHAME SOUTH LAWN.
This is an important part of Mr. Balfour's home golf course.

Digitized by Google

ACTRESSES AT HOME.

XVII.—MISS ETHEL KERR.

MRS. G. MONCKS AT HER HOUSE AT TAPLOW.

The popularity of the river with members of the theatrical profession is well known, and the summer weather we have just been enjoying has served to enhance that popularity. At Taplow Miss Ethel Kerr has a very beautiful house, to which, in the short intervals between her engagements at the theatre, she is always ready to retire. Making her début in "The Earl and the Girl," she has since been seen in "The Catch of the Season" and "The Talk of the Town," and may therefore claim to have had a hard-working, if rather short, acquaintance with the life behind the curtain.

(From copyright photographs specially taken for this paper.)

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. XLIX.—The Right Hon. Walter Long, P.C., Chief Secretary for Ireland, and Conservative M.P. for South Bristol.

IN Wiltshire, where the spirit of loyalty to old families, misnamed "feudalism," dies hard, and where the name of Walter Long is held in equal regard with the proudest titles, it seems quite in accord with the fitness of things that a Walter Long should have been sixteen years a member of the Government and ten years a Cabinet Minister before middle age has set its mark upon him. The fair-haired, blue-eyed, ruddy-complexioned Longs have been squires, sheriffs, and Members of Parliament ever since Leland wrote his "Itinerary"; Wiltshire was represented by a Long of Wraxall in the time of the Wars of the Roses, as courtiers the Longs shone at Prince Arthur's marriage with Catherine of Arragon, the coronation of Henry VIII., on the Field of the Cloth of Gold, and at the baptism of Edward VI. Mighty hunters of the olden time, a Long has been Master of the Buckhounds to "bluff King Hal," or has fought in the sterner fields of Picardy. In politics, a sturdy Walter Long helped to hold down Mr. Speaker in his chair during the reading of Sir John Elliott's "Tonnage and Poundage" Declaration; and Robert Long, Secretary of State to Charles II., found a place in the National Valhalla of Westminster Abbey. Over a century ago the Longs left their old home at Wraxall, with its legends, its mullioned windows, its family ghost, and its sculptured fetterlocks, to live in the more commodious edifice which Mr. Wyatt had built for them in the once "lesser manor" of Rood Ashton.

But it will be seen that other qualifications besides family traditions and long descent combine to render the new Chief Secretary for Ireland "the man of the hour." Walter Hume Long was born at Bath in 1854, the eldest son of Richard Penruddocke Long, M.P. for North Wilts, and grandson of Walter Long, another Wiltshire representative. His mother was a beautiful Irishwoman, daughter of Mr. Fitzwilliam Hume-Dick, M.P. for Wicklow, and to a ripe old age a gallant defender of the Union. In due course he made his mark at Harrow, where he was in the football and cricket elevens, played in the Eton and Harrow match at Lord's, and won the champion cup for Hutton's. At Oxford he was Master of the Christchurch Drag, and when he succeeded at an early age to the Tudoresque towers and turrets of Rood Ashton, his inherited love of sport and his thorough proficiency in the field were speedily interfered with by the desire of his neighbours that the popular young squire should emulate his forbears in the political arena. At this time, 1878, he married Lady Dorothy Blanche (Lady Doreen), fourth daughter of the ninth Earl of Cork and Orrery, and that union gave the Queen a good soldier in South Africa, where Mr. Long's son—now Captain Walter Long of the Scots Greys—was deservedly awarded the Distinguished Service Order, and received a nasty bullet wound in the arm. The eldest daughter was married last year to Mr. George A. Gibbs, Conservative candidate for Bristol East. The right hon. gentleman has commanded the Wilts Yeomanry since 1898; but nearly twenty years before that he joined in the good old style with a squadron of retainers—numbering some eighty sabres—riding behind him. Mr. Long's town house is at 51, Cadogan Gardens, S.W., and he is a member of the Carlton, Cavalry, and Turf Clubs.

Esme Collings.

LADY DOREEN LONG
The popular wife of the Chief Secretary for Ireland.

Mr. Walter Long entered Parliament in 1880 as member for North Wilts. After the Reform Bill of 1885 he represented the newly-carved Division of East Wilts; in 1892 he captured the West Derby Division of Liverpool, from which he retired in 1900, and was returned at the head of the poll for Bristol South. Mr. Long had only been in Parliament six years before he was invited to join the Government as Parliamentary Secretary to the Local Government Board, and took his share in the onerous work which gave England its County Councils.

In 1895, on becoming Minister of Agriculture, he attained Cabinet rank, and his intimate knowledge of the burdens and disadvantages which press upon the land specially qualified him for this work. Having made up his mind that rabies might be stamped out, he issued the muzzling orders, and calmly stood his ground against the ridicule of lampoonists, abusive and threatening letters (addressed not only to him, but to his wife), and the vicious attacks of pseudo-dog-lovers. He has been vindicated by saving thousands of dogs from the agony which rabies entails, and by giving his fellow-countrymen freedom from one of the most awful forms in which the King of Terrors can visit them—the once-dreaded hydrophobia. Not a single case of rabies occurred during last year, and there was no death from hydrophobia. As is remarked by a correspondent in The Times of June 12, "The absence of this disease, the most terrible to which mankind is liable, is entirely due to Mr. Walter Long, and only those who have witnessed the agonies of a sufferer from hydrophobia can at all conceive what he has prevented, or the debt the nation owes to him." The right hon. gentleman's undaunted and almost single-handed defence of the Tithe-rent Charge Bill of 1899 will not be forgotten; and he did good service by the Food and Drugs Act and the Agricultural Holdings Act.

In the "shuffling of cards" at the commencement of the new Parliament in 1900 Mr. Long became President of the Local Government Board, and, besides a mass of administrative detail, he successfully piloted the Bill for the Regulation of the Use of Motor-cars through the House. As a speaker he is fluent, eloquent on occasion, courteous in manner, but determined in argument.

His qualifications for Irish Secretary are strengthened by his family connections. Both his mother and his wife came of well-known Irish families, from both the great parties in the State. But beyond this, and his sterling courage and fearless independence, he has practical sympathy for the tenant farmer, as evidenced by the fact that in the darkest days of agriculture, when old Wiltshire names disappeared and old yeoman families went under, and great farm sales were of daily occurrence, not a single tenant farmer was dispossessed on Mr. Walter Long's estate, for their landlord nobly bore the brunt of the evil times.

It is interesting to trace the evolution of a statesman—it is delightful to see a country gentleman after a quarter of a century of grinding Parliamentary work still a keen and cheery English sportsman, in radiant health, a capital shot, and a good rider to hounds as of yore. The fabled Golden Bough which, once plucked, grew again on the tree—ex uno avulso non deficit alter—is exemplified in the Irish Secretaryship, for the loss of a Wyndham is supplied by a Walter Long. The Golden Bough may be an olive branch, but it may safely be predicted it will never bend or break in the sacred cause of justice and humanity.

Digitized by Google

POLITICAL PEN PICTURES.

Russell and Sons.

THE RIGHT HON. WALTER LONG, M.P.

Chief Secretary for Ireland, and Conservative Member for the South Division of Bristol.

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

AN examination of the results of the French Eliminating Trials leads one to speculate as to how many of the ten competing firms have received an adequate return for their outlay on this ruinously expensive competition. Presumably on the credit side must be placed the vague general advertisement that arises from the fact that for weeks and months past the names of the entrants and details of the construction of their cars have appeared constantly in the columns of the technical journals, and that even the lay Press has recorded their doings from time to time. Beyond this it is difficult to see what real benefit, from a business point of view, has accrued to nine out of the ten competing firms. For the second year in succession all the best-known makers in France, some of whom have a racing experience extending from the earliest days of the automobile movement, have been hopelessly beaten by a firm which, eighteen months ago, could by no stretch of imagination be described as in the first rank. The extraordinary series of successes achieved by the Richard-Brasier racers has served to draw attention to the undoubted merits of the touring cars of that name—which have been improved out of all recognition since M. Brasier took them in hand—but it has also had the effect of entirely overshadowing the performances of the older makers, who at one time helped to build up their reputation by their achievements in the racing world. To take a few individual instances, it would be interesting to know whether Messrs. Panhard have increased their enormous sales by their attempted participation in this and last year's Gordon Bennett race. Renault Frères had taken no part in racing in Europe since a member of the firm was killed in the ill-starred Paris-Madrid event. In the meantime the Renault has become one of the most fashionable cars in this country, as well as in France, and it is difficult to understand what was to be gained by the building at a huge expense of at least four racers of a purely abnormal type, which, as a fact, have proved to be comparative failures. The Darracqs made a good fight, but failed to secure a place, and a De Dietrich, another old racing make, finished third. The performances of the remainder will shortly be lost in oblivion, and not one person in a hundred will remember whether they were good or bad. I am inclined to think that the big firms who are mainly responsible for the continuance of road-racing under its present conditions stand to lose more than they can gain. The chances of success in a big race are nowadays very remote, and failure seemingly reduces them to the level of other unsuccessful makers, who are probably their inferiors so far as the construction of touring cars is concerned. On the other hand, the small firms stand to lose little in the way of reputation, while a stroke of good luck may bring them a notoriety which they could not achieve by years of advertising.

Topical.

THE MOTOR-BOAT RACES AT BURNHAM.
Mercédès IV., the winner of last year's cross-Channel race, at anchor off the village.

In fairness it must be admitted that luck cannot be held responsible for the success of the Richard-Brasier cars. M. Brasier was the designer of the famous Mors racers, which achieved so many records in 1901 and 1902, and carried on a continual struggle for supremacy with the Panhards of that period. Subsequently he joined the firm of Georges Richard, and an indication of the result was seen at the Monaco Motor-boat Meeting early in 1904, when the famous "Trèfle-à-Quatre" swept the board in the racing classes, earning a reputation for extraordinary regularity in running which has proved to be the chief characteristic of the Richard-Brasier racing cars. A greater surprise followed, however, a few months later, when Thèry, the firm's leading driver, came in an easy winner in the French Eliminating Trials, beating twenty-eight other cars, representing the flower of the industry in France. The result of the Gordon Bennett race in 1904 is well known, though it may be recalled that Thèry's times for three out of the four rounds of the course varied by only a few seconds, and that the difference between his fastest and his slowest lap was only three minutes! After these signal victories the firm rested on its laurels until the recent eliminating race on the Auvergne Circuit, when Thèry again proved an easy winner, and another car of the same make secured second place. I believe that it is a fact that in none of these races has Thèry's car been stopped owing to a mechanical defect, an achievement that might well lead one to conclude that a firm which can attain such reliability in a racing machine would probably turn out a satisfactory touring vehicle. Thèry's times for the four rounds of the Auvergne Circuit were hardly so regular as on the Homburg course last year, but this was doubtless due to the frequency of tyre troubles. He changed no fewer than five covers during the race, a number which was easily surpassed by many of the competitors, and notably by Wagner, who is said to have worn out ten tyres in the 550 kilomètres. This is an eloquent testimony to the difficulties of the course, as the pace was very slow, the winner's time working out at an Etranger.

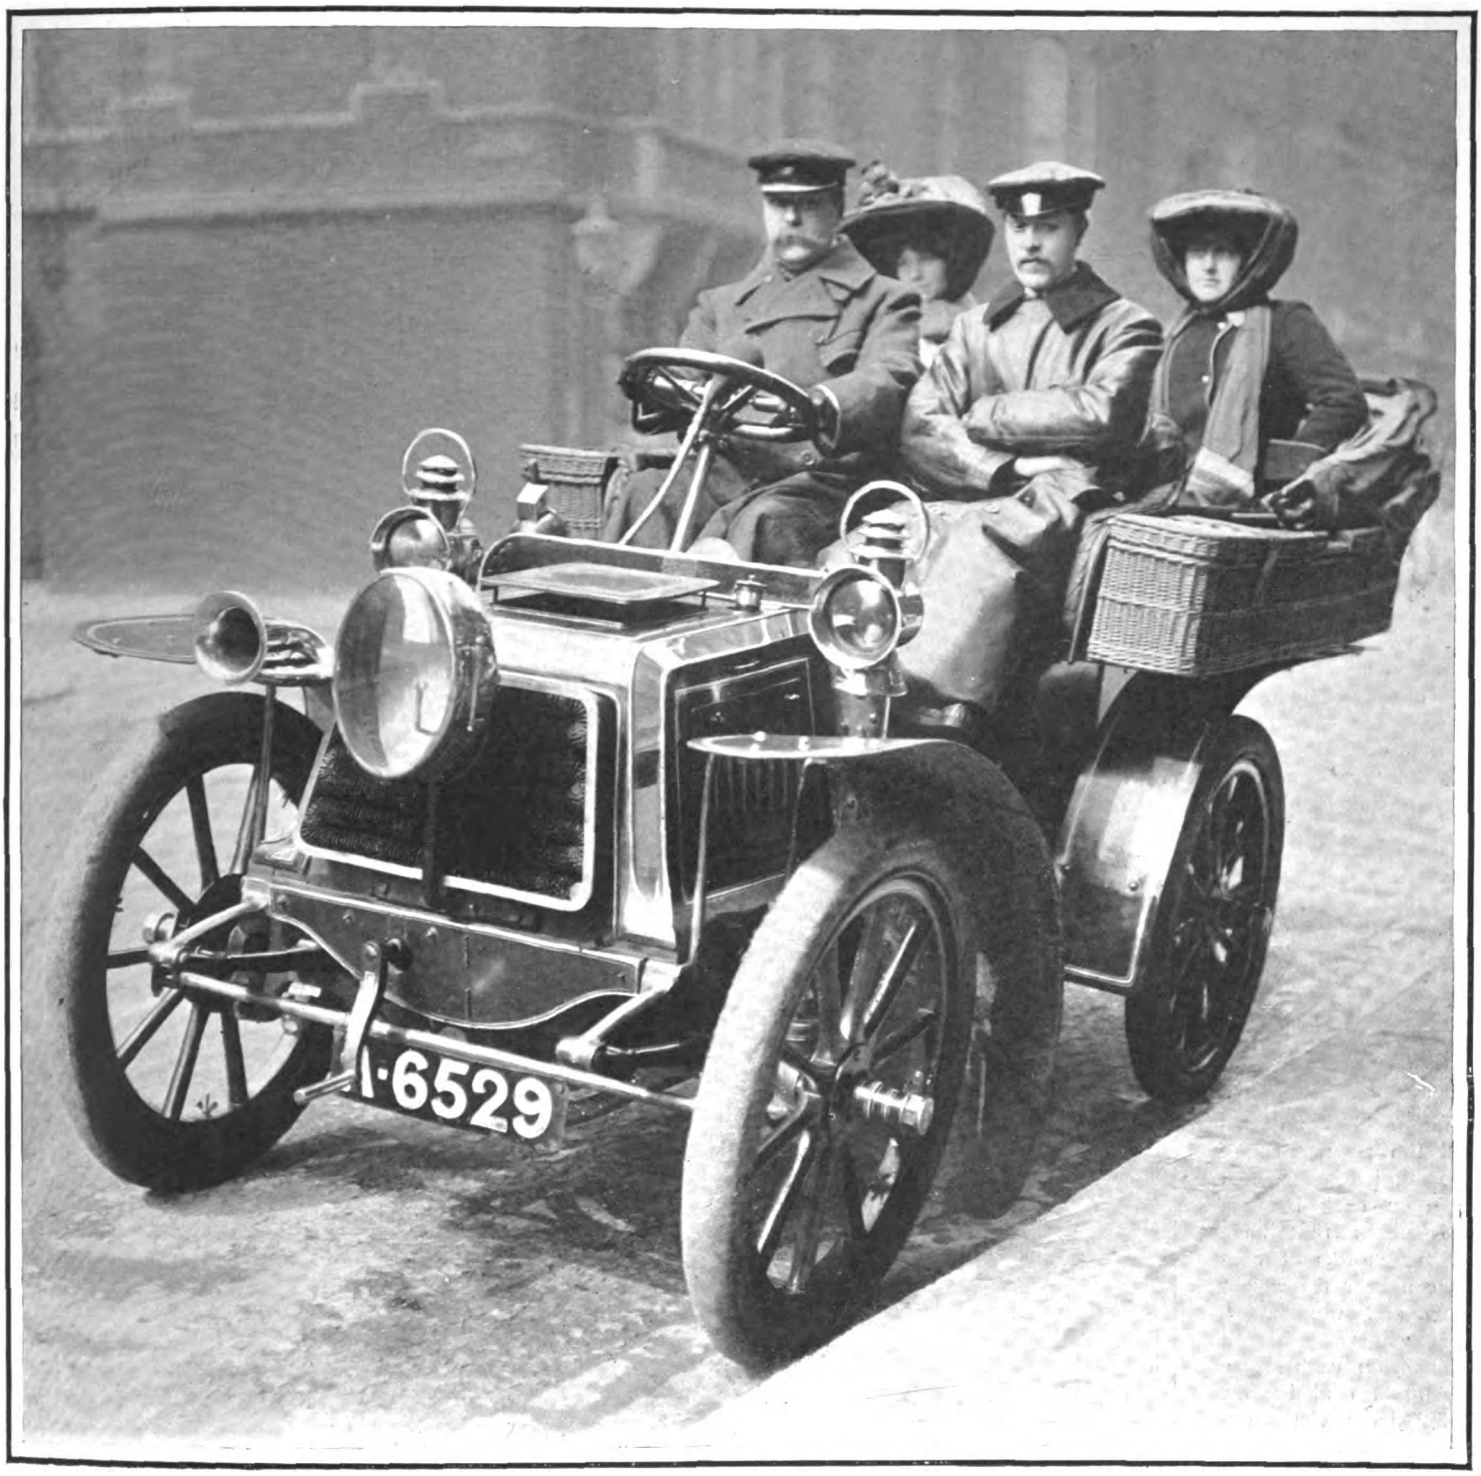
THE AIX LES BAINS TOUR.
A dusty corner of the road near Plainpalais.

Digitized by Google

average speed of only 45 miles an hour, which is lower than in any big race on the Continent since 1900, and 17 miles per hour slower than last year's French Eliminating Trials. The accidents which had been generally anticipated were conspicuously absent, and it is to be hoped that the drivers in the race for the Cup on July 5 will show equal skill and discretion in negotiating the innumerable danger spots on the course.

The recent braking tests at the Crystal Palace might with advantage be repeated all over the country, as they would greatly help to silence the demand for a reduced speed limit. The average man has a perfect faith, doubtless founded on personal observation, in the controllability of the motor-car; but there is a large minority which, influenced by prejudice or ignorance, talks wildly of a five or ten mile maximum for towns and villages, and seemingly regards the present legal limit as unsafe in any circumstances whatever. Among the latter class must be included the London coroner who at a recent inquest spoke of the "exaggerated claims" made by "people interested in motor-cars" as to their stopping powers, and asserted that there was little difference between the various forms of traffic. It would almost be worth while to repeat the tests for this official's special benefit, as he would then learn that under absolutely equal conditions the mechanically-propelled vehicle, thanks to its perfectly-constructed brakes, can be brought to a standstill in about a third of the distance required by a horsed vehicle of a similar class. He would also learn—and this is a matter that the public has entirely forgotten since the disappearance of express road coaches—that horses can and do travel for short distances at far higher speeds than is generally supposed. At the Crystal Palace a single horse drawing a landaulette was timed to do 15·6 miles per hour, a butcher's cart 13·84 miles, and a trotting sulky 20 miles; but to the spectators none of them except the last appeared to be going noticeably fast. The butcher's cart pulled up at the best of its two attempts in 38-ft. 5-in., while the car which was running by its side travelled only 14-ft. 3-in. before it came to rest. This was a fair sample of the tests, the detailed results of which have been widely published. There is another coroner who takes a very different view of the supposed danger of the automobile, and as his opinions are based on personal experience, they are worthy of careful consideration by the anti-motorists. Mr. Roumieu, the coroner for West Surrey, has served in his present position for a period which covers the beginning and the growth of automobilism in this country. His jurisdiction extends over three-quarters of what is probably the most motor-frequented county in the kingdom, yet he and his deputy have only held one inquest apiece on persons killed by motor-cars. On the other hand, he has stated that fatalities due to horses are of fortnightly occurrence in the county. Sober facts such as these should help to show the absurdity of the crusade against the motor-car itself, as distinct from the very reasonable outcry against the reckless driver. RADIATOR.



MR. MORTIMER MENPES IN HIS 7-H.P. PANHARD.

W. A. Rouch.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

AT "ROBINSON."

IT was in 1848 that an enterprising innkeeper had the ingenious idea of building in the colossal chestnut tree that shaded his property. A tree that had harboured the nests of birds for some five hundred years was in the space of one afternoon transformed into a dwelling for man—and woman, too, if the history of the birth of the present proprietor can be believed. To be born in a tree! Is there anything more poetical, more romantic! Omnibuses, steamers, hansom cabs, even balloons lose somewhat of their mystery as birthplaces next a tree, a flowering chestnut tree! And I looked forward with something of Wagnerian emotion to the moment when this son of the air should approach. Would he walk towards me like other men, or would he fly? This passed through my mind after I had ventured to ask a boy standing at the entrance to the "Vrai Robinson" if Mr. Gueuskin were anywhere to be seen. "There he is, there." I turned. What did I expect? Lohengrin on a swan? Or a second Siegfried with the "Murmurs of the Forest" accompanying him on muted violins? I don't know. The wide expanse of dreamy landscape, the valley of the Chevreuse, influenced me. What did I see? A tall, large man, with a face wrinkled into folds like draperies on a woman's skirt, a tall man in a short grey coat, with a crumpled table napkin under one arm. "What can I do for you, mum?" were the words he uttered in equivalent French, and I had strength to order a cup of coffee.

The "Real Robinson" is a restaurant. The building in the tree has now assumed the proportions of a three-storied house, with a room on each landing. The branches that have stood the storms of centuries can bear the weight of men and women. A staircase winds from branch to branch, on each storey are well-laid deal boards, a rustic balcony, chairs and a table, and a thatched roof; the provisions are hoisted in baskets. It is etiquette that none but "paying guests" tread the aerial chamber; the waiters serve from below. There is laughter in the tree, the noise of strange birds that has frightened away even the impudent sparrow. The conversation, too, is strange. Listen to what the wind blows down.

A VISITOR TO "ROBINSON."
(From a photograph by Walery, Paris.

"Vous avez bien vu que mon père n'est pas mon père," comes from the first floor, where a little lady naïvely explains her refined beauty to her lover.

"Deux mille francs de robes chez Doucet, voilà ce que j'ai apporté de dot à Henri." Henri, of course, had to pay the bills. This from the second storey where confidences were exchanged.

From the third came another note. The birds were pretty things, of mixed breed. "He was but a landscape painter," but what was she! It was a "washing" story. "J'avais envoyé deux blouses, parce que je ne porte pas de pantalons . . ."

And when the meal is over? Then the fun begins. There are swings where forty-guinea petticoats rustle and flutter, where embroidered lawns and tiny white shoes and silk stockings sway to and fro; there are donkey rides and two-wheeled carts to drive; there is music in the ballroom, and the toilettes from the Rue de la Paix mix with the work-girls who made them. Everybody waltzes to the "Valse Bleue," and for a few minutes the respectable bourgeois crowd looks on, but for minutes only. The Parisians do not allow anything to stop their pleasures for long. They hold their partners closer and steer through the birds of brilliant plumage. Robinson is Robinson. And after the last bar is played they come into the open air, mopping their foreheads on this warm summer's day, but smiling and happy, and refresh themselves at the inviting little tables, and waltz again.

It is a smiling little hamlet, with one winding street; but the popularity of the Real Robinson has changed the aspect of trees. On all sides imitators have sprung up, and you are quite surprised to find a tree with its branches unoccupied and natural. Along the gravelled path that borders the road are bowers where refreshments are served, bowers with rustic balconies and thatched roofs that tempt you to enter and see the strange crowd of pleasure-seekers passing up and down the narrow way. Here and there is a break in the constructions, and a man or woman stands at the garden gate selling roses freshly plucked from the trees beyond. Or you come upon a field of pinks, or irises, with bunches of the flowers on a barrow, "to take back to town," as a girl pleads prettily. And suddenly the road widens and you are in the midst of cherry trees and artichokes, potatoes and cabbages, every spot cultivated and rich in produce. You have left the laughing crowd and come to the secluded wood where lovers wander hand in hand; a sentimental corner that touches the gates of the Duc de la Rochefoucauld's estate. Here are youths and maidens of all degrees, and men and women of all ranks in life. Many married couples, but not always with their own wives or husbands. A motor drive must have an object! And motorists are so easily hidden from curious eyes. Who knows Madame behind her veil and goggles? Who recognises Monsieur in his driver's cap? You might take them for husband and wife if you did not happen to hear a soft voice say: "Help me on with my coat as if you were my husband; somebody is looking!" What tales the wind tells on a summer's afternoon.

FRANCES KEYZER.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

AT ROBINSON CRUSOE ISLAND.

Some new pictures at this popular resort of Parisians on the Seine, where the chief and original attraction is the erection of restaurants in the trees. In the summer the island is well patronized by Parisians and others, who go there to spend a very free and easy day in the open air. The pictures show: (1) Refreshment after dancing. (2 and 3) Fair donkey riders. (4) A luncheon party in a tree restaurant. (5) Some of the tree restaurants, showing the baskets in which the provisions are hoisted, up to the occupants.

(From photographs by Paul Géniaux, Paris.)

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

OWING to a combination of unfortunate circumstances, the series of regattas with which the season opened this year were not so full of interest as had been generally anticipated. To begin with, the weather at Harwich, and on the occasion of the Royal Thames river matches, was of the most wretched description, the result in the latter instance being the total collapse of some of the most interesting events on the day's programme.

The most regrettable incidents were, however, the disablement of the two new boats in the 52-ft. class, upon whose performances interest was chiefly concentrated. These vessels, as is generally known, are fitted with hollow wooden spars throughout. Sonya, Mrs. Turner Farley's Herreshoff creation, lost her mast before her first match, while out for adjusting compass. She had a duplicate set of sticks, mast excepted, and owing to her owner's anxiety to take part in the first races, she was fitted temporarily with a solid spar. This, as everyone expected, crippled her, and the comparatively poor form she displayed in the matches in which she thus took part was only noted by experts chiefly with a view to comparison with that which she would display when refitted with a hollow spar, which she had been designed to carry. She sailed with her proper equipment in the river matches of the New Thames Yacht Club, but in the meantime, Mr. Burton's new Mylne-designed Britomart had developed a weakness in her hollow mast, and was an absentee from the race in question.

West, Southsea.

FIONA

Cutter, 80 tons Thames measurement, owned by Mr. H. M. Rait. This vessel was built at Fairlie as far back as 1878, from designs by the father of the present noted designer, W. Fife. In a strong reaching breeze she is still a boat to be reckoned with.

Britomart experienced the same trouble as her American rival in replacing her stick, not having a duplicate spar in readiness. Two alternatives were under consideration for a while, a solid spar, or the mast used by Lucida last year. The latter alternative would have necessitated a reduction in her sail plan, so ultimately a solid spar was decided upon, until such time as she could be properly refitted.

The only class racing has thus been so far ruined by the weakness of the hollow spars with which it has become fashionable in recent years to fit racing craft, and once more the question is likely to come up—are the best interests of the sport served by the adoption of spars in vessels which, in addition to being more liable to damage, are far more difficult to replace when any accident does occur? It must be in the highest degree exasperating for owners, as in the instances referred to, to have their vessels so seriously handicapped by an accident which in days gone by could have been put right within the space of comparatively a few hours, and it is extremely improbable that much regret would be expressed if the use of hollow masts was restricted to boats of a smaller rating than the 52-footers.

Sonya's first performance in proper trim showed her to be possessed of remarkable powers in turning to windward. That was on the occasion of the New Thames Club's river matches. With a fresh north-easterly breeze, which held true throughout the day, the course from the Lower Hope to the Mouse and back to Gravesend was covered in a beat down to the light vessel, and a run home. The American boat lost nearly 2-min. at the start through being across the line too soon, but she recovered this, and opened out a lead of over 7-min. from Maymon by the time she rounded the weather mark. She may certainly have been assisted somewhat by the fact that Maymon and Moyana had been paying particular attention to each other, but not sufficient to account for the difference at the mark. The return journey was little less remarkable, for with jackyarders aloft and spinnakers set, the Fife boat wiped off over 6-min. of this lead, and left the American boat winner by only 53-sec. Sonya followed up this success with two more victories in her next two matches—the Nore to Dover, and Dover to Calais and back—so that she gives every promise of fully sustaining the reputation of her famous designer.

There was nothing of any particular interest in the handicap matches at the opening regattas, in which the competitors were practically the same as last year. White Heather is sailing in good form, and will probably be dealt severely with by the handicappers. At the New Thames river matches she sailed a grand race, but failed to make the time she had to allow some of her competitors. In the smaller class handicap on that day, two of the South Coast boats were entered, and a certain amount of surprise was evinced when it was noticed that, notwithstanding the fact of their belonging to a one-design class, the handicapper had set one to allow the other time.

The race from Dover to Heligoland for the Heligoland Cup produced an abnormally big entry this year—fifteen—owing chiefly to the presence of so many American vessels on this side. The result was a fairly close finish between Susanne and Thérèse, the former being less than .5-min. ahead. Navahoe was third and Sunshine fourth.

In a race for auxiliary yachts over the same course, Valhalla, Utowana, Atlantic, and Apache started, and the winner turned up in Atlantic, the winner of the Ocean Race.

Susanne is a schooner designed by W. Fife last year for Herr Huldschinsky, and sailed by R. Wringe with an English crew drawn from the East Coast. Thérèse is also an English-built vessel, designed by J. M. Soper, and originally known as La Flèche. She is likewise manned by an English crew, and the same may be said of Navahoe, one of the best "kept-up" yachts afloat, which is under the command of E. Sycamore. This helps to bear out my statement made in these columns last week, that many of our finest skippers are sailing under the German ensign.

CORINTHIAN.

REGATTA FIXTURES.

CLYDE FORTNIGHT.

July 1-3.—Royal Northern Yacht Club.
July 4.—Gourock Yacht Club.
July 5.—Mudhook Yacht Club.
July 6-7.—Clyde Corinthian Yacht Club.
July 8-10.—Royal Clyde Yacht Club.

Digitized by Google

YACHTS OF THE YEAR.

West, Southsea.

TUTTY

One of the most famous of the old 65-footers, built for Herr Carl von Siemens from the late A. E. Payne's design. She is now owned by Dr. Inglis, a Clyde yachtsman, and in that district has as her chief opponents Carina and Zinita.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Digitized by Google

Independence Day.

THE 129TH ANNIVERSARY OF AMERICAN INDEPENDENCE.

July 4, 1776 — July 4, 1905.

TIME has long since taken the sting and bitterness out of Independence Day as far as the once much-abused Mother Country is concerned. The observance of the Fourth of July will assuredly last as long as the great nation which the Declaration of Independence brought into existence endures; generations yet unborn will discuss Jefferson's dubious philosophy and "glittering generalities." The reading, year after year, of the great State document is, to the average American, what the singing of the "Marseillaise" is to the average Frenchman; but for all that, every trace of the old animosity has vanished as completely as the leaden statue of George III. which, prior to the date in question, adorned the bowling green at New York, and was then converted into bullets, to be fired in due course at his Majesty's soldiers. King Edward VII. and Mr. Roosevelt are to-day the peacemakers of the world, and typifying as they do the union of every English-speaking race, they may very well afford to join hands and laugh heartily at the caricatures in which new-born America lashed and lampooned the obstinate but well-meaning ruler of the country still not unfrequently spoken of as "home." The high festival of Tuesday next (July 4) need occasion no more heart-burning to the level-headed British patriot than the observance of the centenary of Trafalgar or the ninetieth anniversary of Waterloo ought to produce in the minds of our gallant foes and rivals of 1805 and 1815 — our friends and allies of 1905. The three great anniversaries, under the mellowing influence of time, have come to have a merely commemorative significance. They serve in turn to keep green the achievements of the heroes of 1776, 1805, and 1815. They honour the vanquished not less than the victors.

It was not always thus. Half a century ago Dr. Chambers gravely doubted if it were "morally expedient to keep alive in this manner the memory of facts which as certainly infer mortification to one party as they do glorification to another." He evidently made no allowance for the operation of those unseen causes which now enable an Englishman to regard the celebration of the Fourth of July with perfect equanimity, and a Frenchman to look with similar feelings on the anniversaries of Trafalgar and Waterloo.

America, however, does not enjoy a complete monopoly of the "immortal Fourth." On the same day the citizens of Cork honour the memory of St. Finbar, while in Scotland and elsewhere the absence of rain on the anniversary of the "translation of St. Martin" was held to betoken that continuance of fine weather usually connected with the Feast of St. Swithin.

On July 4, 1761, died Samuel Richardson the novelist; on the same day in 1826 (the jubilee of the Declaration of Independence, of which he was the actual author) died Thomas Jefferson, the third President of the United States; on that day also expired John Adams, his immediate predecessor, also a strong advocate of and one of the signatories to the Declaration of 1776. It was a curious coincidence that they should have both died at the very moment when the celebrations they foresaw fifty years before were actually in progress.

An excellent account of the Declaration of Independence, and the circumstances which led to its adoption, will be found in the first volume of Mr. Henry Cabot Lodge's "Story of the Revolution."

The approaching festival of Independence Day is the eightieth anniversary of the death of Thomas Jefferson, who composed the "Declaration," and John Adams, who helped materially to inspire it. They each in turn filled with conspicuous success the post of President. They both figure conspicuously in the old engraving of the great scene in Independence Hall, which, like the other illustrations of this article, are reproduced from rare contemporary prints in the unique American collection of M. Godefroy Mayer of Paris. On Jefferson's tomb at Monticello he is described as the author of the "Declaration of Independence," but it is not stated that he was twice President of the United States. Mr. Lodge devotes several pages to the calm dissection of the Declaration from a philosophical point of view. Possibly Mr. Rufus Choate may be correct when he spoke of its "glittering generalities"; but it must be admitted that, as in the "Marseillaise," so in the Declaration of American Independence, the spirit of the time is there in every line and every sentence, "saying to all men," writes Mr. Lodge, "a people has risen up in the West, they are weary of kings, they can rule themselves, they will tear down the old landmarks, they will let loose a new force upon the world, and, with the wilderness and the savage at their backs, they will even do battle for the faith which is in them." Is it astonishing if for all time the reading of Jefferson's stirring sentences forms part and parcel of America's National Festival.? A. M. B.

THE BIRTH OF AMERICAN LIBERTY.

From a colour engraving in the Mayer Collection, by Ogborn. The thirteen young ladies represent the thirteen United States in 1770.

L'AMERIQUE INDEPENDANTE.

Rare engraving before letters in the Mayer Collection, by Le Vasseur, after Borel, representing Benjamin Franklin and young America.

Digitized by Google

Contemporary Independence Prints from the Godefroy Mayer Collection.

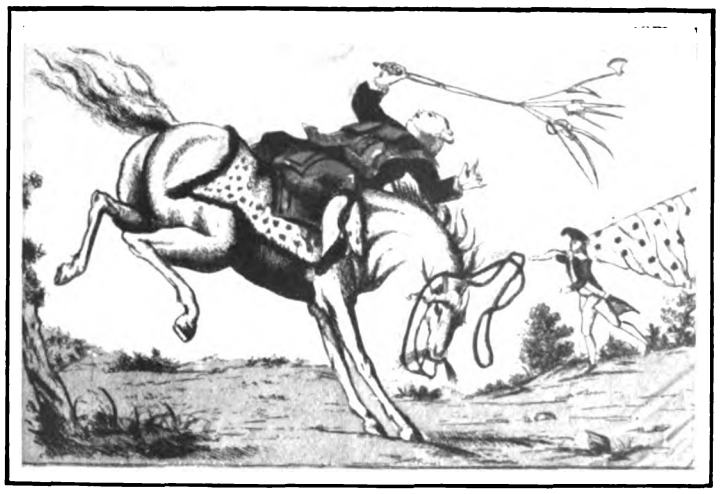
A RARE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.
From an engraving by Schmidt.

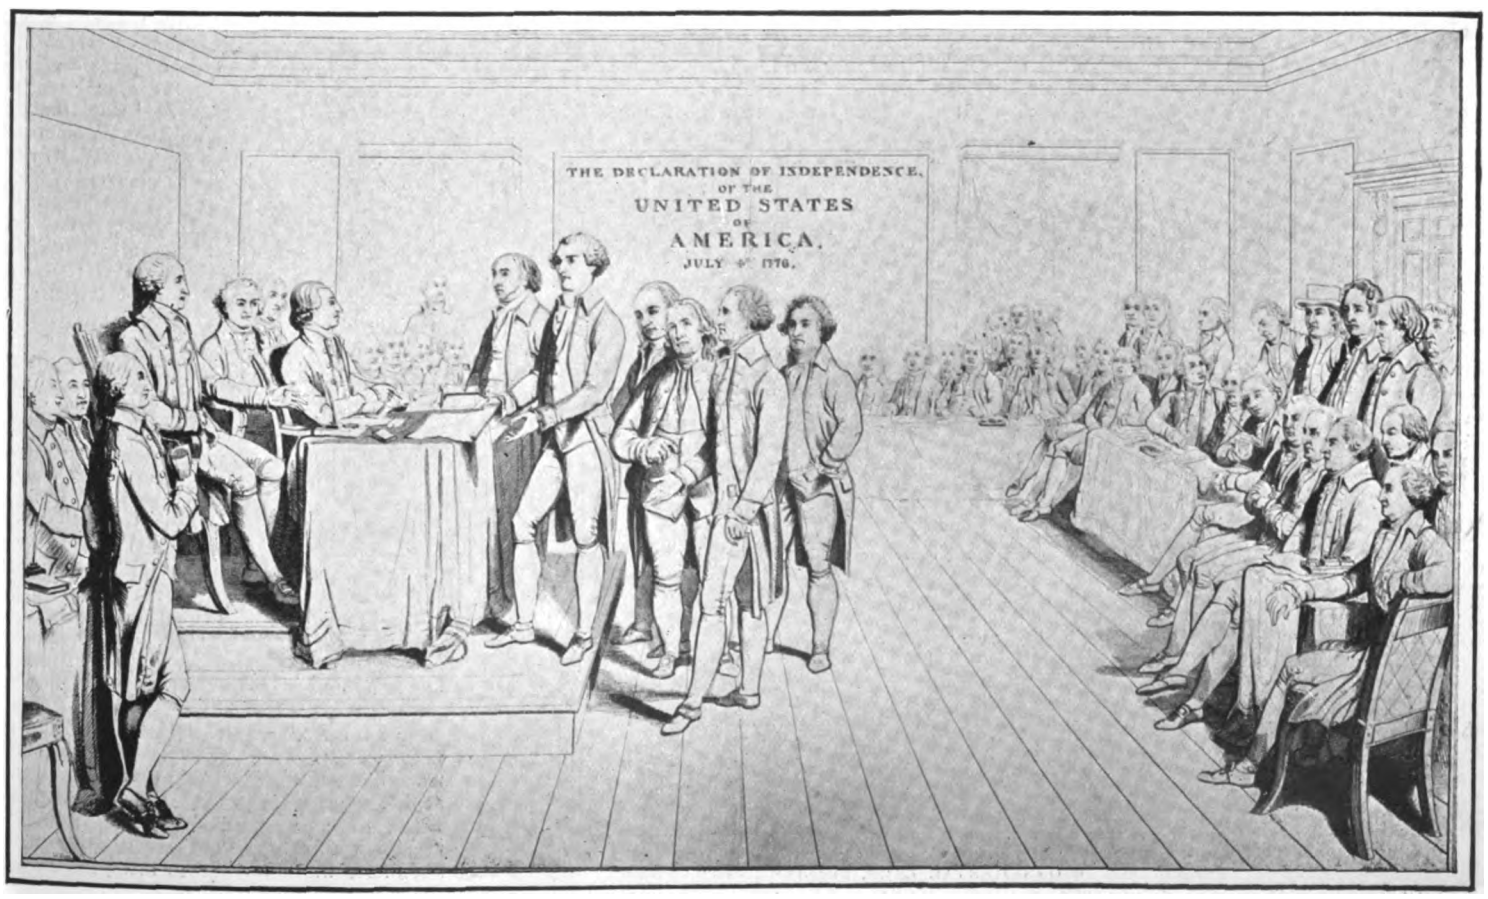
A COLOUR ENGRAVING
By Roger.

A RARE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.
From an engraving by Denuel.



THE HORSE AMERICA THROWING HIS MASTER (GEORGE III.).
In the background General Lafayette, with the French flag.

THE RECONCILIATION BETWEEN BRITANNIA AND HER DAUGHTER AMERICA.
From a coloured print published by W. Humphreys, 227, Strand.



THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.
From an old English lithograph published in Birmingham.

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

THE RISE OF LLANGAMMARCH WELLS.

Copyright.

TROED-Y-RHIW FARM, LLANGAMMARCH WELLS.

Forming part of the Lake Hotel Estate at Llangammarch are three farms, from which the greater part of the provisions for the table of the hotel are provided. In the early summer numberless broods of chickens may be seen scuttling around, and large flocks of sheep and lambs clamber over the hillsides with all the sure-footedness of their breed.

AFTER a journey of very little over five and a-half hours' duration, the London and North Western Railway had deposited me on the one platform that Llangammarch Wells possesses. Above, a brilliant sun was shining out of a sky of deep, deep blue, and as I paused before stepping off into the village there met my eye a wonderful vista of hills, thickly clad in green, and arching in the shape of a horseshoe around the basin in which Llangammarch lies.

Within reasonable distance of Brecon, the Brecon where, in the Shoulder of Mutton Inn, Mrs. Siddons first saw the light, Llangammarch is also near two sister spas in Llandrindod Wells and Llanwrtyd. Though it may, perhaps, have equals, there are not any lovelier spots, nor is it certain that there is another place in the United Kingdom which can boast of a hotel with 700 acres of private grounds which are available for the amusement and recreation of the guests. And when the Lake Hotel claims to "look down upon one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales," it really does very little more than praise that which is its own. But it is a case where self-praise is not only justified—it is absolutely called for.

Copyright.

THE ORNAMENTAL LAKE.

On this lake visitors to Llangammarch may indulge in boating free of charge, and some excellent fishing is to be obtained there also. At the back, and shown in our illustration, are the new barium baths, which are taken, together with the waters, for affections of the heart.

In addition to the attractions of position, Llangammarch Wells can claim to be the possessor of the only barium spring in Great Britain. Barium is of great value in affections of the heart, and the waters of Llangammarch Wells have been found efficacious in cases which Bad Nauheim and Kreuznach have failed to cure. The results of the action of barium were first published by Dr. Hyde in the Philadelphia Medical News some fifteen years ago. "In barium," he wrote, "therefore, we seem to possess a remarkably cheap, virtually tasteless, and very slightly poisonous drug, which, nevertheless, acts as rapidly as digitalis, and does not disorder the stomach."

Dr. W. Black Jones, the resident physician at the Lake Hotel, has also published some pamphlets upon the subject, and his practical experience at Kreuznach and Bad Nauheim has been of great service to him in the superintendence of the baths at Llangammarch. And as an interesting, though perhaps not very vital, fact, it may be mentioned that tradition assigns the discovery of the spring at Llangammarch, as it does in the case of Bath, to a marauding pig, in search of truffles, though some favour the theory that a shepherd was the first to bring the water to the surface.

Apart from this spring it cannot be said that Llangammarch Wells has made any very interesting or momentous additions to history. In the farmhouse of Cefn-Crith in 1559 was born John Penry, who was martyred in 1593 at St. Thomas-a-Watering in Surrey, for holding heretical opinions, and another native of the town was connected with the Church, Thomas Howell, who was Bishop of Bristol in the reign of Charles I.

Digitized by Google

But the interest of Llangammarch Wells lies not in its past, but in its future. Since the enlargement of the Lake Hotel and the addition to it of some hundreds of acres of grounds, there has been a steady and promising growth in the annual number of visitors to the Spa. The hotel stands some 600-ft. above the sea level, with behind it, and rising another 1,000-ft., the Eppynt Mountain, to drive to the top of which is an admirable way of spending an afternoon. In the other direction is the river Irfon, flowing for two miles through the private grounds of the hotel, and offering admirable salmon and trout fishing, while the picturesque lake, within sight of the house, also provides good sport to lovers of the line. Boating also is possible on the lake, one bank of which, rising 300-ft., is clothed with oak, birch, mountain ash, and many other trees, the varied and beautiful foliage of these making a most picturesque background to the lake. Through this wood are a number of little paths, and along these visitors for whom severe exercise is out of the question may take walks. These paths are specially graduated with a view to providing "resistance exercises" for those undergoing treatment, and at intervals are rustic seats, so placed that from them a clear view over the surrounding country may be obtained.

Copyright.

THE RIVER IRFON AT LLANGAMMARCH WELLS.

For two miles of its course the Irfon skirts the private grounds of the Lake Hotel, and excellent salmon and trout fishing is open to visitors. The Irfon is a tributary of the Wye, and flows through some of the most romantic scenery in Wales. Among the hills at Llangammarch are numberless little streams tributary to the Irfon, and these, after a sharp thunder-shower, pour down the hillsides in cataracts of foam, and in parts of the hotel grounds form natural waterfalls of from 15-ft. to 20-ft. in depth.

But lest, by what has been written here, the strong and generally healthy should gather the impression that Llangammarch can only appeal to those to whom the use of the water has been recommended, let me hasten to say that this is by no means the case. Those who are suffering from the prevalent disease called "out of sorts," those who are finding the tear and bustle of town life trying, will find in Llangammarch a rest cure of the best description. There, on the golf links, on the tennis or croquet lawn, or driving around the country, they will be cured of brain fag, a new zest comes back to life, a new appreciation of the wonderful beauties of our native country, and a new wonder that, with such spas as Llangammarch Wells, set amidst scenery that the Continental spas barely equal, and certainly do not surpass, the fashionable world should be so eager to get away to the Continent for a "cure." The railway travelling is quite as comfortable here as abroad, and the London and North Western run an excellent service of trains to Llangammarch Wells, and have even made special arrangements for week-end tickets. The bracing atmosphere of the place puts it on an equality with any seaside resort. And on a summer night, from the windows of the hotel, one may look over an expanse of moonlit woodland; at the end of the gardens the Irfon babbles over its stony bed, and in the distance a solitary owl hoots. All Nature is sunk in a gentle slumber, which is contagious, and the visitor seeks his couch with pleasure. And still the Irfon babbles on, and again the owl hoots; but they have no audience but themselves, for at Llangammarch one retires early and rises early, and the lightest sleeper of all is not easily awakened till morning comes.

Digitized by Google

The Bathing Season.

Chusseau-Flaviens.

Chusseau-Flaviens.

AT A FRENCH WATERING-PLACE.

Before and after the morning dip.

Chusseau-Flaviens.

A FAMILY PARTY.

Digitized by Google

A Summer Supplement.

HINTS FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

Some Popular English Resorts.

THE question foremost in the minds of most people at the present moment is where to spend the holidays. With the London season so fast drawing to a close, and, what is still of even greater importance, the near approach to the home-coming of the youngsters from school, the problem is one that demands an almost immediate decision. Assuming that the great majority of holiday-makers will flock to the English watering-places this summer, as they have done from time immemorial, a solution may perhaps be found to the difficulty in the hints contained in this article; while for those who may be desirous of going further afield, we have included, under their different headings, several articles dealing in a practical way with holidays abroad—on the Continent and on board a modern ocean liner. Brief as these holiday papers must necessarily be, nevertheless we have strived hard, with the aid of photographs, showing some of the more interesting places mentioned, to give as clear and comprehensive an insight into the subject as the limited space at our disposal will permit of.

Always taking London as our point of departure, a good start may be made by dealing with those places nearest to home on the South Coast. Everybody is surely more or less familiar, if only with the names, of the many charming watering-places that have made this portion of the English coast so favourite a haunt of the holiday-maker. What new can be said of such old favourites as Hastings and St. Leonards, with their three miles of wide promenades and excellent piers, or of fashionable Folkestone with its green terraced heights, which it is pleased to call the Leas. Sandgate, a short walk along the cliffs from Folkestone, is developing rapidly, and every year shows an increase in the numbers of its visitors. Midway between Hastings and Eastbourne on the Sussex Coast is Bexhill, a town of mushroom growth. The quiet of Seaford is somewhat compensated for by its proximity to Newhaven, whence the Brighton Company's steamers convey you across to Dieppe or Rouen or Paris. Next comes Brighton, the doyenne of English watering-places. Littlehampton, Bognor, and Southsea follow one another in succession, and it is not a little difficult to know which to choose. The London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway, which also takes the health-seeker to the Isle of Wight, offer exceptional facilities to visitors to these three watering-places. Littlehampton perhaps is of more than ordinary interest, so close is it to the Duke of Norfolk's fine old castle at Arundel. The South Eastern and Chatham Company has practically a monopoly of the Kentish watering-places, in which, of course, are included such well-tried resorts as Ramsgate, Margate, Broadstairs, Sandwich, Deal, and Dover, not forgetting pretty little St. Margaret's Bay, all of which, of course, are on the East Coast.

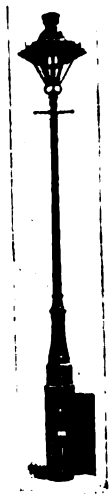
Clement et Cie.

"SUMMER."

(From the picture exhibited in the Paris Salon.)

The further westward we go the more attractive becomes the scenery. There are probably few stretches of the English coast which offer greater inducements to the health seeker in search of rest amid the most peaceful surroundings than that which lies between Bournemouth and the Land's End. Bournemouth itself is an ideal spot at practically all seasons of the year, though so many people are apt to regard it wholly and solely in the light of a winter resort. Its great wealth of shade is likely to be appreciated to an even greater extent during the hot months of summer than the cold blustering months of winter and spring. It is, moreover, a splendid centre for the lover of steamboat excursions and rambles in the New Forest. Then there is restful little Swanage in the Isle of Purbeck, that wild and unfrequented portion of Dorsetshire, where the hand of Time moves so

Digitized by Google



"YOUR LIGHT WILL COST YOU LESS,"

PROVIDED YOU USE

The Patent Empire Light.

The most recent and up-to-date system of Petroleum Incandescent Lighting.

SPECIALLY DESIGNED

FOR THE

Lighting of Parks, Private Grounds, Lawns, Garden Parties, Avenues, Drives and Country Estates

This system avoids the tearing up of lawns and roadways. Each Lamp is self-contained and gives a light brighter and far more diffusive than the electric arc lamp. It requires no skilled workman. The cost averages about ¾d. per hour for light equal to the electric arc lamp. It is easily installed and the cheapest and most up-to-date system of artificial lighting.

THE EMPIRE LIGHTING Co.

Offices and Showrooms,

100, St. Martin's Lane, Charing Cross.

Look out for notice of our Domestic Empire Lamp.

WHY PAY RENT?

THE BRITISH HOMES SCHEME enables Policy-holders to reap the benefit of their investment during their own lifetime, and in the event of premature death to leave their legal representatives in possession of a comfortable home free from any mortgage charge or encumbrance. Particulars post free.

GOOD PROSPECTS FOR ACTIVE AGENTS.

The BRITISH HOMES

ASSURANCE CORPORATION, LTD.,

6, PAUL STREET, FINSBURY, LONDON, E.C.

M. GREGORY, Managing Director.

R.M.S.P.

THE ROYAL MAIL STEAM PACKET COMPANY.

(Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1839.)

Fortnightly Sailings to

West Indies, Central America, Pacific Ports, Spain, Portugal, Madeira, Teneriffe, St. Vincent (C.V.), Brazil and River Plate.

May to October.—Agreeable Tours can be made to Brazil and River Plate, in the magnificent Mail Steamers.
5 to 7 weeks, £49 10s. to £66.

November to March.—Special Tours to all the British West Indian Islands by the West Indian Mail Steamers.
65 days for £65.

For full particulars, apply to

THE ROYAL MAIL STEAM PACKET COMPANY,

LONDON: 18, Moorgate Street, E.C.
29, Cockspur Street, S.W.
MANCHESTER: 5, Albert Square.
LIVERPOOL: 5, Fenwick Street.
SOUTHAMPTON: Canute Road.

THE POLYTECHNIC

Continental Tours

AND

Yachting Cruises.

The most POPULAR of ALL HOLIDAY TOURS.

PATRONISED BY OVER 80,000 PERSONS.

A WEEK in LOVELY LUCERNE. 5 guineas. Fortnight 7 guineas.

A FORTNIGHT'S SWISS TOUR—
Including Lucerne, Brunig, Meiringer, Interlaken, Grindelwald, Wengern Alp, Lauterbrunen, Berne, etc. 8½ guineas.

SPECIAL TOURS to CHAMOUIX, ZERMATT, GRINDELWALD, etc.

TOURS to all parts of ITALY, SWITZERLAND, etc.

A WEEK on the RHINE. 5 guineas.

A WEEK in PARIS, including Excursions to Versailles and Fontainebleau. 4½ guineas.

A WEEK in SCOTLAND, including accommodation. 3 guineas.

Unique STEAM YACHTING CRUISES to the NORWEGIAN FJORDS. A THIRTEEN DAYS' CRUISE OF NEARLY 3,000 MILES of the most enchanting scenery in the world for 9½ guineas, starting July 22nd, August 5th, 19th, and September 2nd.

Full particulars of over 40 different Tours and Cruises may be had on application to Mr. F. SHORT, Royal Exchange, Manchester; Mr. J. RIMMER, 141, Briggate, Leeds, and 43, Hustlergate, Bradford; or to Mr. L. H. HARRIS, the Secretary, the Polytechnic Touring Association, 309, Regent Street, W.

Digitized by Google

HOLIDAYS AT HOME.

slowly. To revert for a moment to the practical side of the question, it should be said that the South Western Railway Company maintain an excellent summer service to these two favourite watering-places, as also to Weymouth (whence the Great Western Company's comfortable steamers take you across to the Channel Islands) and the little group of old-world fishing towns dotted about among the red sandstone cliffs of South Devon—Lyme Regis, Seaton, Sidmouth, Budleigh Salterton, and Exmouth. Each of these out-of-the-way little retreats, so fondly cherished alike by artist and fisherman, has an efficient train service, and those who journey down by the 11 a.m. express from Waterloo, to which a dining-car is attached, can dine comfortably on the way while enjoying the constantly-changing panorama from the carriage-window. The coast line of Devon and Cornwall stretching from Teignmouth to Penzance, and taking in such famous spots as Teignmouth, Dawlish, Torquay, Brixham, Dartmouth,

W. A. J. Hensler.

IN THE HEART OF THE WOODLAND.

A beautiful glade in the New Forest.

Copyright.

IN LOVELY LAKELAND.

The Rotha, near Wordsworth's home.

Plymouth, Looe, Fowey, and Falmouth, is well served by the long-distance expresses of the Great Western Railway.

Some idea may be formed of the growing popularity of these West Country watering-places merely by watching on a fine morning the stream of heavily-laden trains of the Great Western Company as they issue forth from Paddington bound for the West. What could be more fascinating to watch than the beautiful cliff scenery, seen either from the train or the sea-wall, between Dawlish and Teignmouth. Plymouth, too, has much to commend it to the favourable notice of those who delight in making short excursions. Both South Western and Great Western Railways run into Plymouth, affording the tourist ample opportunity for gratifying his particular desires in this direction. The Cornish coast on both sides is famous the world over for its rugged picturesque scenery, and the air is said to be as bracing as that of Biarritz.

Unfortunately, space will not permit of more than a passing reference to St. Ives, Newquay, Padstow, Tintagel, Boscastle, and Bude. The coach is still largely used in different parts of Cornwall, and surely no better way could be conceived of enjoying the scenery. The motor, in the shape of comfortable motor-buses, owned by the railway companies, has recently been introduced into these distant parts, and no doubt in course of a few years will entirely take the place of the coach. Before leaving Devonshire, brief mention should be made of some of the beautiful resorts which lie dotted along the north coast, which include, of course, Clovelley, Westward Ho, Ilfracombe, Lynton, and Lynmouth.

Of another type less attractive, perhaps, so far as scenery goes, are the numerous holiday haunts which lie within the domain of the Great Eastern Railway Company. The great charm of these East Coast watering-places is to be found in the bracing qualities of the air. Considering the very large number of holiday-makers who require bracing up at this season, the popularity of such favoured resorts as Sheringham and Cromer, Lowestoft and Southwold, Clacton and Felixstowe is not to be wondered at. Almost every year we notice increased facilities for reaching these places, and at the present day the Great Eastern Company are running several non-stop trains with comfortable dining-cars attached to them. Another reason, perhaps why so many people choose the East Coast

Copyright.

A WHERRY ON THE BURE.

A typical scene on the Norfolk Broads.

Digitized by Google

GREAT EASTERN RAILWAY.

THE EAST COAST FOR THE SUMMER HOLIDAYS.

TOURIST, FORTNIGHTLY,
and
FRIDAY to TUESDAY
TICKETS available by all trains.

Improved Express Service.

Non-Stop Trains.
YARMOUTH, 2 hrs. 30 mins.
FELIXSTOWE, 1 hr. 51 mins.

CROMER, 2 hrs. 55 mins.
LOWESTOFT, 2 hrs. 36 mins.
CLACTON, 1 hr. 44 mins.

Yachting, Fishing, Golfing, Combined Rail and Boat Tours, and many other attractions.

Cheap 8 Day Excursions to the East Coast every Wednesday.
Half-Day Express Excursion every Thursday CLACTON, 3/-

BREAKFAST and DINING CARS.

CROMER
MUNDESLEY-on-Sea
YARMOUTH
LOWESTOFT
GORLESTON-on-Sea
HUNSTANTON
SOUTHWOLD
ALDEBURGH
FELIXSTOWE
DOVERCOURT
CLACTON-on-Sea
FRINTON-on-Sea
WALTON-on-Naze
SOUTHEND

THE Fastest and Most Convenient Route.

Write to the Superintendent of the Line, Liverpool Street Station, E.C., for all particulars.

FURNESS RAILWAY.

20 STEAM YACHT AND COACH TOURS THROUGH THE ENGLISH LAKELAND

DAILY during JULY, AUGUST and SEPTEMBER.

REDUCTION IN FARES.

No. 1. Outer Circular Tour, embracing Windermere Lake, Furness Abbey, and Coniston—Fare from 5/3
No. 2. Inner Circular Tour, embracing Furness Abbey, Coniston Lake (Gondola), and Crake Valley—Fare from 3/3
No. 3. Grange and Windermere Circular Tour, embracing Grange, Arnside, Kendal, and Windermere Lake—Fare from 2/9
No. 4. Middle Circular Tour, embracing Windermere Lake, the Crake Valley, and Coniston Lake—Fare from 5/9
No. 5. Red Bank and Grasmere Tour, viâ Ambleside and Skelwith Force, returning viâ Rydal Water—Fare from 2/9
No. 6. Thirlmere, Grasmere, and Windermere Tour, viâ Ambleside, Clappersgate, and Red Bank, and round Thirlmere Lake—Fare from 5/-
No. 7. The Four Lakes Circular Tour, viz., Coniston, Grasmere, Rydal, and Windermere—Fare from 5/9
No. 8 Coniston to Coniston Tour, viâ Red Bank, Grasmere and Ambleside, returning by Coach to Coniston—Fare from 4/6
No. 9. Tarn Hows Tour, viâ Ambleside and Coniston, returning by Tilberthwaite and Elterwater—Fare from 4/6
No. 10. Round the Langdales and Dungeon Ghyll Tour, viâ Ambleside, Colwith Force, Grasmere, and Rydal—Fare from 5/-
No. 11. Ullswater Tour, viâ Ambleside, Kirkstone Pass, and Brothers Water, returning viâ the Vale of Troutbeck and Lowwood—Fare from 5/6
No. 12. Derwentwater (Keswick) Tour, viâ Ambleside, Grasmere, and Thirlmere—Fare from 6/-
No. 13. The Five Lakes Circular Tour, viz., Windermere, Rydal, Grasmere, Thirlmere, and Derwentwater—Fare from 11/6
No. 14. Wastwater Tour, via Seascale & Gosforth—Fare from 4/6
No. 15. The Six Lakes Circular Tour, viz., Windermere, Rydal, Grasmere, Thirlmere, Derwentwater, and Ullswater—Fare from 12/-
No. 16. The Duddon Valley Tour, viâ Broughton-in-Furness, Ulpha, and Seathwaite—Fare from 3/9
No. 17. The Three Waterfalls Tour (Colwith, Dungeon Ghyll and Skelwith), viâ Coniston and the Langdales—Fare from 4/9
No. 18. Ennerdale Lake and Calder Abbey Tour, viâ Seascale, Gosforth, and Cold Fell—Fare from 4/6
No. 19. Across the Ferry Tour, viâ Lake Side, Esthwaite Water, Hawkshead, and Storrs Hall—Fare from 3/6
No. 20. Cartmel Priory and Newby Bridge Tour, viâ Windermere (Lake Side), Backbarrow Falls, Holker Park, and Grange—Fare from 3/-

For further particulars see "TOURS THROUGH LAKELAND" Pamphlets, to be had gratis at all Furness Railway Stations; of Mr. F. J. RAMSDEN, Superintendent of the Line, Barrow-in-Furness; at Messrs. THOS. COOK & SONS and the Polytechnic Institute (Regent Street, W.), or Messrs. W. H. SMITH & SON'S principal bookstalls, price 1d.

THE PALETTE ALBUM, illustrating the above Tours, in colours, can be obtained at the principal Railway Bookstalls, price 6d.

PICTURE POST CARDS OF THE LAKE DISTRICT

May be obtained at any Station on the Furness Railway, and on the Company's Steamers; also at Furness Abbey Hotel and the principal Bookstalls. Reduced price, 12 cards for 6d.

BARROW with FLEETWOOD for BLACKPOOL.

The Company's Paddle Steamer "Lady Margaret" will run daily between Barrow and Fleetwood for Blackpool.

BARROW with HEYSHAM for MORECAMBE.

The Popular Paddle Steamer "Lady Evelyn" will run on fixed dates during July between Barrow and Heysham for Morecambe, with Through Circular Tour Bookings.

Full particulars as to Sailings and Fares, etc., can be obtained on application to the SUPERINTENDENT OF THE LINE, Barrow-in-Furness, and all STATION MASTERS on the Furness Railway; also at Messrs. THOS. COOK & SON'S Offices.

Barrow-in-Furness, July, 1905.

ALFRED ASLETT, Secretary and General Manager.

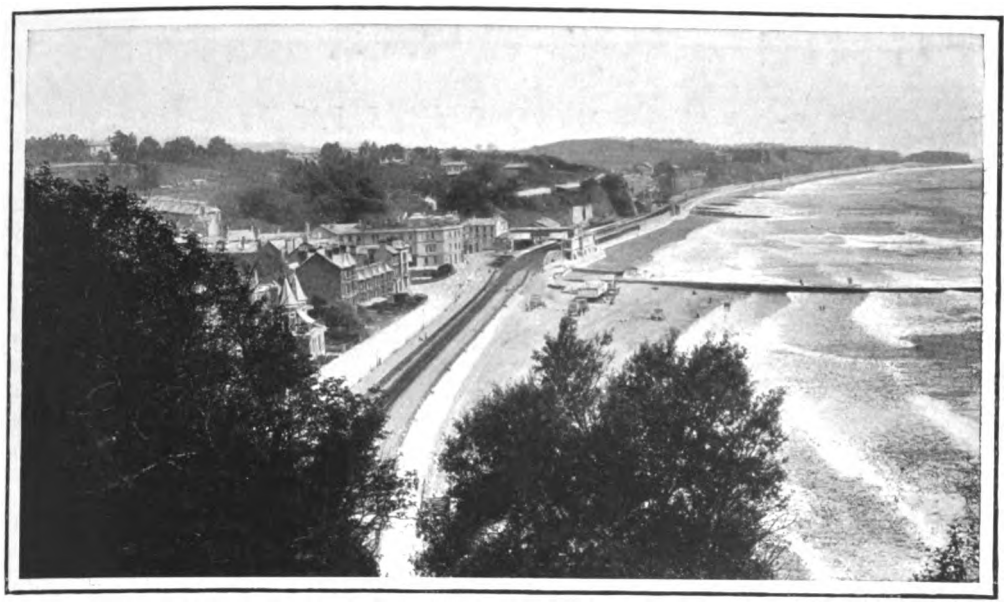
Digitized by Google



THE SEAFRONT AT DAWLISH.

The popular watering-place on the south coast of Devonshire.

HOLIDAYS AT HOME.

for their holidays is owing to the magnificent stretches of sands, whereon the younger members of the family are able to enjoy themselves to their hearts' content. The coast of Norfolk, from Cromer round to Lowestoft, including Mundesley, the two Runtons, Yarmouth, Gorleston, and numerous other smaller places, is noted for its splendid sands; moreover, the Broads lie within easy distance. The sailing on Braydon Water and up the Yare, the Bure, and the Ant to the beautiful Broads makes a delightful change when one tires of watching the waves.

Away to the north on the Yorkshire Coast, from Saltburn to Filey, will be found different types of watering-places. Scarborough, for example, is as gay and fashionable as Filey or Staithes is quiet. The traveller whose choice falls upon this part of the coast has the advantage of journeying by the comfortable trains of the Great Northern and North Eastern Railways. The north-east of England has, for some unaccountable reason, been overlooked by the holiday-makers. The country 'twixt Humber and Tweed offers all that anyone could wish for. Vast wild solitudes of moor and rugged uplands or the tranquillity of sylvan retreats abound in this district, which also offers wide sweeping bays with sandy beaches and a broken coast line, upon which are dotted about some of the most lovely and bracing of holiday resorts. Thanks to the combined enterprise of these two railways, one can now purchase books of tickets for 1,000 miles for five guineas, or he can take advantage of the circular tour tickets, enabling him to visit many of the most interesting and picturesque spots in north-eastern England. Before we conclude this article, mention should be made of the Midland Company's arrangements for the forthcoming holidays, which, as may be supposed, are very exhaustible and complete. The Midland Company is chiefly concerned with the inland health and pleasure resorts of this country. Those who decide to spend their holidays in the Peak district, including Buxton and Matlock, will naturally select the Midland route as being the shortest and most convenient for this district, the same advice equally applies to the lonely Wharfedale district of Yorkshire, where the Midland Company have arranged a number of circular tours. Last, but not least, the North Western Company, whose programme covers a very wide area, will convey one to the many charming resorts of North Wales, to Aberystwith, to Barmouth, and Malvern in comparative comfort and ease. Or if you decide to visit bright and breezy Blackpool with its endless attractions, Morecambe on the Lancashire Coast, you will have little cause of regret.

THE PARADE AND TOWER, BLACKPOOL.

The most popular watering-place in the North of England.

'TWIXT HUMBER AND TWEED.

A street in picturesque Robin Hood's Bay.

Holiday-makers who prefer by way of a change to try an inland holiday will find nothing to compare with the unique beauty of the scenery of English Lakeland—the land of mountain, lake, and crag. Reached within a few hours by either the North Western or Midland systems, Carnforth, the gateway so to speak of this charming district, is also the southern terminus of the Furness Railway, which enjoys practically a monopoly of the tourist traffic to the southern and south-western parts of the celebrated Cumberland Lakes. The facilities offered by the Furness system leave little to be desired on the part of the tourist, and in addition to its rail service, the company own quite a fine fleet of steamers on Lake Windermere, not to mention the comfortable Furness Abbey Hotel.

Digitized by Google

A Holiday Cruise.

TO PORTUGAL BY THE BOOTH LINE.

I THINK the Bay of Biscay must be one of the most fearfully libelled institutions on the face of this earth. I crossed it twice last July, and we might have been steaming in the neighbourhood of the Tower Bridge as far as any motion was concerned. We were on our way out in the s.s. "Clement" from Havre to Oporto and Lisbon, and, given good weather—ours was simply perfect—no more enjoyable trip can be magined. Life on board the admirably-arranged boats of the Booth Line is never monotonous, and the time passes very quickly until we are across the Bay, and catch our first glimpse of the Spanish coast. Towards midnight of the same day we steam, in a dead-calm sea, laden with phosphorus, into the harbour at Leixoes, which is the port for Oporto, the bar at the mouth of the Douro rendering it impossible for vessels of any size to enter the river. At Leixoes we go ashore, and take the electric tram to Oporto, passing through one or two bathing resorts very popular with the inhabitants of the city. Wonderfully picturesque is Oporto, with its old-world streets and costumes, and the placid bullocks drawing the clumsy archaic carts, which are almost the only form of traffic in the steep thoroughfares. In connection with these carts, by the way, the tourist should notice the very beautiful designs of the heavy wooden yokes, which have evidently been handed down from generation to generation. Another thing that strikes the foreigner is the fact that the women seem to do all the work, especially in carrying heavy weights on their heads—note how splendidly their figures are developed in consequence—while the men aid their labour by looking on with their hands in their pockets, now and then varying this occupation by going to sleep in the nearest patch of shadow. Of some of the chief features of the city we reproduce photographs, the wonderful bridge of Dom Luiz being one of the most striking. Just beyond this bridge is the Convent of Serra do Pilar, where Wellington crossed the Douro in 1809, surprising the French under Soult, whose already prepared dinner was eaten by the English general and his staff.

For Englishmen in Oporto, a great institution is the English Club, which is situated in a charming position on one of the heights of the town, with magnificent views over the Douro and the sea. The club is admirably planned and managed, and all the English papers can be seen there.

Copyright.

THE QUAY AND BRIDGE OF DOM LUIZ, OPORTO.

Perhaps one of the most striking sights in Oporto is this wonderful bridge, which rises to a considerable height above the level of the Douro, and crosses the river in a single span of 560-ft.

After two days at Oporto, we return aboard the "Clement," en route for Lisbon, which is reached in fifteen hours from Leixoes. And here, before we quit this most excellent ship, we must give a word to Billy, the goat, the mascotte of the "Clement," and the pet of passengers and crew alike. Billy, who I trust still maintains his robust health, is a most remarkable animal, eschewing ordinary goat food and living chiefly on paper, of which he is inordinately fond. He varies his diet occasionally, and one afternoon he ate, in my presence, a complete straw hat, including the guard, a good half-ounce of tobacco, several sheets of paper, and some chalk and cotton-wool, as a sort of dessert. Billy has been forbidden the upper deck, as he ate all the name labels off the chairs, and caused considerable confusion.

Copyright.

ONE OF THE OLD-WORLD STREETS OF OPORTO

Showing one of the archaic bullock carts, which form the chief traffic in the city. It will be noticed that the women carry their burdens on their heads, a practice which seems universal in Portugal, where the habit, carried on for generations, has imparted to the women peculiarly erect figures, and a fine and graceful walk.

There is much to see at and around Lisbon. In the city itself the principal features are the Avenida do Libertade, the Cathedral, and the Rocio, or great square, celebrated throughout Europe for its wonderful granite paving. "Rolling-motion Square" is the very expressive name given to this great open space, where the effect of a Southern sun on the curious pattern in the granite is, at first, quite bewildering. One corner of what is now the Rocio was the scene of many of the fearful holocausts of the Inquisition.

A great institution in Lisbon is the public market, which is specially busy on Sunday mornings. Here it is literally possible to purchase everything under the sun, and the fruit and meat and wares are brought in from the outlying districts by the most picturesque peasants, who, with their old-time costumes and quaintly-equipped donkeys and mules, might have stepped out of the pages of Don Quixote. The tourist must on no account miss the visit to Cintra (where the King of Portugal has his summer palace), the aqueduct at Alcantara, and the great convent at Belem, founded by King Emmanuel I. as a thank-offering for the return of Vasco da Gama. The Sunday bull-fight at Lisbon is, of course, the great function of the week, and English men and women go, more or less, for the sake of saying "they've seen a bull-fight." There is a certain fascination about it, but the visitors do not seem to have any wild desire to see another. But it is a most horrible thing to see women, little children, and so-called men shouting applause at the sufferings of a maddened blood-stained beast, who has no shadow of a chance against his enemies, and looking on with calm approval at the sufferings of the unhappy blind-folded horses.

Digitized by Google

A HOLIDAY IN PORTUGAL.

The scenes in the bull-rings of Spain and Portugal must surely exercise a vast influence over the rising generation and the future destinies of the two countries.

Our three pleasant days in Lisbon are past, and we have to join our return ship, the "Obidense," which takes us direct to Saint Nazaire, and thence to Liverpool. It is only necessary to say that the management, good company, and cuisine are as good as those in the "Clement," and that there is not a dull moment on board from start to finish.

No better method of spending a holiday could be devised. One gets away completely from the ordinary daily routine, and leaves all news and newspapers behind; the novelty of the life at sea is charming, and one returns home healthy in mind and body.

The photographs reproduced with this article will give an idea of some of the picturesque bits to be seen on the tour, but of course the possibilities for photography are endless. The trip may be extended to Madeira, two days beyond Lisbon, if desired, whence the return boat can be caught in two or three days. Those who contemplate an ocean cruise should take steps to carry it out at once—I only wish I had my chance over again. The weather in Portugal is practically cloudless from June to September, so that there could not be a better time than the present to book a passage. Nothing could be more comfortable than the arrangements made by the Booth Line for the comfort of passengers. The cabins are of the most spacious description, and the dining accommodation of the very best. As for the menu, it must be seen to be believed; suffice it to say that there is more than enough for the most exacting passenger.

Copyright.

THE S.S. "AUGUSTINE"

One of the comfortable and luxuriously-fitted vessels of the Booth Company's fleet.

A word in conclusion about the general personnel of the ships of the Booth Line. Captains, officers, and crews all seem to be doing their best for the safety and comfort of passengers, and there is a comfortable sense of security about the boats that will go a long way to win the favour of passengers who have already tried these delightful trips. Tourists landing in Portugal will receive every assistance from the company's agents, who are courtesy itself.

A most excellent guide has been issued by the Booth Company concerning their trips. The pamphlet, which can be obtained at the office of the Booth Line in Adelphi Terrace, Strand, is profusely illustrated with photographs of all the places visited on the tour, and has good maps of Oporto and Lisbon.

Copyright.

THE ROCIO, OR PLACE DOM PEDRO, LISBON

The chief square in the city, and one of the finest in Europe. From the curious undulating pattern of its mosaic pavement, the name "Rolling-motion Square" has been bestowed upon the place. The centre of the Rocio marks the spot where the victims of the Inquisition were burnt to death.

Digitized by Google

A Holiday on the Continent.

IF one were to sit down to write a full and detailed account of how to spend a holiday on the Continent, the result would be a four or five volume work; and within the limits of space available in a Summer Number it is manifestly impossible to do more than touch lightly upon one phase of Continental travel. Last year we described as fully as possible the attractions which are offered to the holiday-maker in Northern France, in Brittany and Normandy, and in Belgium. This year we go rather further afield, and make Switzerland our main objective.

Thanks to the numerous tourist agencies, it is now easier to take a fortnight's tour in Switzerland than it is in England, and the very hackneyed phrase about the roads and the place they all lead to can be as well applied to Switzerland as any of the multifarious resorts with which it is frequently connected. There are at least four lines providing direct routes from London to Switzerland—the South Eastern and Chatham viâ Dover and Calais, or Dover and Ostend, the London, Brighton, and South Coast by way of Newhaven and Dieppe, the London and South Western viâ Southampton and St. Malo, and the Great Eastern by the Hook of Holland route—and on all these comfort and speed are to be found.

Presuming, therefore, that the traveller has selected his route, and that he has Lucerne in view as his headquarters, let us proceed to see in what way he may best pass his fortnight. Lucerne itself is a quaint and picturesque place, to which one entire day may be devoted. The cathedral, with its wonderful organ, the famous lion monument, and the old wooden bridges, all call for a visit. Then there are at least two mountain excursions — one to the summit of the Rigi, the other to Mount Pilatus — which form a natural and inevitable part of the programme. For the fourth day by far the best excursion that can be taken is to Zurich, Schaffhausen, and the Rhine Falls. Or, as an alternative (though in view of what we shall have to say later, this excursion is, perhaps, a little unnecessary), the visitor may spend the night at the Grand Hotel on the summit of the Stanserhorn, thus viewing the wonderful effects of sunset and sunrise over practically the whole of the great mountain ranges of the Bernese Alps. That done, the traveller may begin to think about moving on, and here such a variety of routes offers itself, routes which each and all can claim to take him through the grandest scenery and most picturesque parts of the country, that he might well hesitate. He may go to Chamounix, passing through Berne and Geneva, spending three days at the great Mont Blanc centre, and thence journeying over the Tête Noir Pass by diligence to Vernayez, thence to Lausanne, Territet, the Castle of Chillon, and so home again. Or he may spend a week in the Grindelwald, in Interlaken, Meiringen, and the other fashionable centres. And there is yet a third, and, perhaps, the most picturesque route of all. This is an excursion over the St. Gothard, to the Rhone Glacier and the Furka Pass, Grimsel, and Meiringen. For full particulars as to these and other tours, the intending visitor should make application to one or other of the reliable tourist agencies, like Messrs. Thomas Cook and Sons, or the Polytechnic in Regent Street. We shall content ourselves with describing at some length the Furka Pass excursion by the Polytechnic.

Cletscher.

IN THE AUSTRIAN TYROL.
The Trafoi Hotel in the midst of the Tyrolese Alps.

Leaving Lucerne early in the morning by carriage or waggonette, the party will drive along the banks of Lake Lucerne to Tell's Chapel, which stands on the reputed spot of Tell's escape from Gessler. A little further along the road is the Axenstrasse, a series of natural galleries in the mountain-side, through which the main road passes. At Fluellen, on the southern extremity of the lake, the train is taken to Goeschenen, where the St. Gothard Tunnel has its Swiss entrance. From Goeschenen to Andermatt is an easy walk through the Schollenen Gorge, past the Devil's Bridge, and the famous granite cross hewn in the mountain-side, in memory of those who lost their lives in Suvaroff's victory in 1799. Andermatt is an important military centre, and all day the surrounding mountains re-echo the boom of cannon and the rattle of musketry. Here the first day's journey ends, and there is a choice of hotels, all good.

The second day will be occupied with driving to the summit of Furka, a route which is wonderful in its picturesqueness and beauty. At the Furka Hotel the night should be spent, arrangements made for guides over the glacier, and the sunset and the sunrise seen. The Furka Hotel even in summer is sometimes surrounded with snow, and all around are snow-clad peaks, which in the early morning rays of the sun present a spectacle that defies description.

The passage of the Rhone Glacier is not difficult, but guides must be taken. The interest of the excursion, however, more than counterbalances the slight expense, and on arriving at the Grimsel Hospice on the other side, the traveller will in all probability wish that he were only just beginning the traversée. At Grimsel, the carriage having been sent round by road, the party resumes the drive over the famous pass to Handeck. On one side of the road precipitous cliffs, covered with Alpine roses and little anemones, with thick clustering bilberry bushes rich with luscious fruit; on the other the newly-born Aar, racing along its narrow bed, fed with the melting snows of a thousand peaks. At Handeck the river throws itself down a series of cataracts in a wonderful mist of spray, and the sunlight catching it throws a myriad rainbows round the waterfall. It will be too late at night when the party arrive at Meiringen for a visit to the famous gorge of the Aar, which must consequently be postponed till the next day, together with the Reichenbach Falls, where the guides solemnly assure the visitors "the famous English detective, Mr. Sherlock Holmes, was killed."

From Meiringen the traveller may return over the Brunig Pass to Lucerne, or may proceed by way of Brienz and Interlaken to Berne, and thence home again. The hotels all along the route are comfortable and moderate in price, and the clear exhilarating air of the mountain-tops and the peaceful quiet of the long drive from point to point most enjoyable. Fresh air and quiet are two prescriptions that everyone should get made up for him during his holidays. And in Switzerland he can get these best off the beaten track.

Digitized by Google

A HOLIDAY ON THE CONTINENT.

Copyright.

THE ICE FALL ON THE GORNER GLACIER.

The three climbers give scale to the great height of the pinnacles of ice and the deep crevasses between them.

Digitized by Google

A Holiday in Scotland.

ONE of the most remarkable of the many noteworthy facts about the Scottish railway companies is the excellence of the guide-books they issue, and the present writer in the preparation of this article has had occasion to be thankful to the instinct which prompted him on various tours through Scotland to acquire a small library of these guide-books. As sources of information on subjects historical, geographical, and biographical they are most useful, and they are in addition of valuable assistance in giving information as to trains, fares, hotels, and other matters upon all of which the inexperienced need information that is easily assimilated and really reliable.

The Southerner who would visit the country of the Scot has the choice of three routes to take him on the first part of his northward journey—the Great Northern, the Midland, and the London and North Western; but arrived at the border he has the option of taking any one of five routes, all of which traverse interesting and picturesque parts of the country. The list of places visited by the Highland Railway is very complete, and extends from Perth in the south, to Wick and Thurso in the north, the Kyle of Lochalsh in the west, to Elgin, Keith, and Buckie in the east, and it has its headquarters at Inverness, the capital of the Highlands. Nairn and Strathpeffer, Achnasheen, whence one may travel, as Queen Victoria did in 1877, to beautiful Loch Maree and Kingussie in the lovely valley of the Spey—all these are reached by the Highland system, and the system of round tours which the company has instituted enables the visitor to make a very comprehensive survey of the Highlands in a fortnight.

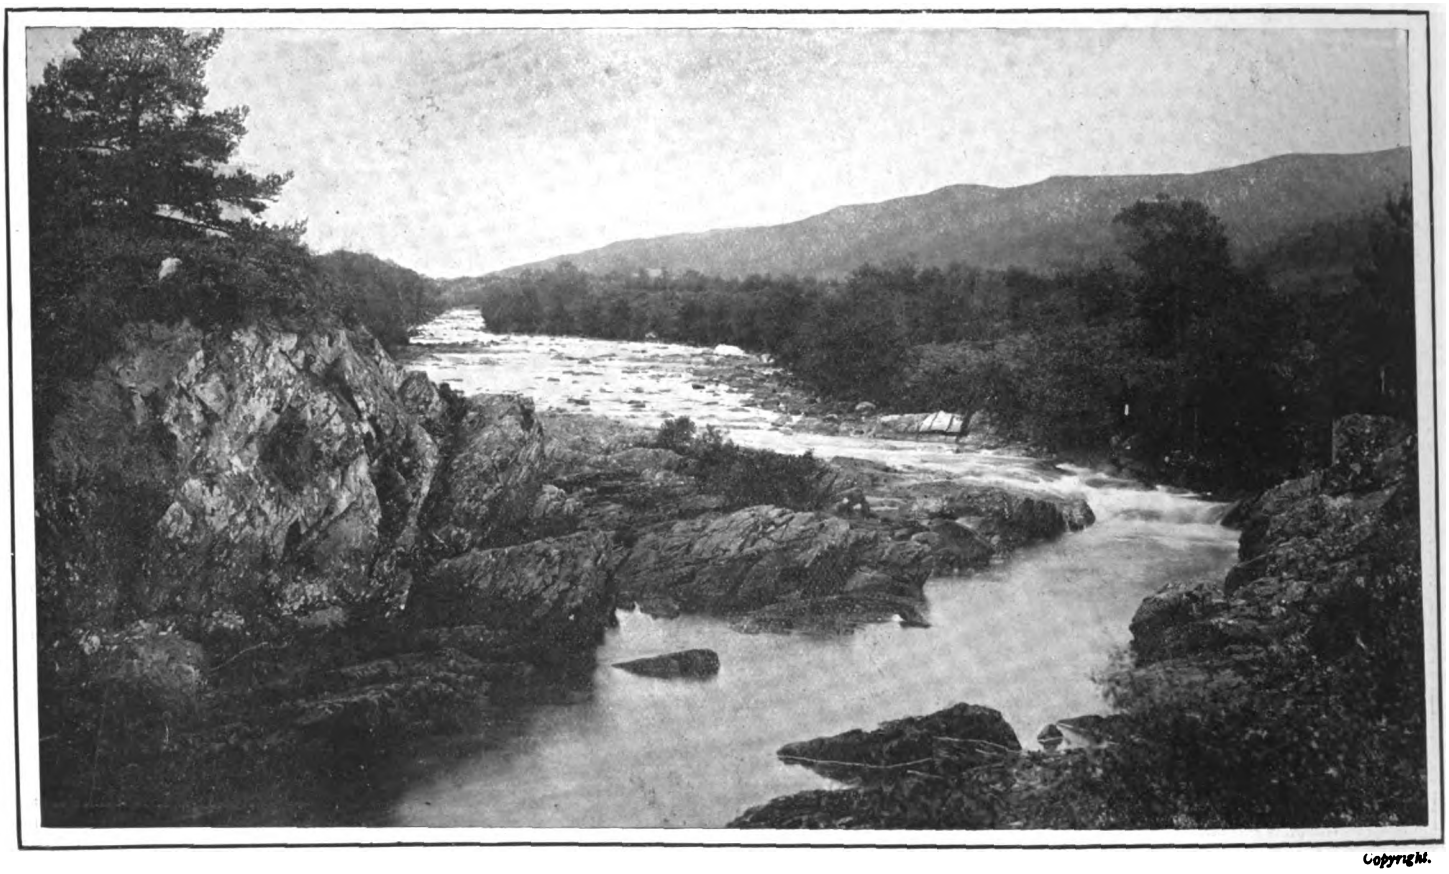
If there is one place more than another on the 337 miles of line that the Great North of Scotland Railway has in operation that appeals to every class of holiday-maker, that place is Cruden Bay. Thirty miles only from Aberdeen, Cruden is within comfortable travelling distance also of London, Edinburgh, and Glasgow, and its pure and exhilarating air, its fine stretch of sandy beach, two miles in extent, its admirable golf links, and above all its facilities for safe sea-bathing, make it a most desirable holiday retreat. The railway company has erected a large and magnificently appointed hotel there, which will no doubt form an additional attraction to those visitors who like to enjoy their holidays amid luxurious surroundings.

Turning to the other side of Scotland, the Clyde district, we find this admirably served by the North British Railway, which may claim to be the most extensive system in North Britain. It passes through those parts of the country familiarised to all by Scott, through country which abounds in picturesque scenery, and which is replete with historical interest, and in connection with the company's train service is an admirable fleet of steamers, running to various Clyde resorts. There are nearly 100 golf courses in or near towns served by the system, and all the best fishing streams and lochs may be reached from stations on the North British Railway. During the tourist season some seventy different tours can be made by the North British system. A volume of words could not say more for their enterprise than that one sentence.

The fourth great line which serves the tourist in Scotland in guise of guide, philosopher, and friend, is the Caledonian, which has been working for some years hand in glove with the London and North Western, and which has adopted the very distinctive title of West Coast Mail Route. Nearly all the through trains on the line are trains de luxe, and the journey at every point on the route is full of interest.

There is one excursion by this route that no lover of beautiful scenery can afford to miss. It is from Glasgow to Lochgoilhead, some part of the way by train, the remainder by steamer through some thirty miles of the grandest parts of the Clyde estuary. And for those who like to go even farther afield there is always the wonderful Isle of Arran, with Brodick Bay and Goatfell as the main points of interest in the island. From the summit of Goatfell there is a wonderful panorama spread out for the visitor to feast his eyes on.

Of Edinburgh itself one might write chapters, had it not all been described so often. There are some sights that the visitor cannot miss. John Knox's house, gabled and plastered, overhanging Canongate, the Burns house in Baxter Close, and Holyrood will be visited by the pious pilgrim. But ere he goes further on his journey, he would do well also to see the house in James Court where Johnson was received by Boswell previous to the famous Highland tour, and where Hume also wrote part of his history of England, the cathedral of St. Giles, full of memories of the stirring days of the Covenant, and many other places that have played their part in history. With Edinburgh as headquarters, the tourist cannot go far wrong, for westward to Glasgow or northward to Aberdeen and Inverness is not far, and from these centres it is that the best tours in Scotland are to be made.



Copyright.

A HIGHLAND BURN.

A beautiful view on the Highland Railway, which serves the North-East of Scotland. There is excellent trout-fishing in these streams, and the surrounding scenery is full of rugged beauty and romantic associations.

Digitized by Google

A Holiday in New Zealand.

THE WONDERLAND OF THE WORLD.

As we have from time to time had cause to observe in our columns devoted to travel, there is a marked and ever-growing tendency on the part of the British public to go further and further afield for their holidays. At one time the Riviera was considered the correct place to escape from the much-dreaded winter climate of this country. But even the attractions of the lovely Mediterranean littoral pall on one after years of successive visits, and now nothing short of Egypt or the West India Islands will suffice. Who can tell in what fresh direction this stream of tourists will be diverted within the next decade or so?

To go back a few years, whoever would have dreamt of going as far afield as New Zealand in quest of health or pleasure? Yet thousands do so at the present day. Allowing that Switzerland is the "playground of Europe," then New Zealand is, without a doubt, the "playground of the world." As a resort for the health-seeker, the sportsman, or mere pleasure-seeker, New Zealand offers far greater attractions than any other country in the world.

Unlike the rest, familiarity with this beautiful country never breeds contempt, and the visitor who has come and gone carries with him undying memories of its charms and a constant yearning that he may at some future day again renew a friendship with its great forests, swift-running rivers, boiling lakes, and beautiful mountains, and gaze once again on its weird and impressive thermal wonders.

It is one of the commonest of errors to suppose that New Zealand is shut off from the rest of the world. In twenty-seven days we can reach Auckland, the journey being by way of New York and San Francisco. As a matter of fact, the journey, which takes us across the great American continent in trains whose comfort can only be compared to hotels on wheels, is by no means the least enjoyable part of the trip. Or we have the alternative of going by the oversea route, viâ the Cape, which, of course, takes somewhat longer.

The climate is as near perfection as anyone could wish for, and from November to March, the New Zealand summer, if it is possible to make such a distinction in a country which is all summer, is an ideal time to take a tour through the colony.

On his arrival in Auckland, the tourist will experience little difficulty in finding his way about the islands, thanks to the energy and enterprise of the Government, which has established a special department—the Department of Tourist and Health Resorts—where the fullest information as to tours, mountaineering, health resorts, shooting, and in short the numerous other attractions of the country, is supplied gratuitously. The department, which was established some four years since with headquarters in Wellington, is in charge of the Hon. Sir J. G. Ward, K.C.M.G., who is ably assisted in his useful work by Mr. T. E. Donne. Branches of this organisation are to be found in all the principal cities of the colony, so that the tourist, wander where he may, will never be at a loss for help or information.

Apart from its vast wealth of scenic attractions, the North Island is also celebrated for its hot springs, ranging in temperature from 60-deg. to 212-deg.! These geysers are not simply beautiful as works of Nature; they are the basis of health resorts, which the Government takes the utmost care to preserve and improve for the benefit of ailing humanity. Near some of the most healthful of the springs sanatoriums have been established, which have proved of the utmost benefit to those suffering from certain afflictions. The sanatoriums afford the invalid the most up-to-date forms of treatment, and are under the direct supervision of qualified Government officials. Dr. Wohlmann, the Government Balneologist, was formerly attached to the Spa at Bath, and gives advice as to the forms of treatment. Thousands of persons suffering from different complaints annually visit the wonderful thermal district of New Zealand, and in many instances return completely cured.

Rotorua, the centre of the hot lake region, is only a few hours' train journey from Auckland. It is the one spot above all others that the tourist should make a point of visiting. One has also the choice of going by steamer to Tauranga, a distance of 130 miles, and the remaining 40 miles by coach; or he can go to Okoroire by train, and thence by rail or coach. Two or three days at least should be spent en route to Rotorua. Te Aroha and Okoroire are equally pleasant spots at which to break the journey; there are good hotels and excellent trout-fishing in the neighbourhood of the latter. Te Aroha boasts some celebrated hot springs, and the view from the summit of Mount Aroha is simply superb, even in a country where scenic effects are made so little of. The tourist, on his arrival at Rotorua, is met by porters from the Grand Hotel, the Whakarewarewa Hotel, and the Lake House Hotel, all of which are exceedingly comfortable. The

Copyright.

THE GREAT WAIMANGU GEYSER IN ERUPTION.

Situated about 17 miles from Rotorua, the centre of the thermal district, this wonderful geyser is one of the most remarkable sights in New Zealand. An eruption takes place about once in every 30 hours or so, great clouds of mud, stones, and hot water being discharged, sometimes to a height of 1,500-ft.

Digitized by Google

A HOLIDAY IN

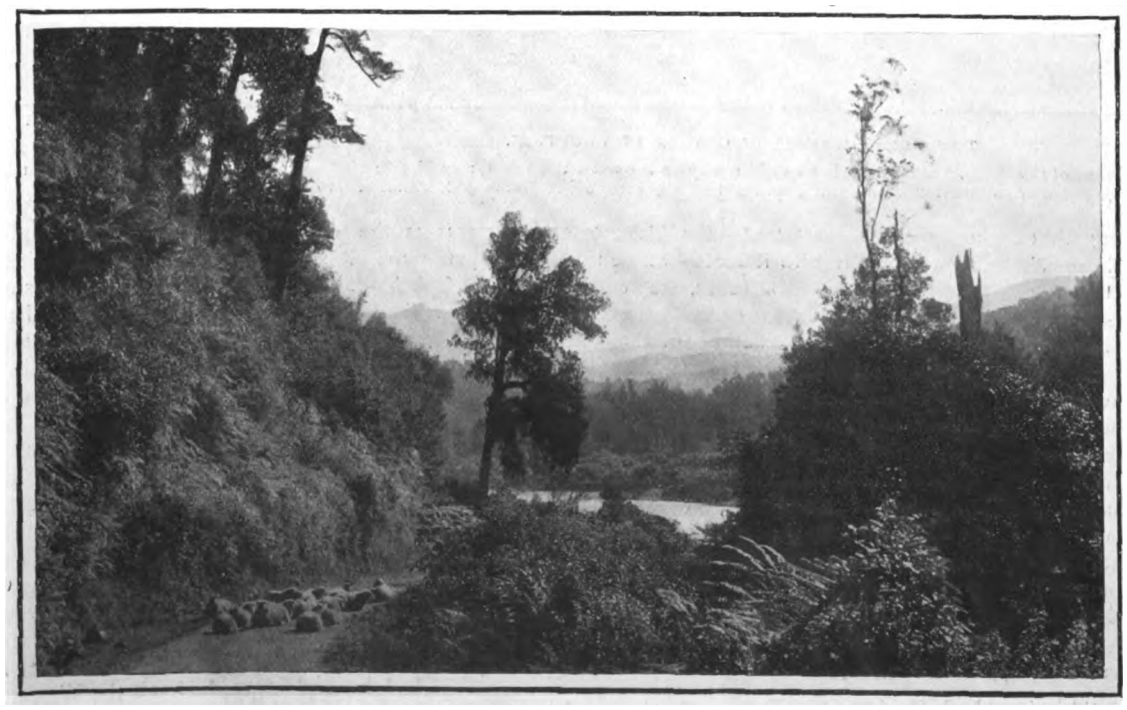
SOUTH FJORD: LAKE TE ANAU.
One of the largest cold lakes, being thirty-eight miles long.

A LOGGING SCENE IN NEW ZEALAND.
At the Wairoa Falls, North Auckland. The logs are about to crash over the fall into the river below.



ON THE WEST COAST ROAD, NEW ZEALAND.
One of the rich pieces of picturesque landscape characteristic of the country.

A FINE EXAMPLE O
Showing the wonderfully ...

On the overland ro...

Digitized by Google

NEW ZEALAND.

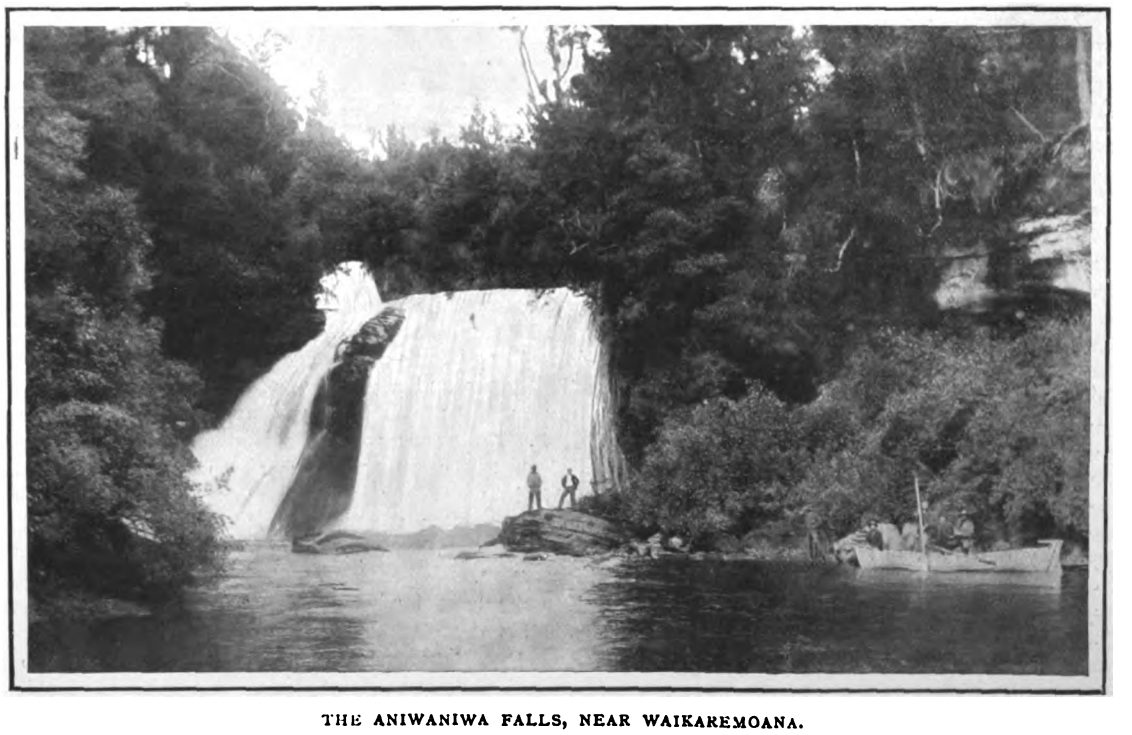
MAORI CARVING
te nature of the native art.

HIRUHARAMA (JERUSALEM), WHANGANUI RIVER.
A Maori settlement on the banks of this historic stream, called the Rhine of New Zealand.

HAULING LOGS IN THE KAURI FOREST, NORTH AUCKLAND.
The Colony exports large quantities of timber to the Mother Country, mainly for wood-paving.

Milford Sound.



THE ANIWANIWA FALLS, NEAR WAIKAREMOANA.
Recently opened up to the tourist, this lake offers delightful cruises and excellent trout-fishing.

Digitized by Google

A HOLIDAY IN NEW ZEALAND.

Grand, by the way, was the only hotel at which the Prince and Princess of Wales put up during their memorable visit to New Zealand. Luxuriously furnished and well managed, it is indeed hard to realise one is so far away from home. As in most other directions, the New Zealander is fully alive to the art of catering, and some of the dishes served at the Grand, once tasted, are never forgotten. The baths and beautiful sanatorium grounds almost adjoin the hotel. About a mile further on is the Whakarewarewa Hotel —by the way, a rather ill-chosen name to attempt to pronounce after having partaken of a big dinner. This hotel will be found equally convenient as headquarters for those who remain in Rotorua for any length of time. There is also the Lake House, standing on the edge of the lake, much frequented by sportsmen, who can enjoy trout-fishing almost from the door of the hotel. For the man of moderate means the Palace Hotel, situated in the centre of the town, is also well spoken of. In addition there are numerous boarding-houses to choose from; but, generally speaking, the English tourist prefers the freedom of hotel life.

Rotorua is picturesquely situated on the southern shores of Lake Rotorua, at an elevation of about 1,000-ft. above sea-level. The township, consisting of 600 acres, is prettily laid out, and so bountifully lit by electricity that on fine summer evenings the streets and public gardens are as full as they are in daylight. To the north lies the ancient Maori village of Ohinemutu, where native customs and manners still prevail. Boiling pools and hot streams abound here, some of the cooler ones being used by the natives for bathing in. A piece of silver flung into one of these pools affords intense amusement watching the little brown boys dive in and recover the coin.

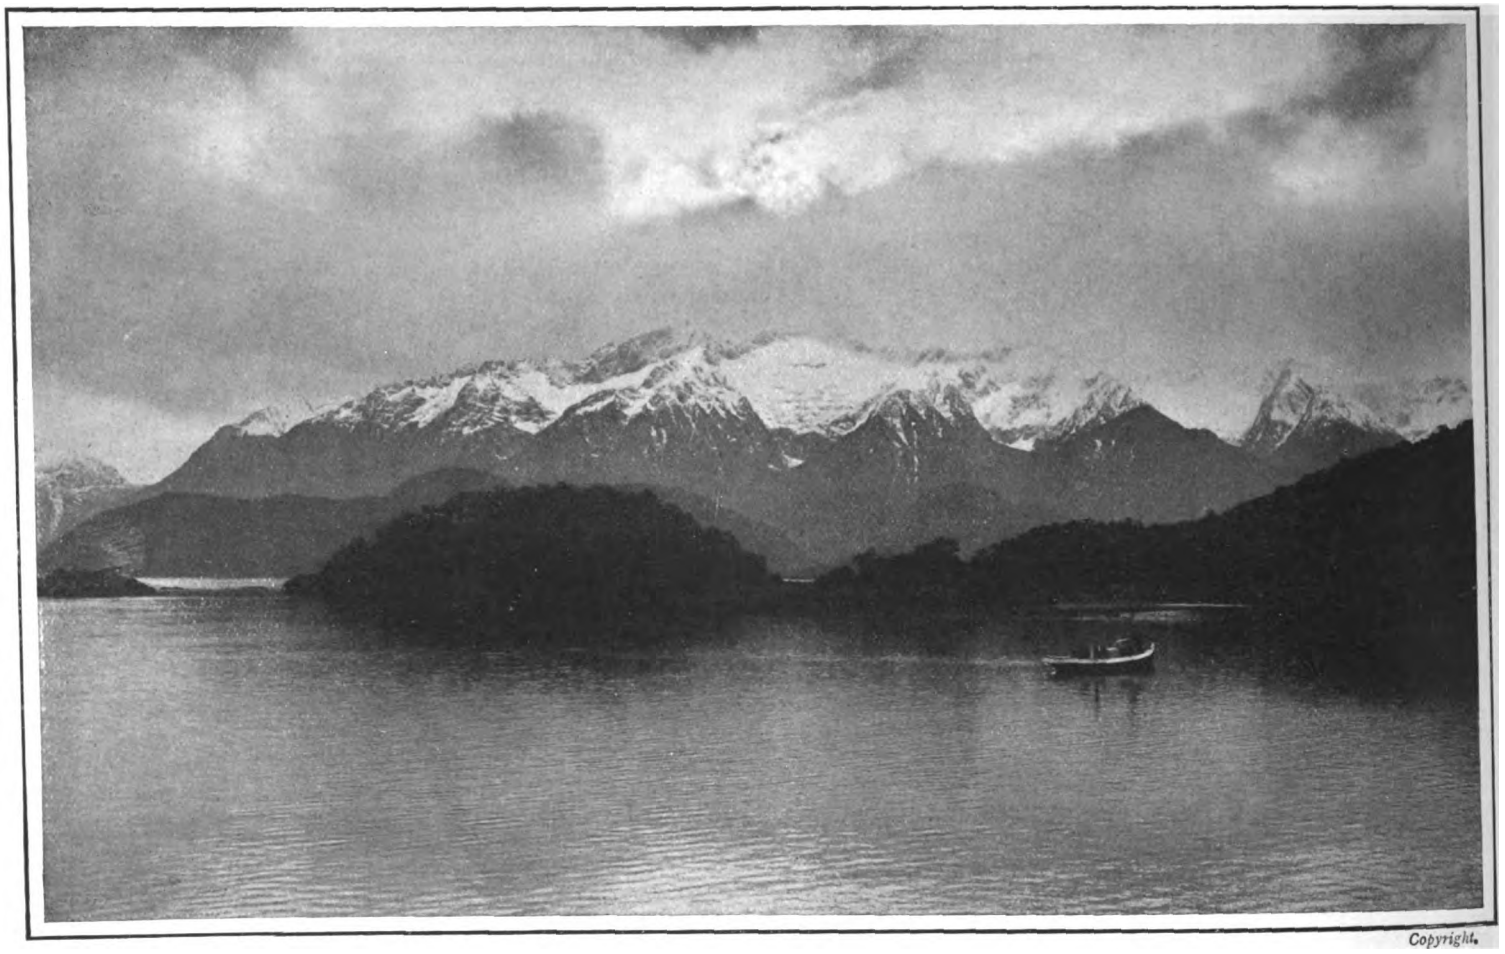
Less than a couple of miles from Rotorua lies Whakarewarewa, perhaps the most interesting spot in the whole thermal district. The ground seems simply alive with every kind of hot spring and hot mud pools of every size, shape, and colour. Waimangu lies about seventeen miles from Rotorua, and is reached by coach to Wairoa, thence by steam launch over Lakes Tarawera and Rotomahana. The excursion is one full of interest. Passing close to the south shore of Rotomahana, the site of the lost Pink and White Terraces destroyed in the eruption of 1886, passengers have the novel experience of sailing on boiling water, while the quiver of the boat creates a sensation difficult to describe. At any rate, it is the reverse of comfortable. To see Waimangu in eruption is a sight never to be forgotten. The great geyser plays once in every thirty hours or so; on no account should the visitor leave until he has seen a good "shot." Recently the Government Tourist Department has erected a handsome "accommodation house" —in reality a hotel—commanding a fine view of the geyser and a grand panorama of the Tarawera Mountains and the surrounding district. Notice of an upheaval is given by a series of sullen growls from the interior, at which stage the visitor must needs betake himself to the shelter houses, which have thoughtfully been erected by the Government.

Not the least interesting feature of New Zealand is the picturesque Maori life. They are a merry, courteous people, and ever ready to extend a hearty welcome to the traveller. The Arawas are said to be the best wood-carvers in the colony, while their grotesque dances, known as hakas and pois, the latter combining song and action, are quite unique in their way.

New Zealand has been called "the sportsman's paradise," which indeed it is in the truest sense of the word. The angler can cast his fly on almost every stream from the North Cape to the Bluff, with the certainty of a good basket of trout. Should you wish to try your hand with rod and line, you may pay your pound of English money, and fish undisturbed in hundreds of miles of beautiful water from October 1 till April 15; for an outlay of five shillings you are free to fish where you like for a whole month. The largest brown trout caught in New Zealand scaled 37lb.; others weighing 30lb. and 28lb. are frequently killed. In the neighbourhood of Rotorua are found the lovely rainbow trout, weighing 20lb. and more.

To the deer-stalker, New Zealand offers the grandest sport. Both red and fallow deer exist in large quantities in the Colony. The best red deer, however, are found in the Wairarapa district of the North Island, while fallow are so common as to be regarded in many parts as a nuisance, and no restrictions are placed on the shooting of them. The seasons are exactly opposite to those prevailing in this country. Apart from its immense preserves of deer, New Zealand offers to the lover of the gun a large choice of game, including pheasants, plovers, hares, and Californian quail. Native grey duck, teal, widgeon, pukaki, pigeon, black swan, and dotterel abound almost everywhere.

Those who may thus early be contemplating where to escape from England next winter could scarcely do better than adopt the advice given in this short, and necessarily incomplete, article, and give New Zealand a trial.



Copyright.

IN THE WONDERLAND OF THE WORLD.

The Cathedral Peaks, Lake Manawapouri. This beautiful sheet of water is cut up into a multitude of deep winding inlets, studded with islands. At the head of the lake the views are most impressive, and distinctly Alpine in character. A steamer is provided by the Government Tourist Department to explore the wonderful beauties of this lake.

Digitized by Google

NEW ZEALAND

THE BRIGHTER BRITAIN.

A NEW COUNTRY of marvellous beauty, with a fertile soil and a splendid climate. No extremes of heat or cold.

No droughts. An abundance of water, yet no rainy season.

An Evergreen Land rich in natural products.

A GREAT SHEEP, CATTLE AND DAIRYING COUNTRY.

Cheap farms with helpful assistance to farmers by the Government. Reduced steamer fares from the United Kingdom to New Zealand for persons with small capital.

No private monopoly of Public Utilities; the Government owns and operates Railways, Telegraphs, Telephones and Insurance.

No Lock-outs! No Strikes!! Employment disputes adjusted by Arbitration!!!

NEW ZEALAND IS THE WONDERLAND OF THE WORLD.

Its Thermal Sights are unique in their extent, beauty and weirdness.

The Mammoth Geyser "Waimangu" (Black Water) hurls an immense mass of boiling water, mud and stones over 1,000 feet high.

Hot Mineral Water and Mud Baths; The Curative Baths of Rotorua, Te Aroha and Hanmer are world famous. Government doctors in attendance.

Baths. Gardens. Games. Music.

and picturesque. Here are lakes of great size and depth—canyons that surpass the greatest of other lands—dense forests with a tropical profusion of ferns and flowers—innumerable waterfalls—monoliths of granite many thousands of feet in height—glaciers, snowfields, and the peerless Sounds, with their 400 miles of inside sailing distance.

TRANSIT is convenient throughout New Zealand. Government railways, Express trains, Pullman and Dining Cars. Excellent coastal steamers. Splendid coaching routes. Hotels, good; charges moderate. Government Hotels, Spas, and Accommodation Houses in many of the principal tourist resorts.

Large Mail Steamers with every modern comfort and convenience leave Great Britain for New Zealand fortnightly. Duration of direct journey, 40 days; via Suez and Australia, 44 days; via Canada, 32 days; via San Francisco, 28 days.

The best time to visit New Zealand is during the summer months, from November to April.

ALL INFORMATION regarding Travel, Tourist Routes, Spas, Baths, Sport, etc., etc., is supplied free of charge by the GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENT OF TOURIST AND HEALTH RESORTS, Head Office, WELLINGTON, NEW ZEALAND. Branch Offices throughout the Colony. Information regarding access to New Zealand, Reduced Steamer

HYDRAULIC GOLD MINING AT ROSS.

GOLD DREDGE IN SKIPPERS GORGE, LAKE WAKATIPU.

A SMALL FARM IN NEW ZEALAND.

The ALPINE SCENERY of New Zealand combines the distinguishing features of Switzerland, Norway and America. The Southern Alps extend for 300 miles. Mt. Cook, the highest peak, is belted by the largest glaciers in the temperate regions—the Tasman being 18 miles long and 2 miles wide. Near the foot of Mt. Cook is the Hermitage Hotel. Government guides, Alpine huts, and all necessary Alpine equipment available for use of visitors.

The LAKES of New Zealand are most pleasing in their charm of colour, contour and environment. Rotorua, Rotoiti, Taupo, and Waikaremoana in the North Island; Manapouri, Wakatipu, Te Anau, Wanaka, Kanieri and Mahinapua in the South Island are the most notable. The Lakes of the South Island are surrounded by mountain scenery of singular beauty and magnificence. Steamers and Power Launches. Good Hotels.

The WEST COAST FIORDLAND is indescribably wild

Fares, Settlement, Commerce, Industries, Travel, etc., etc., also supplied at the Office of the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, London—Mr. J. G. Gow, Commercial Agent for New Zealand, Durban, South Africa, also supplies general information respecting New Zealand.

Minister for Tourist and Health Resorts: Hon. Sir Joseph G. Ward, K.C.M.G. Superintendent: T. E. Donne, Wellington, New Zealand. The Superintendent invites correspondence.

See Tourist Department's "Itinerary of Travel" and descriptive Guide Books.

An International Exhibition of Products, Manufactures, Arts, Sciences, Amusements, etc., etc., is to be held by the Government of New Zealand in Hagley Park, Christchurch City, commencing 1st November, 1906, and terminating April, 1907. Full particulars obtainable from the Agent-General for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, S.W.

OKOROIRE.

HOT SPRINGS AND SANATORIUM HOTEL.

One of the finest Health Resorts in the Thermal District.

The first place of interest en route to Rotorua, New Zealand.

Delightful NATURAL HOT MINERAL BATHS, free to Guests. Sufferers from Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Affection of the Eyes, Skin Diseases, etc., are often permanently cured by these waters.

CLIMATE.—Beautifully clear and bracing atmosphere, charming surroundings.

SPORT.—The Streams in the hotel grounds are exceedingly well-stocked with Trout. Plenty of Game, viz.: Pheasants, Virginian Quail, Wild Duck, Hares, and Deer. Lawn Tennis, Golf, and Croquet.

The drive from Okoroire to Rotorua is one of the most beautiful in New Zealand.

T. MARTIN,
Manager.

NEW ZEALAND.

THE GRAND HOTEL, ROTORUA.

Situated in the Centre of the Hot Lakes District.

Patronised by T.R.H. The Prince and Princess of Wales.

THE HOTEL is in the immediate neighbourhood of the beautifully laid-out Government Gardens, wherein are situated the celebrated "Priest," "Rachel," "Postmaster," "Duchess," and other mineral baths, the curative properties of which are world famous. It has magnificent and lofty apartments, spacious promenade, balconies, snug alcoves, and luxuriously-appointed drawing, music, conversation, reading, smoking, and billiard rooms, perfect sanitation, and is lighted throughout by electricity.

BATH CHAIRS and attendance provided to convey invalids to or from the various bath houses. Tariff 12/6 per day inclusive.

W. J. LEES, Manager.

THE GEYSER HOTEL,

WHAKAREWAREWA, ROTORUA.

Situated in close proximity to the wonderful Geysers and Maori Settlement.

Visitors staying at the Geyser Hotel have continued opportunity of witnessing them as they can be seen plainly from the verandah of the Hotel, also of studying native life and customs.

The Hotel possesses its own private hot and cold curative mineral baths of which the most valued are the "Spout," "Oil," and "Carlsbad" Baths.

It has lately been greatly enlarged and re-furnished in a most comfortable manner. Electric light is established throughout the hotel and baths.

Coaches run regularly between Whakarewarewa, the Rotorua Sanatorium, and Government Gardens.

Tariff 10s. per day or £3 per week, inclusive. For a lengthened stay terms can be arranged.

CHAS. E. NELSON, Proprietor.

Digitized by Google

Ocean Cruises.

TO THE NORWEGIAN FJORDS AND TO THE SOUTH.

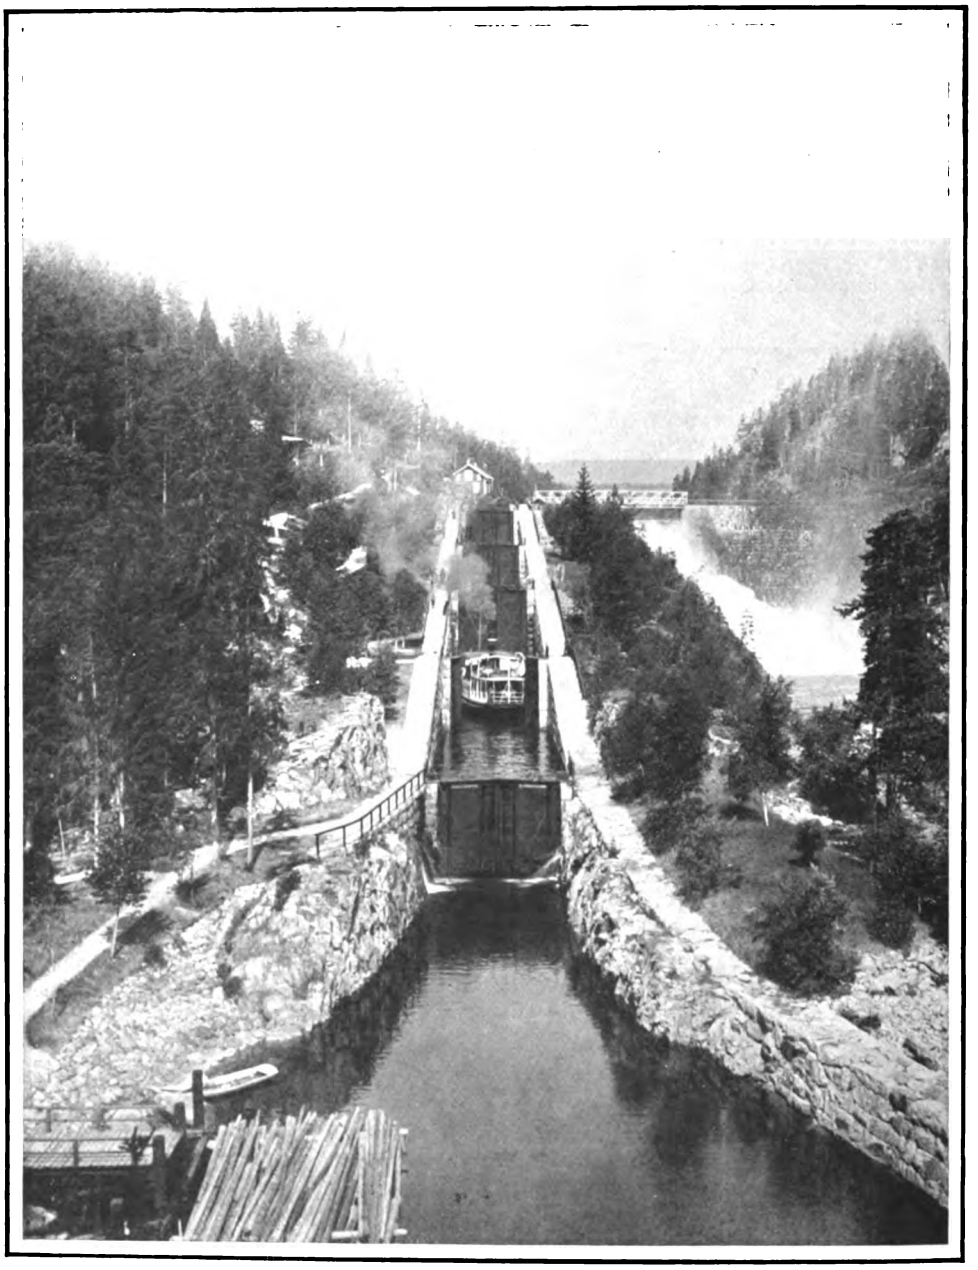
WHEN holiday-making becomes of the nature of a bore—as it not infrequently happens when, perchance, we have made an unfortunate selection—then all the good that might otherwise have been derived from the change is naturally considerably lessened. Quoting from the advice so often given by the family physician, the main essentials for an enjoyable and healthful holiday are freedom from worry combined with plenty of fresh air and frequent change of scene. Simple enough advice in its way, yet by no means the easiest to follow. You may argue that you get practically all these conditions by spending three weeks or a month at some quiet out-of-the-way place on the English coast, such as those enumerated elsewhere in our holiday supplement. Not so, however, if you would adhere as rigidly to the conditions laid down by your doctor as you would to those prescribed by him in liquid form, bearing the familiar instruction, "to be taken three times a day"; then nothing short of a cruise on the ocean will fulfil what is implied in those words of advice.

Ocean-cruising is a diversion which has become quite the vogue within the last few years, thanks to the enterprise of many well-known shipping companies. Hitherto, the delights of a yachting cruise to foreign waters were denied to all save those who could boast of their own yachts. But in travel, as in many other things, time has brought about vast changes, and we think probably less now of running across to Norway and Sweden, or of taking a cruise in the Mediterranean, than our grandfathers thought of travelling from London to the more distant parts of this country.



CLIMBING A WATERFALL.
A steamer passing the set of locks in the Nordsjo Canal, Norway.
(From stereographs copyright Underwood and Underwood, London and New York.)

As an example of what one can accomplish nowadays in the way of short cruises only, take the series of pleasure trips which the Orient Pacific Company have arranged this season to the Norwegian Fjords. The magnificent s.s. "Ophir"—the vessel which had the honour of conveying the Prince and Princess of Wales on their memorable trip to the Antipodes and Canada—will this season make five short cruises of thirteen days each to Norway, visiting the following interesting places: Bergen, Næs, Molde, Merok, Leon, Visnæs, Balholmen, Gudvangen, Odde, and Stavanger. The fares are so remarkably low, considering first-class passengers only are carried—from twelve guineas and upwards, according to position of cabin—as to be within the range of those of quite moderate means. The next sailing from Grimsby is on July 8, returning to the same port on the 21st of the month. The greater portion of this cruise being in comparatively smooth waters, no one need entertain fears of mal-de-mer. The crossing from Grimsby to Bergen occupies little over two days. Bergen, at which we remain twelve hours, is, perhaps, one of the most interesting of the Norwegian seaports. Founded in the year 1070, it was the first commercial town in the country. The time spent here is fully occupied with sight-seeing, and on no account should the voyageur miss the morning drive to the old Stavekirke, a wooden church, dating from the twelfth century. Did time permit one could devote an entire week to the old Hansa City.

Twelve hours' steam from Bergen through the beautiful land-locked waters of the Norwegian coast, interspersed by innumerable little islands, takes us to Gudvangen, the scenery of which is perfectly enchanting. Returning through the Næro Fjord, we next reach Balholmen, surrounded by towering mountains, of heights approaching nearly 5,000 ft. The little town, with its English church, is most picturesquely situated, and it is with feelings of regret that once more we are compelled to take our departure for other scenes. Visnæs is on Nord Fjord, but a short distance from the region familiarly known as the Midnight Sun. Leon is on the same fjord, and here carriages will be found in readiness to convey those desirous of visiting Vasenden and the wonderful Halseth glacier.

Continuing the journey north, we steam up Stor Fjord, one of the grandest fjords in Norway. At Hellesylt commences the Geiranger Fjord, and ends at Merok. Flanked by mountainous heights of from 5,000-ft. to 6,000-ft., the scenery here is singularly imposing. Waterfalls abound in the neighbourhood, one of the most remarkable of these being the Seven Sisters on the north bank, falling over an almost perpendicular bank. Our next port of call is Næs, on the Isfjord, in the vicinity of which is the lovely Romsdal, probably one of the best known of the grand Norwegian valleys; then we anchor at Molde, remaining there a few hours, preparatory to starting for Bergen, where another day is allowed for sight-seeing. Before we return to Grimsby we have an opportunity of visiting Odde, a quaint-looking village where numerous tourist steamers are generally to be seen landing or embarking their passengers. A pleasant drive takes us to the Lotefos, passing on the way Lake Sandven, in which the surrounding mountains are reflected like a mirror, and the Glacier of Buar, with the gleaming Folgefond above.

The concluding portion of this delightful cruise, no less interesting than the first, takes us by the Hardanger Fjord to Stavanger, the nearest Norwegian port to the north-eastern coast of Great Britain. In addition to the

Digitized by Google

For an Ideal Summer Holiday

SELECT THE

NORTH OF IRELAND.

BRACING CLIMATE.—The coasts of Antrim, Derry, and Donegal front the Atlantic Ocean. The air is invigorating, and the temperature mild and equable.

MAGNIFICENT SCENERY.—Rivers and Glens, Mountains and Cliffs, Lough and Sea Coast.

GOLF LINKS at Portrush (Championship Course), Greenisland, Island Magee (Larne Harbour), Ballycastle, Portstewart, Castlerock, Magilligan Point, Buncrana, Portsalon, Rosapenna.

TRAVEL IN COMFORT.—By the new route, via Heysham, passengers have the advantage of the fastest and most up-to-date steamers. Dining Car Express Trains between principal towns and cities in England and Heysham Harbour. Trains run alongside the Steamers. Luggage transferred free of charge.

DAILY SAILINGS.

| | |
|---|---|
| HEYSHAM - - - - dep. 11.0 p.m. | BELFAST (Donegall Quay), dep. 9.0 p.m. |
| BELFAST (Donegall Quay), arr. 5.30 a.m. | HEYSHAM - - - - arr. 4.25 a.m. |

CHEAP TICKETS.—Holders of Midland Tourist Tickets can obtain at the Company's Belfast and other Offices Cheap Eight-Day Contract Tickets at nominal rates, entitling them to travel over 200 miles of the best Tourist Country in Ireland.

HOTELS.—The Company's Hotels at Belfast and Portrush are close to the railway station. Tariff moderate.

INFORMATION respecting Tickets, Reserved Compartments, Conveyance of Luggage in Advance, BERTHS on Steamers, etc., will be promptly given on application to any Midland Station Master or District Superintendent, or to M. J. ELLIOTT, Superintendent of the Line, Derby.

Derby.

JOHN MATHIESON, General Manager.

TO THE SUNNY SOUTH

by the BRIGHTON & SOUTH COAST RAILWAY.

FREQUENT FAST TRAINS (1, 2, 3 Class), from Victoria, London Bridge, and Kensington (Addison Road),

| To | |
|---|---|
| BRIGHTONHOVEWORTHING | The Pullman Limited Train leaves Victoria 10.5 a.m. and 3.50 p.m. Week-days; 11.5 a.m. on Sundays. Drawing-Room Cars on 11.40 a.m., 1.50, 4.30 and 5.45 p.m. Week-days. |
| SEAFORDEASTBOURNEBEXHILLST. LEONARDSHASTINGS | Best Trains leave Victoria at 9.45 a.m., 12.0 noon, 1.30 and 3.22 p.m., London Bridge 10.5 a.m., 12.5, 2.5 and 5.5 p.m. Week-days; Victoria 9.25 and 11.15 a.m. London Bridge 9.25 a.m. Sundays. Drawing-Room Cars on certain Trains. |
| LITTLEHAMPTONBOGNORHAYLING ISLANDPORTSMOUTHSOUTHSEAISLE OF WIGHT | Best Trains, with Isle of Wight Connection, leave Victoria 10.30, 11.35 a.m., 1.42 and 3.55 p.m., London Bridge 10.25, 11.35 a.m., 1.50, 4.55 p.m. Week-days. |

WEEK-END CHEAP TICKETS, Cheap Day Return and 8 or 15 Day Tickets are issued to all the above-mentioned Seaside places.

Details of Superintendent of Line, L.B. & S.C.R., London Bridge.

FOR HOLIDAY TRIPS

TRY

SPAIN & PORTUGAL.

WEEKLY SAILINGS

From LONDON DOCK to LISBON, GIBRALTAR, MALAGA and CADIZ.

ROUND TRIP ABOUT 32 DAYS.

Fare £15 15s.

For particulars, apply to

JOHN HALL, JUNR., & CO.,

31 & 32, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

SUMMER TRAIN SERVICE.

Commencing July 1st, EXPRESS CORRIDOR, RESTAURANT, and DINING CAR TRAINS—

London and Sheffield in 2 hours 50 minutes, WITHOUT A STOP,
leaving Marylebone at 3.25 and 6.20 p.m.
London and LEICESTER in 1 hour 44 minutes.
NOTTINGHAM in 2 hours 14 minutes.
MANCHESTER in 3 hours 50 minutes.
HARROGATE in 4 hours 35 minutes.

EXPRESS CORRIDOR, BREAKFAST, LUNCHEON and DINING CAR TRAINS are also run between MARYLEBONE and LEEDS, HUDDERSFIELD, HALIFAX, BRADFORD, and other Manufacturing Towns in the MIDLANDS and the North.

Commencing JULY 8th, THROUGH TOURIST EXPRESS TRAINS TO YORK, BRIDLINGTON, SCARBOROUGH and NORTH-EAST COAST, leaving Marylebone at 10.0 a.m. and 12.15 p.m.

CHEAP FAST EXCURSIONS EVERY SATURDAY to CLEETHORPES, YORK, SCARBOROUGH, and NORTH-EAST COAST, LIVERPOOL, SOUTHPORT, ISLE OF MAN, and NORTH-WEST COAST.

For further particulars of Train Service see Company's Time Tables and Bills.

SAM FAY, General Manager.

Digitized by Google

OCEAN CRUISES.

tour described, others are timed to leave Grimsby on July 22, August 5, and August 19. Having regard to the great demand for berths in these comfortable steamers, it is well to book some time in advance to avoid disappointment.

Among other luxurious pleasure cruises to which we would call the reader's attention are those of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company from Southampton to Spain, Portugal, Madeira, or Teneriffe. The comfort of these magnificent vessels is already sufficiently well known, and does not call for further comment. About three weeks is required to complete the round trip, the first-class fares for which are £12 10s. to £14 10s. to Madeira and back, and £13 10s. to £15 10s. to Teneriffe and return. During the summer months tickets are issued to these places, including first-class hotel accommodation, for £21. The cruise is one of the most interesting offered to those in search of novelty. Plenty of time is allowed at the different ports for sight-seeing.

Vigo, the first place we call at on the outward voyage, stands on the shore of one of the finest bays in Spain. It is, of course, a favourite port with the Channel Fleet. The excursions are both numerous and interesting. A short train journey takes the voyageur to Santiago de Compostella, the ancient capital of Galicia, whence a diligence will convey him for half a peseta to the hotel. The cathedral, dating from the year 1078, was much visited in the Middle Ages by pilgrims to the Shrine of St. James, to whom it is dedicated. Moreover, Santiago is the University city of Northern Spain and the seat of the Archbishop. Villagarcia, in Arosa Bay, one of the finest natural harbours in Europe, and Pontevedra, an ancient city with very beautiful surroundings, are both within an easy train journey of Vigo. Or short drives can be taken to Bayona, one of the fashionable watering-places of Spain, situated on the south side of the entrance to Vigo Harbour. Oporto, Braga, and Busaco can each be visited from Vigo, though one would require to make a stay of several days to "do" all these places. From Vigo our floating hotel takes us to Lisbon, the Portuguese capital, which has lately entertained several members of the Royal family, including King Edward. Lisbon is a capital centre from whence to visit Cintra the summer residence of the King of Portugal and Belem with its famous monastery. From Lisbon one has the choice of visiting either Madeira or Teneriffe. Though the scenery of the former is considered more beautiful than that of the latter, nevertheless Teneriffe has, perhaps, a larger number of excursions.

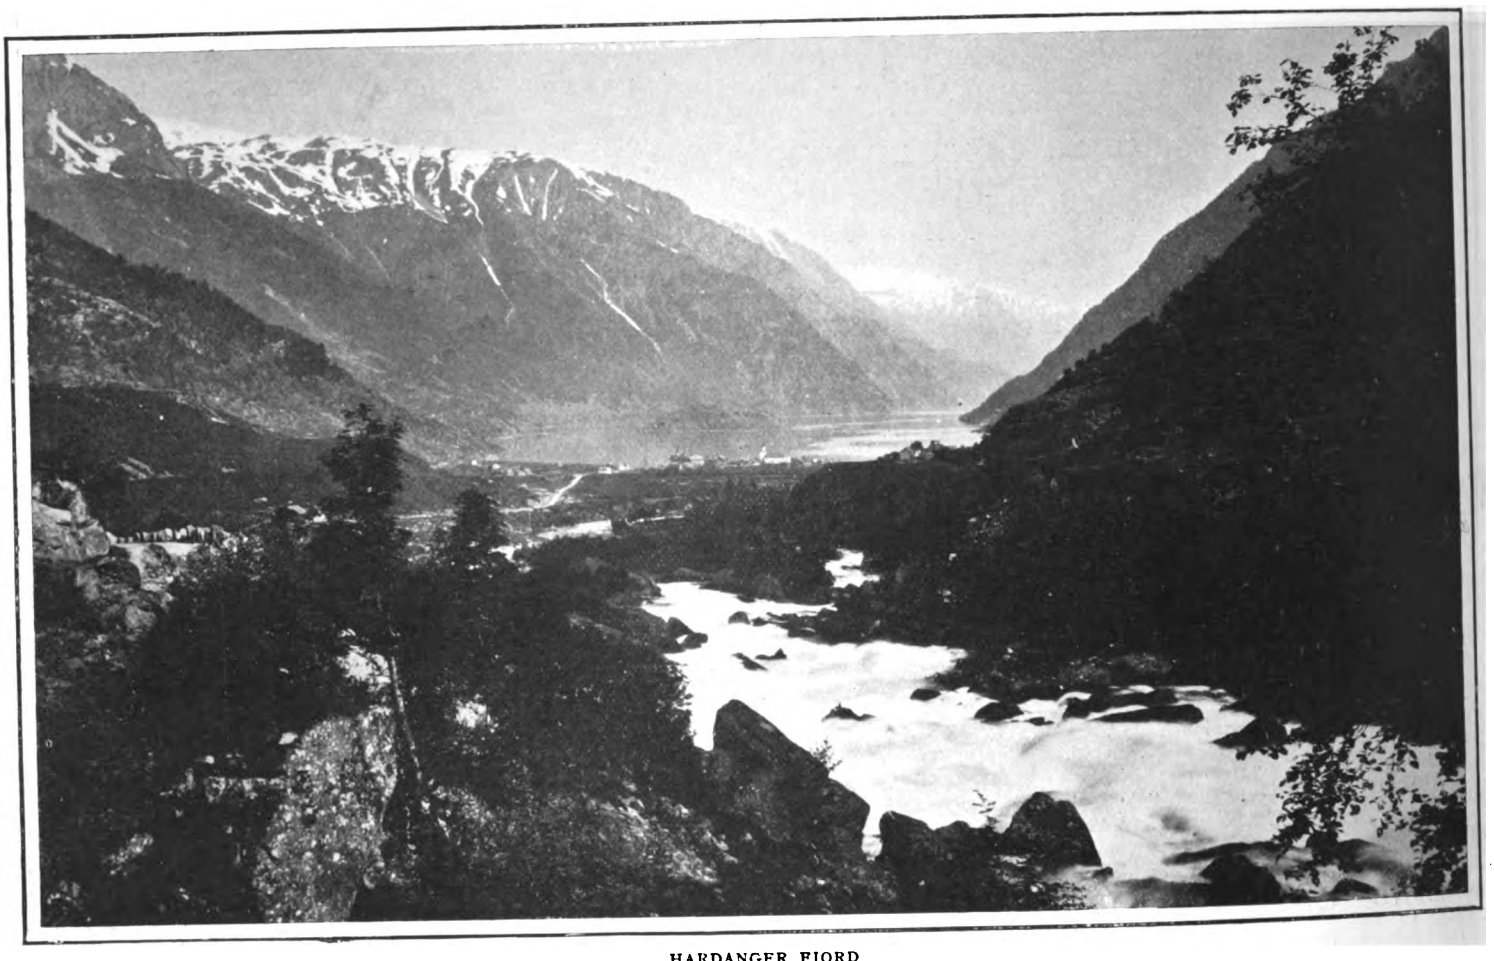
The hotels are excellent in both islands, and those who go to Madeira can choose between the Carmo, the Santa Clara, and the New, under the proprietorship of Messrs. Reid. In Teneriffe there are no fewer than eight hotels at which the company's coupons are available. Loguna, with its two comfortable hotels, the Agure and Continental, is 1,800-ft. above the sea-level, and is an ideal spot for a summer visit. Just now it is pretty full of Spanish society, which migrates there from Santa Cruz to avoid the heat. Tacoronte is also in the hills, and much cooler than those places nearer to the seashore.

Orotava is a convenient starting-place for climbing the Peak, which is 12,000-ft. high. The sights of Madeira are well worth seeing. A charming excursion, which can be made to last two days, is from Funchal to S. Vicente along the coast road. The return journey to Southampton is made in one of the Royal Mail Company's fine River Plate steamers, the route chosen being the same as the outward voyage, and a few hours' stay is made at Lisbon and Vigo.

The two cruises described above afford fair examples of what the holiday-maker can accomplish in from a fortnight to three weeks. Needless to say, there are numerous other companies which make a speciality of this kind of travel, including the Booth Line to the Spanish Coast, the Canaries, and Madeira, the Hamburg-American Line round the world, the Peninsular and Oriental Company's cruises to Norway, etc.

Two more delightful sea cruises to which we would call the reader's attention are those of the Forwood Line to Gibraltar, the coast of Morocco, and the Canary Islands, and the John Hall Line of steamers, which depart weekly from London, sailing down the coast of Spain and Portugal. In the case of the former, the health-seeker gets for his twenty guineas twenty-five days' holiday at sea, with the option of breaking the journey at any of the following interesting ports of call: Larache, Rabat, Tangier, Casa Blanca, Mazagan, Mogador, Las Palmas, Teneriffe, and Madeira.

The John Hall Line, which has recently added a fine new vessel to its fleet, takes the tourist for an eighteen or nineteen days' cruise down the Spanish and Portuguese coasts, calling at Lisbon, Gibraltar, Malaga, and Cadiz. The fares, which do not, of course, include the shore excursions to Belem, Cintra, etc., range from fifteen guineas for the round trip.



HARDANGER FJORD

One of the most magnificent and popular of the many inlets on the Norwegian Coast, where so many tourists spend their summer holidays.

Digitized by Google

Telegrams: "REGENT, LEAMINGTON." Tel. No. 0659.

ORIENT-PACIFIC LINE.

Delightful PLEASURE CRUISES to

NORWAY

by the twin-screw s.s. OPHIR, 6,814 tons, 10,000 h.p.

SAILINGS, July 8, 22, August 5, 19.

13 DAYS FOR £12 12 0

AND UPWARDS.

Managers, F. GREEN & Co., and ANDERSON, ANDERSON & Co., Fenchurch Avenue. For passage apply to the latter firm at 5, Fenchurch Avenue, E.C.; or to the West End Branch Office, 28, Cockspur Street, S.W.

Cambrian Railways.

THE BRITISH RIVIERA.

Magnificent Sea and Mountain Scenery, combined with bracing Climate. The Temperature in Winter and Spring is higher than that of most Watering Places in the South and West of England. Excellent Golf Links adjacent to the Railway.

Bathing, Coaching, Boating, Fishing (Sea, River, Lake), Golfing, Mountaineering.

TOURIST, WEEK END AND TEN DAYS' TICKETS throughout the year.

Delightful Spring, Summer and Winter Resorts.

- Aberystwyth.
- Barmouth.
- Aberdovey.
- Dolgelley.
- Borth. Towyn.
- Fairbourne.
- Harlech.
- Criccieth.
- Pwllheli.

DAILY EXPRESS TRAIN SERVICE, LONDON, BIRMINGHAM, MANCHESTER, LIVERPOOL, LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, etc., to the CAMBRIAN COAST.

Guides, Time Books, and all information at the London Offices of the L. & N.W. and G.W. Cos., and at the undermentioned District Offices of the Company, or from Mr. W. H. GOUGH, Traffic Superintendent, Oswestry.

SHEFFIELD—Dean & Dawson, 7, Haymarket.
BRADFORD—Dean & Dawson, 83, Market St.
OLDHAM—Mr. L. R. Stanton, 112, Union Street.
MANCHESTER—45, Piccadilly.
LIVERPOOL & DISTRICT—108, Victoria Rd., New Brighton, Birkenhead.
CARDIFF—The Exchange.
BIRMINGHAM—137, Corporation St.

C. S. DENNISS, Secretary and General Manager.

LEAMINGTON SPA.

REGENT HOTEL.

ENTIRELY RECONSTRUCTED.

DECORATIONS BY MAPLE.

Electric Light, Telephones in Every Room. Lift.

Garage and Resident Engineer. Stabling for 90 Horses.

APPLY FOR TARIFF.

Llangammarch Wells,

CENTRAL WALES.

(The British Nauheim.)

An Ideal Spa for the Treatment of Heart Disease, Gout, and Rheumatism.

THE LAKE HOTEL

A first-class Hotel situated in extensive Private Grounds and lighted throughout with Electricity.

Telegraphic Address: "BARIUM," LLANGAMMARCH WELLS. Apply MANAGEMENT.

GOLF CLUB WITHIN FIVE MINUTES' WALK.

LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

SHORTEST, QUICKEST ROUTE FOR

ENGLAND'S BEST SEASIDE AND INLAND RESORTS.

CORRIDOR TRAINS.

Breakfast, Luncheon, and Dining Cars,
1st, 2nd and 3rd Class, in principal services.

PULLMAN CARS

TOURIST, EXCURSION, WEEK-END, AND CIRCULAR TOUR TICKETS issued from Waterloo Station. For particulars, see Programmes, &c.

FREE!! Official Illustrated Guide and List of Hotels, Lodgings, Apartments, etc., over 250 pages and 100 illustrations, printed on art paper, including full particulars of Golf Links, "free" upon application at any of the Company's London Offices; or from Mr. HENRY HOLMES, Superintendent of the Line, Waterloo Station, LONDON, S.E. FREE!!

MOST COMFORTABLE ROUTE FOR

HEALTH AND PLEASURE.

Splendid Golf Links.

CHARMING RAIL & COACH TRIPS.

Lavatory Compartments.
Invalid, Saloon, and Family Carriages provided.

CHAS. J. OWENS, General Manager.

Digitized by Google

Up the Thames.

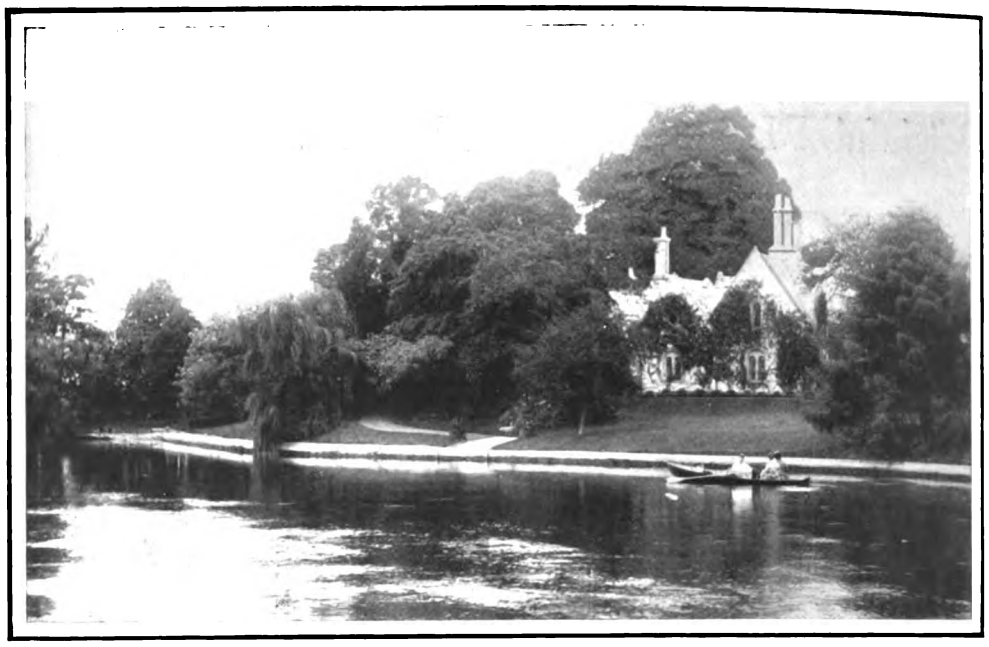
IT is difficult to say anything new about the Thames. In verse and prose the praises of this river, "most loved of all the Ocean's sons," have been sung for centuries, and will be sung so long as men have love of Nature and beauty in their composition. What can compare with the capriciousness of the Thames? Though it wind and curve, widen and straiten, and glide at its own sweet will, nothing but the beautiful, nothing but the picturesquely effective, is tolerated. Even the locks and weirs, artificial contrivances though they be, are in tone subdued to the harmonious whole, and become invested with something of the glamour, something of the picturesqueness, of the old stream; and, following the law of natural affinities, the fair river attracts the fair sex. There are few places in which women look more fascinating or more lovely than on the river, and few sports lend to men the grace of form and lissomness of movement that sculling gives.

As a holiday resort the Thames has been underrated, and fearful tales of the cost of living and the number of "extras" on hotel bills have frightened the timid and those of small means; but these are exaggerations. A week upon the river can be spent as inexpensively as at any seaside place, and in addition there is a restful calm about the river which is not to be found at many fashionable holiday resorts. We have in previous years described various ways in which the Thames may be enjoyed. This year we propose to open up what we think will be new ground for some readers, and describe a launch trip which may be taken from Kingston to Oxford and back, a trip which only requires six days' absence from the office, and may be made inexpensively. There are public launches running in which the fares are very reasonable, or a party of six or seven making the trip at the same time and sharing the expenses can hire a small launch and be independent of time-tables and fixed stopping-places.

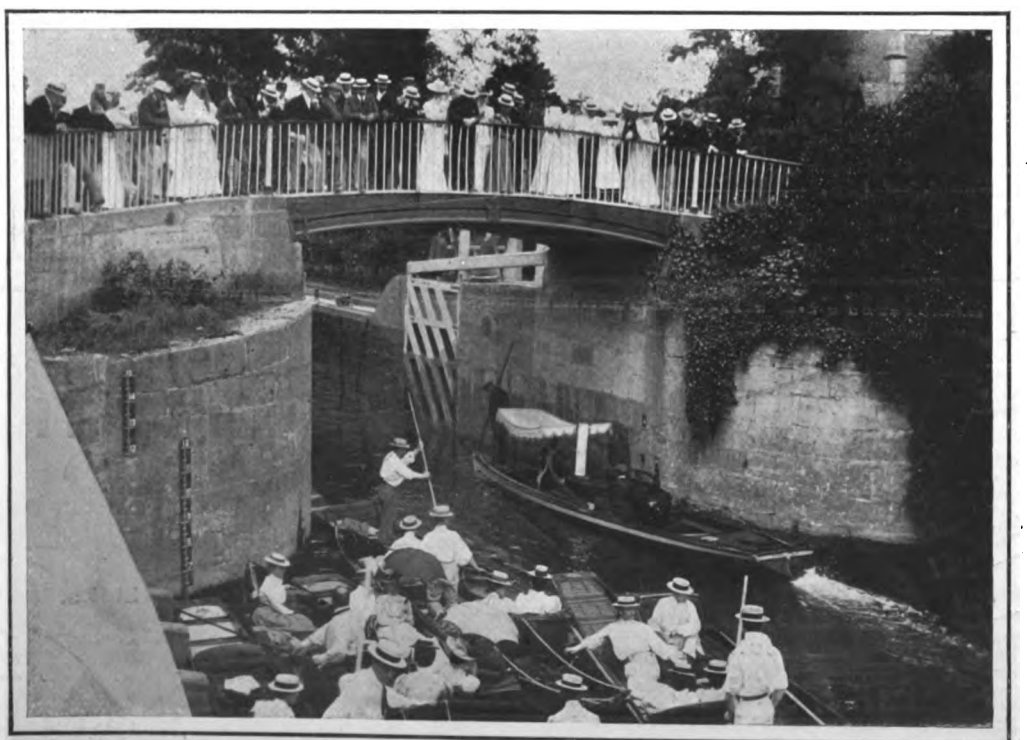
The first few miles of the river up from Kingston do not offer anything special in the way of scenery or sites of historical interest, and it is not until we get into the reach below Hampton Court that we begin to feel at home, though the sight of the Swan at Thames Ditton may call up memories of Theodore Hook and the stanzas he composed in its honour while lying in a punt one day. Past the grand pile of Hampton Court and the well-known Garrick Villa, through Sunbury, Walton-on-Thames, and Shepperton, we come to Weybridge, where many Royalties have sojourned, and where in the crypt of a small Roman Catholic cathedral the remains of Louis Philippe rested until they could be taken to France. The flat meadow-land around Chertsey does not bid us stay, and we pass Laleham and Penton Hook rapidly, for the luncheon hour is approaching, and we know of the Packhorse at Staines, where an excellent cold collation will be awaiting us.



MAGNA CHARTA ISLAND.

In a Gothic cottage here is to be seen a stone bearing an inscription setting forth that King John signed Magna Charta on that island.

Staines is a very favourite up-river resort, and there is excellent fishing to be obtained there, too. The theatrical profession has always been fond of Staines, and at one time John Emery, the famous "Farmer Ashfield," was landlord of an inn there. From here up to Windsor the scenery is perfect. Along by Runnymede, the historic scene of the signing of the Magna Charta, through Old Windsor Lock to Datchet Mead, the scene of Sir John Falstaff's involuntary bath, we are soon in the Royal borough. It cannot but be the wish of all to visit the Castle. Again afloat, we negotiate Boveney Lock, are past Surley, where once the Eton boys were wont to adjourn, and the ancient church of Bray slips by and we are in Maidenhead, the great centre for Sunday boating. A very little further on, at Cookham, we may end the first day's journey, and after seeing our launch safely bestowed betake ourselves to the Crown Hotel, where good fare and a good bed are ours to command.



BOULTER'S ON ASCOT SUNDAY.

The scene at Boulter's Lock on any fine Sunday afternoon is animated, but on Ascot Sunday the crush is abnormal, and the scene one of the gayest that can be imagined.

The early stages of the second day's trip take us past Marlow and Bisham, famous for its old Priory, Hurley, and Medmenham, an old-world place that seems even in these days as if it recked not of telegraphs, telephones, electric trams, and motor-cars. But we will not land, lest we be disappointed. Our goal is Henley, the only Henley, Henley of the regatta, where we will take an early luncheon —not that the time for it has come, but rather because we want an excuse to stop for a while to see the town, the oldest, we are told, in Oxfordshire.

From Henley up to Streatley is a stage that must be made slowly, for few parts of the river equal, and none surpasses, it in beauty. To name but a few of the places in this stretch of water is to call up visions of scenery and loveliness, and it is only to be regretted that useful town though it be, Reading should be perched in the middle to interrupt the perfectness of this part of the river. Shiplake and Sonning below the biscuit town, and Maple-durham, Pangbourne, Basildon, and Goring above, are all radiant in summer sunshine, and no one who sees them can wonder at the attraction they have always had for artists.

Digitized by Google

GREAT NORTHERN & NORTH EASTERN RAILWAYS.

"Twixt Humber & Tweed"

SPLENDID CLIFFS & SANDS, BRACING MOORS, LOVELY DALES.

CHEAP FARES FAST TRAINS

APPLY TO CHIEF PASSENGER AGENT G.N.R. KING'S CROSS, OR ANY G.N. AGENT FOR FURTHER INFORMATION.

---

To H.M. THE KING.

JOHN TIMS & SONS,

Skiff, Punt and Canoe Builders,

STAINES & READING.

Boats of every description for Sale or Hire, or Built to order.

GOOD DRESSING ROOMS.
LADIES' WAITING ROOMS.

Telephone:
No. 3 STAINES and No. 151 READING.

---

AUSTRIA.

IDEAL HEALTH RESORTS

FOR

VISITORS and TOURISTS, WINTER and SUMMER.

Unique Scenery, Mountains and Lakes.
Splendid Railway Service.
Luxurious Hotel Accommodation.

Send Name and Address or Call for

FREE { HANDBOOKS, VIEWS, HOTEL, RAILWAY SERVICE, AND ALL NECESSARY INFORMATION } FREE

TOURS ARRANGED AT REDUCED RATES.

The Austrian Travel and Information Bureau
(Under the direction of the I.R. Austrian Railway Ministry),
86, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.

---

CARLSBAD

(In Bohemia).

The Pearl of the Bohemian Spas.

Pamphlet, Tariff, and every information free, at the AUSTRIAN TRAVEL BUREAU,
86, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.

---

Great Northern Railway

(IRELAND).

THE MAIL AND EXPRESS ROUTE, ENGLAND WITH BELFAST AND THE NORTH OF IRELAND, VIA HOLYHEAD AND KINGSTOWN.

Trains also run in connection with the Express Services via Holyhead and Dublin (North Wall), and Holyhead and Greenore.

FOUR CROSS-CHANNEL SERVICES DAILY.

Breakfast and Dining Cars are run between Dublin and Belfast, and between Belfast and Greenore.

MOUNTAIN, LOUGH, RIVER, AND SEA. GOLFING, FISHING, COACHING, CYCLING.

PLACES OF RESORT.

BUNDORAN (on the Atlantic Coast).—Famed Health Resort; within easy reach are Loughs Melvin and Erne. Sea Bathing. Golf (18-hole Course). Fishing.

ROSAPENNA.—Donegal Highlands; Mountain and Lake Scenery. Motor Coaches ply between Rosapenna and Strabane Railway Station. Golf (18-hole Course). Fishing.

PORTSALON (Head of Lough Swilly).—Fishing and Boating. Golf (18-hole Course).

ROSTREVOR and WARRENPOINT.—On Carlingford Lough. Mourne Mountains District. Balmy and restorative climate.

BOYNE VALLEY.—Famed River Excursions. Drives through Historical and Antiquarian Districts.

ENNISKILLEN.—Island Town. Lake Fishing, Boating, etc.

DONEGAL, KILLIBEGS, Etc.

HOTELS.

The Company own and manage Hotels at Bundoran, Rostrevor, and Warrenpoint.

Illustrated Guides sent on application to the Superintendent of the Line, Amiens Street, Dublin; or at the Company's London Office, 2, Charing Cross.

Dublin, 1905. HENRY PLEWS, General Manager.

---

Patronized by H.M. The King.

DOVERCOURT BAY, ESSEX,

HOTEL ALEXANDRA.

The Finest Health and Pleasure Resort on the East Coast. Facing the Sea. Bracing Air. Delightful Climate. The Hotel, which has recently been visited by H.M. KING, is luxuriously Furnished. Electric Light. Excellent Cuisine. Tennis, Croquet. Motor Garage and Pit. 1 hour 40 minutes express from London.

For Illustrated Tariff, apply A. H. THIEM, Proprietor.

---

WHERE TO SPEND A PLEASANT DAY ON THE RIVER,

The Bridge House Hotel,

STAINES.

GOOD CATERING, BOATING, MOTORING, FISHING, ETC.

"THE WHITE LADIES' ORCHESTRA"
(PRINCIPAL, MLLE. BERGER) will Play on the Lawn every Saturday and Sunday during the Season.

TEAS SERVED ON LAWN.

Proprietor - - TOM TAYLOR.

---

Pack Horse Hotel

(ON THE RIVER BANK), STAINES.

LICENSED PRIOR TO 1629.

Telephone: No. 041 Staines.

E. H. BLAMEY, Proprietor.

---

HEREFORD.

THE CENTRE OF THE LOVELY WYE VALLEY

An Ideal Holiday Resort.
Splendid Scenery, Boating, Motoring, and Fishing.
Tourist Tickets from all parts.

All Information on application to the TOWN CLERK.

---

HOLIDAYS ON THE RHINE.

BY THE
Royal British Mail Route,
VIA
HARWICH and HOOK OF HOLLAND
Daily (Sundays included).
Send post-card to the Continental Manager, G.E.R., Liverpool Street Station, London, E.C., for descriptive illustrated pamphlet (free).

---

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
The charmingly situated Seaside Resort on the Dorsetshire Coast.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Unequalled for its Marine and Land Excursions. Golfing and Fishing.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Beautifully Illustrated Guides sent free of charge by the Town Clerk, on receipt of cost of postage, 3d.

Digitized by Google

UP THE THAMES.

PENTON HOOK, ABOVE THE LOCK.

On the Surrey shore there is a large camping ground which is well patronised during the summer months, and the long horseshoe bend of the river above the lock is one of the favourite fishing grounds on the Thames.

One remembers Mr. Leslie's quaint plaint about the appearance of Streatley, "the village swarms with geniuses and their æsthetically-dressed wives."

Our second day's journey is drawing to a close, and Wallingford, our halting-place, lies just beyond the lock. And in the twilight we creep silently past the thick overhanging trees and undergrowth, so that we may not disturb the dream of bliss in the boats moored in their shelter. Nature knows well the kind of leafy arbours young lovers most delight in.

Space is short, and the last stage of our 91-mile journey must be briefly described. But in performance, let it not be hastily passed over, for from Wallingford up to Oxford the river assumes a character it has not in the lower reaches. There is an air of repose, of "settled quiet content," which makes this part of the river most acceptable to those in search of rest. Without starting too early it is possible to be in Oxford by midday, and we may spend twenty-four hours before beginning the return journey down stream.

SONNING LOCK FROM BELOW.

Sonning, whether it was or was not the seat of a bishopric in the olden days, is now one of the most beautiful villages on the banks of the Thames, and the visitor who would do justice to its beauty must leave the water and wander among the streets and byeways in the neighbourhood.

Digitized by Google

4d per packet

BIS PAK

Note this seal on every packet.

CARR'S CLUB CHEESE BISCUITS

Are superior Cheese Sandwiches of piquant flavour. Unique Biscuits—specially suitable for dinners, luncheons and family use. In addition to their valuable dietetic properties, these Biscuits always retain an appetizing crispness in

The Wonderful Sealed Packet

in which they are now sold. This packet keeps out all air and damp, and preserves in perfection the quality of the contents. Order from your grocer to-day and make sure of the Seal.

CARR & Co., Ltd.,
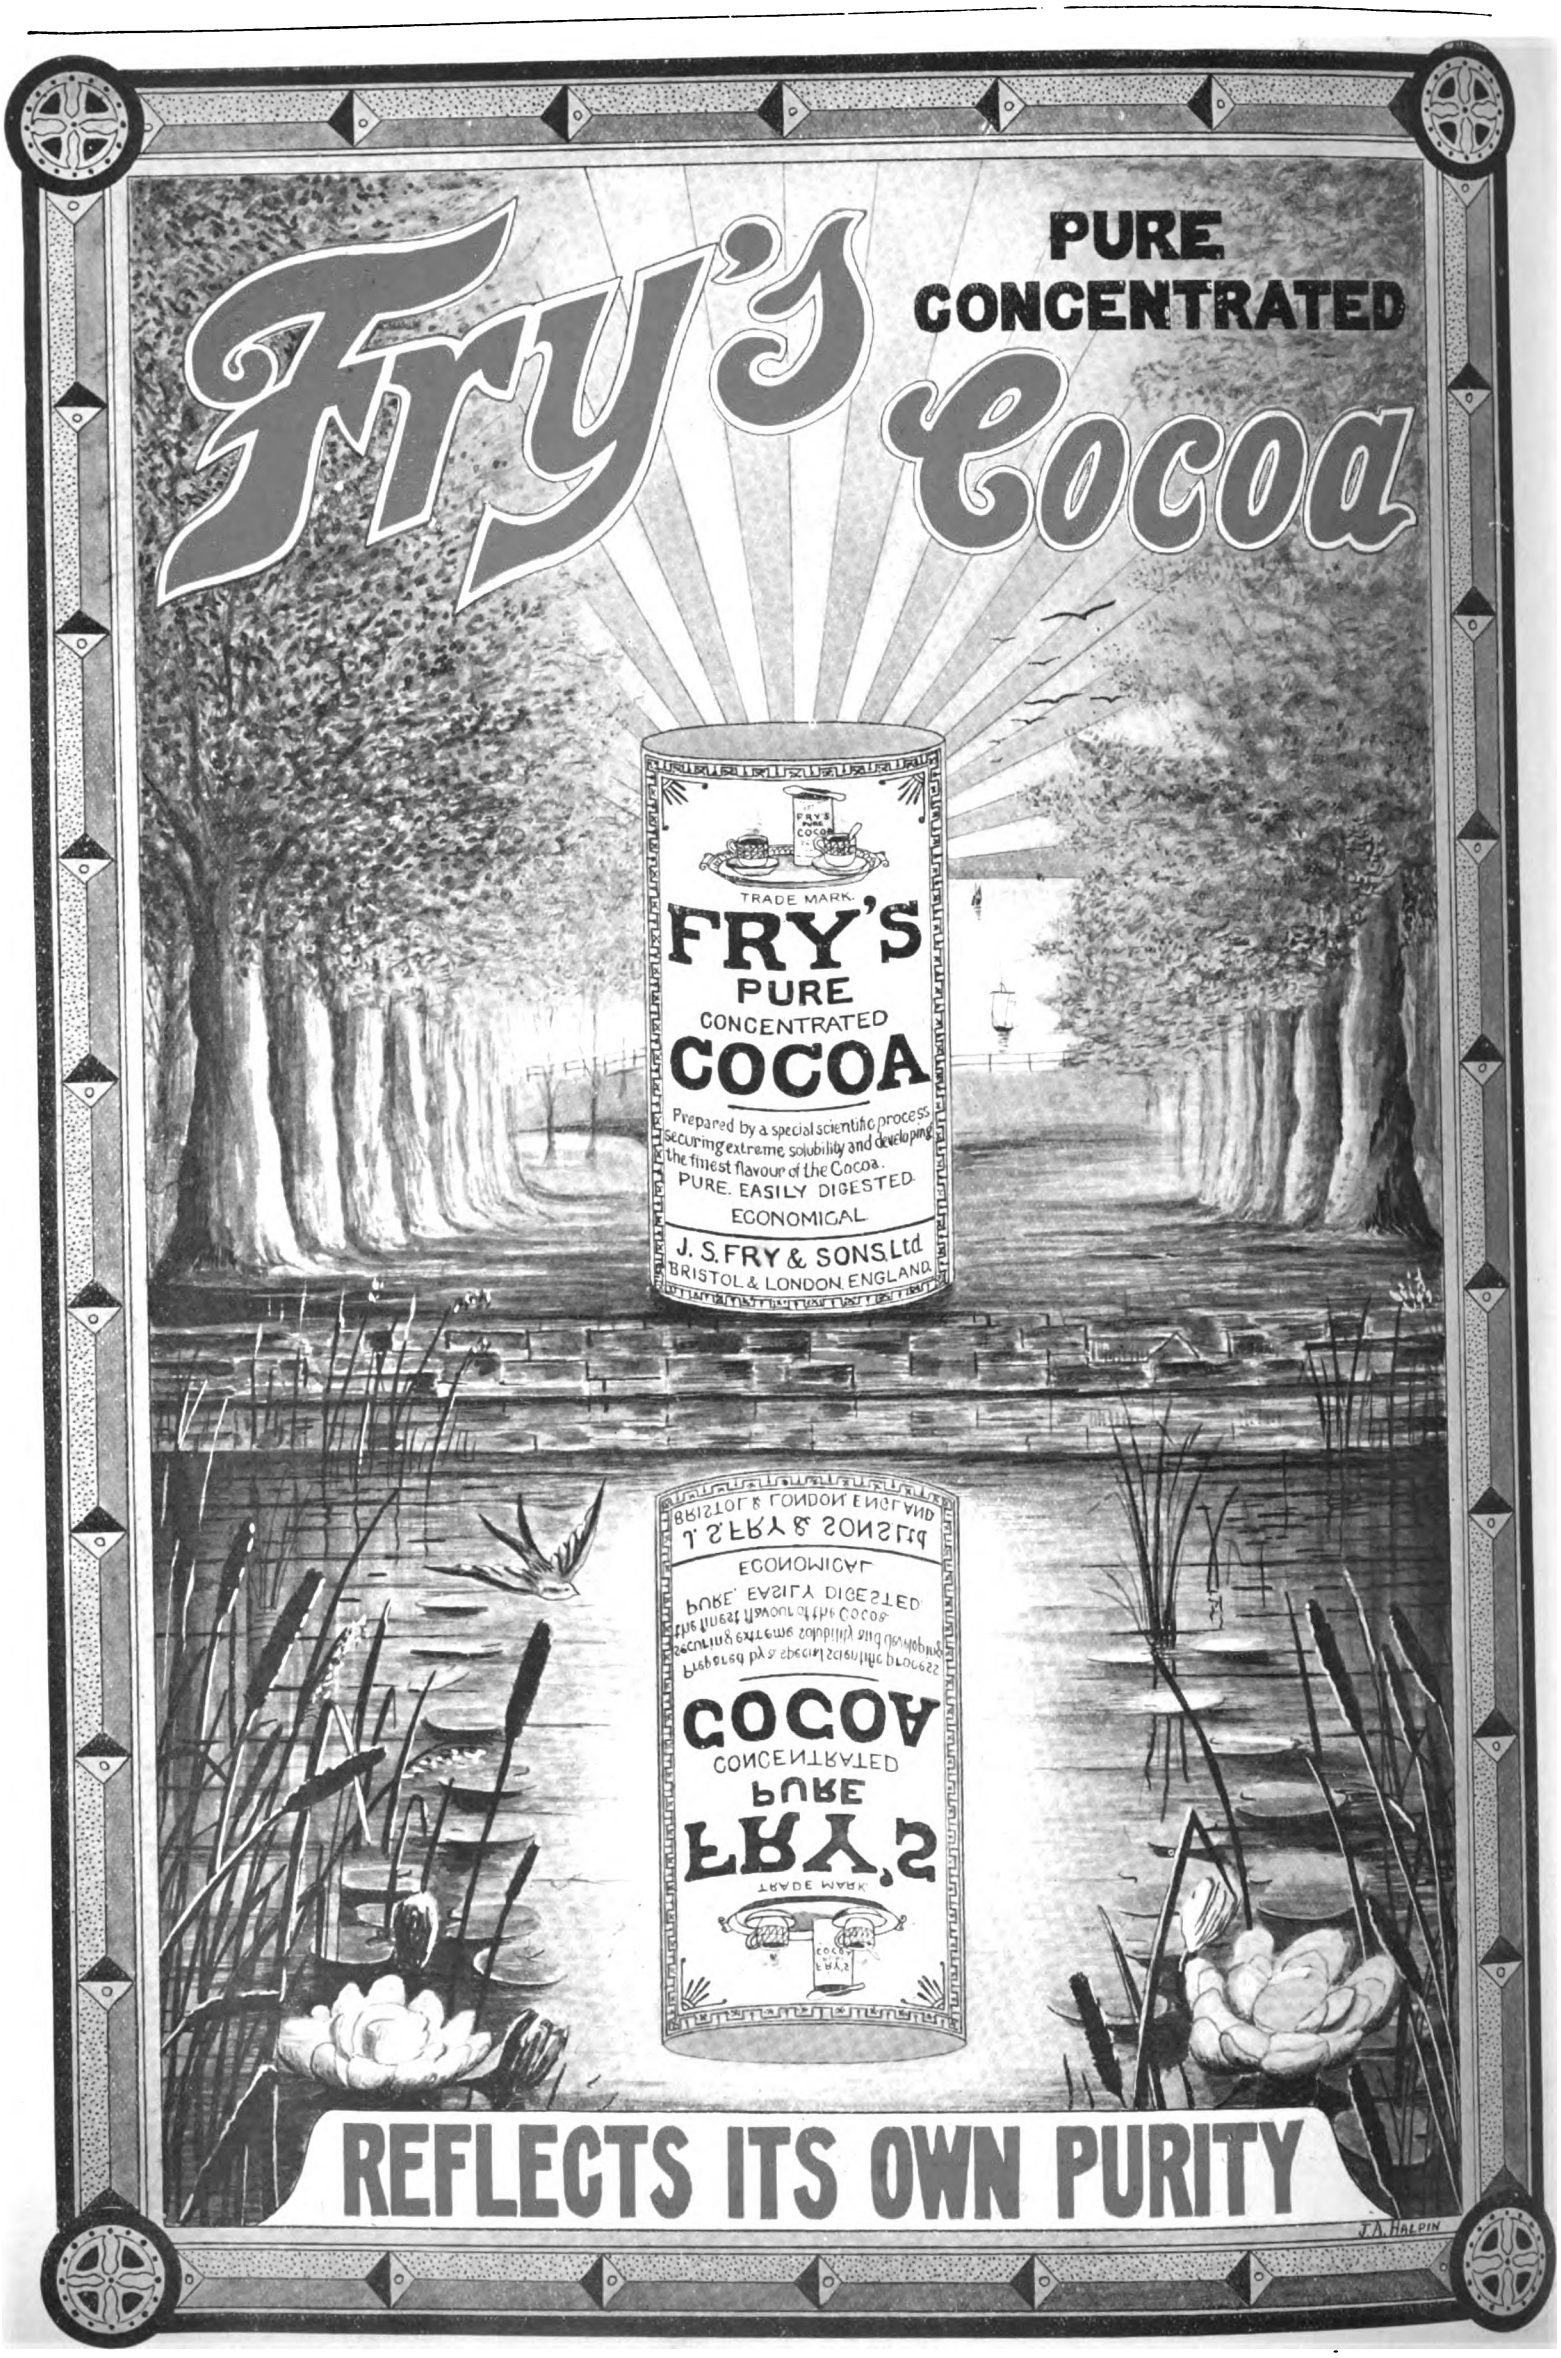
CARLISLE.

Purveyors to His Majesty the King.

Digitized by Google



Digitized by Google

Plays and Players.

Bassano.

MISS MABEL LOVE.

The programme at the Coliseum will be considerably strengthened shortly, when Miss Love joins the company, appearing in one of the now universally popular song-scenas which have proved so strong an attraction at the new variety theatre.

Digitized by Google

More Green-room Gossips.

XXVI.—WITH Mr. HUBERT CARTER.

"Of Memory."

A TALL man of commanding presence and the frame of an athlete, with a clear-cut face and a voice full of musical cadences, a man, in fine, at whom one instinctively looks twice, such is Mr. Hubert Carter. When added to this natural groundwork we have the full war paint of Othello, or the wondrous beard and garb of Silvio de Feltre in "Renaissance," he becomes, off the stage, a figure to well-nigh overawe the mere humdrum personage who has the privilege of being admitted to his presence. And yet he is the most modest of men. For fifteen years he has lived in the comparative obscurity of provincial companies, playing any and every part to acquire experience and working hard at his profession, not as a dilettante or a mere amateur, but as a serious-minded actor, bent upon learning all that shall equip him for the better exposition of those characters which fall to his lot.

Among a pile of old playbills through which I was looking the other day, I came across one for the Colosseum, Dudley, for the week beginning January 29, 1894. At first glance it appeared to have but little of interest in it. The repertoire was mainly Shakespearian, the company was Mr. Edmund Tearle's, and I had almost passed it over, when the name "Hubert Carter" caught my eye. First as King Claudius in "Hamlet," next as Appius Claudius in "Virginius," next as Iago in "Othello," next as Marc Anthony in "Julius Cæsar," next as Timarch in "Ingomar," and finally as Henry of Buckingham in "Richard III." This set me thinking. Mr. Carter is not such a newcomer as most of the London critics have imagined, if eleven years ago he was playing such parts as these. As I found when I came to talk to him, it was in 1890 that his name first shone in a playbill in Howard and Wyndham's company, then playing "The Lady of the Lake," and even before that he had been in training, by memorising anything and everything from Scott to Mrs. Hemans.

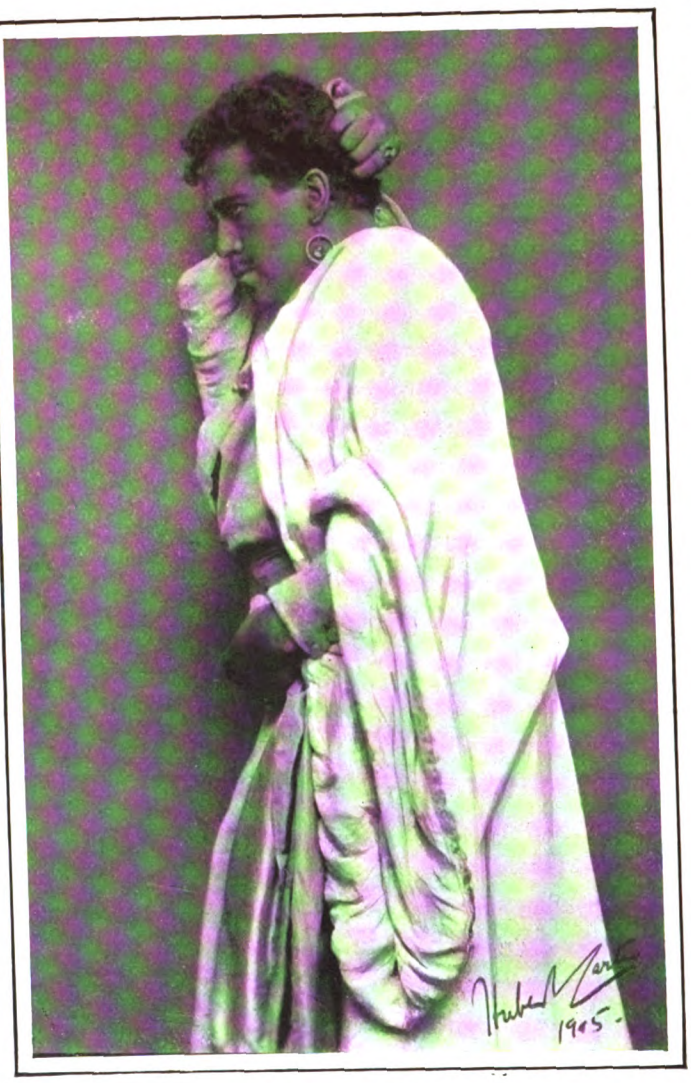
"I find learning a part very easy," he said in reply to my question; "I read it through a few times, and it just comes to me. It has always been the same. When I was twelve I learned one thousand lines of Scott off by heart, by way of amusement and without any very great effort."

"Do you find verse or blank verse or prose easiest to learn?"

"It all depends on the quality. Shakespearian blank verse is wonderfully easy to memorise. There is a rhythm and a swing to it which seems to fix it without any effort in the mind, whereas the simplest prose of some writers is almost impossible to carry in the memory, simply because it has little or no sequence, no under-current as it were, to carry the thought forward to the second phrase while the tongue is uttering the first."

"But playing so many parts as you do, have you never found your memory playing you tricks?"

"No, I think not. On one or two occasions it has stood me in very good stead. For instance, there is a little play of mine called 'Punchinello,' which has already been played in the suburbs and in the provinces, and which I hope to get produced in London. I was crossing to Jersey once in the 'Ibex,' the vessel which, as you may remember, went down, and with her went all my luggage, including the trunk in which was the precious manuscript of my play. By alternately bribing and threatening one of the divers at work on the wreck, I got my box up at last, but the manuscript, although intact, was very faded. Miss Ellen Terry had given me an appointment to read the play to her, and there was no time to get it copied out. So I took the long-buried papers with me, and principally by remembering the play read it to her, and so satisfied her with its possibilities that she accepted it."



MR. HUBERT CARTER
As Othello in the recent revival of the famous Shakespearian tragedy.
(From a photograph by Lizzie Caswall-Smith.)

Mr. Carter must be almost the only one of the younger generation of prominent actors who owes nothing to Mr. F. R. Benson. He has played in many stock companies, and under many managements, but never in the famous organisation which a perfervid admirer of Mr. Benson's has described as "the cradle of the modern theatre." For some years Mr. Carter was leading man in Miss Ellen Terry's company, and with Mr. Poel of the Elizabethan Stage Society he scored his first real success in London in the part of Dr. Faustus in Marlowe's peculiar play of that name. He has played in almost every sphere of dramatic art, from Shakespeare to pantomime, but musical comedy so far has not come his way.

"Not but that I wouldn't play in musical comedy if I got the chance," he told me. "Othello, of course, is a splendid part, but it is not the sort of part you want to go through more than twice a day. It takes it out of you tremendously. I remember coming off one night in a terrible perspiration and meeting Mr. J. H. Barnes. 'You remind me,' he said, 'of Irving's criticism of Mansfield as Richard III. One night Mansfield was playing the part in London, and he asked Irving to go and see him and tell him afterwards what he thought of the performance. And all Irving would say to him was, "You do sweat."' But I expect you have heard the story before."

I pressed Mr. Carter for more reminiscences, and he gave me one which, as he laughingly said, showed that on one occasion at least he had suffered from absence of mind, if not of memory.

It was when he was touring in the United States, and in travelling from one town to another he comfortably ensconced himself in one train, the wrong one, while his luggage and the rest of the company went on in another, the right one. Thinking that his companions would be late for the train, he asked a porter when they were expected, and received the startling reply that they had already gone. He immediately went to the station-master and explained things, saying that he must reach —— that night.

"You can't," was the reply. "There's no train, except a goods, which will pass here in a quarter of an hour. If you like to board that you can." And when the goods train passed through Mr. Carter swung himself on to the last waggon, and found himself staring down the barrel of a revolver. And even when he had explained that he was only a play actor and not a daring train robber, the conductor continued to regard him with suspicion until he disembarked at the required station, just in time to get to the theatre for the performance.

"But that is almost the only time I can remember," he said, in conclusion. "Touring in the provinces, one gets so accustomed to travelling that mistakes are rare, even with the most absent-minded beggars. And the thought of that revolver will make me think twice about boarding another goods train, especially in the United States."

F. E. R.

Digitized by Google

"AN OLD FORMULA REVIVED"

Carlin's
'Calross'
Mixture

A Blend of the choicest tobaccos.
Exquisite flavour & delicate aroma.
Exceptionally cool smoking.
Guaranteed absolutely pure.

Sold by leading tobacconists,
& Sole Proprietors.

C.A. CARLIN & Co. 177 PICCADILLY

¼LB. SAMPLE TIN 2/6 POST FREE

THE BRITISH MAID IS MATCHLESS!! and the "MATCHLESS" METAL POLISH is BRITISH MADE.

Best British Brass Brightener

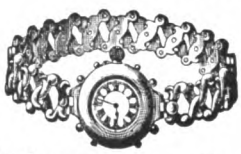
Manufacturers, THE MATCHLESS METAL POLISH Co. Ltd. Liverpool.

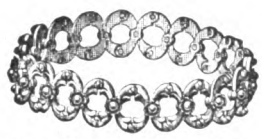
When selecting from your Jewellers a Patent

GOLD "SELF-CLOSING" BRACELET

be SURE that you get

SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD'S.





THE ORIGINAL MAKE, UNSURPASSED FOR BEAUTY OF DESIGNS, WORKMANSHIP AND FINISH.

N.B.—These Bracelets have for some time been stamped inside with S. & S.'s Trade Mark "FLEXINE."

Wholesale only—SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD, LTD., LONDON.

WELLINGTON PLATES.

Coated with the well-known and popular "WELLINGTON" Emulsions.

SPEEDY
ISO SPEEDY LANDSCAPE LANTERN
ORTHO PROCESS.

Manufacturers:
Wellington & Ward,
Elstree, Herts.

Benger's Food

Restful Nights.

Sleep comes most readily when there is no digestive disturbance.

Benger's Food is so easy of assimilation that it is absorbed by the most delicate without the slightest irritation. Infants thrive on "Bengers," and delicate and aged persons enjoy it, deriving comfort and nourishment when other foods disagree.

The ILLUSTRATED MEDICAL NEWS says—"Infants do remarkably well on it, and it is most suitable for many conditions of adults and old people. There is certainly a great future before it."

Benger's Food is sold in Tins by Chemists, etc., everywhere.

THE "AQUASCUTUM" COAT

BY ROYAL WARRANT TO HIS MAJESTY THE KING
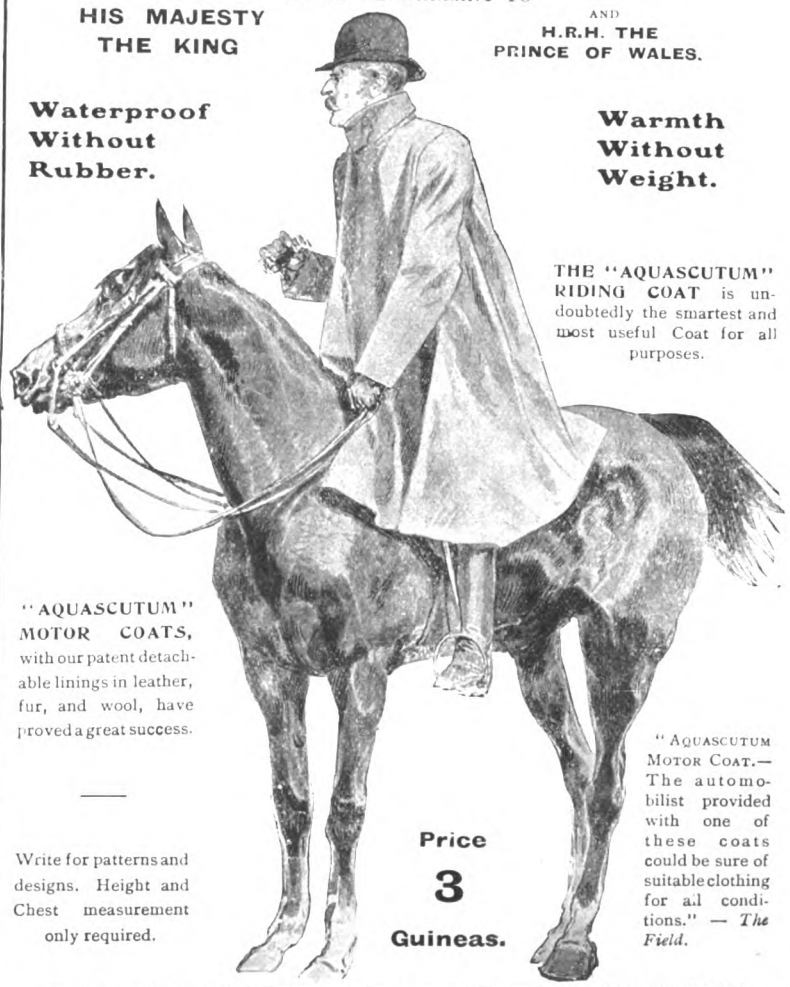
AND
H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.

Waterproof Without Rubber.

Warmth Without Weight.



THE "AQUASCUTUM" RIDING COAT is undoubtedly the smartest and most useful Coat for all purposes.

"AQUASCUTUM" MOTOR COATS, with our patent detachable linings in leather, fur, and wool, have proved a great success.

Write for patterns and designs. Height and Chest measurement only required.

Price 3 Guineas.

"AQUASCUTUM MOTOR COAT.—The automobilist provided with one of these coats could be sure of suitable clothing for all conditions." — The Field.

Insist on seeing the label. Every genuine garment bears an "Aquascutum" label.

AQUASCUTUM, Ltd., 100, REGENT STREET, W.

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

SIR CHARLES LAWSON, who has just published with Messrs. Swan Sonnenschein a book of "Memories of Madras," is known in England by his "Private Life of Warren Hastings" and other books, and better known (as is the way with the men who do our work abroad) in India, where he has been secretary to the Madras Chamber of Commerce, and editor in succession of the Madras Daily News, the Madras Times, and the Madras Mail. It will be remembered that it was he who was chosen to present the Madras Jubilee Address to Queen Victoria at the Jubilee of 1887.

Memories of Madras.

We would willingly devote more space than we have at command to Sir Charles Lawson's extremely interesting work. Beginning with the founders of Fort St. George, early in the seventeenth century, he touches on successive points of the history of Madras, Thomas Pitt, the purchaser of the famous "Pitt" diamond (of which illustrations are given), Lord Macartney and Coote, Wellesley and Wellington, and so forth; and everything is alive with human interest, which should make it acceptable even to the too many who care nothing for some of the most fascinating stories in English history. Sir Charles Lawson's book is lavishly illustrated with portraits, reproductions of old prints, and is full of interesting matter not easily met with elsewhere.

* * *

MR. ALEXANDER ULAR, the author of "Russia from Within" (Heinemann), has penned a very temperate but very damning indictment against the autocracy, which is even now, perhaps, trembling to a fall. His pages, he thinks, will come as a shock to some very special friends of Russia. Hardly, perhaps, in this country, where we have no reason for taking anything but an unprejudiced view of the state of affairs in that great and heroic but unhappy country. Mr. Ular's book is one to be recommended to all who want, so to speak, to begin at the beginning; to learn, first of all, the facts—historical, political, social, and economic—governing the present movement towards freedom. For all the solidity of its material, the book makes excellent reading. After a preface devoted to the assassination of M. Plehve and the antecedents of the revolution, Mr. Ular divides his work into four chapters—the Dynasty and the Court, in which he traces the story of the present (purely German) dynasty, from Peter III. and Paul I. to the present Emperor and Grand Dukes; the advent of the Bureaucracy, owing to the decline of the Old Nobility, which made such a hash of many things, the Crimean War, for example; the régime of Witte, with its economic upheaval, decay of industry, and increase of distress; and, finally, the national awakening. The book is plain-spoken, but without being merely scandalous.

Russia from Within.

* * *

THE name of Captain Horace Hayes needs no recommendation, and when Mrs. Hayes writes of her late husband, "I feel that all horse-loving sojourners in the East will share my sorrow that such a valuable life has ended," she puts the truth but mildly. "Training and Horse Management in India" was the first book Captain Hayes ever wrote. Thirty years later he was correcting the proofs of the sixth edition when his end came. Of the book itself little need be said now. It has, ever since its appearance, been the indispensable vade mecum of all horse-owners in India—and that means the whole of the white population. Mr. Harry Abbott writes that he can safely say that he owes his many successes on the Indian Turf to carefully following its sound precepts; and scores of others could say the same. The present edition omits the table of weights for age and class, etc.; but the omission is to be repaired in the future editions, which will certainly be called for.

Horses in India.

* * *

THE readable and interesting "History of the Royal Academy," lately published by Mr. John Murray, is no mere book of reference, but will doubtless find a place in the library of every true lover of Art on both sides of the Atlantic. It also forms a very appropriate memorial of that delightful painter, the late J. E. Hodgson, R.A., who, with Mr. F. A. Eaton, the energetic and popular secretary of the Royal Academy, is responsible for its compilation. The portraits and illustrations, as might be expected, are excellent. To the extra-illustrator such a book as this will, indeed, be a veritable boon, and one can only regret that the authors of the work stop short on the threshold of the Victorian era. Its continuation down to the present day will assuredly be eagerly looked for.

The Royal Academy.

MR. THOMAS PITT

Governor of Fort St. George, 1698-1709, the purchaser of the famous "Pitt" diamond. From Sir Charles Lawson's entertaining "Memories of Madras." (Swan Sonnenschein.)

* * *

CANON SHEEHAN'S novels are growing in popularity and importance, and "Glenanaar; a Story of Irish Life," recently published by Messrs. Longmans, will certainly increase his reputation. The prologue, so to speak, of the story, which occurs in Chapter II., takes us back to the famous Doneraile Conspiracy Case of 1829, for the hero of the novel, an Irish-American, is the son of the daughter of one of the "approvers," who were swearing away the lives of the accused, twenty-one of whom were saved by the eloquence of Daniel O'Connell himself. To be the grandson of such a man was to bear an hereditary taint in the views of the Irish, and Terence Casey, when he learns his parentage, abandons his mother and his betrothed, and flies to America. The story opens with his return to Ireland, to seek his people again. He finds his betrothed, not the girl he had dreamed of for twenty-five years in America, the girl he had parted from under the hawthorn tree, but an aged and worn woman, wearied with toil and the mother of grown girls. Still, he finds a bride—whom, let the reader learn. The book is as Irish as Irish can be, well written, and full of interest.

Glenanaar.

* * *

AMONG other good novels we have received are "Lagden's Luck," by Mr. Tom Gallon (Arrowsmith), an excellently-planned and capitally-written story of a valuable jewel and a villain who is not all villainy; "The Temptation of Philip Carr," by May Wynne (Swan Sonnenschein), which tells of the difference between the grim East End and the gay West, and contains a good portrait of a missioner among the poor; Mr. Fred Whishaw's "A Grand Duke of Russia" (White), another of his exciting and seasonable Russian tales of intrigue—wonderfully up to date; and the new posthumous novel by George Gissing, "Will Warburton" (Constable), which we hope to refer to later. We have also received "Stories and Essays," by Kate Scanlen (Drane), a harmless little work of rather feeble stories, and "Essays" on doctors and colds; and "Dorothy's Holiday," by E. A. Smith (Drane), a book of little stories, ending with what the writer calls a short series of essays on the "Courtship of Miles Standish," but what is really a transcription of Longfellow's story into prose.

Novels.

* * *

SO great has been the success of the Cameo Classics—the recently-introduced sixpenny library of the World's Best Books bound in cloth—that the publishers, the Library Press of 9, Duke Street, Charing Cross, are about to make a still more daring move by issuing the same series in paper covers at the phenomenally small price of threepence a volume. As the Cameo Classics include such bulky books as "A Tale of Two Cities" and "The Last Days of Pompeii," some idea can be gained of the value thus offered to the fortunate reading public of to-day.

The Classics for Threepence.

---

BOOKS TO READ.

Edward FitzGerald, by A. C. Benson. (Macmillan.)

The West Indies, painted by A. S. Forrest, described by John Henderson. (Black.)

The Science of War, by the late Colonel G. F. R. Henderson, C.B. (Longmans.)

Memoirs of a Royal Chaplain, 1729-1763. (Lane.)

The Life of St. Patrick and his Place in History, by J. B. Bury. (Macmillan.)

Memories of Madras, by Sir Charles Lawson. (Swan Sonnenschein.)

Will Warburton, by George Gissing. (Constable.)

Miss Bellard's Inspiration, by W. D. Howells. (Harpers.)

Glenanaar, by Canon P. A. Sheehan, D.D. (Longmans.)

Rose of Lone Farm, by Eleanor G. Hayden. (Smith, Elder.)

Two Moods of a Man, by Horace G. Hutchinson. (Smith, Elder.)

The Passenger from Calais, by Major Arthur Griffiths. (Nash.)

Idle Ideas in 1905, by Jerome K. Jerome. (Hurst and Blackett.)

Bird Life Glimpses, by Edmund Selous. (Allen.)

The Diary of a Girl in France in 1821, by Mary Browne. Edited by Commander the Hon. H. N. Shore, R.N. (Murray.)

Digitized by Google

Crown Lavender Salts

1/- & 2/-, of all Chemists, or of

The Crown Perfumery Co.

108 & 109 Fore Street, London, E.C.,

1/2 & 2/3, post free.

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

HONOURED by the presence of England's King and Queen, and favoured by the most brilliant weather, the Royal Ascot Meeting of 1905 will go down in Turf history as having been one of the most brilliant on record. The weather on the opening day was somewhat dull and threatening; but on the following day the sun shone out gaily as the State procession swept up the green track of the race-course and swung through the great iron gates leading to the Royal box. Major Clement is much to be congratulated on the many improvements which have been made, and must have been well pleased indeed that his continuous labours have at last borne fruit, and that it can no longer be said that the race-course at Ascot is unfit for horses to gallop upon.

As far as racing goes, the principal feature of the meeting has been the wonderful success of horses owned by Mr. W. Hall-Walker and trained by W. Robinson, the Foxhill trainer. Other noteworthy events have been the performances of Zinfandel and Bachelor's Button, the former of whom won the Gold Cup, carrying 9-st. 4-lb., and the latter the Gold Vase with 9-st. 13-lb., and the Hardwicke Stakes with 9-st. 12-lb. Sir E. Cassel led off by winning the Trial Plate with his French-bred Nabot. Ten horses came out for the Gold Vase, which followed, and in a grand finish Bachelor's Button, splendidly ridden by Maher, just beat Mark Time, to whom he was conceding 5-lb., by a short head on the post, with Hammerkop third, a bare half length behind the second. Mark Time was unluckily beaten, but I do not think that the riding of George McCall is deserving of the many unkind remarks which were made. Mark Time is a generous horse, and does his best invariably; but when he has done that he can do no more, and does not respond to the demand for further exertions. McCall knows the horse, and rode him as he likes to be ridden. Then came the Coventry Stakes, of which the last three winners have been Rock Sand, St. Amant, and Cicero; and it is more than likely that this year's winner, Black Arrow, will follow in their footsteps, for the style in which Mr. W. Hall-Walker's son of Count Schomberg and Black Cherry smashed up his field was unmistakable. Mr. Hall-Walker's pretty colours, blue and white check, cerise cap, were once more to the fore in the Ascot Stakes, in which Sandboy beat Karakoul, Pradella, and sixteen others; Mr. Purefoy's Lally won the Forty-eighth Ascot Biennial Stakes in a canter; Sir F. Johnstone's Plum Centre, ridden by Morny Cannon and trained by John Porter, quite like old times at Ascot, won the Prince of Wales's Stakes from Stadtholder and Ritchie; Mr. Musker's Henry the First, brought the day to a close by winning the Fifty-first Triennial.

W. A. Rouch.

MR. F. ALEXANDER'S ANDOVER, RIGHTAWAY—SISTER LUMLEY.
Winner of the Royal Hunt Cup.

Wednesday is always somewhat of an "off" day at Ascot. Maher gave a pretty exhibition of race riding in the Visitors' Handicap, which he won on Thunderbolt. In the Royal Hunt Cup, Mr. L. G. Craven's Sir Daniel was a very hot favourite, but made a sorry exhibition of himself in the race, which was won by Mr. F. Alexander's Andover, with Pharisee and Dean Swift second and third. It will be remembered that Andover was placed fourth in the Derby last year, and many of those who had noticed his forward running in the Kempton Park Jubilee this year profited not a little by his victory on Thursday. Rouge Croix showed speed in the Ascot Derby, but apparently his heart is in the wrong place, and he gave way when challenged by Pure Crystal, who won rather cleverly by three parts of a length. Everyone was pleased to see the popular colours of the Duke of Devonshire carried to the fore by Commune in the rich Coronation Stakes, and a rare set-to between Thrush and Sweet Mary for the Fern Hill Stakes resulted in the victory of the former by a neck. The presence of the two French horses, Maximum II. and Marsan, lent an international character to the race for the Gold Cup on Thursday. The absence of Pretty Polly deprived the race of much interest, but it was worth going any distance to see the style in which Zinfandel, in the fastest run race on record, set weight and pace at defiance, and strode past the winning-post amidst a storm of cheering, having covered the two miles and a-half in 4-min. 23 3-4-sec. Delaunay frightened away opposition for the All-Aged Stakes, which he won in a canter; and the same may be said of the Rous Memorial Stakes, for which Hackler's Pride cantered home in front of Chaucer, her solitary opponent. Mr. Hall-Walker brought out yet another winning two year old in the shape of Colonia, by Persimmon out of Sand Blast, who won the New Stakes rather easily at the finish, beating the Ankles colt and Larino; and to the same owner fell the St. James's Palace Stakes by the aid of Cherry Lass.

W. A. Rouch.

LORD HOWARD DE WALDEN'S ZINFANDEL, PERSIMMON—MEDORA.
Winner of the Gold Cup.

On the last day of the meeting Hammerkop carried off the Alexandra Plate for Major Eustace Loder, beating Palmy Days, who was by no means at her best, and Maximum II., who was none the better for his exertions in the race for the Cup on the previous day. The usual gamble took place for the Wokingham Stakes, which was eventually won by Queen's Holiday. Mr. W. Hall-Walker's cup of fortune was not yet full, and his filly Golden Table, who bears a striking resemblance to her sire, Count Schomberg, added to his tale of success by winning the Windsor Castle Stakes; and the Hardwicke Stakes, the last great race of the meeting, was won in gallant style by Bachelor's Button from Queen of the Earth and Flower Seller. CAURIRE.

Digitized by Google

BEAVEN & SONS

27 Victoria Street
Westminster S.W.

And at Gloucester

SANITARY ENGINEERS AND EXPERTS

LUXURIOUS or INEXPENSIVE BATHROOMS A SPECIALITY.

SPECIALISTS IN

High Class Modern Plumbing
Sanitation, Drainage
Water Supplies, Heating
Electric and Gas Lighting.

JAS. SHOOLBRED & CO.

INDIAN,
PERSIAN,
and
TURKEY
CARPETS

RUGS
and
MATS
IN ALL SIZES
AND OF
BEST QUALITIES.

JAS. SHOOLBRED & CO.,
British and Oriental Carpet Warehouse,
151-162, TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD, LONDON, W.

HIGH-CLASS FURNITURE.

REPRODUCTIONS OF THE ANTIQUE.

Very fine Chippendale Sideboard, in old carved Mahogany, 6ft. long, £19 19s.

Elegant "Queen Anne" China Cabinet and Curio Case, in dark Mahogany, £16 16s.

Fascinating "Adam" Sideboard, beautifully made, a splendid replica, £19 19s.

Lot 302. — Very fine "Sheraton" Grandsire Clock chiming on 8 and 4 bells, and striking on gong. Price £19 10s.

NEW CATALOGUE.

Messrs. BAILEY, SLOPER & CO., invite applications for their New Catalogue. It contains 400 Illustrations of reliable Furniture at 25 to 40 per cent. less than ordinary prices. Part of Wallace's stock bought from the liquidator at a discount of 40 per cent.

May we send you a CATALOGUE?

May we send you a CATALOGUE?

Lot 213.—Inlaid "Sheraton" Bookcase, 6ft. £15 15s.

BAILEY, SLOPER & CO.
ESTABLISHED 1825.
102, CURTAIN ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

Lot 304. — Superb Tubular Musical Chiming Clock in "Sheraton" Case, with 9 Graduating Tubes, £39 15s.

REFRESHING GROVE FERRY LAVENDER WATER

To have about one's person the sweet clinging perfume of exquisite English Lavender is to at once proclaim oneself as being of a refined nature. To use only that particular brand prepared by the Misses Bing also betrays the user as being of keen discrimination in the choice of a scent.

GROVE FERRY

Lavender Water

enables one to live in the continual enjoyment of this sweet-smelling English flower, the delightful odour of which it retains. It imparts an added pleasure to toilet and bath.

Post free for 1s., 2s., 3s., and 5s., direct from

The Misses BING,
Lavender Distillery, Grove Ferry,
KENT.

GNLP

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON: AT ROYAL ASCOT.

W. A. Rouch.

A VIEW DOWN THE COURSE.

The visit of Royalty and the brilliant weather drew a record gathering of fashionable people to this famous meeting.

W. A. Rouch.

THE SCENE IN THE ROYAL ENCLOSURE.

The presence of the King and Queen and a number of Royal visitors added to the marked success of this year's meeting. The Royal Enclosure contained many favoured guests, and presented a brilliant spectacle.

Digitized by Google

FLAT FURNISHING

These illustrations show the two reception rooms of an existing furnished flat, No. 7, Manor House, Marylebone Road, N.W., the decoration and furnishing of which, including the hall and bedrooms, were carried out by WARING'S.

This flat may be seen on application to the caretaker.

WARING'S will be happy to quote for similar or alternative treatments.

WARING'S

175-181, Oxford Street, W.,
AND
175-176, Sloane Street, S.W.

Also at Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham, and Paris.

---

TO THE REFINED MAN OR WOMAN, BADLY-MADE, ILL-PROPORTIONED HOME EQUIPMENTS ARE DISTASTEFUL IN THE EXTREME; THEREFORE ALL WHO CONTEMPLATE FURNISHING, RE-FURNISHING, OR DECORATING THEIR HOMES, AND WHO DESIRE SATISFYING RESULTS, WILL FIND VISITING

HEWETSONS

A PLEASURABLE AND PROFITABLE EXPERIENCE: DISTINCTIVE DESIGN AND FINISHED WORKMANSHIP BEING ALLIED WITH PRICES WITHIN THE REACH OF LIMITED INCOMES.

ESTABLISHED 1800.
CATALOGUES AND ESTIMATES FREE.
ALL GOODS OVER £2 CARRIAGE PAID TO ANY RAILWAY STATION IN THE UNITED KINGDOM.

Motoring in all its luxury is obtainable only when the car is fitted by Hewetsons with their special resilient, smart, and durable upholstery; immediate attention, and absolutely satisfactory results may be relied upon, the accommodation and other facilities of Hewetsons' Upholstery Factories enabling simultaneous work on large numbers of cars to be carried out at minimum cost. Enquiries invited. Estimates free.

HEWETSONS (Hewetson, Milner & Thexton, Ltd.),
(SOLE ADDRESS)
212, TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD, LONDON, W.
(OPPOSITE GOODGE STREET.)

THOMAS H. BATSTONE, Managing Director.

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

AMERICAN RARIORA. THE RELICS AND ICONOGRAPHY OF INDEPENDENCE DAY.

THERE is no more striking feature in the great Godefroy Mayer Collection of Americana than its singular wealth of items connected with, or relating to, the most momentous event in the annals of the Revolution—the Declaration of Independence on July 4, 1776. To this particular department of the treasures to be seen at 41, Rue Blanche belong the bronze busts of Washington and Franklin now reproduced, as well as the beautiful Washington clock, the little volume entitled "L'Almanach des Insurgés," and the group of Washington and General Winfield Scott. Equally curious is the series of Independence pocket-handkerchiefs, the largest of which is covered with a well-executed picture of the scene, together with the portraits and autographs of all present. Another bears four different portraits of Lafayette, while the centre of the third is occupied by the figure of Washington on horseback, surrounded by the heads of Franklin, Adams, Lawrens, Jay, Dickenson, Greene, Morris, Miffin, Steuben, and Drayton.

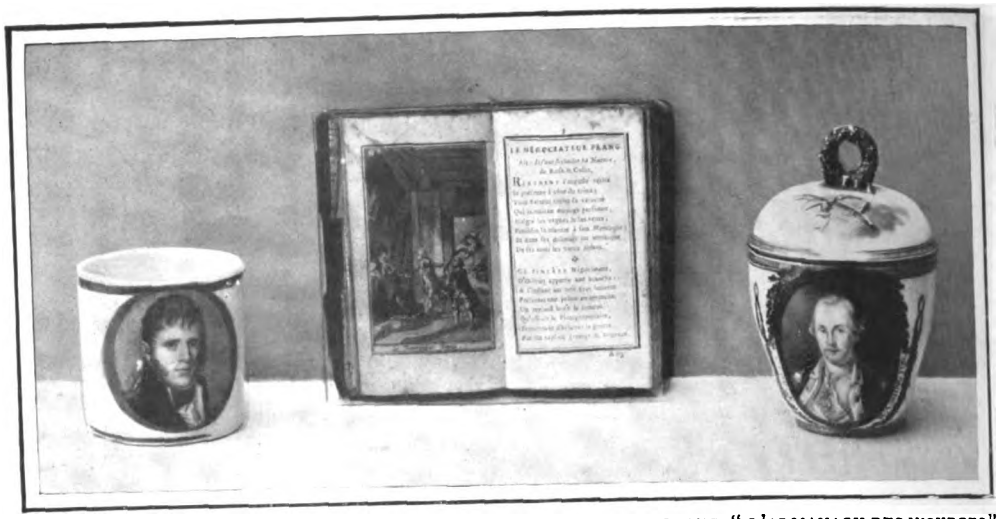
In the first of these quaint mementoes of 1776 the portrait of Jefferson, the actual author of the immortal "Declaration," is most lifelike. M. Mayer also possesses all the known "Declaration" medals, as well as the original drawing of the great drama of Declaration House by Armand Dumaresq. The Grolier Club of New York published last year a charming book by Charles Henry Hart, entitled "Catalogue of the Engraved Portraits of Washington." Those known to the author reach the astounding total of 880, as against 3,300 "heads" of Napoleon I. M. Godefroy Mayer has contrived to find at least six Washington portraits, apparently beyond the ken of this most industrious compiler. Jefferson and Adams are almost equally well represented in the Mayer Collection. Next to Franklin and Washington, their careers are probably more intimately connected with the Declaration of Independence than those of any of their fellow-workers.

The Americans of 1776 do not appear to have been contented with such commemorative objects as those now briefly referred to and illustrated. "Independence Fans" became the rage, and were manufactured in large quantities at Paris for export to the United States. They were often covered with more or less graphic views of the signing of the Declaration, with extracts from it or other patriotic inscriptions. Commemorative bonbonnières and snuff-boxes in gold, silver, enamel, porcelain, papier-maché, and Vernis Martin were produced in endless varieties, and retained their popularity for quite a quarter of a century. "Independence" watch-dials and watch-papers came into general use at the same time, and still often come into the hands of American collectors. "Independence" broadsides, chap-books, and caricatures exist in sufficient abundance to necessitate a catalogue almost as long as Mr. C. H. Hart's list of Washington portraits. Specimens of these are given in another article dealing with the subject historically rather than from the collector's point of view.

In a catalogue just issued by Messrs. Rimell of Shaftesbury Avenue will be found a most interesting relic of the stirring events of 1776. It consists of a tiny 18mo. volume, entitled "Calender oder Yahrbuch für 1784," by G. M. Sprengel, and apparently published in Berlin. In it will be found no less than fifteen exquisite engravings, including four colour plates of American Military and Naval costumes, a group of five portraits, with Paul Jones in the centre, and a unique print of the first form of the American flag, when its colours were red, white, and blue.

For nearly twenty years M. Godefroy Mayer has worked diligently at the formation of his splendid gallery of American rariora. Since 1887 he has spared neither time nor money in making it as complete as possible, both as regards the rarity of the specimens it contains and the general comprehensiveness of its character. Mementoes of Independence Day certainly appear to have attracted his special attention. He secured some of the most remarkable of his "finds" at the dispersal of the American collections formed in the earlier part of the nineteenth century by MM. Morel de Vindé and Rolt, as well as at the famous Talleyrand sale, when the priceless contents of the Château de Valençay were brought to the hammer. One of the most notable features of Mr. Mayer's collection is his series of unique prints relating to the career of Admiral Paul Jones, the exhumation of whose remains in Paris has just been accomplished, with a view to their being conveyed to America for reinterment in the magnificent mausoleum now in course of construction.

B.



GEORGE WASHINGTON CUP (SAXE), GENERAL WINFIELD SCOTT CUP, AND "L'ALMANACH DES INSURGES" (INDEPENDENCE WAR).
Relics of 1776 in the Mayer Collection.

CLOCK WITH STATUETTE REPRESENTING GEORGE WASHINGTON.
Style, First Empire. In the Mayer Americana Collection.

GEORGE WASHINGTON AND BENJAMIN FRANKLIN
Busts in bronze, forming part of the Mayer Collection.

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

hold and offer for sale specimens of the
HIGHEST QUALITY
OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE
as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.

EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.
AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.
(Two hours from Paddington.)

BATH.
GEORGE GREGORY,
BOOKSELLER, Etc.
Write for Catalogues. An inspection of Mr. Gregory's shop should not be omitted by any visitor to Bath. Speciality—Americana. Old Bath. Colour-plate books. Autographs.
Address: 5, ARGYLE STREET.

AUTOGRAPHS—HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS.
The oldest Dealers in Europe. For Catalogues, issued monthly, and all information write at once to
M. NOEL CHARAVAY,
3, RUE DE FURSTENBERG, PARIS,
where the "AMATEUR DES AUTOGRAPHES," a valuable Monthly Publication, may also be obtained.

JAMES TREGASKIS,
"The Caxton Head," 232, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.
RARE BOOKS, MEDIÆVAL MANUSCRIPTS, DOCUMENTS OF LITERARY & HISTORICAL INTEREST, ORIGINAL DRAWINGS, ENGRAVINGS, AMERICANA, CURIOSITIES, ANTIQUITIES, OBJECTS OF ART.
Catalogues Price Sixpence.

PORTRAITS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.
ENGLISH—FOREIGN—AMERICAN.
RARE ENGRAVINGS OF ALL SORTS.
WRITE FOR CATALOGUES OR VISIT THE SHOWROOMS OF
M. GODEFROY MAYER,
41, RUE BLANCHE, PARIS.

THE MISSES
H. & I. WOOLLAN
(UNDER ROYAL PATRONAGE.)

ÆSOP'S FABLES WORCESTER SERVICE.

Telephone: 5467 Gerrard.
Telegrams: "Decoriter."

Antiques
FURNITURE,
CHINA, LACE, GLASS,
etc., etc., etc.

SQUARE MARKED WORCESTER.

28, Brook St., Grosvenor Square, W.

WEYMOUTH, DORSET.
CURIOSITY SHOP.
Finest collection of Genuine Curios in West of England.
Amongst other items on sale—Unique Inlaid Escritoire-Cabinet formerly property of Frederick the Great, presented by successor to Sir Evan Nepean, Secretary of Admiralty at time of Trafalgar.
BAKER, 2, Charlotte Row, Close Old Palace George III.
DESCRIBED BY MADAME D'ARBLAY.

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

For Spaces in the Register apply to "THE EDITOR."

WANTED.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

Foiiowing autograph letters wanted: — Beau Brummel, Captain Gronow, Frederica, Duchess of York, Mary Anne Clarke. Good prices given.—823, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Letters of Mrs. Delaney to Mrs. Frances Hamilton; 1 vol., small 8vo, with silhouette portrait, First edition. £1 offered. — 824, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Sporting Magazine, vol. 30, April-Sept., 1807, and vol. 37 (1810 and 1811). Good price offered.—172, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Jest Books, with coloured plates.—173, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Battersea Boxes, with views of Bath and Bristol Hot Wells.—520, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old XIVth or XVth Century Stained Glass Good specimens.—521, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Worcester China, Binn's "Century of Potting." Reports invited. 12/6 offered.—522, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Swansea China, marked pieces, plates or vases.—523, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Naval Prints published by any of the following:—C. Sheppard, 74, Little Britain; C. Taylor, Holborn (date 1791); J. Fairburn, 110 and 146, Minories (1800-1838); Tabart and Co., London; E. Rushton, Paradise Street, Liverpool; W. Belch, Bridge Street, Boro'; I. Houlston, Strand; R. Sly, 41, Union Street, Somers Town; J. Marshall, Aldermary Churchyard, London.—237, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good Impressions with good margins of engravings of old London, especially Covent Garden, the Temple, the Strand, Lincoln's Inn.—249, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old Views of the Commanderie at Worcester, or MSS. or Tracts relating to. — 251, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

TAPESTRY, FURNITURE, Etc.

A good Specimen of Rock Tapestry. Period about 1640.—410, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

XVIIIth Century Mantel Glass. Must be in three panels, and in good condition.—411, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Original XVIIIth Century Drawings of Bath or Brighton. Also Caricatures relating to.—221A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Large coloured print of Blanchard in "The Maid of the Mill." What offers? From "Bell's Library." —222A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

BOOKS.

A fine copy of Natte's Bath, or would accept copy of Genest's British Stage, or good extra illustrated Life of Garrick.—129A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Eyton's "Antiquities of Shropshire," in good condition. Scarce.—130A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Bell's British Poets. Complete Set.—131A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

A very fine old Staffordshire Dinner Service of 160 pieces, in perfect condition. Crown Derby pattern, marked with crown. Sample plate on approval. Deposit.—520A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Staffordshire Ware, Busts of famous people.—521A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Life of Mrs. Frances Sheridan. Collection of Portraits from Oxberry.—744A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Ancient Greek, Roman, English, Scotch, Irish Gold and Silver Coins.—745A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

To Americans in London.—Antiquities, Greek, Roman and Mediæval Pottery, Fine Collection of Old English Pottery and Figures, China, Oil Paintings, Prints, Coins, Flint Implements, Tinder Boxes, Savage Weapons, and General Antiquities for disposal; part of my private collection; single specimens or otherwise. An inspection invited.—746A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES.

A VERY interesting career has been that of the captain of the recently-recommissioned "Blake." Captain Spencer Victor Yorke de Horsey not only bears a name of high distinction in the Navy, but in something under thirty years has seen a quite remarkable amount of varied service. Entering the Navy in 1876, at the age of thirteen, he had an unpleasant experience eleven years later in Argostoli Bay when in command of a torpedo-boat, which was run down during night manœuvres and sunk by a first-class boat of the opposing force, two men being drowned. During the trouble in Korea in 1894 he landed from the "Archer," in command of a party for the protection of the British Legation at Seoul, and witnessed the capture of the Palace by the Japanese. Subsequently, with the "Archer's" boats, he searched for and rescued the captain and part of the crew of a Chinese cruiser which had been destroyed to avoid capture, a service for which he received the thanks of the Chinese Government. As Lieutenant-Commander of the "Plover" he served in two expeditions against a proscribed rebel in North Borneo. In 1898 he bore a prominent part in taking over the newly-acquired territory near Hong-Kong. Finally, he served with much distinction during the war in South Africa, landing after Graspan from the "Monarch," of which he was Commander, to join the Naval Brigade, and being present at Magersfontein and in the subsequent operations under Lord Roberts. He was severely wounded at the taking of Pretoria, and, having been twice mentioned in despatches, it was only natural that he should receive special promotion to Captain.

THE name de Horsey recalls in another connection the action off Ylo on May 29, 1877, when Admiral Sir Algernon de Horsey, who was then Commander-in-Chief in the Pacific, flying his flag in the "Shah," engaged the Peruvian rebel iron-clad "Huascar," forcing her to surrender to the Peruvian authorities. The proceeding was questioned in Parliament, but the British Admiral was held to be justified. This engagement is brought to memory in another way by Captain G. E. Patey's appointment to the "Implacable." Captain Patey was Midshipman and Sub-Lieutenant of the "Shah" at the time of her fight with the "Huascar." He also wears the medal for the Zulu War of 1879. Captain Patey has been largely employed in Intelligence duties, and in 1903-4 was Captain of the battle-ship "Venerable," on the Mediterranean Station.

THERE is a point connected with the new system of meeting the shortage of officers in the Guards which appears to have escaped notice. The Guards are, of course, a special organisation, and, if the authorities consider that they can be satisfactorily officered by men who have not taken the same trouble to qualify educationally for a commission as is ordinarily taken by Line candidates, there is not a great deal to be said. The Guards may be said to possess educational facilities of their own which are not always present, at any rate, in weak home battalions, and it is incontrovertible that whenever a Guards' battalion goes on service pretty well every member of it both knows and does his work admirably. But it should be taken into consideration that Guards' officers can exchange into the Line, and that there does not seem to be anything to prevent a man of good family with a fair amount of money, who does not care to try for a Line commission in the ordinary way, and yet does not wish to remain a Guardsman all his life, from obtaining a nomination for a Guards' commission and subsequently exchanging into a Line battalion. This ought, in justice to ordinary Line candidates, to be made impossible.

CAPTAIN SIR GEORGE WARRENDER, BART., C.B., M.V.O., who is to have command of that splendid new County cruiser the "Carnarvon," is in his thirty-third year of Naval service, and saw a good deal of solid fighting in the Zulu War of 1889, when he landed with the Naval Brigade, subsequently taking part in the battle of Ginginhlovo. The Warrenders are of Lochend, East Lothian, and are of French extraction, the family, formerly De Warende, having settled in Scotland in the time of James V. The present baronet's father was formerly in the Coldstreamers, and his younger brother was also at one time a Guardsman, having served as a subaltern in the Grenadiers.

ALTHOUGH Lieutenant-General Sir William Nicholson would have made an almost ideal Military Governor of Gibraltar, it is widely regarded as extremely satisfactory that he should be available for more active duties, in which his wide experience and great strength of character will stand a better chance of being used to good purpose. What we are most urgently in need of in the high places of the Army are men who have not only done well and have valuable stores of military knowledge—there are hundreds of officers who answer that description—but men of great savoir faire with the added quality of resistance, men who would shine in any capacity in which big interests have to be handled, always skilfully, and sometimes with masterful originality. Sir William Nicholson is of that stock, and no more foolish error was committed as the result of the Report of the Esher Committee than the attempt to shelve one of the very best officers in our or any Army. It will not be surprising if a year or two hence the military destinies of the British Empire are controlled chiefly by a Sapper triumvirate, consisting of Lord Kitchener, Sir William Nicholson, and Sir George Sydenham Clarke.

Johnson and Logan

THE NEW BATTLE-SHIP "DOMINION."

The "Dominion," which belongs to the "King Edward VII." class, will shortly be commissioned for service with the Atlantic Fleet. Her displacement is 16,350 tons; I.H.P., 18,000; speed, 18 knots. Her main armament includes four 12-in. and four 9·2-in. guns, and several 6-in. and other quick-firers; while the complete broadside in the centre part of the ship is armoured from 5-ft. below the water-line to the upper deck.

Digitized by Google

CUSTARD WITH FRUIT

Copyright

Nature provides the fruit:
"BIRD" supplies the custard:
Try them together.

BIRD'S CUSTARD POWDER.

"SWAN" FOUNTAIN PENS

". . . . . The World agrees
That he writes well who writes with ease."—PRIOR.

"SWAN" Fountain Pens are synonymous with ease and grace in penmanship; their qualities in these respects being well symbolised by the free, graceful movements of the Swan from which they take their name. They form most acceptable presents—being dainty in appearance—durable in use—never-failing—and reasonable in price.

In 3 sizes 10/6, 16/6, 25/- up to £20.

SOLD BY ALL STATIONERS AND JEWELLERS. WRITE FOR CATALOGUE.

MABIE, TODD & BARD,
79 & 80, HIGH HOLBORN, LONDON, W.C.

BRANCHES: 93, Cheapside, E.C., 95a, Regent St., W.; 3, Exchange St., MANCHESTER and at NEW YORK and PARIS.

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES.

Chancellor, Dublin.

THE MANAGING COMMITTEE OF THE ROYAL IRISH MILITARY TOURNAMENT.

Names (left to right): Major St. Aubyn, Colonel Jackson, Captain Stuart, Major Lowndes, A.D.C., Colonel Grenfell, Colonel Davidson, General Morton, Colonel Hammersley, A.A.G., Colonel Thorneycroft, Captain Yorke, A.D.C., and Captain Higgins, Hon. Secretary R.I.M.T. Sitting: Colonel Thomas, Lieutenant-Colonel the Marquess of Waterford, Colonel Finlay, General Vetch, C.V.O., Chairman R.I.M.T., Lord Grenfell, Commanding the Forces in Ireland, General Remington, C.B., General Henniker-Major, C.B., Vice-Chairman R.I.M.T., Major Banon, and Captain Brierley.

By Warrant of Appointment to His Majesty King Edward VII.

The best Health Resort for every day is John Knight's Family Health Soap.

(Fragrant Coal Tar)

2 Large Tablets. Price 3d.

Prepared only by John Knight & Sons. Ltd.

Makers of the Royal Primrose Soap. London.

Wherever you go take some with you — It is a luxury in the bath invigorating & refreshing.

Digitized by Google

WATERMAN'S IDEAL FOUNTAIN PEN THE BEST YET.

WE NOT ONLY SAY IT IS THE BEST FOUNTAIN PEN, BUT WE INSIST THAT EVERY PEN SHALL SAY SO, TOO, BY ITS SHEER MERIT.

CONTEMPLATION
for just one moment will decide you in favour of

WATERMAN'S IDEAL FOUNTAIN PEN.

It is the best for busy writers, and stands first through its sheer merit. Simplicity in every detail and efficiency are the keynotes of its success. It is pen perfection.

From 10s. 6d. In Silver and Gold for Presentation. Of Stationers, Jewellers, etc. Illustrated Booklet free from L. & C. HARDTMUTH, 12, Golden Lane, London, E.C.

ZOX FOR NEURALGIA.

YOU MAY TRY IT FREE.

Neuralgia is a disease of the Nerves, and most commonly attacks the nerves of the face. All who suffer will be glad to know of ZOX, a Simple and Sure Remedy, certified free from injurious substance. The proprietors of the Remedy offer to send two free sample ZOX Powders to any reader of THE KING who will send them a stamped addressed envelope.

ZOX Powders can be obtained of Chemists, Stores, etc., at 1/- and 2/6 a box, or post free from

THE ZOX CO., 11, HATTON GARDEN, LONDON, E.C.

Every Koh-I-Noor Pencil is uniform in excellence. It is more economical than other pencils because it lasts longer and gives more satisfaction all the time.

Koh-I-Noor Pencils are 4d. each, 3/6 per doz., everywhere.

Of Stationers, Artists' Colourmen, and Photographic Dealers. Dainty Illustrated Booklet on Koh-I-Noor Pencils post free from

L. & C. HARDTMUTH, 12, Golden Lane, London, E.C.

Gem Jewellery for Presents.

Fine Gold Fancy Border Crystal Miniature Pendant, £1 12 0

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE Post Free.

Fine Gold Amethyst and Pearl Brooch, £1 5 0

Finely Chased Gold and Pearl Shamrock Brooch, £2 10 0

Amethyst, Pearl and Diamond Pendant, £17 0 0

Crystal Brooch and Enamel Border, for Miniature, £3 15 0

INSPEOTION INVITED.
Moderate Prices.

Fine Gold and Crystal Fish Globe Charm, £1 8 6

Fine Gold Bamboo Safety Brooch, 14/-

SELECTIONS FORWARDED ON APPROVAL.

Fine Gold and Mistletoe Crystal Charm, £1 5 0

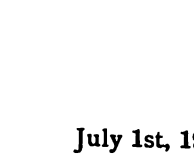
Gold Keyless Lever Watch, mounted on Gold Curb Chain, £5 5 0

Fine Amethyst and Pearl Cluster Brooch, £3 10 0

Fine Ruby, Diamond and Crystal "Hand Mirror" Pendant for Miniature, £26 0 0

THE



BY APPOINTMENT TO H.M. THE KING.

THE GOLDSMITHS & SILVERSMITHS Co., LTD.

112, Regent Street, W.,

Invite inspection of their large and choice stock of Diamond and Gem Jewellery. Each article is mounted by the Company from their carefully selected stock of loose gems, and is guaranteed to be absolutely perfect.

WEDDING, BRIDESMAIDS', BIRTHDAY, and COMPLIMENTARY PRESENTS
At most moderate prices.

All Goods are marked in plain figures and sold direct to the Public at Manufacturers' Cash Prices. All intermediate profits are thereby avoided, and the purchaser is placed in direct communication with the producer.

GOLDSMITHS & SILVERSMITHS COMPANY, Ltd.

(With which is incorporated THE GOLDSMITHS' ALLIANCE (A. B. Savory & Sons, Ltd.), late of Cornhill.)

Telephone: 3729 GERRARD.

112 & 110, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.

Telegrams: "ARGENNON, LONDON."

Digitized by Google

AT RUFFORD ABBEY.

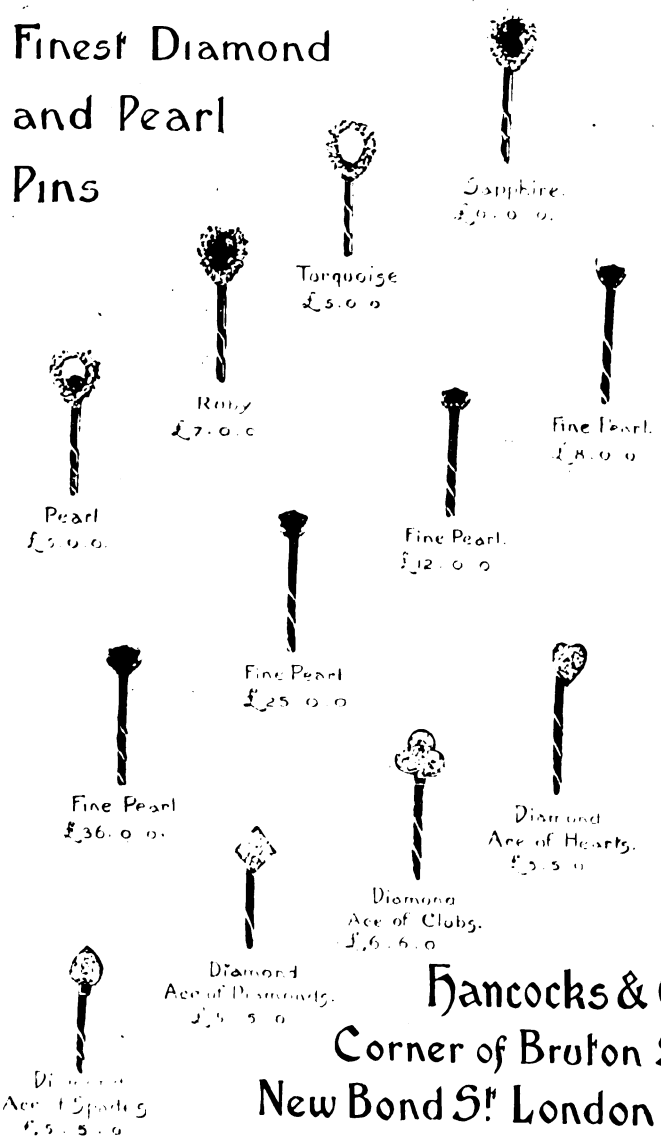
L. Willoughby.

A GROUP OF THE VISITORS AT THE RECENT HOUSE PARTY.

The names, reading from left to right, are: Back row—Hon. W. Guiness, Miss Drummond, Lady Victoria Manners, Mr. Cavendish Bentinck, Mrs. Newmann, Lady Savile, Lady Evelyn Guiness, Lord Savile, Right Hon. Arnold Morley, and Hon. P. Ramsy. Front row—Mrs. Almerie Paget, Mr. Whighan, Mr. Almerie Paget, Miss Lyttleton Annesley, and Mrs. Colson.

Finest Diamond and Pearl Pins



Hancocks & Co.
Corner of Bruton St
New Bond St London. W.

England Our Workshop, Our Market The World.

LAVERTON, WEBB & CO., LTD.,

DESIGNERS AND MANUFACTURERS OF

Art Furniture, Fitments and Interior Decorations.

48, 50 & 52, Queen's Road, BRISTOL.

CATALOGUES AND ESTIMATES FREE.

Digitized by Google

T. FISHER UNWIN'S NEW BOOKS.

Russia Under the Great Shadow.
By LUIGI VILLARI.
With 84 Illustrations Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net. (Second Impression.)

In Search of El Dorado:
A Wanderer's Experiences.
By ALEXANDER MACDONALD, F.R.G.S.
With 32 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

What I Have Seen While Fishing
And How I have Caught my Fish.
By PHILIP GEEN.
With 73 Illustrations. Second Edition. 7s. 6d. net.

Model Factories and Villages.
Ideal Conditions of Labour and Housing. By BUDGETT MEAKIN, Lecturer on Industrial Betterment, Author of "The Land of the Moors," etc. With about 200 Illustrations, large crown 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d.
[Second Impression.

BEST NEW NOVELS.

The Flute of Pan.
By JOHN OLIVER HOBBES. 6s.

Constantine Dix.
By BARRY PAIN. 3s. 6d.

Grand Relations.
By J. S. FLETCHER. 6s.

Tom Gerrard.
By LOUIS BECKE. 6s.

THE FASHIONABLE COMPLAINT.
CRICKET ON THE BRAIN.
HAVE YOU GOT IT?
At all Booksellers and Bookstalls Price ELEVEN pence Net.

T. FISHER UNWIN, Paternoster Square.

Two Prices: to suit all Purses.

(1) At Six Shillings each.

The Game. By Jack London, Author of "The Call of the Wild."
The Image in the Sand. By E. F. Benson. [Ready July 5
The Walking Delegate. By Leroy Scott.
At Close Range. By F. Hopkinson Smith. (Illustrated.)
A Dark Lantern. By Elizabeth Robins.
The Wise Woods. By Mrs. Henry Dudeney.
Duke's Son. By Cosmo Hamilton. Second Impression in the Press.
The Macdonnells. By Lady Sykes.
Tolla the Courtesan. By E. Rodocanachi.
The Stigma. By Jessie L. Herbertson.

(2) At Six Pence each!

The Right of Way. By Sir Gilbert Parker, M.P.
The Manxman. By Hall Caine.
If I were King. By Justin Huntly McCarthy.
Flames. By Robert Hichens.
Soldiers of Fortune. By Richard Harding Davis.

Also a Cheap Edition, with an attractively designed paper cover, of
The Time Machine. By H. G. Wells. 1s. net.

LONDON: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, BEDFORD STREET, W.C.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

ESSAYS OF TRAVEL.
By R. L. STEVENSON. Crown 8vo, buckram, gilt top, 6s.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

STINGAREE. By E. W. HORNUNG
DON TARQUINIO. By FR. ROLFE
BALIOL GARTH. By ALGERNON GISSING
THE MISSING ELIZABETH. By ADELINE SERGEANT
THE PHANTOM TORPEDO-BOATS. By ALLEN UPWARD
THE MILLIONAIRE BABY. By A. K. GREEN
A SPOILER OF MEN. By RICHARD MARSH
[Second Impression.]

NEW 3/6 STORIES.

CLOCLO. By GYP
WHEN A GIRL'S ENGAGED. By HOPE MERRICK
THE POET AND THE PIERROT. By DOROTHEA DEAKIN

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's Lane, W.C.

CHAPMAN & HALL'S NEW BOOKS.

MR. BENNET BURLEIGH'S GREAT WAR BOOK.

EMPIRE OF THE EAST.
Japan and Russia at War, 1904-5.
By BENNET BURLEIGH, War Correspondent of the Daily Telegraph.
Crown 8vo, profusely Illustrated, 6s.

The Daily Telegraph says:—"Will rank as the stanard book on the struggle between Russia and Japan. . . . Admirably lucid accounts of the great scenes of the war."
The Evening Standard says:—"It is needless to praise the vivid pictures that he paints. or the absorbing result of his untiring energy and tried skill."

RUSSIA IN REVOLUTION.
By G. H. PERRIS.
With numerous Illustrations, demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

The Daily Chronicle says:—"A vivid, well-ordered, and altogether fascinating book.
The Standard says:—"The substantial accuracy of the terrible facts and statistics marshalled in these pages cannot be seriously challenged."

KEBLE HOWARD'S NEW NOVEL.

LOVE IN JUNE. A Pastoral Comedy.
By KEBLE HOWARD,
Author of "The God in the Garden," and "Love and a Cottage."
Crown 8vo, 6s.
Illustrated by FRANK REYNOLDS, R.I.

The Morning Leader says:—"It would be a great benefit to the human race at large if Mr. Keble Howard would write one novel a week, instead of one a year. He has the lightest touch in the world, the happiest wit, the most kindly humour."

NOW READY EVERYWHERE.

POVERTY BAY. A Nondescript Novel.
Profusely Illustrated by HARRY FURNISS, and written by the Artist.
Square crown, 6s.

The Daily Graphic says:—"It has a dreamy poetic charm that will delight the artist and the poet—the possessor of an imaginative temperament, in short. . . . It is the work of a man who has grown old in experience, and yet kept young in heart . . . and this lends to his writing the distinctive quality of its charm."

MISS NETTA SYRETT'S NEW NOVEL.
Crown 8vo, 6s.

THE DAY'S JOURNEY.
By NETTA SYRETT.

Mr. H. HAMILTON FYFE, in the Evening News, says:—"Finely imagined, and written with sincere emotion. . . . If you like books which help you to understand your fellow creatures, you should certainly not miss 'The Day's Journey.'"

London: CHAPMAN & HALL, Ltd., 11, Henrietta Street, W.C.

Just Ready, at all Libraries and Booksellers'.
Cloth extra, crown 8vo, gilt top, decorative cover, 6s.

DWIGHT TILTON'S NEW ROMANCE.

MY LADY LAUGHTER.

A Romance of Boston Town in the Days of the Great Siege.

With Ten Beautiful Illustrations in Colours by CHARLES H. STEPHENS.

Included amongst its characters are George Washington, John Hancock, Samuel Adams, Joseph Warren, Paul Revere, and many others who fought to save Boston in 1775.

"In my opinion a man as 'd be fool enough to marry a woman 's ain't got nothin' but herself to give him 's likely to be happier bein' her fool 'n he ever would be bein' mine."

SUSAN CLEGG
and Her Friend Mrs. LATHROP.
By ANNE WARNER.
NOW READY. 3s. 6d.

The original character drawing and quaint humour and homely philosophy of this popular volume have not been surpassed by any American writer of the day. Jeannette L. Gilder, Editor of The Critic, says: "Anything more humorous than the Susan Clegg stories would be hard to find. Susan Clegg is an original creation."

Ready Immediately.
NEW ROMANCE BY BERNARD CAPES.
6s.

LOHENGRIN.

A companion to E. F. Benson's "The Valkyries," and S. Baring-Gould's "Siegfried."

London: DEAN & SON, Ltd., 160a, Fleet Street, E.C.

Digitized by Google

THE CRICKET SEASON.

Copyright.

"W. G."

To-day at the Crystal Palace W. G. Grace has a good team of amateurs playing against Oxford University. The veteran has not made so many runs this year as usual, but this is probably due to the rather freer game he has been disposed to play. If, for instance, he was to go in first and play in his old style, he would get a good many more runs. Perhaps that six he hit in the first match of the season at the Oval has had something to do with his inclination to "long handle" this season. His interest in the game is as marked as ever.

Copyright.

A. O. JONES.

Another rather similar type of batsman is the dashing Notts captain, A. O. Jones, than whom, when he is in form, there is not a more attractive batsman in the world to watch. Who that saw them will ever forget the first four strokes he made in England's second innings at Trent Bridge in the first Test match this season? Four splendid fours scored from the full face of the bat and all along the ground. He is a grand field anywhere, especially at slip, where he is probably as safe as George Lohmann was, though less electrical in effect.

TUBS for SHRUBS,

Palms, Valuable Plants, Roses, Dwarf Fruit Trees, etc.

SUITABLE FOR HOUSE BOATS.

SQUARE, ROUNDED CORNERS.

REGISTERED DESIGN.—TEAK.

QUAINT AND UNCOMMON.

To avoid Imitations and consequent disappointment look for our branded TRADE MARK (HIS MAJESTY'S CHAMPION) on every TUB.

A NUMBER OF MEDALS AWARDED.

TORTOISE—IN TEAK.

REGISTERED DESIGN.

FOR

FIREPLACE DECORATION,
CONSERVATORIES,
VERANDAHS, GARDENS,
TERRACES, HALLS,
AND ALL
OUTDOOR DECORATION.

TEAK—TRIANGLE.

REGISTERED DESIGN.

EFFECTIVE AND ORNAMENTAL.

Messrs. CHAMPION & CO. (Established 200 Years),
115, City Road, LONDON, E.C.,

Will be happy at all times to give Quotations for Special Shapes and Sizes. For other Shapes, see Catalogue, gratis on receipt of post-card.

Digitized by Google

DEWAR'S WHISKY

A GUID AULD SCOTCH DRINK

The most

Cooling and Refreshing

SUMMER DRINK

is

BARLEY WATER

made from

ROBINSON'S PATENT BARLEY

"IN POWDER FORM"

Does not injure the Digestive Organs like acid drinks.

Keen, Robinson & Co., Ltd.,

LONDON,

MAKERS OF ROBINSON'S PATENT GROATS.

NOW READY.

At all Booksellers and Libraries.

PIONEERS.

SILAS K. HOCKING.

Price 6s.

GREAT RUSSIAN STORY

BY

SILAS K. HOCKING.

PIONEERS.

Amongst the flood of Russian literature, Mr. Hocking's new novel will take a foremost place, depicting in a graphic and interesting manner phases of the many issues of the great national struggle for liberty now taking place in that vast, little-known, and still less-understood country.

HOW TO KNOW WILD FLOWERS.

WAYSIDE AND WOODLAND BLOSSOMS.

127 Coloured Plates BY MABEL E. STEP, from Nature.

A POCKET GUIDE TO BRITISH WILD FLOWERS (First Series).

By EDWARD STEP, F.L.S.

With clear descriptions of 394 Species.

Price 6s. net; post free, 6s. 4d.

In pocket size, 6½ by 4½, cloth gilt, round corners: also kept in velvet calf, gilt edges (prices on application).

An entirely revised and newly illustrated edition of Mr. Step's popular work on the Wild Flowers of our country side.

London: FREDERICK WARNE & CO., Chandos House, Bedford St., Strand, W.C.

FEATHER BOAS

The Largest Stock in London.

Ostrich Boas

Curled, made from selected Feather in White, Black, Natural and White, Black and White, and Grey and White.

| | |
|---|---|
| 56in. long | ... 10/6 |
| 58in. long | ... 16/6 |
| 60in. long | ... 21/- |
| 60in. long | ... 29/6 |
| 80in. long | ... 35/6 |
| 80in. long | ... 42/- |
| 80in. long | ... 63/- |

Richer qualities 84/- to 20 gns.

OSTRICH STOLES

Curled, in all colours, 29/6, 49/6, to 12 gns.

COQUE FEATHER BOAS

Very effective, made from the finest quality feather.

In White or Grey, 10/6

In Chinchilla or Brown, 15/6 and 17/6

Sent on Approval.

Illustrated Catalogue post free.

DEBENHAM AND FREEBODY,

WIGMORE STREET, LONDON, W.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

ASCOT WEEK, with all its attendant splendour and gaiety, is at an end. There were some unusually lovely gowns to be seen there this year; the present fashion has never lent itself so kindly to the picturesque. The hats were a feature in themselves, and some of the very latest models were much admired. Paquin, as usual, was well represented. The large mushroom shapes, elaborately trimmed with feathers and the long drooping ospreys (that rather remind you of the plumes of the Life Guards), are nevertheless very chic, and quite the dernier cri in Paris. Flowers are more profusely used than ever. I hear that for Henley Regatta Paquin is particularly busy, and has some charming creations in the daintiest of muslins, embroidered lawns and linens, and elegantly cut river gowns.

I saw some lovely dresses that are being made for coming bridals at Messrs. Charles Lee and Son's of Wigmore Street, and I hope to give you illustrations of some of these very shortly. At the fast-approaching sales I hear of some marvellous bargains to be obtained at this favourite establishment, and my advice to those who love this season of sales is to go early, and follow the example of the "early bird."

Another favourite haunt of mine is Messrs. Robinson and Cleaver's of Regent Street, whose summer sale starts on July 3. Here are great reductions in all departments. Men are also well catered for, and the beautiful spun silk pyjamas usually sold at 21s. are to be had for 13s. 6d. Shirts, both white and coloured, are much reduced, likewise all underwear and hosiery. To men about to marry, this is an excellent opportunity to replenish your stock and complete your trousseaux. Handkerchiefs, both for men and women, are really almost given away, when you see what value you obtain at such a low price. Special bargains in the costume department, and washing dresses in linens, muslins, and all the newest materials, are to be obtained. Laces and Irish embroidered linens are always snatched up at once by the wise, so this year, more than ever, be in time. By the by, for all those who appreciate the deservedly well-known firm of Roger and Gallet's products, do not neglect to lay in your favourite perfumes, soaps and toilet preparations, which are displayed to such advantage in the spacious premises of Messrs. Robinson and Cleaver.

Some new gloves took my fancy at Messrs. Debenham and Freebody's the other day, which are made expressly for this firm. They are an extra long Biarritz glove, with elastic at the wrist, and are sold at 2s. 11d. Also the new chamois leather gauntlet glove, double-stitched and washable, at 3s. 11d.

They have also a splendid assortment of lisle thread gloves for this tropical weather; their Grenoble suède mousquetaires are as reliable as ever. Alpaca is certainly the most practical wear just now, and always looks cool; some daintily-made coats and skirts in pearl grey are most reasonable in price, and for town are invaluable, for this material does not show the dust; it shakes off the surface, and the alpaca always keeps its bright appearance. Of course white linen and muslin dresses are always charming to see, but are decidedly preferable for country wear. Railway travelling is so very detrimental to light gowns, and those living in the suburbs, who come up to London for a day's shopping or amusement, would do well to patronise dust cloaks for use in our dirty railway compartments. I noticed a young girl a day or two ago beautifully attired in the prettiest of white embroideries, and she looked so charming when she entered the train that she attracted universal attention. Alas! when she alighted at the other end, the back view was so disastrous that I felt forced to draw her attention to the calamity, and she had to invest in a three-quarter coat before she could continue on her expedition. The seats of our railway carriages leave much to be desired in the shape of cleanliness, to say nothing of microbes, both preserved and au naturel.

This next week starts the sales in almost all directions. Westbourne Grove will be thronged, to judge by the bargains offered by some of the shops. Whiteley naturally attracts a multitude, and I only hope the air may be a little cooler during the busy week, for the sake of the shop assistants, who must feel the heat terribly during these crowded periods.

At Wallace-Taylor's I spent an interesting half-hour looking at their charming French models, and truly, as Mr. Wallace-Taylor so graphically said, "You can tell a Paquin, Doucet, Leroy, or any of the known French modistes, the moment you see them, by the hang of the gown." They each and all have a distinctive style not to be mistaken. Irrespective of the enormous selection of these model gowns, you can find at this establishment anything you require, in all grades of price, too, and one and all well cut and finished. If I want a gown for any special occasion, at a minute's notice, I always know where I shall find just what I want. Evidently I am not alone in this idea, for whilst I was there two ladies came in, hurriedly selected and donned two delightful gowns, and started straight from the door in their motor for Ascot.

There is, luckily, no dearth of resorts for luncheons and teas in this district, and they are really a boon during sale times. Whiteley has an excellent restaurant, well ventilated, and all his provisions are

Bassano.

A MORNING GOWN IN PALE PINK TUSSORE.
(Mancus, New Bond Street.)

Digitized by Google

TOILETTES
OF SPECIAL DESIGN
FOR HENLEY
AND NEWMARKET

SUNSHADES STOLES
BLOUSES LINGERIE

ENCHANTING HATS AND TOQUES EN SUITE

PAQUIN
39
Mayfair Dover Street London W.

GOWNS
FOR STATE AND SOCIETY FUNCTIONS

THE RENOWNED "PAQUIN" CORSET

OPERA WRAPS TAILOR GARMENTS THEATRE DRESSES

THE NEW "AUTOMOBILE" COAT

BY APPOINTMENTS.

REDFERN

The Annual Sale

WILL COMMENCE ON

MONDAY, JULY 3rd,

When the whole of the PARIS and LONDON Models, Millinery, Lingerie and Blouses will be disposed of.

A unique opportunity to obtain a . . REDFERN GOWN (suitable for the immediate season) at a nominal price, and Remnants of their noted Cloths and Silks at half cost.

Entrance for Sale: 26, CONDUIT STREET.

"The House for Veils."
Largest Selection in London.

CHARLES LEE & SON,
The Royal Specialists for Ladies' Wear, . .
98 & 100, Wigmore St., LONDON, W.,
famous for
The Royal Crescent Veil,
a shaped Patent adjustable Veil, at prices and quality showing a great saving over veiling purchased by the yard.
9d., 1/-, 1/3, 1/6, 1/9, 2/-, 2/3, 2/6, etc.

MOTOR VEILS.
MOTOR HATS.
MOTOR VEILS.
The latest and largest selection in London.

Messrs. LEE & SON continue to send a box containing a good assortment by post; boxes ready for return no trouble after selecting.

ROBINSON & CLEAVER, LD., BELFAST.
REGENT ST. & CHEAPSIDE, LONDON; and LIVERPOOL.
Manufacturers to His Majesty the King and H.R.H. the Princess of Wales.
Carriage paid on orders of 20s. upwards in United Kingdom.

CAMBRIC
"Cheapest Handkerchiefs I have ever seen."—Sylvia's Journal.

Children's ... 1/3 per doz.
Ladies' ... ... 2/3 „
Gentlemen's 3/3 „
HEMSTITCHED.
Ladies' ... ... 2/9 per doz.
Gentlemen's 3/11 „

SAMPLES AND ILLUSTRATED PRICE LISTS POST FREE.

POCKET HANDKERCHIEFS

"The Irish Cambrics of Messrs. Robinson and Cleaver have a world-wide fame."—The Queen.

Damask Table and House Linens, Shirts, Cuffs, Collars, and Ladies' Underclothing at Makers' Prices.
N.B.—To prevent delay all Letter Orders and Enquiries for Samples of above goods should be sent direct to Belfast.

GRANDE·MAISON·DE·BLANC

PARIS.
6, BOULEVARD DES CAPUCINES.

LONDON, W.
62, NEW BOND STREET.

(No Branch in America)

Table & Bed Linen, Handkf's, etc.
Woven by Hand on our own Looms.
LADIES' LINGERIE

LOUVET Frères, Proprietors. O. BOYER, Director, formerly of New York.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

really A1. For afternoon tea or coffee you cannot beat Lloyd's Oriental Cafés. Their fame is really deserved. For those who are not already aware of the fact, there is one of these in Westbourne Grove, of which fact I was ignorant until lately.

A charming tea-gown by Messrs. Woolland of Knightsbridge is here shown in palest lemon taffetas, with full lace front and delightfully-graceful flowing sleeves. Tea-gowns are one of this well-known firm's specialities, in which few can touch them. Another most exquisite gown is the blush pink Tussore tailor-made, which emanates from the master hand of Mancus of 9, New Bond Street. It has the double skirt so much in favour, quite simply made, but how perfectly it hangs! The coat bodice is a gem of tailoring; observe the wonderful line and the curve of the waist. This firm is one of the most expensive houses in London, but when once Mancus gowns you, you do not fancy yourself in any other cut garment. He makes a special study of line, and has brought this study well-nigh to perfection. It is for this his prices are so high, but the certain proof of the excellence of his work is the enormous increase of his business. The fancy buttons and the touches of black are charming.

Some of the shops are still struggling to introduce the crinoline, but I am afraid they will never really be general. Of course, here and there you may see them, as there are always plenty of people who must follow the very latest fad of fashion, but they will not be general. The "incroyable" has made its way, and has been much worn in linens and other light-weight materials, and I hear from reliable sources that this mode will be carried out in serges and fine cloths for the autumn. The long basqued coat forming the double skirt effect is also looming plainly in the distance for autumn wear.

At Messrs. Marshall and Snelgrove's there are some lovely double-shaded ribbons in soft silk and very wide widths, which are used to make up the pelerine capes in most effective styles; the combinations of colour are perfect. Some beautiful chenie ribbons with raised gold embroidered flowers and also painted floral designs are works of art, and fully sustain this firm's renown in this special line. They also excel in their selection of embroidered lawns and trimmings to match the all-over designs which are so much worn this season. Chenie silks are very much in demand, also the new double-width radium silks, in charming patterns, are to be had there also. R. D.

A CHARMING TEA-GOWN IN PALE PRIMROSE TAFFETAS.
(Messrs. Woolland, Knightsbridge.)

Power's Whiskey.

See that the Trade Mark (a red P in a Diamond) is printed on every label.

ESTABLISHED 1791.

A famous old Dublin Pot Still Whiskey renowned all over the world for its age, purity and flavour.

WHISKEY DISTILLERS TO H.M. THE KING IN IRELAND.

GLOBE

Raimes & Co., Ltd.,
Tredegar Works, London, E.,
and Stockton-on-Tees.

Globe Polish is now supplied to the Public in the form of either a paste or liquid. It is universally acknowledged to be the best Polish on the market, and, indeed, commands a Sale far exceeding all rivals. It is unaffected by climatic changes, and is consequently invaluable to motorists. Unlike certain liquid and other polishes containing Naphtha, it is in either form guaranteed to be non-inflammable. It will not scratch the softest metal-work. It is absolutely non-injurious to the skin of the user.

Digitized by Google

WHIPPED CREAM

PLASMON makes the most delicious Whipped Cream for Tea, Coffee, Strawberries, Stewed Fruits.

A packet of PLASMON sufficient to make 2 quarts of thick Whipped Cream, and an improved Wheel Whisk, 1/3 post free.

PLASMON, Farringdon Street, London.

"CRAVEN"—acknowledged throughout the World the Mixture of Merit and Purity. The Favourite Tobacco since its invention in 1857.

Do not fail to give a trial to the "CRAVEN" Cigarette — "The Cigarette of Distinction."

DELICIOUS COFFEE

RED WHITE & BLUE

For Breakfast & after Dinner.

ECONOMY — HEALTH — PURITY — NO BEETROOT USED.

"GLEBE"

REFINED GENUINE

CANE SUGAR AND CANE GOLDEN SYRUP

GLEBE SUGAR REFINING CO., Greenock, Glasgow, and St. George's House, Eastcheap, London.

FIELD'S CANDLES.

NIGHT LIGHTS.

TOILET SOAPS.

LIGHT. LIGHTFUL. DELIGHTFUL.

Grand Prize, St. Louis, 1904.

J. C. & J. FIELD, Ltd., LAMBETH, S.E. Established 1642.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

THERY, the winner of the French Eliminating Trials, had an enthusiastic reception when he arrived in Paris on his Richard-Brasier. Caillois, who was placed second, and M. Brasier, the designer of the cars, drove with the winner through the streets on the famous Number 1, to an accompaniment of cheers and waving of hats. Humour was added to the situation by a policeman who, at a point where the crowd was thickest and the car had been brought to a standstill, stepped forward and served Théry with a summons for permitting the emission of smoke from his machine. The over-zealous constable is, apparently, to be found in other countries besides our own.

Copyright

THE GORDON BENNETT CUP.
Lancia, the well-known Italian driver, on a Fiat racer.

A curious difficulty has arisen in connection with the Gordon Bennett race, which will be run next Wednesday. In the recent trials the twenty-four competitors were started at intervals of four minutes, and there is no doubt that this arrangement, together with the "spacing" controls, conduced very largely to the almost entire immunity from serious accident which characterised the race. Inasmuch as there will be only eighteen starters in the Cup contest, it is obvious that the intervals between the cars might well be still further increased to five minutes, so as to reduce, as far as possible, the amount of overtaking on the narrow portions of the route. The Cup rules, however, direct that the cars shall be started at intervals of two minutes, and no alteration can be made except by the consent of a majority of the international representatives at a meeting which must be summoned at least one month before the race. This, unfortunately, was not done; but no doubt the difficulty will be overcome by the foreign clubs unanimously consenting to an arrangement which is for the benefit of all the competitors. In the French trials there was a considerable amount of overtaking at high speeds, in spite of the intervals maintained between the cars at the start and in the controls. Caillois, who finished second, has stated that he passed a number of competitors, and although way was always made for him as soon as the other driver was aware of his presence, yet it invariably happened that for 8 or 10 kilomètres he had to follow in the wake of the leading car, shouting and blowing his horn, smothered in dust, and peppered with the stones thrown up from the road, before he was heard and allowed to pass. Even seconds are valuable in a keenly-contested race, and a few such checks might easily rob a driver of his chances of victory.

MERCÉDÈS

18-28 h.p. IMMEDIATE DELIVERY.
28-32 h.p. - DELIVERY IN JULY.

CARS for HIRE by DAY, WEEK, or MONTH.

SPARE PARTS IN STOCK.

ALL REPAIRS EXECUTED.

The Cannstatt Automobile Supply Association,
34, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.

Telegrams: "Cannstatt, London." Telephone: 10714 Central.

Digitized by Google

IT'S

ARIEL

The ALL-BRITISH TOURING CAR.

Early delivery of the 20-25 h.p. Model.

A

SPLENDID TOURING CAR.

FREE TRIALS. PARTICULARS ON REQUEST.

THE

Ariel Motor Co., Ltd.,

127-130, LONG ACRE,
LONDON, W.C.

Scottish Reliability Trials.

GAINED THE

GOLD MEDAL,

HIGHEST AWARD.

THE BEST

LIGHT CAR

IS THE

SWIFT

"The Little Timekeeper,"

WHICH WON THE

GOLD MEDAL

IN THE A. C. G. B. & I. LIGHT CAR TRIALS FROM A FIELD OF

37

Competitors.

Immediate Delivery

can be given of the
NEW MODELS,

7 h.p. TWO-CYLINDER,

£200

12 h.p. FOUR-CYLINDER,

FOUR-SEATED,

£375

You are cordially invited to call and inspect these sterling vehicles at our

LONDON SHOWROOMS:

127-130, Long Acre, London, W.C.

FREE TRIALS ARRANGED.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

Leonard Wallougnby.

THE MEET OF THE YORKSHIRE AUTOMOBILE CLUB.

This interesting gathering was held last week at Thorpe Hall, the residence of Mr. A. W. Macdonald Bosville.

Rochet-Schneider

"THE WORLD'S FINEST TOURING CAR."

Conforming with the ideals of the practical motorist, and affording, without fail, the utmost satisfaction to the pleasure-seeker, the Rochet-Schneider is a car that appeals strongly to every intending purchaser.

Simple to control—smooth-running—noiseless—climbs hills with remarkable agility, and—is reliable to a degree. Truly, a car de luxe.

24-30 H.P. Rochet-Schneider. (Also in 35-40 H.P.)

Awarded Gold Medal, Reliability Trials, 1904.

Immediate Deliveries.

Trial runs by appointment.

Donne & Willans, Ltd.,
29a, Gillingham St.,
South Belgravia,
London, S.W.

Telephone: 5412 Westminster.
Telegrams: "Piecemeal, London."
D. & H.

Digitized by Google

THE ELECTROMOBILE COMPANY, LIMITED,

7, CURZON STREET, W.,

have completed arrangements with the principal Electric Supply Companies in London, whereby

ELECTROMOBILES MAY NOW BE CHARGED IN THE OWNERS' STABLES.

By this means a

GREAT REDUCTION IN THE COST OF UPKEEP

will be effected owing to the

Saving of the mileage incidental to running daily to and from the Garage.

The Company is prepared to continue the system by which

THE CARRIAGE IS MAINTAINED IN EFFICIENT RUNNING CONDITION ON CONTRACT.

By Appointment to

H.M. The King.

By Appointment to

H.I.R.H. The Prince of Wales.

TOURIST NOT RACING CARS.

Money spent on racing cars necessarily goes into the cost of touring cars sold to the public. The Daimler Company does not make racing cars nor spend thousands of pounds upon racing. The money thus saved goes into the efficiency of the Daimler Car. This explains its extraordinary success.

DAIMLER MOTOR CO. (1904) LTD.,

Coventry.

219-229, Shaftesbury Avenue,
London, W.C.

Famous Since 1876.

An unrivalled reputation of 30 years for the qualities you want, viz.,

GREAT STRENGTH
COMBINED WITH
Lightness,
Easy Running AND Reliability.

PRICES TO SUIT ALL PURSES,
from
The "Standard." The "Featherweight."
£8 : 8 : 0 to £15 : 15 : 0

We offer you nothing at a lower price than £8 8s., because we are too jealous of our hard-earned reputation to offer the public anything we cannot feel proud of. You can buy bicycles for less money, but do not be misled into thinking that you get more than you pay for. And remember that your life depends on the quality of your bicycle.

ALL CENTAURS are offered on EASY MONTHLY PAYMENTS.

Every Centaur Catalogue contains a Coupon which may possibly entitle the holder to a New Centaur Bicycle as an absolute free gift. Catalogue free on application. Send for one.

CENTAUR CYCLE CO., Ltd., COVENTRY.
London: 21, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.

The Centaur Company only give their guarantee with machines bought direct or from the firm's duly accredited agents. They warn the public against sensational advertisements offering alleged Centaur machines at low prices.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

France, Great Britain, Germany, Italy, Austria, and the United States are the countries represented in next Wednesday's race. Switzerland was among the challengers, but owing to a dispute between the makers of the Dufaux cars and the national Automobile Club as to who should pay the share of the expenses of the race which every competing country will have to contribute, the Swiss cars have been withdrawn. The French cars are two Richard-Brasiers and a De Diétrich, driven by Théry, Caillois, and Duray respectively. Germany will send three Mercédès, and Jenatzy, De Caters, and Werner as drivers. The British team consists of a Napier (Earp) and two Wolseleys (Rolls and Bianchi). Italy will be represented by three Fiats, driven by Lancia, Cagno, and Mazzari, and Austria by three Austrian-built Mercédès, which will be in charge of Braun, Hyeronimus, and Burton. The American team consists of two Pope Toledos and a Locomobile, which will be piloted by Lyttle, Dingley, and Tracy. The national colours for the race are: France, blue; England, green; Germany, white; Italy, black; Austria, black and yellow; and America, red.

* * *

In their respective classes the 8—10-h.p. and the 16—20-h.p. Humbers have already established an excellent record for hill-climbing. In the South Shields Automobile Club Hill-climb the 8—10-h.p. Coventry Humber beat all competitors. In the Scottish Trials the two Humbers beat every other car of equal or less power in the hill-climbs, and at the recent South Harting Hill-climb, organised by the Automobile Club, the two Humbers were first in Class A and Class B respectively, a wonderful performance in view of the number and quality of the other competing cars.

* * *

The Gobron-Brillié cars are well known by name to every motorist, but very few of these silent-running vehicles have hitherto been seen in this country. A company has now been formed, however, under the title of the Gobron-Brillié Motor Company, Limited, to represent the French firm on this side of the Channel, and intending purchasers of a high-class touring car of undoubted reputation will be able to make a personal investigation into the merits of a make which has gained innumerable successes on the Continent.

* * *

In connection with the Henley Regatta arrangements have been made by the Automobile Club by which its members and their friends will have a portion of Phyllis Court especially reserved for ranking their cars and viewing the races. Admission will be 12s. 6d. per day, or 25s. for the three days, if purchased before July 1. No charge is made for storage of car. Luncheon and tea will be obtainable on the Lawn, or if required the House Department will be pleased to supply luncheon-baskets direct from the club and deliver them on the cars on the course.

Topical.

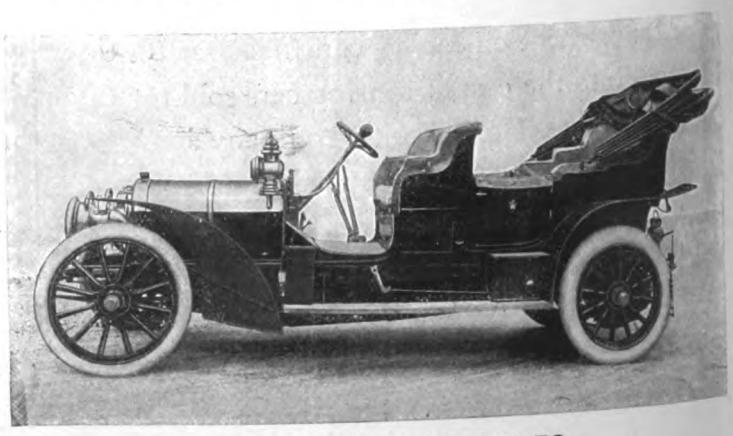
THE MOTOR UNION MEET AT HARROGATE.
The famous "Stray," where the cars assembled.

"FIAT" MOTORS, Ltd.

37 & 38, LONG ACRE, W.C.

Telephone Nos.: 3171 and 1849 GERRARD.
Telegraphic Address: "FIATISM, LONDON."

Brighton Depot:
BRIGHTON & SOUTH COAST MOTOR GARAGES, Ltd.,
ST. JAMES'S STREET,
BRIGHTON.



24 H.P. FIAT SUPPLIED TO
H.I.M. The EMPEROR OF GERMANY.

For full particulars of these famous cars apply to the Sole Concessionnaires for Great Britain and Ireland:
FIAT MOTORS, Ltd., 37 & 38, LONG ACRE, LONDON, W.C.

Digitized by Google

CORNWALL

LONDON TO PENZANCE & BACK, 40/-

What the celebrated author, Mr. MAX PEMBERTON, says about CORNWALL:—

"I was delighted with the place and the people, and I can quite see the numerous possibilities of Cornwall as a Pleasure Resort both for Winter and Summer. Cornwall astounded and delighted me."

Thousands of delighted travellers acknowledge it to be the ideal home

SUMMER, HEALTH, & PLEASURE RESORT.

Why incur the trouble and expense of a long Foreign Journey when the

GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY

can take you in a few hours to the DELIGHTFUL

PADDINGTON to
Falmouth in 7 Hrs. 10 Min.
St. Ives „ 8 „ — „
Penzance „ 7 „ 40 „

Cornish Riviera?

Fast and Luxurious Trains. Cheap Fares.

G.W.R. Co.'s Tregenna Castle Hotel at St. Ives.

Write to SUPERINTENDENT OF THE LINE, PADDINGTON STATION, W., for Illustrated Booklet Free. JAMES C. INGLIS, General Manager.

ST. JACOBS OIL

CURES

LUMBAGO, SCIATICA,

RHEUMATISM,

Neuralgia | Soreness
Bruises | Stiffness

And Bodily Aches and Pains.

In 1/1½ and 2/6 sizes.
Of all Chemists.

CONQUERS PAIN!

SKIN LIFE

Cook's THRONE SOAP adds life to the skin!
Why?
Because it is thoroughly prepared from skin-nourishing constituents by scientific methods (under scientific control).

Six dainty samples sent post free for six penny stamps.

EDWARD COOK & CO., Ltd., The Soap Specialists, London, E.

"MINIMAX"

57, LEADENHALL ST., LONDON, E.C.

THE ONLY HAND FIRE EXTINGUISHER

Specially designed for

MOTOR CARS.

CYCLES & MOTORS BOUGHT FOR CASH

IN ANY CONDITION.

Auction Sales

Every MONDAY at 2 o'clock,

AT

CAREY'S CYCLE & MOTOR REPOSITORY,

ELEPHANT & CASTLE STATION,

LONDON, S.E.

BANKERS: LONDON & WESTMINSTER. TELEPHONE: 8382 CENTRAL.

Extract from the "Court Journal," May 20th, 1905—

"Prince Eitel Fritz, second son of the German Emperor, before his departure from England on Saturday evening, paid a visit to Carey's Motor Repository, Elephant and Castle Station. He was accompanied by Captain Littow-Vorbeck."

DELAUNAY BELLEVILLE

The Famous Boiler Makers to the British Navy.

The Most Reliable, Silent, and Beautiful Car yet produced. .

GOLD MEDAL PARIS SALON.

SOLE ENGLISH RIGHTS . .

16 H.P. 24 H.P. 40 H.P.

BURLINGTON CARRIAGE CO., LTD., 315-317, Oxford St., London, W.

Digitized by Google

РУБЛЬ КОФЕ
(ROUBLE COFFEE.)

THE COFFEE OF THE EPICURE.

BERRIES, FRESH ROASTED,

2/- PER LB.

WE PAY THE CARRIAGE.

It may not sound cheap, but nothing REALLY GOOD ever is cheap.

Follow our directions, and a revelation awaits you of what REALLY GOOD COFFEE REALLY IS.

METATA AGENTS,
17, DEVONSHIRE SQUARE,
LONDON, E.C.

"CHEF" SAUCE

A rich creamy sauce that improves hot and cold joints and aids the digestion.

LAZENBY & SON, LTD.
18, Trinity Street,
LONDON, S.E.

THE KING'S MENU.

A SEASONABLE LUNCHEON.

Œufs a la Benedictine.

Mousselines de Saumon.

Poulet Grille.

Pommes de Terres Lyonnaise.

Petits Pois au Beurre.

Macaroni Fourre a la Milanaise.

Corbeilles de Cerises.

Creme a la Daren.

ŒUFS A LA BENEDICTINE.

Boil hard six eggs, shell them, and cut in half lengthwise, slicing a tiny bit off each side to make them stand like small canoes. Now remove the yolks and pound these in a mortar with salt, coralline pepper, a spoonful of the following mixture—finely-minced chives or shallots, mushrooms, and parsley fried together in butter, then drained and measured before being added to the eggs—a spoonful or two of rich creamy white sauce and some bread-crumbs, or an oyster, shrimp, or lobster sauce, or a brown mushroom one, can be used. When smoothly pounded, fill the eggs with this mixture, rounding them neatly, put them in the oven in a buttered au gratin dish or legumière, then pour round them any nice sauce which goes well with the one pounded up with them, and serve at once very hot and garnished with fried croûtons.

MOUSSELINES DE SAUMON.

Pound till smooth ten ounces of cold cooked salmon (or any nice fish or mixture can be used like this) with three ounces of fresh butter and a seasoning to taste of anchovy essence, salt, coralline and white pepper, lemon juice, and, when it is not disliked, a grate of mace. Now dissolve half an ounce of best leaf gelatine in three gills of good clear fish stock, and mix this smoothly and thoroughly with the fish purée, which is all the better, by the way, if rubbed through a fine wire sieve after pounding. When the mixture is nearly cold mix in a gill of cream, whipped till quite stiff. Fill a plain Charlotte mould with the mixture, and put it on ice or in the ice cave till quite firm and wanted to serve. It is then unmoulded carefully, and masked with any good chaudfroid sauce to taste, a cucumber one going particularly well with salmon and the rest of to-day's menu. When putting the mixture into the mould some shrimps, or halved prawns, or tiny fillets of lobster mixed in are a great addition.

CORBEILLES DE CERISES.

For these begin by making a genoise paste, for which there are several recipes, and with it partly fill some small dariole moulds which have been brushed over inside with freshly-oiled butter, then dusted with a little flour and castor sugar mixed together in equal quantities. Bake at once in a fair oven, then turn out carefully on to a pastry rack till quite cold and set. The centre of the cakes is then removed, thus making them into little baskets minus the handles, which are added after icing the cakes. For this an icing or a glace can be used, as, for instance, the following: Put into a pan half a pound of pure cane icing sugar, mix it with two tablespoonfuls of maraschino or noyeau syrup (a shilling a good-sized bottle at any good grocer's or stores) and a drop or two of yellow colouring to make the glace a pretty cream colour; stir these together on the stove till just warm, then use. For the nut icing begin by making some Royal icing, by mixing the juice of half a lemon with a teaspoonful or so of cold water, mixing this with the unwhipped white of an egg, and then stirring into them sufficient finest cane icing sugar to form a smooth glossy thick mixture just liquid enough to spread easily. It will take rather more than four ounces of sugar, probably, to the one white of egg. Now stir into this Royal icing some desiccated or freshly-grated cocoa-nut, minced almonds, walnuts, or other nuts to taste, and after spreading over the outsides of the cakes sprinkle them well with the same nuts (ground, desiccated, or minced) as have been mixed with the icing. Fasten with a little white of egg an angelica handle over each little basket, and pipe round the edges as in the illustration, with either whipped and sweetened cream or white Viennese icing. Just before the baskets are to be served, put a spoonful of whipped cream into the bottom of each, and fill them with cherries which have been carefully cooked in a sugar and water syrup, flavoured with brandy or liqueur to taste. Though the little baskets illustrated were not so finished, a puff of whipped cream, sweetened and flavoured, of course, to taste, can be put on the top of the fruit just before serving, and at this time of year the cream is nicer if iced first. For the genoise paste the following is a particularly good recipe, though a simpler one will, of course, answer the purpose: Break five whole eggs into a delicately clean pan, and mix into them half a pound of cane castor sugar, then put the pan into one three parts full of boiling water (or the bain-marie when this is available) placed on the stove. Whisk the egg and sugar mixture steadily till it is lukewarm, then lift the pan off the stove and continue whisking the mixture till it is quite cold and light. Now mix into it four ounces of dried and sifted flour (or rice flour), four ounces of butter beaten to a cream (not melted or oiled, or the paste will be quite spoilt), and six ounces of freshly-ground almonds. Mix these all gently but thoroughly together, adding a little orange-flower water to flavour it.

Digitized by Google

CREME A LA DAREN.

For this neither ice cave nor freezer is necessary, though it is, of course, an improvement to stand the mould on ice for an hour or so before turning the cream out and serving it. Dissolve half an ounce of finest leaf gelatine in a little warm cream, mix it with a pint of thick cream, sweetened and flavoured to taste, and whisk till very stiff, then mix two ounces of fine Daren bread-crumbs in, pour into a mould, and stand aside till set. Glacé cherries, ginger, or pine-apple cut up small, together with blanched and shredded almonds or pistachios, and stirred into the whipped cream with the bread-crumbs before it sets, make a much nicer sweet if to be served alone, though at this time of year the glacé fruit is generally omitted and a compote of fresh fruit served with the cream.

DAREN BREAD.

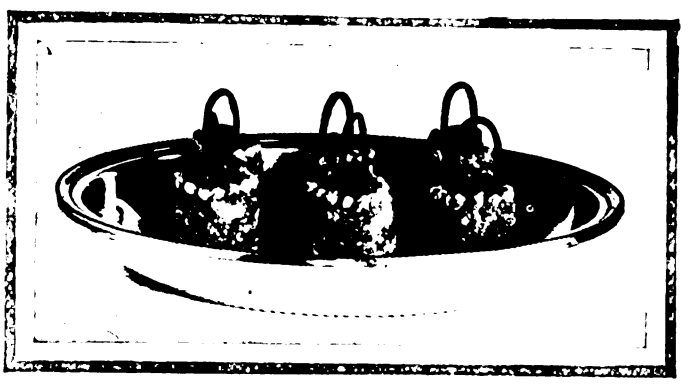
Long as doctors and dentists have preached to us the injurious effects on our health and our teeth of bread made from white flour from which all the valuable phosphates, vegetable cellulose, and gently aperient oily principles contained in the husk of wheat have been removed, the wholemeal bread recommended as the true staff of life has made small headway, and in nine houses out of ten white bread is still preferred.

The chief reason, I think, is that the ordinary baker's brown bread is generally made of either white flour mixed with bran, or else of wholemeal too coarsely ground to produce a bread sufficiently light to be pleasant or easily digested.

At last, however, we are offered a bread which, while it contains the whole grain, with all the valuable constituents of the husk, is made of wholemeal so finely ground that the resulting bread is deliciously light and agreeable in flavour, with none of the gritty coarseness or clammy closeness of texture we are wont to associate with the ordinary brown bread of commerce, as we have hitherto known it.

This new bread is made from flour specially ground at the "Daren" Flour Mills, Dartford, Kent, and every loaf bears the name "Daren" in big relief on the side. It is now obtainable in most towns in the United Kingdom; but if any difficulty is experienced in obtaining it, a line to the Daren Flour Mills at the above address will bring the name of the nearest agent, and no doubt arrangements would also be made by the Daren Company for one's regular baker to supply it when wished. Thanks partly, no doubt, to the numerous medals and diplomas it has won, including the gold medal and first prize at the Bakers' Exhibition at the Royal Agricultural Hall when shown there in 1901, Daren bread is becoming so widely known and appreciated that practically all bakers doing a high-class trade make it now as a matter of course, except here and there in out-of-the-way places.



CORBEILLES DE CERISES.
(Specially prepared and photographed for this paper.)

It is most delicious for bread and butter and various savoury sandwiches, while best of all for brown bread cream, whether as a mould or an ice. Its value dietetically is vouched for by the fact that the Russian giant Machnow, whose wonderful feats of strength at the London Hippodrome have been astonishing the world, has it included in his daily dietary, and has been photographed with a Daren loaf on the table by him. The loaves are made in three sizes, at 1d., 2d., and 3d. each, and certainly every mother who desires her children to have beautiful teeth and good health should see that Daren bread is their "staff of life" for the first twenty years of life, while their constitutions are being made or marred.

---

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

SALADE A L'INDIENNE (The First Rose).—Shred a crisp lettuce heart rather finely, mix it with young mustard and cress, season with a cold poivrade sauce, to which has been added a little finely-minced chutney, and garnish with cold curried prawns or shrimps and quartered pheasant or plover eggs. Bantams' eggs will do instead of these. Hand brown bread and butter with this salad.

FLOSTER (Mapletree).—There are various versions of this, produced by varying the liqueur, mineral water, etc. Each of the following has met with approval. Put a tablespoonful each of kirsch, cherry-water ice and sherry at the bottom of a large tumbler, and fill up with well-iced seltzer water; put a tablespoonful each of noyeau and sherry in a glass, and fill up with a bottle of well-iced lemonade; put a tablespoonful of lemon-water ice and a liqueur-glassful of orange brandy in a large tumbler, and fill up with well-iced seltzer or soda water.

SYBARITE.

THE GREAT TEMPERANCE DRINK OF THE FUTURE

Whiteway's

NON-ALCOHOLIC CYDER

("CYDRAX").

A DELICIOUS APPLE PRODUCT.

Refreshing. Invigorating. Pure.

MR. SILAS HOOKING, the great novelist, says:—
"We all pronounce "Cydrax" excellent. I shall make it known to my friends. It is a delightful and refreshing drink for this warm weather."

MR. STEPHEN COLLINS, L.C.C., writes:—
"We think the "Cydrax" a most delicious drink. It supplies a long felt want, not only to total abstainers, but to the public generally. It has only to be tried to be appreciated."

REV. EDWARD MURPHY writes:—
"This seems to me to be the very thing that total abstainers are looking for."

SAMPLE CASES (for cash).—1 doz. pints, 6/-; 1 doz. quarts, 10/6; or 2 doz. quarts, 20/-; cases, bottles, and carriage free; or 10 gallon cask, 12/6, carriage paid (cask returnable).

Descriptive Booklet—

WHITEWAY & CO., Ltd.,
The Orchard, WHIMPLE, DEVON.
LONDON DEPÔT: 22, Albert Embankment, S.E.

Something Different
.. in ..
After-Dinner Sweets.

Day to day variety in after-dinner sweets may always be secured with Brown & Polson's 'Patent' Corn Flour. Such delightful dishes as

Vanilla, Chocolate, and Fruit Souffles,
Caramel Custards,
Orange, Prune, and Coffee Jellies,
Vanilla Tartlets,

and the celebrated

Corn Flour Blancmange or Blancmange Sponge

are first favourites whenever tried.

Prunes and Blancmange is better than Prunes and Rice.

Brown & Polson's A Recipe Book is full of useful recipes for such delicious and wholesome fare. A copy will be posted to every lady sending 1d. stamp to Brown & Polson, Paisley. It is well worth the trouble of writing for it at once.

Brown & Polson's
"Patent"
Corn Flour.

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

THE summer is now with us. There are piles of summer numbers in dainty covers loading the bookstalls at the railway stations, and crowds of people hastening to and fro, all bent on holiday-making; there are, or ought to be, warm sunshine and balmy airs, and a general and wholly natural desire on the part of everybody to keep comfortably cool, and comfortably free from thirst. But how difficult it is! How often we hear people exclaim in misery, "What can I drink?" These are the people who do not or will not know of cider as the best and most satisfying drink that man has invented for his own benefit. The White Wine of England, as it has most justly been called, a wine prepared in Herefordshire, by such a firm as Bulmer's (one speaks of them as one does of Whiteley's and Harrod's, for, like those firms, they are too well known to need fuller description), is the most wholesome, palatable, and satisfactory beverage for young and old. And for the hot weather, when one does not need a rich or very full-bodied wine, it is incomparably the best. To like cider one must have it good. Messrs. Bulmer's Cherry Norman, at 10s. a dozen, is very excellent, and Foxwhelp and Kingston Black at double that price is deservedly called the Imperial Tokay of Herefordshire.

---

THE latest publications of the Health Resorts Development Association include works on such favourite resorts as Rhyl, Leamington, Bournemouth, and Southport, and copies of these books may be obtained gratis on application to the town clerks of the respective towns.

---

THE Bridge House Hotel at Staines has built up a large clientèle for itself, and supplied as it is with large lawns down to the water's edge, and with good accommodation not only for river men, but for motorists and cyclists as well, it is not to be wondered at that its patrons are numerous. Comfort and elegance are combined in its rooms, and the catering is of first-class description.

---

THERE is very evident nowadays a movement in favour of the reintroduction of old-fashioned scents, and there is none more popular to-day than lavender water. But like most other things, it is only really good lavender water that is worth patronising, such a lavender water as the Grove Ferry Brand, prepared by the Misses Bing at the Lavender Distillery, Grove Ferry, Kent. Sold in thin globe-shaped bottles of a delicate green, and tied and sealed in a distinctive manner which prevents imitation, the Grove Ferry Lavender Water possesses a delicious fragrance that is not to be found in other scents. It is the scent par excellence for those who can appreciate a delicate and soothing aroma.

---

AT the recent Horticultural Exhibition of the Royal Botanic Society, held at Regent's Park, London, the Agent-General for Western Australia, by invitation of the society, showed the samples of apples and cereals which recently formed the subject of an interesting Press display at the offices of the Western Australian Government, 15, Victoria Street, S.W. The judges appear to have been so impressed with the excellence of the exhibit, with the flavour as well as the appearance, of the Dunn's Seedling, Cleopatra, and Jonathan apples, and with the quality and variety of the cereals, that they awarded a silver medal to the Agent-General.

---

THE holiday-maker who looks to Wales for his summer visit will be well advised to consult the time-tables and programmes of the Cambrian Railways. Every Friday midnight during July, August, and September, special cheap excursions run from London in connection with the London and North Western and Great Western Railways, and tourist tickets at reduced fares are issued to Cambrian seaside and inland resorts. Wales is a lovely country for a holiday, and in spring, summer, or winter affords suitable resorts, and while the winter temperature is higher than that of most watering-places on the South and West Coasts of England, in summer it is lower, and remains therefore very equable. Copies of the Cambrian Railways' publications can be obtained from Mr. W. H. Gough, Traffic Superintendent, Oswestry, or at Euston and Paddington.

---

PETROLEUM incandescent lighting has been brought into great prominence of late through the developments of the Kitson lamp, which has been extensively adopted for the lighting of large spaces, such as streets, public squares, parks, etc. The Empire lamp is the latest development of this form of lighting, and is exhibited at 100, St. Martin's Lane, Charing Cross. Attention has been called to this light particularly for the lighting of private parks and grounds. An advantage claimed besides its exceptionally low cost is the fact that, unlike electricity and gas lighting, it does not require the tearing up of roadways and lawns for the laying of mains. Each lamp is self-contained, and comprises a whole lighting outfit. All one has to do is to dig a hole and put the lamp-post in, and the lamp does the rest. This system of lighting has made great headway, especially in oil-burning countries, such as India, South Africa, Russia, and the Balkan States. The grounds of Peterhof, the palace of the Czar, as well as those of the residence of the King of Siam, are both lighted by this system.

---

THE time-table issued by the Great Central Railway Company for July, August, and September demonstrates that this enterprising company is pursuing its progressive policy. Many important accelerations have been made in the train service affecting all parts of the country. All express trains are vestibuled, and have a buffet car attached available for first and third class passengers. The through service between Newcastle, York, Bradford, Huddersfield, Sheffield and Southampton, Bournemouth, etc., has been considerably improved, and commencing July 10 through express trains will be run between Southampton and Scarborough by the direct route, viâ Banbury and Oxford.

---

THE GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY announce that they have arranged with the London and South Western Company for a new through service with the South Coast. A new train is to leave King's Cross in connection with the train from the North, and passengers arriving in London by the Great Northern main line trains will therefore be able to join this new train without change of platform, thus avoiding the trouble and expense of crossing London.

---

IN a year when two-speed gears have become the recognised fitment to a high-grade bicycle, the Centaur two-speed gear is generally admitted to be as nearly perfect as mechanical ingenuity can attain. It is constructed on the sun-and-planet principle, and the gear being contained in the bicycle bracket allows of the use of larger and stronger pinions and the most perfect running. Centaur bicycles have always held the highest reputation, having been the pioneers of light weight, and this latest improvement adds but one more laurel to their wreath of glory.

---

To meet pressing demands of post-card collectors the Midland Railway Company have now reprinted for sale to the public the series of pictorial post-cards which they formerly used for official correspondence only. The cards are beautifully printed in colours from photograph-engraved blocks, and will be sold at the nominal price of 2d. per set of six.

---

IN spite of the hot weather, which naturally tends to fill the outdoor places of amusement, the variety theatres of London continue to draw large audiences. At the Palace, Tortajada, the eight Palace girls, and that wonderful ventriloquist, Arthur Prince, are all well worth seeing. The Alhambra ballets, and Le Roy, Talma, and Bosco are as popular as ever, and the remarkable photographs of the siege and fall of Port Arthur are specially interesting just now, in view of the fact that the Japanese are probably engaged in a struggle of a similar nature at the present moment. The last seven performances are taking place at the Empire, which is to be closed this week for alterations.

Amusements.

HIS MAJESTY'S. MR. TREE.
EVERY EVENING AT 8.50.
BUSINESS IS BUSINESS.
Adapted by Sydney Grundy from "Les Affaires sont les Affaires," by Octave Mirbeau.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.30.
At 8.15 THE BALLAD MONGER.

AVENUE THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. FRANK CURZON.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.45.
A MESSAGE FROM MARS.
By Richard Ganthony, in which
Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY will appear.
Preceded at 8, by MISS BRAMSHOTT'S ENGAGEMENT.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 3.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. FRANK CURZON.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
To-night at 8.15,
LADY MADCAP.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.15.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Lessee and Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
To-night at 8.45.
MR. HOPKINSON.
An original farce in three acts by R. C. Carton.
Preceded at 8.15 by Mr. Nelson Jackson.
Matinee every Saturday at 3.

APOLLO THEATRE.
HENRY LOWENFELD, Sole Proprietor.
TOM B. DAVIS, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
Every Evening at 8.15.
The Comic Opera, in Three Acts,
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Wednesday at 2.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.
Managers: A & S. GATTI & CHARLES FROHMAN.
Every Evening at 8.15,
THE CATCH OF THE SEASON,
By Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton.
Miss Ellaline Terriss, Mr. Seymour Hicks
Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

COMEDY THEATRE.
Lessee: Mr. WM. GREET.
Under the Management of Mr. FRANK CURZON.
Every Evening at 8.30, Wed. and Sat. Matinees at 3.
The Times says: "Riot of high spirits, perpetual laughter."
The Daily Telegraph says: "Uproarious, bright, and mirth provoking, hard to beat."
THE GREAT SUCCESS.
CHARLES FROHMAN presents WILLIAM COLLIER and the entire American Company in the delightful Farce, in Three Acts,
"THE DICTATOR."
"THE DICTATOR."
By Richard Harding Davis.

EMPIRE THEATRE.
New Fairy Divertissement
"THE DANCING DOLL."
Special Attractions.
Doors open 7.45. Manager: Mr. H. J. HITCHINS.

NAVAL, SHIPPING, AND FISHERIES EXHIBITION, EARL'S COURT.
Noon to 11.0 p.m. Admission 1s.
Naval Construction, Armaments, Shipping & Fisheries.
NELSON'S CENTENARY RELICS.
FISHING VILLAGE. Working Exhibits. Model of "Victory."
GRAND NAVAL AND MILITARY CONCERTS.
Go on board the full-size Cruiser.
Real Batteries of 4·7 Guns, Hotchkiss and Maxims
The Cruiser is manned by a crew of 150 Handy-men.
PANORAMA OF THE BATTLE OF TRAFALGAR.
West's "Our Navy." Maxim's Captive Flying Machine. Fairy Grotto. Indian Canoes. Burton's Great Red Indian Village—Chiefs, Squaws, and Papooses. Voyage in a Submarine. Vanderdecken's Haunted Cabin. Famous Sea Fights Miss de Rohan's Musical and Dramatic Sketches. Tillikum Canoe. Auto-Photographic Portraiture. Switch back. Chutes.
FISH RESTAURANT IN QUEEN'S COURT.

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Mr. Ion Hamilton Benn | 449 |
| The March of Events | 450 |
| On the Links | 456 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 461 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 462 |
| The Parisians of Paris— "Thecla, or the Crime at Neuilly" | 464 |
| Under the Burgee | 466 |
| Yachts of the Year | 467 |
| The Traveller— On the Great Northern and North Eastern Railway | 468 |
| In Tynedale | 469 |
| Admiral John Paul Jones: The Last Phase—America Claims the Remains of the Conscript Father of Her Navy | 470 |
| The 107th Anniversary Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys | 474 |
| Literary Notes | 476 |
| Plays and Players | 477 |
| Cricket | 478 |
| The Racing Season | viii. |
| Leaves from a Collector's Note-book— Welsh Earthenware: Swansea | x. |
| Motoring Notes | xii. |
| Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xiv. |
| The King's Menu | xviii. |
| Here, There, and Everywhere | xx. |

 ERRATUM.—On the first page of our Supplement in last week's issue we reproduced the picture "Summer" which was exhibited at the Paris Salon. The copyright of this picture is vested in Messrs. Braun, Clement, and Co., of Dornach, Alsace, and this name should have appeared under the reproduction in place of that which we gave. We offer our apologies for the error.

TO LIBRARIES, CLUBS, HOTELS, Etc.

A Reading Case for THE KING can be had post free on application to the Publishers, George Newnes, Limited, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

HOTELS, etc.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

TORQUAY (Population 33,625).—PREMIER HEALTH RESORT. Unrivalled climate. Warm in winter. Sunshine-land. Charming drives and sheltered walks. 120 acres of public gardens. Piers.

TORQUAY. Irreproachable water supply and perfect sanitation. Theatre, concerts, and other musical attractions. Medicated baths of all kinds. Express trains from all parts.

For Illustrated Descriptive Books of Torquay, apply FREDK. S. HEX, Town Clerk.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524.
Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. ,, 858.
Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. ,, 641. Kensington.

Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date.
First-class cuisine.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence.

ENGLISH HOTELS—Continued.

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hôte or à la Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Close to Parades. Week End terms. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address: "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne.

SUMMER HOLIDAYS.—Wanted, July 25th, small Furnished COTTAGE, or three bed and one sitting room in pleasant country house. Good fly-fishing or golf near. Moderate.—"M.," Hillside, Bexhill-on-Sea.

FOREIGN HOTELS.

BIARRITZ.

GRAND HOTEL.—Winter Season.—First-class establishment. Splendid situation, facing the sea. Patronised by the elité; rendezvous of English Society. Every comfort; excellent attendance and cooking.—MONTENAT, Manager.

AXENSTEIN (Lake Lucerne; 2,350ft. above sea level; electric railway Brunnen-Axenstein).—First-class Hotel. World-renowned climatic health resort; patronised by English society. "Axenstein is the loveliest spot I met with on my journey through Switzerland."—QUEEN VICTORIA.

FOREIGN HOTELS—Continued.

TENERIFFE

HAS THE FINEST WINTER CLIMATE IN THE WORLD.

THE First-class HOTELS there are
the QUISISANA at Santa Cruz,
the AGUERE and CONTINENTAL at La Laguna, and
the MARTIANEZ (late Grand) at Port Orotava.
All under the Management of C. H. TRENKEL. Prospectus, etc., on application.

SHIPPING.

MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

Patronized by H.M. The King.

DOVERCOURT BAY, ESSEX,
HOTEL ALEXANDRA.

The Finest Health and Pleasure Resort on the East Coast. Facing the Sea. Bracing Air. Delightful Climate. The Hotel, which has recently been visited by H.M. KING, is luxuriously Furnished. Electric Light. Excellent Cuisine. Tennis, Croquet. Motor Garage and Pit. 1 hour 40 minutes express from London.

For Illustrated Tariff, apply A. H. THIEM, Proprietor.

HOUSES FOR SALE AND TO LET.

MESSRS. TROLLOPE'S REGISTER OF TOWN HOUSES, PROPERTIES FOR SALE OR TO BE LET, in Belgravia, Mayfair, South Kensington, Portman and other districts is now revised. A printed synopsis may be had on application to their offices:

WEST HALKIN STREET, Belgrave Square;
7, Hobart Place, Eaton Square; 14, Mount Street, Grosvenor Square; and 5, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.

N.B.—Special Lists of Town and Country Houses will be forwarded on receipt of applicants' requirements.

TO BE SOLD by AUCTION, at the MART, E.C., on THURSDAY next, JULY 13th (unless previously disposed of privately).

61, KENSINGTON COURT, W.—Freehold corner MANSION, of very special and unique character, built in three storeys, with semi-basement. Low reserve. Exceptional opportunity. Owner taking up residence in the country.

Solicitors, Messrs. WALTONS, JOHNSON, BUBB & WHATTON, 101, Leadenhall Street, E.C.

5, WEST HALKIN STREET, Belgrave Square, S.W.—Excellent medium-sized HOUSE, frontage about 32ft., suitable either as a private residence or for a professional man.

Solicitors, Messrs. ROOPER & WHATELEY, 17, Lincoln's Inn Fields, W.C.

TO BE SOLD by AUCTION, at the MART, E.C., on JULY 27th (unless previously disposed of privately).

MORTIMER HOUSE, Egerton Gardens, S.W.—Unique Detached MANSION, with large timbered garden. Reception rooms all on the ground floor. Detached stabling. Low reserve.

Solicitors, Messrs. ASHURST, MORRIS, CRISP & Co., 17, Throgmorton Avenue, E.C.

48, GROSVENOR GARDENS, S.W.—Modernised HOUSE, facing gardens. Stabling at rear. Forming an excellent residence for a family of rank.

Solicitors, Messrs. PRIDEAUX & SONS, Goldsmiths' Hall, E.C.

Detailed particulars, with conditions of sale and views, can be obtained of Messrs. TROLLOPE, West Halkin Street, Belgrave Square, S.W., or at any of their other offices; also of the Solicitors, as above.

CLOSE TO ALBERT GATE, HYDE PARK.

A Charming SMALL HOUSE, overlooking Lowndes Square, lately modernised and in excellent condition, with new drainage, etc., to be LET, at only £250 a year; small premium required; early possession.—Apply to the Agents, Messrs. TROLLOPE, West Halkin Street, Belgrave Square, and as above.

EATON SQUARE (just out of).—PRICE £4,000.

A Most Attractive SMALL RESIDENCE, with few but good bedrooms; the three large reception rooms, square hall, with wide corridor leading to winter garden, are all on the ground floor; nominal ground rent.—Agents, Messrs. TROLLOPE, West Halkin Street, S.W., and as above.

N.B.—Messrs. Trollope's Auction Announcements appear regularly in the "Times" on Saturdays and the "Morning Post" on Mondays.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

THE COLONEL TAKES THE 19TH (W/HOLE IN ONE!

Head Office:
11, SO. EXCHANGE PLACE, GLASGOW.

J. H. ROGER
PROPR.

LESSEE OF
H.M. CUSTOMS (No. 13) BOND, JAMES WATT STREET, GLASGOW.

Special Quotations to Golf Clubs.

"COLONEL BOGEY" WHISKY.

GUARANTEED 7 YEARS OLD.

42/- PER DOZEN. CARRIAGE PAID.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS
of every description, including
TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT.
MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.
Handsome Public Rooms, including
2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.

Terms from MANAGER.

ST. ANNE'S-ON-THE-SEA

(Near BLACKPOOL).

Contains
FOUR GOLF LINKS (18 Holes each).

Also facilities for
BOATING, BATHING, FISHING, CYCLING, TENNIS.
Splendid Beach. Ideal Holiday Resort.
ILLUSTRATED GUIDE FREE
on application to
SECRETARY, Advertising Committee,
Public Offices, St. Anne's-on-the-Sea.

LELANT, ST. IVES BAY, CORNWALL (close to golf links and station).—Furnished HOUSE, with plate and linen, to LET for Summer months; two large sitting rooms, six bedrooms, one dressing room, bathroom.—"T.B.H.," "Evelyns," Uxbridge.

SOUTHWOLD (best position on the Common; close to Golf Links).—To be LET, well Furnished, for June, July, and August, the pretty and artistic HOUSE known as "Link's Cottage," containing square hall, two sitting and large recreation rooms, servants' sitting room, seven bedrooms (fourteen beds), bathroom; electric light and telephone.—Apply to Mrs. ROBINSON, on Property.

THE LINKS, LLANGAMMARCH WELLS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

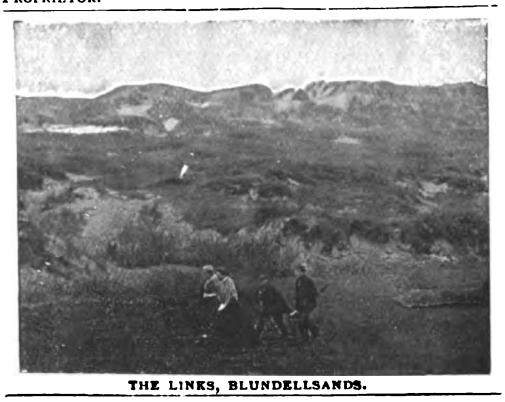
Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations.

High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hôte, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.



THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.
THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.
A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.
Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads.
Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.
Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.
Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.
New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,

Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.

To be obtained from Thos. Cook, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.

Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.

Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL.

SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.

Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head.

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.

Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 30s. Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address: "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY, Within easy access of London.

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers, inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable, being on sand.

DEVONSHIRE'S DELIGHTFUL DRINK.—The very best beverage for GOLFERS is WHITEWAY'S PURE CYDER. Refreshing, cooling, and a panacea for Gout, Rheumatism, and Obesity.
Booklets free from WHITEWAY'S, The Orchards, Whimple, Devon, and 22 and 23, Albert Embankment, S.W. Telephone 173 Hop.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer)

"Is it a Private House or an Hotel?" is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

Club Houses can be efficiently and economically lighted by

ACETYLENE.

Write H. BAKER, 49, Victoria Street, S.W.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. Cox, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL.—Brinklea, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY.

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method).—Manager, E. DIELMANN.

"SPALDING WHITE" GOLF BALL.

DRIVES 25 YARDS FURTHER THAN ANY OTHER GOLF BALL.

A. G. SPALDING & BROS.,
53, 54 and 55, FETTER LANE, LONDON, E.C.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.
Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.
Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.
Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.
MODERATE TARIFF.
Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months.
Perfect Sanitary arrangements.
Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE
Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit.

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL.

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.
Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select, and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

Pure JAEGER Wool

EXCLUSIVE MATERIALS & DESIGNS.

Wool "Taffeta," "Cambric," "Lattice-Web," Fancy Flannels, etc., specially selected for wearing quality, smartness, and for their pleasant and soft handle.

The most comfortable Shirts, Pyjama Suits, and Night Shirts obtainable for gentlemen.

PURE WOOL is known and recommended by Medical Men to be the safest and best for Summer Wear.

SHIRTS, from 8s. 9d.
NIGHT SHIRTS, 12s. 9d.
PYJAMA SUITS, 15s. 9d.

JAEGER
Pure Wool Knitted Golfers,

in plain colours and with coloured collars and cuffs.

Price 10/6.

Pure Wool Sheets and Blankets a Speciality.

Write for PRICE LIST (No. 24) containing Patterns and 230 Illustrations, post free.

LONDON—
126, Regent Street, W.
456, Strand (Charing Cross), W.C.
30, Sloane Street, S.W.
115, Victoria St., S.W.
85 & 86, Cheapside, E.C.

The JAEGER GOODS are sold in most towns. Address sent on application to Wholesale and Shipping Office, 95, Milton Street, London, E.C.

LOOK FOR THE LABEL! To checkmate the dishonest use of the name of JAEGER, look for the label on each article, and insist that the goods be described as "JAEGER" on invoice.

TRAVEL BY # WEST COAST ROUTE
BETWEEN . .
ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND.

Ellen's Isle. Loch Katrine.

SPEED and COMFORT.

Hundreds of Pleasure Tours Daily by Rail, Coach and Steamer, on London & North Western and Caledonian systems.

FISHING, SHOOTING, GOLFING
&c., &c., &c.

ACCELERATED TRAIN SERVICE:
LONDON (EUSTON), BIRMINGHAM, LIVERPOOL, AND MANCHESTER
WITH
GLASGOW (CENTRAL), EDINBURGH (PRINCES ST.), ABERDEEN, INVERNESS, OBAN, AND THE NORTH.

Descriptive Guide Books of West Coast Route on application to Mr. R. TURNBULL, Euston Station, London.

For Tourist Programmes and "Summer Tours in Scotland," "Oban and the Land of the Gael," "Through Scotland" Descriptive Guides, apply to Mr. G. Calthrop, Caledonian Railway, Glasgow.

Frederick Harrison, General Manager L. & N.W. Ry.
R. Millar, General Manager Caledonian Ry.

ST. JACOBS OIL

THE ESTABLISHED CURE FOR

RHEUMATISM

LUMBAGO, SPRAINS, SCIATICA.

"I should like to tell the public of the good St. Jacobs Oil has done me. When quite a boy I had a severe attack of Rheumatism, and could only walk with the aid of crutches, and in consequence I was obliged to give up my work. My parents used nothing but St. Jacobs Oil, and in a very short time I was again able to follow my occupation, and walk morning and night to work and home again, without using the crutches. I have felt nothing of the Rheumatism since, until last November, when I got very wet; but I am glad to say that with a few appliances of your Oil I was again set free.

"(Signed) W. DEACON,
"Rose Cottage, Bradford Street, Eastbourne."

January 12th, 1905.

Price 1/1½ and 2/6; of all Chemists.

CONQUERS PAIN!

"The House for Veils."

Largest Selection in London.

CHARLES LEE & SON,

The Royal Specialists for Ladies' Wear, . .

98 & 100, Wigmore St., LONDON, W.,

famous for

The Royal Crescent Veil,

a shaped Patent adjustable Veil, at prices and quality showing a great saving over veiling purchased by the yard.

9d., 1/-, 1/3, 1/6, 1/9, 2/-, 2/3, 2/6, etc.

MOTOR VEILS.
MOTOR HATS.
MOTOR VEILS.

The latest and largest selection in London.

Messrs. LEE & SON continue to send a box containing a good assortment by post; boxes ready for return, no trouble after selecting.

PRICE'S CANDLES.

GOLD MEDAL PALMITINE
FOR DINING & DRAWING ROOMS

GRAND PRIZE PARASTRINE
FOR USE UNDER SHADES

Digitized by Google

THE ROYAL MASONIC FESTIVAL.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

VOL. XX. No. 440. SATURDAY, JULY 8th, 1905. PRICE 6D.

Elliott and Fry.

MR. ION HAMILTON BENN

Conservative Tariff Reform Candidate for Greenwich.

(See page 461).

Digitized by Google

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 440. Saturday, July 8, 1905.

Editorial Offices—20, TAVISTOCK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephones—No. 2,748 GERRARD, AND 7961 CENTRAL.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

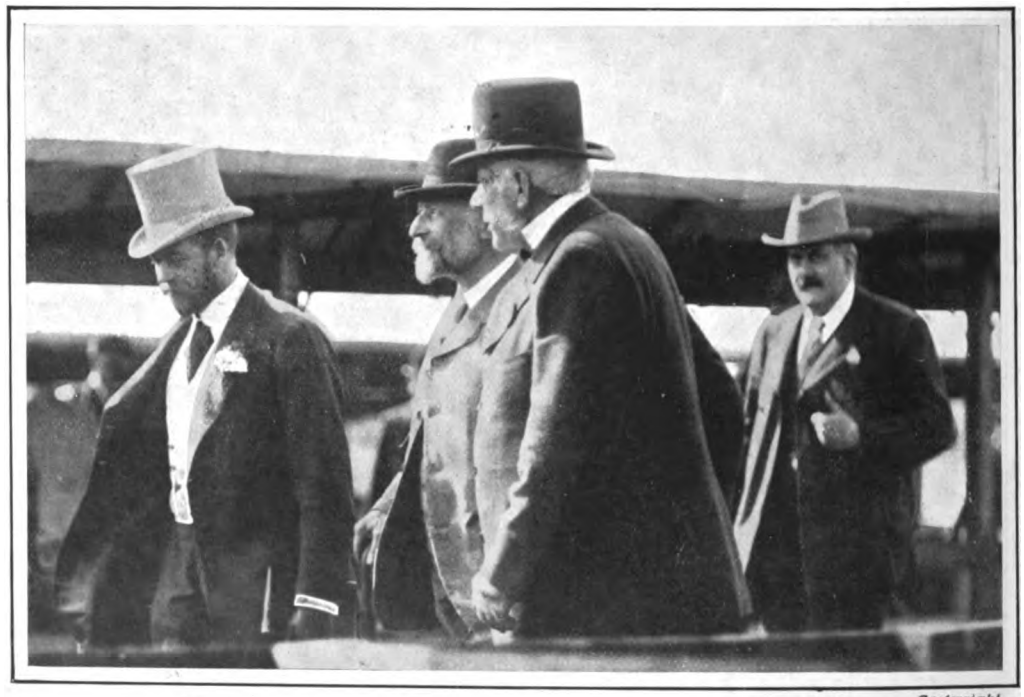
THE KING AT NEWMARKET.—With the regularity which we have all learned to expect in the movements of our Royalty, the King has again gone to Newmarket for the first July Meeting, and is staying at the Jockey Club premises until Friday afternoon. At Taplow for the week-end, at Newmarket in the middle of the week, and down in Gloucestershire with Lord Redesdale for Saturday and Sunday again, is a record in travelling of which any man, much less hampered with cares and work than is King Edward, might be proud. And next week he has another big programme to get through.

THE KING AND SOUTHWARK.—Millbank and Southwark have been honoured on successive working days with visits from the King and Queen. But whereas the visit in connection with the inaugural service at St. Saviour's Cathedral was a long and eagerly-expected one, the general public had no idea on Saturday last that Royalty were expected at the new military hospital which has been erected at Millbank for the accommodation of invalids from the London garrison. No name has yet been given to the institution, but in view of last week's visit it may well be that "the Alexandra Royal Military Hospital" may be chosen. Southwark Cathedral has been written about and described very frequently of late, and the inauguration of the new diocese is an important event in the annals of South London. The metropolis on the Surrey side of the Thames has spread so rapidly and so far that it is only remarkable that the new bishopric has not been brought into being earlier.



Cartwright.

THE PRINCE OF WALES AT PARK ROYAL.

On the opening day of the Royal Agricultural Society's Show this year the Prince of Wales paid an informal visit and stayed for some time examining the exhibits. The King won a number of prizes.

THE KING IN THE NORTH COUNTRY.—Sheffield next week goes one better than Cardiff, and for the opening of the new University buildings is to be honoured with a State visit of some four hours' duration. The town of chopped irregular streets, as an impressionist once called Sheffield, is not famous for its buildings, for t is but a few years since it emerged from a conglomeration of narrow streets and factories into a city of some pretentions to importance. Ruskin selected Sheffield as the home for his famous museum of pictures and minerals which is now to be found in Meersbrook Park, Thomas Creswick, R.A., was a Sheffield man to the core, though he lived much of his life in London, and Sir Francis Chantry was born and lies buried in the neighbouring village of Norton. The greatness of Sheffield lies in the work done within her buildings and not in the architectural beauties of their exteriors.

THE KING AND LORD REDESDALE.—This week the King goes down into Gloucestershire for a few days on a private visit to an old and trusted friend, who, as the Hon. Bertram Freeman-Mitford, served his country well in the seventies of the last century in St. Petersburg, Pekin, and Tokio. Lord Redesdale has a beautiful seat in Batsford Park, where he has made many valuable specimens of Japanese plants and shrubs grow. His experience in landscape gardening has been of great service in the alterations and improvements which have recently been carried out at Windsor, and upon several disputed points he was called in, in the capacity of what one may call consulting gardener. This year Lord Redesdale's fourth son comes of age, and the occasion is the more noteworthy in that this is the first time the King has been able to visit Batsford Park since his accession.

MARTIAL MUSIC.—Last week an expectant world learned of the Kaiser's latest whim. This time he has made a reform in the Military bugling of his empire. To replace the blatant blare of brass trumpets he has introduced bugles of antelope horn, quite a yard long, and has set the Chasseur Battalion of the Imperial Guard at Potsdam to teach the rest of the Army how to use their new instruments. If the note emitted by these horns be anything like that given out by the huge things used by cowherds in the Alps, then it is doubtful if any auctioneer would now describe the barracks at Potsdam as "a highly desirable family residence." Heard from a distance and re-echoed among the hills, the note of the Swiss cowherd's horn has a certain plaintive beauty, but it is entirely a case of distance and enchantment, for a nearer acquaintance is a thing to be regretted for days.

Digitized by Google

Copyright.

Copyright.

THE REVIEW OF CADETS IN HYDE PARK.

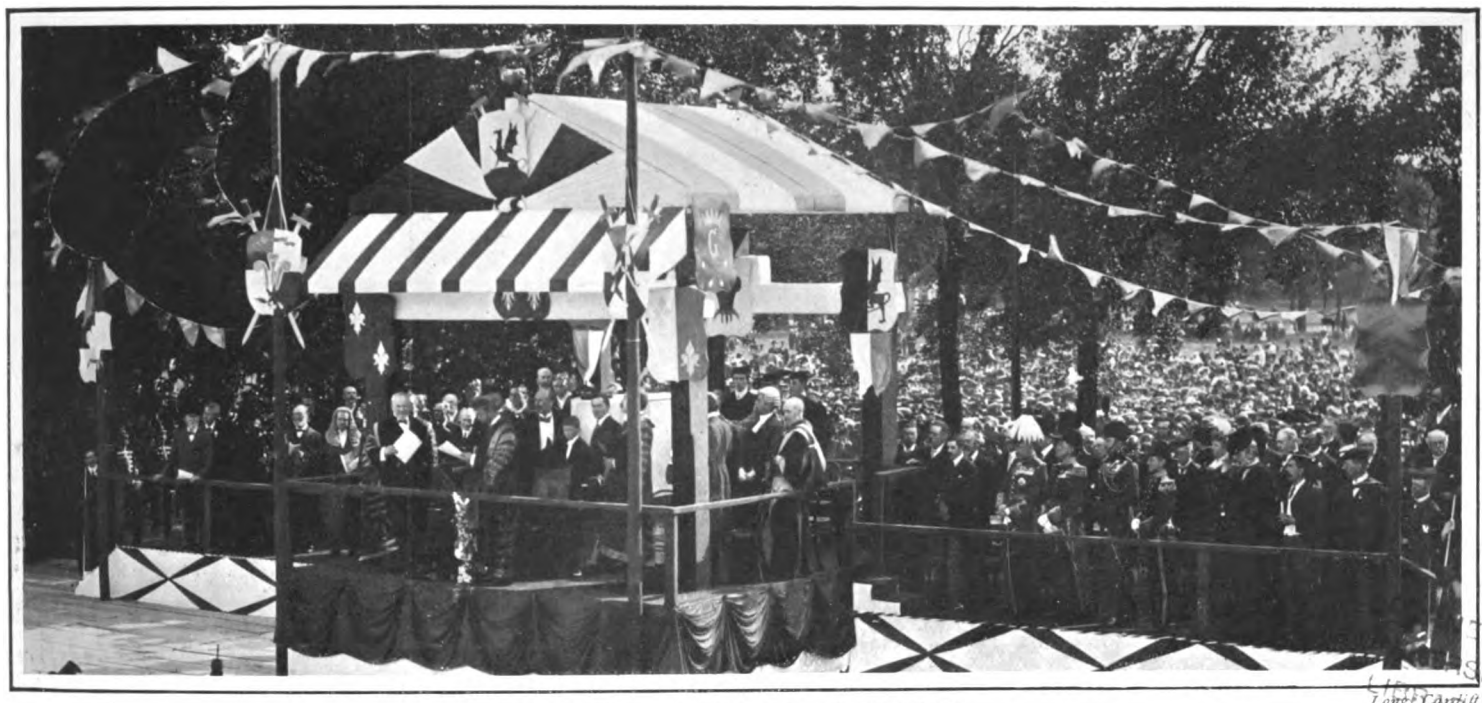
On Saturday afternoon the Duke of Connaught inspected about forty detachments of Volunteer Cadet Corps, totalling nearly 5,000 members. Our illustrations show the inspection of the Volunteer Medical Corps and the Duke and Duchess of Connaught at the saluting-point.



Long Cardiff

THE PRINCE OF WALES AT CARDIFF.

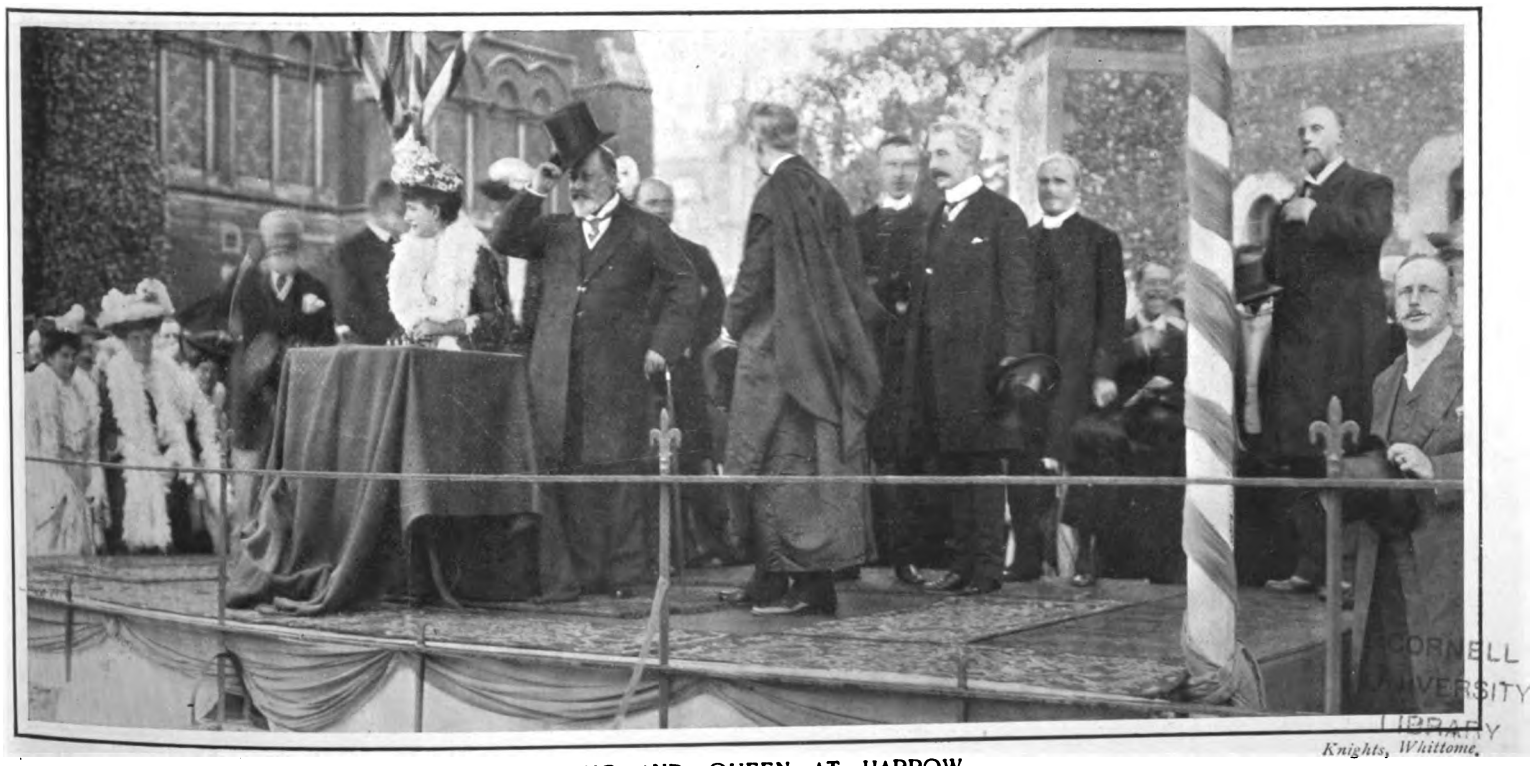
The foundation-stone of the new University buildings at Cardiff was laid by the Prince of Wales as Chancellor of the University last week.



CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Knights, Whittome.

THE KING AND QUEEN AT HARROW.

On the day on which his birthday was officially celebrated the King, accompanied by Queen Alexandra, went down to Harrow to open the new playing fields there. From the Pavilion the Queen despatched a message by wireless telegraphy to the further end of the fields, where a flag was unfurled to mark the conclusion of the opening ceremony.

Digitized by Google

Ellis.

COLONEL A. BAILLY BLANCHARD

Second Secretary of the U.S. Embassy in Paris, and prominently connected with the arrangements for the transference of Paul Jones's body.

Gilbert.

THE HON. R. McCORMICK

United States Ambassador to France, who has lent every assistance in his power to General Porter in the search for the body.

Savony.

GENERAL PORTER

To whose initiative and untiring labours the success of the undertaking for the removal of Paul Jones's remains from France to America is due.

Cribb.

Cribb.

SPORTS AT WHALE ISLAND.

A function which is always looked forward to with great interest in Portsmouth is the Whale Island Meeting, and this year a large gathering watched the proceedings under ideal climatic conditions. Our illustrations show a race with rifles and an officers' race.

Fradelle and Young.

A DINNER IN A GONDOLA.

The old courtyard of the Savoy Hotel was transformed, for one night only last week, into a Venetian lagoon, on the occasion of a dinner which Mr. G. A. Kessler gave to twenty-four friends. He told Mr. Pruger that he did not want an ordinary dinner, and to all appearances he got something that, for London, at any rate, is unique.

Digitized by Google

GYMKHANA AT RANELAGH.

Lady Cecil Scott-Montagu presented the prizes won in the successful gymkhana organised by the Ladies' Automobile Club at Barn Elms on Saturday last. Two interesting events were the competitions for smartness and general appearance of cars prepared for touring and prepared for the Park. The prize in the first was won by Mrs. Ernest Amsden, and that in the second by Mrs. Claude Borrett.

THE KING AND QUEEN AT THE SOUTHWARK CATHEDRAL.

The inauguration ceremony at the new cathedral at Southwark took place on Monday last, when the King and Queen were present. The Lord Mayor and the Mayors of seven London boroughs took part in the ceremony, and the scene inside the building was a brilliant and memorable one. On the way to the cathedral a loyal address was presented to the Royal visitors by the Borough of Southwark.

Digitized by Google

CANADA'S AMBITION.—The British, unlike the American, capitalist is as often a pioneer of Empire as the man in search of a fortune. Mr. Rhodes in South Africa, and Lords Strathcona and Mount-Stephen in Canada, each opened up a trade route across a continent, and linked up its strategical points with the iron road. To-day Sir William Van Horne and other rich men of the Dominion are extending Canadian influence in the Western Hemisphere. Already £20,000,000 of capital are invested in the West Indies, Mexico, and Honduras, much of it being in Cuban railways. The latest step is a contract with Elder, Dempster, and Co. to connect St. Lawrence ports with Central and South America. It should be remembered that the Dominion herself is half Latin, and, for this reason, she is popular where the United States is unpopular. Moreover, her people of either race seem to understand Spanish-Americans as the Yankee "hustler" never does. It will be no fault of theirs if their country fails to be to the twentieth century what the United States was to the nineteenth.

LADY DARNLEY'S EXHIBITION.—Lady Darnley's Arts and Crafts Exhibition at Cobham Hall held recently was a huge success. The first day there were 1,600 visitors, the second day 2,000. The idea is to encourage the growth of village industries, which, to judge by the wood-carving, basket-work, rustic chairs, and other exhibits, have a future before them. As for the water-colour sketches and photographs, they were of high artistic merit. So successful was the exhibition that it paid all expenses, with something over towards the development of technical education among the villagers. The life and soul of the movement are Lord and Lady Darnley, who belong to the good old school of the aristocracy, living among their tenants, with whose interests they completely identify themselves. This week they are in Ireland, where they opened a bazaar in aid of the church near Clifton Lodge. Here they are as much beloved as they are in Kent, but the Irish people are more demonstrative than the English. It is quite touching to see their devotion now that Lord and Lady Darnley are well known to them.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

MISS BETTINE CAVENDISH

Daughter of Major the Hon. William Cavendish, and niece of Katherine, Duchess of Westminster.

THE CANADIAN MAILS.—The new turbine steamer "Virginian" of the Allan Line has crossed the Atlantic in four and a-half days, a record trip. The fastest of the American "greyhounds" take a day longer. The Dominion is thus beginning to reap the fruit of her geographical advantage. For Nature makes her stretch out towards Europe on the one side, and towards Asia on the other. In this way both in the Pacific and Atlantic she is better situated for trade than the United States. Sir William Murdock says that in time she will distribute the mails of the entire North American Continent, which is a prophecy bound to come true. It is not generally known that the first steamer to cross the ocean was built in Canada, the first line of steam-ships was founded by a Nova Scotian, Samuel Cunard, and St. John, New Brunswick, was the first port of call until the substitution for it of New York. It is an odd turn in the wheel of fortune that gives back to Canadian ports their lost precedence.

CANADIANS AT COPPED HALL. — The Canadian manufacturers who are in England at the invitation of the London Chamber of Commerce, were lately the guests of Mr. S. B. Boulton, its chairman, at Copped Hall. It is an old house, one room of which is hung with rare Gobelins tapestry, and the nearest village, Totteridge, is typically English. As the day was fine, the Colonial visitors saw an old country scene at its very best. They saw also an ancient oak which rivals even New World trees in size. The Hall itself is interesting from another point of view, for here the Colonial, Cardinal Manning, was born. His father was a West Indian merchant, whose family settled in Jamaica in the reign of Charles II. He was at the time Governor of the Bank of England. On his mother's side Manning was supposed to be of Italian extraction.

A CANADIAN IN THE JAPANESE ARMY.—The Chief of Scouts in the Japanese Army now operating in Manchuria is a Colonial. It will be remembered that when war broke out hundreds of Canadians volunteered aid to the Mikado's Government. Evidently the help of at least one was accepted. He is Lieutenant T. C. Callaghan of Toronto. In the South African War he served with the Mounted Rifles, and afterwards with Howard's Scouts. On the death of this gallant American he organised a corps called Callaghan's Scouts, which did excellent work in the later stages of the campaign. He holds the Distinguished Service Medal for carrying to General Smith-Dorrien from General Hutton an important despatch. The distance he covered was 70 miles, in the course of which two horses died under him. At one time he was shot through the body, and at another given up for dead, laid out, and carried to a newly-dug grave. A comrade saved his life by reviving him with a cup of green tea. In the Intelligence Branch of the Japanese Army he rose until he is now Chief of Scouts with 200 men under him.

A NEW ENGAGEMENT.—Mr. C. J. Thornhill, son of Colonel C. Thornhill, R.A., is engaged to Miss McCulloch, an Australian. Her father, the Hon. W. McCulloch, is the well-known pastoralist and statesman. Born in Scotland, he went out to Victoria as a young man, and soon prospered. He has a freehold station in Victoria and another in New South Wales, besides several leased stations in Queensland, and is a most successful breeder of thorough-bred stock and horses. For the past twenty-five years Mr. McCulloch has been a member of the Legislative Council, and has several times held Cabinet rank. It is not long since he came home to reorganise the Agent-General's office of his Colony in London. He lives near Castle Bellingham, where the Marquess of Bute was so picturesquely married on July 6.

Digitized by Google

SPORT AND PASTIME.

ORNELL
IVERSI

LIBR

Copyright.

AT WIMBLEDON AND BEDDINGTON PARK.

(1) H. L. Doherty, holder of the Singles Championship, who is defending his title at Wimbledon this week. (2) Miss May Sutton, the famous American player, who has been attracting considerable attention at Wimbledon during this year's Championship games. (3) Archery at Beddingt . On the g ound during the Southern Counties' Meeting last week. (4) The Lawn Tennis Championships. The game between A. F. Wilding (New Zea and) and W. J. Clothier (America), which resulted in a victory for the New Zealander. Wildin; was subsequently beaten in the fifth round by A. W. Gore. (5) Miss D. K. Douglas, the Lady Champion, who is defending her title at Wimbledon this week.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

THE judgment of Mr. Justice Buckley in the Chancery Division on the Haskell ball marks one of the great revolutions in the game. Every golfer should read the judge's decision in extenso, for it is a charming blend of humour as to the fascinations of golf as a game, as well as of judicial poise in estimating the value of evidence. Shortly stated, the Haskell ball no longer enjoys a monopoly in the assertion of its patent rights. In the event of the House of Lords agreeing with Mr. Justice Buckley anyone will be able to manufacture a rubber-core ball, and the result to golfers will be, through width of competition, a possible reduction in the price.

* * *

The manufacturers of the "Kite" ball disputed the validity of the Haskell patent, and this is what Mr. Justice Buckley says:

"If I am right in my view of the evidence, the thing for which the plaintiffs claim novelty was not new, for Captain Stewart had done it and published it before. It is immaterial that he did not continue to use it down to 1898. Fernie or Stewart, and not this patentee, was the first and true inventor. Let me repeat the factors or ingredients in which, in my judgment, the novelty is said to consist. A ball of wound rubber-thread was not new. A cover of gutta-percha was not new. The novelty is said to consist in a composite ball consisting of a latent resilient core of wound rubber-thread or other analogous material, muffled by a cover of relatively hard inelastic material. That construction was the construction adopted by Fernie and by Captain Stewart. The plaintiffs fail, I think, on the issue of novelty."

* * *

The competition for the Scottish Ladies' Championship was held at North Berwick, and resulted in a win for Miss Dorothy Campbell after a hard struggle. The matches were marred to some extent by broken weather. The ladies played over the full medal round of the long course, a concession which was made in response to their express desire.

THE SCOTTISH LADIES' CHAMPIONSHIP.

Miss Dorothy Campbell, the winner of the Scottish Ladies' Championship at North Berwick, and one of the semi-finalists in the Open Championship at Cromer.

The Golf Association, which has been formed by the Scottish ladies, is presided over by the Countess of Eglinton as president, Miss Agnes Grainger and Miss M. Graham as vice-presidents, and Miss M. V. Hamilton Campbell as hon. secretary and treasurer. Among the competitors were Miss M. Graham (the holder of the Championship), Miss Glover, Miss Grace Robertson of Troon, Miss Dorothy Campbell, Miss Maitland of Elie, Miss Titterton, and Miss Park of Musselburgh. In the preliminary scoring competition, Miss Glover, by brilliant all-round play, returned a score of 91, and won the first prize, Miss Titterton being second with 94.

* * *

In the first round of the Championship the most surprising results were the defeat of Miss Glover by Miss Grace Robertson by one hole, and of Miss M. Park by Miss W. Robertson by 5 and 4 to play. At the turn Miss Glover led by five holes, and at this point of the game a heavy storm of wind and rain swept over the links. The rain caused great difficulty to Miss Glover through making the grips of her clubs very slippery, but Miss Robertson, by plucky and steady play homewards, gradually reduced Miss Glover's lead. At "Perfection" Miss Glover was 2 up, but she lost the "Redan," and topping her drive at the next hole, this, too, was lost to her. Miss Glover topped into the bunker in the second shot for "Point Garry," and then landed on the beach, eventually giving up the hole. Miss Robertson, by holing a putt of 5-yds. at the last hole, won the match amid cheers by a hole. The final was played between Miss M. Graham (the holder) and Miss Campbell, and, after a ding-dong match, victory was only secured by the last-named by a putt at the nineteenth hole.

* * *

The Annual Championship Meeting of the Yorkshire Golf Union was held at Redcar. The best scratch score among the lady competitors was returned by Miss K. G. Moeller, who had a brilliant round of 80—43 out and 37 home. Miss Robson of the Cleveland Club, however, won the competition with a net score of 79, and the same lady, in the first round of the Ladies' County

THE PRESENTATION CEREMONY.

Sheriff Melville, captain of the New Club, North Berwick, presenting the medal to Miss Dorothy Campbell.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

Championship, beat Miss Moeller by 2 and 1 to play. The great surprise of the meeting was the defeat of Miss B. Thompson, the Open Champion, by Miss Robson in the semi-final by a hole, chiefly through the excellence of her putting. In the final, however, Miss Robson did not quite maintain her early playing form, and the result was that she was rather easily beaten by Miss Evelyn Steel of Sheffield by 5 and 4 to play. The ladies' meeting was a great success.

* * *

The final round of the Yorkshire Amateur Championship (photographs of which are published this week) was decided on the Redcar Links. Mr. J. S. Roddam (Cleveland) and Mr. F. Robson (Cleveland), two local players, were the finalists, and after a close match Mr. Roddam gained the victory at the thirty-seventh hole. In the first round the match was very evenly contested up to the fourteenth hole, where the players were all square. Mr. Roddam, however, won the next four holes in succession, and finished the round with a lead of 4 up. He became five up at the first hole in the afternoon, but seven halves followed, and Mr. Robson got back a hole at the ninth. From that point Mr. Roddam went off his game, and the match was squared on the home green. The next hole was secured by Mr. Roddam, who thus won the Championship.

* * *

The formal opening of the Bramshot Golf Club (an illustrated account of which was published in THE KING a few weeks ago) took place on Saturday. Situated on the borders of Hampshire and Surrey, within a few miles of Aldershot, the new links should prove a great boon to Army officers. Planned by J. H. Taylor, an exceptionally fine sporting course has been evolved from land which twelve months ago was little more than a wilderness of gorse and heather. The holes are of excellent length, the longest (the eighteenth) being 520-yds., and the shortest (the twelfth) being 120-yds. Altogether the links measure 6,220-yds. The tees and putting greens were in surprisingly good condition. The opening ceremony was performed by Lord Lawrence, who, at the inaugural luncheon, briefly announced that the course was open for play, and afterwards drove the first ball. Already the membership list numbers nearly 100. Mr. Walter Carr played the best ball of Sir Henry Seton-Karr, M.P., and Mr. C. C. Wyllie, and after a close match Mr. Carr gained the victory by 1 hole. He went out in 41 strokes. Among those present were Mr. Ernley Blackwell, the captain, Sir F. W. Fison, M.P., Colonel Dorling, Mr. F. Bonham Carter, Major Wise, and Captain W. J. Seton, the secretary.

* * *

The St. George's Challenge Vase, annually competed for at Sandwich, was won by Mr. R. Harris of Carnoustie, with the gross score of 154 for the two rounds—76 and 78. This is the same score as Mr. J. Graham won the Vase with last year. Mr. C. K. Hutchison and Mr. J. S. Worthington were 159, Mr Hilton 163, and Mr. V. A. Pollock 164.

* * *

On Friday, June 16, J. H. Taylor played an eighteen-hole match against Mr. G. F. Kellner and Sidney Morris, local players on the Bude (North Cornwall Golf Club) links, the local players winning by 3 up and 2 to play. The scores were: J. H. Taylor, 40 out and 40 home,

THE SCOTTISH LADIES' FINAL.
Miss Dorothy Campbell putting and Miss M. A. Graham, all square at the 13th hole.

A NORTH BERWICK HAZARD.
The crowd crossing the Eel Burn at North Berwick. Miss Rusack, one of the semi-finalists, is crossing the far bridge, closely followed by Mr. James Law of the Scotsman, an enthusiastic golfer, who did good service as steward in keeping the large crowd at the Ladies' Championship in order.

SCOTTISH LADIES' CHAMPIONSHIP.
The crowd rushing to "Point Garry" hole at North Berwick in the final between Miss Dorothy Campbell and Miss M. A. Graham.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

A. H. Robinson.

YORKSHIRE UNION MEETING.

Mr. H. Steel (Bradford) at the 1st tee in the Championship tournament.

against 39 and 38 respectively, the score of the best ball of the local players. Taylor was brought down to advise the committee as to improving the existing course. There was an east wind, and the greens were unusually keen, making putting to some extent a matter of luck. It is understood that Taylor formed a favourable impression of the links.

* * *

Last week the competition for the monthly medal at Bexhill was won by Mr. Ivon De Wynter with the good score of 80—9=71.

* * *

A new golf course was opened at Fort William a week ago by Mrs. Cameron Lucy of Callart, the Lady Superior of the burgh. Sheriff Davidson, in calling upon the lady of the manor to perform the opening ceremony, took occasion to remark that 500 years ago games were not common in the Highlands, the dwellers in those parts being more addicted to the use of the claymore than the more pacific methods of pastime prosecuted by people of the South Country. Certainly there had been no golf course extant in the Highlands even half a century ago; but now the fascinations of the game were catching on, and in his opinion it was a game that ought to be accorded all encouragement. Mrs. Lucy then drove off the first ball with a silver-mounted club presented to her by the Lochaber Club. Mrs. Cameron Lucy afterwards addressed the company, dwelling particularly on the antiquity of golf, and advocating its more extensive adoption as a pastime by the people of the district. A competition then took place for two prizes presented for competition between members of the four district clubs. Upwards of twenty competitors took part, and the winners were Mr. A. Young (91) and Mr. A. Clow (98), both being of the Lochaber (Fort William) Club.

* * *

An interesting tournament at Cruden Bay has been brought to a close for possession of the challenge trophy of the club. The final match was played between Mr. H. H. Harley, Edinburgh, and Mr. M. Duncan, Royal Aberdeen. A large crowd of visitors at the Cruden Bay Hotel followed the match, but Mr. Duncan, a good deal off his game, was beaten by 4 up and 3 to play. The Earl of Erroll, president of the club, presented the prizes at the close of the meeting.

A. H. Robinson.

YORKSHIRE CHAMPIONSHIP MEETING.

Mr. J. S. Roddam (Cleveland), the winner, driving from the 1st tee. Standing next to him is his opponent, Mr. Watkinson, whom he beat by 3 and 2. Mr. Kyle, the hon. secretary of the Cleveland Club, with pipe in mouth, is on the right of Mr. Watkinson.

A. H Robinson.

THE YORKSHIRE CHAMPIONSHIP.

Mr. F. Robson (Cleveland) at the 1st tee, with his opponent, Major Sutton Lowe (Scarborough), whom he beat by 1 up in the second round.

* * *

The Le Touquet golfers have lately had a busy time playing a series of matches against the Bar Golfing Society, the Press Golfing Society, and other clubs. This course in Picardy is rapidly improving. It is fairly long and beautifully varied, while for a course that has been opened only a year the putting greens are in first-rate condition. Golf in the daytime amid pine woods and sand-dunes, and music and the attractions of petits chevaux in the evening at the Hermitage, make an interesting variety of amusement. In the match against the Press rain fell heavily throughout the day, and somewhat spoiled the matches: but the bad weather was powerless to damp the bright spirits of the willing French boy and girl caddies, who show a marvellous alertness in learning the English terms of the game. Mr. Horace Hutchinson, playing for the Press, went round in 73 strokes—a record for the course. He beat Mr. B. Darwin, who also showed fine form with a score of 75, by 2

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

THE YORKSHIRE LADIES' CHAMPIONSHIP.

(1) Mrs. Grumler (Ravenscliffe) driving, Miss B. Firth (Headingley) watching the shot. (2) Miss E. Steel driving over "Majuba" to the 16th hole, Miss Thompson watching the shot. (3) Miss Norah Haigh (Wakefield) putting on the 13th green, Miss Moeller looking on. (4) Mrs. Archbold Smith (Headingley) putting on the 15th green, Miss Robson (Cleveland) on the right. (5) Miss H. Wake (Brough) playing to the 6th hole, Miss G. Storey (Harrogate) watching the shot. (6) Miss Haigh, Miss E. Steel, and Miss Thompson discussing the scores in the first round. (7) Miss B. Thompson, the Open Champion, driving to the 13th hole, Miss E. Steel watching the shot.

(From photographs by A. H. Robinson, Scalby.)

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

and 1. The scores were: Mr. Hutchinson —Out—5 3 5 5 5 3 4 2 4—36; home—5 3 5 4 4 4 3 4 5—37=73. Mr. Darwin—Out—4 3 4 5 5 4 5 3 5—38; home—4 4 4 3 5 5 3 4 5—37=75. All the matches were close.

* * *

While playing a round over the old course at St. Andrews the other day Mr. Thomas Newlands, Guardbridge, had an unusual experience. A skimming ball struck him over the vest pocket, smashing his watch. A large indentation was made in both the outer and inner cases, breaking both the dial and glass. He suffered somewhat himself from the force of the shock.

* * *

The competition for the Jubilee Casket, presented by Mr. J. H. Roger of Glasgow, open to members of certain Scottish golf clubs, who must be fifty years of age or upwards, took place over the St. Nicholas links at Prestwick. There was a good entry, and competition was very keen, three players being found to have tied at 77. The following were the best scores: John M. Fraser, Ranfurly Castle, 91—14=77; John Scott, Cathcart Castle, 85—8=77; Robert Pyper, St. Nicholas, 83—6=77; Hugh M'Nab, St. Nicholas, 90—12=78. The three gentlemen who tied played off later in the afternoon, with the result that Mr. Robert Pyper won, Mr. Scott being second, and Mr. Fraser third.

A. H. Robinson.

YORKSHIRE UNION MEETING AT REDCAR.

Mr. G. T. Croslan.l (Huddersfield) driving from the 1st tee, his opponent, Mr. Spencer, standing slightly in front of him.

A. H. Robinson.

THE YORKSHIRE UNION MEETING.

Mr. H. D. Gaunt driving from the 4th tee, surrounded by a select gathering of critics.

Correspondence.

GOLF AT MITCHAM.

To the Editor of "The King."

Sir,—I am glad to see that the Town Clerk of Croydon has finally set at rest the legal position of the Prince's Golf Club to the use of Mitcham Common for the game. There has been a good deal of friction between the golfers and certain members of the public who have tried to nurse a grievance against the playing of the game there. There was the usual cry in these cases of ill-instructed zeal that a fine common was being annexed for the selfish amusement of the rich in the West End to the exclusion of the poor general public, and all sorts of invocations were addressed from political platforms to get Parliament or somebody else to stop golf at Mitcham, and give the beauties of the common over to the cruel destruction of the rowdy footballer and equally noisy cricketer.

After the report of the Croydon Town Clerk, the position of affairs has altered. The golfers are shown to be the lineal descendants of the lords of the manors, and that the "general public" who have been making all this unheard-of hubbub are really themselves trespassers on the land. They cannot, at any rate, play golf without the sanction of the Prince's Club, who are the licensees of the Mitcham Conservators for the next thirty years.

Every lover of suburban beauty and orderly administration will rejoice at the clearing up of the doubts. I remember the common when it was a wilderness of gorse, the haunt of the cut-purse and the lewd loafer, the dumping ground of the predatory gipsy. It was full of yawning gravel-pits, scarred and unsightly, and a danger to respectable citizens after nightfall, and even in the daytime to women and girls. The golfers came and "policed" the common in the interest of public safety and good morals. They spent thousands of pounds in filling up the gravel-pits with good soil and turf, and in cutting away rank undergrowth which had been the hiding-place of evil. Can anyone deny that the coming of the golfers has been to the general local advantage in a hundred ways, and not least to the permanent beautifying of one of the best of London commons? Instead of underhand attempts being encouraged to oust the Mitcham golfers, the thanks of the local residents, to say nothing of the general public using the ground with unrestricted freedom, should be heartily given to the men who saved an open space from the destructive effects of local neglect and apathetic indifference.

The golf club, at any rate, are there for the next thirty years under a strict legal covenant which not even the militant zealots of Croydon can overthrow. Rejoice, ye Mitcham golfers! —I am, etc., A Mitcham Resident.

A. H. Robinson.

YORKSHIRE UNION MEETING.

Play in the County Championship. Mr. H. H. Barker (in dark jacket) and Mr. H. D. Gaunt returning from the match which Mr. Gaunt won by 2 and 1. The reporter with note-book in hand is busy gathering copy.

FIXTURES.

July 8.—Hanger Hill, Medal.
July 8.—Sundridge Park, Treasurer's Cup.
July 10.—Folkestone, Summer Meeting.
July 10.—Hanger Hill, Granby Bowl.
July 12.—Beckenham, Ladies' Summer Meeting.
July 15.—Raynes Park, Summer Meeting.
July 15.—Hayling, Summer Meeting.
July 16.—Boulogne v. Le Touquet, at Wimereux.
July 22.—Hanger Hill ("Bogey.")
July 29-31.—Lytham and St. Anne's, Summer Meeting.
July 31.—Irish Open Amateur Championship, at Dollymount.
August 1.—Royal and Ancient, Calcutta Cup.
August 3.—Hunstanton, Foursome Competition.
August 4.—Seaford, Summer Meeting.
August 4.—Royal West Norfolk, Summer Meeting.
August 5.—Ipswich, Wood Cup.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. L.—Mr. Ion Hamilton Benn, Prospective Conservative Tariff Reform Candidate for Greenwich.

FROM the reign of Henry IV. Greenwich has played an all-important part in the annals of British Royalty; on September 7, 1533, Queen Elizabeth (the "Great Eliza" of Johnson's turgid verse) was born here; James I. erected a "House of Delight" near the park; and in 1694 Queen Mary transformed the lordly palace of her predecessors into a Royal Hospital for Seamen. The Ministerial fish dinners of which Greenwich was the scene date from Henry VII.'s reign, when the Marquess of Exeter appears to have acted as host. The historic Ship was in existence as far back as 1634, but Pitt and his successors in office patronised the Crown and Sceptre down to the year 1858, when the venue was transferred to the Ship. Eight years later the owners of the Conservative Ship acquired the Liberal Trafalgar. Gradually these political symposia became more and more intermittent, and since Lord Rosebery's dinner in 1894, when Mr. Punch immortalised his narrow escape of missing the steamer, no effort has been made to revive them. If Flanders was described in the days of both Marlborough and Wellington as the "cockpit of Europe," Greenwich, from 1868 downwards, assuredly merits the designation of the prize-ring of practical politics. It was here that Mr. Gladstone as Premier for the first time found a haven of rest when defeated in South-West Lancashire by Viscount Cross; it was at Greenwich, in October, 1871, that he performed the notable physical and intellectual achievement of addressing for two entire hours a meeting of 20,000 persons in the open air, and it was to the electors of Greenwich that he wrote the famous letter of January 24, 1874, announcing, as a bolt from the blue, the dissolution of Parliament two days later. In the result he was re-elected, but only as junior colleague to Sir T. W. Boord, a staunch Conservative, who now declares, with no uncertain voice, in favour of the equally whole-hearted supporter of the policy of the present Conservative leaders, Mr. Ion Hamilton Benn.

Mr. Benn comes of an old Cumberland family, which established itself in the North of Ireland about the middle of the eighteenth century. If Greenwich Conservatism wants a man whose device is "Thorough," and to whom all "sitting on the fence," political and otherwise, is anathema, it has assuredly found an ideal champion in the person of Mr. Benn, who boldly avows his sympathy with Tariff Reform in the sense Mr. Chamberlain understands it. Born some forty years ago in Ireland, Mr. Benn was educated at Merchant Taylors' School, and while still on the sunny side of thirty became partner in a leading firm of merchants in the City of London having large interests on the other side of the Atlantic and in the North of Europe. This circumstance naturally led to much travel on the Continent and to numerous visits to the United States and Canada, and his uncompromising belief in the necessity of Tariff Reform, if England hopes to hold her own as a great mercantile community, is the result of much thought and mature experience. Mr. Benn is, by virtue of long residence, a Greenwich man. He was elected last May chairman of the Greenwich Conservative Club, which numbers 1,000 members on its muster roll, and now occupies the once gastronomically-celebrated Crown and Sceptre. He has for some time represented Greenwich on the Metropolitan Water Board, and was Mayor of the "Royal" Borough in 1891-92. His residence, Hendra, Blackheath, in the very centre of the constituency he hopes to represent, gives a local colouring too often missing amongst those who aspire to a seat in Parliament. Twenty years ago he married the only daughter of the late N. Bridges, Esq., of Wallington Manor and Blackheath. They have one daughter, and their only son is now at Rugby. Mrs. Benn is endowed with almost as much energy as her husband. She is one of the managers of the Greenwich group of L.C.C. Schools, a member of the Council of the Deptford Medical Mission, and is deeply interested in the work of both Tariff Reform and practical philanthropy. Mr. Benn is a member of both the Junior Carlton and City Carlton Clubs, is an enthusiastic yachtsman, and owns the "Betty," a smart yawl of 92-tons, which flies the flag of the R.T.Y.C., and aboard of her he spends most of his leisure time.

Bullingham.

MRS. ION HAMILTON BENN

Wife of the Prospective Conservative Candidate for Greenwich.

The decision of the Conservatives of Greenwich, under the able leadership of Mr. G. Rowland Hill (the popular president of the Rugby Football Union) and Mr. Albert Lawes, to support the candidature of Mr. Benn, and oppose that of Lord Hugh Cecil, was only arrived at after long and earnest deliberation. The course they have resolved upon was not adopted until Lord Hugh Cecil had identified himself with the Liberal opposition, in three distinct votes of censure, and in speeches delivered on Cobdenite platforms in various parts of the country. At that time the present Conservative Tariff Reform candidate for Greenwich was chairman of the Kidbrook and South-East Greenwich Conservative Association, which had loyally supported Lord Hugh in the triumphant struggle of 1900. Mr. Albert Lawes was chairman of the Charlton District Association, while the old Central Association (now, as far as the great majority of its members are concerned, replaced by the Greenwich United Conservative Association) was ruled by Sir T. W. Boord as president, and Mr. G. Rowland Hill as chairman. Mr. Benn did not consent to come forward until Lord Hugh Cecil deliberately declined to comply with the wishes of his once loyal and enthusiastic adherents. His public utterances afford abundant proof that it is he and not his former supporters who must be held responsible for the "split," which bids fair to make the triangular duel at Greenwich one of the most interesting and important contests of the next General Election. The choice of the electors lies between two Free Traders (the one a Tory High Churchman and the other a Liberal of advanced views) and a moderate Conservative who makes no secret of his sympathy with the cause of Tariff Reform. Mr. Benn is firmly convinced that a change in our fiscal policy is not only desirable but imperative. Competition with "protected" countries, he points out, will increase as time goes on, and our main hope for the future lies in the development of trade within the Empire by preference. Four hundred millions of people, he contends, can do a great deal of business without any outside assistance. Mr. Benn, as a clear-headed and shrewd man of business, does not, of course, contemplate anything like exclusive trading. He believes that the proposed tax on wheat by no means entails an increase of the price of food. On the contrary, he thinks that, even if the cost of bread were raised a trifle at first, it would be more than balanced by reductions on other articles of food. Mr. Benn's arguments on this subject, based as they are on his own experience, are well worth attention. In Greenwich Mr. Benn enjoys the rare distinction of being regarded as a prophet in his own country and something more, and it is confidently expected that the logical speeches and cogent arguments by which he justifies the faith which is in him, will go a long way towards giving him the seat in Parliament filled during an important crisis in British history by William Ewart Gladstone.

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

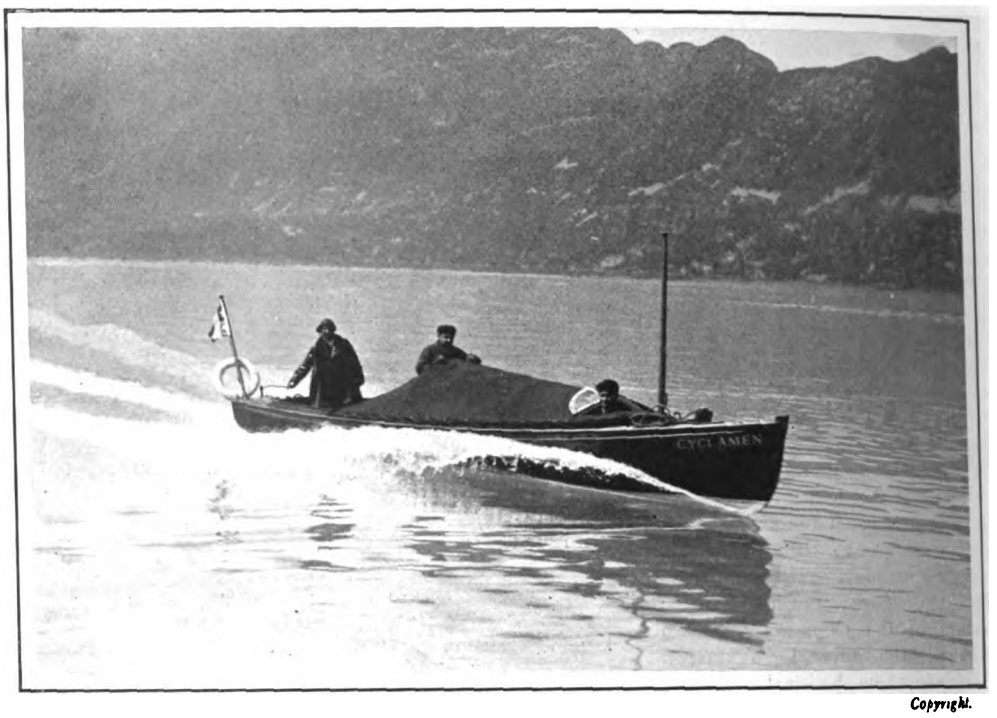
THE question of insurance is becoming a serious matter for motorists, as the scale of premiums has recently shown a tendency to rise to a prohibitive height. The owner of a medium-powered car can easily spend £20 or £30 a year in attempting to cover himself against all the usual risks, and yet find many weak points in his policy should he have occasion to put it to the practical test of a claim. Presumably the companies have found motor insurance less profitable than they anticipated, and there is little doubt that the careful owners are paying for the sins of those who largely rely on their policies to secure them from pecuniary loss as a result of their reckless driving. I have often discussed the question of insurance with motoring friends, and I find that two distinct views are taken of the matter. Some regard it as a convenient means of saving them from all the worry and expense attendant on an accident, however trivial, as every matter that can possibly come within the contract is immediately referred to the insurance company to deal with. There is much to be said for this aspect of the case, which, I think, appeals most to wealthy motorists, or those who mistrust their ability to avoid accidents. On the other hand, not a few owners regard the probability of an accident as comparatively remote, but as prudent men are not prepared to take every risk upon their own shoulders. Personally, I have always taken the latter view of motor insurance, and at the present time obtain a reduction of 50 per cent. in premiums on condition that I meet all claims under £10 out of my own pocket.

An expert on insurance recently stated that the vast majority of claims were for small amounts, and that the cost of investigating these trivial occurrences was a heavy item in the year's expenses. The companies were, therefore, glad to grant a greatly-reduced premium if they were relieved from all responsibility for sums under, say, £10. I hear that the underwriters at Lloyd's, who nowadays appear to be ready to cover any risk under the sun, have carried this principle still further in a motor-car policy which has recently been prepared by them. The minimum claim is fixed at £25, and relying upon the care which this proviso is expected to secure, the premium is placed at the very low rate of 1 per cent. per annum on the value of the car. The risks covered include fire, explosion, and self-ignition; damage to the car while it is being used; damage to property or persons (other than passengers); and legal expenses, where a claim by a member of the public has been contested with the consent of the insurors; the total claims, however, under the policy are not to exceed the amount of the policy. Thus the owner of a car valued, say, at £750, can be insured against all the usual risks up to an amount which should practically render him secure, in return for an annual premium of £7 10s. if he is willing to take the responsibility for all claims not exceeding £25. The scheme is certainly an attractive one from many points of view, but will hardly appeal to the owner of a low-priced car which would have to be seriously knocked about before the cost of repairs amounted to £25. I have mentioned the Lloyd's policy because it possesses several points of novelty, but it may be that the ordinary insurance companies would be prepared to grant similar terms.



Copyright.

THE AUTOMOBILE MEETING AT AIX-LES-BAINS.
The Cyclamen running at full speed on Lake Bourget.

I have a suspicion that it is the noise, smell, and smoke of a few petrol cars, and not reckless driving, which has led to the exclusion of all automobiles from the Park during the afternoon. The smoky exhaust nuisance has been very much in evidence during the last few months, and it is by no means the grimy mechanic on the trade car or unfinished chassis who is the only offender. One constantly sees smart-looking motor-carriages pouring forth clouds of pungent fumes, while the well-dressed occupants appear supremely indifferent to the annoyance which the carelessness of their driver is causing to the public. The makers are largely to blame in the matter, as there is hardly a car on the market in which proper provision is made for keeping the oil in the crank chamber at a proper level. As a result the driver only feels certain that the engine is receiving sufficient oil when it is smoking, and, if the owner is indifferent as to the nuisance it may cause, naturally adheres to this rough-and-ready system of checking the working of his lubricators. For the first few hundred miles a new car may require an overdose of oil, but until it can be run with a clean exhaust without fear of harm to the engine, it is certainly not fit to be used on the London streets during the crowded hours of the day. It ought to be more generally known that the petrol car can be made practically odourless, and that smoke and smell are merely the result of faulty design or bad driving.

The law as to the emission of smoke is in a very unsatisfactory state from the public point of view, and there is no doubt that a

W. A. Rouch.

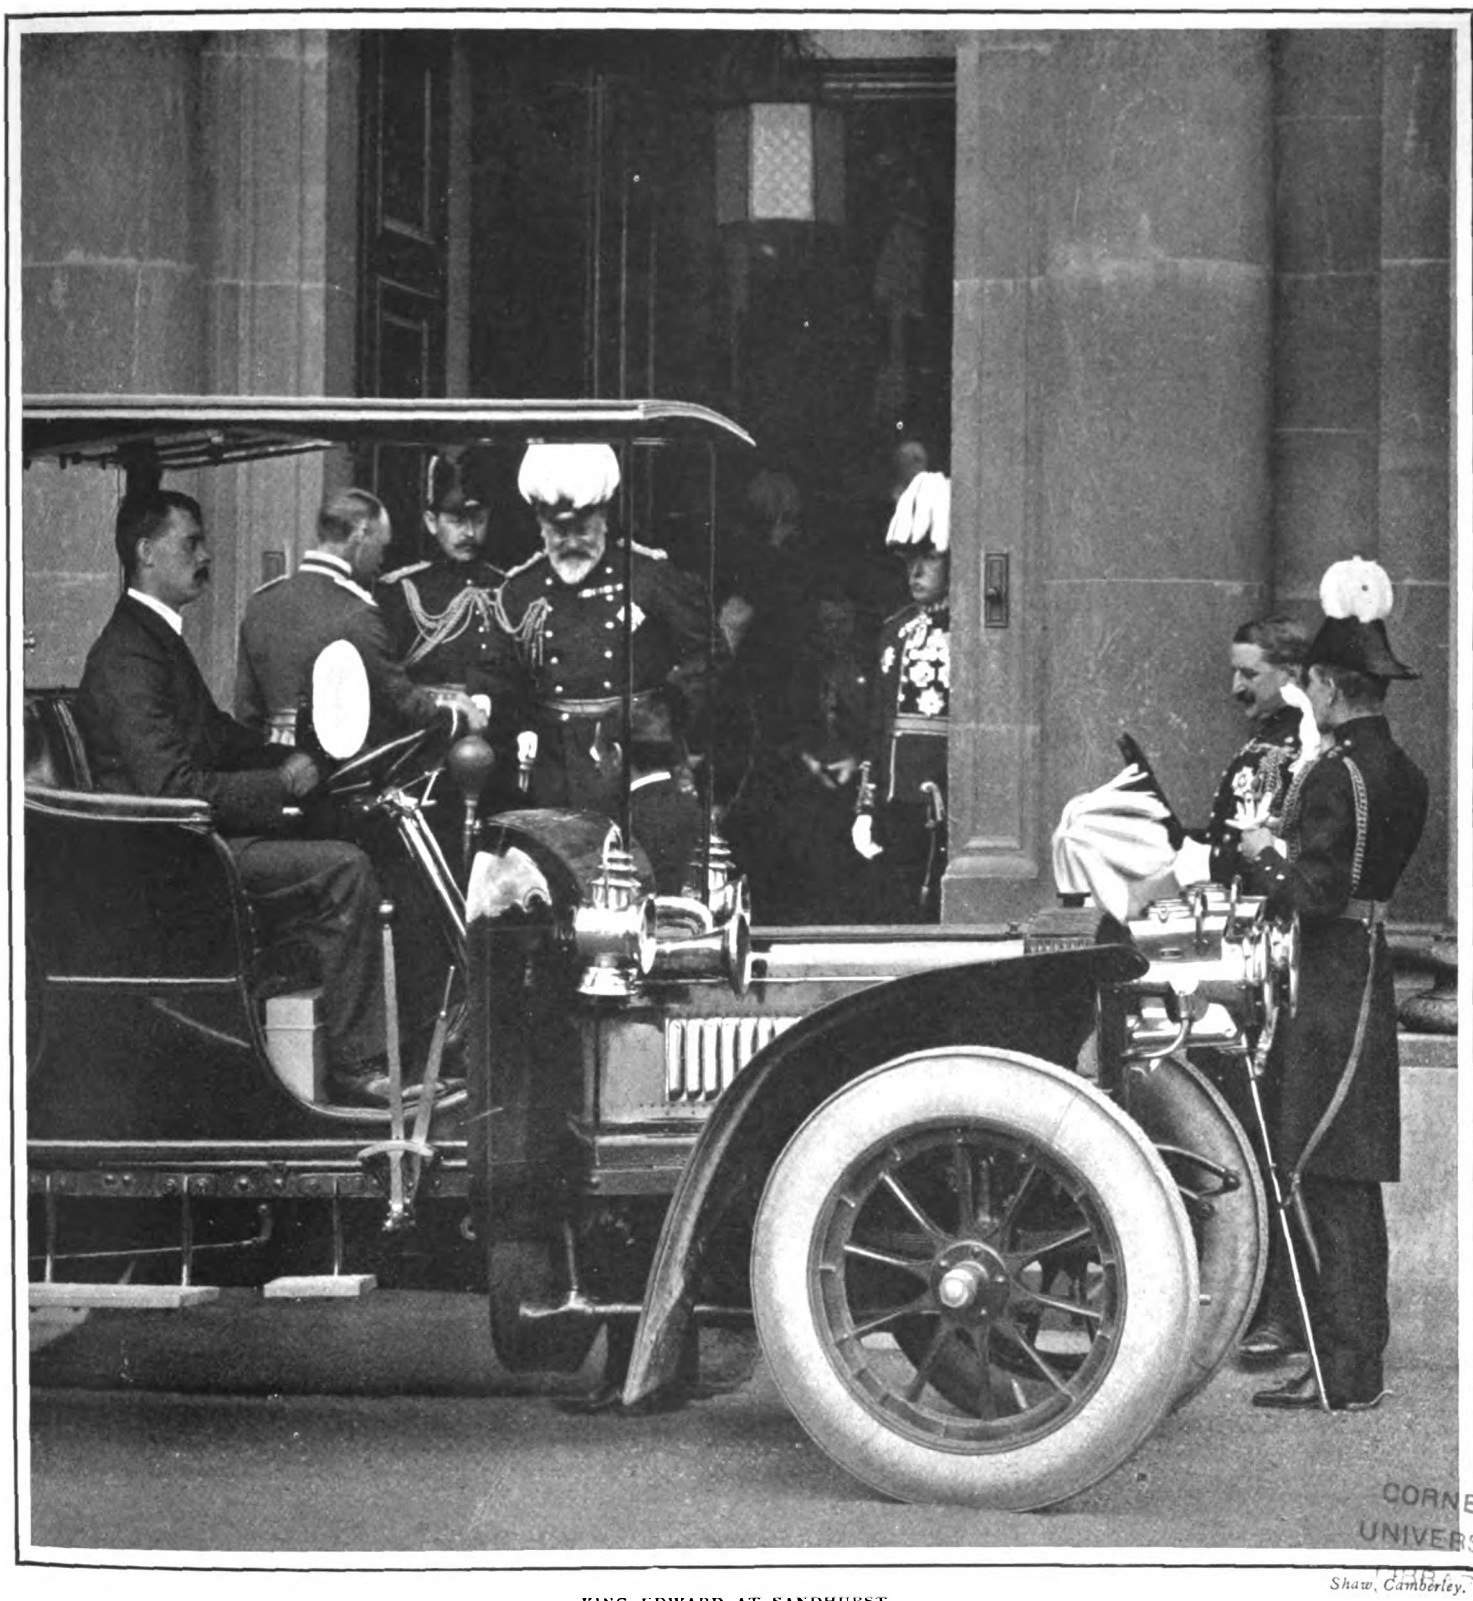
THE LADIES' AUTOMOBILE CLUB GYMKHANA AT RANELAGH.
Mrs. Todd Newcombe, winner of the crawling race, on her 16—20-h.p. Richard-Brasier.

Digitized by Google

change will be made when the Act of 1903 comes up for revision. There is no specific prohibition of the emission of smoke in any of the enactments, but a motor-vehicle, in order to come within the Act of 1896, must be constructed so that "no smoke or visible vapour is emitted therefrom, except from any temporary or accidental cause." If a car fails to comply with this condition, it is not a "light locomotive" within the meaning of the Act, and, therefore, comes under the old laws which restrict a motor-vehicle to a speed of four miles, and require a man with a red flag to walk in front of it. At first the police used to take proceedings against the drivers of cars which emitted smoke or visible vapour, but it was found to be exceedingly difficult to secure a conviction on account of the words "temporary or accidental cause," as it was an easy matter for the defendant to prove that the vehicle was properly constructed, but that the smoke was due to some accidental or temporary defect. As a result the law has become practically a dead letter, a fact of which selfish motorists seem ready to take a temporary advantage. How short-sighted this conduct is will be apparent when a clause is introduced into the Act which will probably have the result of making a driver liable for any emission of smoke, however temporary and accidental it may really be.

Some weeks ago, when discussing the advantages and disadvantages of the motor-boat, I stated that the danger of fire on an open petrol launch could be reduced to a minimum if the engine and its accessories were installed by a firm accustomed to the work. This assertion was seemingly contradicted a few days later by the issue of a Thames Conservancy order directing that motor-boats should not be allowed to "lock" with other craft. The new regulation, which is only a temporary measure, is intended as a safeguard against the dangers which arise from boats in which insufficient attention has been given to the fitting of the fuel tanks and pipes, and the position of the carburettor and silencer. A code of bye-laws applicable to the construction of motor-launches on the Thames is in course of preparation, and until the bye-laws come into force the Conservators are wise in preventing any risk of a conflagration which might cost several lives, and put an end to the popularity of the motor-boat for years to come. Petrol floats on the surface of water, and it does not require a vivid imagination to realise what might be the result if a motor-boat caught fire in a crowded lock.

RADIATOR.



Shaw, Camberley.

KING EDWARD AT SANDHURST.

The King taking leave of Sir Henry Rawlinson after his visit to the Staff College, Camberley. The car is his Majesty's new 28-h.p. Daimler.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

"THECKLA, OR THE CRIME AT NEUILLY."

ALMOST attractive title! So the organisers of the performance thought when they placarded the booths of the annual fair with "Theckla, ou le drame de Neuilly," by M. Jean Lorrain, in bright red letters. They reckoned that the name of the author would arouse the interest of the neighbourhood, and that the owners of the charming villas would flock in their hundreds to see a play so alluringly presented, and that the charity for which it was given would profit largely. But they had made their calculations without a very exact knowledge of the inhabitants of the Parisian suburb, highly-respectable people, attending church and chapel, receiving among each other, paying little attention to any of the arts practised outside the gates. The home also of a large English colony who suburbanise as naturally on the outskirts of the City of Paris as in any of the districts round London, where Jean Lorrain and his writings have not penetrated.

Some months ago Neuilly received a shock. A terrible crime was committed, and certain private details were brought forward in the public courts, and caricatured and criticised none too severely. And Neuilly has not yet recovered its equanimity. Therefore, there was consternation in the community when "Theckla, or the Crime at Neuilly" was so flagrantly announced. Was it a recapitulation of the famous "affair"? Would there be allusions to the concierge and the ladies? These were the questions asked on all sides of the avenues and boulevards. In apartments and mansions there was a disquieting feeling that all the protestations of officials could not set at rest. At length the eventful night arrived, a dress rehearsal in a booth at the Neuilly Fair, with authors, financiers, musicians, painters, and a good sprinkling of Society people in the big and the little world squeezing past the burly policeman into the 400 seats beneath the striped awning. At ten o'clock the curtain rises, and the Montmartre singers commence their repertoire. And still they come; ladies in wonderful lace dresses and strings of pearls, hats with long white feathers and roses from the Rue de la Paix, mantles of embroidered gauze, and an overwhelming perfume, push their way through, notwithstanding the orders of the smart commissary, anxious to avoid the possibility of a disaster. The booth is now packed from floor to ceiling, every place occupied by men in evening dress and women en grande toilette. There was a murmur when Fursy attacked his celebrated "On 'sait pas," on the Syveton case, but it soon subsided. "It's alright," said my neighbour, a Neuilly official; "if we had not assured the inhabitants that the crime in the play was not the crime, there would have been five hundred shoulders shaking the booth at the present moment." Fursy's song was an accident; he had probably forgotten he was in Neuilly.

What then is the excitement? Why have the Parisians come into the suburbs? Why do we find here Baroness X. and Countess Z.; fashionable painters and well-known authors? The reason is plain. Some time ago M. Jean Lorrain wrote a novel called "La Femme à Wilhem," a novel wherein he shows the weaknesses and failings of Society women, and the machinations of Society painters, said to be founded on fact.

"Theckla, or the Crime at Neuilly," is the dramatised version of these facts, and all Paris who feed on the potins, the scandals of the boudoir and studio, must "live" the few delicious moments when the circus girl stabs the countess and the baroness tempts the wrestler. There were looks exchanged, and discreet touches, and the hundred and one signs that Society women have at their fingers' ends to attract each other, and journalists coughed and painters fidgeted, and altogether everybody had, what Americans call, a lovely time.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Reutlinger.

ANNA HELD IN "NAPOLEON."

This popular actress is shortly to appear at a London theatre.

But here is the story. Joséphа Baster, a well-known demi-mondaine, has had her portrait painted by Mario Steinberg, the fashionable artist. In his studio she meets a model, a man named Wilhem, who takes her fancy. Mario sees the importance of a scandal, and reckons that to have painted the portrait of a woman who becomes notorious will be a good advertisement for him. He and his wife therefore spread the rumour that Joséphа is violently in love with the handsome athlete, and that she is constantly at the wrestling booth at the Neuilly Fair, trying to attract his attention. Theckla, the wrestler's wife, is jealous, and one night, exasperated more than usual, gives Joséphа a blow, and but for the timely aid of the troupe would have killed her. The proprietor, fearing a repetition of the scene, discharges Theckla. But, suspicious of the beautifully-dressed women who crowd round her Wilhem, she hides herself; and then the catastrophe occurs. Mario and his guests, a number of hysterical women and Society idlers, having heard of the affray, come to see the man for whom two women have fought. The women stare at him, some with undisguised admiration. Mme. de Monnier thoughtlessly offers him a flower, when Theckla rushes forward and stabs her. The countess dies without uttering a sound, and the curtains falls.

It is a scathing satire on a certain section of Society, on the immorality and heartlessness of both men and women, and the folly of a better class—like the Countess Monnier—who are dragged along by the current. In opposition M. Jean Lorrain shows the primitive life, the simpler and purer atmosphere of the circus world, and makes a brilliant, but revolting, study of Society painters, who stoop at nothing in their craving for notice.

An uncomfortable half-hour was passed by more than one of the company in that stifling booth. But nobody moved. The eyes of their world were upon them, and each hoped to pass unrecognised.

FRANCES KEYZER.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

A PRETTY PARISIENNE AMONG THE AUDIENCE AT THE FAIR AT NEUILLY.

(From a photograph by Boyer, Paris.)

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

THE Royal Temple Yacht Club, whose annual week of regattas commences to-day at Ramsgate, has, within the last few years, become one of the most active organisations devoted to the sport, and the Ramsgate Week is welcomed by many yachtsmen as filling what was formerly a blank in the season's racing calendar, so far as this district was concerned.

The club was founded as far back as 1857, and for many years its membership was composed chiefly of river sailing-men, and it made no pretensions to a place amongst the clubs devoted more particularly to the encouragement of the sport in the larger classes. Towards the close of last century, however, the club began to expand, the Admiralty warrant was obtained entitling it to the prefix "Royal," and its members to the right of flying the blue ensign, and the membership began to increase considerably, many owners of big vessels becoming members.

That which served particularly to bring the club into prominent notice was the winning of the Coupe de France by a yacht flying the club's burgee at the Mediterranean regattas in 1899, when Eldred won the trophy, which was put up for international competition for yachts of twenty tons, French measurement. The club was not permitted to remain long in undisputed possession of the trophy, a challenge being forwarded quite early in the spring of the same year from Count Castellaine. Mr. Hore defended, and built a vessel specially for the contest, entrusting the design to Mr. Arthur Payne, who had produced Eldred. Interest in international racing ran high in that year, as Sir Thomas Lipton was making his first attempt to win the America Cup, and the Coupe de France matches, instead of being overshadowed by the bigger event, attracted more attention than they probably would have done otherwise. Laurea, the defender of the French trophy, was out sail-stretching in the Solent at the same time that Shamrock I. was taking part in her preliminary spins.

The matches were sailed off the eastern end of the Isle of Wight in the August of that year, and resulted in a decided victory for the English boat, which was commanded by E. Sycamore. Undaunted by the defeat, another challenge was forthcoming in the following year, when Laurea did duty a second time as defender, and again proved victorious, the matches on this occasion being sailed off Ramsgate, where the club had now established seaside quarters.

The Ramsgate quarters have done much to promote the welfare of the club, and the membership soon outgrew the accommodation originally provided, and rather more than a year ago considerable additions were made to the premises, whence a fine view seaward is obtained. On two occasions the club has entertained the German yachtsmen who have taken part in the races across the North Sea, given as a return for the annual Dover to Heligoland races.

Debenham, Ryde.

FALCON

A 36-footer belonging to Mr. J. A. Leckie, built from W. Fife's design. Racing in this class having declined on the Clyde, her owner has taken her South for the season, in company with Barabel, another well-known Clyde boat.

Sir Henry Seymour King is commodore of the club, and is also a member of the Royal Yacht Squadron. He has owned several vessels at different times, and Glory, the yacht which now flies his flag, is the biggest yawl-rigged yacht ever designed in this country. She is a Payne design, and was constructed as a comfortable cruiser, and only occasionally takes part in races, chiefly those of the Royal Squadron or the Royal Temple. The vice-commodore is Mr. J. H. Clutton, a well-known sportsman, and Mr. W. J. P. Peacock is rear-commodore, while the secretarial duties are ably performed by Mr. Harry Vandervell, with the assistance of Mr. W. J. Boyton as Ramsgate secretary.

The week's racing at Ramsgate and Deal is not viewed with any great favour on the Clyde, as it clashes with the Northern Fortnight. It has, however, to be borne in mind that, even under the old régime of the "round the coast" regattas, there were many owners who never made the passage round to the Clyde, but preferred to wait down South, or do some cruising on the East Coast until the Ostend Regatta. For these, the Royal Temple Week fits in most admirably, and it will not be the fault of the club if it is not regarded as one of the most important fixtures of the year. Last year the club became affiliated to the Solent Classes Racing Association, and gave a day's sailing on the Solent; but this year it is showing itself content with its week of fixtures at Ramsgate and Deal. The boats of the 52-ft. racing class are up on the Clyde, so that there will be no pure class racing at Ramsgate; but in previous years the club has succeeded in arranging most interesting programmes, and the presence in the neighbourhood of the old 52-footers, Gauntlet, Induna, Senga, and Viera, always provides a good racing class. The course for the competitors in the bigger class events is laid round the Goodwins, and in fine weather the progress of the races from start to finish can be followed from the shore.

There is far more interest in the sport on the Solent this season than was anticipated early in the year. The revival of the 36-ft. class was somewhat unexpected, and is due in a measure to the transference of two boats of this class from the Clyde to Southern waters — Barabel and Falcon — the class having gone under up North. These, with Edie and Ma'oona, make an excellent class. There is a fine class of 24-footers, numbering seven. The majority of clubs give handicap races for small cruisers, and then there is the class, formed this season, of ex-raters. The one-designers, however, for many seasons the strongest class in the Solent, show a remarkable falling off. The fact that racing has been revived in the 36-ft. class, the most important one on the Solent, is most satisfactory, and everyone interested in yachting will hope that it may be regarded as indicating the beginning of a general revival in the sport.

CORINTHIAN.

FIXTURES.

July 8, 10, 11, 12, and 13.—Royal Temple Yacht Club, Ramsgate and Deal.
July 14 and 15.—Royal Cinque Ports Yacht Club, Dover.

Digitized by Google

YACHTS OF THE YEAR.

NYLEPTHA II. Debenham, Ryde.

One of the 24-footers, a most popular class on the Solent, in which there are more entries at every regatta than in any of the other Y.R.A. classes. She is owned by Mr. W. W. Greenhill, and was built by Sibbick.

MA'OONA Debenham, Ryde.

A 36-footer, owned by Mr. Talbot Clifton. Early in the year it was expected that there would be no racing in this class on the Solent; but fortunately the sport generally shows signs of improving in the district.

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

ON THE GREAT NORTHERN AND NORTH EASTERN RAILWAY.

THE average Southerner, accustomed to taking his annual vacation for the most part in those counties bordering upon the English Channel, possesses but scant knowledge of the delights which await him in the vast holiday playgrounds of the North. Since mere distances count for so little nowadays, there is really no reason why he should not form a more intimate acquaintance with that lovely and interesting country through which the silvery Tyne flows, commonly called Tynedale. To reach it requires but small initial outlay of both time and money, thanks to the liberal co-operation of two great railways—the Great Northern and North Eastern Companies.

Cheapness combined with celerity of travel form the keynote of the East Coast route to the North. You can lunch in London—or, even better, while away an hour or so of the journey in one of the Northern Company's comfortable dining saloons — reaching the great coal metropolis of the North, which is also the most convenient centre whence to explore the dale of the Tyne, in excellent time for dinner.

The Tynedale district, which includes among other objects of unique interest the great Roman Wall, occupies a broad stretch of country, extending almost in a straight line from Newcastle to Carlisle, or from sea to sea. It is perhaps unsurpassed in historical associations, forming the battle-ground of the Roman legionaries and the savage Caledonians; and yet later the scene of many a bloody Border foray, when the followers of Bruce and Douglas, and certain other Scottish chieftains, swept Southwards. The district is one that well repays a visit, if only for the sake of seeing the well-preserved remains of the Roman Wall which Hadrian threw across the neck of the island from Tyne to Solway. Moreover, the holiday-maker will be further rewarded by the exquisite scenery, beautiful woods, fascinating streams and lakes, and delightful old towns and villages, which he will meet with in the course of his rambles through Tynedale.

Those who journey from the South will find it convenient to remain a night in Newcastle before starting to explore the region of the Dale and Wall. Abundant facilities are offered to the traveller in Northumbria. For example, he can avail himself of the convenient holiday contract tickets, which cover any number of stations anywhere between the points for which they are available. These tickets, issued by the North Eastern Company, will be found of great benefit to those who contemplate taking a short holiday of a week to a fortnight, while others, with a month to spare, can choose from a series of twelve specially-arranged circular tours, which cover, practically, all the places of interest on the North Eastern system.

Journeying westward from Newcastle, the line follows pretty closely the course of the Tyne, and to the north is the famous Roman Wall, of which the principal evidences are to be seen at Cilurnum, Borcovicus, and Ambog-lanna. This remarkable military work extends from Wallsend to Bowness on the Solway, a distance of, roughly, 73 miles. According to Dr. Bruce, who is the chief authority, its features all belong to one period, and were built at the command of Hadrian. The wall, it is contended, was raised primarily as a defence against the North, while the vallum, or earth wall, on the south side, was used as a protection against the unruly tribesmen of the South.

A short distance from Newcastle, and we enter what is known as Stephenson's country. At Wylam can be seen the little house, known as High Street House, where the father of the locomotive was born; married at Newburn, on the Northumberland side of the river, close by is Black Callerton Colliery, where he worked as a "grit bare-legged laddie."

Continuing the journey to Hexham, which is considered perhaps the best centre for exploring Tynedale, as also the lovely Allendale district, we shall pass through Prudhoe, with its picturesque ivy-clad ruin, Stocksfield, Riding Mill, and Corbridge.

From Hexham a trip should certainly be made to Allendale, reached by a branch of the North Eastern Railway. The glorious sylvan scenery by the banks of the Allen baffles description. Here are to be found Langley Castle, a relic of the Edward III. period, still in fine preservation; and Ridley Hall, associated with the martial Ridleys, situated amidst the most romantic of surroundings. About a mile to the east of Bardon Mill Station the Allen joins the South Tyne, and in the neighbourhood stands the peel-tower of Willimoteswick, another residence of the Ridley family, and in particular of Master Nicholas Ridley. Bardon Mill is celebrated chiefly on account of its accessibility to the two Roman stations, the fine section of Wall, and the Northumberland lakes.

Photochrom.

THE GREAT ROMAN WALL BUILT BY THE EMPEROR HADRIAN.

This immense military work, erected during the Roman occupation, extends from Wallsend to Bowness on the Solway, a distance of seventy-three miles. The picture shows one of the most remarkable sections of the Wall, near House Steads, where there was formerly a Roman station.

Digitized by Google

IN TYNEDALE.

THE VALLEY OF THE TYNE. Photochrom.

A comprehensive view of the district known as Tynedale, one of the most popular holiday playgrounds of the North of England. The district is characterised by exquisite scenery, beautiful woods and lakes, and delightful old-world towns and villages.

ON THE RIVER ALLEN, ALLENDALE. Photochrom.

A picturesque bit of this beautiful stream, which finally joins the Tyne near Bardon Mill. The river Allen abounds in romantic and historical associations, not the least interesting of these being Ridley Hall and the ruined fragments of Staward Peel. Langley Castle, a well-preserved relic of the Edward III. period, is also in the neighbourhood.

Digitized by Google

Admiral John Paul Jones

THE LAST PHASE. AMERICA CLAIMS THE REMAINS OF THE CONSCRIPT FATHER OF HER NAVY.

BEFORE these lines reach the eyes of our readers, Admiral Sigsbee's squadron will have arrived at Cherbourg, the last solemn rites in Paris (where Paul Jones has slumbered in an unknown grave for more than a century) will have been duly celebrated, and in all human probability the "Brooklyn," the "Chattanooga," the "Tacoma," and the "Galveston" will be once more crossing the Atlantic, bringing back to the country of his adoption the bones of the intrepid sailor who for four generations at least has been the subject of so many legends and so much misconception. Time has at last enabled the historian to judge Paul Jones (or, correctly speaking, John Paul) both dispassionately and impartially. The privateer, pirate, and smuggler of the chap-books and broadsides of our grandfathers is now recognised as a Naval officer of rare skill and tactical ability; a desperate fighter, but, at the same time, a brave and generous foe—a man who, if he had lived to fulfil his destiny, had in him the makings of a Nelson, a Togo, or a Farragut.

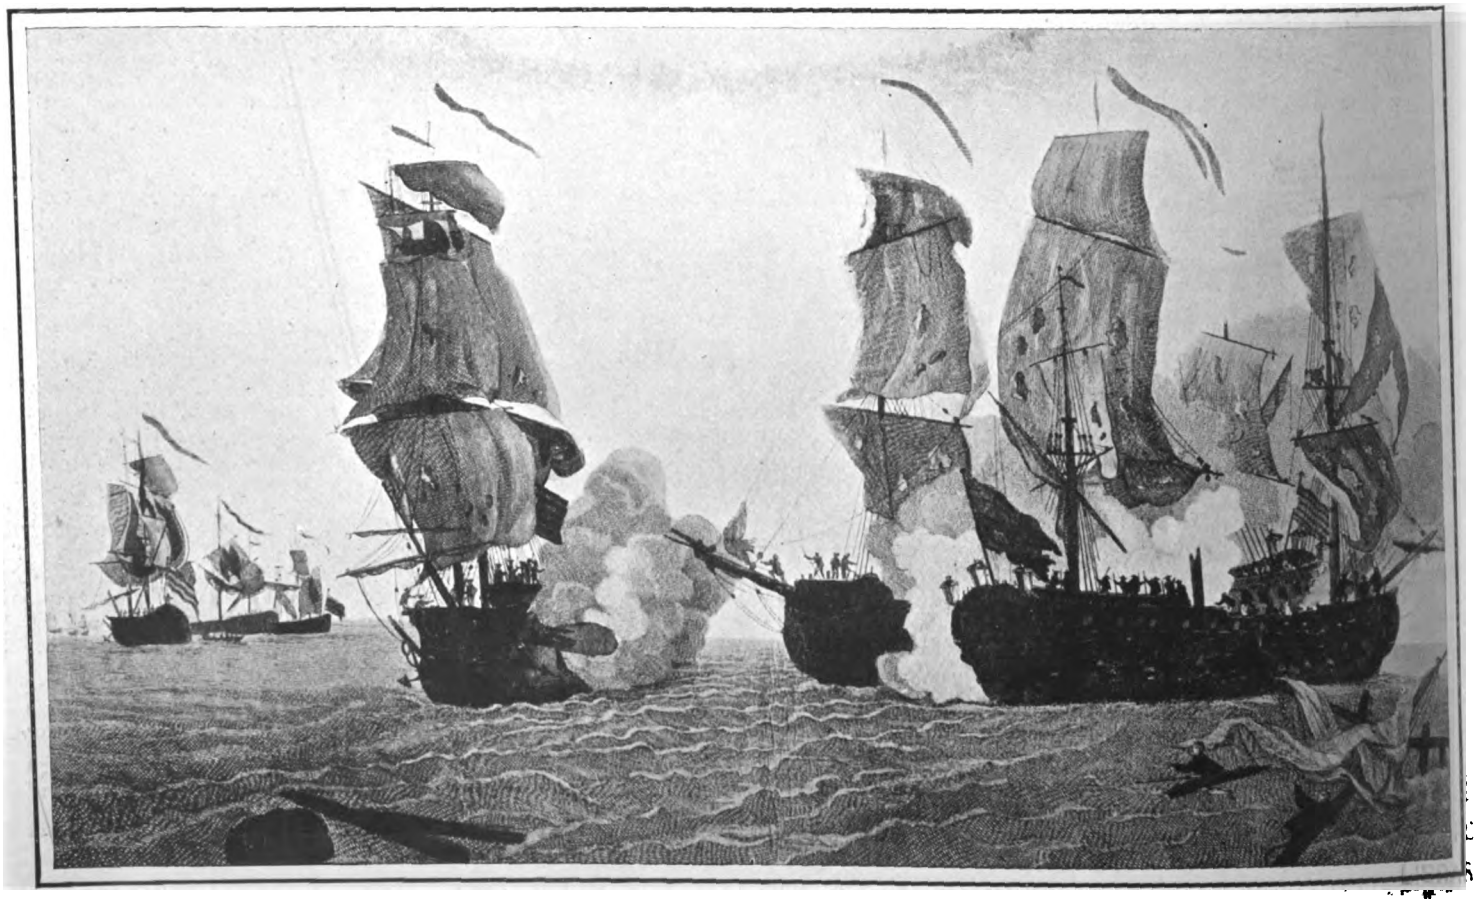
The year 1905 gives England the centenary of Trafalgar; when that ever-memorable engagement was fought Paul Jones (the first sailor to hoist the American flag and fight an action under its folds) had been dead fully thirteen years, but his name still inspired a certain trepidation. It is not inappropriate that 1905 should also have witnessed the complete success which has crowned the patriotic efforts of General Porter and Colonel A. Bailly-Blanchard, and the final laying to rest of

ONE OF THE RAREST KNOWN PORTRAITS OF PAUL JONES.
From the original in the Mayer Collection.

Admiral Paul Jones in the mausoleum beneath the great Naval Chapel at Annapolis, which, if rumour speaks aright, bids fair to rank amongst the most ornate ecclesiastical edifices of modern times.

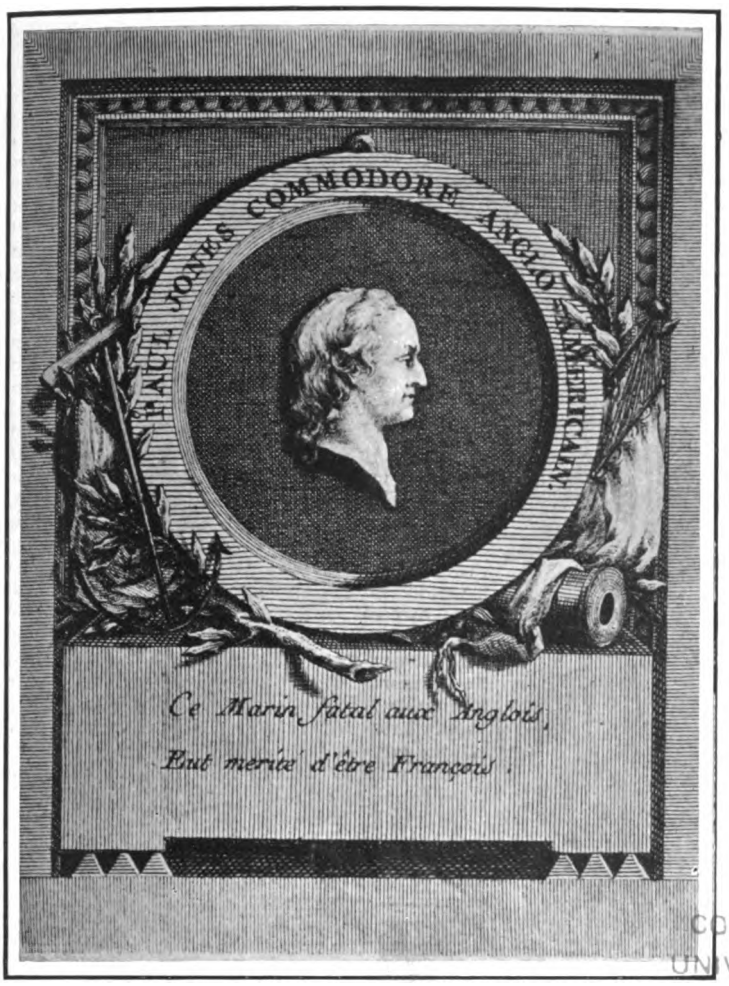
In Mr. Augustus Biesel the good work done by General Porter has found an admirable chronicler, and his excellent article in the current number of Scribner's Magazine, detailing the narrative of John Kilby, quarter-gunner of the "Bonhomme Richard," one of Jones's stalwart followers, is probably only a foretaste of the full account of the "exhumation and translation" we may soon hope to read. The pirate and smuggler myth has vanished at last, but it died hard, and there is ample room for a new and really serious history of the man of whom British nursemaids once sung in awe-stricken tones to their terrified charges.

They were written in terrible doggerel, but it has helped to keep the memory of Paul Jones green for over a century. At the time of his death Paul Jones was certainly held in high esteem by his contemporaries on both sides of the Atlantic. In the rare German book on the American War of Independence, lately owned by Messrs. Rimell, Jones occupies the central place in a constellation of celebrated "rebels." This is now reproduced, and it is to Messrs. Mayer and Parker that THE KING is indebted for permission to publish some of the prints illustrative of the victories and vicissitudes of the famous American sea-captain, the originals of which could not fail to form an important department in any great American collection. The particulars given of Jones's life in "The Dictionary



THE GREAT SEA-FIGHT BETWEEN PAUL JONES, COMMANDING THE "BONHOMME RICHARD," AND CAPTAIN PEARSON OF THE "SERAPIS."
This memorable engagement took place on October 22, 1779.

Digitized by Google



A MEDALLION IN PROFILE OF PAUL JONES

Struck in London. The long hair shown in it was particularly noticeable at the recent exhumation of the body.

PAUL, OR "PERIL," JONES

As he appeared in the thick of the Naval fight between the "Bonhomme Richard" and the "Serapis."

PAUL JONES

When a Commodore in the American Navy.

PAUL JONES

When Captain of the American frigate "Alliance."

Two almost unique portraits of Paul Jones. While commanding the "Alliance" for a short time he is said to have adopted the pseudonym of "Augustus Cunningham." These portraits are probably of Dutch origin.

Digitized by Google

of National Biography" are somewhat inadequate. The account of him in Appleton's "Cyclopædia of Biography" is much fuller; but to master anything like the whole of the details of the brief but romantic career of this wonderful man, one must have recourse to the works of Sherbourne, Janette Taylor, A. S. Mackenzie, W. G. Sims, and James Hamilton. Fenimore Cooper introduced many of the incidents in the romance of Paul Jones into "The Pilot," and nearly twenty years ago Miss Agnes Huntingdon took London by storm with the comic opera called after him, in which she played the title rôle. Some of the old chapbooks describe Jones as dying, full of years and riches, in Kentucky, while others declare that he died and was buried in his native Scotland, thus confusing him with his father.

Paul Jones was described by Jefferson in 1788 as "the principal hope of our future efforts on the ocean," but his career of active service was over. He visited Denmark, became a Russian Rear-Admiral, waged war against the Turks, reached Paris in broken health, and there died while an American commission as Agent and Consul at Algiers was on its way to him. His last words expressed love for America. At 9 p.m. on July 20, 1792, his body, enclosed in a coffin of lead, with a special view to ultimate removal to his adopted fatherland, was deposited with some ceremony in the cemetery of St. Louis. An exact description of his person and a note of his funeral expenses (paid by a French admirer) were preserved till the days of the Commune. The French Revolution and the stirring days of the Empire intervened. Paul Jones was forgotten, and so was the graveyard itself; houses arose on its site; a laundry flourished over the graves of the American sailor and the not less valiant Swiss Guards. Early in the present year General Porter bethought himself of the dead hero. He was a man of action; a copy of the old burial record was discovered; the exact locality of the disused and desecrated cemetery was ascertained; an exhumation was proposed; the lead coffin might afford a certain means of identification; measurements were made which gave hope. General Porter wrote to the President; Mr. Roosevelt addressed a stirring message to Congress; money was voted with a lavish hand, and the silence of 113 years was soon atoned for. It was decreed that Paul Jones should lie no longer "in an obscure and squalid quarter of Paris," in a graveyard defiled by "common and profane uses." Mr. Augustus Biesel was the man of all others to obtain exact information; an ideal helper was ready to hand in the person of Colonel A. Bailly-Blanchard. If Pierre François Simonnean paid for the first funeral of Paul Jones, his last home-coming should be the care of the great nation he fought for so loyally. The forethought of those who in 1792 provided a leaden casket, "in case the United States, which he had so essentially served and with so much honour, should claim his remains," had not been bestowed in vain. Everything was now done which patriotism or scientific knowledge could devise. The details of Houdon's bust were borne in mind; Dr. Papillault promised to carry out the necessary anthropometric calculations, and the work of excavation was confided to the able hands of M. Weiss. Row after row of skeletons came to light. The gallant Swiss Guards who died for Marie Antoinette had been buried without their clothes; no means of personal identification existed in their cases. On March 31 the heavy leaden coffin was reached. There were no traces of any other. The skill of Dr. Papillault made it abundantly evident that the body was that of John Paul Jones. By his autopsy Dr. Capitan could clearly trace the cause of the malady from which Paul Jones — the "Peril" Jones of the old war days —had died. The body was wonderfully preserved. Thus writes Mr. Biesel: "The hair was long, and of a beautiful dark brown, but which would be termed

Pepper.

MR. AUGUSTUS BIESEL

Chancellor of the American Embassy, Paris, who has chronicled many of the interesting incidents in Paul Jones's exhumation.

Ellis, Paris.

THE CASKET ENSHRINING THE REMAINS OF THE ORIGINAL LEAD COFFIN in which Paul Jones was buried, now on its way from France to America by Admiral Sigsbee's squadron.

Ellis, Paris.

THE SCENE OF THE RECENT EXCAVATIONS IN PARIS

Carried on at the expense of the American Government by M. Weiss, on the site of the old cemetery of St. Louis, now covered by a laundry.

THE REMAINS AS THEY APPEARED ON MARCH 31.

The scene in the subterranean vaults of the old cemetery of St. Louis on the discovery of the body of Paul Jones.

Digitized by Google

AN ORIGINAL DUTCH CARICATURE OF 1780.
Paul Jones is here depicted as castigating the English.

PAUL JONES
As an American leader.

black by those not familiar with the palette. Its length was over 70 c.m. After the essential ceremonies had been gone through, and the identification of the body sworn to by the highest officials of the Municipality, the remains were replaced in their original coffin, and then in the triple casket of pine, lead, and oak prepared for them. From prints, medallions, and the Houdon bust, I was quite familiar with Paul Jones's features, and seemed to see before me the living man." The new casket was carefully fastened and sealed up.

It is at Cherbourg that the remains of the Admiral will rest for the last time on French soil, but it was at Brest that in the "Ranger" the intrepid seaman obtained a salute for the Stars and Stripes from the French, and it was from Brest that he sailed in the "Bonhomme Richard" with his small squadron to fight his engagement with the "Serapis," by far his most bloody and successful victory.

When, in 1775, Congress resolved to equip a fleet, John Paul Jones was at the head of the lieutenants' list. In that capacity in the "Alfred," and as commander in the "Providence," he showed himself to be a brave and sagacious officer. After a brilliant cruise in the "Ranger" he sailed to France, and there obtained an old ship called the "Duc de Duras." He next fitted out a larger but older vessel, and named her the "Bonhomme Richard," out of compliment to Dr. Franklin, whose assistance had largely contributed to his success. Jones next put to sea with a fleet of seven vessels, his flag in the "Bonhomme Richard," and on September 23, 1779, fought the action in which the "Bonhomme" was so disabled that she went to the bottom, and the "Serapis" was so cut up as hardly to be able to carry the victors and their prisoners into port.

PAUL JONES.
From a rare contemporary engraving, published in London, 1780.

A quarter of a century ago the bones of John Howard Payne were exhumed in the old-world Christian cemetery of St. George at Tunis, and reverently conveyed to a tomb in his American birthplace. Possibly the singing of "Home, Sweet Home" may form part of the last funeral—the great home-coming of the "warrior dead." It would certainly not be inappropriate. In 1792 France and the United States were closely allied. Lafayette, like Jones, fought under the newly-devised banner of the Stars and Stripes. If General Porter is entitled to all the credit for the great service he has done to the Fatherland by sending the honoured remains of Paul Jones to remain for all time in the Valhalla of her Navy—the Pantheon of her glorious dead—his successor, Mr. MacCormick, is an ardent admirer of that great French soldier and statesman, of whose portraits he is said to possess the finest collection in the whole world.

A. M. B.

THE LIFE AND HISTORY
OF
PAUL JONES,
THE English Corsair: GIVING AN ACCOUNT OF THE EXTRAORDINARY PERILS,
Escapes, and Voyages,
OF
THAT BOLD AND DETERMINATE
PIRATE AND SMUGGLER.

All desperate hazards courage do create,
As he plays frankly who has least estate;
Presence of mind, and courage in distress,
Are more than armies to procure success.
DRYDEN.

LONDON:
PRINTED AND SOLD BY DEAN AND MUNDAY, THREADNEEDLE STREET
Price Sixpence.

TITLE-PAGE FROM A CONTEMPORARY CHAP-BOOK.
Printed and sold by Dean and Munday, Threadneedle Street.

A CHAP-BOOK ILLUSTRATION.
Paul Jones, the English corsair, shooting his lieutenant for attempting to strike his colours.

Digitized by Google

The 107th Anniversary Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys.

WHETHER there is or is not some special good fortune inherent in the number seven, the 107th Anniversary Festival of the R.M.I.B. (always a red-letter day in the Masonic calendar) will be ever remembered for the marvellous weather which favoured both the athletic sports and the prize distribution, as well as the great gathering of Masons at the banquet on Wednesday, the 28th ult., at the Crystal Palace, with such splendid results to the cause of philanthropy. Seven years ago the R.M.I.B. celebrated its centenary at the Albert Hall under the presidency of King Edward VII. The amount of subscriptions announced by the chairman reached the astounding total of £134,000. All other "charitable" records of the kind were hopelessly broken, and the new Masonic Boys' School at Bushey started on its career of extended usefulness under the most brilliant auspices. Yet the beginnings of this unprecedented success were very humble. We know nothing of the collections made before 1806, when an entertainment at the Mermaid, Hackney, yielded £33 9s. 6d. In the year of Waterloo, when Lord Dundas presided for the Duke of Sussex, the sum total of subscriptions was only £177 odd, in comparison with £171 odd realised the previous year, when the grandfather of our King and "Protector" came in person. It was not till 1853 that the first four-figure result was achieved It is interesting to note that in 1851, 1852, and 1854 the chairman was the Earl of Yarborough, the ancestor of the nobleman whose popular wife won all hearts at last week's Bushey prize distribution, and who holds in her own right the ancient baronies of Fauconberg and Conyers. In 1862 Lord Holmesdale (now Earl Amherst) raised the total to over £3,500. Seven years later Earl de Grey and Ripon (now Marquess of Ripon), then Grand Master, scored the first five-figure total on record with £12,000. The Prince of Wales succeeded him in 1870, but the list was £300 short of the previous year. In 1875—exactly thirty years ago—the late Earl of Carnarvon represented the great Western County of Somerset, and, happy omen for 1905, beat the records of three-quarters of a century with £12,700. The next record was accomplished in 1883, when Lord Holmesdale served a second time, and his chairmanship yielded £23,029. During the past ten years the totals have shown a steady inclination to increase, and in 1905, notwithstanding the almost superhuman effort of the centenary, the late Lord Ridley was able to announce a list of no less than £36,129 collected by a board of 850 stewards — Northumberland contributing no less than £5,141 and the little Province of Warwickshire £1,553, while London was responsible for the splendid sum of £16,203.

Of such efforts as these, as well as of the energy displayed ever since his accession to office by the hon. secretary, Mr. J. Morrison McLeod, the handsome school at Bushey, now fast making its way to take rank amongst our great national centres of instruction, is the practical result. The boys' school is now in every way worthy of the best traditions of the craft, and Somerset "brethren" will not be displeased to know that the presence of 2,200 tons of Bath stone in its structure connects it tangibly with the ancient shire, justly proud of its city of palaces, as well as its cathedral churches of Bath and Wells, and the venerable ruins of Glastonbury, which still bear the marks of the operative builders of ten centuries ago. From the illustration of the athletic sports of June 3 the readers of THE KING will be able to form a good idea of the architectural merits of the school itself. The number of pupils now exceeds 300, and further accommodation will soon be needed. The weather was on its best behaviour, and the racing was run through with punctuality. The visitors were entertained by the head-master to tea after the racing, and Mrs. John Strachan presented the prizes to the winners, who were heartily received as they went on the platform. Anderson won the Victor Ludorum after an exciting contest with Blair, which was not concluded until after an extra race, both boys starting in the Old Boys' 220-yds. handicap from scratch, in which race Anderson finished third.

The following was the official programme of the proceedings on Monday, the 26th ult., when the Countess of Yarborough and the Earl of Cork attended the annual prize distribution:

2.30 p.m.—Mr. Pascal Needham will play a selection on the organ.
2.45 p.m.—The Countess of Yarborough will be received at the main entrance by the Treasurer, the Chairman, Vice-chairmen, and Members of the Board of Management, the Secretary, and the Head-master.
3 p.m.—Procession, headed by the Board, to the hall. Miss Ruth Attenborough will present a bouquet. Then will be sung by all present the Psalm "Except the Lord Build the House;" (a) Introductory remarks by the Chairman; (b) Head-master's report; (c) presentation of prizes by the Countess of Yarborough; (d) the Earl of Cork proposes a vote of thanks to the Countess of Yarborough.
3.45 p.m.—Vocal and instrumental music by the boys.
4.15 to 5 p.m.—Afternoon tea for visitors in the boys' dining-hall.
5 to 6 p.m.—Classes in practical physics, clay modelling, wood-work, metal-work, bookbinding, gymnastics. Exhibition of boys' work in various subjects.

The musical performances reflected the highest credit on Mr. Pascal Needham and Mr. G. A. Parker, and nothing could well be more interesting than the specimens of the boys' handiwork exhibited in the natural history, photograph, and modelling rooms, the physical laboratory, and the carpenters', metal-workers', and bookbinders' shops.

No less a sum than £25,046 was added to the funds of the R.M.I.B. by the Festival of last week, to which London and the provinces contributed in nearly equal proportion. The arrangements for the accommodation of nearly a thousand guests (including an unusually large number of ladies) at the Crystal Palace were faultless. Mr. James Stephens once more proved himself an ideal director of ceremonies, and "a gigantic success" was the unanimous verdict. Lord Cork proved himself to be a capable Chairman, and amongst those who supported him was the Dean of Hereford (whose oratory and grace-saying were just what one might expect from the great-nephew by marriage of Mrs. Siddons). Each steward wore an enamelled badge, an illustration of which will also be found in THE KING.

The vocal music was confined to the singing of the National Anthem as a solo by Miss Mildred Jones, Gold Medallist of the R.A.M., but an excellent programme of instrumental music was provided during the dinner by the Bijou Orchestra. R. K. Y.

Russell.

THE SCHOOL OF THE ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS AT BUSHEY.
From a photograph taken on the occasion of the recent athletic sports.

Digitized by Google

Russell.

THE PRIZE-GIVING AT THE ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS AT BUSHEY.
The scene in the hall during the presentation ceremony.

Copyright.

THE EARL OF CORK
Provincial Grand Master for Somerset.

Langfier.

THE COUNTESS OF YARBOROUGH
Who presented the prizes at the Masonic School.

Haxell.

COLONEL LONG, C.M.G.
Deputy Grand Master for Somerset.

Russell.

THE 107TH ANNIVERSARY DINNER OF THE ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.
The dinner took place recently at the Crystal Palace, and was presided over by Lord Cork. Among those present were the Dean of Hereford, Sir E. Letchworth, Lady Letchworth, the Hon. Arthur Brodrick, and Mr. J. M. McLeod, secretary of the Institution.

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

A PATHETIC interest attaches to Captain Klado's book, "The Russian Navy in the Japanese War," which has been translated by Mr. L. J. H. Dickinson, and published by Messrs. Hurst and Blackett. It was written when Rozhdestvensky's fleet was still a fleet in being; it is full of one urgent message: "We must keep the command of the sea"; and to read it now that Rozhdestvensky's fleet is scrap-iron, and Russia has entirely lost the command of the sea, fills one with a kind of ironic sympathy.

The Russian Navy.

* * *

"WHO is Captain Klado?" is a question one heard asked with some frequency. "And what right has he to speak?" He has a good deal. He is the son of an officer on the General Staff. And his first cruises were made in the eighties. In 1886 he was appointed tutor at the Naval School, and in 1889 Admiral Nazimof made him, though still only a lieutenant, the head of his staff in command of the Pacific Squadron. Here for two years and a-half he was able to study China and Japan; he took part in the present Czar's tour, and on his return went again to the Naval School. His works on Naval history and Naval tactics and stratagem are standard works on the subjects; and he was also responsible for a special advanced course of lectures which necessitated the study of Military and Naval science together, and in that way he obtained the comprehensive view of the relation of fleet to army in warfare, which is a main characteristic of this book. Soon after the outbreak of the war, Captain Klado was appointed head of the strategical department on the staff of the Commander-in-Chief of the Pacific Fleet, but was sent by Admiral Skrydlof to Admiral Rozhdestvensky to explain the Commander-in-Chief's views. He sailed with the Second Squadron, and left it at Vigo in October last, to give evidence before the Commission on the North Sea Incident. It was during his moments of leisure in St. Petersburg that he wrote the letters to the Novoe Vremya which have been collected in this book.

Who is Klado?

* * *

SO that he knows what he is talking about—and, if there were any doubt about the matter, the events that have happened since the letters were written would prove it. He was one of the few men in anything like authority who said that this Japanese war was no mere side-issue, but a life-and-death struggle for Russia. "We must keep the command of the sea"—that is his message over and over again. The Russian fleet, instead of keeping out to sea, twice returned to Port Arthur, and finally got shut up there. We know what happened, and how the lack of the fleet affected the land war, and those returns to Port Arthur, says Captain Klado, were the cause of the Russian disasters. The enemy realised the importance of the command of the sea, and "it was simply to capture our fleet that the Japanese made such a dead set at Port Arthur."

His Advice.

* * *

THROUGHOUT, those in command of the Russian operations made the mistake of minimising the importance of the fleet. It would have been better to sacrifice Port Arthur at once than to denude, as they did, the fleet of guns and ammunition for its protection. Naval fortresses are meant as arsenals for fleets; they exist for the benefit of the fleet, not the fleet for theirs. And so, Port Arthur being lost—for Captain Klado knew well that it could not hold out—Vladivostock must become the Naval base, and be made ready for Rozhdestvensky when he arrives. Then we come to the pathetic part of the work. When it was written Rozhdestvensky had still a fleet—not so good, says Captain Klado, as Togo's, but good enough, if only the Russians would make it good enough, to come through the extraordinary difficulties of that long voyage and regain the command of the sea. The Russians would not listen. They sent Rozhdestvensky out ill-armed and ill-provided; they insisted, in spite of Captain Klado's urgent call, in keeping the Black Sea Fleet shut up; they persisted in regarding the war in the Far East as less important than some possible war in the West which they had in their minds—and the result was the battle of the Sea of Japan. The result of that battle, Captain Klado prophesied, "will doubtless afford us fresh data for our future calculations." It removed the only data there were.

The Importance of the Fleet.

CAPTAIN KLADO

The Russian Naval officer, whose outspoken letters on the war to the Novoe Vremya have been read all over Europe.

* * *

THIS very remarkable book will not die with the present war and the Russian Empire in the Far East. It must live as an exposition of the importance of the command of the sea in any war of to-day. Space forbids us to analyse it as fully as it deserves, but we have said enough to show that events have proved Captain Klado's case over and over again—that the first and foremost consideration of Russia ought to have been her Navy, and that by neglect of it she has brought herself to the pass where she now is. It is an extraordinarily vivid and trenchant work; and no sensible reader will let its value be discounted by the little outbursts of Anglophobia which disfigure some of its pages, though the cynical manner in which Captain Klado recommends that the Treaty of Berlin should be set aside by Russia, "if we can but feel strong enough to treat it with contempt," is an illuminating comment. Mr. Dickinson, but for his constant splitting of infinitives, has done his work vigorously and well.

The Value of the Book.

* * *

READERS of Punch have owed much amusement to the poems and parodies of the anonymous Anglo-Indian who writes under the name of "Dum-Dum." A number of these amusing things have now been collected into a volume called "Rhymes of the East and Re-collected Verses," published by Messrs. Constable. "Dum-Dum's" verse is capital fun. He has a neatness and unexpectedness in rhyme that come as an ever-new delight, and he is so genuinely and unforcedly humorous over his joys and sorrows that he provides the most genial pleasure. Many of his topics will appeal specially to Anglo-Indians, but the "general reader" should not miss his book.

Dum-Dum.

* * *

GEORGE GISSING'S posthumous—and last—novel has now been published by Messrs. Constable. It has many of the characteristics which all the other novels show—a keen sensitiveness to the grey side of life, a patient realism, a very shrewd eye for the false emotions and false attitudes towards themselves and the world which are rather the rule than the exception in men and women. But "Will Warburton" is not so unrelieved in gloom, so "cynical," as people used unjustly to say, as the earlier novels were. There is more compensation in life—lying chiefly, as we are led to believe, in the possession of courage and a sense of humour. The hero of the book, ruined by the folly of his partner in business, is forced to turn grocer for a living and in order to support his mother and sister. He feels acutely the grinding care for pence and halfpence which alone can make his business pay, the necessity, if he is to succeed, that an opposition shop in the same street, the unfortunate master of which has a drunken wife and five children, must be "broke." But he has his compensations in his own pluck and humour, in doing the right thing, and in keeping a cool head and a stiff upper lip. Contrasted with him we have a young artist who sells his faith in his art and in himself for money; and the drift of the story leaves us in doubt as to which of the two found the truer happiness. It is a remarkable book, the work of a most conscientious artist, whose natural, simple style holds far more than appears at first sight.

Will Warburton.

---

BOOKS TO READ.

The Regent of the Roués, by Colonel Andrew Haggard, D.S.O (Hutchinson.)
Will Warburton, by George Gissing. (Constable.)
The Image in the Sand, by E. F. Benson. (Heinemann.)
Trafalgar, by Henry Newbolt. (Murray.)
Rose of Lone Farm, by Eleanor G. Hayden. (Smith, Elder.)
Miss Bellard's Inspiration, by W. D. Howells. (Harper.)
Lady Knight's Letters, edited by Lady Eliott-Drake. (Humphreys.)
Some Notable Hamlets of the Present Time, by Clement Scott and W. L. Courtney. (Greening.)
Tom Gerrard, by Louis Becke. (Unwin.)
The Premier's Daughter, by Alice and Claude Askew. (White.)
Wild Flowers Month by Month in their Natural Haunts, by Edward Step. (Warne.)
Wild Birds at Home, by Charles Kirk. (Brimley Johnson and Ince.)

Digitized by Google

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Foulsham & Banfield.

MISS SUSY VINING

One of the most talented and hard-working of the younger generation of actresses. Miss Vining has had experience in most branches of dramatic art, and has been successful in nearly every part she has undertaken.

Digitized by Google

The Cricket Season.

THE INTER-UNIVERSITY CRICKET MATCH.

ONCE more the time for the annual picnic match at Lord's has come round, and this week-end hundreds of cricketers, and a very large number who are not, never have been, and never intend to try to be, will wend their way to St. John's Wood. Paterfamilias who was at one of the 'Varsities forty years ago will be there in force, and with him his pretty daughters and nieces to add to the beauty of the scene. The day has long gone by when Beauty at Lord's queried of the Beast: "Why do those two men run up and down such a lot?" and when the famous remark was made: "How well Smith's bowling; he hits the bat every time." To-day pretty sisters and cousins can give some of their undergraduate relations points in cricket lore. Probably also in energy and keenness on the field of play whereon it is "not form" to appear anything but indolent, and the thing to wear the "what for" expression which votes the whole of the proceedings a great bore. A little of this sort of thing goes a very long way O Blue, so of your charity be merciful on these three days and put a little of the "Wake up, England!" spirit into your movements. It is so very much more edifying to see you genuinely chasing the ball in an endeavour, even though a fruitless one, to save the four, while on no Blue while batting should the virtues of the old saying "One for the throw" be lost.

There is, unfortunately, good ground for the fear that the proceedings will be inordinately dull in this match. The first two hours' play—if such it may be called—in the 1904 'Varsity match probably drove many people away who will never reappear at a 'Varsity match. Old 'Varsity men, too, at that. One Blue of the paler shade on that occasion fiddled-faddled about at the wickets for a whole hour for one run. "'Varsity match fever" if you like, but a fearsome sight to contemplate. May we be spared a repetition.

Would that every Blue was of the sparkling nature of L. G. Colbeck of Cambridge, M. W. Payne of the same team, and N. R. Udal of the rival Blue. These men when batting are the champagne of cricket. Colbeck is always on his toes, as he has a proper appreciation for the real use of a cricket bat, viz., to hit the ball very hard with, and as often as possible. Payne, when he once gets at all set, hits as hard as most men, and as frequently, while if Udal plays and makes 30 runs, prospective spectators may be sure he will not be batting much more than half that number of minutes. One or two of the remaining nineteen—notably G. N. Foster—can score very fast when in the mood; but there are too many Scottons in the two teams, and, alas! not one who can be classed with A. G. Steele or F. S. Jackson or C. M. Wells or J. Douglas or R. E. Foster in these famous players 'Varsity days' "kept" last year, but were not then, good though they were, in such form as they are now in.

Finally, it is impossible to name the winner. While form clearly points to Cambridge, precedent equally surely points to Oxford. Knowing that in fine weather the wicket at Lord's generally gives fast bowlers some assistance, knowing, too, that the Cambridge team as a whole is not good against fast bowling, and having due regard for the fact that the Oxford fast bowling is not done with until five bowlers have been knocked off, we think Oxford should just win.

The personnel of the two teams needs a few words. Both captains, K. M. Carlisle (Oxford) and E. W. Mann (Cambridge), are Old Harrovians, and both are excellent batsmen, the Cantab being, perhaps, the better and quicker scorer of the two. This season he has certainly been in better form than the more plodding, painstaking Carlisle, as the Warwickshire bowlers know to their cost. W. H. B. Evans, the Old Malvernian, whose last season, for the present at all events, this is, is probably the best all-round cricketer on either side; but he somehow always conveys the impression that he is intensely bored by the proceedings of a first-class cricket match. There is an utter lack of life and keenness about his movements in the field, as a rule, but perhaps he will come out of his shell a bit on the occasion of a 'Varsity match; if for nothing else in order to go for the honour of scoring three figures on that occasion. G. G. Napier will probably get most of the Oxford wickets. There is no doubt of his class as a bowler; he is probably one of the very best at either 'Varsity since S. M. J. Woods, if we exclude W. H. B. Evans' 1903 form. At the time of writing it is undecided which of F. J. V. Hopley, H. Mainprice, or C. C. Page will play for Cambridge. E. W. Mann will be well advised to include the heavy-weight boxer, Hopley, on account of the value of fast bowling on the wicket at Lord's, and, incidentally, his value as a hitter. Some hard hit runs may be very useful, if Colbeck has failed, at the end of the Cambridge innings, and nobody of the Light Blues but P. R. May is at all likely to get such.

In the present dearth of good amateur bowling, it is surprising that neither 'Varsity has a lob bowler. Old stagers—and not so very old either—have not forgotten how J. B. Wood went through the Cambridge Eleven some years ago with what were at best very simple-looking lobs. Oxford in particular may stand in need of such a bowler on account of the sameness in style of their principal bowlers. A similarity which the slow left-handers of R. C. W. Burn do not adequately foil. In this respect Cambridge will hold an advantage if Mann decides upon playing H. Mainprice, whose slow leg-breaks are perhaps the nearest approach to the deliveries of a genuine lob bowler in either eleven. But should P. R. May bowl up to the form good judges know him to possess, he and Napier may bowl unchanged through one innings of Oxford at all events. They are capable of such a feat, for Napier, as already pointed out, is in a class by himself, and May has one of the best fast yorkers in present day amateur cricket.

In fielding Cambridge should prove to be much superior to their rivals, who are anything but a lively side, or as good in the field as a team of young men only just out of their teens ought to be.

Copyright.

K. M. CARLISLE, OXFORD.

The Oxford captain, and an Old Etonian, is a cricketer who, like many a good one before him, has rather suffered from the cares of captaincy. He has had an unusually hard task to fill up his eleven, as there were some five or six "probables" whose form has all the season been much of a muchness. He is very popular with his men, and if they rise to the occasion, Oxford will win easily.

Digitized by Google

THE CRICKET SEASON.

Copyright.

G. N. FOSTER, OXFORD.

The youngest scion of the famous cricketing house of Foster has in him the makings of another R. E. Foster. Built on small, trim lines, he will one day astonish the world as his famous brother "Tip" did with that 287 in the first Test match at Sydney two winters ago. A fine little field anywhere, G. N. has all the scoring strokes in his répertoire, and can push the score along at a pace Jessop might envy. Cambridge must bag him directly he comes in, or ——!

Copyright.

R. A. YOUNG, CAMBRIDGE.

One of the few players who have to play in spectacles, R. A. Young learnt his cricket at the school which sent forth C. B. Fry—to wit, Repton. He is of the careful plodding order, and unless Mann makes a big mistake he will send in Young first with M. W. Payne, a hitter and a sticker together, and the sticker not in the least likely to be perturbed by the vigorous methods of his partner. Moreover, they have already done well together.

Copyright.

M. W. PAYNE, CAMBRIDGE.

It is not given to every schoolboy to leave school one year and to thoroughly deserve the honour of playing for the Gentlemen at Lord's. M. W. Payne, the Old Wellingtonian, achieved this honour last season, and may very likely be chosen again this year if H. Martyn is not available. W. S. Bird of Oxford may be the nearest rival, as the Oxonian and Old Wykehamist is also one of the finest stumpers of the day. Payne is, however, vastly his superior as a batsman.

Copyright.

E. W. MANN, CAMBRIDGE.

An Old Harrovian leads the fortunes of Cambridge in this great annual match, and it is to be hoped he will make his men play livelier cricket than obtained a twelvemonth ago. He is the best bat in either eleven to-day on this season's form, and is, perhaps, a better general than his rival from Eton. His team has the reputation of not being good at fast bowling. If this is well earned, Cambridge should suffer defeat.

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

MEETINGS at Gatwick, Hurst Park, Sandown Park, and the Newcastle Summer Meeting make up such a crowded week that, much as one would like to linger over Ascot gossip, to do so is impossible, and the limited space available must be used for other purposes. The principal race on the first day of the Gatwick Meeting was the Gatwick Foal Plate of 2,000-sovs., in which Lord Derby's filly Victorious, by Florizel II. out of La Reine, made her first appearance in public, and if rumours were to be believed, then the sister to Volodyovski was well worthy of her parentage. In the race itself she ran with all the coolness of a veteran, and, after fighting out a desperate finish with the utmost gameness, made a dead-heat of it with Sir E. Vincent's Ulalume, a performance which, although full of merit, does not place her by any means at the top of the tree. On the following day Mr. Heineman's chestnut colt by Avington out of Ankles carried off the Crabbet Plate by three-quarters of a length from Captain Greer's filly by St. Simon out of Splendid, with Mr. H. Wilde's filly by Spring Cottage out of Charlotte third, six lengths away. Here are three unnamed animals finishing first, second, and third; surely it is possible for the wit and invention of an owner, or of his friends, to discover a suitable name for his horses. In France unnamed horses cannot be even entered for races, and it is a thousand pities that our own authorities do not see their way to enforce a similar regulation in this country.

It seemed any imaginable odds on Flower Seller in the Diamond Welter Plate of 500-sovs., and he eventually won rather easily by half a length, though he had to gallop in earnest for a few strides to shake off the attention of Recreation.

Hurst Park has not been blessed with best of luck as regards weather, but few race-goers were likely to be prevented from going to see the meeting between Cherry Lass and Queen of the Earth, with a 10-lb. pull in the weights in favour of the latter; and, moreover, it is not often that one finds two races of the value respectively of 1,300-sovs. and 1,500-sovs. provided in one afternoon's racing. In the Duchess of York's Plate Cherry Lass, much to the surprise of everyone, and of her trainer in particular, showed a strong dislike to the starting gate, and got badly off in consequence. However, that made no difference to the result of the race, for Mr. W. H. Hall-Walker's mare made up her ground without any difficulty, and went on to win very cleverly by a length and a-half from Queen of the Earth. General opinion pointed to Robinson's stable as likely to furnish the winner of the Hurst Park Foal Plate, and both Sweet Mary and Merry Moment were well backed, but they could only finish second and third to Mr. S. B. Joel's Wild Ride, who won by a neck. Speaking quite without the book, I fancy that Ariadne, who won the last race of the day and of the meeting, is yet another winner hailing from Mr. Russel Swanwick's small stud.

W. A. Rouch.

THE NEWMARKLT JULY SALES.
The dispersal of Major Platt s stud: Mary Seaton.

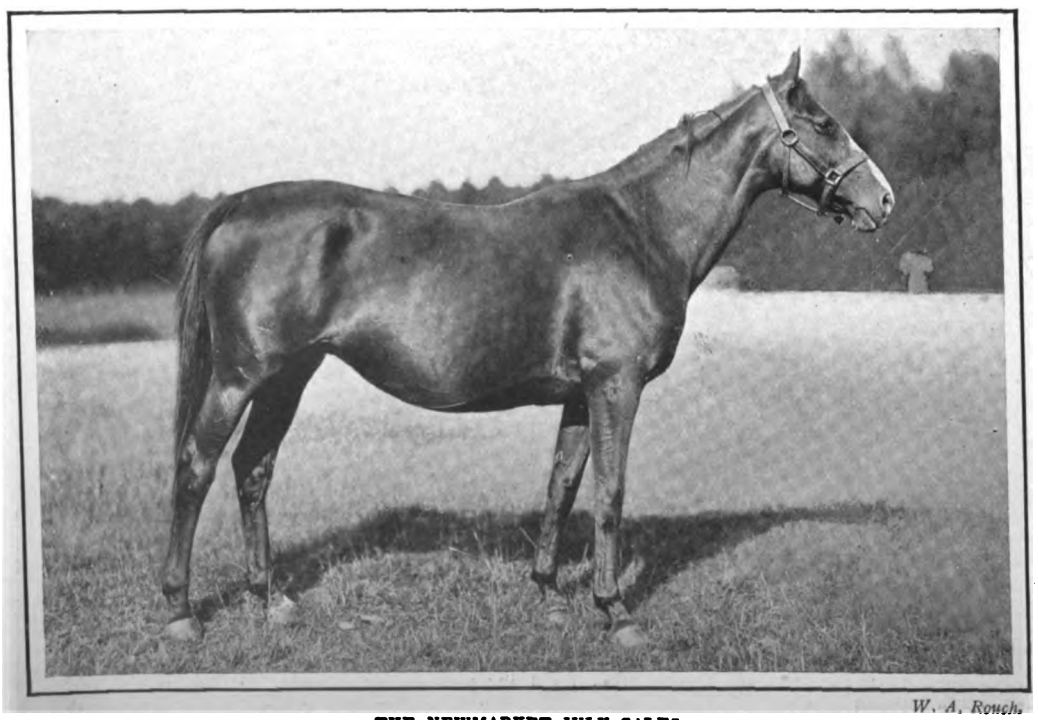
The Newcastle Meeting was quite a success, and Gosforth Park appears to be rapidly becoming a strong source of attraction to the South Country stables, which carried off the North Derby, the Northumberland Plate, and the Seaton Delaval Plate. In the North Derby, Rouge Croix once more proved either he cannot stay a mile and a-half or else that his heart is not in the game, and he finished a moderate second to Mr. A. James's Atlas, with Chuckaway beaten into third place by four lengths. The victory of Mr. W. R. Wyndham's Tamasha in the Stewards' Handicap Plate calls renewed attention to his sire, Desmond, who is standing at Lord Dunraven's stud in Ireland, and who certainly gets a large proportion of winners, and is a beautifully-bred horse, being by St. Simon out of L'Abbesse de Jouarre, his fee for 1905 is only 35 guineas, and breeders would certainly do well to avail themselves of this opportunity of securing his services for next year.

Rarely has the famous Northumberland Plate been won in such an easy fashion as it was on the 28th of last month, Lord Derby's Princess Florizel drawing right away from her field and winning very easily by some five or six lengths, Fisher Girl and Clitonhall being her nearest attendants. The Seaton Delaval Plate on the following day went to Captain P. Herbert's filly Illustrious, by Isinglass out of Crown Jewel, after a keenly fought-out finish with an unnamed filly of Lord Gerard's by Florizel II. out of Lucy Cadeby. Although the heavy rainfall was undoubtedly of benefit as far as the "going" at Sandown was concerned, it had a deterrent effect upon visitors, and the attendance for a summer gathering at this fashionable resort was decidedly scanty. In the New Stand Handicap of 500-sovs. Xeny failed to stay home, and had to put up with a length beating from Chelys. Odds were unhesitatingly laid on Queen's Holiday for the Sandringham Stakes of 1,000-sovs., but this good thing did not come off, and Golden Measure fairly wore the favourite down, and won by three-quarters of a length. It is probable that before these lines are printed the pick of Major Platt's splendid collection of brood mares will have been purchased to "go abroad." Mary Seaton, by Isonomy out of Marie Stuart, the winner of the Oaks and the St. Leger, and Sea Air, by the same sire out of Re-echo and dam of Pietermaritzburg, are beautiful styles of thoroughbred mares. The excellent pictures of them speak for themselves.

CAURIE.



W. A. Rouch.

THE NEWMARKET JULY SALES.
The dispersal of Major Platt's stud: Sea Air.

Digitized by Google

A Lunch Suggestion

Grape-Nuts, - - 1 penny
Cream or Milk, - 2 pence
Total, - - - 3 pence

Add a little fruit for a few pennies more.

You can laugh at the lunch problem and keep cool and well nourished.

This simple lunch will carry you through the whole afternoon, and you will feel fed and contented.

A fact and easily proved by trial.

THERE'S A REASON.

Fishing Boats

Mrs. Goddard

This Photograph is one of the Prize Winners in Last Year's

Kodak Competition

Write for particulars of our 1905 Competition.

£400 in Prizes for Pictures taken with a Kodak on Kodak N.C. Film.

A Special Section for Novices.

Your Holiday will last you twice as long if you take a Kodak with you—and you will be able to compete for the many Valuable Prizes we are offering. The Competition closes September 30, 1905.

KODAKS TO SUIT ALL TASTES and PURPOSES, from 5/- to £8, with full instructions, enabling any one to commence at once.

Kodak manufactures may be obtained of all dealers and
KODAK, Ltd., 57-61, Clerkenwell Rd., London, E.C., and Branches.

Llangammarch Wells,

CENTRAL WALES.
(The British Nauheim.)

An Ideal Spa for the Treatment of Heart Disease, Gout, and Rheumatism.

THE LAKE HOTEL

A first-class Hotel situated in extensive Private Grounds and lighted throughout with Electricity.

Telegraphic Address: "BARIUM," LLANGAMMARCH WELLS. Apply MANAGEMENT.

GOLF CLUB WITHIN FIVE MINUTES' WALK.

MODES.

MAISON LEWIS,

16, Rue Royale, PARIS.

Entrance, 422, Rue St. Honoré.

Place du Casino, MONTE CARLO.
7, Place de la Mairie, BIARRITZ.

210, Regent Street, LONDON. W.

LEAMINGTON SPA.

REGENT HOTEL.

ENTIRELY RECONSTRUCTED.

DECORATIONS BY MAPLE.

Electric Light, Telephones in Every Room. Lift. Stabling for 90 Horses.

Garage and Resident Engineer.

APPLY FOR TARIFF.

Telegrams: "REGENT, LEAMINGTON." Tel. No. 0659.

ROBINSON & CLEAVER, LD., BELFAST.

REGENT ST. & CHEAPSIDE, LONDON; and LIVERPOOL.

Manufacturers to His Majesty the King and H.R.H. the Princess of Wales.

Carriage paid on orders of 20s. upwards in United Kingdom.

IRISH Fish Napkins, 2/11 per doz. Dinner Napkins, 5/6 per doz. Table Cloths, 2yd. square, 2/11; 2½yd. by 3yd., 5/11. Kitchen Table Cloths, 11½d. each. Irish Linen Pillow Cases, 10/6 per doz. Real Irish Linen Sheeting, fully bleached, 2yd. wide, 1/11 per yard. Roller Towelling, 3½d. per yard.

SAMPLES AND PRICE LISTS POST FREE. DAMASK Surplice Linen, 10½d. per yard. Dusters from 3/3 per dozen. Glass Cloths 3/11 per dozen. Frilled Linen Pillow Cases, from 1/4½ each. Fine Linens and Diaper, 9½d per yard.

TABLE AND HOUSE LINEN.

N.B.—To prevent delay all Letter Orders and Enquiries for Samples of above goods should be sent direct to Belfast.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day and To-morrow.

AN EVENING GOWN IN CRUSHED ROSE MOUSSELINE DE SOIE, WORN AT AN ASCOT HOUSE PARTY. PAQUIN, DOVER STREET, W.

Digitized by Google

G.N.R. EXPRESS Excursions.

HOLIDAY TRAVEL A SPECIALITY.

From KING'S CROSS (G.N.)

and other London Stations:

WEDNESDAYS, for 8 days to — SKEGNESS, SUTTON-ON-SEA, MABLETHORPE, CORLESTON, LOWESTOFT, SHERINGHAM, CROMER, MUNDESLEY, and YARMOUTH.

SATURDAYS, for 3, 8, 10, 15 or 17 days to — Seaside and Pleasure Resorts in LINCOLNSHIRE, YORKSHIRE, LANCASHIRE (Skegness, Scarboro', Blackpool, &c.).

SATURDAYS, for 3, 6 or 8 days to — Principal Stations in NORFOLK DISTRICT, LINCOLNSHIRE, NOTTINGHAMSHIRE, DERBYSHIRE, STAFFORDSHIRE, YORKSHIRE, LANCASHIRE, and North Eastern District.

FRIDAY, JULY 7, and each alternate Friday for 7 or 14 days to — EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, PERTH, DUNDEE, ABERDEEN, INVERNESS, and the Principal Stations in SCOTLAND.

For Full Particulars, apply to the Chief Passenger Agent, Great Northern Railway, King's Cross, London, or to any G.N. Station or Office.

OLIVER BURY, General Manager.

PLEASE CUT OUT FOR FUTURE REFERENCE.

---

You avoid Dinginess by using a Bissell.

The Bissell Carpet Sweepers are noiseless, dustless, and more durable than brooms.

The Spring selection is now being shown by all Ironmongers, Stores and House Furnishers at 10 6 11 3, 14/-, 15/6 & 18/-

SAME PRICE EVERYWHERE.

---

MEDICAL GALVANISM

HAS CONQUERED some of the most obstinate complaints after all other remedies have failed.

HALE'S IMPROVED ELECTRIC BELTS and BATTERIES for wearing next the body without blistering or injuring the skin. These appliances are

PERFECT GENERATORS OF ELECTRICITY, and are most comfortable in wear. Price One Guinea.

RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, and GOUT are speedily REMOVED by this powerful Agent.

ELECTRIC BELT and SUSPENSOR, price 42s., for MEN, for VARICOCELE, Nervous Debility, and Exhaustion, Bladder Weakness, etc.

Pamphlets Gratis. Consultations Free.

HALE & SON, Medical Galvanists,
117, CHANCERY LANE, LONDON.

---

SPA, BELGIUM.

(10 Hours from London.)

The Oldest Chalybeate Springs in the World.

Finest Bathing Establishment in Europe. Best cure for Anæmia, Chlorosis, and Heart Affections. Countless attractions, Steeplechases, Horse Show, Concerts, Theatre, Automobile Races, Golf, Balls. For programme write

BUREAU DE PUBLICITE, SPA.

---

RHEUMATISM.

BLAIR'S

GOUT PILLS.

The only Remedy that Relieves and Cures all Rheumatic Complaints. Sure, Safe, and Effectual. All Chemists and Stores, 1/1½ & 2/9 per box.

---

MAGNA CIDER.

"The Sparkling Wine of Somerset."

A delicious appetising beverage. Guaranteed genuine apple juice. Declared by Lancet absolutely pure. Strongly recommended by doctors in cases of Gout, Rheumatism, and Obesity. Brut Cider a speciality. Send 22s. for specimen case, containing 1 doz. quarts of Speciality and 1 doz. quarts of a sweeter blend; or 25s. for 2 doz. pints of each quality. Carriage, bottles, and cases included.—MAGNA CIDER CO., Marston Magna, Somerset.

---

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S

HIGH-CLASS

CIGARETTES.

TEOFANI'S Cigarettes receive the Highest Awards at all International Exhibitions, and are Sold by Leading Purveyors throughout the WORLD.

TEOFANI & CO., LONDON.

---

Your face is your fortune. Preserve it with Williams' Shaving Soap.

Williams' Shaving Sticks and Tablets sold everywhere. Trial sample for 1d. stamp to pay postage. Write for Free booklet, "How to Shave."

The J. B. Williams Co.,
65 Great Russell St., London.

---

---

HANSEN'S

UNKET

TABLETS.

THIS IS THE TIME FOR DAINTY JUNKET.

Hansen's Junket Tablets are double the value of the next best. They are always reliable and up to their full strength, and keep their high quality. Junket, besides having a high food value, is a delicacy capable of a dainty variety in presentation, always appetizing.

Sold by all Grocers, Chemists, etc., in Glass Tubes, containing 24 Tablets, each sufficient to make a quart of Junket. Sample Tube and Book of over 30 Recipes, 6d. post free from Hansen's Depot, 77, St. Thomas's Street, London, S.E.

---

"CROWN" Lavender Salts

are noted for their delightfully refreshing fragrance.

Of all Chemists and Stores, or post free, 1/2 and 2/3, from

THE CROWN PERFUMERY CO., 108, Fore Street, London.

PARIS. NEW YORK.

---

THE CHARING CROSS BANK. ESTABLISHED 1870.
119 and 120, BISHOPSGATE ST. WITHIN, E.C., and 28, BEDFORD ST., CHARING CROSS, London.
Assets, £694,403. Liabilities, £372,291. Surplus, £322,112.
Loans of £30 to £2,000 granted at a few hours' notice in town or country, on mortgage of furniture, trade and farm stock, plant, crops, etc., without removal. Also on deeds, policies, and reversions. Distance no object. Easy terms.
2½ per cent. allowed on Current account balances.
DEPOSITS of £10 and upwards received on terms as under.
Subject to 3 months' Notice of Withdrawal 5 per cent. per annum.
" 6 " " 6 " "
" 12 " " 7 " "
Special terms for longer periods. Interest paid quarterly. The Terminable Deposit Bonds pay nearly 9 per cent., and are a safe investment. Write or call for Prospectus.
A. WILLIAMS, H. J. TALL, } Joint Managers.

---

WHELPTON'S PURIFYING PILLS

For Indigestion, Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Sea Sickness.

INVALUABLE FOR LADIES.

8, 14, and 33 stamps.

G. WHELPTON, 4, Crane Court, Fleet St., London.

---

BIRKBECK BANK

ESTABLISHED 1851.

Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.
Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.
Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

---

SULPHOLINE SKIN LOTION.

Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, Entirely fade away.

---

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Prevents the Hair from falling off.

Restores Gray or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.

Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no unpleasant odour.

IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin, or even white linen.

Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

Ask your Chemist or Hair-Dresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.

Prepared only by the . . .

ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd., 33, Farringdon Road, London, E.C.

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

WELSH EARTHENWARE: SWANSEA.

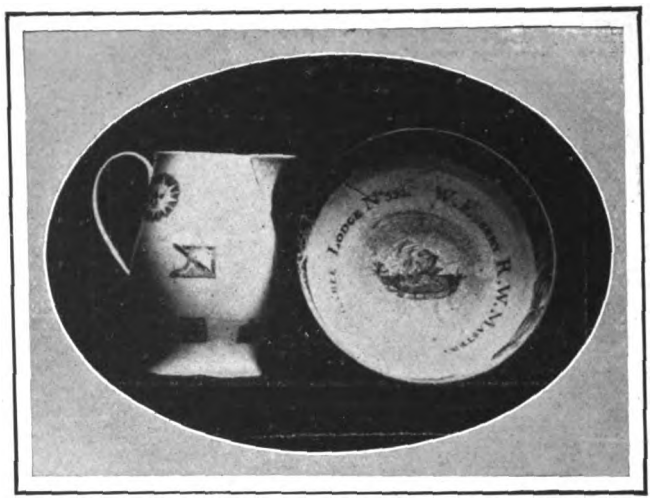
SWANSEA earthenware is far older than the days of the triumphs of Billingsley, or even those of the "opaque china." Moreover, its manufacture in various shapes survived that of the rare and beautiful porcelain for which the average collector seeks in vain. The exact date of the establishment of the "Cambrian Works" is September 19, 1764, when the Corporation leased a site on the banks of the Tawe for the carrying on of a manufacture of stoneware and earthenware. The first lessee was William Coles, a Quaker. From that time forth the town records contain entries of the payment of rent for "an earthenware house" or "a pot-house with its app'nts, late the Copper Works." The ware produced by Mr. Coles (1764-83) was distinguished for its extreme lightness. It consisted principally of tea-cups, saucers, jugs, and plates, painted in vivid enamel colours with landscapes, costume-figures, flowers, and animals. "The mannerism," Mr. Turner tells us, "was rough and careless, but very effective. The forms of the pieces were good and carefully modelled, having neat pearled borders with double twisted handles. Some of them were marked 'Cambrian Pottery,' but the majority of them were unsigned." Collectors should carefully bear in mind every word of this description of the older sort of Swansea earthenware. At this period the population of Swansea could not have exceeded 4,000. It was only 6,831 half a century later, but the trade carried on between Swansea (described in 1783, when the "pot-house" was offered for sale, as "the most flourishing port of South Wales") and the coast of Somerset, Devon, and Cornwall was already very large. Hence the possibility of still picking up characteristic specimens of early Swansea pottery in these parts of England. To Coles succeeded Mr. George Haynes of "opaque china" fame. The "opaque china" was nothing more than a refined earthenware, not, as Donovan tells us, "a sort of porcelain." The clay used by Haynes and his successors was brought from Poole and Corfe in Dorsetshire and Bideford in Devonshire. Even in the golden age of Swansea china, the making of earthenware was never given up. In the Masonic Hall at Swansea is a much-prized blue and white jug and punch-bowl, made about the time of Trafalgar, and covered with roughly-designed Masonic emblems. By the courtesy of Mr. Lyons, the present Master of the "Indefatigable" Lodge, it has been photographed for reproduction in these pages. In 1824, the lease of the Swansea works once more relapsed to Mr. Dillwyn, and the making of earthenware continued to prosper, many of the fine china moulds being utilised for its production. The writer saw in the Cardiff Art Gallery a jug of the years 1831-32 decorated with portraits of the Reform leaders and appropriate inscriptions. It bears the familiar mark of L. W. Dillwyn. A little later Swansea apparently did a good business in Free Trade pottery, just as fifteen years previously it turned out a large number of "Queen Caroline" jugs and mugs. The writer recently came across a very good specimen of these in the well-known curiosity shop of Mr. Stephens in Church Street, Hereford. Like the cracker-makers of more modern times, Mr. Dillwyn must have had poets in his employ as well as painters, for it displays a long rhyming inscription, as well as two portraits of the "much-injured" consort of "George the Magnificent." It possesses all the characteristics of Swansea earthenware, although Mr. Turner puts down 1824 as the precise date of Mr. Dillwyn's return to what he aptly calls "the earthenware division."



A JUG AND PUNCH-BOWL OF OLD WHITE AND BLUE SWANSEA WARE

Still preserved by the "Indefatigable" Lodge, Swansea.

In the Cardiff Art Gallery may be seen an almost unique collection of Swansea earthenware of every period during the chequered career of these once celebrated "pot-works." By the kind courtesy of the curator, Mr. John Ward, many of these have been photographed, and are now reproduced in THE KING. In 1844-45 Mr. Dillwyn for a brief period turned his attention to the making of Etruscan ware, after the models in the British Museum and the illustrations of Sir William Hamilton. Five years later the works passed into the hands of the Evanses. The products were the ordinary class of white, blue and white, and agate earthenware, all of which found a ready market throughout the West of England. The works were finally abandoned in 1870.

In 1802 Lord Nelson visited the Swansea "pot-house." He even took a plunge into a swimming-bath which adjoined the establishment. A service of some kind was specially made for him, and possibly decorated by Pardoe. It is not known whether it was of porcelain or earthenware, but he wrote from Merton acknowledging its receipt in appreciative terms on December 7, 1802. Possibly a specimen of it may turn up at one or other of the Nelson centennial exhibitions.

Although marks on the Swansea china are rare, they abound in endless variety on the earthenware—the word in full, the letter S. the trident, the names of the makers, etc. They fill twelve pages of Mr. Turner's book. The collector should bear in mind, while searching for specimens of genuine "Swansea" at Clovelly or elsewhere, that the output of the vanished works on the banks of the Tawe, included three or four sorts of "opaque china," Etruscan ware, in two kinds at least, salt-glaze ware of light and artistic form, stoneware, and Wedgwood imitation in several varieties and lustre. The safest test to distinguish the earlier kinds of Swansea ware from the later is that of weight, the former being infinitely lighter. In the more modern Swansea earthenware, such well-known patterns as the "Willow," the "Tower," the "Castle," the "Cube," the "Goojerat," etc., are easily recognisable. B.

SOME FINE SPECIMENS OF SWANSEA EARTHENWARE IN THE CARDIFF MUSEUM AND ART GALLERY.

(Reproduced by permission of the Curator, Mr. John Ward.)

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

hold and offer for sale specimens of the
HIGHEST QUALITY
OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE
as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.
EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.
AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.
(Two hours from Paddington.)

Old Brass Stand and Lamp.

THE MISSES
H. & I. WOOLLAN
(Under Royal Patronage)
are showing a
UNIQUE
Collection of
Antiques.
Chippendale, Sheraton, and Hepplewhite Furniture. . . Worcester and Lowestoft Services. Lace, Glass, etc.
Showrooms: First Floor.
28, BROOK STREET, GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

CATALOGUES OF
ILLUSTRATED BOOKS, VIEWS, PORTRAITS, etc.,
GRATIS.
Books and Engravings Bought.
JAMES RIMELL & SON,
DEALERS IN OLD BOOKS AND ENGRAVINGS,
53. SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON, W.

BATH.
GEORGE GREGORY,
BOOKSELLER, Etc.
Write for Catalogues. An inspection of Mr. Gregory's shop should not be omitted by any visitor to Bath. Speciality—Americana. Old Bath. Colour-plate books. Autographs.
Address: 5, ARGYLE STREET.

To Portrait & Print Collectors & Extra-Illustrators.
Kindly inspect stock or signify wants to
GEORGE SUCKLING, 13, Garrick Street
(next door to Garrick Club).
Mr. SUCKLING undertakes inlaying, arranging and binding of extra-illustrated books.

AUTOGRAPHS—HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS.
The oldest Dealers in Europe. For Catalogues, issued monthly, and all information write at once to
M. NOEL CHARAVAY,
3, RUE DE FURSTENBERG, PARIS,
where the "AMATEUR DES AUTOGRAPHES," a valuable Monthly Publication, may also be obtained.

JAMES TREGASKIS,
"The Caxton Head," 232, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.
RARE BOOKS,
MEDIÆVAL MANUSCRIPTS,
DOCUMENTS OF LITERARY & HISTORICAL INTEREST,
ORIGINAL DRAWINGS,
ENGRAVINGS,
AMERICANA,
CURIOSITIES,
ANTIQUITIES,
OBJECTS OF ART.
Catalogues Price Sixpence.

PORTRAITS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.
ENGLISH—FOREIGN—AMERICAN.
RARE ENGRAVINGS OF ALL SORTS.
WRITE FOR CATALOGUES OR VISIT THE SHOWROOMS OF
M. GODEFROY MAYER,
41, RUE BLANCHE, PARIS.

WEYMOUTH, DORSET.
CURIOSITY SHOP.
Finest collection of Genuine Curios in West of England.
Amongst other items on sale—Unique Inlaid Escritoire-Cabinet formerly property of Frederick the Great, presented by successor to Sir Evan Nepean, Secretary of Admiralty at time of Trafalgar.
BAKER, 2, Charlotte Row, Close Old Palace George III.
DESCRIBED BY MADAME D' ARBLAY.

Bookbinding.—The Bedford Bindery.
OLD-ESTABLISHED FIRM.
VERY MODERATE PRICES. Special attention paid to extra-illustrated works.
SPECIMENS ON VIEW.
G. F. AYLING, 1A, CAMBRIDGE ST., EDGWARE ROAD, W.

MAGGS BROS.,
109, STRAND, W.C., LONDON, ENGLAND.
Dealers in RARE BOOKS AND FINE LIBRARY EDITIONS OF STANDARD AUTHORS, Voyages and Travels, Early Printed Books, 1st Editions of 17th, 18th, and 19th Century writers, Illustrated Works. Also Rare Portraits, Line, Stipple, Mezzotints, and Colour Engravings, and Autographs.
Recently issued—Illustrated Catalogues of Rare Books, Voyages and Travels, Engravings, Autographs. Price 6d. each.

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

For Spaces in the Register apply to "THE EDITOR."

WANTED.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

Following autograph letters wanted: — Beau Brummel, Captain Gronow, Frederica, Duchess of York, Mary Anne Clarke. Good prices given.—823, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Letters of Mrs. Delaney to Mrs. Frances Hamilton; 1 vol., small 8vo, with silhouette portrait, First edition. £1 offered. — 824, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Sporting Magazine, vol. 30, April-Sept., 1807, and vol. 37 (1810 and 1811). Good price offered.—172, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Jest Books, with coloured plates.—173, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Battersea Boxes, with views of Bath and Bristol Hot Wells.—520, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old XIVth or XVth Century Stained Glass Good specimens.—521, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Worcester China, Binn's "Century of Potting." Reports invited. 12/6 offered.—522, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Swansea China, marked pieces, plates or vases.—523, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Naval Prints published by any of the following:—C. Sheppard, 74, Little Britain; C. Taylor, Holborn (date 1791); J. Fairburn, 110 and 146, Minories (1800-1838); Tabart and Co., London; E. Rushton, Paradise Street, Liverpool; W. Belch, Bridge Street, Boro'; I. Houlston, Strand; R. Sly, 41, Union Street, Somers Town; J. Marshall, Aldermary Churchyard, London.—237, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good Impressions with good margins of engravings of old London, especially Covent Garden, the Temple, the Strand, Lincoln's Inn.—249, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old Views of the Commanderie at Worcester, or MSS. or Tracts relating to.—251, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

TAPESTRY, FURNITURE, Etc.

A good Specimen of Rock Tapestry. Period about 1640.—410, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

XVIIIth Century Mantel Glass. Must be in three panels, and in good condition.—411, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Original XVIIIth Century Drawings of Bath or Brighton. Also Caricatures relating to.—221A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Large coloured print of Blanchard in "The Maid of the Mill." What offers? From "Bell's Library."—222A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

BOOKS.

A fine copy of Natte's Bath, or would accept copy of Genest's British Stage, or good extra illustrated Life of Garrick.—129A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Eyton's "Antiquities of Shropshire," in good condition. Scarce.—130A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Bell's British Poets. Complete Set.—131A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

A very fine old Staffordshire Dinner Service of 160 pieces, in perfect condition. Crown Derby pattern, marked with crown. Sample plate on approval. Deposit.—520A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Staffordshire Ware, Busts of famous people.—521A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Life of Mrs. Frances Sheridan. Collection of Portraits from Oxberry.—744A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Ancient Greek, Roman, English, Scotch, Irish Gold and Silver Coins.—745A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

To Americans in London.—Antiquities, Greek, Roman and Mediæval Pottery, Fine Collection of Old English Pottery and Figures, China, Oil Paintings, Prints, Coins, Flint Implements, Tinder Boxes, Savage Weapons, and General Antiquities for disposal; part of my private collection; single specimens or otherwise. An inspection invited.—746A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

THE Blackpool Meeting, which has been fixed for Thursday and Friday, July 27 and 28, will be devoted entirely to events for racing cars, or cars in racing trim. The Blackpool Corporation will give £100 (in addition to the prizes offered) for the highest speed over ninety-five miles an hour, which will be increased to £250 provided a world's record for the flying kilomètre be made. The present world's record is 21 2-5-sec.

* * *

In a recent number Truth remarked: "Some fine day it will occur to a Minister of Public Health that dustless roads are as necessary for the well-being of the community as pure water and good sewers. In that day the housewife will arise and call the motors blessed for having taught men to lay their roads properly. A strong east wind is worse than any motor."

* * *

Mr. Cathcart Wason, M.P., has generally been regarded as one of the bitterest enemies of the motor-car, and his speeches in the House of Commons have entitled him to a foremost place in the anti-motor party in Parliament. It appears, however, that he is not the irreconcilable that he is supposed to be, if one may judge from the letter he addressed to the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders, regretting his inability to be present at their recent dinner and discussion on "The Use of the Highway." To everyone's surprise he wrote that he had a firm belief in the future of the automobile industry, and anticipated that in a very short space of time thousands of expensive and overworked horses would be replaced by motors. Except for purposes of farming, war, and sport, he added, the day of the horse was over.

* * *

The Automobile Club has been investigating a number of cases in which it had been reported in the newspapers that motorists had driven off without stopping, after causing injuries to persons on the highway. In five instances it has been ascertained from the police that motor-cars were in no way concerned in the accidents. Much good can be done by these enquiries, but it rarely happens that the contradiction is given the same publicity as the original false statement, which has probably been read by thousands, who regarded it as an additional proof of the danger of motor-cars and the inhumanity of those who drive them.

* * *

The title of the Marine Motor Club has been changed to the Motor-Yacht Club, and a proprietary company has been registered under that name, so that the liability of members may be limited to the amount of their subscriptions. A prize fund has been opened, to which Sir David Salomons, Captain Dixon, Mr. J. M. Gorham, Mr. Dugald Clerk, Mr. Linton Hope, and many others have made donations.

* * *

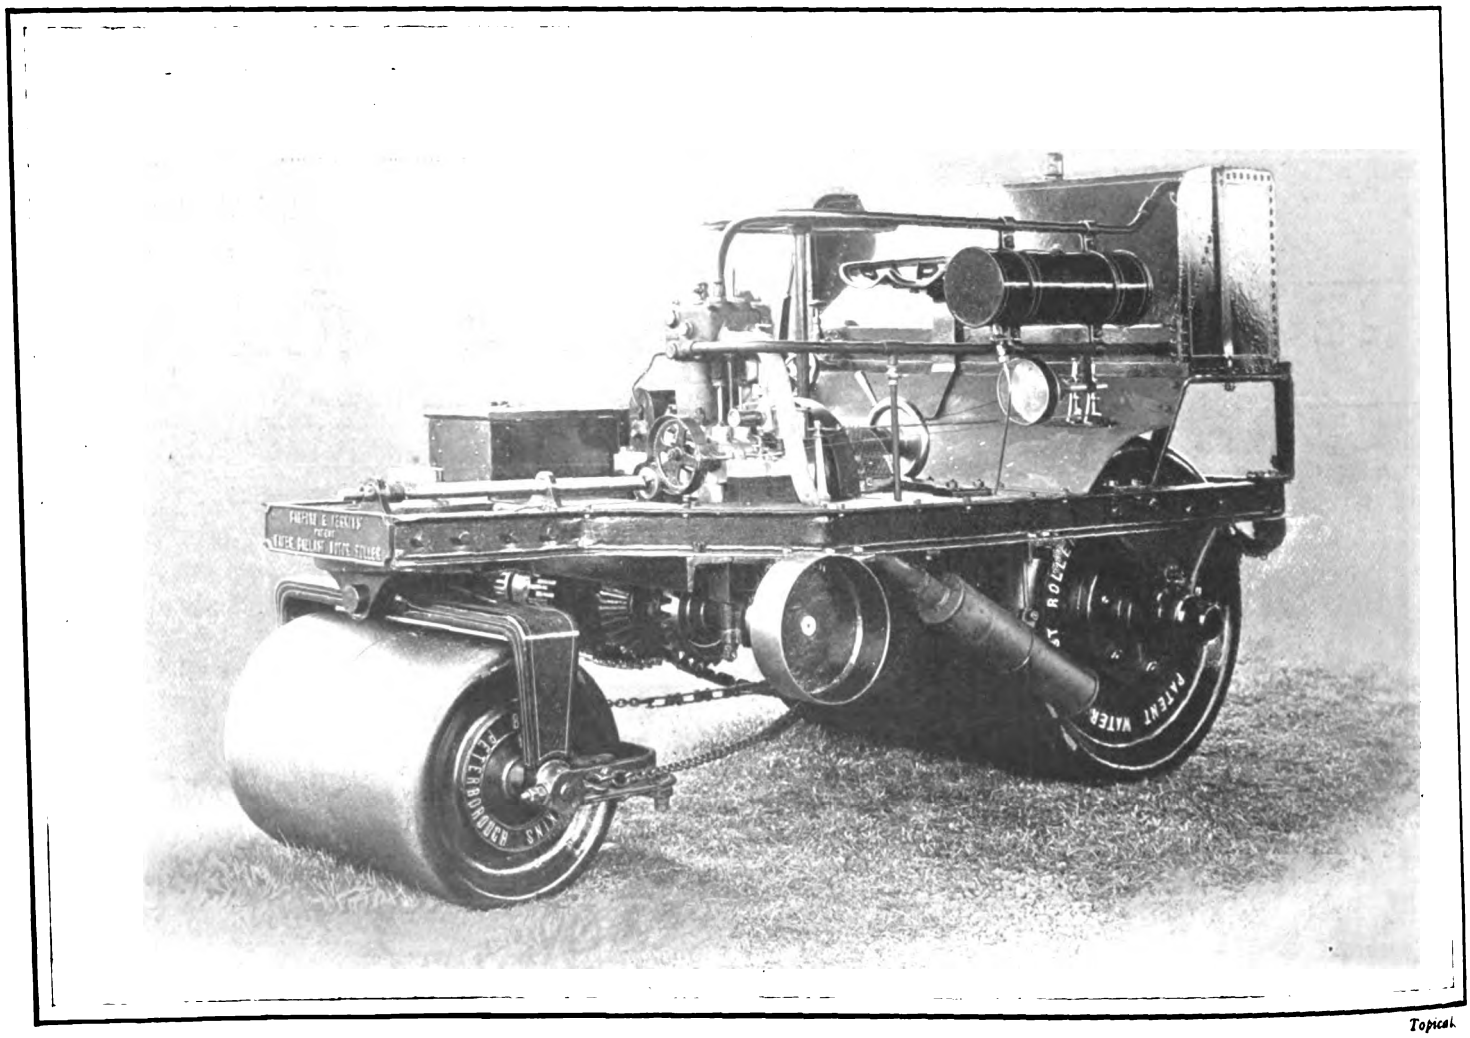
Six boats have entered for the Eliminating Trials for the British International Cup. The first is the Saunders-built 40-ft. hull, fitted with a 180-h.p. Napier motor, entered jointly by Mr. Lionel de Rothschild and the Hon. J. Scott Montagu. The second entry is Mr. Edge's "Napier II." The third is the Brooke boat, entered by Captain Corbet and Mr. Mawdslay Brooke. Little is known of this vessel, but it is rumoured that her engines are of enormous horse-power. Messrs. J. E. Hutton Limited, Lieutenant Mansfield Cumming, R.N., and Lord Howard de Walden have also entered boats. The Eliminating Race will take place at Sea View, Isle of Wight, on August 1.

* * *

Thirty-six boats have been entered for the Reliability Trials, which will be held by the Motor-Yacht Club in Southampton Water on August 2 and 3. Twenty-four of the competing vessels will use petrol as fuel, six will use paraffin, two either petrol or paraffin, and one will employ producer gas. The latter, which has been entered by Messrs. Thornycroft and Co., is 60-ft. in length, and its performances will be watched with particular interest, as in the opinion of experts there is a great future before producer gas in connection with motor-boats.

* * *

What promises to be the most important automobile meeting ever held in this country will take place at Brighton on July 19, 20, 21, and 22. The Madeira Walk will be used as a course, and has been specially laid with tarmac for the purpose. An excellent view of the races will be obtainable from the Parade, which overlooks the Madeira Road. In the tourist events there will be races for all the well-known types of cars if sufficient entries are received. The competitors will thus start on level terms, and skill in driving and preparing the car will decide the winner. There will also be races for touring cars, classified according to their price, the intervals between the classes being only £100, so that every maker will have a chance of success. Besides the touring classes there will be events for racing cars on each day of the meeting.



Topical

AT THE ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SHOW, PARK ROYAL.

A new water-ballast motor road-roller. The back roller is 36-in. in diameter and 42-in. wide.

Digitized by Google

MERCÉDÈS

40-h.p. Mercédès Touring Car

versus

Competitors in Isle of Man Gordon Bennett Eliminating Trials.

"I may mention that Mr. Campbell Muir, who went round the course with a playcard bearing the word 'finish,' covered the distance in 1hr. 14min. on a 40-h.p. Mercédès, a time which was only twice bettered by the competitors themselves."

"The Car," June 7th, 1905.

40-h.p. short Chassis, fitted with Roi des Belges coach body, with canopy and wind shield, painted and upholstered in Mercédès red; entrance through the front seat. Immediate delivery. Particulars on request.

AS USED BY
H.I.M. WILHELM II.,
German Emperor.
H.M. LEOPOLD,
King of the Belgians.

AS USED BY
H.M. EDWARD VII.,
King of England.
H.M. CARLOS,
King of Portugal.

Sole Concessionnaires:
Cannstatt Mercédès, Ltd.,

THE KING'S CAR

127, Long Acre, W.C.

REGD.

SPENCER & CO.,

Oldest Masonic Firm. Established 1801.

New Premises: 19, 20 & 21, Great Queen Street., W.C.

Manufacturers to the Grand Lodge of England, the Supreme Grand Chapter, the Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons, the Great Priory of England and Wales, the Great Priory of Ireland, and many other Masonic Governing Bodies.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST FREE UPON APPLICATION.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

THERE is no social gathering more interesting or more charming in every sense than the Henley Regatta, and this year's meeting was more than up to the usual standard. The delightful blending of colour in the gay assembly of womankind, and the contrast of the sky and our dear old Thames as a background made a glorious effect, one to be remembered. The dresses were unusually characteristic—so essentially suitable for the occasion. Paquin, of course, was recognisable in his inimitable style, one dress of his in white linen, made in the "incroyable" mode, which, as I have already mentioned, has come to stay with us for a while. Why? Simply because it is a mode not easily copied, and that all people cannot wear with impunity; therefore, it will not become universal. The one here illustrated has a dainty inner vest of brown and white stripes, and a black velvet deep-pointed band defining the waist. The coat is trimmed with Irish lace insertions and fancy smoked buttons. It has a turned-down collar, and chemisette of pleated cambric and cravat ends. The simple but appropriate white fancy straw hat just forms the needful finish to this Henley costume. There were endless fancy embroidered lawns and linens and laces of all descriptions to be seen there, also much more elaborate gowns; but these always seem a trifle out of place on an occasion like this. The hats were unusually pretty, especially the embroidered washing lawn hats trimmed with small garlands of roses and other simple flowers. Another exquisite gown, made by this noted firm, is the evening gown of pale crushed rose mousseline de soie, trimmed with flat folds of lace. The cut and hang of this gown speak for themselves, as can be seen in the photograph reproduced on another page.

Bassano.

A HENLEY COSTUME IN WHITE LINEN "INCROYABLE."
(Paquin, Dover Street, W.)

This week has started the "summer sales," and in this truly summer weather it says much for the energy of women to see how thronged have been the leading Maisons de Modes. Amongst others I must mention Messrs. Charles Lee and Son of Wigmore Street, who have really a most enticing selection of everything wearable at greatly-reduced prices. It would, indeed, take too long to go into details of all the numerous bargains to be obtained there, but I must for the moment draw attention to the few that seemed to me most tempting. For instance, do not neglect to visit the model gown department, likewise that of the coat and skirt costumes. There, if you are not very difficult to satisfy, you will find undoubtedly plenty to please you and lighten your "sale purse." Do not forget also to see their comfortable and up-to-date veils, both for street wear and for motoring. Their chic hats are already well known and appreciated, so I need not mention them specially. One word about furs, although it is, as you may say, scarcely the moment to be fascinated by them, but then you do not know until you have seen the marvellous value to be obtained by an early purchase of these goods at this establishment; for Mr. Lee has made wonderfully advantageous purchases of all varieties of these goods, and is offering them really most moderately.

Those who are replenishing their linen cupboards, and most Englishwomen take unusual pride in their linen stores, must look at Messrs. Robinson and Cleaver's table and bed linen. The good style and quality of their linen and muslin costumes do not need any reminder, but the reduction in this department calls for special mention.

A very interesting wedding took place at St. George's, Hanover Square, on June 28, that of Captain Hon. E. Guest, 1st Life Guards, third son of Lord and Lady Wimborne, who married Miss Amy Phipps, daughter of Mr. Phipps, Mr. Carnegie's partner. The bridesmaids' dresses were of white Alençon tulle, with incrustations of white Malines lace, and white satin ruchings, gracefully arranged on the full skirts. The bodices were of tucked tulle and mousseline de soie, draped in fichu effect in a V shape, and caught with pink Oriental satin bows. A draped white Oriental satin ceinture confined the waist, ornamented with small buckles, and long sash ends of satin. There were eight bridesmaids in these pretty gowns, and two little children in sweet bébé frocks made of the same materials, only their sashes were of pink Oriental satin. These were all made at the famous Dover Street Paquin house.

At Messrs. Debenham and Freebody's of Wigmore Street there are plenty of tempting reductions in all departments, and those who know this firm's genuine summer sales will not require urging to visit this establishment. For feather boas and stoles, this firm is the first in London, and has the largest selection, and just now the reduction is very great in these goods, and for those living at a distance Messrs. Debenham and Freebody send on approval. Therefore you can avoid all crowds this hot weather; only write at once, for their sale only lasts fifteen days. Their blouses and silk slips are all good shapes, and their gloves are always reliable. Do not forget to see their black and coloured taffetas chiffons, which are well worth the money.

Have you noticed their fur-freezing store, which is so excellently arranged? This affords a good opportunity of buying your furs at summer prices, and any orders now given will receive the best attention, and the articles can be stored free of charge until required inthe winter

R. D.

Digitized by Google

NEW ZEALAND

THE BRIGHTER BRITAIN.

A NEW COUNTRY of marvellous beauty, with a fertile soil and a splendid climate. No extremes of heat or cold.

No droughts. An abundance of water, yet no rainy season.

An Evergreen Land rich in natural produc's.

A GREAT SHEEP, CATTLE AND DAIRYING COUNTRY.

Cheap farms with helpful assistance to farmers by the Government. Reduced steamer fares from the United Kingdom to New Zealand for persons with small capital.

No private monopoly of Public Utilities; the Government owns and operates Railways, Telegraphs, Telephones and Insurance.

No Lock-outs! No Strikes!! Employment disputes adjusted by Arbitration!!!

NEW ZEALAND IS THE WONDERLAND OF THE WORLD.

Its Thermal Sights are unique in their extent, beauty and weirdness.

The Mammoth Geyser "Waimangu" (Black Water) hurls an immense mass of boiling water, mud and stones over 1,000 feet high.

Hot Mineral Water and Mud Baths; The Curative Baths of Rotorua, Te Aroha and Hanmer are world famous. Government doctors in attendance.

Baths. Gardens. Games. Music.

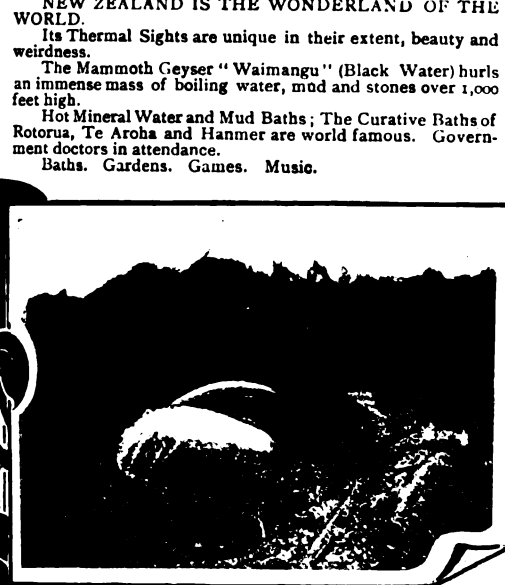
and picturesque. Here are lakes of great size and depth—canyons that surpass the greatest of other lands—dense forests with a tropical profusion of ferns and flowers—innumerable waterfalls—monoliths of granite many thousands of feet in height—glaciers, snowfields, and the peerless Sounds, with their 400 miles of inside sailing distance.

TRANSIT is convenient throughout New Zealand. Government railways, Express trains, Pullman and Dining Cars. Excellent coastal steamers. Splendid coaching routes. Hotels, good; charges moderate. Government Hotels, Spas, and Accommodation Houses in many of the principal tourist resorts.

Large Mail Steamers with every modern comfort and convenience leave Great Britain for New Zealand fortnightly. Duration of direct journey, 40 days; via Suez and Australia, 44 days; via Canada, 32 days; via San Francisco, 28 days.

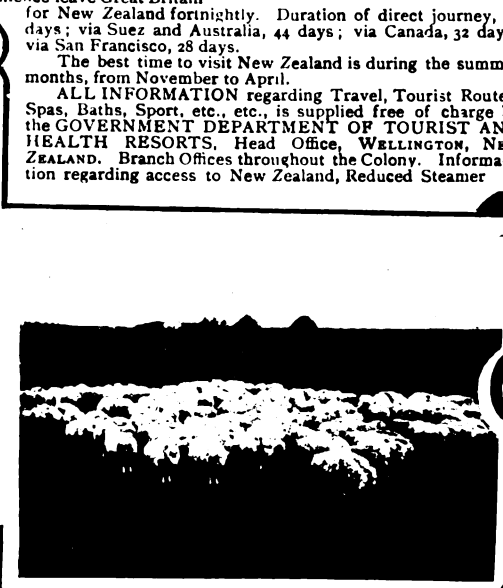
The best time to visit New Zealand is during the summer months, from November to April.

ALL INFORMATION regarding Travel, Tourist Routes, Spas, Baths, Sport, etc., etc., is supplied free of charge by the GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENT OF TOURIST AND HEALTH RESORTS, Head Office, WELLINGTON, NEW ZEALAND. Branch Offices throughout the Colony. Information regarding access to New Zealand, Reduced Steamer



HYDRAULIC GOLD MINING AT ROSS.

GOLD DREDGE IN SKIPPERS GORGE, LAKE WAKATIPU.



A SMALL FARM IN NEW ZEALAND.

The ALPINE SCENERY of New Zealand combines the distinguishing features of Switzerland, Norway and America. The Southern Alps extend for 300 miles. Mt. Cook, the highest peak, is belted by the largest glaciers in the temperate regions—the Tasman being 18 miles long and 2 miles wide. Near the foot of Mt. Cook is the Hermitage Hotel. Government guides, Alpine huts, and all necessary Alpine equipment available for use of visitors.

The LAKES of New Zealand are most pleasing in their charm of colour, contour and environment. Rotorua, Rotoiti, Taupo, and Waikaremoana in the North Island; Manapouri, Wakatipu, Te Anau, Wanaka, Kanieri and Mahinapua in the South Island are the most notable. The Lakes of the South Island are surrounded by mountain scenery of singular beauty and magnificence. Steamers and Power Launches. Good Hotels.

The WEST COAST FIORDLAND is indescribably wild

Fares, Settlement, Commerce, Industries, Travel, etc., etc., also supplied at the Office of the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, London—Mr. J. G. Gow, Commercial Agent for New Zealand, Durban, South Africa, also supplies general information respecting New Zealand.

Minister for Tourist and Health Resorts: Hon. Sir Joseph G. Ward, K.C.M.G. Superintendent: T. E. Donne, Wellington, New Zealand. The Superintendent invites correspondence.

See Tourist Department's "Itinerary of Travel" and descriptive Guide Books.

An International Exhibition of Products, Manufactures, Arts, Sciences, Amusements, etc., etc., is to be held by the Government of New Zealand in Hagley Park, Christchurch City, commencing 1st November, 1906, and terminating April, 1907. Full particulars obtainable from the Agent-General for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, S.W.

OKOROIRE.

HOT SPRINGS AND SANATORIUM HOTEL.

One of the finest Health Resorts in the Thermal District.

The first place of interest en route to Rotorua, New Zealand.

Delightful NATURAL HOT MINERAL BATHS, free to Guests. Sufferers from Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Affection of the Eyes, Skin Diseases, etc., are often permanently cured by these waters.

CLIMATE.—Beautifully clear and bracing atmosphere, charming surroundings.

SPORT.—The Streams in the hotel grounds are exceedingly well-stocked with Trout. Plenty of Game, viz.: Pheasants, Virginian Quail, Wild Duck, Hares, and Deer. Lawn Tennis, Golf, and Croquet.

The drive from Okoroire to Rotorua is one of the most beautiful in New Zealand.

T. MARTIN,
Manager.

NEW ZEALAND.

THE GRAND HOTEL, ROTORUA.

Situated in the Centre of the Hot Lakes District.

Patronised by T.R.H. The Prince and Princess of Wales.

THE HOTEL s n the immediate neighbourhood of the beautifully laid-out Government Gardens, wherein are situated the celebrated "Priest," "Rachel," "Postmaster," "Duchess," and other mineral baths, the curative properties of which are world famous. It has magnificent and lofty apartments, spacious promenade, balconies, snug alcoves, and luxuriously-appointed drawing, music, conversation, reading, smoking, and billiard rooms, perfect sanitation, and is lighted throughout by electricity.

BATH CHAIRS and attendance provided to convey invalids to or from the various bath houses. Tariff 12/6 per day inclusive.

W. J. LEES, Manager.

THE GEYSER HOTEL,

WHAKAREWAREWA, ROTORUA.

Situated in close proximity to the wonderful Geysers and Maori Settlement.

Visitors staying at the Geyser Hotel have continued opportunity of witnessing them as they can be seen plainly from the verandah of the Hotel, also of studying native life and customs.

The Hotel possesses its own private hot and cold curative mineral baths of which the most valued are the "Spout," "Oil," and "Carlsbad" Baths.

It has lately been greatly enlarged and re-furnished in a most comfortable manner. Electric light is established throughout the hotel and baths.

Coaches run regularly between Whakarewarewa, the Rotorua Sanatorium, and Government Gardens.

Tariff 10s. per day or £3 per week, inclusive. For a lengthened stay terms can be arranged.

CHAS. E. NELSON, Proprietor.

Digitized by Google

THE KING'S MENU.

WHETHER hot or cold food is the most wholesome when the thermometer is anything over 60-deg. in the shade may be a moot question, but on such occasions a menu in which cold dishes preponderate finds many advocates. The one offered to-day contains two hot dishes only, the pigeon cutlets and the quails. These last could be served en délice, or their place taken by a mayonnaise of ducklings, without entailing any rearrangement of the rest of the menu. The Daren bread for the crumbs can be obtained of almost all good bakers nowadays.

SOUFFLE AU PAIN DAREN.

Rub and sieve finely four ounces of Daren bread-crumbs and mix them with a liqueur-glassful of brandy and a teaspoonful of vanilla essence, or with a wineglassful of any liqueur syrup, such as maraschino or noyeau, to taste. Now put into a whipping-pan the yolks of eight and the whites of four eggs, and three ounces of castor sugar, stir in the brandy or liqueur-flavoured bread-crumbs, and whip these altogether on the stove till the mixture is warm and thick, then lift the pan off the fire and whip till the contents are cold and stiff, then mix lightly in three to four gills of cream, sweetened and flavoured, and whipped till quite stiff. Pour the mixture into a papered soufflé case, stand it in the charged ice cave for three and a-half to four hours, then remove the paper band carefully and serve immediately. If liked the top of the soufflé can be sprinkled, before serving, with finely-chopped almonds which have been browned in the oven.

A DELIGHTFUL INNOVATION.

In America what are called "packet groceries" have been for some time past much in demand amongst the many people who, without being unduly fastidious, object to food, such as sugar, biscuits, and so on, being handled by fingers, often far from clean, in the process of weighing and packing in bags small quantities of groceries.

Through the adoption by the factories and wholesale houses of this packet grocery system small quantities of everyday household necessaries are put up in cans, bags, or packets filled at the factory (or warehouse in the case of tea, for instance) by spotless machinery, so that the goods are not touched by human hands at all.

This system has now been applied to small quantities of biscuits put up at the factory in the daintiest of cardboard boxes and sold as Bispaks, by Messrs. Carr and Co., the famous biscuit manufacturers and millers of Carlisle. These Bispak cases, containing every variety of their delicious biscuits in small quantities, are Messrs. Carr's patent, who, knowing the popularity of the packet grocery system in America, foresaw an equal success for it amongst English housewives. With ordinary care biscuits will keep as well in the Bispak cartons as in tins, at any rate for a reasonable length of time, whilst the inexpensive nature of the box gives all the advantages of small tins, with a great saving in cost, and no trouble regarding returns.

The appearance of these Bispaks is most opportune now that picnics and the river and holiday season are here, with the shooting one to follow, as these boxes are so pretty and decorative that the contents can quite well be offered straight from them on such occasions. Even if this is not done they are very convenient for packing, being so light, while at the same time loss by breakage, such as occurs when small quantities are bought or carried in paper bags, is entirely obviated.

A HOT-WEATHER MENU.

MELON GLACE.

CONSOMME DE VOLAILLE EN GELEE.

TRUITE SAUMONNE A LA NORVEGIENNE.

COTELLETES DE PIGEON A LA D'UXELLES.

CHAUDFROID DE FOIE-GRAS.

CAILLES EN CASSEROLE.

SALADE.

TOMATES A LA CREME.

SOUFFLE GLACE AU PAIN DAREN.

BISCUITS D'ANCHOIS AUX OLIVES.

Those of my readers whose grocers or stores do not yet stock these particular packets should write, mentioning THE KING, to Messrs. Carr and Co., biscuit manufacturers, Carlisle, and ask them for the name of their nearest agent. On the Continent Messrs. Carr are to be found at 7, Rue Ambroise Thomas, Paris, and 24, Rue du Parlement Ste. Catherine, Bordeaux, so that holiday-makers on the French Coast this summer can obtain them without difficulty.

When all the biscuits are so super-excellent, it is perhaps invidious to single any one variety out for special praise, but those named Club Cheese are such a delicious basis for savouries, and afford such welcome variety in this connection, that I have appended a recipe or two for savouries which are particularly good when Club Cheese biscuits are used for mounting them on, instead of ordinary croûtons or home-made cheese pastry.

BISCUITS D'ANCHOIS AUX OLIVES.

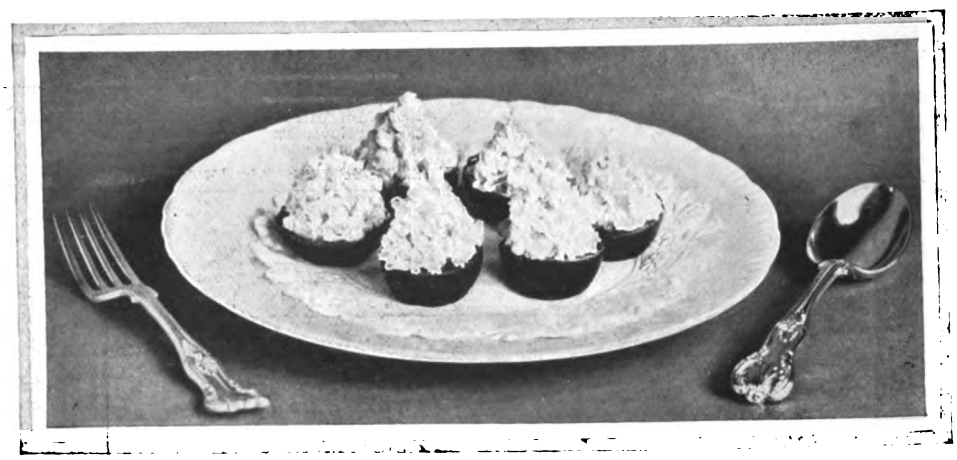
For these pile up or pipe the required number of Club Cheese biscuits with stiffly-whipped cream mixed with anchovy paste to taste and seasoned with coralline pepper.



TOMATES A LA CREME.

(Specially prepared and photographed for this paper.)

Then arrange on this cream a couple of olives stuffed with an anchovy fillet each. A caper is then placed between the olives and one at each corner. Another version of this bonne bouche is obtained by using the following anchovy cream to pile on the biscuits, or sometimes the cream is put between two of these, sandwich fashion, before the cream is frozen, and the sandwiches then placed in the ice cave before serving. For At Homes and afternoon teas these make most toothsome little savoury sandwiches, much appreciated in hot weather. For the anchovy cream for them wash and bone five anchovies and pound them with the yolk of a hard-boiled egg and a teaspoonful or two of thick cream. Season to taste with coralline pepper, then when the paste is smooth add to it a tablespoonful of just liquid aspic jelly and two tablespoonfuls of cream whipped till quite stiff. If the cream is to be piled on the biscuits it is then set in the ice cave till wanted and about to be served, otherwise spread the biscuits with it and put the sandwiches in the ice cave.

Anchovy butter can be used instead for these little biscuit sandwiches, as nearly all the savoury butters, including watercress maître d'hôtel, curry, lobster, etc., are good with these biscuits. Wafer-thin slices of cucumber or garden cress can of course be put between.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

FLEUR RINGS (Jingo).—You can get these from Mrs. A. B. Marshall, Marshall's School of Cookery, Mortimer Street, Oxford Street, London, W. If you mention this paper when you write, she would send you at the same time illustrations of her newest moulds, etc., for the season.

COD AND HERRING ROE SAVOURIES (Sans Atout).—If it is fresh cod's roe you want to use, wash it well, then put it into plenty of boiling salted water, acidulated with a spoonful of vinegar to each pint of water, and cook for about a quarter of an hour. Let it get cold, then slice it, fry lightly in butter, and serve it on croûtons of fried bread, seasoned with minced chives, parsley, and coralline pepper, and serve as it is, or pipe on to each slice of roe, just as it is going to table, a little anchovy or other suitably flavoured butter, or horseradish cream. You can also, after boiling the fresh roe, serve it on croûtons spread with a spoonful of tomato purée. If the cod's roe is smoked instead of fresh, it must be well washed, then steeped in milk and water to soften it. Dry well, slice, and fry in butter, then serve on croûtons seasoned as for the fresh roe. This smoked roe is also very good if after frying it is pounded with sufficient butter to make a smooth paste, seasoned with coralline and freshly-ground black pepper, then spread on hot buttered toast, and sprinkled with a squeeze of lemon juice and minced parsley just before serving. If, after pounding and seasoning, this cooked smoked roe is put into little pots, and the tops of these covered with oiled butter, it will keep good for some time, and is very useful for various savouries and sandwiches. For the herring roes, if you are using the canned ones, try them au gratin and en papilottes. For the first, put a layer of d'Uxelle mixture (equal parts of finely-minced mushrooms and parsley, and a third of shallots, fried together for a few minutes in butter with a seasoning of salt and pepper, then used; an ounce and a-half each of mushrooms and parsley and half an ounce of chives or shallots would do for you to try this recipe with, you know, or three ounces each of the first two and an ounce of the last ingredient) in some little paper cases that have been oiled and dried, then put a herring roe (if you are using fresh roes they must be cooked in a little butter for ten minutes before using like this) on the top of the d'Uxelle layer, and on the top of the roe put a spoonful of rich brown or tomato sauce, cover this with fine bread-crumbs, put a few drops of oiled butter on these, and set in the oven till nicely browned. You can omit the sauce with this recipe if you think the result too rich otherwise. For the laitances en papilottes, oil some heart-shaped pieces of paper, put a little d'Uxelle mixture, as given above, on each, then a spoonful of thick well-reduced tomato sauce, or you can use a thick brown d'Uxelle sauce only, if you like, instead of the mixture and the tomato sauce, put a roe on each, fold the paper over, pinch the edges firmly together, and bake till the paper puffs out, then serve at once as hot as possible.

SYBARITE.

Digitized by Google

THE ESCOFFIER CARLTON DELICACIES

(AS SUPPLIED TO THE ROYAL HOUSEHOLDS OF EUROPE).

Manufactured by the "CHEF-DE-CUISINE" to the CARLTON HOTEL, LONDON.

| | | PER BOTTLE. |
|---|---|---|
| The ESCOFFIER | "Sauce Robert" ... ... | 1/- |
| The Escoffier ... | "Sauce Diable à la Provencale" | 1/6 |
| The Escoffier ... | "Sauce Melba," for Peaches Melba ... ... ... | 1/6 |
| The Escoffier ... | "Poivrons d'Espagne, Hors d'Œuvre" ... ... ... | 1/- |
| The Escoffier ... | "L'Olive Noire (La Mauresque), Confite au Naturel à l'huile d'olive vierge" ... ... | 2/- |

MAY BE OBTAINED FROM ALL HIGH-CLASS GROCERS AND LEADING STORES.

Manufacturers—
ESCOFFIER, Ltd., 6, Ridgmount Street, Tottenham Court Road.

РУБЛЬ КОФЕ
(ROUBLE COFFEE.)

THE COFFEE OF THE EPICURE.

BERRIES, FRESH ROASTED,
2/- PER LB.
WE PAY THE CARRIAGE.

It may not sound cheap, but nothing REALLY GOOD ever is cheap.

Follow our directions, and a revelation awaits you of what REALLY GOOD COFFEE REALLY IS.

METATA AGENTS, 17, DEVONSHIRE SQUARE, LONDON, E.C.

THE WHITE WINES OF ENGLAND.

BULMER'S Famous Herefordshire CIDERS and PERRY.

For a beautifully illustrated booklet on Cider, price list, and special booklet for invalids, apply

H. P. BULMER and CO., HEREFORD.

BUTLER'S "KEEN" RAZOR

HOLLOW GROUND.
SPECIAL STEEL.
HAND FORGED.
"I know that Razor, it comes from Sheffield."

HIGHEST AWARDS.
GUARANTEED PERFECT, AND BRITISH MADE THROUGHOUT.
"Keen as this razor's edge invisible." (Love's Labour Lost.)

Black Handles ... ... each 3/- & *5/- | Ivory Handles ... ... each 5/- & *7/6
*Per pair, in best Case, 15/-; 7-day set, 50/- | *Per pair in Russia Case, 21/-; 7-day set, 70/-
"CAVENDISH" CARVERS (Regd. brand) keep "an edge that won't come off."
Fine Ivory, 20/-; Imitation ditto or Stag, 10/6 per pair. Post Free of all Dealers.
Sole Makers, GEORGE BUTLER & CO., Trinity Works, SHEFFIELD.

The Premier Cyder of England.

DEVONSHIRE'S DELIGHTFUL DRINK.

WHITEWAY'S PURE CYDER.

DELICIOUS. INVIGORATING. HEALTH GIVING.

Pure apple juice free from chemical preservatives. Supplied to many members of Royalty and both Houses of Parliament (Lords exclusively).

Recommended by the Highest Medical Authorities as a panacea for Gout, Rheumatism and Obesity. Thousands of testimonials.

For free illustrated booklet, price list, etc., write:

WHITEWAY'S, The Orchards, Whimple, Devon,
And 22 & 23, Albert Embankment, S.W. Telephone 173 Hop.

"Tears never yet wound up a clock or worked a steam ingin'."
—PICKWICK PAPERS.

FRY'S PURE CONCENTRATED COCOA gives the feeling of "briskness," without which work or recreation may become irksome.

"My Ideal of Perfection."
—DR. ANDREW WILSON, F.R.S.E., &c.

7/10ths of ALL

Your little ills will find relief in

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

For HEADACHE,
For BILIOUSNESS,
For INDIGESTION,
For TORPID LIVER,
For CONSTIPATION,
For SALLOW SKIN,
For the COMPLEXION.

Very small, and easy to take as sugar. Purely Vegetable.

Genuine must have signature

Price 1¾d.

ARE YOU ALIVE

to the fact that thousands of people who were inveterate smokers of extensively advertised cheap paper cigarettes (which are so harmful to the health) have discontinued same, and are now smoking

FLOR DE DINDIGUL

CIGARETTES (All Tobacco Leaf—No Paper.)

They are far more satisfying, mild, delightful in flavour, pure, and last much longer than ordinary paper cigarettes. Doctors strongly recommend them. These delightful Whiffs are on sale everywhere. 1d. each, 8/- per 100. Awarded 10 Gold Medals for excellence.

Importer: BEWLAY, 49, STRAND, LONDON.
Established 125 Years.

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

It will be good news to those who are lovers of cyder that the 1904 vintage is proving one of the best ever known among the Devonshire cyder-makers, and Messrs. Whiteway of Whimple are consequently enabled to offer their patrons a better class of light wine than ever before. Devonshire cyder has a taste which is quite distinctive, and, as compared with foreign wines sold at the same price, is far less injurious and much more palatable. There are, of course, cheap and nasty brands of cyder, but these are not to be found in Messrs. Whiteway's lists. There are those also who, for conscientious reasons, feel debarred from drinking cyder on account of the small but appreciable quantity of alcohol it contains. For them Messrs. Whiteway have prepared Cydrax, a pure, non-alcoholic teetotal beverage of a pleasant taste, and it does not labour under the excess of sweetness which is so marked a disadvantage with other teetotal drinks.

---

The beautiful weather of the last few days has brought a great many English visitors to Spa, in the curative waters of which some leading London doctors have discovered an invaluable aid to those who desire (for their health's sake) to return to the "simple life." The concerts provided by the municipality are excellent; the theatre is open, and in July some al fresco performances are to be given under the auspices of the Comédie Française. In July we are promised a Bataille de fleurs, and in August a race-meeting, a concours hippique, and an athletic tournament. To those weary of the heat, noise, and crowds of the Liège Exhibition, Spa affords a quite ideal haven of rest.

---

Collectors of antiques know that there are few pieces of furniture more difficult to find than genuine old chairs of any of the favourite periods, so it will be interesting to them to hear that just now at Hewetson's, Tottenham Court Road, there are several fine antique chairs. An odd but very handsome chair of Charles II.'s time is of oak handsomely carved; a fine set of chairs of William and Mary's time have cabriole legs, and the shell carved upon them; and some very quaint chairs belonging to that rather vague period called Anglo-Dutch, when the models came over with William of Orange, are of inlaid walnut of a very curious form. Renowned as this firm already is for its beautiful furniture, both antique and modern, it will doubtless become still more so, as it has received an accession of strength in the form of a new managing director. This is Mr. T. H. Batstone, who has carried out the furnishing and decorating of some of the most important hotels in London, as well as of many private houses and country mansions. The "specimen" rooms are a great charm of Hewetson's, as in them it is possible to judge of the effect any piece of furniture may have in a room.

THE STEWARDS' BADGE

Used at the recent Masonic banquet at the Crystal Palace. Designed and executed by Messrs Spencer and Co.

---

The splendid building which Mr. Hutchinson inaugurates this week in Great Queen Street, almost opposite Freemasons' Hall and the old-world Jacobean house once tenanted by Richard Brinsley Sheridan, is an excellent specimen of the architectural new departures of which London is now the witness, and is in perfect keeping with its historic surroundings. On the upper storeys the "Executive" of both the Masonic Boys' and Girls' Schools will find ample and luxurious accommodation, while the ground floor is devoted to the ever-increasing requirements of the business of Masonic jewellers and furnishers, founded nearly half a century ago by Mr. Spencer, and made by the energy of Mr. Hutchinson and his able assistant, Mr. Welsford, a household word wherever Freemasonry flourishes. The beautiful badge worn at the Boys' School Festival is a good specimen of the skill and good taste invariably displayed by "Spencer's." To the founders of new lodges (and very specially to Knights Templars) the advice of Mr. Welsford may be fairly described as almost indispensable. In the early part of the present week many old friends and customers foregathered in the new house, to wish Mr. Hutchinson and "Spencer's" a large measure of success.

A FINE MASONIC EMPORIUM.

Messrs. Spencer and Co.'s new premises in Great Queen Street, W.C.

---

A feature of this season's garden parties, "At Homes," and receptions is the utilisation of the marvellously-trained animals at the Royal Italian Circus by up-to-date hosts and hostesses who wish to give surprise and pleasure to their guests. The latest instance of this was the appearance of Jumbo Junior, the tiny elephant, at the children's party given by Lady Wernher at Bath House, Piccadilly, on Thursday afternoon. Jumbo Junior, who was escorted by his trainer, Signor B. Volpi, caused much excitement and amusement amongst the juvenile guests. He delighted them by waltzing with elephantine grace, and played a selection of airs upon the mouth organ. Encouraged with sweets and cakes, he exhibited quite a number of his accomplishments, and wound up the entertainment by distributing the prizes to the delighted children with his trunk.

Amusements.

HIS MAJESTY'S. Mr. TREE.
Last Night of the Season,
Monday next, July 10th, at 8.
Special Performance of
OLIVER TWIST.
Dramatised by J. Comyns Carr.
Fagin . . . Mr. Tree.
Nancy . . . Miss Constance Collier
Oliver Twist . . Miss Hilda Trevelyan.
Box Office (Mr. Waits) open 10 to 10.

AVENUE THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. Frank Curzon.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.45.
A MESSAGE FROM MARS.
By Richard Ganthony, in which
Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY will appear.
Preceded at 8, by MISS BRAMSHOTT'S ENGAGEMENT.
Matinee Every Wednesday at 3.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. Frank Curzon.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
To-night at 8.15,
LADY MADCAP.
Matinee Every Wednesday at 2.15.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: Sir Charles Wyndham.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. Frank Curzon.
To-night at 8.45.
Mr. HOPKINSON.
An original farce in three acts by R. C. Carton.
Preceded at 8.15 by Mr. Nelson Jackson.
Matinee every Saturday at 3.

APOLLO THEATRE.
Henry Lowenfeld, Sole Proprietor.
Tom B. Davis, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON
Every Evening at 8.15.
The Comic Opera, in Three Acts,
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Wednesday at 2.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.
Managers: A. & S. Gatti & Charles Frohman
Every Evening at 8.15,
THE CATCH OF THE SEASON,
By Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton.
The Vaudeville Theatre Company.
Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

COMEDY THEATRE.
Lessee: Mr. Wm. Greet.
Under the Management of Mr. Frank Curzon.
Every Evening at 8.30, Wed. and Sat. Matinees at 3
The Times says: "Riot of high spirits, perpetual laughter."
The Daily Telegraph says: "Uproarious, bright, and mirth provoking, hard to beat."
THE GREAT SUCCESS.
CHARLES FROHMAN presents WILLIAM COLLIER and the entire American Company in the delightful Farce, in Three Acts,
"THE DICTATOR."
"THE DICTATOR."
By Richard Harding Davis.

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE.
Sole Lessee and Manager: Charles Frohman.
To-night at 9.
Charles Frohman presents J. M. Barrie's New Play,
ALICE SIT-BY-THE-FIRE.
At 8.25 sharp, PANTALOON, by J. M. Barrie.
Matinee Every Saturday at 2.25 sharp.

NAVAL, SHIPPING, AND FISHERIES EXHIBITION, EARL'S COURT.
Noon to 11.0 p.m. Admission 1s.
Naval Construction, Armaments, Shipping & Fisheries.
NELSON'S CENTENARY RELICS.
FISHING VILLAGE. Working Exhibits. Model of "Victory."
GRAND NAVAL AND MILITARY CONCERTS
Go on board the full-size Cruiser.
Real Batteries of 4.7 Guns, Hotchkiss and Maxims
The Cruiser is manned by a crew of 150 Handy-men.
PANORAMA OF THE BATTLE OF TRAFALGAR.
West's "Our Navy." Maxim's Captive Flying Machine. Fairy Grotto. Indian Canoes. Burton's Great Red Indian Village—Chiefs, Squaws, and Papooses. Voyage in a Submarine. Vanderdecken's Haunted Cabin. Famous Sea Fights Miss de Rohan's Musical and Dramatic Sketches. Tilikum Canoe.

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Mr. David Lloyd-George, M.P. | 479 |
| The March of Events | 480 |
| On the Links | 486 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 491 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 492 |
| The Parisians of Paris—How they Accommodate Large Families | 494 |
| In the Rue de Télégraphe | 495 |
| Under the Burgee | 496 |
| Yachts of the Year | 497 |
| The Baptist World Congress—July 11—July 18, 1905 | 498 |
| Celebrated Baptists of the Seventeenth, Eighteenth, and Nineteenth Centuries | 499 |
| The Traveller—On the Midland Railway: The Peak District | 504 |
| Cricket | 507 |
| The Services | 508 |
| Plays and Players | vii. |
| Art in the Sale-room | viii. |
| Literary Notes | x. |
| Leaves from a Collector's Note-book—Early Editions of the "Pilgrim's Progress"—English, American, and Dutch. Baptist Rariora | xii. |
| Motoring Notes | xiv. |
| Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xvi. |
| Paris Restaurants | xviii. |
| Here, There, and Everywhere | xx. |

TO LIBRARIES, CLUBS, HOTELS, Etc.

A Reading Case for THE KING can be had post free on application to the Publishers, George Newnes, Limited, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

GREAT NORTHERN & NORTH EASTERN RAILWAYS.

"Twixt Humber & Tweed"

SPLENDID CLIFFS & SANDS, BRACING MOORS, LOVELY DALES.

CHEAP FARES FAST TRAINS

APPLY TO CHIEF PASSENGER AGENT G.N.R. KING'S CROSS, OR ANY G.N. AGENT FOR FURTHER INFORMATION.

MESSRS. TROLLOPE'S REGISTER of TOWN HOUSES, PROPERTIES for SALE or to be LET, in Belgravia, Mayfair, South Kensington, Portman, and other districts is now revised. A printed synopsis may be had on application to their offices:

WEST HALKIN STREET, Belgrave Square; 7, Hobart Place, Eaton Square; 14, Mount Street, Grosvenor Square; and 5, Victoria Street, Westminster.

N.B.—Special Lists of Town and Country Houses will be forwarded on receipt of applicants' requirements.

CLOSE TO ALBERT GATE, HYDE PARK AND THE ROW.

66, LOWNDES SQUARE, overlooking the ornamental garden, with stabling at rear, a most attractive TOWN HOUSE, for SALE. The accommodation comprises ten bed and dressing rooms (one fitted bath), double drawing room, dining room, library, smoking room, and good domestic offices; electric light and hot and cold water services; the whole held by Head Lease until Christmas, 1928, at only £10 ground rent.

BY DIRECTION OF THE OWNER, WHO HAS TAKEN UP RESIDENCE ABROAD.

Unique detached Mansion, with the amenities of a Country House.

"MORTIMER HOUSE," EGERTON GARDENS, S.W.—This charming PROPERTY, built in the Tudor style, exquisitely fitted, and well placed in a large timbered and secluded garden, with tennis lawn, almost surrounded by gardens, situated in a fashionable neighbourhood, easily accessible from Hyde Park, the Houses of Parliament, etc. The Residence has thirteen bed and dressing rooms, a boudoir and two bathrooms on two floors only, elegant reception rooms on the ground floor, spacious vestibule and grand staircase, compact and well-equipped domestic offices; detached stabling and garage, with rooms, etc., enclosed yard; the whole constituting a very comfortable abode for a gentleman or family of position. Early possession.

Held for a term having nearly 71 years unexpired, at a moderate ground rent.

To be SOLD by AUCTION, at the Mart, E.C., On THURSDAY, 27th July, at 2 o'clock (unless an acceptable offer be previously made privately).

Solicitors, Messrs. ASHURST, MORRIS, CRISP & Co., 17, Throgmorton Avenue, E.C.

48, GROSVENOR GARDENS, S.W., and stables.—One of these charming MANSIONS, stone elevation in French Renaissance style, recently modernised, and facing the ornamental gardens; three elegant reception rooms on the first floor (front drawing room having three French casement windows opening to balcony), and three good rooms on the ground floor, thirteen bed and dressing rooms (two fitted baths), wardrobe and lumber rooms, complete and well-equipped domestic offices; stabling for four horses at rear; the whole forming an excellent Residence for a family of distinction.

Held for an unexpired term of about 44 years, at a moderate ground rent.

To be SOLD by AUCTION, at the Mart, E.C., On THURSDAY, 27th July, at 2 o'clock (unless an acceptable offer be previously made privately).

Solicitors, Messrs. PRIDEAUX & SONS, Goldsmiths' Hall, Foster Lane, E.C.

Particulars and conditions of Sale, with views of the former, of the Solicitors; also, with view cards, of the Auctioneers, Messrs. TROLLOPE, as above.

N.B.—Messrs. TROLLOPE'S Auction Announcements appear regularly in the Times on Saturdays, and the Morning Post on Mondays.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

THE COLONEL TAKES THE 19TH (W/HOLE IN ONE!

Head Office: 11, SO. EXCHANGE PLACE, GLASGOW.

J. H. ROGER PROPR.

LESSEE OF

H.M. CUSTOMS (No. 15) BOND, JAMES WATT STREET, GLASGOW.

Special Quotations to Golf Clubs.

"COLONEL BOGEY" WHISKY.

GUARANTEED 7 YEARS OLD.

42/- PER DOZEN. CARRIAGE PAID.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS of every description, including TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT. MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.

Handsome Public Rooms, including 2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.

Terms from MANAGER.

ST. ANNE'S-ON-THE-SEA

(Near BLACKPOOL).

Contains

FOUR GOLF LINKS (18 Holes each).

Also facilities for

BOATING, BATHING, FISHING, CYCLING, TENNIS.

Splendid Beach. Ideal Holiday Resort.

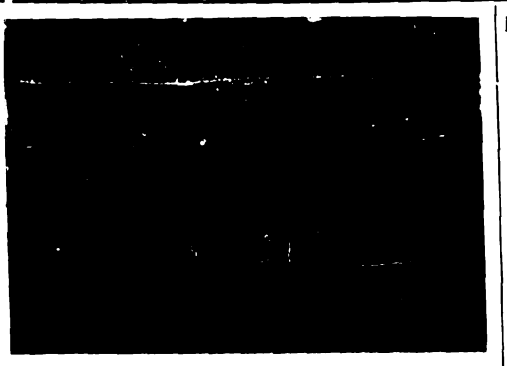
ILLUSTRATED GUIDE FREE

on application to

SECRETARY, Advertising Committee, Public Offices, St. Anne's-on-the-Sea.

LELANT, ST. IVES BAY, CORNWALL (close to golf links and station).—Furnished HOUSE, with plate and linen, to LET for Summer months; two large sitting rooms, six bedrooms, one dressing room, bathroom.—"T.B.H.," "Evelyns," Uxbridge.

SOUTHWOLD (best position on the Common; close to Golf Links).—To be LET, well Furnished, for June, July, and August, the pretty and artistic HOUSE known as "Link's Cottage," containing square hall, two sitting and large recreation rooms, servants' sitting room, seven bedrooms (fourteen beds), bathroom; electric light and telephone.—Apply to Mrs. ROBINSON, on Property.



THE LINKS, LLANGAMMARCH WELLS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations.

High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hôte, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.

THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.

THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.

A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.

Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads. Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.

Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.

Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.

New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,

Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.

To be obtained from Thos. Cook, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.

Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.

Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL.

SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.

Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.

Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill.

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau. 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 1st Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY, Within easy access of London

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers, inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable, being on sand.

DEVONSHIRE'S DELIGHTFUL DRINK.—The very best beverage for GOLFERS is WHITEWAY'S PURE CYDER.

Refreshing, cooling, and a panacea for Gout, Rheumatism, and Obesity

Booklets free from WHITEWAY'S, The Orchards, Whimple, Devon, and 22 and 23, Albert Embankment, S.W. Telephone 173 Hop.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer)

"'Is it a Private House or an Hotel?' is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

Club Houses can be efficiently and economically lighted by

ACETYLENE.

Write H. BAKER, 49, Victoria Street, S.W.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. Cox, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.
MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL. — Brinklea, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY.

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method).—Manager, E. DIELMANN.

SHERINGHAM, NORFOLK.

THE SHERINGHAM HOTEL,

ADJOINING GOLF LINKS (18 HOLES).

LARGEST HOTEL IN SHERINGHAM. Open all the year round. Handsome Dining Hall, 67ft. long. Numerous spacious Suites of Rooms commanding beautiful Sea and Land Views. Billiard and Smoking Rooms. Excellent and Improved Sanitary arrangements. Extensive Private Grounds. Lawn tennis, croquet. First-class Stables. Accommodation for Motors and Cycles. Through Trains from King's Cross, Peterborough, Birmingham, Leicester, etc.

Telegrams - "Sheringham Hotel, Sheringham."
National Telephone: No. 3. F. EDENS, Manager.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.
Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.
Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.
Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.
MODERATE TARIFF.
Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months

Perfect Sanitary arrangements.
Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE
Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit.

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL.

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

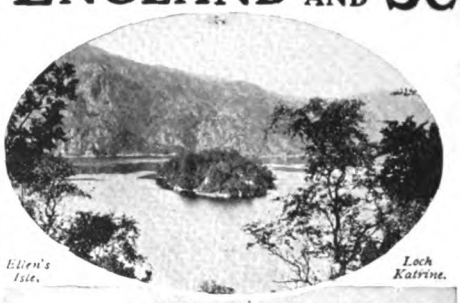
"CRAVEN"—acknowledged throughout the World the Mixture of Merit and Purity. The Favourite Tobacco since its invention in 1867.

Do not fail to give a trial to the "CRAVEN" Cigarette—"The Cigarette of Distinction."

TRAVEL BY
WEST COAST ROUTE
BETWEEN . .
ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND.



Ellen's Isle. Loch Katrine.

SPEED and COMFORT.

Hundreds of Pleasure Tours Daily by Rail, Coach and Steamer, on London & North Western and Caledonian systems.

FISHING, SHOOTING, GOLFING, &c., &c., &c.

ACCELERATED TRAIN SERVICE:
LONDON (EUSTON), BIRMINGHAM, LIVERPOOL, AND MANCHESTER
WITH
GLASGOW (CENTRAL), EDINBURGH (PRINCES ST.), ABERDEEN, INVERNESS, OBAN, AND THE NORTH.

Descriptive Guide Books of West Coast Route on application to Mr. R. TURNBULL, Euston Station, London.

For Tourist Programmes and "Summer Tours in Scotland," "Oban and the Land of the Gael," "Through Scotland" Descriptive Guides, apply to Mr. G. Calthrop, Caledonian Railway, Glasgow.

Frederick Harrison, General Manager L. & N.W. Ry.
R. Millar, General Manager Caledonian Ry.

When selecting from your Jewellers a Patent
GOLD "SELF-CLOSING" BRACELET
be SURE that you get
SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD'S.

THE ORIGINAL MAKE. UNSURPASSED FOR BEAUTY OF DESIGNS, WORKMANSHIP AND FINISH.

N.B.—These Bracelets have for some time been stamped inside with S. & S.'s Trade Mark "FLEXINE."

Wholesale only—SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD, LTD., LONDON.

STAND NOT UPON THE ORDER OF YOUR GOING BUT GO FOR YOUR HOLIDAY
BY GREAT CENTRAL RY.
YOU WILL FIND IT
RAPID TRAVEL IN LUXURY.
FOR IMPORTANT ALTERATIONS AND ACCELERATIONS OF TRAIN SERVICE SEE THE COMPANY'S JULY TIME TABLES.

"The House for Veils."
Largest Selection in London.

CHARLES LEE & SON,
The Royal Specialists for Ladies' Wear, . .
98 & 100, Wigmore St., LONDON, W.,
famous for
The Royal Crescent Veil,
a shaped Patent adjustable Veil, at prices and quality showing a great saving over veiling purchased by the yard.
9d., 1/-, 1/3, 1/6, 1/9, 2/-, 2/3, 2/6, etc.

MOTOR VEILS.
MOTOR HATS.
MOTOR VEILS.
The Latest and largest selection in London.

Messrs. LEE & SON continue to send a box containing a good assortment by post; boxes ready for return, no trouble after selecting.

NEW EXCURSION FACILITIES.

EVERY SATURDAY during JULY, AUGUST & SEPTEMBER, CHEAP EXPRESS EXCURSIONS for 3, 6, or 8 days will be run from MARYLEBONE STATION, to over 200 of the PRINCIPAL TOWNS and PLACES in the MIDLANDS and the NORTH.

ALSO for 3, 8, 10, 15 or 17 days to CLEETHORPES, SCARBOROUGH, FILEY, BRIDLINGTON, HARROGATE, BLACKPOOL, SOUTHPORT, NORTH-EAST and NORTH-WEST COAST WATERING PLACES, and DOUGLAS (Isle of Man).

For particulars of the above arrangements and bookings on EVERY SATURDAY, SUNDAY, MONDAY and THURSDAY, see A B C PROGRAMME to be obtained at Marylebone Station and Company's Town Offices.

SAM FAY, General Manager.

Digitized by Google

THE BAPTIST WORLD CONGRESS.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

VOL. XX. No. 441. SATURDAY, JULY 15th, 1905. PRICE 6D.

Ernest H. Mills.

MR. DAVID LLOYD-GEORGE, M.P.

Liberal Member for the Carnarvon District of North Wales.

(See page 491.)

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Digitized by Google

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 441. Saturday, July 15, 1905.

Editorial Offices—20, TAVISTOCK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephones—No. 2,748 GERRARD, AND 7961 CENTRAL.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

EDITORIAL.

photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING AND MANCHESTER.—The new dock at Manchester will have been Royally inaugurated by the time these lines reach the reader's eye, and the tour of the King and Queen in the North Country well nigh finished. At Sheffield, where they inaugurated the new University buildings, at Knowsley, where they were the guests of Lord Derby, at Manchester, where they opened the new dock, both the King and Queen have revisited scenes already very familiar, and among which they have travelled more than once since the accession. But there is that about all three places which makes them always interesting, and Manchester in particular is a city that one may visit many times and not know thoroughly.

THE KING AND BISLEY.—The International flavour which has been given to all our sports and pastimes this summer by the influx of so many challengers from over the seas, and the victory of some large proportion of the visiting teams, has rather affected the interest usually taken by the public in the doings at Bisley. The National Rifle Association's meeting nearly always attracts a large number of foreign entries, and this year is no exception to the rule, but in the torrent of foreign competition which we have had to meet in all fields of sport, Bisley has become an incident rather than an outstanding feature. One thing, however, brings it into prominence, and that is the knowledge that, if possible, the King will pay a visit to the camp one day next week, and should that day be prize day, there should be an unusually large crowd of spectators.

THE QUEEN IN THE PARK.
The Meet of the Four-in-Hand Club in Hyde Park last week was honoured by the presence of the Queen and Princess Victoria, who drove from Buckingham Palace in a landau.

THE QUEEN'S MAIDS OF HONOUR.—There was a double wedding in the little private chapel at Buckingham Palace this week, and a signal honour was done to two of Queen Alexandra's Maids of Honour. The Hon. Dorothy Vivian and the Hon. Mary Dyke, who have been in close personal attendance on the Queen for some years, can claim to rank with some of the most favoured personages in the land, for it is very seldom that a commoner is married in a Royal private chapel. The Buckingham Palace Chapel is far from large, and the attendance at the double ceremony was therefore very small and select, consisting of a few members of the Royal circle and the nearest relatives of the respective brides and grooms. A luncheon party was subsequently given at the Palace by the King and Queen.

PRINCESS VICTORIA'S BIRTHDAY.—The celebration of Princess Victoria's birthday last week was the occasion of a brilliant scene in the grounds of Buckingham Palace. It was, indeed, almost a children's party that was given in honour of the event, and a number of well-known entertainers from London theatres and places of amusement received the honour of a command. Princess Victoria is passionately fond of children, and nothing gives her greater pleasure than to see a number of them round her enjoying themselves. And children, with that unerring instinct for a friend which they, together with the canine tribe, possess in a higher degree than any other division of the animal world, are as fond of Princess Victoria as she of them. Wherefore it may be judged that the scene in the spacious grounds around the Royal residence at the head of the Mall was a pretty and pleasant one for those privileged to be spectators.

ADMIRAL JOHN PAUL JONES.—It were difficult to picture in a few words the imposing scene of the transfer of the remains of Paul Jones from the soil of France, in which they have reposed for 113 years, to the "Brooklyn," in which they are being carried to the United States. The body reposes on the gun-deck of the war-ship on a dais, with the French flag at the head, the Russian at the feet, and the American in the centre. In one of the inscriptions in the article on this subject last week we made a statement that might read as if we meant that one of our illustrations showed the remains of Paul Jones. This, of course, was not so. The illustration simply showed some of the débris encountered in the course of the excavations. Paul Jones's body was in a remarkable state of preservation when discovered. It was enclosed in a leaden coffin, and the features were quite recognisable.

Digitized by Google

Copyright.

THE QUEEN AT HURLINGHAM.

On Saturday last the final of the Inter-Regimental Polo Tournament was witnessed by the Queen, who, at the close, presented the cup to the winners, the 6th Inniskillings. The customary drink from the cup was taken by each member of the winning team; and they apparently enjoyed the refreshment after the game, to judge by Queen Alexandra's amused expression.

W. A. Rouch.

THE RIVER SEASON.

Above Boulter's is Cookham and the Ferry Hotel, and there are few who do not stop for tea on the lawn during the hot Sunday afternoons which mark a good river season. The river is regaining much of its former popularity, and this year Henley Regatta has had to be made a four days' festival, in consequence of the large number of entries.

Digitized by Google

SPORT AND PASTIME.

W. A. Rouch.

SCENES AT HENLEY AND NEWMARKET.

(1) Along the course at Henley. The house-boats "Cigarette" and "Gipsy." (2) The semi-final for the "Grand." Leander beating the Vesper Club. (3) Between the races at Newmarket. Crossing the course from the Jockey Club stand. (4) The new thatched stands on the July Course at Newmarket. King Edward was present at the meeting. (5) The crush of boats at Henley during a race. (6) The masked minstrels and their punt.

Digitized by Google

THE RIVER SEASON.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

W. A. Rouch.

THE CHURCH AND BRIDGE, HENLEY.

The particularly fine bridge and the old church at Henley are among the most familiar features of the higher reaches of the Thames. The photograph from which this illustration is reproduced was taken during the recent regatta, one of the most successful ever held on the historic course. The picture, which is a very typical view of the old Oxford town, will recall many previous "Henleys" to lovers of the river.

Digitized by Google

OPEN-AIR LONDON. — A drive through London during the fine summer weather of the early days of July caused a foreign visitor to exclaim, "And yet you English say there are no open-air cafés in London." In a measure his remark was justified, for he had seen a number of places where people were taking tea in the open air, and yet he had not been in any one of the exhibition grounds, with the exception of the Zoo. The best known of these tea gardens is, perhaps, that in Kensington Gardens, but in Regent's Park and the Botanic Gardens there are also facilities; while in Waterlow Park, in the old-world garden there, where once, according to tradition, King Charles and Nell Gwynne were wont to meet, thirsty visitors may now drink tea. At Hampstead, too, there is the garden of the Spaniards, and on the Thames Embankment there are tea-tables, and but a little distance out of town in any of the villages around Harrow and Stanmore there are beautiful gardens where tea is served, especially on Sunday afternoons for those who drive or motor out there.

TAUCHNITZ.—There are very few travellers on the Continent who do not bring back with them one or two volumes of the Tauchnitz library, despite the prohibitory notice on the front. That same notice has been the cause of much misunderstanding, for many have taken it to mean that the edition was a pirated one. Yet this is far from being the case. From the very beginning every author whose books have been published in the library has been paid, and paid handsomely, for his work. And when the series was first started in 1841 with Dickens's "Pickwick" and Bulwer Lytton's "Pelham," no English or American writer had any protection by copyright on the continent of Europe; and that Christian Bernard Tauchnitz, not then but subsequently the first Baron Tauchnitz, was justified in dealing thus honestly, the success which has attended his venture proves. There is a collection of autograph letters in the archives of the firm which one and all testify to the authors' appreciation of the treatment they received. Browning wrote: "I shall accept whatever terms you may think fit to offer," Dickens said he had "every reason to rely upon your honourable intentions," and many other writers were content to say with the cabman of the ancient story, "I leave it to you, sir."

PURLEY BEECHES.—Last week quite a little flutter was caused in South London circles by the news that Purley Beeches, or, as it is more popularly called, Purley Oaks, was in danger of being sold as an eligible building site. If not so famous as the Beeches of Burnham, Purley Beeches is very popular with the residents of Croydon and the neighbourhood. On the slope of the hill is perched the little village of Sanderstead, five years ago as quaint and rural an old-world village as one could find anywhere, but to-day the "suburban residence" is beginning to show there as elsewhere on the further outskirts of London. Sanderstead is quite an old parish. There dwelt the Regicide Bradshaw, and there, in Commonwealth times, by the instrumentality of one of Cromwell's lieutenants, the use of the Book of Common Prayer was permitted. Near Sanderstead, too, is Addington, where a palace of the Archbishops of Canterbury was situated until a very few years ago. This same palace it is that is reputed to have stood on the site of a shooting-box which Henry VIII. was accustomed to visit when he wanted a week-end away from whichever of his wives happened to be troubling his conscience at the moment.

Lafayette, Dublin.

THE HON. MARY DYKE

Who was married on Tuesday in the private chapel of Buckingham Palace to Major Bell. The Hon. Mrs. Bell has been Maid of Honour to Queen Alexandra for some time.

A NEW COLONIAL BARONET.—One of the most interesting features of the Honours List is the inclusion in it of Mr. Julius Wernher's name. He is the first South African of the mining era to be made a baronet. Sir Gysbert Stockenström's title dates from 1840, when the Cape Colony was in its pastoral stage. His father was, however, an Africander, born and bred, and was honoured by Queen Victoria on account of his military services to the Crown. For sixty-five years his family was the only one with an hereditary title in South Africa. This distinction has now been taken from it by Sir Julius Wernher. It is significant of the character of South Africa's population that neither of her baronets bears an English name. This is not true of the ten Canadian and Australasian baronets, who, with one exception, are of British descent. Sir Julius Wernher is the head of the great Rand banking house of Eckstein, and a man of princely generosity to the cause of education.

THE BAPTIST WORLD CONGRESS, JULY, 1905.—The interest in the great World Congress of the present and coming week will in no way be confined to the members of the church which is entirely responsible for its convocation. It is typical in the highest degree of the religious activity which has manifested itself in the new century. It includes within its scheme of representation not only three distinct American sections, but delegates from India, China, the Congo, Canada, South Africa, the West Indies, Australia, and New Zealand, as well as France, Italy, Germany, Holland, Hungary, Denmark, Sweden, and Russia. Each of the nineteen delegates is expected to occupy three minutes and no more on July 11. The subjects to be discussed are not wholly theological, and with Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P., as chairman of the "National Primary Education" afternoon, some important pronouncements may be expected, especially as papers will be read both by Dr. Clifford and an American visitor, while the discussion will be opened by a delegate from the North-West of Canada. A hearty welcome doubtless awaits the Baptist pilgrims from America. England will not forget that they represent the latest phases of a creed which gave the world a Milton and a Bunyan, whose influence on national thought and literature is by no means wholly extinct.

DEATH OF A NATALIAN.—The death of Sir J. W. Akerman will leave a gap in Anglo-Colonial circles in London, and will cause genuine regret in Natal. He was a Devonian, who emigrated to the "Garden Colony," of which he was one of the earliest pioneers. At first he lived in a tent as a cotton planter. But the times were not propitious for experiments, so he "trekked" north, and studied farming with the Boers. The best part of his life he spent in Maritzburg, where he filled many municipal and political offices. For twelve years, or until the constitutional era, he was Speaker of the Natal Legislative Council. In Jubilee year he received his K.C.M.G., the first Natalian to be so honoured. Sir John had been in feeble health for a long time, though he was once a familiar figure at Anglo-Colonial functions.

Digitized by Google

THE BISLEY MEETING, 1905.

COMPETITORS AT THE NATIONAL RIFLE ASSOCIATION'S ANNUAL MEETING.

(1) The Queen's Westminsters' Team. (2) The team of the 7th New York State Militia beaten by the Queen's Westminsters in the Howard Vincent Shield contest. (3) Mrs. Way, the Transvaal lady shot. (4) Royal Engineers' officers' team, winners of the Officers' Cup. (5) Colour-Sergt.-Major Churcher, Gold Medallist and head of the Army "Sixty." (6) The Sixty Competition at the 600-yds. range. (7) The Royal Marines at the firing-line, in the competition for the Coburg Cup.

(From copyright photographs by Gibbs, Knaphill; and the Illustrations Bureau.)

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

THE professional match for £400 seems now to have been definitely arranged. The players who have accepted the challenge issued on behalf of Vardon and Taylor to play any other two professionals are Braid and Herd. As a correspondent points out in another column, it is something more than a pity that the match has fallen into the now familiar lines of a contest in which all the players know perfectly every detail of the game at the disposal of their opponents, not forgetting the equally important point in foursome match play, that every member of the quartette knows exactly the capacity and temperament of every other player. The result is that, though the match is sure to be a most interesting one, a good deal of its novelty will be lost owing to the fact that the golfing public are perfectly familiar with the game of these illustrious professional players.

* * *

Such a match is a good feature in these modern days, when so much importance has inevitably become attached to scoring tournament play among the professionals; but it is to be regretted that the match seems to have been arranged with so much hurry that little opportunity was given to some other professionals to see whether or not they could find the requisite monetary backing. It is quite a mistake to suppose that, because the quartette of professionals have for several years past asserted their supremacy pretty thoroughly over all their brethren, they must necessarily be equally invincible when playing among the ups and downs of the old-fashioned foursome. Three of the professionals are certainly marked out by their record to play in such an important match, but if the object of the promoters of it were to foster public interest in such a match, it might have been well to make the combination different from that now decided upon. Allowing that Vardon and Taylor are the best combination to represent English golf, it does not necessarily follow that Braid and Herd exhaust all the professional capacity of Scotland. A good many golfers of experience will hold the view that Braid and Willie Park would have been a better combination in a tussle against Vardon and Taylor. For one thing, Willie Park has had a much more varied experience of professional matches for considerable money stakes, and he has proved himself over and over again to be a particularly effective foursome player. He has the temperament for such a match, as he unquestionably possesses the ability to hold his own with any of his professional brethren. His inclusion, moreover, would have given a much-needed fillip to the interest of a wide circle of players in England and Scotland, and as he is playing as well just now as he ever did, it is more than likely that, backed up by the powerful support of Braid, the combination would turn out to be a particularly strong one. There is no better putter to be found on any links, and as he has adopted the overlapping grip now come to be recognised as at least the orthodox method of play for the professionals, Park has counteracted the old tendency to pull which handicapped him very often in years gone by with Douglas Rolland, Andrew Kirkaldy, and Vardon. If less hurry had been shown in the arrangements, it is possible that an opportunity might have been taken by lovers of professional golf to pick out a couple of professionals who might have given Vardon and Taylor as good a struggle as they are ever likely to enjoy.

* * *

The better form of issuing the challenge would have been to single out the players by name, after careful deliberation had been made of the present playing form and past

Copyright.

THE PROFESSIONAL TOURNAMENT AT ELTHAM.

Rowland Jones (Wimbledon Park), in the qualifying stroke competition for the Southern section of the Professional Golfers' Association Tournament of £240, returned the record scores of 70 and 69.

THE ELTHAM TOURNAMENT.

A view of the crowd that followed H. Vardon in the stroke competition.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

Morgan, Aberdeen.

NEW COURSE AT ABERDEEN.

The extended course of the Deeside Golf Club at Bieldside was opened last week.

record of the professionals, and to have settled beforehand the four greens which those finding the money wished to see the match played over. Considering the number of first-class greens in England and Scotland, there would have been no absolute need to adhere to the links over which the championship is played; and the first consideration ought to have been, when working out beforehand the details of such a notable foursome, certainly to choose links in the neighbourhood of important towns, and readily accessible to the large army of golfers who would wish to be present at such a historical event. One can only hope, however, that this challenge is only to be the forerunner of many in the future; but a good many golfers will agree that as far as the present match is concerned it would have been an event followed with universally keen interest if even two comparatively unknown professionals had been selected to combine and do their best to overthrow the invincible Vardon and Taylor combination.

Morgan, Aberdeen.

THE DEESIDE GOLF CLUB.

The play in the opening ceremony.

Morgan, Aberdeen.

THE DEESIDE GOLF CLUB.

Putting at the home hole.

* * *

On Saturday last an interesting foursome took place over the Harlech links. A visit was paid to this fine Welsh green by the Grand Duke Michael of Russia, accompanied by the Countess Torby, Prince Orbelliane, Baron and Baroness Stoeckl, Mr. A. H. Crosfield, Miss Crosfield, and Miss Barnett. The party lunched with the Earl of Winchelsea at Bettws-y-Coed, afterwards going by motor-car to the links. The Grand Duke Michael and Lord Maidstone played a foursome against Lord Winchelsea and Mr. Crosfield, the last-named winning by 3 up and 1 to play.

* * *

A team of the Bar Golfing Society played a team of the Press Golfing Society at Huntercombe last week. Both sides had a fairly strong team, the members of the Bar including Mr. Darwin, Mr. Harold Beveridge, Mr. D. Stephen, Mr. D. D. Robertson, Mr. Dyne, and Mr. Punton. Mr. F. H. Newnes had a very close match with Mr. Darwin, and Mr. Garden Smith was in such good form that he overthrew a strong player like Mr. Beveridge. The Huntercombe green was in very fine order, though one cannot help regretting that the large putting greens are made rather unequal in texture by a luscious growth of fine clover.

* * *

The professional tournament at Eltham in the Southern section of the Professional Golfers' Association for the News of the World prize of £240 was played in very fine weather, and was an unqualified success. A new record for the course was created by Rowland Jones of Wimbledon Park. Jones returned two scores of 70 and 69, Vardon coming next with 70 and 72, Taylor third with 72 and 71, and Braid fourth with 71 and 73. Jones played brilliant golf throughout the day, and his victory over such a strong combination of playing talent against him was richly deserved.

* * *

The pneumatic golf ball is rapidly becoming the most popular in America. At the recent Cincinnati Tournament, held in June, among five of the most successful competitors no fewer than four used pneumatic balls. Mr. Neil McNeale started with a rubber ball, but afterwards changed to the pneumatic, and with it won the consolation prize. Arthur Smith, the American professional, won the Western Open Tournament last week, playing with a pneumatic.

Morgan, Aberdeen.

NEW COURSE AT ABERDEEN.

A view of the crowd at the opening of the extended course; teeing off at the 2nd hole.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

A VIEW OF THE 11TH PUTTING GREEN

Showing the "Rest and be Thankful" on the right, and an elevated staircase on the top of the hill, by ascending which a magnificent view of the surrounding country is obtained.

GOLF PHILOSOPHY IN SLIPPERS.

III.—On Leaving it to the Club.

WE all of us interfere too much with our clubs. The many and various clubs that have been given and preserved for our use are designed to perform many and various strokes, and are the outcome of much patient thought on the part of countless generations of golfers. And if we will only leave it to the club we shall the better attain our end. But too often, actuated by a laudable ambition to attain this end with greater precision, we interfere—to our own undoing.

I do not mean to imply that a club can play of itself. A play-club, for instance, cannot walk out of the club-house, take its stance at the first tee, adjust itself to the ball, and send it a long, slashing drive in the direction of the first hole, unless there is a man accompanying it. But if that man will confine himself to walking out from the club-house, accompanied by his play-club, taking an accurate stance at the first tee, and swinging his club up in the proper manner, and leave the rest to the club, he will achieve a better result than he will if he pursues his interference further. As an illustration of this, I was once endeavouring to give some instruction to a lady, quite a beginner at the noble game, and I was expatiating on this theory of leaving it to the club. She said, "I do not in the least understand what you mean." I said, "I will show you." We were standing at the time on the ladies' links, but not on a teeing ground, and I observed, without pointing it out to her, that there was a putting green about 50 yds. distant. I had in my hand an old iron, the maker of which had been dead to my certain knowledge for thirty years at least. "Now," I said, "this club has been playing golf for me, and for several former owners, for at least forty years, and it knows what it has got to do better than we can teach it." I put the club into her hands, placed her feet carefully, and put her into the right position for sending the ball towards this green, and teed up a ball for her. "Now just swing this club up," I said, "and swing it down again on the ball. It is impossible for you to interfere further by any act of volition on your part with what this club has got to do, because you have not got the remotest notion what you are going to do yourself." She did as I told her, happened to hit the ball cleanly, and it went straight on to

THE LE TOUQUET LINKS.

A bird's-eye view of this course in Picardy from the 6th putting green. The sea lies behind the pine woods in the distance.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

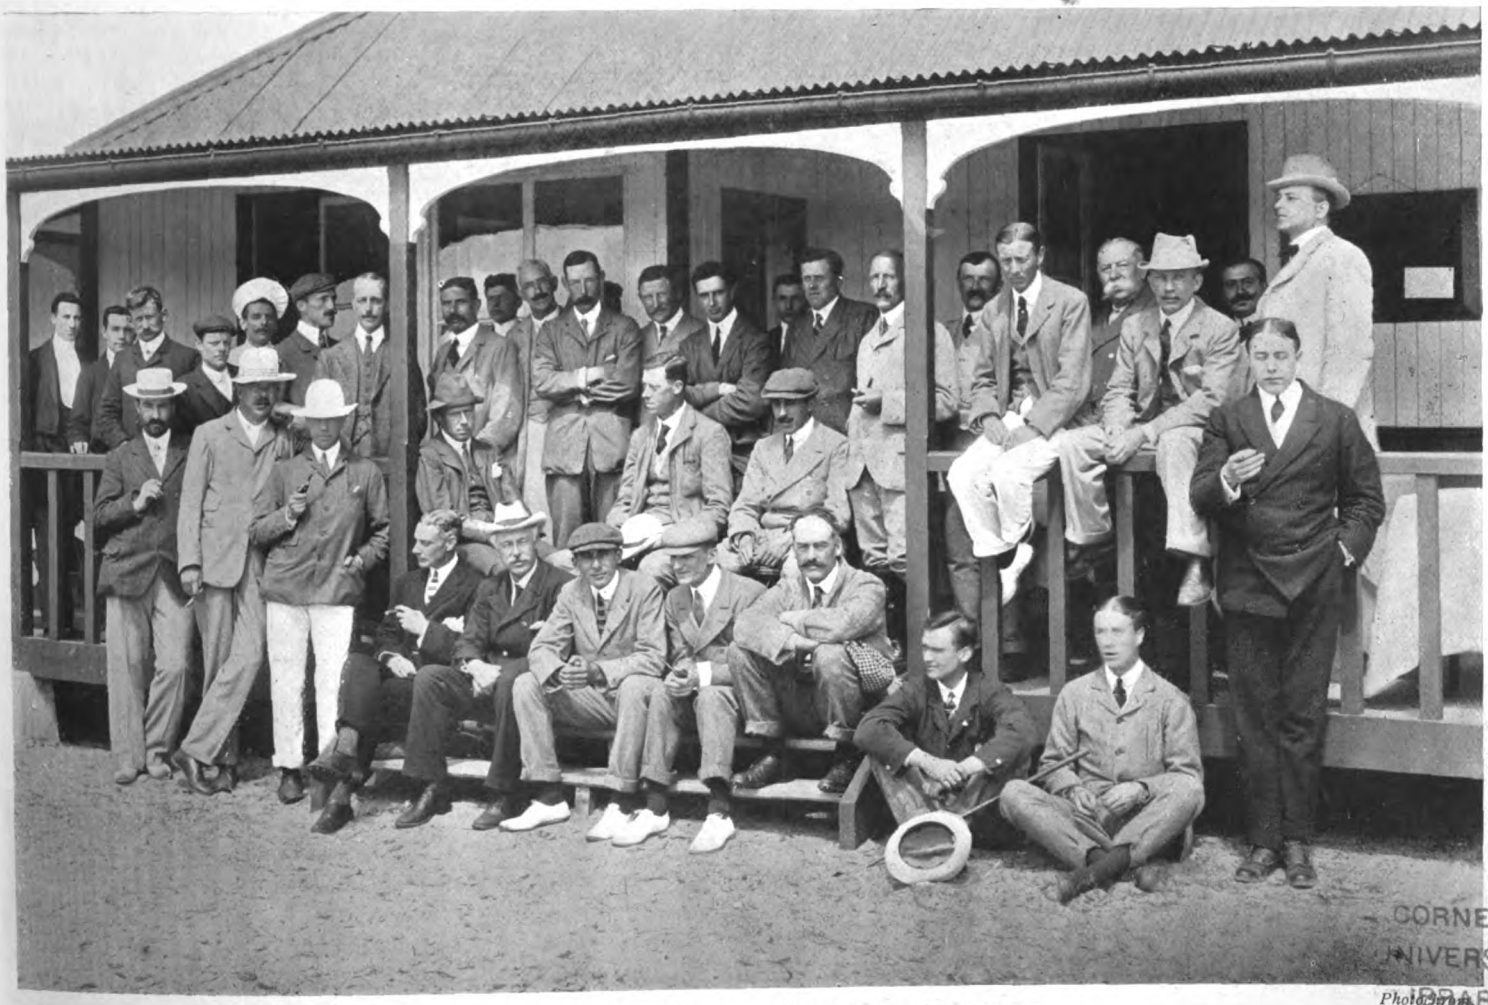
CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Photochrom.

THE LE TOUQUET CADDIES.

The intense amusement of the boys and girls at being photographed for the first time. The caddies at Le Touquet are very intelligent and obliging, the girls being particularly sharp at "marking" the balls driven into the rough. Their English vocabulary at present is exhausted by the phrase, "All right: on the green."



CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Photochrom.

A GROUP OF THE LE TOUQUET MEMBERS.

Standing, left to right (back row)—Pruvost (the chef), Messrs. C. C. Hayes, P. A. Robinson, A. H. P. Stoneham, N. L. Jackson, W. P. Matthews, Ryder Richardson, Lewis Hoare, H. T. Wright, T. Hetley, H. J. Maeder, Cuming Macdona, M.P., M. Recoussine, and J. Blake. Second row—Messrs. Marshall, Howard Williams, D. D. Robertson, R. H. Balloch, G. A. Bonner, H. Underdown, W. Mason, and Jas. Gibb. Front row—Messrs. H. Mallaby-Deeley, Horace Hutchinson, B. Darwin, T. F. D. Miller, F. E. Cuming, A. O. Faulkner, Dudley Maddick, and Dr. McDougall.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

the green, only travelled a few yards after it pitched, and, as luck would have it, rolled towards the hole and lay absolutely dead. "Now," I said, "we will go and see what this club has done for you on its own account." When we arrived at the green, and she found her ball lying within 18-in. of the hole, she marvelled greatly. I do not know whether this lady persevered with the game and in after life became a golfer, but she certainly made a good beginning.

I foresee that many of my readers will condense all that I have said into the two words, "Don't press," and, on second thoughts, perhaps, that is a better way of putting it.

C. DE LACY LACY.

Correspondence.

THE PROFESSIONAL FOURSOME MATCH.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE KING."

SIR,—I do hope that the organisers of this projected match will take care to arrange it in such a way as, at any rate, to infuse public interest into professional golf. The time was when professional challenges in singles and foursomes were nearly a monthly event, especially between the rival professional schools of St. Andrews and Musselburgh. Professional golf supremacy has to-day passed into England, and the Scot, unpatriotic, indifferent, and careless of the golf fame of his country, once the pride of the world, will not subscribe a ruinous sixpence to revive one of the old matches. Neither St. Andrews, with all its aristocratic pretensions to be the hub of the golfing universe, nor Musselburgh in its golf decrepitude and mouldy decay of suburban crowds who can talk about the game, but who cannot play it, has a professional player who can do more than give an English scratch player a decently hard match The decadence is enough to make the whole crowd of Scotland shed tears of despite and learn to play the most funereal coronach in the whole range of Gaelic bagpipe music.

But what good end will be served in arranging a match, as I see is contemplated, among Vardon, Taylor, Braid, and Herd? We are all heartily tired of seeing these renowned players, for they have become the show spectacle of every golfing function for years past. We know them well, and though we must delight in their marvellous skill, some of us sigh for the appearance of new aspirants to fame and fortune. Is the whole of broad Scotland unable to produce a couple of golfers (outside of Braid and Herd) who will attempt to cut the proud combs of Vardon and Taylor? Is the land who gave us the great delights of the noble game so poor in golfing talent that no one will dare to put a couple of young and ambitious players in the field against the doughty Englishmen? This terrible poverty of talent on the part of Scotland was never so apparent and so lamentably to be mourned over as it is to-day, and Scotland and Scottish goliers have much to reproach themselves with What of Willie Park and Andrew Kirkaldy, Ben Sayers and Fernie? They are all veterans, it is true, but on the principle of "an old dog for a hard road," methinks that such a combination might possibly produce surprising results. At any rate, it would be a novelty in the way of a playing spectacle; and this seems to be about all that the modern school of golfer wants in the interval of picking his teeth and sauntering round amid the absorbing attractions of a mixed foursome.

By all means let us have a good professional foursome for a money stake; but let the challenge be open, giving the preference to any two comparatively unknown players who will "cock their beaver" at Vardon and Taylor. Two greens in England and two greens in Scotland, but no St. Andrews, Muirfield, or Prestwick, and a choice among Rye, Deal, Lytham, Wallasey, or Huntercombe in England. Professional golf is becoming "groovy" in its monotony; let us attempt to make a new departure.—I am, etc.,

I. R.

RAYNES PARK v. HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Mr. Brown putting at the 14th green, Sir Edgar Vincent watching the stroke.

SIR EDGAR VINCENT, M.P.

One of the finalists in the Parliamentary Tournament this year, putting in his match against the Raynes Park Club.

RAYNES PARK v. HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Mr. Guy Pym, M.P., driving, Sir H. Seton-Karr, M.P. (with cigar), watching the ball.

FIXTURES.

July 15.—Raynes Park, Summer Meeting.
July 15.—Hayling, Summer Meeting.
July 16.—Boulogne v. Le Touquet, at Wimereux.
July 22.—Hanger Hill ("Bogey.")
July 29-31.—Lytham and St. Anne's, Summer Meeting.
July 31.—Irish Open Amateur Championship, at Dollymount.
August 1.—Royal and Ancient, Calcutta Cup.
August 3.—Hunstanton, Foursome Competition.
August 4.—Seaford, Summer Meeting.
August 4.—Royal West Norfolk, Summer Meeting.
August 5.—Ipswich, Wood Cup.
August 5.—Rye, Monthly Medal.
August 5.—Hythe, Summer Meeting.
August 5.—Royal Ashdown Forest, August Meeting.
August 5.—Frinton, Summer Meeting.
August 5-7.—Rochester, Royal Marine Challenge Shield.
August 7.—Bushey Hall, Bank Holiday Competition.
August 7.—Hanger Hill, Bank Holiday Competition.
August 7.—Hunstanton, Residents' Cup.
August 7.—West Cornwall, Ladies' Summer Meeting.
August 7.—Royal Liverpool, Summer Meeting.
August 7.—Royal Isle of Wight, Summer Meeting.
August 7.—Buxton and High Peak, August Meeting.
August 7-8.—Littlehampton, Open Summer Meeting.
August 8.—Enfield, Ladies' Summer Meeting.
August 12.—Hanger Hill, Medal.
August 13.—Boulogne v. Le Touquet.
August 22.—Hunstanton, Ladies' Competition.
August 26.—Hanger Hill ("Bogey.")
August 30-31.—Hunstanton, Summer Meeting.
October 7.—New Luffness, Autumn Meeting.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. LI.—Mr. David Lloyd-George, Liberal M.P. for the Carnarvon Boroughs, and a Vice-President of the Baptist World Congress.

IF a portion of Pembrokeshire merits the designation of Little England beyond Wales, a picturesque house on the further side of Wandsworth Common may be appropriately described as Little Wales in Greater London. In the early days of June, when the hawthorns are still in bloom and the last traces of blossom remain on the apple trees, there are few pleasanter places within forty minutes' drive of the House of Commons than Eversfield, where Mr. Lloyd-George can breathe air almost as pure as that of Llanystumdwy, and where everything that meets the eye reminds you of the Country of Castles and Saints, throughout the length and breadth of which his name to-day is something more than a household word. A carved Welsh settle stands in the hall; views of Welsh scenery adorn the walls; the ancient grandfather's clock, ticking sonorously in the corner, bears the name of Watkin Owen of Llanrwst; and the ornate casket containing the "freedom" of Pwllheli is flanked by rare bits of Swansea and Nantgarw china, once the pride of the Carnarvonshire cottage where the future Champion of Wales at Westminster learned his first lessons in statecraft from the pages of Rollin, Macaulay, and Thomas Carlyle. The presence of a grand piano of unimpeachable tone and quality proclaims the fact that Mrs. Lloyd-George—herself an Owen of Mynyddednyfed and a descendant of Owen Glyndwr—and her five children have inherited all the Welsh love of song and music, and when the youngest, the darling of the house and the light of her father's eyes, is at home, the soft-sounding melodious language of Wales is generally spoken at Eversfield. The drawing-room opens on a shady verandah and a cool old-world garden, in which, despite the length of the previous night's debate, he is hard at work on the last consignment of Blue Books at a commendably early hour, although it must be confessed that a formidable pile of letters, heaped up on a chair by his side, still remain unopened; but he tells you, laughingly, that these are nothing to what probably awaits him in Queen Victoria Street and at the House of Commons.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

MRS. LLOYD-GEORGE

Wife of the Member for Carnarvon Boroughs, with her five children.

Austin and Son.

Lloyd-George is to the Wales of the present what O'Connell was to the Ireland of the past. They both earned early in life the distinction of being spoken of without any prefix or the use of their Christian names, and very few of the political Goliaths slain by the member for the Carnarvon Boroughs in the course of his brief and brilliant career probably knew that their redoubtable adversary was called David. Since O'Connell died, the Celtic race has never sent so powerful a representative to the British Senate as the man who won his spurs as a "passive resister" by refusing to repeat the creed or the catechism when one of the most promising pupils at Llanystumdwy Church School; as a friend of the oppressed of all nations by an impassioned speech on behalf of Arabi Pacha in 1882; as an acute lawyer by the discomfiture of the intolerant vicar of Llanfrothen; and as a consummate Parliamentarian tactician by his obstruction of the clergy discipline exactly ten years later.

Lloyd-George (though born some forty years ago in Manchester) comes of a race of Welsh farmers, who for generations tilled the soil of Trecoed Farm, not far from Fishguard in Pembrokeshire, the scene of the French invasion of 1797. On the death of his father, when he was still in his earliest youth, his mother—a staunch Campbellite Baptist—returned with her children to the village of her birth in South Carnarvonshire, and it was at Llanystumdwy that he grew up, his early thirst for knowledge being gratified by the exertions of his maternal uncle, who actually devoted his leisure hours to learning French in order that he might instruct his nephew. Brother and sister belonged to the same form of Welsh Nonconformity, and the Baptists from the other side of the Atlantic, now assembled in London for the World Congress, will doubtless be interested to know that foremost amongst their co-religionists is the distinguished politician who is to-day to the vigorous and awakened Nonconformity of Wales in general, and that of the Baptists in particular, what O'Connell was seventy years ago to Catholic Ireland, when it still struggled to make its wants articulate. Lloyd-George passed the solicitor's preliminary examination before he was fourteen, left school two years later, and after a short course of private study was articled to an attorney at Portmadoc. In 1884 he was "admitted with honours," and almost at once began to practise on his own account. He was soon joined by his younger brother, who entered the profession with similar distinction. Ten years later the firm obtained the Town Clerkship of Barmouth, and about the time of the Diamond Jubilee a London office was opened in Queen Victoria Street, with Mr. Roberts, a compatriot, as an additional partner. The initial legal triumph of Mr. Lloyd-George as the successful advocate of the graveyard rioters of Llanfrothen has already been alluded to. It is only necessary to add that his legal acumen is as remarkable as his knowledge of Parliamentary forms and strategy.

In 1888 he had the good fortune to meet and marry Miss Margaret Owen. By this time he had entered public life at Criccieth, and the genial Postmaster-General of those days, Mr. Cecil Raikes, had dubbed him the "Boy Alderman"; but the "Boy Alderman" was soon destined to go further, for the Liberals of the Carnarvon Boroughs adopted him as their candidate, and in 1890 he beat the Squire of Llanystumdwy, Sir H. J. Ellis Nanney, by a majority. It thus came to pass that while still on the sunny side of thirty the "Boy Alderman" of Criccieth became the chosen representative at Westminster of four prosperous watering-places, four mediæval castles (including the birthplace of the first Prince of Wales), and four ancient corporations, to say nothing of the Bishop, the Dean and Chapter of Bangor, and Lord Penrhyn!

It is hardly necessary to recapitulate Lloyd-George's struggles and successes. His battle for the political and religious freedom of his fellow-countrymen still continues, but Lloyd-George has no anxiety as to the ultimate result. Golf is his solitary form of recreation, and if ever he gets a leisure afternoon, he devotes it to a game on the Lewes Links with his friends and compatriots, Mr. Herbert Lewis, M.P., and Mr. Timothy Davies. The influence of Lloyd-George as a debater is now probably as great as that of any of the occupants of the Front Opposition Bench. As a strategist and tactician he is unsurpassed, and he has reduced the possibility of saying biting things in a pleasant manner to a fine art.

In the next Parliament no potential Liberal Premier can ignore the importance of Lloyd-George or hope to do without his assistance and support. Important office doubtless awaits him. It may be his destiny to lead the Liberal Party in the House of Commons in the near future. "Gallant Little Wales" will, doubtless, always have the highest place in his affections, but the Empire at large has claims on his time and talents which he is not likely to ignore.

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

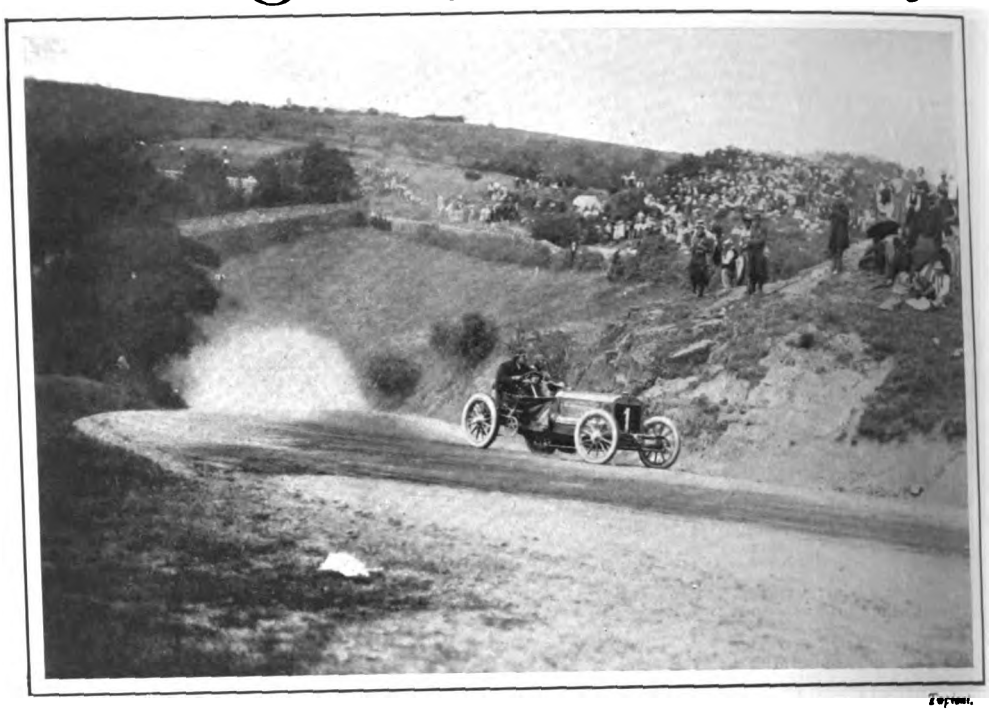
WHAT will probably prove to be the last Gordon Bennett Cup Race has been held, with a result which is now known to everyone who takes the slightest interest in motoring. Théry's victory was, in a sense, somewhat of a surprise, for in a contest in which so much depends upon luck, and some trivial and unpreventable incident may ruin the most promising chances, it seemed incredible that one driver and one make of car could win four big races in succession. As a matter of fact, the great French driver clearly met his match in Lancia, who at one time seemed an almost certain winner, as he made by far the fastest time for the first two rounds of the course, and gained 12-min. 36-sec. on Théry. Disaster, however, overtook him towards the end of the third round, his radiator becoming hopelessly damaged on the long climb from Clermont to the starting-point. Other cars ran well and consistently; but the race, almost from the outset, resolved itself into a struggle between Théry and Lancia, and on the retirement of the latter the result was a foregone conclusion, barring those accidents which never seem to happen to a Richard-Brasier car driven by "Chronometer Théry."

He has well earned the name, for the regularity of his driving is nothing less than extraordinary. In last year's Eliminating Trials his fastest time for the six laps of the Mazagran circuit was 1-hr. 16-min., and his slowest 1-hr. 27-min. At Homburg, where he won the Cup for the first time, three out of the four rounds of 80 miles in length were covered in 1-hr. 26-min. and a few odd seconds, while the fourth was only 3-min. slower. At the French Trials on June 16 he was slightly less consistent, a fact for which the constant tyre troubles were responsible; but last week in the race itself he is said to have changed all four covers at the end of each round, an operation which only cost him four or five minutes per lap, thanks to the marvellous skill of the men at the tyre depôts, and the result was seen in the recorded times for his four rounds, which were 1-hr. 41-min. 7-sec., 1-hr. 48-min. 57-sec., 1-hr. 48-min. 42-sec., and 1-hr. 49-min. 56-sec. respectively. It will thus be seen that he thrice covered a distance of 85 miles of winding mountainous roads, where a difficult corner is met with, on an average, every minute or less, in almost exactly the same time.



THE GORDON BENNETT RACE.
Théry, the winner, rounding the famous Gendarme corner.

There were other cars which did nearly as well, so far as regularity is concerned, although in some cases their drivers had far less experience of the course than Théry. Rolls on the Wolseley, which Jarrott drove in the race last year, varied only from 2-hr. 3-min. to 2-hr. 15-min. gross times for his four rounds. Cagno on a Fiat did 1-hr. 54-min., 1-hr. 50-min., 1-hr. 53-min., and 1-hr. 51-min. respectively, an extremely consistent performance. Bianchi's best time was 2-hr. 1-min. gross, and his slowest only 2-hr. 12-min., while 15-min. was the extent of the variation shown by Caillois, the driver of the second Richard-Brasier car. On the general results the honours seem to be fairly divided between France and Italy, and between the Richard-Brasiers and the Fiats. The former gained first and fourth places, and the latter second and third. To further equalise the merit, Lancia, the first Italian string, has the distinction of having made the fastest times ever accomplished on the Auvergne course, his first round occupying only 1-hr. 34-min. 37-sec. gross, which is nearly 2-min. faster than Théry's best lap, his second in the French Trials, and 7-min. faster than any time recorded in the race itself. His second round was 1-hr. 42-min. 11-sec., which was only beaten once last week, and that by Théry himself in his first lap. The British cars did fairly well, as all three succeeded in finishing in creditable time, Rolls being placed eighth, Earp, who drove Macdonald's six-cylinder Napier, ninth, and Bianchi eleventh. Only 12-min. separated the British competitors, Bianchi, the last, being 1-hr. 36-min. behind the winner. Earp succeeded in making the fastest round of the three, his gross time for the first lap being 1-hr. 54-min. 11-sec. The Montagu Trophy, for the best team performance, goes to France, which, in addition to scoring first and fourth places with the Richard-Brasiers, gained the sixth position with Duray's De Dietrich. Of the six Mercédès, German and Austrian, of which so much was expected, only three finished, Werner and De Caters being placed fifth and seventh respectively for Germany, and Braun, who drove the first of the Austrian cars, finishing tenth. The redoubtable Jenatzy, who won the race in Ireland, and had spent months in practice on the course, was in trouble from the start, and retired after the second round.

Topical.

THE GORDON BENNETT RACE.
Cagno, who came in third, running at full speed near La Baraque.

Théry's net total time for the 341·2 miles was 7-hr. 2-min. 42 3-5-sec., which works out at an average of 47·8 miles an hour, or 2½ miles faster than he accomplished in the Eliminating Trials. Nazzari's time was 7-hr. 19-min. 9-sec., and Cagno's 7-hr. 21-min. 22-sec., their average speeds working out at 46·6 miles and 46·4 miles respectively. These speeds are much lower than those recorded in Ireland in 1903, and last year on the Taunus course, but are easily accounted for by the difficult nature of the Auvergne Circuit. Jenatzy averaged 49½ miles in Ireland, and Théry 53 miles in Germany. England's victory in 1902 over the Paris-Vienna course was a very slow performance, Edge's Napier only averaging about 34 miles an hour; but the Panhards, which won in 1901 and 1902, the cylinders 160-m.m. by 140-m.m., which, however, are easily surpassed in point of size by the 185-m.m. by 150-m.m. of the Mercédès, and the 190-m.m. by 150-m.m. of the De Dietrichs. The modern engines, moreover, are probably far more efficient, and certainly run at far higher speeds than the slow-running motors of the early Panhards.

Digitized by Google

ought, therefore, to have a larger representation in the race than a country which can boast at the most only two or three first-class firms. They apparently lose sight of the fact that the wider the choice of cars the better their prospects of success, and that defeat would be much more damaging if the French competitors were numerically far superior to their

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY
Topical.

THE GORDON BENNETT RACE.

Lancia rounding a dangerous turn near Rochefort. This driver, who is chauffeur to the Queen of Italy, made fastest time in the first two rounds, on a Fiat.

first two occasions on which the Cup was raced for, did 38½ miles and 40 miles respectively. It is worthy of note that the Panhard which was driven to victory by M. Charron in the first contest was rated nominally at 24-h.p., and its cylinders had a bore of only 100-m.m., which is considered hardly sufficient nowadays for a medium-powered touring carriage. This year's Richard-Brasiers have

It is difficult to prophesy as to the future of the Gordon Bennett Cup. The only matter definitely decided is that the French makers will take no further part in the race, unless, perhaps, the conditions are radically altered in order to give them an even greater chance of victory than at present. They say that they make many more cars than any other nation at the present time, and that France rivals. A race for French cars only would have little value as an advertisement, while, on the other hand, a Gordon Bennett from which the nation which has won four times out of six was absent, would fall very flat. Personally, I believe that it would be for the good of the industry if all racing were to cease, and possibly this may result from the international squabbles.

RADIATOR.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

HOW THEY ACCOMMODATE LARGE FAMILIES.

"WHAT is the rent of your apartment on the fifth floor?" asks a timid-looking, pale little woman to the Cerberus reading her evening paper in a chair on the pavement. Without giving an answer to the question, the concierge pushes her spectacles above her eyes and says, "Children? Any children?" "Four," replies the woman meekly. "No, thank you. We can't do with children here," and continues her reading. She has strict injunctions from the proprietor not to accept tenants with large families, and four children make a large family in Paris. This is what she told me when I asked her for an explanation. "She mustn't come into these quarters to find house-room for a lot of children. Yes. I know they have taken some opposite; but they will have to go. The other tenants have all given notice. Nobody will stand noise overhead. And then they are always catching something." I suppose I looked as if I had not understood, for she continued, "Measles, whooping cough, croup. And the house is upset at all hours of the night with their squeals. Besides, they will have dogs. I never yet knew a family of children without a poodle or a terrier. And accidents occur on the staircase, and there is a commotion because they have to go up and down the back way. The proprietor knows what he is about when he says no children."

This is the case for the house-owner. But what becomes of the other side of the question? Where are mothers and fathers of four and more children to find accommodation?

Francisque Sarcey tells the story of one of his friends, a professor, and father of seven children, constantly changing apartments, and ultimately being obliged to acknowledge only three when he signed his lease, and smuggle in the remainder. Not many months ago two babies were brought into a house between mattresses and kept indoors for a couple of months unknown to the concierge. But babies cannot be hidden for ever, and the twins were discovered as they took their first airing in the new neighbourhood. The parents had to leave, of course, for children could not be tolerated. Among the poorer classes it was at one time the custom to send new-born babies into the country to be nursed, but M. Brieux has opened the eyes of Parisian mothers to the dangers of this system, and with the growing need of room to keep them with the parents came the necessity to house them.

Under the auspices of a group of philanthropists, the building in the Rue du Télégraphe was erected, an enormous structure with three wings, that shelters seventy-two families. Here the children can come and grow, play and keep dogs, no one to complain of the pattering of little feet, or the noise of toy trumpets and drums. I do not pretend that it is a house that would tempt a bachelor, but married men are thankful for the place in other directions, and the knowledge that their wives and little ones are happy.

Geniaux, Paris.

DINNER IN THE RUE TELEGRAPHE.
A family party of nine.

The rental of the apartments varies from £8 to £16 per annum, each apartment consisting of a kitchen-dining-room, where the stove is placed in a tessellated angle, and the remainder of the floor is parquetted—an excellent combination that unites convenience and elegance. Beyond this there are three bedrooms, one for the parents, one for the boys, and another for the girls of the family. Economy is studied in every arrangement in this model dwelling, for the stove that cooks the dinner also heats the rooms throughout by means of a grating through which the hot air passes. A great improvement on the ordinary apartment is made in the size of the windows. Here they are of exactly double the dimensions, giving twice as much light and air as is generally introduced into low-rented homes in the heart of the city. A wide balcony is the one little luxury of the self-contained flat, a compound word invented by the British house-agent which always delights me. I have never grasped the meaning of the expression, nor discovered who the "self" is contained therein; but I love the importance of the combination, and imagine it must have a big effect on the flat hunter. But to return to the balcony. The architect has again had a happy inspiration in the two ventilated cases at each extremity; one contains the provisions—in other words, is the larder of the establishment; the other is the recipient for soiled linen. Could anything be more practical than this arrangement for keeping the rooms free of noxious scents?

It is interesting to know how families of eight and nine people can live, and live comfortably, on £3 a week, the average income of the clerk in a mercantile house. The daily meals are worth studying. Breakfast is translated by a bowl of black coffee and bread, or a plate of soup from the preceding day. Milk is only given to the babies. The midday meal is generally composed of a meat stew, well cooked, and served with a good supply of gravy for the children to dip their bread in, followed by a vegetable of one sort or another. At four o'clock a thick slice of bread with a thin layer of jam is to be found in the hands of big and little ones. And at night, when father comes home, the family are all at table, awaiting the steaming soup that mother pours straight from the saucepan into the tureen. Potato and leek, cut into small pieces and boiled in water, a lump of butter, salt, and pepper to give it a flavour, and small rounds of bread make the soup nourishing and good. A salad, a piece of cheese, and a little cheap fruit complete the meal. Wine at 3d. a litre is diluted with water, and nobody suffers either in health or pocket. An oilcloth covers the table, generally selected in imitation of a linen cloth in floral squares, and each member has a table-napkin. A Frenchman of the middle and lower classes cares nothing for a table-cloth. He will eat off oilcloth as heartily as off damask, but he must have his table-napkin.

FRANCES KEYZER.

Digitized by Google

IN THE RUE DE TÉLÉGRAPHE.

Geniaux, Paris.

A GROUP OF LITTLE INMATES OUTSIDE THE INSTITUTION.

Geniaux, Paris.

CHILDREN ON THE ROOF OF THE BUILDING IN THE RUE DE TÉLÉGRAPHE.

An excellent institution in Paris is this building, which shelters seventy-two families, mostly those of the working classes. It was erected some years ago to remedy the difficulty in obtaining apartments experienced by parents with large families.

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

BY the time these notes are in readers' hands another Clyde Fortnight will have to be numbered with those that have passed. As is well known, every effort was put forth to revive interest in this old-established series of regattas this year, the Royal London Yacht Club assisting by organising the Cowes to Clyde race, with the object of attracting yachts up North. A certain measure of success has rewarded these efforts, and the gathering of big yachts has exceeded in numbers those of any more recent years, although it has to be admitted that, in point of sporting interest and in the number of vessels present, the fixtures do not bear comparison with those of the closing years of last century. This may be true of regattas generally all round the coast, but the Clyde has probably suffered worse than any other district, if we except the Irish ports. The most serious obstacle that has to be overcome, if the Clyde Fortnight is to resume its one-time important position amongst the season's fixtures, is the long journey North in the middle of the season, when all the principal craft are congregated down South, having just concluded their engagements at the different regattas on the Thames, the East Coast, and Dover. Viewing the matter from this standpoint, it would seem that some re-adjustment is required in an arrangement of dates that at present necessitates at least a week's blank in the middle of the season. If under existing arrangements the Clyde sport should revive, it must be at the expense of some other meeting, and this seems to point to a much-needed reform in the method of arranging the dates of the important regattas. The promised revival of the Y.R.A. fixtures conference may lead to some beneficial results in this direction.

A suggestion has already been put forward by some yachtsmen to open the season on the Clyde instead of on the Thames. This would have the twofold advantage of not clashing with any other fixture, either English or foreign, and do away with the special journey North in the middle of the season. Unless some such alteration is made, it is very doubtful if the racing of the Clyde Fortnight will ever attain to its old proportions.

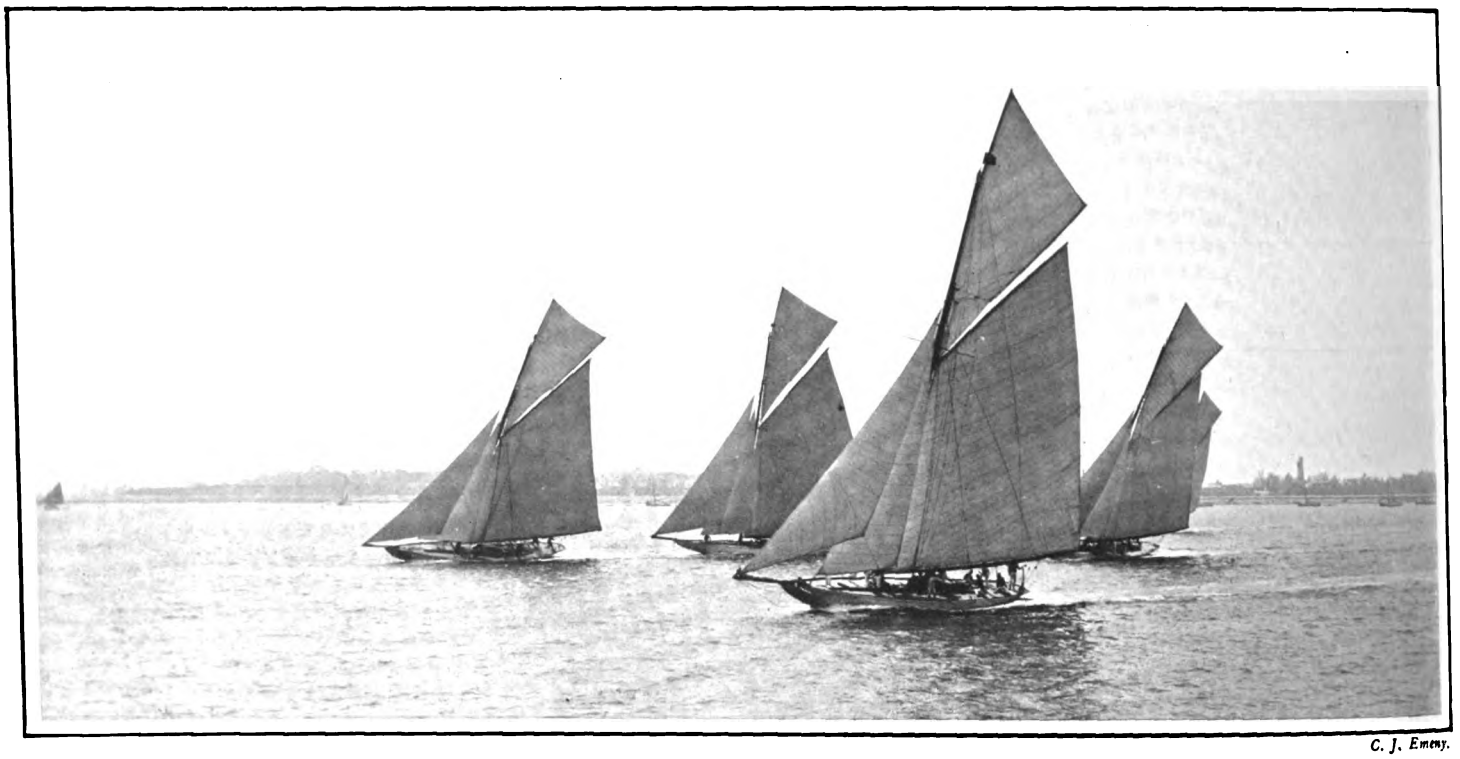
The Clyde is one of the most charming yachting districts in the British Isles. Racing conditions are certainly often far from ideal; "Clyde flukes" have long been proverbial, but the sailing takes place amidst lovely surroundings. This may not be a weighty consideration with some few yachtsmen, whose whole attention is devoted to the racing, but it has in the past attracted large numbers of steam and cruising vessels to the district.

In reference to the sailing conditions, the wind often plays strange freaks. It is quite a common occurrence to see yachts in close company get totally different streaks of wind, and the orthodox idea, "never leave your opponent," has especial point when sailing in these waters. As long as you are getting the same breeze as your opponent, never leave her; at a distance of a few boats' lengths you may be becalmed and remain stationary, while your competitors are completing the course. These vagaries of weather are, of course, attributable to the configuration of the land surrounding the Firth. For cruising it may not be a matter of importance. If progress is slow, there is grand scenery to admire and absorb attention; but in racing one requires to be philosophic, not to become at times exasperated with the samples of weather encountered. There is hardly any perceptible ebb or flow of tide on the Firth, so that, when becalmed, there is not even a decent chance of drifting home.

One great advantage in Clyde regattas is that those interested ashore can watch the yachts round the whole of the courses from different points of vantage around the coast, and it is by no means unusual to see crowds of interested spectators on the shore, the vast majority of whom display an intimate knowledge of the sport.

Hunter's Quay is one of the most favoured spots for yachting on the Clyde. The regattas of the Royal Clyde, Clyde Corinthian, and the Mudhook Clubs are held here, and Holy Loch, just adjoining, is a favourite anchorage for small craft throughout the summer. At Sandbank, about a mile up the loch, are some yards where many of the local craft are berthed in winter, and fitted out for the summer.

In a district remarkable for its beautiful scenery, it is difficult to allude to any spot particularly for its beauty, but Hunter's Quay certainly compares favourably with any of the places frequented by yachtsmen. It was at the regatta here that the collision occurred between Valkyrie II. and Satanita in 1894, resulting in the sinking of the former, which had just returned from America. The Mudhook Regatta opened last week on the anniversary of this catastrophe.



C. J. Emeny.

A START IN THE 52-FT. CLASS.

The yacht in the foreground is the Herreshoff-designed boat Sonya, owned by Mrs. Turner Farley. Under her lee is Britomart, the new Mylne design owned by Mr. W. P. Burton. Moyana is leading, and Maymon is bringing up the rear.

The 52-ft. class has absorbed chief interest at all the Clyde regattas, as the international character of the racing appealed particularly to Northern yachtsmen. The American boat's performances were watched with keen interest, more particularly in the earlier races, and satisfaction was general when the Clyde-built craft proved themselves more than able to hold their own with the foreigner in true sailing contests with smart breezes.

Britomart's performances in this class are also being followed with exceptional interest, as her consistent success throughout the season might have a very important bearing upon a future America Cup challenge.

CORINTHIAN.

REGATTA FIXTURES.

July 15.—Royal Cinque Ports Yacht Club, Dover.
July 15-17.—Royal Ulster Yacht Club, Belfast Lough.
July 17.—Royal Cinque Ports Yacht Club, Dover to Ostend.
July 18-22.—Ostend Regatta.
July 24.—Ostend to Flushing matches.
July 25.—Flushing to Antwerp matches.
July 26-29.—Plymouth Week.

Digitized by Google

YACHTS OF THE YEAR.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Debenham, Ryde.

WHITE HEATHER.

This yawl was built last year from W. Fife's design for Mr. Myles B. Kennedy, who for many years sailed Maid Marion in cruiser handicaps. She is commanded by Charles Bevis, one of our best skippers, and who has been regarded as the probable skipper of Shamrock IV., if such a vessel is ever built for an America Cup contest.

Digitized by Google

The Baptist World Congress.

JULY 11 — JULY 18, 1905.

FOR the first time in their eventful history of three centuries the Baptist Churches of Great Britain, the Colonies, the United States, and the Continent of Europe are to take part in a World Congress, of which London, by common assent, is to be the scene. Anglicans and Methodists, Presbyterians and Congregationalists have held congresses on similar lines, but as far as the Baptists are concerned the "World Congress" is a new departure, and it synchronises, very appropriately, almost exactly with the tercentenary of the early labours of the Rev. John Smyth of Christ College, Cambridge, sometime Lecturer at Lincoln Cathedral, who, early in James I.'s reign, founded the first English Baptist Church in Holland. The first idea of the World Congress is due to the Rev. J. N. Prestridge, D.D., of Louisville, who proposed to hold it last summer. The Secretary of the Baptist Union of Great Britain and Ireland, the Rev. J. H. Shakespeare, fully sympathised with the proposal; the Rev. A. McLaren, D.D., of Manchester, accepted the post of President, and the Rev. John Clifford, D.D., that of Vice-President, but time was prudently asked for for organisation. The outcome of the happy inspiration of Dr. Prestridge and the well-directed energy of Mr. Shakespeare (who is this year President of the London Free Church Council) is the World Congress to which a thousand Baptist pilgrims are coming from the other side of the Atlantic. The hosts on this occasion will be the Baptist Union, of which His Honour Judge Willis, K.C., is President, the Rev. John Wilson of Woolwich Past-President, Mr. Herbert Marnham Treasurer, and the Rev. J. H. Shakespeare Secretary. Messrs. Shakespeare and Marnham are also Secretary and Treasurer respectively of the World Congress. The Vice-Presidents of the Congress are Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P., Mr. Herbert Marnham, Rev. Dr. Clifford, Rev. J. R. Wood, Rev. Charles Williams, Mr. H. F. Richardson, Rev. Dr. Prestridge, Herr J. G. Lehmann of Cassel, and Mr. W. C. Senior of Toronto. Mr. Shakespeare has received most valuable aid from the Rev. Dr. Whitley of Preston (Assistant-Secretary) and Mr. Harold Knott, M.A.

The Baptist church-house in Southampton Row (where the greater part of the preliminary work has been done) is one of the handsomest buildings of the kind in London, and it is here that the "Baptist Handbook," a bulky volume of 600 pages, is published, under the direction of the Council of the Baptist Union and its Secretary, Mr. Shakespeare. The following table, extracted from it, shows at a glance the immense importance, both theologically and politically, of the Baptist Churches now in a great measure represented by their chosen delegates assembled in World Congress.

Campbell-Gray.

REV. J. H. SHAKESPEARE, M.A.
Secretary of the Baptist World Congress.

| | Churches. | Pastors and Missionaries. | Members. | Scholars in Sunday Schools. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| British Empire— | | | | |
| Great Britain, Ireland, and Channel Islands .. | 2,907 | 2,116 | 394,811 | 570,149 |
| Dominion of Canada, etc. | 985 | 646 | 102,962 | 65,445 |
| India and Ceylon .. | 1,240 | 694 | 122,760 | 42,845 |
| Australasia . | 268 | 200 | 21,013 | 33,670 |
| Other Colonies .. .. | 253 | 114 | 43,751 | 31,719 |
| Foreign Countries | 65,835 | 47,475 | 6,291,491 | 2,035,740 |
| Grand Totals, 1904 . | 71,488 | 51,245 | 6,976,788 | 2,779,568 |

| | Churches. | Pastors and Missionaries. | Members. | Scholars in Sunday Schools. |
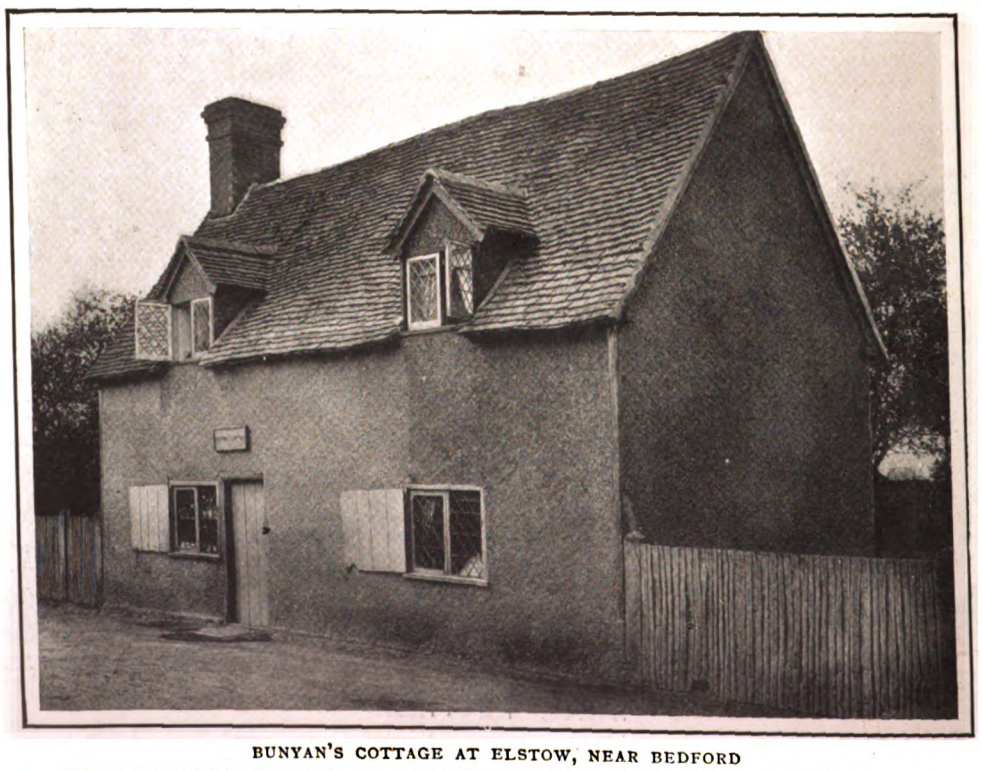
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Europe .. .. | 4,056 | 3,223 | 518,127 | 664,973 |
| Asia .. .. | 1,422 | 1,001 | 137,777 | 54,192 |
| Africa .. .. | 84 | 151 | 10,176 | 9,300 |
| America .. .. | 65,658 | 46,670 | 6,289,605 | 2,017,433 |
| Australia .. .. | 268 | 200 | 21,103 | 33,670 |
| Grand Totals, 1904 | 71,488 | 51,245 | 6,976,788 | 2,779,568 |

Those who desire to know something of the annals of the Baptists, and the simple faith for which many of those who first embraced it were content to suffer fine, imprisonment, torture, and even martyrdom, will find all the information they can possibly wish for in the pages of the Rev. Charles Williams's "The Principles and Practices of the Baptists," and Mr. Henry C. Vedder's admirable "Short History of the Baptists." It is evident that in the troublous times of the Civil War the Baptists played an all-important part in our political history. John Smyth (in honour of whose memory the members of the Congress are to pay a visit to Cambridge), who returned from Amsterdam in 1614 to found in London the mother church of the general Baptists, and is described as "a great man, a clear thinker, a sound reasoner, singularly frank and bold in speech," flourished before the storm broke which brought Charles Stuart to the scaffold and Oliver Cromwell to the dictatorship. So also did Roger Williams, the "Father of Toleration," in whose book, "The Bloody Tenet of Persecution," one finds the earliest advocacy of the liberty of conscience. Roger Williams migrated to America, where he became Governor of Rhode Island, and there founded the first Baptist Church on the other side of the Atlantic. Amongst other notable Baptists of this epoch may be mentioned Henry Dunster, President of Harvard University, New England, William Dell, Master of Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, and John Donne, Provost of King's. Greater than any of these, perhaps, was John Milton of immortal memory, whose tomb in London, and whose cottage at Chalfont St. Giles (close to the burial-place of Penn) will doubtless be visited by many of our American friends during the next few days. Like John Smyth, John Milton belonged to Christ College, Cambridge, while two other celebrated Baptists — Henry Jessey and Thomas Horrocks — were graduates of St. John's. One of the oldest Baptist places of worship is said to be that at Hill Cliff in Cheshire. The



BUNYAN'S COTTAGE AT ELSTOW, NEAR BEDFORD
Which is to be visited by the American and other foreign delegates to the Baptist World Congress.

Digitized by Google

Celebrated Baptists of the Seventeenth, Eighteenth, and Nineteenth Centuries.

MAJOR-GENERAL HARRISON
Commander-in-Chief, regicide, executed at Charing Cross, 1660.

JOHN MILTON (1608-1674)
Drawn and engraved by G. Quinton, after a contemporary portrait.

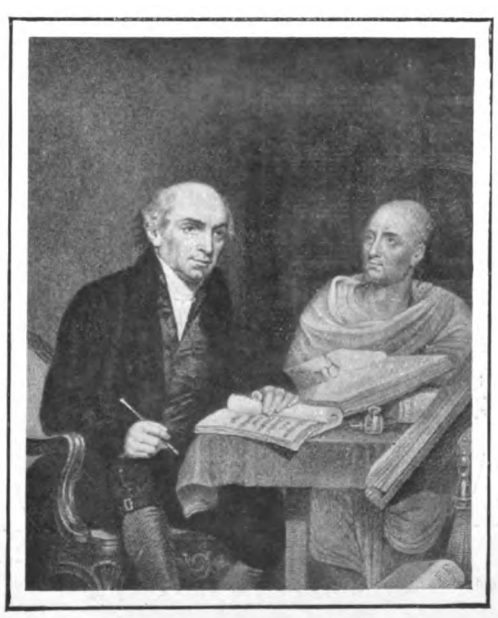
WILLIAM KIFFIN (1616-1701)
Merchant, alderman, and preacher. Engraved by Hopwood.

REV. R. HALL OF ARNSBY (1728-1791)
From the engraving by T. Trotter, after a contemporary painting.

REV. J. RYLAND, A.M. (1753-1825)
President of Bristol College. (Carington Bowles.)

REV. JOHN MACGOWAN, V.D.M. (1726-1780)
Pastor of Devonshire Square. (Carington Bowles.)

REV. ROBERT HALL, M.A. (1764-1831)
Preacher and writer.



THE REV. W. CAREY (1761-1822)
Pioneer of Protestant Missions.

REV. ANDREW FULLER (1754-1815)
Theologian.

Digitized by Google

Elliott and Fry.

THE LATE CHARLES HADDON SPURGEON
Minister of the Tabernacle.

Haines.

ALEXANDER MACLAREN, D.D. LITT.D.
President of the Congress.

Haines.

MR. HERBERT MARNHAM
Treasurer.

Elliott and Fry.

JUDGE WILLIS, K.C.
President of the Baptist Union.

Haines.

REV. JOHN WILSON
Ex-President of the Baptist Union.

Tattersall.

REV. CHARLES WILLIAMS
Vice-President of Congress.

Winter.

REV. W. T. WHITLEY, M.A., LL.D.
Assistant-Secretary of Congress.

Haines.

TIMOTHY RICHARD, D.D.
Baptist Missionary in China.

Visick.

R. GLOVER, D.D.
Ex-President of the Baptist Union.

Lafayette.

MR. G. W. MACALPINE, J.P.
Vice-President of Congress.

Copyright.

REV. WALTER MURSELL
Pastor of the Coats Memorial Church.

Hillick.

REV. J. R. WOOD
Vice-President of Congress.

Digitized by Google

Copyright.

CURTIS LEE LAWS, D.D.
Baltimore, Maryland.

Copyright.

J. N. PRESTRIDGE, D.D., LOUISVILLE
Vice-President of Congress.

Copyright.

PRESIDENT E. Y. MULLINS, D.D.
Louisville, Kentucky.

Copyright.

REV. A. H. STRONG, LL.D.
President of Rochester Seminary, N.Y.

Copyright.

H. C. MABIE, D.D.
Of American Baptist Missionary Union, Boston.

Copyright.

MR. A. H. BAYNES, F.R.G.S.
Secretary of the Baptist Missionary Society.

Varney, Chicago.

LATHAM A. CRANDALL, D.D.
Of Minneapolis, President of the American Committee.

Elliott and Fry.

REV. G. P. GOULD, M.A.
Regent's Park College.

Davies.

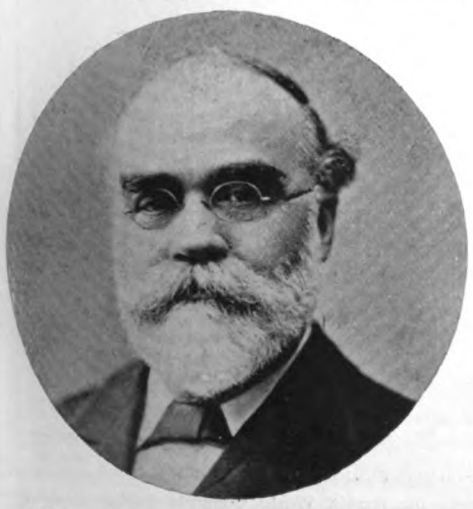
REV. JOHN McNEIL, B.A.
Pastor of first Baptist Church, Winnipeg.



PRINCIPAL J. T. MARSHALL, M.A., D.D.
Manchester College.

Morgan and Kidd.

HUGH D. BROWN, M.A., B.L.
President Irish Baptist College.

Davies, Aberystwyth.

REV. T. F. ROBERTS, M.A.
Of University College, Aberystwyth.

Digitized by Google

venerable meeting-house, of which an ancient engraving is now reproduced, is that of Shortwood in Gloucestershire. Some of Cromwell's most trusted officers were disciples of John Smyth, and many Baptists were to be found amongst the rank and file. Probably the most celebrated of them was Major-General Thomas Harrison, who became head of the Army in 1653, was imprisoned by Cromwell at Portland in the following year, was arrested later as a Fifth Monarchy Man, was mentioned as a possible successor on the fall of Richard Cromwell, and was executed as a regicide after the Restoration. His descendants still exist. Other more or less well-known Civil War Baptists were Major-General Robert Lilburne (Monk's opponent in 1659), Colonel Robert Overton (who took Monk's side), Major Packer, and Captains Gladman, Malyn, Barrington, Spinage, and Hunter, all of whom Cromwell dismissed in 1657 as opposed to his plan of government. The Baptists of those days relished a dictator de facto no more than they did a monarch who claimed man's allegiance in virtue of divine right. They exclaimed with John Milton, the greatest of them all:

"New Presbyter is but old Priest writ large
. . . . . .
Dare ye for this adjure the Civil sword
To force our conscience that Christ set free,
And ride us with a classic hierarchy?
. . . . . .
Peace hath her victories
No less renowned than war; new foes arise,
Threat'ning to bind our souls with secular chains;
Help us to save free conscience from the paw
Of hireling wolves, whose gospel is their maw."

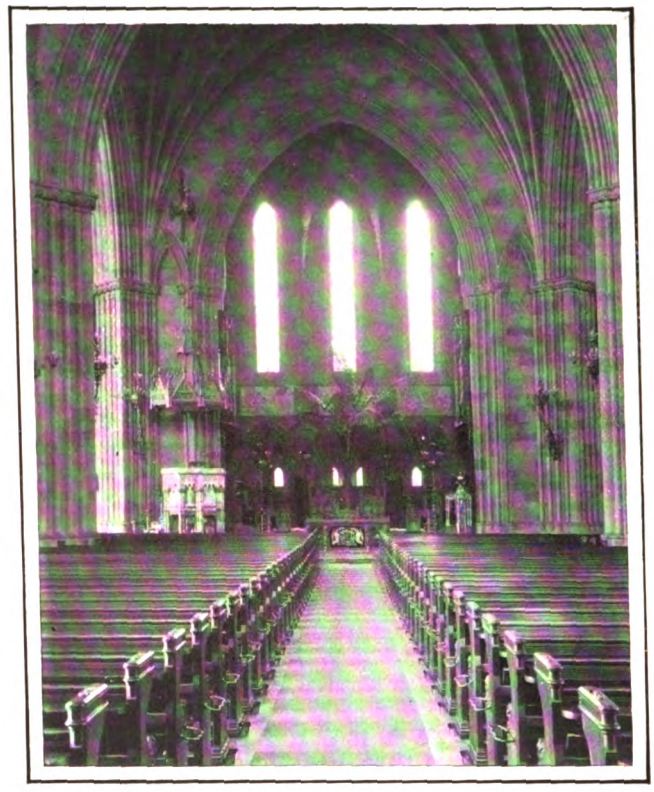
The story of John Bunyan and his books is too well known to repeat here. In our own days a Duke of Bedford has reared a statue to him in the town from which he derives his title, and where our friends from across the seas can still see his old meeting-house, the scenes of his life-long fight for freedom, and the cottage in which he was born, at a time when the coming horrors of the Civil War were only foreshadowed by a cloud no bigger than a man's hand. A view of the modest dwelling at Elstow where Bunyan's parents lived forms one of the illustrations now given.

The list of Baptist worthies, both in and out of the ministry, is a very long one. Portraits of some of the pillars of the Church in the seventeenth, eighteenth, and nineteenth centuries are now given. Famous amongst the earlier Baptists were Thomas Harrison (already mentioned), Hansard Knollys (whose name is still a household word in America), William Kiffin, and Benjamin Keach.

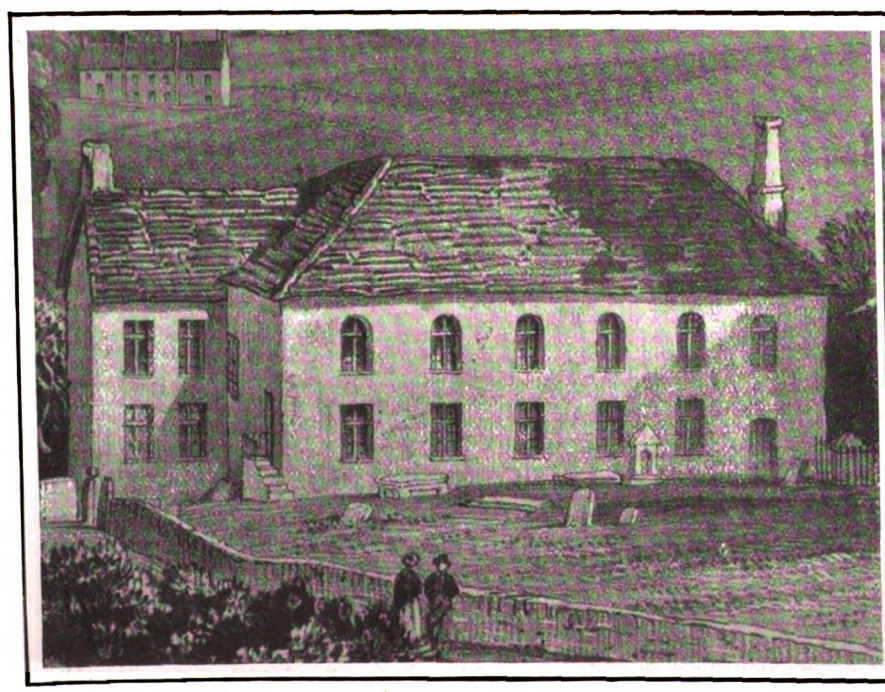
To a later period belong Andrew Fuller, John Ryland, and Robert Hall the elder. The nineteenth century gave the Baptist Church Robert Hall the younger, William Carey, the famous Indian missionary (who began his good work in 1795), and last, but not least, the Rev. C. H. Spurgeon. Amongst our great soldiers it may be mentioned that Sir Henry Havelock was a Baptist, while in the present day at least three Governors of American States belong to the same Church, as well as Dr. Currie, the ex-Ambassador to Spain. It is in the fitness of things that the Congress sermon should be preached in the Metropolitan Tabernacle, and of which an interior view is reproduced by kind permission of Messrs. Passmore and Alabaster. The preacher there on the evening of July 12 will be the Rev. A. H. Strong, President of the Rochester Seminary, New York. The Baptist Missionary Society, founded in 1792, is a vast and powerful body, having ramifications all over the world. Its annual income in 1903 was £86,009, and its army of workers numbers no less than 5,860 men and women.

Amongst the best-known Baptist divines who are expected from America are the Rev. John Newton Prestridge, D.D., of Louisville, the able editor of the Baptist Argus; Rev. A. H. Strong of New York; Dr. H. C. Mabie of the Tremont Temple, Boston; Dr. C. R. Henderson of Chicago; Dr. E. Y. Mullins, President of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville (who is to read an important paper on "Modern Theological Thought"); Dr. Crandall, Chairman of the Baptist Committee of the Northern States; and Dr. Curtis Lee Laws, who represents the Committee of the Southern. The delegate of Canada is Mr. W. C. Senior; while the West Indies send Mr. S. G. Washington; South Africa the Hon. T. B. King; and New Zealand Mr. A. F. Carey. Dr Alexander Maclaren (perhaps the most renowned of all Baptist preachers) emerges from his well-merited retirement to welcome his co-religionists from all parts of the globe to one of the most remarkable gatherings that Exeter Hall has ever witnessed.

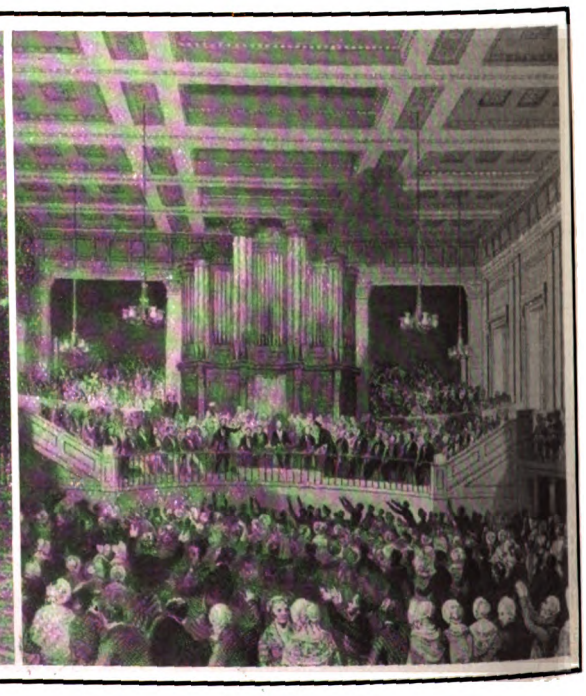
The programme for the Conference is a model for which all future organisers will thank the Rev. John Howard Shakespeare, whose latest achievement is eminently worthy of the old Puritan stock from which he springs. Between 1883 and 1898 he occupied with conspicuous success the almost historic pulpit of St. Mary's, Norwich. In the latter year Dr. Booth resigned the Secretaryship of the Baptist Union, and public opinion at once designated Mr. Shakespeare as his successor. His signal success in the matter of the Century Fund has been followed by the triumph of the World Congress. The numerical and financial strength of the Baptist Church in the United Kingdom has already been alluded to. It possesses such important places of worship as the Metropolitan Tabernacle in London, the splendid church in Victoria Avenue, Harrogate, and last, but not least, the Thomas Coats Memorial Church at Paisley, said to be the finest Gothic edifice erected in Scotland since the Reformation, and which cost over £100,000. It was built by various members of his family



INTERIOR OF THE COATS MEMORIAL CHURCH, PAISLEY.
The finest Baptist place of w rship in the United Kingdom.



A TYPICAL OLD BAPTIST CHAPEL, SHORTWOOD, GLOUCESTERSHIRE.
From an old print



THE INTERIOR OF EXETER HALL
Where the Baptist World Congress meets.

Digitized by Google

in memory of the much-respected founder of the thread industry.

The Coats Memorial Church is remarkable for the exquisite carving of the pulpit, the fine quality of its organ, the possession of a surpliced choir of seventy, and the sound theological teachings on the traditional lines of the Old Fathers of the Baptist Faith, which makes the pastorate of the Rev. Walter Mursell as popular as that of his father. It is needless to say that the Baptists are in strorg sympathy with the Free Church Federation movement. The only deputation which will be received at the World Congress will be that of the National Free Church Council. It will be received by the Rev. Thomas Law, and the President, the Rev. Dr. Horton, will speak on the subject. The routine of business will be pleasantly tempered by visits to St. Paul's and Westminster Abbey; the unveiling of a statue of the late Rev. C. H. Spurgeon; excursions to Cambridge (the academic home of Smyth, Dunster, Cromwell, Dell, Donne, Jessey, Horrocks, and John Milton) and Bedford, the birthplace of John Bunyan. The facilities offered by the Great Western Railway for seeing in one afternoon Milton's cottage and Penn's grave will doubtless be largely taken advantage of, and at the close of the Congress the Baptist Missionary Society will organise an expedition to Oxford. The principal features of the Congress programme are as follows:

Tuesday, July 11, 1905.

5.0 p.m. AN ADDRESS OF WELCOME. Chairman: The President of the Baptist Union, His Honour Judge W. Willis, K.C.

ROLL CALL OF COUNTRIES,

Wednesday, July 12, 1905.

Morning. Chairman: The President of the Conference, Dr. Maclaren.

9 30. Devotional Service and Short Address by the President.

10.30. "The Place of Baptists in the Christian Church."

Deputation from the National Free Church Council.

Afternoon. "National Primary Education." Chairman: Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P.

Evening. Congress Sermon at Metropolitan Tabernacle by the President, A. H. Strong.

Thursday, July 13, 1905.

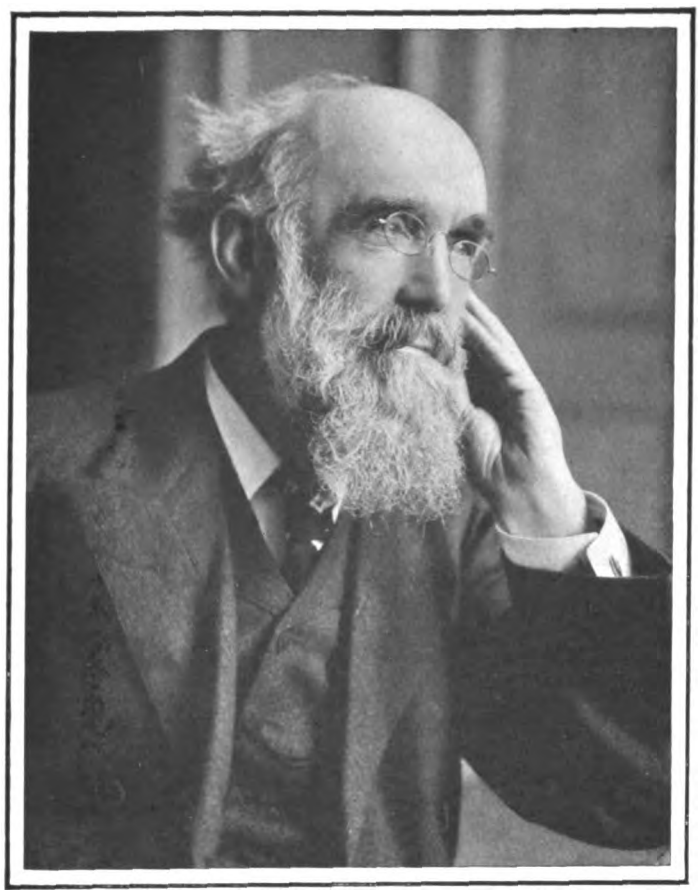
FOREIGN MISSIONARY DAY.

Morning. Chairman: Dr. Maclaren.
1. "The Inadequacy of Non-Christian Religions to Meet the Needs of the World."
2. "Woman's Work on the Foreign Field."
3. "How to Create a Deeper Interest in the Home Churches."



JOHN CLIFFORD, M.A., F.G.S., D.D., B.Sc., LL.D.
Deputy-President of the Congress.

Afternoon. MISSIONARY METHODS
1. Australian. 2. Canadian. 3. American.

Evening. 1. "The Awakening of China and Japan, and the Duty of the Home Church." Rev. Dr. Timothy Richard, the great Baptist Missionary in China.
2. "The Attitude of India to-day in Regard to Christianity."
3. "The Claims of Africa."

Friday, July 14, 1905.

Morning. Chairman: Dr. Maclaren.
1. "Modern Criticism."
(a) Old Testament History.
(b) The New Testament.
2. "Modern Theological Thought."

Afternoon. HOME MISSION METHODS.
1. American.
2. Canadian.
3. Australian.
4. South African.

Evening. "Baptist Work on the Continent."
1. Swedish.
2. Russian.
3. German.
4. Italian.
5. French.

Saturday, July 15, 1905.

Morning. Chairman: Dr. Maclaren.
1. "The Self-support and Self-propagation of Native Churches."
2. "Higher Education in Missionary Schools and Colleges, Home and Foreign"
3. "The Printing Press and Christian Literature as Missionary Agencies."

Garden Party at Regent's Park College, given by Mr. and Mrs. Pearce Gould.

Evening. Reception by Dr. Maclaren.

Sunday, July 16, 1905.

CONGRESS SUNDAY.

Arrangements to be made for members of the Congress to supply London Baptist pulpits.

Monday, July 17, 1905.

Morning. Chairman: Dr. Maclaren.
1. "The Place of Denominational Academies, Colleges, Universities, and Theological Seminaries."
2. Unveiling of Spurgeon Statue.

Afternoon. Visit to St. Paul's and Westminster Abbey.

Evening. AUXILIARY AGENCIES.
Sunday School Work.
Woman's Work.
Bible School Work.
Young People's Work.

Tuesday, July 18, 1905.

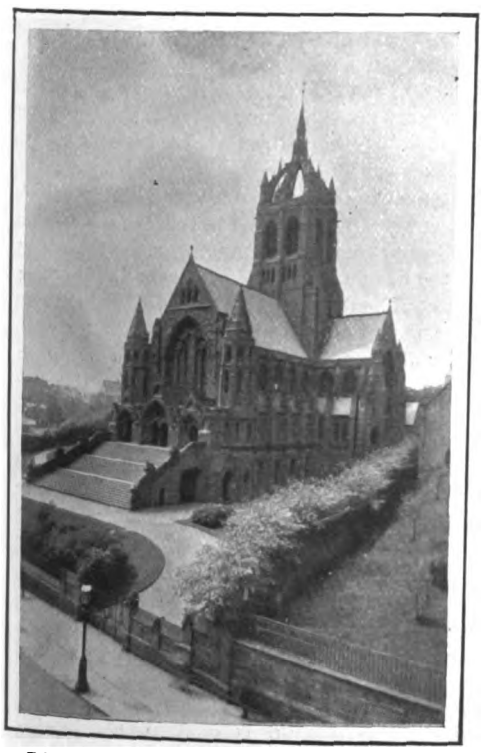
Morning. SOCIAL QUESTIONS. Chairman: Dr. Maclaren.
1. "Temperance," by ex-President Alderman George White, M.P.
2. "The Attitude of the Baptists to the Working Classes."
3. "Commercial Ethics."

Afternoon. BAPTISTS AND LITERATURE.
1. "The Secular and Religious Press."
2. Denominational Literature.

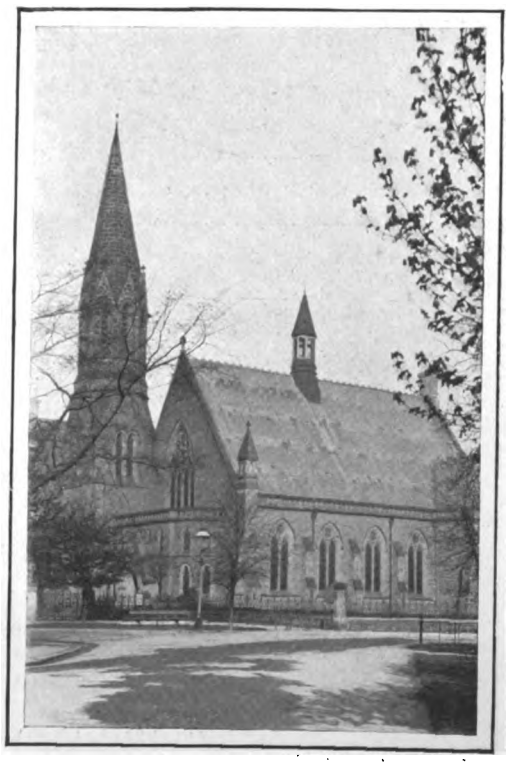
Evening. GREAT CLOSING MEETING in the Albert Hall. Chairman: His Honour Judge W. Willis, K.C.

A. M. B.



THE THOMAS COATS MEMORIAL CHURCH
Paisley. Exterior.

THE BAPTIST CHURCH HOUSE
Southampton Row, W.C.



THE BAPTIST CHURCH
Victoria Avenue, Harrogate.

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

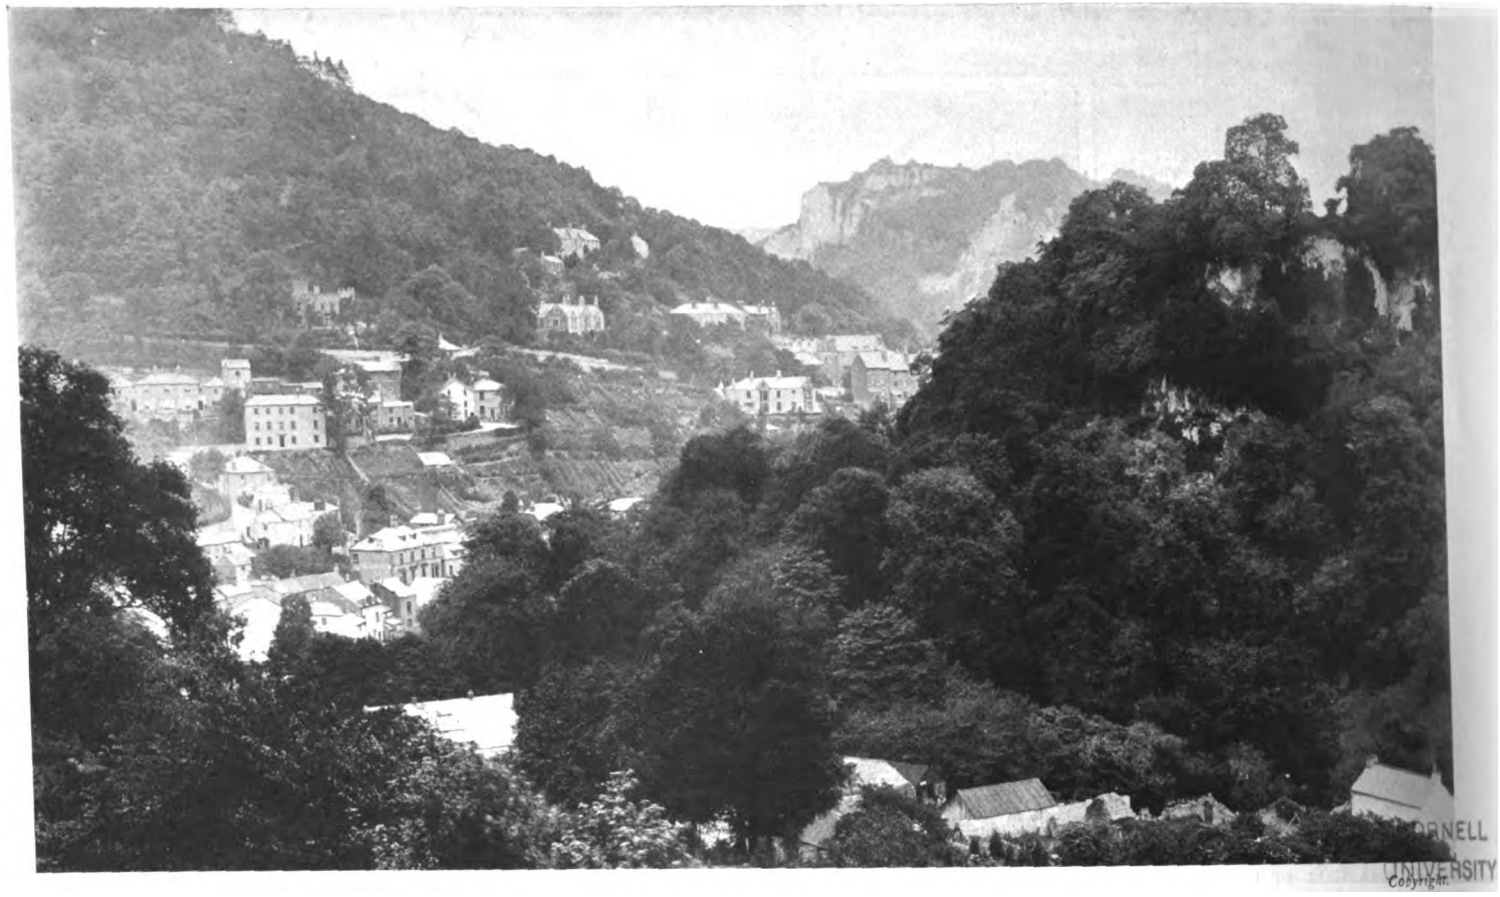
ON THE MIDLAND RAILWAY: THE PEAK DISTRICT.



IN THE PEAK DISTRICT.

A bird's-eye view of Matlock Bath, the famous inland watering-place, picturesquely situated in the Valley of the Derwent. Of the four Matlocks, which lie within easy distance of one another, Matlock Bath is the oldest, the use of the curative springs dating from the year 1698. It is also a convenient centre for excursions to all parts of the Peak district, Buxton, Haddon Hall, and Chatsworth.

THOSE who have never spent a holiday in the lovely Peak district of Derbyshire have still much to learn. Ruskin, who was probably one of the greatest authorities on the picturesque, describes it as the "most educational of all districts of beautiful landscape — a lovely child's alphabet, an alluring first lesson in all that is admirable and powerful, chiefly in the way it engages and fixes the attention." And the centre of this delightful district is Matlock, distant only some three and a quarter hours from the metropolis by the express service of the Midland Railway. Here is scenery, the equal of which is certainly not to be found nearer to home than Switzerland; and mineral springs which give relief to the common ailments to which the English flesh is heir—rheumatism, gout, sciatica, etc. Matlock thus possesses dual attractions—being equally adapted to the health-seeker or those in quest of amusement.

THE WATERFALL AT VIA GELLIA, NEAR MATLOCK.

One of the most beautiful bits of scenery in the vicinity of Matlock is the Via Gellia, on the way from Cromford to Hopton. The highway passes through a lovely vale, famous in the spring-time for its wealth of wild flowers, the lily of the valley growing in the wildest profusion by the roadside.

Long before its scenic beauties became known to the holiday-maker, Matlock—or rather the Matlocks, for there are four of them, named respectively Matlock Town, Matlock Bath, Matlock Bank, and Matlock Bridge—was celebrated for its medicinal waters. On this account it has earned for itself the title "the Metropolis of Hydropathy." Hydropathic establishments, or what our neighbours on the Continent are pleased to call sanatoriums, abound in the neighbourhood, ranging from the almost palatial, like Smedley's—the largest of its kind in this country—down to the simple and unpretentious. Treatment of the most up-to-date kind, including Dowsing Radiant heat and light baths, is offered to those who may be in need of it; though for ordinary ailments, usually arising from overwork and run-down condition, the fine, bracing mountain air is, as a rule, found to be in itself a sufficient cure.

Although split up into four, the district is wonderfully compact, and almost equally accessible for all parts of the Peak. Matlock Town and Bath, however, are the older portions, the waters of the latter being first used as early as 1698. Even so long ago it was extremely popular with the gentry of Derby; and as its fame began to spread visitors were attracted there from other parts of the kingdom. A pretty road connects Matlock Bath with Matlock Bridge, passing on the way the celebrated High Tor, which rises almost precipitously from the bank of the winding Derwent to a height of about 400-ft. This is perhaps one of the most remarkable sights of a district justly celebrated for remarkable scenery. The interior of this imposing mass of limestone can be explored by entering the grotto or cavern, for which a small charge is made, while a tunnel of the Midland Railway pierces it at its base. The cavern is a veritable Aladdin's Cave, the roof being studded with crystals, which reflect the light of the torches in myriads of little stars.

Digitized by Google

Another remarkable feature of Matlock Bath is the petrifying wells, which have been the object of surprise and admiration of many distinguished visitors, including our late Queen during her childhood. Nor is Matlock Bath without its Lovers' Walks, which consist of a series of winding paths in zigzag fashion on the opposite bank of the Derwent. These charming walks have always been a great source of attraction to the holiday-maker, and afford glimpses of the lovely surroundings. In the way of social amusements there is a pavilion standing in pretty gardens, immediately behind the Royal Hotel, where concerts and other entertainments help to pass away a few hours on a rainy day. On the north side of the town rise the majestic Heights of Abraham and Massow, which may be scaled by the more adventurous. These hills are penetrated by innumerable caverns which are open to the public to explore.

Of late years Matlock Bridge has grown into quite a small town, and continues to increase in prosperity. To reach Matlock Bank, which is situated on the side of a steep hill, some hundreds of feet above the Bridge, we must ascend by the convenient cable tramway, which Sir George Newnes, Bart., presented some years ago to the local District Council. The tramway is one of the steepest in existence on a public road, the gradient in parts being as high as one in five. It is of the utmost convenience to residents and others living in this part of Matlock, of which Sir George Newnes is a native.

Rich as the Matlocks are in scenic beauties in their immediate neighbourhood, they have the additional advantage of being within easy distance of such famous spots as Haddon Hall, Chatsworth House, Wingfield Manor, Hardwick Hall, Eyam Church, and the Plague Cottages, not to mention the several prehistoric remains, such as Abor Low, Robin Hood's Stride, Piper's Stone, Nine Ladies' Circle, etc. All these can be reached within a short time by rail and coach.

For a rambling holiday the tourist could scarce do better than provide himself with one of the circular tour tickets, which the Midland Company issue during the holiday season at absurdly low fares. For a matter of 7s. one can travel from Matlock or any other station on the route, and make a complete circuit of the Peak. The journey may be broken at any station on the round, providing the ticket is left temporarily in the care of the station-master.

The arrangements made by the Midland Railway for this delightful tour have been carefully thought out, and leave little room for complaint. Those making Matlock their centre have the choice of travelling in either direction. Among the many interesting places to be seen are Cromford, where Sir Richard Arkwright first introduced the cotton mill and inaugurated the modern factory system of labour; while the imposing Black Rocks and the famous Via Gellia Valley, with its pretty waterfall, are also in the vicinity. Whitslandwell, near by, contains the Derbyshire home of Florence Nightingale. From Ambergate, the southern threshold of the Peak district, we continue our ramble in a northerly direction, passing through Wingfield, for Wingfield Manor, Stretton, Clay Cross, Chesterfield, and Hope, whence one can reach the interesting village of Castleton, celebrated for its castles and caverns. Here we can see the ruin of Peveril Castle, immortalised by Sir Walter Scott in his novel "Peveril of the Peak." Little was known of the caverns prior to the opening of the Midland line. They are, perhaps, among the most remarkable in Derbyshire, and were twice visited by the late Queen. Both Haddon and Chatsworth are within easy distance. Edale Valley may be explored from the station of that name. A little to the south of the station is a ridge of hills which commands views of the Castleton and Hope Valleys, and the ruin of Peveril Castle. There is also an old Roman encampment, called Mam Tor, and the Odin Mine, evidently worked during the Roman occupation.

Copyright.

THE HIGH TOR, MATLOCK

Situated midway between Matlock Bath and Bridge, rising to a sheer height of 400-ft. above the level of the Derwent. The base of this remarkable inland cliff is covered with a mass of brushwood, shrubs, and mosses, while the upper portion consists of a bare imposing wall of limestone, which has resisted the storms of ages. The Tor is pierced at its base by the line of the Midland Railway on its way North.

Digitized by Google

In the Land of Penn and Milton.

NO very material or lasting benefit was conferred upon the community at large by the Great Plague of 1665; but the quaint little Buckinghamshire village of Chalfont St. Giles must ascribe its latter-day prosperity in large measure to the devastating sickness that gripped the capital in the fourth year of the reign of the second Charles. There are other circumstances, perhaps, which have conduced to the popularity enjoyed by the near neighbour to Stoke Poges, but, after all, it was the Plague that drove Milton from London to the little cottage at the top of the village street, and it is this picturesque half-timbered house, from whose windows one may look out upon an old-world country garden, that is the shrine which draws so many pilgrims into Buckinghamshire.

Beechy Bucks has been very favoured in the last few weeks. Within its borders five rare and valuable editions of Shakespearian plays have been found, some bearing the signature of William Penn, the father of the founder of the great American State which last week sent over eight of her sons to do battle on the historic regatta course at Henley, and it may be said that as a one-day tour the country of Milton and Penn has firmly established itself. In large part this is due to the energy of the directorate of the Great Western Railway, who have inaugurated a motor-car service, by means of which the traveller may visit in one day Beaconsfield and Hughenden Manor, where Disraeli lies buried under the inscription ending, at Queen Victoria's express desire, with the words "Kings love him that speaketh right"; Jordan's Meeting-house, where William Penn, whose name all Americans must know, rests in the shade of the myriad trees that rustle in the breeze above the old-time meeting-house of the Society of Friends; and thence to Chalfont St. Giles itself, with the cottage still preserved as nearly as possible in its original state and open to all, since it was purchased by public subscription in the year of Queen Victoria's Jubilee. Here in the peaceful quiet of the July afternoon, with the bees humming drowsily around the stocks and foxgloves in the gardens, one may imagine the scene as it was when Milton dictated the glorious periods of "Paradise Regained." Perhaps, down in the garden below, his younger daughters played, for we know that they did not finally leave him till 1670, and there is no evidence to show that they were content to remain behind in London and brave dangers before which even their father considered it wise to flee.

Copyright.

PENN'S BURIAL-PLACE.

The cemetery of the Society of Friends, by Jordan's Meeting-house, Chalfont St. Giles.

Before now offers have been made to remove the remains of Penn to America, but they have always been refused, and he lies still in the little graveyard where, unhonoured and unsung, he was laid to rest after a long and turbulent life, and where, too, five of his children rest. Born in 1644, he early joined the Society of Friends, and was several times imprisoned. In 1681 he accepted a grant of land in America in lieu of the income left him by his father, and wished to call his estate Sylvania. But the Merry Monarch willed it otherwise, and to-day the State of which Philadelphia is the capital and principal seaport commemorates the names of the great English Quaker and his greater father.

Chalfont St. Giles is to-day much what it was then. In those days, which seem so far away, and yet are but as yesterday in comparison with the age of the village, the sole connection with the outer world was the Wendover coach that started from the Old Bell Inn in Holborn, a hostelry that has shared the fate of so many of the old coaching taverns, and is now demolished. The Merlin Cave Inn at Chalfont still stands, but the Bell is gone, and the old coach is gone, and in its place a modern motor-waggonette brings sightseers from across the ocean and from nearer home to the pollard-fringed Misburne stream, and the country which is so full of memories of the poets who dreamt of the past, and the pioneers who laid the foundations of the great principalities which are to-day the United States of America.

F. E. R.

MILTON'S COTTAGE, CHALFONT ST. GILES

In which the poet lived during the time of the Great Plague in London, and where the greater part of "Paradise Regained" was written.

Digitized by Google

THE CRICKET SEASON.

OXFORD v. CAMBRIDGE.

Copyright.

THE FIELD DURING CAMBRIDGE'S SECOND INNINGS.

At the wicket may be seen Mr. E. W. Mann, the Cambridge captain. The extraordinary victory of the Light Blues gives them a total of thirty-four wins to Oxford's thirty.

Copyright.

THE DARK BLUES RETURN TO THE PAVILION.

The Cambridge second innings finished late on Friday afternoon, and Oxford were left with 164 to get to win. But in the short time that remained for play, three wickets went down for 15 runs, and on Saturday the remaining seven could only add 108 to the score, and the result was a most unexpected victory for Cambridge.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Copyright.

THE LUNCHEON INTERVAL AT LORD'S.

As is usual during the Oxford and Cambridge match, there was a large and representative crowd of promenaders on the ground during the luncheon interval, and the combined efforts of the large staff of groundmen and policemen only succeeded in clearing the ground after considerable delay.

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES.

VICE-ADMIRAL SIR WILLIAM MAY IN H.M.S. "KING EDWARD VII."

Sir William May, who only attained to the substantive rank of Vice-Admiral last week, is Commander-in-Chief of the Atlantic Fleet, and with the principal vessels of his command has been paying a visit this week to Brest. The officers and men of the Fleet have been cordially received and entertained both by their fellow-seamen in the French Navy and by the municipal authorities.

Digitized by Google

Plays and Players.

Foulsham and Banfield.

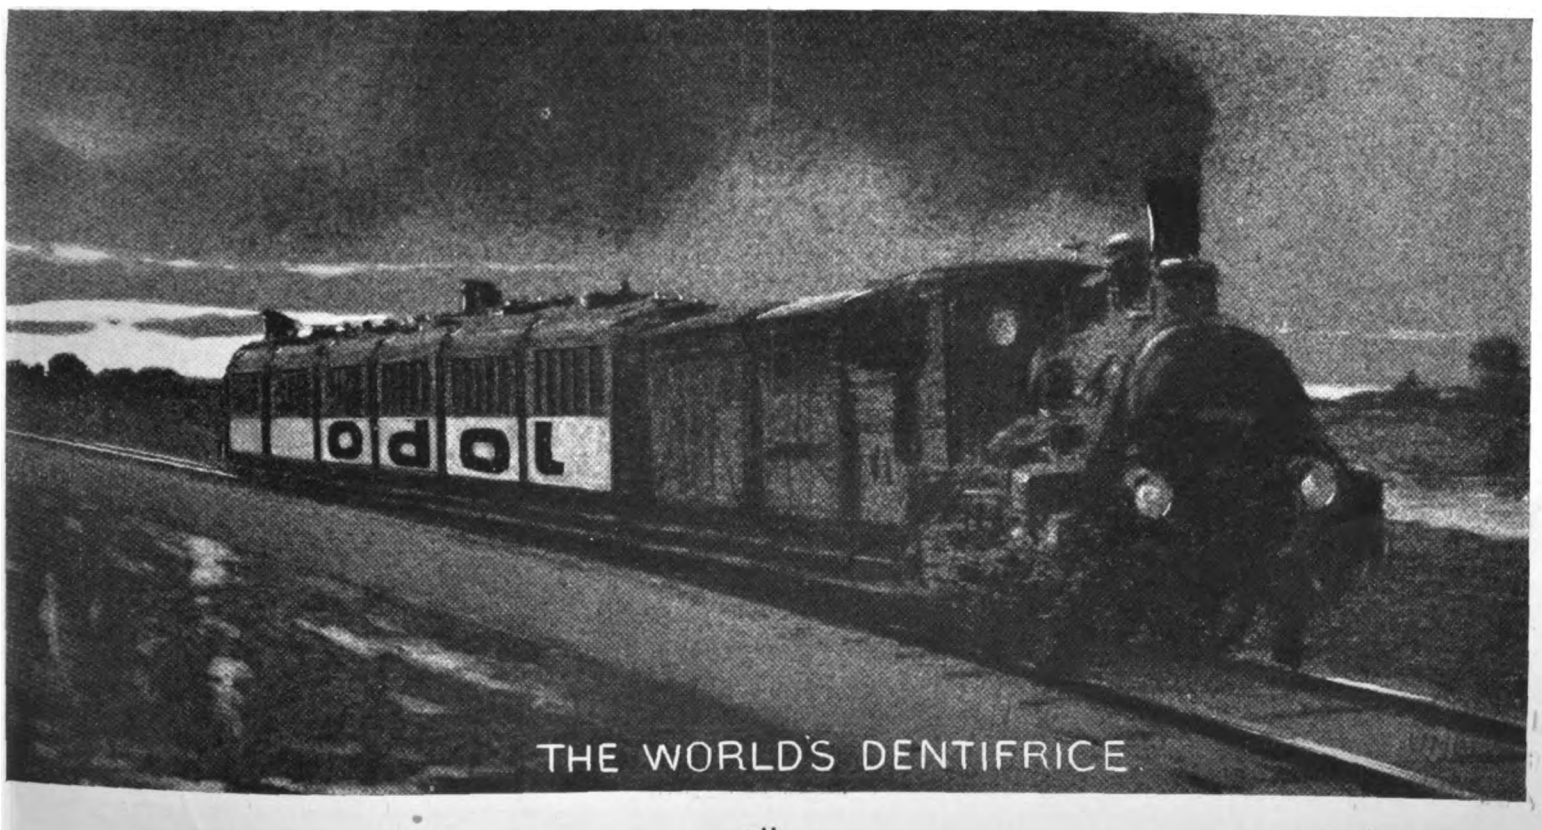
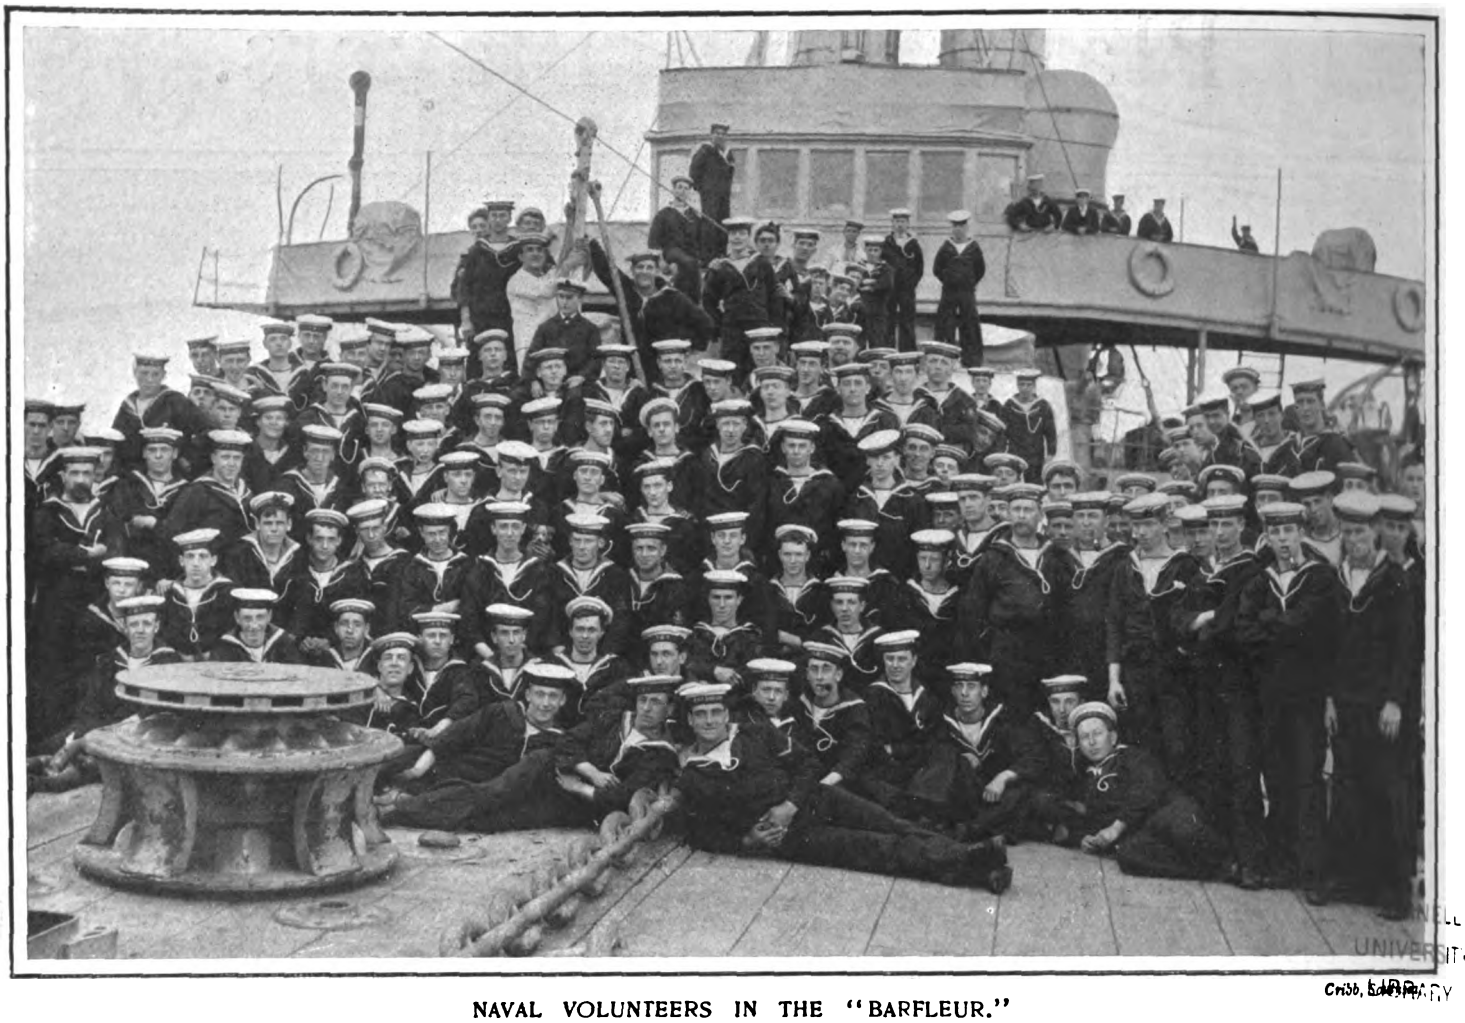
MRS. SEYMOUR HICKS IN HER NEW MOTOR.

Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Hicks are taking a well-earned holiday in Cornwall with their two children.



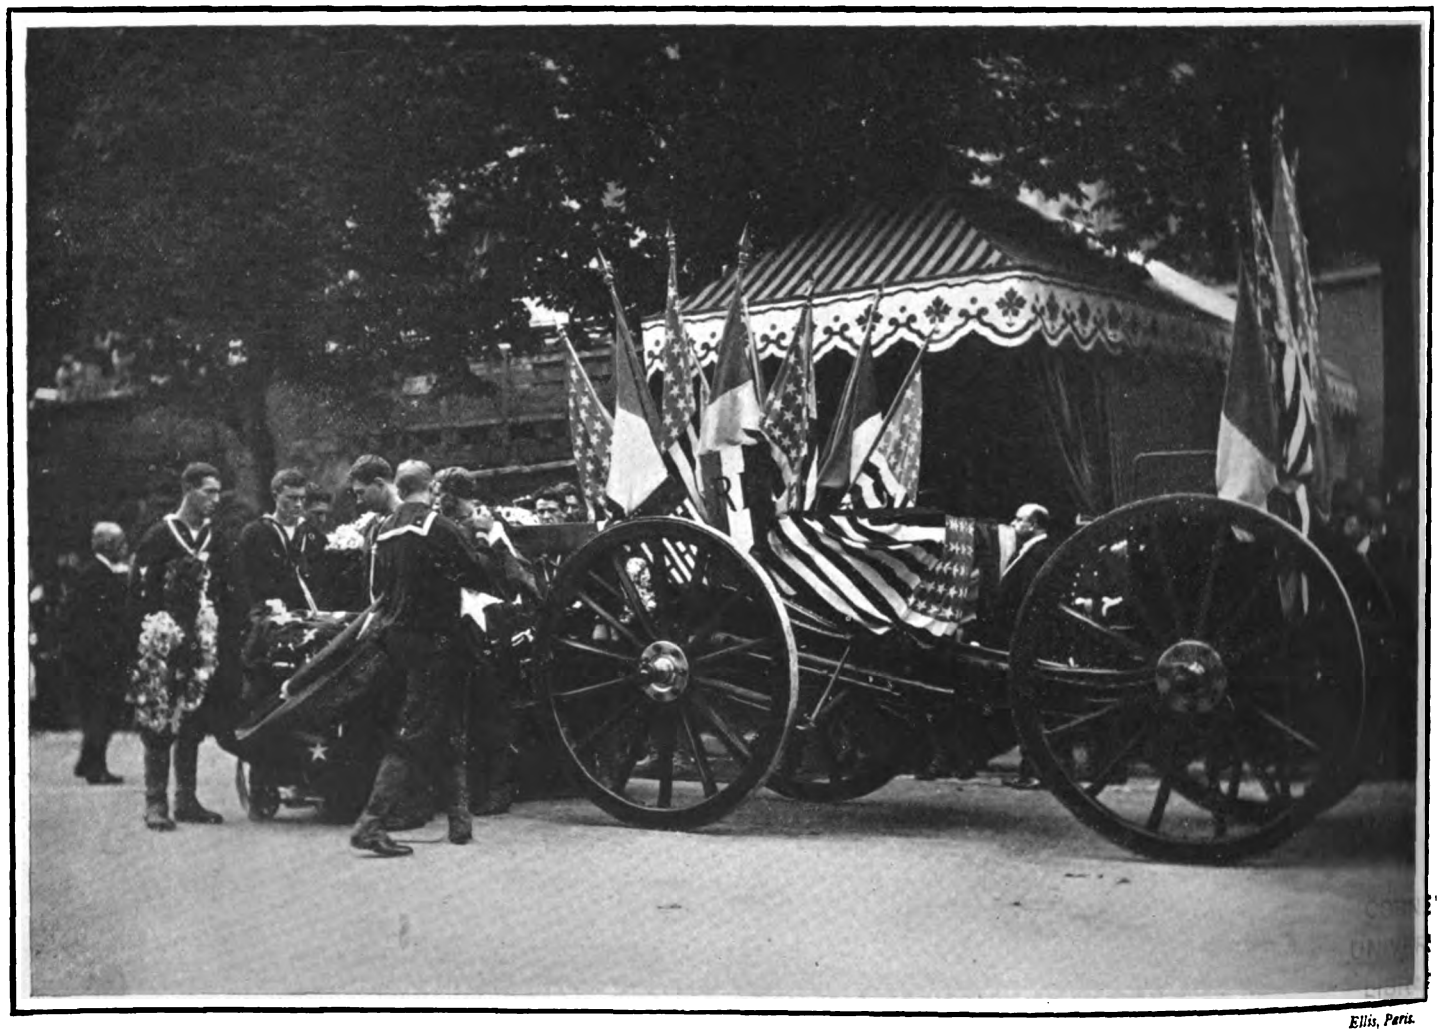
Digitized by Google



Cribb, Southsea.

NAVAL VOLUNTEERS IN THE "BARFLEUR."

The first cruise of Naval Volunteers belonging to the London division was a great success, officers and men settling down to sea-life readily and easily; and although most of them are City men accustomed to fairly luxurious conditions of life, they found messing on the lower deck a very agreeable way of spending their holiday.



Ellis, Paris.

THE OBSEQUIES OF ADMIRAL PAUL JONES.

Last week the remains of Admiral John Paul Jones, which were discovered in Paris by General Horace Porter after a long search, were transferred to the United States cruiser "Brooklyn," flag-ship of Admiral Sigsbee's special service squadron, and on board that vessel have been carried to America, where they will be given a national resting-place.

Digitized by Google

Baptist World Congress, 1905.

G.W.R.

Special Travel Facilities.

DELIGHTFUL EXCURSIONS TO

MILTON'S COTTAGE & PENN'S BURIAL PLACE, CHALFONT ST. GILES, WINDSOR CASTLE, THE THAMES VALLEY, OXFORD, STRATFORD-ON-AVON,

etc., etc., etc.

For details, Fares and Time Tables, see Special Leaflets obtainable either at the Secretary's Office, Exeter Hall. 170b, Strand, 24, Charing Cross, or at Superintendent's Office, Paddington Station.

N.B.—Every American or Colonial Visitor should procure "HISTORIC SITES AND SCENES OF ENGLAND," a beautifully illustrated volume published by the G.W.R. and pronounced by the whole Press to be the best book of the kind ever issued. Price 1s., obtainable at the above addresses.

The British Medical Journal says: "Benger's Food has by its excellence established a reputation of its own."

BENGER'S Food

for Infants, Invalids, and the Aged

Delicious, Nutritive, Digestible.

BENGER'S FOOD with milk forms a dainty, delicious, and most easily digested cream. Infants thrive on it, and delicate or aged persons enjoy it.

Benger's Food is sold by Chemists, &c., everywhere.

VOGELER'S CURATIVE COMPOUND

PURIFIES THE BLOOD AND CURES INDIGESTION,

CONSTIPATION, LIVER ILLS, SKIN DISEASES.

"I must honestly say your Vogeler's Curative Compound has done me a lot of good. My face and neck are quite clear of the Eczema, and I feel so much better in every respect since taking the medicine. I used to have indigestion and wind very bad after eating, but I am now quite free from both these ailments."

(Signed) Miss S. Morris,

June 2nd, 1904. Ash Cottage, Court Road, Malvern.

Price 1/1½ and 2/6; of all Chemists.

LARGE FREE SAMPLE

sent on receipt of penny stamp for postage (mentioning this paper) by the Sole Proprietors,

ST. JACOBS OIL, Ltd., 45, Farringdon Road, London.

ROBINSON & CLEAVER, Ld., BELFAST.

REGENT ST. & CHEAPSIDE, LONDON; and LIVERPOOL.

Manufacturers to His Majesty the King and H.R.H. the Princess of Wales.

Carriage paid on orders of 20s. upwards in the United Kingdom.

IRISH Collars—Gentlemen's 4-fold, from 4/11 per doz.
Cuffs—For Ladies or Gentlemen, from 5/11 per doz.

COLLARS, CUFFS, AND SHIRTS.

Samples and Illustrated Price Lists Post Free.

Shirts—Fine Quality Long-cloth, with 4-fold pure Linen Fronts and Cuffs, 35/6 per half-doz. (to measure, 2/- extra).

Old Shirts made good as New with good Materials in neckband, cuffs, and front, for 14/- the half-doz.

N.B.—To prevent delay all Letter Orders and Enquiries for Samples of above goods should be sent direct to Belfast.

ALWAYS READY FOR USE. NEVER REQUIRES GRINDING.

KROPP RAZOR

Each Razor in a Case.

BLACK HANDLES, 5/6. IVORY HANDLES, 7/6.

A PLEASURE TO USE.

Wholesale: OSBORNE, GARRETT & Co., London, W.

GRANDE·MAISON·DE·BLANC

PARIS.
6, BOULEVARD DES CAPUCINES.

LONDON, W.
62, NEW BOND STREET.

(No Branch in America)

Table & Bed Linen, Handkf's, etc.

Woven by Hand on our own Looms.

LADIES' LINGERIE

LOUVET Frères, Proprietors. O. BOYER, Director, formerly of New York.

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

THE death of Mr. John Hay is a severe blow to the peace of the world and the dignity of American politics. As a soldier, he was Secretary-Adjutant to President Lincoln, and served through the Civil War; as Ambassador he made himself as popular in London as had James Russell Lowell before him. Here, however, we are chiefly concerned with him as a man of letters. He was a leader-writer on the New York Tribune for five years; he wrote a delightful volume, "Castilian Days," full of the fascination of Spain, which his countrymen, Washington Irving and John Lathrop Motley, had also experienced; and he wrote, with Mr. John G. Nicolay, a very important life of his old chief, President Abraham Lincoln.

Mr. John Hay.

* * *

AND yet, now he is dead, people are talking far more about a little parergon of his than of his more dignified labours—"The Pike Country Ballads" and "Little Breeches." These homely, plain-spoken little ballads, with their strong sentiment and freedom of expression, went straight to the hearts of the American people, and soon became quite as popular in England. Whether they were meant to be taken seriously or not is a question that is little likely to be settled. The pros and cons of the case may be found discussed in the Academy of last week. On the one hand, it is said that Mr. Hay wrote them as a skit on the ballads of Bret Harte, just to see how much sentiment his public could stand, and found to his surprise that they could stand all he gave them, and more! Others hold that they were written with serious intent. After all, it does not much matter. There they are, and skits or not, they are capital in their way.

Little Breeches.

* * *

COLONEL HAGGARD'S "Regent of the Roués" (Hutchinson) is in many ways the best of his French series, although for some unaccountable reason he has revived the old and exploded legends of the "man with the iron mask," and devotes three chapters to commonplaces about Watteau, Voltaire, and Montesquieu. Colonel Haggard is gradually giving up his literary mannerisms and quaint inversions of phrase, and many parts of his new book are of almost absorbing interest. As far as that man of mystery, John Law, is concerned, he is certainly quite at home, and he tells with considerable humour the story of that brief period of unbridled licence when France, according to the frank confession of the pleasure-loving and selfish Regent himself, was "governed by a rascal and a pander." He might have truthfully added—by a brace of professed Atheists, and a third who hid his free thought by a cardinal's hat. One of the cleverly drawn but somewhat outspoken pen-pictures of the ladies of that short but dissolute period is devoted to the romantic story of the beautiful Circassian, Mlle. Aïssé, whose conduct in many ways contrasts favourably with that of the other grandes dames of the Palais Royal.

The Regent of the Roues.

MLLE. AISSE.

From "The Regent of the Roués," by Lieutenant-Colonel Andrew Haggard, D.S.O. (Hutchinson and Co.)

* * *

MR. J. M. DENT is making rapid progress with his edition of the "Complete Works of Count Tolstoy," translated from the original Russian and edited by Professor Leo Wiener, and sold at the very cheap sum of 3s. 6d. net each volume. Volumes XVII. and XVIII. have just appeared, and contain the well-known sociological work, "What shall we do then?" and other collected papers, including some of the religious writings. The edition is very handsome, well printed, and illustrated by a frontispiece to each volume; and it gives English readers the opportunity of becoming acquainted with the many-sided mental activity of one of the most extraordinary and original geniuses of our epoch, who made a reputation in England years ago with his novels, but has since developed into the man whom, for all his revolutionary opinions and outspoken plainness, the Russian Government is afraid to touch. He is a little god to the peasantry, and though the Russian censorship can rob his books and other writings of some of their sting, it cannot nullify his influence. Fortunately for his English readers, Professor Wiener has been able to secure the writings of Tolstoy as Tolstoy wrote them.

Tolstoy.

* * *

AT the same time Messrs. Constable are continuing their edition of Tolstoy at 2s. 6d. net each volume. This translation is the work of the capable hands of Mr. and Mrs. Aylmer Maude, who have Tolstoy's written approval of their work, and print it in the volume before us, which is Volume XX., containing three plays: "The Power of Darkness," "The First Distiller," and "Fruits of Culture." Between these two excellent editions let buyers choose. At any rate, there will be no excuse now for not knowing one's Tolstoy.

Another Tolstoy.

* * *

MR. MURRAY has reprinted John Drinkwater's "History of the Siege of Gibraltar, 1779—1783." The book was first published in 1785. John Drinkwater was a captain in the 72nd Regiment or Royal Manchester Volunteers, and his history was compiled from "observations daily noted down upon the spot, for my own satisfaction and improvement, assisted by the information and remarks of several respectable characters." All to whom the book is unknown will be well advised to make its acquaintance in Mr. Murray's good and cheap reprint, which may be had for half-a-crown, and is well illustrated, some of the plates being reproductions of engravings in the original edition.

The Siege of Gibraltar.

* * *

COLONEL W. T. DOONER, formerly commanding 1st Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers and 87th Regimental District, and late A.A.G. Thames District, has sent us his pamphlet on "The Infantry of our Army and Mr. Arnold-Forster's Proposals" (Simpkin, Marshall, and Co.). Colonel Dooner compares the views expressed by Mr. Arnold-Forster in 1902 with the scheme he has officially brought before the country of late, and which he intends, apparently, to carry through; and proceeds to examine that scheme in detail and comment on its probable results on the working of the Infantry. When an officer rushes into print (we hardly reckon letters to The Times) we may be sure he has something to say; and this is certainly the case with Colonel Dooner. His pamphlet voices the opinions, we make no doubt, of hundreds of practical soldiers who can tell from their own experience what the effect of the new proposals will be on the working of that arm of the Service; and his opinions, clearly and temperately expressed, should be read and pondered by all who are interested or concerned in the subject. They are too important and technical to examine in this column, and we must content ourselves with mentioning the existence of the brochure.

Infantry and Army Reform.

* * *

MR E. F. BENSON has moved far, in his new novel, "The Image in the Sand" (Heinemann), from the "Society" stories with which he burst upon a delighted world. Already before, in "The Luck of the Vails," he had touched upon the supernatural. In "The Image in the Sand" he is deep in it. The scene is Egypt, the ancient home of mystery, and very early in the book we find ourselves in an old temple by a lake, where a spiritualistic séance is going on, and our heroine enters to find her father present at it, and to be "possessed" at once by the demon just raised. The story is in essence a story of Marguerite and Faust, with the important difference that Marguerite does not fall. The book is full of vague mystery, full, too, of excitement, and in places it sets one's hair standing on end. There is a breadth and a variety about the book that give it importance, and mark an advance in Mr. Benson's powers.

The Image in the Sand.

* * *

INTENDING holiday-makers who want to find out where to go this summer (if we have any) could not do better than apply, so to speak, on the spot for all information they require. This is easier nowadays than it used to be, owing to the capital little series of handbooks to various health resorts which are published for their respective corporations, councils, etc., by the Health Resorts Association of 2, Gray's Inn Road, E.C. We have before us Bexhill-on-Sea, Southend and Westcliff-on-Sea, Rhyl, and Malvern. Each little book contains a full and clear account of the attractions of the spot it deals with, and all the other information that can possibly be required is conveyed by the illustrations and—what is quite as interesting in such a case as the letterpress—the advertisements. The handbooks can be obtained free of all cost if a post-card is sent to the town clerks of the places of which particulars are required.

For Holiday-makers.

---

BOOKS TO READ.

The Rook's Nest, by G. W. Appleton. (Long.)
Rhymes of the East and Re-collected Verses, by Dum-Dum. (Constable.)
Russia, by Sir Donald Mackenzie Wallace, K.C.I.E., etc. New edition. (Cassell.)
Tolstoy's Plays: The Power of Darkness; The First Distiller; Fruits of Culture. Translated by Louise and Aylmer Maude. (Constable.)
The Native Races of South Africa, by George W. Stow, F.G.S., etc. (Sonnenschein.)
Mrs. Alemere's Elopement, by Charles Marriott. (Nash.)
A Tragedy in Commonplace, by M. Urquhart. (Methuen.)
Behind the Throne, by William Le Queux. (Methuen.)

Digitized by Google

NEW ZEALAND

THE BRIGHTER BRITAIN.

A NEW COUNTRY of marvellous beauty, with a fertile soil and a splendid climate. No extremes of heat or cold.

No droughts. An abundance of water, yet no rainy season.

An Evergreen Land rich in natural products.

A GREAT SHEEP, CATTLE AND DAIRYING COUNTRY.

Cheap farms with helpful assistance to farmers by the Government. Reduced steamer fares from the United Kingdom to New Zealand for persons with small capital.

No private monopoly of Public Utilities; the Government owns and operates Railways, Telegraphs, Telephones and Insurance.

No Lock-outs! No Strikes!! Employment disputes adjusted by Arbitration!!!

NEW ZEALAND IS THE WONDERLAND OF THE WORLD.

Its Thermal Sights are unique in their extent, beauty and weirdness.

The Mammoth Geyser "Waimangu" (Black Water) hurls an immense mass of boiling water, mud and stones over 1,000 feet high.

Hot Mineral Water and Mud Baths; The Curative Baths of Rotorua, Te Aroha and Hanmer are world famous. Government doctors in attendance.

Baths. Gardens. Games. Music.

and picturesque. Here are lakes of great size and depth—canyons that surpass the greatest of other lands—dense forests with a tropical profusion of ferns and flowers—innumerable waterfalls—monoliths of granite many thousands of feet in height—glaciers, snowfields, and the peerless Sounds, with their 400 miles of inside sailing distance.

TRANSIT is convenient throughout New Zealand. Government railways, Express trains, Pullman and Dining Cars. Excellent coastal steamers. Splendid coaching routes. Hotels, good; charges moderate. Government Hotels, Spas, and Accommodation Houses in many of the principal tourist resorts.

Large Mail Steamers with every modern comfort and convenience leave Great Britain for New Zealand fortnightly. Duration of direct journey, 40 days; via Suez and Australia, 44 days; via Canada, 32 days; via San Francisco, 28 days.

The best time to visit New Zealand is during the summer months, from November to April.

ALL INFORMATION regarding Travel, Tourist Routes, Spas, Baths, Sport, etc., etc., is supplied free of charge by the GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENT OF TOURIST AND HEALTH RESORTS. Head Office, WELLINGTON, NEW ZEALAND. Branch Offices throughout the Colony. Information regarding access to New Zealand, Reduced Steamer

HAULING KAURI LOGS THROUGH BUSH, KAURI FOREST, NORTH AUCKLAND.

FELLING KAURI TREE, NORTH AUCKLAND, KAURI FOREST.

WAIRUA FALLS, WAIRUA RIVER, NORTH AUCKLAND.

The ALPINE SCENERY of New Zealand combines the distinguishing features of Switzerland, Norway and America. The Southern Alps extend for 300 miles. Mt. Cook, the highest peak, is belted by the largest glaciers in the temperate regions—the Tasman being 18 miles long and 2 miles wide. Near the foot of Mt. Cook is the Hermitage Hotel. Government guides, Alpine huts, and all necessary Alpine equipment available for use of visitors.

The LAKES of New Zealand are most pleasing in their charm of colour, contour and environment. Rotorua, Rotoiti, Taupo, and Waikaremoana in the North Island; Manapouri, Wakatipu, Te Anau, Wanaka, Kanieri and Mahinapua in the South Island are the most notable. The Lakes of the South Island are surrounded by mountain scenery of singular beauty and magnificence. Steamers and Power Launches. Good Hotels.

The WEST COAST FIORDLAND is indescribably wild

Fares, Settlement, Commerce, Industries, Travel, etc., etc., also supplied at the Office of the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, London—Mr. J. G. Gow, Commercial Agent for New Zealand, Durban, South Africa, also supplies general information respecting New Zealand.

Minister for Tourist and Health Resorts: Hon. Sir Joseph G. Ward, K.C.M.G. Superintendent: T. E. Donne, Wellington, New Zealand. The Superintendent invites correspondence.

See Tourist Department's "Itinerary of Travel" and descriptive Guide Books.

An International Exhibition of Products, Manufactures, Arts, Sciences, Amusements, etc., etc., is to be held by the Government of New Zealand in Hagley Park, Christchurch City, commencing 1st November, 1906, and terminating April, 1907. Full particulars obtainable from the Agent-General for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, S.W.

OKOROIRE.

HOT SPRINGS AND SANATORIUM HOTEL.

One of the finest Health Resorts in the Thermal District.

The first place of interest en route to Rotorua, New Zealand.

Delightful NATURAL HOT MINERAL BATHS, free to Guests. Sufferers from Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Affection of the Eyes, Skin Diseases, etc., are often permanently cured by these waters.

CLIMATE.—Beautifully clear and bracing atmosphere, charming surroundings.

SPORT.—The Streams in the hotel grounds are exceedingly well-stocked with Trout. Plenty of Game, viz.: Pheasants, Virginian Quail, Wild Duck, Hares, and Deer. Lawn Tennis, Golf, and Croquet.

The drive from Okoroire to Rotorua is one of the most beautiful in New Zealand.

T. MARTIN,
Manager.

NEW ZEALAND.

THE GRAND HOTEL, ROTORUA.

Situated in the Centre of the Hot Lakes District.

Patronised by T.R.H. The Prince and Princess of Wales.

THE HOTEL is in the immediate neighbourhood of the beautifully laid-out Government Gardens, wherein are situated the celebrated "Priest," "Rachel," "Postmaster," "Duchess," and other mineral baths, the curative properties of which are world famous. It has magnificent and lofty apartments, spacious promenade, balconies, snug alcoves, and luxuriously-appointed drawing, music, conversation, reading, smoking, and billiard rooms, perfect sanitation, and is lighted throughout by electricity.

BATH CHAIRS and attendance provided to convey invalids to or from the various bath houses. Tariff 12/6 per day inclusive.

W. I. LEES, Manager.

THE GEYSER HOTEL,

WHAKAREWAREWA, ROTORUA.

Situated in close proximity to the wonderful Geysers and Maori Settlement.

Visitors staying at the Geyser Hotel have continued opportunity of witnessing them as they can be seen plainly from the verandah of the Hotel, also of studying native life and customs.

The Hotel possesses its own private hot and cold curative mineral baths of which the most valued are the "Spout," "Oil," and "Carlsbad" Baths.

It has lately been greatly enlarged and re-furnished in a most comfortable manner. Electric light is established throughout the hotel and baths.

Coaches run regularly between Whakarewarewa, the Rotorua Sanatorium, and Government Gardens.

Tariff 10s. per day or £3 per week, inclusive. For a lengthened stay terms can be arranged

CHAS. E. NELSON, Proprietor.

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

EARLY EDITIONS OF THE "PILGRIM'S PROGRESS"—ENGLISH, AMERICAN, AND DUTCH. BAPTIST RARIORA.

FEW books in the English language can boast of having gone through such a phenomenal number of editions as the magnum opus of the once much-persecuted and oft-imprisoned Bunyan, who doubtless never dreamed of the possibility of either his humble birthplace or the scene of his sufferings for the Faith becoming, more than two centuries after his death, the objects of a great international pilgrimage. Bunyan collectors are possibly more numerous in America than on this side of the Atlantic, and it is a curious coincidence that the shop of Messrs. Maggs, noted dealers in Baptist rariora, should be almost exactly opposite Exeter Hall, while the "Caxton Head," where a goodly array of Bunyan's books and rare Bibles was lately on view, is in close proximity to the Baptist Church House in Southampton Row. In both of these establishments Baptist visitors to London and the World Congress are sure to find a large selection of the old-world books and prints, which will form so appropriate a memento of their pilgrimage in the footsteps of their great seventeenth century co-religionists. The list of editions of the "Pilgrim's Progress" given by Lowndes is absurdly incomplete, for the author makes no attempt whatever to deal with either the American or Dutch issues of this oft-reprinted and most fascinating volume. Lowndes tells us that only one perfect copy of the first edition of 1678 is in existence. He adds that it is in possession of Mr. H. S. Holford, and is valued at £50. By Messrs. Maggs's permission the title-page of an example of the first edition, which came recently into their hands, is now reproduced. In describing it they published the following note:

"Of First Editions of rare English standard works this is perhaps a most the rarest and most interesting. Only about six copies are known to be in existence, and of these two only are perfect. The present copy is unfortunately imperfect also; it lacks leaf F 1, and the end of the book af er page 180. One or two other leaves are also slightly imperfect. The most important leaf, however, the title-page, is in beautiful condition. The autograph of the original owner is on one of the fly-leaves (William Ridding, His Booke, 1678.) The

THE Pilgrim's Progress
FROM THIS WORLD,
TO
That which is to come:
Delivered under the Similitude of a DREAM
Wherein is Discovered,
The manner of his setting out,
His Dangerous Journey; And safe
Arrival at the Desired Country.
I have used Similitudes, Hos. 12. 10.
By John Bunyan.
Licensed and Entred according to Order.
LONDON,
Printed for Nath. Ponder at the Peacock in the Poultrey near Cornhil, 1678

BUNYAN'S "PILGRIM'S PROGRESS."
The title-page to the first edition, published in 1678.

only perfect copy recorded as having sold by auction brought £1,475."

In the same catalogue figured several other very scarce copies, including one of the earliest Boston editions, the frontispiece of which is also now given in THE KING. Mr. Gregory of Bath had lately three or four exceptionally good copies of the first eighteenth century editions, and the last catalogue published by Mr. James G. Commin of Exeter contained the following item, which will doubtless greatly interest those of our American visitors who happen to be Bunyan collectors:

"Bunyan (John) Eens Christens Reyse na de Eeuwighyd, Vertoonende onder verscheydene aerdige Sinne-Beelden, de gantsche Staet van een Boetvaerdige ende Godtsoeckende Ziele, in't Engels Beschreven door Mr. Joannes Bunyan, several quaint woodcuts (engraved title repaired, and two leaves missing), 18mo, polished levant morocco, gilt edges, by Riviere, £5 5s. Utrecht, by Juriaen van Poolsum, 1684. The first and exceedingly rare translation into Dutch of the 'Pilgrim's Progress,' published in the same year as the second part, first appeared in England."

It is from Mr. Commin's collection that the frontispiece of the eleventh or first illustrated edition of Bunyan's immortal allegory is now reproduced. In December, 1901, a copy of this, bound in the original calf, was sold at Sotheby's for £36. This edition presents the special interest of having been the last which the author, dying in the same year, lived to see. It is of almost or quite equal rarity to the first. No copy was known to a recent specialist on the subject, and it exists at the British Museum in a fragmentary state only. On the back of the portrait is an apocryphal notice to the effect that the plates were first added to this edition in consequence of the favourable reception of the tenth issue. The Early Baptists do not appear to have been nearly as much or as cruelly caricatured as their Quaker brethren. The reason for this is somewhat difficult to explain. The one great pictorial attack on them is the frontispiece of "The Dipper Dipped"—a coarse satire on adult baptism. The British Museum collection of Baptist literature is far from complete, but that of the Baptist Church House will amply repay a careful inspection. It would certainly be difficult to find any more appropriate memento of the first World Congress in the history of the Baptist Church than some of the rariora, the existence and nature of which are now very briefly indicated and described, and which the collector will possibly find in Oxford, Cambridge, Bath, Exeter, and Bedford, as well as in London.

B.

FRONTISPIECE OF THE FIRST ILLUSTRATED EDITION OF THE "PILGRIM'S PROGRESS," 1688

Copyright.
JOHN BUNYAN'S MEMORIAL STATUE AT BEDFORD.

FRONTISPIECE OF EARLY AMERICAN EDITION OF THE "PILGRIM'S PROGRESS," BOSTON, N.E., 174-

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

hold and offer for sale specimens of the
HIGHEST QUALITY
OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE
as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.
EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.
AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.
(Two hours from Paddington.)

Old Brass Stand and Lamp.

THE MISSES
H. & I. WOOLLAN
(Under Royal Patronage)
are showing a
UNIQUE
Collection of
Antiques.
Chippendale, Sheraton, and Hepplewhite Furniture. . . Worcester and Lowestoft Services. Lace, Glass, etc.
Showrooms: First Floor.
28, BROOK STREET, GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

CATALOGUES OF
ILLUSTRATED BOOKS, VIEWS, PORTRAITS, etc.,
GRATIS.
Books and Engravings Bought.
JAMES RIMELL & SON,
DEALERS IN OLD BOOKS AND ENGRAVINGS,
53. SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON, W.

BATH.
GEORGE GREGORY,
BOOKSELLER, Etc.
Write for Catalogues. An inspection of Mr. Gregory's shop should not be omitted by any visitor to Bath. Speciality—Americana. Old Bath. Colour-plate books. Autographs.
Address: 5, ARGYLE STREET.

To Portrait & Print Collectors & Extra-Illustrators.
Kindly inspect stock or signify wants tc
GEORGE SUCKLING, 13, Garrick Street
(next door to Garrick Club).
Mr. SUCKLING undertakes inlaying, arranging and binding of extra-illustrated books.

AUTOGRAPHS—HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS.
The oldest Dealers in Europe. For Catalogues, issued monthly, and all information write at once to
M. NOEL CHARAVAY,
3, RUE DE FURSTENBERG, PARIS,
where the "AMATEUR DES AUTOGRAPHES," a valuable Monthly Publication, may also be obtained.

JAMES TREGASKIS,
"The Caxton Head," 232, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.
RARE BOOKS,
MEDIÆVAL MANUSCRIPTS,
DOCUMENTS OF LITERARY & HISTORICAL INTEREST,
ORIGINAL DRAWINGS,
ENGRAVINGS,
AMERICANA,
CURIOSITIES,
ANTIQUITIES,
OBJECTS OF ART.
Catalogues Price Sixpence.

PORTRAITS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.
ENGLISH—FOREIGN—AMERICAN.
RARE ENGRAVINGS OF ALL SORTS.
WRITE FOR CATALOGUES OR VISIT THE SHOWROOMS OF
M. GODEFROY MAYER,
41, RUE BLANCHE, PARIS.

PENNY—HENRY III.
RARE COINS & MEDALS
(AT MODERATE PRICES)
SPINK & SON LTD.
17 & 18, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.

Bookbinding.—The Bedford Bindery.
OLD-ESTABLISHED FIRM.
VERY MODERATE PRICES. Special attention paid to extra-illustrated works.
SPECIMENS ON VIEW.
G. F. AYLING, 1A, CAMBRIDGE ST., EDGWARE ROAD, W.

THE RELICS OF NELSON AND HARDY.
Those interested in all that concerns the TRAFALGAR CENTENARY should not omit to visit the unique EXHIBITION to be held at the COUNTY MUSEUM, DORCHESTER, Capital of the County of Dorset, which gave England's navy Bingham, the Hoods, Digby, Domett and Hardy. Objects connected with Admiral Sir Thomas Hardy will be the chief feature of the Exhibition.

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

For Spaces in the Register apply to "THE EDITOR."

WANTED.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

Foiiowing autograph letters wanted : — Beau Brummel, Captain Gronow, Frederica, Duchess of York, Mary Anne Clarke. Good prices given.—823, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Letters of Mrs. Delaney to Mrs. Frances Hamilton ; 1 vol., small 8vo. with silhouette portrait, First edition. £1 offered. — 824, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Sporting Magazine, vol. 30, April-Sept., 1807, and vol. 37 (1810 and 1811). Good price offered.—172, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Jest Books, with coloured plates.—173, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Battersea Boxes, with views of Bath and Bristol Hot Wells.—520, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old XIVth or XVth Century Stained Glass. Good specimens.—521, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Worcester China, Binn's "Century of Potting." Reports invited. 12/6 offered.—522, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Swansea China, marked pieces, plates or vases.—523, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Naval Prints published by any of the following :—C. Sheppard, 74, Little Britain ; C. Taylor, Holborn (date 1791) ; J. Fairburn, 110 and 146, Minories (1800-1838) ; Tabart and Co., London ; E. Rushton, Paradise Street, Liverpool ; W. Belch, Bridge Street, Boro' ; I. Houlston, Strand ; R. Sly, 41, Union Street, Somers Town ; J. Marshall, Aldermary Churchyard, London.—237, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good Impressions with good margins of engravings of old London, especially Covent Garden, the Temple, the Strand, Lincoln's Inn.—249, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old Views of the Commanderie at Worcester, or MSS. or Tracts relating to.—251, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

TAPESTRY, FURNITURE, Etc.

A good Specimen of Rock Tapestry. Period about 1640.—410, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

XVIIIth Century Mantel Glass. Must be in three panels, and in good condition.—411, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Original XVIIIth Century Drawings of Bath or Brighton. Also Caricatures relating to.—221A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Large coloured print of Blanchard in "The Maid of the Mill." What offers? From "Bell's Library." —222A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

BOOKS.

A fine copy of Natte's Bath, or would accept copy of Genest's British Stage, or good extra illustrated Life of Garrick.—129A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Eyton's "Antiquities of Shropshire," in good condition. Scarce.—130A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Bell's British Poets. Complete Set.—131A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

A very fine old Staffordshire Dinner Service of 160 pieces, in perfect condition. Crown Derby pattern, marked with crown. Sample plate on approval. Deposit.—520A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Staffordshire Ware, Busts of famous people.—521A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Life of Mrs. Frances Sheridan. Collection of Portraits from Oxberry.—744A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Ancient Greek, Roman, English, Scotch, Irish Gold and Silver Coins.—745A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

To Americans in London.—Antiquities, Greek, Roman and Mediæval Pottery, Fine Collection of Old English Pottery and Figures, China, Oil Paintings, Prints, Coins, Flint Implements, Tinder Boxes, Savage Weapons, and General Antiquities for disposal ; part of my private collection ; single specimens or otherwise. An inspection invited.—746A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

FOR the Brighton Meeting, which takes place on July 19 to 22, a large enclosure has been set aside exclusively for members of the Automobile Club and the Motor Union. The enclosure is situated on a terrace 25-ft. above the level of the roadway, and affords a splendid view of the racing for about three-quarters of a mile before the finishing mark. There is a limited number of reserved seats, which are on the front of the terrace, and behind there is a promenade which extends for 250-yds.

* * *

The Automobile Club is endeavouring to secure a mitigation of the smoke nuisance which has been so much in evidence in the London streets of late, and must be held largely responsible for the exclusion of motor-cars from Hyde Park during the crowded hours of the afternoon. A notice has been sent round to all the big garages pointing out the harm that is being done by allowing cars to emit vapour, and members of the club whose cars offend in this respect will have their attention drawn to the fact. Two or three officials of the club have been instructed to make observations in the London streets and send in daily reports on the extent of the nuisance.

* * *

The Motor Union has successfully prosecuted the driver of a four-horse char-à-banc, who deliberately obstructed a motorist and subsequently ran him down. It is worthy of note that the driver, having disabled the car, drove on without stopping to render assistance. The chairman of the Bench remarked that it was one of the worst cases he had known, and imposed the maximum penalty of £5.

* * *

A magnificent 40-h.p. Mercédès has recently been supplied to the King. The body, which was built by Messrs. Hooper, is of the covered type, seating two or four passengers inside, the 10-ft. 6-in. wheel-base of the chassis allowing ample room for the carriage work without any overhang at the rear. A table, electric light, and a speaking-tube for communication with the driver are included among the fittings. The body is painted claret colour picked out with red, and is upholstered in dark blue buffalo hide.

* * *

The full list of entries for the Reliability Trials which will be held by the Motor Yacht Club in Southampton Water on August 2 and 3 has now been published. It is noticeable that the boats entered are larger, and, as a rule, more powerful than those which competed last year, while the new class for vessels with permanent cabin accommodation is well filled. The list contains thirty-six boats, varying in size from an 18-ft. yacht's launch with a 6-h.p. petrol motor up to a 60-ft. Thornycroft-built yacht driven by a four-cylinder internal combustion motor, which derives its explosive mixture from a "producer gas" plant. In the 30-ft. launch class are several boats driven by high-powered engines, such as a 50-h.p. Daimler, whose cylinders are each 134-m.m. by 150-m.m., a 40-h.p. Fiat, a six-cylinder 40-h.p. Maudslay, a 33-h.p. Legros and Knowles, and a 28-h.p. Delahaye. Messrs. Simpson, Strickland, and Co. of Dartmouth have entered two of their famous steam-launches, and it will be interesting to note how these latter compare with the petrol and paraffin boats in point of speed, reliability, economy, and silence. In price the boats range from the £40 of the 6-h.p. 20-ft. Ashton and Kilner launch, up to the £3,000 which is given as the selling price of the big steel yacht entered by Messrs. Thornycroft.

* * *

The Gordon Bennett Race must be accounted a triumph for the great firm of Michelin, as tyres of their make were fitted to the cars that finished first, second, third, fourth, and sixth. In fact, the race was largely a trial of pneumatics, as no car which was shod with faulty tyres had a chance of finishing in good time. Apart from the excellence of the French and Italian Michelins, the success of the Fiats, the Richard-Brasiers, and the De Dietrich was largely due to the splendid organisation of the tyre-refitting stations placed by the firm at different spots on the course. It is stated that halfway through the race Théry's four tyres were entirely replaced and inflated in the space of 5-min. 30-sec.

* * *

Only three French boats have been entered for the British International Cup, so that there will be no necessity for an eliminating race to select the team which will represent France. The three crafts are "Dietrich V.," "Palaisoto I.," a 12-metre boat with a Panhard-motor, and "Hotchkiss." "Dietrich V." is of a very peculiar design, as the propeller shaft is placed horizontally below the keel, and driven by the motor through the medium of a chain.

ON THE LAKE IN BATTERSEA PARK.

The penny ride round the lake in a motor-boat is one of the most popular amusements in the park just now.

Digitized by Google

"FIAT" MOTORS, Ltd.

37 & 38, LONG ACRE, W.C.

Telegraphic Address: "FIATISM, LONDON."
Telephone Nos.:
3171, 1849 and 1869 GERRARD.

GORDON BENNETT RACE.

Two F.I.A.T. Cars

gain two out of the

FIRST THREE PLACES.

Lancia on remaining F.I.A.T., having made two record rounds, met with an unfortunate accident.

Sole Concessionnaires for Great Britain and Ireland:—

FIAT MOTORS, Ltd., 37 & 38, LONG ACRE, LONDON, W.C.

A few opinions

on the performance of the # 20 H.P. ARIEL CAR.

"Dundee,
"May 30th, 1905.

"I am more than delighted that your car has secured the Gold Medal. You have taken the medal out of an exceptionally high class, and, looking at the figures, they conclusively prove that you have got a right good car.
"(Signed) THOMAS SHAW."

"Edinburgh,
"May 31st, 1905.

"Congratulations on winning a Gold Medal in the late Trials here. It was worked for, as I can testify, in the works and the drawing office.
"(Signed) T. M. CAIRNS."

"Wolverhampton,
"June 5th, 1905.

"Naturally I have been interested to see how the marks were awarded for the Scottish Reliability Trials, and congratulate you very heartily upon the result achieved by y ur Ariel car. Quite apart from the valuable business result you secure from the award, it must be gratifying to you to take the Gold Medal in such company.
"(Signed) H. B. HALL."

"Glasgow,
"May 30th, 1905.

"Heartiest congratulations on great success of Ariel, the car for luxury, finish, style, speed, and steadiness; the best car in the entire fleet. It did not need an observer except to prevent its premature arrival anywhere. I'll be delighted to 'observe' an Ariel and its driver again at any time. Kind regards from "OFFICIAL OBSERVER."

"'Motor World,'
"June 10th, 1905.

"The Ariel Company, like every other firm who have gained a name in the trade, have not attained their high position without exhaustive experiment and trial. To instance one example, I might mention the gear pinions. These were tried in all manner of grades of softness and hardness, but nothing up to Ariel standard was found until they began to toughen them in pitch. In the same connection I might mention the shape of the pinion teeth. The special leaf shape now adopted has only been arrived at after numerous trials of other designs. It is so all through this 'gold medal' car. Every detail has received the same scrupulous study, and the result, as the Scottish trial has indubitably proved, is a credit to English manufacture. We in Scotland can also, however, take some credit for this splendid example of engineering, for the dominant spirit of the Ariel Company is a Scotsman from Aberdeen awa'."

Free trials.

The Ariel Motor Co., Limited,

127-130, Long Acre, London, W.C.

Booklet on request.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

THE delightful Henley Week has gone, with all its picturesque groupings of fresh English girls in the prettiest of summer frocks, sunshades, and charming hats. These latter have been a special feature this year, and some of the milliners have excelled themselves in the dainty muslin, chiffon, and embroidered lawn creations—some with floral trimmings, others with simple swathed ribbons and foliage, and others, again, with the so popular Valenciennes tiny frills. Some, of course, were more elegant, with long ostrich plumes, arranged in most becoming styles, and costly lace shapes with osprey and jewelled clasps and buckles; but the simpler hats always seem more suitable for river wear, and also are more in keeping with the dresses worn on this occasion.

The sales are, of course, in full swing, and the tired mothers of large, growing families are, indeed, to be pitied as they struggle from one department to another, going through their long lists of wants—most uninteresting shopping this. I overheard one cheerful woman, accompanied by several hobbledehoy youths, asking in the boot department for "the largest size boys' boots you have, please." A shamefaced "Oh, mother!" was chorused by the painfully blushing youths; and the mother's reply came distinctly and placidly, "Well, Tom, what is the use of wasting time? Your feet are so terribly large." A murmured "I can't help my feet," and the crowd helped me further on my way. I found some delightful model gowns at Kate Reily's of Dover Street on the first sale days, and wished I had not been tempted at some of the other sales before visiting this one. A beautiful Indian blue voile, with tiny and innumerable strappings of glacé silk, with the dearest little bolero, with loose sleeves trimmed with lace, was only 14½ guineas. Another sweet black and white check, most dainty, had a charming inner vest of pleated muslin and lace, and was only 10½ guineas. A lovely white tulle and lace evening gown with pink ruchings on the skirt and bodice was 14½ guineas, and still another gem in white point d'esprit over pink silk, charmingly trimmed with narrow bands of baby velvet and lace wreath motives at intervals. This was 18 guineas, but well worth the money asked. Unlike some model gowns these were all so fresh and clean. Evening cloaks were dreams of beauty, one in three shades of pink soft ribbon, interspersed with fine lace, and an ermine collar and tie; another was in telegraph blue chiffon.

Bassano.

ELEGANT WHITE CREPE DE CHINE DRESS WORN AT A RECENT GARDEN PARTY.
(Messrs. Charles Lee and Son, Wigmore Street, W.)

Linen gowns at Messrs. Robinson and Cleaver's of Regent Street are going rapidly, so that those who have not secured some of these bargains had better hurry to do so, for nowhere are they to be obtained better or cheaper.

Messrs. Debenham and Freebody's of Wigmore Street have reduced their stock of lovely boas, stoles, and pelerines to most tempting prices, and their well-earned fame for perfectly-cut blouses is a by-word. Some of these at 29s. 6d. are charming, and even those at the low price of 12s. 6d. are equally well cut.

At Messrs. Charles Lee and Son's of Wigmore Street there are some marvellous bargains, which are well worth seeing and buying. Amongst others are some smart gowns from 10s. to 15s. to clear; model gowns originally 15 guineas to 20 guineas are selling at 3 guineas to 4 guineas; blouses and shirts from 5s. to 15s., quite a quarter of the value. The hats are sold from 2s. 6d. to 15s., and the prices of his display of motoring and theatre coats are simply absurd. But Mr. Lee is making these extraordinary reductions because he is going in for extensive alterations, and so is really sacrificing some of his goods.

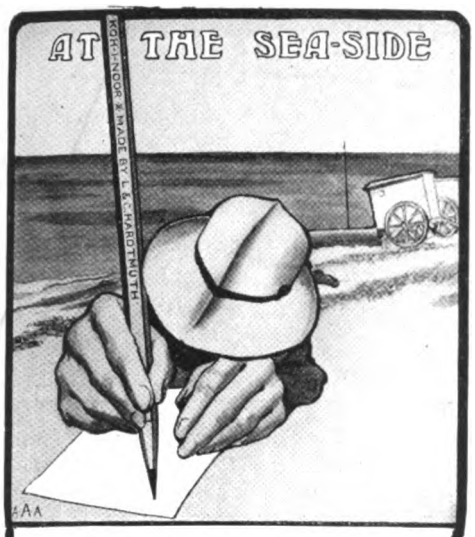
Our illustration this week is of one of the newest models, and was worn at a very select garden party lately. It is of white crêpe de chine, made in a fully-gauged skirt, the lower part being of drawn net, with insertions and frills of lace, and handsome circular motives of guipure. The bodice is elaborately trimmed to correspond, and is most effective. Messrs. Lee have some beautiful gowns, just made for some special trousseaux they have on order, and I have been fortunate in getting these photographed, and hope to show you some of them very shortly.

Messrs. Peter Robinson of Oxford Street are showing some linen coats that are most useful for cooler evenings at the seaside, or for early morning strolls.

For those who are busy in the West End during the sales, Lyons' Popular Café in Piccadilly is a veritable boon, both for luncheons and teas; for in spite of the thousands that visit this nobly-proportioned palace, the ventilation and accommodation are so truly excellent that on the warmest days you can partake of refreshments there with comfort and enjoyment. In fact, I know of numerous married couples who, tired of the eternal servant worries, have given up housekeeping altogether, and take all their meals there, and so great is the variety of Messrs. Lyons' menus that they have not tired of the food there yet, and they have frequented the restaurant since it opened. This should be good hearing for the shareholders.

R. D.

Digitized by Google



Is your Pencil a

KOH-I-NOOR

or only an Imitation?

The best pencil made, for all pencil purposes, by L. & C. Hardtmuth. It has a world-wide reputation for excellence and consistent working quality.

Price 4d. each, 3/6 per dozen everywhere. Of Stationers, Artists' Colourmen, etc. Illustrated Booklet from

L. & C. HARDTMUTH, 12, COLDEN LANE, LONDON E.C.

---

If you want a friend on whom you can always rely, then possess a

'SWAN' Fountain Pen

10/6 to £20. All hands suited. Of all Stationers. Catalogue free.

Mabie, Todd & Bard

79 & 80, High Holborn, W.C.

Branches:—
London:
93, Cheapside, E.C.
95A, Regent St. W.
Manchester:
3, Exchange Street.

---

---

BIRKBECK BANK

ESTABLISHED 1851.

Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.
Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.
Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

---

C. BRANDAUER & CO.'S, Ltd.,

CIRCULAR POINTED PENS.

SEVEN PRIZE MEDALS.

These series of Pens neither scratch nor spurt. They glide over the roughest paper with the ease of a soft lead pencil. Assorted Sample Boxes, 6d., to be obtained from all Stationers. If out of stock, send 7 stamps to the Works, BIRMINGHAM.

Attention is also drawn to their PATENT ANTI-BLOTTING SERIES.

London Warehouse—124, NEWGATE STREET, E.C.

---

TOOTH-ACHE

CURED INSTANTLY BY

BUNTER'S NERVINE

Prevents Decay. Saves Extraction
Sleepless Nights Prevented.

Neuralgic Headaches and all Nerve Pains removed by BUNTER'S NERVINE. All Chemists, 1s. 1½d., or on receipt of stamps to 13, St. George Street, Norwich.

---

SULPHOLINE SKIN LOTION.

Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, Entirely fade away.

---

A Scientific Method of Growing Hair

The Evans Vacuum Cap provides the scientific means of applying to the scalp the common sense principles of physical culture. Baldness and falling hair are caused by the lack of proper nourishment of the hair roots. This lack of nourishment is due to the absence of blood in the scalp—an abnormal condition. It is the blood which feeds the hair roots, as well as every other part of the body. If you want the hair to grow on the scalp the blood must be made to circulate there. It is exercise which makes the blood circulate. Lack of exercise makes it stagnant. The Vacuum method provides the exercise which makes the blood circulate in the scalp. It gently draws the rich blood to the scalp and feeds the shrunken hair roots. This causes the hair to grow.

Test It Without Expense

You can tell whether it is possible to cultivate a growth of hair on your head by ten minutes' use of the Evans Vacuum Cap. We will send you the Cap with which to make the experiment without any expense to you.

If the Evans Vacuum Cap gives the scalp a healthy glow this denotes that the normal condition of the scalp can be restored. A three or four minutes' use of the Cap each morning and evening thereafter will produce a natural growth of hair. If, however, the scalp remains white and lifeless after applying the vacuum, there is no use in trying further—the hair will not grow.

The Bank Guarantee

We will send you, by prepaid express, an Evans Vacuum Cap, and will allow you ample time to prove its virtue. All we ask of you is to deposit the price of the Cap in the Jefferson Bank of St. Louis, where it will remain during the trial period, subject to your own order. If you do not cultivate a sufficient growth of hair to convince you that the method is effective, simply notify the bank and they will return your deposit in full.

A sixteen-page illustrated book will be sent you on request, postage prepaid in full.

Evans Vacuum Cap Co., 923, Fullerton Bldg., St. Louis, U.S.A.

Digitized by Google

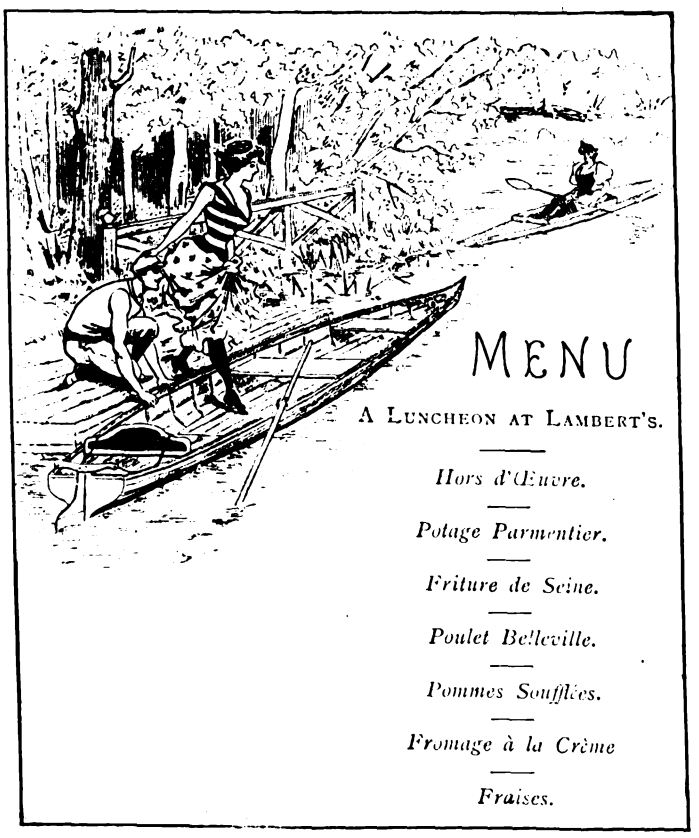
IT seems strange that nobody should yet have hit upon the simple idea of writing a book on Paris restaurants, comprising not only the celebrated and fashionable houses — descriptions of which regularly appear in THE KING—but also the less pretentious establishments, famous for their special dishes, which attract amateurs from afar. Such a book, interesting in many respects, would prove in a conclusive manner that, despite all that has been said and written, culinary art is not on the wane in France. Far from it! The Parisian, be he clubman or artisan, eats comparatively little, but he wants that little good, and knows where to get it.

Some of the "specialities" will not appeal to the untravelled Englishman, who shudders with horror at the mere mentioning of "Snails à la Bordelaise," or "Frogs à la Poulette," and who will be afraid to enter Joanne's noted place in the Avenue de Clichy, with "Tripes à la mode Caen" in big letters over the door. Should you, however, be at all partial to this succulent dish, I strongly advise you to go in, and you will feel grateful ever after. Do not look puzzled when the waiter who takes your order asks you, "Avec ou sans pieds?" All the man wants to know is whether or not you desire an obligato accompaniment of calf's foot. Joanne does things artistically. He knows that tripe must be eaten very hot, and every customer's plate is served on a metal heater with burning charcoal. It is all scrupulously clean, admirably cooked, and costs fifty centimes per portion! The genuine amateur, therefore, consumes two portions, after which he takes the bus home—he feels too heavy to walk. There seem, however, a variety of ways of eating tripe; for whi'st some customers sprinkle the dish with grated cheese, others smother the contents in their plate with mustard or pour vinegar over it. The classical drink is cyder, and the quality served is just the right note, neither too sweet nor too sour. Joanne also does a big outdoor trade, and it is amusing to watch the procession of people coming in to buy their portions and carrying them home in metal cans.

Martin's, in the Boulevard Rochefoucauld, is the home for snails. These are served in the shell very hot and strongly flavoured with garlic. One has to be educated to this, and we are not surprised to see that the company, almost without exception, hails from the South, Marseilles, especially, being strongly represented. But even the Southerner cannot make his dinner off snails. A dozen is about the maximum; after which he winds up with a cutlet and some fruit.

Only those who have explored Paris thoroughly know of the existence of numberless marchands-des-vins, where the cooking is excellent and who boast of a really fashionable clientèle. Take, for instance, Hubert, in the Rue des Petits-Carreaux. Some twenty years ago Hubert—a capital chef—married a cook, a real cordon bleu, and in their little room on the first floor they will serve you a Poulet chasseur and an Omelette soufflée which cannot be surpassed. Downstairs is the wine-shop, where cabbies and workmen dine and luncheon at moderate prices; but the room upstairs is reserved for the "quality," who, of course, have to pay for this extra honour. This upstairs room is much frequented by literary men, and by celebrated actors. Coquelin aîné, an expert in matters relating to cuisine, has often entertained his friends at Hubert's; and it is rumoured that Mme. Sarah Bernhardt made her appearance there once.



But one of the most amusing places in Paris is undoubtedly the little restaurant of the Père Lambert, in the Latin quarter. Why he should be called Père Lambert has always been a mystery to me. Not only was the man never married, but he is a confirmed misogynist, who hates every woman on the face of this earth—except his mother. They are a queer couple, mother and son, always affable, yet never smiling, both of them splendid cooks. The mother's speciality is Pommes soufflées. She never does anything else; but in the course of years she has acquired a skill in preparing them which is simply marvel'ous. She is a virtuoso in the art. At the Père Lambert's the Pommes soufflées are never served with the meat. In fact, it would not only be a breach of etiquette to order them in this way, but the old lady would be deeply offended. No, they are served as a dish by themselves. Lambert brings them on the table, and, having solemnly removed the cover, stands in an expectant attitude waiting for the applause which generally greets the appearance of the beautiful pyramid, wherein each potato seems to have come out of a mould. If you leave it to Lambert to compile the simple menu, this is what he will give you: A hors d'œuvre—generally a curious sausage from his own little place in Brittany—a soup, a friture de Seine, a delicious fricassé of chicken, the famous Pommes soufflées, a salad, and cheese and fruit. All very simple, but first-class in every way.

Lambert himself is one of the curious types in Paris. Some fifteen years ago he suddenly disappeared. He went to England, and performed the wonderful feat of returning after five years without having learnt a single word of English. He stayed, it seems, in Woolwich; but why he went, what he did, and why he returned remain a mystery to everybody except his mother. He has, however, a great admiration for everything English, especially for King Edward, whose portrait hangs in his bedroom. One day some students, knowing Lambert's woman-hating propensities, played him a practical joke of a not very delicate nature. To their surprise he made no remark, but the old lady, departing from her usual reserve, read them a lecture before all the customers in such sarcastic terms that they are not likely to make a second attempt.

Filets Manon.—M. Lambert gave me the recipe of this capital dish. Heat a piece of butter in a saucepan until it is brown. Cut your fillets of beef in slices and cook them in this butter. Remove them, and put in their place slices of foie-gras that must cook for about five minutes. Put the foie-gras on the fillets, one slice on each, and throw into the same saucepan in which both have cooked slices of truffles, add salt and pepper, and let them colour for three minutes. Moisten with a glass of sherry and a spoonful of tomato sauce and some concentrated beef extract. Let it all boil for five minutes on a quick fire, and just before serving add foie-gras the size of an egg that has been passed through a hair sieve. Be careful it does not boil. As a rule the filets Manon are served on fried bread of the same size as the meat and the foie-gras and the sauce is poured round.

Digitized by Google

ECONOMY — HEALTH — PURITY

NO BEETROOT USED.

"GLEBE"

REFINED GENUINE

CANE SUGAR

AND

CANE GOLDEN SYRUP

GLEBE SUGAR REFINING CO., Greenock, Glasgow, and St. George's House, Eastcheap, London.

THE WHITE WINES OF ENGLAND.

BULMER'S Famous Herefordshire CIDERS and PERRY.

For a beautifully illustrated booklet on Cider, price list, and special booklet for invalids, apply

H. P. BULMER and CO., HEREFORD.

BUTLER'S "KEEN" RAZOR

HOLLOW GROUND. SPECIAL STEEL. HAND FORGED.

"I know that Razor, it comes from Sheffield."

HIGHEST AWARDS. GUARANTEED PERFECT, AND BRITISH MADE THROUGHOUT.

"Keen as this razor's edge invisible." (Love's Labour Lost.)

Black Handles ... ... each 3/- & *5/- | Ivory Handles ... ... each 5/- & *7/6
*Per pair, in best Case, 15/-; 7-day set, 50/- | *Per pair in Russia Case, 21/-; 7-day set, 70/-

"CAVENDISH" CARVERS (Regd. brand) keep "an edge that won't come off." Fine Ivory, 20/-; Imitation ditto or Stag, 10/6 per pair. Post Free of all Dealers.

Sole Makers, GEORGE BUTLER & CO., Trinity Works, SHEFFIELD.

DEVONSHIRE'S DELIGHTFUL DRINK.

WHITEWAY'S PURE CYDER.

DELICIOUS. INVIGORATING. HEALTH GIVING.

Made only of the pure juice from the finest English apples—free from chemical preservatives—and supplied to Royalty and both Houses of Parliament (Lords exclusively). Recommended by the highest Medical Authorities as a panacea for Gout, Rheumatism, and Obesity.

WHITEWAY'S "CYDRAX" (Registered).

A pure Non-Alcoholic TEETOTAL Beverage.

"Cydrax" possesses a briskness of refreshing natural acidity, containing, in a somewhat lesser degree, the delightful aroma and flavour of Whimple Cider. It is made only of the best fruit obtainable, and contains no drug or preservative whatever.

For free illustrated booklet, price list, etc., write:

WHITEWAY'S, The Orchards, Whimple, Devon,

And 22 & 23, Albert Embankment, S.W. Telephone 173 Hop.

Bad Soaps bite and sting. Use only Williams' Shaving Soap.

Williams' Shaving Sticks and Tablets sold everywhere. Trial sample for 1d. stamp to pay postage. Write for Free booklet, "How to Shave."

The J. B. Williams Co.,
65 Great Russell St., London.

Preserve your Teeth!

BY USING

FRAGRANT FLORILINE

It imparts a

FRAGRANCE TO THE BREATH

that is rare and delightful,

IT PREVENTS ALL TARTAR and COMPLETELY ARRESTS DECAY.

IS THE CHOICEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.

PRICE Per bottle 2/6 in case.

SOLD EVERYWHERE. THE ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd., Proprietors.
33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE TOOTH-POWDER.

For use with or without FLORILINE.

1/- per large Jar.

SMOOTH—BRILLIANT!

You can run through a tin of inferior boot polish in a week. You can keep a tin of six times as long! For JUST A SMEAR AND A RUB brings a smooth and brilliant lustre that cannot be equalled for all leather surfaces.

WREN'S BOOT POLISH

Send 7½d. in stamps for samples (black and brown), and put them to the test!

WREN & CO., NORTHAMPTON.

THE CLOTH FOR GOLF SUITS.

"Hydea"

is the best English cloth—made of the best English wool—grown on the HYDE Farm, Gloucestershire. It is delightfully soft and elastic—absolutely the best for sportsmen—most durable for out-o'-doors—most handsome for town suits—long thread—refined finish.

THE KING WEARS IT,

and pays no more than you—because there's only one quality at one price. "HYDEA" is stamped on every two yards of the selvedge—that's how you may know it—that, and its excellent surface! Send for FREE Booklet:—

APPERLY, CURTIS & Co., Ltd.,
Dudbridge Mills, Stroud, West of England.

SCOTCH WHISKY.

An old-established Firm of London Wine and Spirit Merchants, holding agency for a high-class brand of Scotch Whisky, are prepared to give liberal remuneration to those introducing sound private business.

Gentlemen should have no difficulty in introducing this brand to their friends, and thus adding considerably to their income. — Apply "Three Star," c/o J. C. FRANCIS & Co., 14, Fetter Lane, E.C.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
The charmingly situated Seaside Resort on the Dorsetshire Coast.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Unequalled for its Marine and Land Excursions. Golfing and Fishing.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Beautifully Illustrated Guides sent free of charge by the Town Clerk, on receipt of cost of postage, 3d.

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

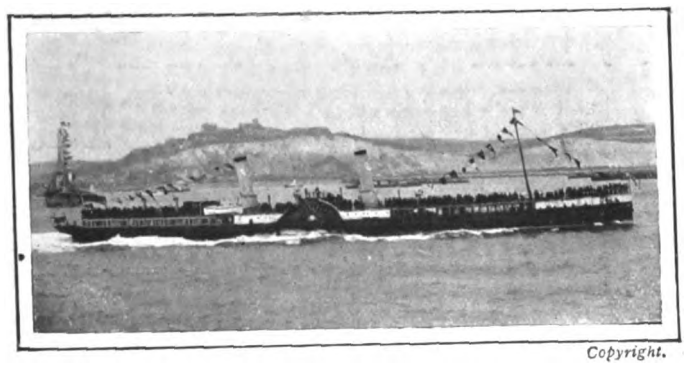
HEREFORD, the centre of the lovely Wye Valley, is experiencing one of the finest summers of recent years, and visitors are arriving in large numbers. The Hereford and West of England Rose Show, one of the largest rose shows in the kingdom, has just been completed. A regatta on the Wye, with £200 in prizes, is also being held. An excellent band plays regularly in the Gardens, the Castle Grounds.

THE reading of many guide-books is a weariness to the flesh; but now and then we come across a literary effort which is a pleasure and delight. Such is the brochure issued from Bude, with its idyllic chapters about "the thundering shores of Bude and Bors," that romantic corner of East Cornwall ranging from Clovelly to Tintagel. To read it is to long to be there, and the magic touches of a master pen seem to sound the thundering roar of ocean in one's ears, to send the scent of the heather and the wild thyme and the salt sea to one's nostrils, and to make one long for the land of the wild Arthurian legends. The book is also beautifully illustrated, and will be sent by the district committee on payment of postage.



Copyright.

THE KOH-I-NOOR

One of the handsome steamers of the New Palace Company, which are now running daily between Tilbury, Margate, Ramsgate, and Dover.

"FORWARD" is the motto of the Great Central Railway Company, and in no degree has it been more manifested than in their excursion arrangements. The first company to give to Londoners the opportunity of seeing the Grand National and breakfasting and dining en route, as also to offer cheap fares to Doncaster for the Leger Day, inclusive arrangements for Stratford-on-Avon, and other places, they now announce cheap tickets for every Saturday to over 200 of the principal towns and places in the Midlands and the North.

OUR readers should not lose sight of the fact that the last day of September is the date fixed for the closing of entries for the great competition organised by Messrs. Kodak, Limited. Particulars may be obtained from any dealer and at any of the Kodak establishments; but it may be as well to point out that £400 in cash and apparatus will be distributed amongst the successful competitors. The competition is divided into two sections—Open and Novice—the latter being specially arranged in order to offer encouragement to the beginner, without calling upon him to place his pictures in competition with the more advanced productions of skilled workers. All negatives must have been taken on Kodak N.C. (non-curling) film, and the prints must be upon one of the Kodak papers.

ILFORD, LIMITED, announce that a selection from photographs by prize-winners in the recent Ilford £750 competition will be on view at the Modern Gallery, 61, New Bond Street this week from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. There will be no charge for admission.

THE Cercle Mozart of Mechlin, Belgium, visited London on Saturday last, July 8, when they gave two grand orchestral concerts at the Naval, Shipping, and Fisheries Exhibition, Earl's Court. The band, which is one of the most distinguished in its own country, numbers sixty performers.

DOVERCOURT BAY has "arrived." To anyone visiting it for the first time this year and seeing the large numbers of people thronging this delightful Essex Coast resort, the fact must be patent that Dovercourt is as popular as any of the larger and more famous seaside places. And much of its attraction is no doubt due to the admirable way in which it caters for its visitors. The splendid Hotel Alexandra can claim equality with any other hotel on the East Coast, either in situation, catering, or luxurious appointments. With its own ballroom and concert-room, tennis and croquet lawns, it lacks nothing to attract the holiday-maker, and send him back afterwards restored bodily and mentally with the most perfect health.

AT Mr. Samuel Coombes's Galleries, 175, Strand, there is an exhibition of drawings by Charles Dixon, R.I., which will doubtless be of interest to the many admirers of this popular artist.

THE reports from Canada indicate that the expectations of another record crop are likely to be more than realised. On the Great Western wheat prairies the weather has been almost all farmers could desire; consequently the crops are making rapid progress, and are now at such a stage that, given the usual weather conditions during the next few weeks, there can be no question as to the magnificent harvest that will be reaped.

MR. TOM BROWNE, R.I., is now holding at the Modern Gallery, 61, New Bond Street, an exhibition of over 200 of his original drawings which have appeared in the principal English illustrated papers.

Phillipse, Ilfracombe.

THE HARBOUR AT ILFRACOMBE.

Three fleets of passenger steamers are this summer running daily from Ilfracombe to Cardiff, Swansea, and Bristol, and the town is attracting more visitors than ever. The influx is largely due to the greatly-accelerated service of trains this month introduced on the London and South Western Railway.

Amusements.

CRITERION THEATRE, W.
Sole Lessee: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Manager: Mr. FRANK CURZON.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.30,
THE AXIS, by Cyril Harcourt.
Also a Romantic Play, entitled:
WHERE THE CROWS GATHERED.
By Stephen Bond, in which Miss Ethel Irving will appear.
Matinee every Wednesday at 3.
Box Office 10 to 10.

AVENUE THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. FRANK CURZON.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.45.
A MESSAGE FROM MARS.
By Richard Ganthony, in which
Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY will appear.
Preceded at 8, by MISS BRAMSHOTT'S ENGAGEMENT.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 3.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. FRANK CURZON.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
To-night at 8.15,
LADY MADCAP.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.15.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Lessee and Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
To-night at 8.45.
MR. HOPKINSON.
An original farce in three acts by R. C. Carton.
Preceded at 8.15 by Mr. Nelson Jackson.
Matinee every Saturday at 3.

APOLLO THEATRE.
HENRY LOWENFELD, Sole Proprietor.
TOM B. DAVIS, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
Every Evening at 8.15.
The Comic Opera, in Three Acts,
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Wednesday at 2.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.
Managers: A. & S. GATTI & CHARLES FROHMAN.
Every Evening at 8.15,
THE CATCH OF THE SEASON,
By Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton.
The Vaudeville Theatre Company.
Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

NEW THEATRE.
Proprietor: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.30,
CHARLES FROHMAN presents
LEAH KLESCHNA.
A Play in Five Acts, by C. M. S. McLellan.
Matinee Every Wednesday at 2.30
Doors open at 8. Tel. 2473 and 2480 Gerrard

GAIETY THEATRE.
Manager: Mr. GEO. EDWARDES.
To-night and Every Evening at 8; doors open at 7.40.
A New Musical Play, entitled:
THE SPRING CHICKEN.
Box Office open from 10 to 10.

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE.
Sole Lessee and Manager: CHARLES FROHMAN
To-night at 9.
Charles Frohman presents J. M. Barrie's New Play,
ALICE SIT-BY-THE-FIRE.
At 8.25 sharp, PANTALOON, by J. M. Barrie.
Matinee Every Saturday at 2.25 sharp.

NAVAL, SHIPPING, AND FISHERIES EXHIBITION, EARL'S COURT.
Noon to 11.0 p.m. Admission 1s.
Naval Construction, Armaments, Shipping & Fisheries.
NELSON'S CENTENARY RELICS.
FISHING VILLAGE. Working Exhibits. Model of "Victory."
GRAND NAVAL AND MILITARY CONCERTS
Go on board the full-size Cruiser.
Real Batteries of 4.7 Guns, Hotchkiss and Maxims
The Cruiser is manned by a crew of 150 Handy-men
PANORAMA OF THE BATTLE OF TRAFALGAR.
West's "Our Navy." Maxim's Captive Flying Machine. Fairy Grotto. Indian Canoes. Burton's Great Red Indian Village—Chiefs, Squaws, and Papooses. Voyage in a Submarine. Vanderdecken's Haunted Cabin. Famous Sea Fights Miss de Rohan's Musical and Dramatic Sketches. Tillikum Canoe.

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Mr. Norval Watson Helme, M.P. | 509 |
| The March of Events | 510 |
| The Theatrical Garden Party | 515 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 516 |
| On the Links | 518 |
| Stock Exchange Tournament | 519 |
| Golf in the Himalayas | 520 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 523 |
| The Fêtes at Brest | 524 |
| Under the Burgee | 526 |
| Yachts of the Year | 527 |
| The 161st Methodist Conference at Bristol—July 19—August 2, 1905 | 528 |
| Merionethshire and her Lord-Lieutenant—An Enthusiastic Gathering at Dolgelly | 533 |
| The Traveller—By Prince of Wales's Route to Killarney | 534 |
| Nelson and the Muses—"The Year of Trafalgar," by Henry Newbolt | 536 |
| Literary Notes | 537 |
| Cricket | 538 |
| A New Floating Hotel | vii. |
| Art in the Sale-room | viii. |
| Leaves from a Collector's Note-book—L.—The Relics and Antiquities of Methodism-Wesleyana | x. |
| Motoring Notes | xii. |
| Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xiv. |
| The King's Menu | xviii. |
| Here, There, and Everywhere | xx. |

TO LIBRARIES, CLUBS, HOTELS, Etc.

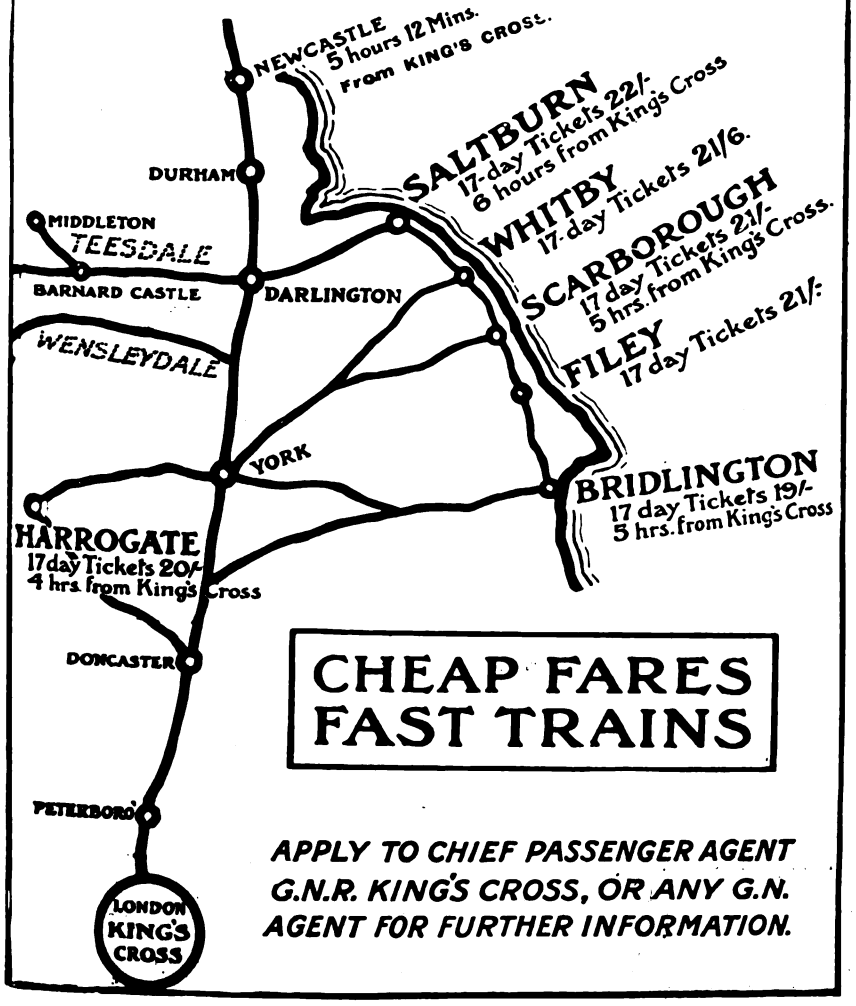
A Reading Case for THE KING can be had post free on application to the Publishers, George Newnes, Limited, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

GREAT NORTHERN & NORTH EASTERN RAILWAYS.

"Twixt Humber & Tweed"

SPLENDID CLIFFS & SANDS, BRACING MOORS, LOVELY DALES.



CHEAP FARES FAST TRAINS

APPLY TO CHIEF PASSENGER AGENT G.N.R. KING'S CROSS, OR ANY G.N. AGENT FOR FURTHER INFORMATION.

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S

HIGH-CLASS

CIGARETTES.

TEOFANI'S Cigarettes receive the Highest Awards at all International Exhibitions, and are Sold by Leading Purveyors throughout the WORLD.

TEOFANI & CO., LONDON.

HANSEN'S

UNKET

TABLETS.

THIS IS JUNKET TIME.

Hansen's Junket Tablets make the best Junket. Each tablet will make a quart of delicious nourishing junket with the least amount of trouble. Hansen's Junket Tablets are double the value of the next best, uniform in quality, and more reliable.

Sold by all Grocers, Chemists, etc., in Glass Tubes, containing 24 Tablets, each sufficient to make a quart of Junket. Sample Tube and Book of over 30 Recipes, 6d. post free from Hansen's Depôt 77, St. Thomas's Street, London, S.E.

MAGNA CIDER.

"The Sparkling Wine of Somerset."

A delicious appetising beverage. Guaranteed genuine apple juice. Declared by Lancet absolutely pure. Strongly recommended by doctors in cases of Gout, Rheumatism, and Obesity. Brut Cider a speciality. Send 22s. for specimen case, containing 1 doz. quarts of Speciality and 1 doz. quarts of a sweeter blend; or 25s. for 2 doz. pints of each quality. Carriage, bottles, and cases included.—MAGNA CIDER CO., Marston Magna, Somerset.

You avoid Dinginess by using a Bissell.

The Bissell Carpet Sweepers are noiseless, dustless, and more durable than brooms.

The Spring selection is now being shown by all Ironmongers, Stores and House Furnishers at 10/6 11/3, 14/-, 15/6 & 18/-

SAME PRICE EVERYWHERE.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

THE COLONEL TAKES THE 19TH (W/HOLE IN ONE!

Head Office:
11,
SO. EXCHANGE PLACE,
GLASGOW.

J. H. ROGER
PROPR.

LESSEE OF
H.M. CUSTOMS (No. 15) BOND,
JAMES WATT STREET,
GLASGOW.

Special Quotations to Golf Clubs.

"COLONEL BOGEY" WHISKY.

GUARANTEED 7 YEARS OLD.

42/- PER DOZEN. CARRIAGE PAID.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS
of every description, including
TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT.
MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.
Handsome Public Rooms, including
2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel, Telephone 56.
Terms from MANAGER.

ST. ANNE'S-ON-THE-SEA

(Near BLACKPOOL).

Contains
FOUR GOLF LINKS (18 Holes each).

Also facilities for
BOATING, BATHING, FISHING, CYCLING, TENNIS.
Splendid Beach. Ideal Holiday Resort.
ILLUSTRATED GUIDE FREE
on application to
SECRETARY, Advertising Committee,
Public Offices, St. Anne's-on-the-Sea.

LELANT, ST. IVES BAY, CORNWALL (close to golf links and station).—Furnished HOUSE, with plate and linen, to LET for Summer months; two large sitting rooms, six bedrooms, one dressing room, bathroom.—"T.B.H.," "Evelyns," Uxbridge.

SOUTHWOLD (best position on the Common; close to Golf Links).—To be LET, well Furnished, for July, and August, the pretty and artistic HOUSE known as "Link's Cottage," containing square hall, two sitting and large recreation rooms, servants' sitting room, seven bedrooms (fourteen beds), bathroom; electric light and telephone.—Apply to Mrs. ROBINSON, on Property.

ON THE BOURNEMOUTH LINKS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hote, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.

THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.
THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.
A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.
Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads.
Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.
Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.
Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.
New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,
Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.
To be obtained from Thos. Cook, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.
Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.
Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL.
SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.
Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.
Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill.

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 10s. Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY, Within easy access of London

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable being on sand.

DEVONSHIRE'S DELIGHTFUL DRINK.—The very best beverage for GOLFERS is WHITEWAY'S PURE CYDER. Refreshing, cooling, and a panacea for Gout, Rheumatism, and Obesity. Booklets free from WHITEWAY'S, The Orchards, Whimple, Devon, and 22 and 23, Albert Embankment, S.W. Telephone 173 Hop.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer)

"Is it a Private House or an Hotel?" is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

Club Houses can be efficiently and economically lighted by

ACETYLENE.

Write H. BAKER, 49, Victoria Street, S.W.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. COX, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.
MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL.—Brinkles, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY.

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method).—Manager, E. DIELMANN.

"SPALDING WHITE" GOLF BALL.

James Braid used it in the Open Championship.

32s. per dozen. Postage 4d. extra.

A. G. SPALDING & BROS.,

53, 54 and 55, FETTER LANE, LONDON, E.C.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.
Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.
Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.
Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.
MODERATE TARIFF.
Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months.

Perfect Sanitary arrangements.
Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE

Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit.

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL.

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

LONDON & NORTH WESTERN AND CALEDONIAN RAILWAYS.

ROYAL MAIL WEST COAST ROUTE.

CORRIDOR TRAINS. LUNCHEON, TEA, and DINING CARS.

QUICKEST TRAIN SERVICE, LONDON, BIRMINGHAM, BRISTOL, LIVERPOOL, AND MANCHESTER TO GLASGOW (CENTRAL).

ADDITIONAL AND ACCELERATED TRAINS JULY, AUGUST, AND SEPTEMBER, 1905.

| | | | | | | | | | A | B | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| LONDON (Euston) ... | dep. | a.m. 5 15 | a.m. 9 55 | a.m. 10 0 | a.m. 10 0 | a.m. 10 5 | a.m. 11 30 | p.m. 2 0 | p.m. 7 45 | p.m 8 0 | p.m. 8 50 | p.m. 11 35 | p.m 11 50 |
| EDINBURGH (Princes Street) | arr. | p.m. 3 0 | p.m. 6 10 | p.m. 6 15 | p.m. ... | p.m. ... | p.m. 7 55 | 10 30 | a.m. ... | a.m. ... | a.m. 6 40 | a.m. 7 35 | a.m. ... |
| GLASGOW (Central) | , | 3 0 | | 6 15 | ... | ... | 7 55 | 10 20 | ... | ... | 6 25 | ... | 7 50 |
| GREENOCK ... ... | | 4 20 | | 7 3 | ... | ... | 9 18 | 11 8 | ... | ... | 8d 1 | ... | 9 49 |
| GOUROCK ... ... | ,, | 4 34 | | 7 15 | ... | ... | 9 33 | 11 22 | ... | ... | 8c18 | ... | 9 10 |
| OBAN ... ... | ,, | 9a 5 | Runs from July 24th to August 19th inclusive. | | ... | ... | ... | 4 45 | ... | 8 50 | 12 0 | 2c10 | ... |
| PERTH ... ... | ,, | 5 30 | | | ... | 8 0 | ... | 12 25 | 4 40 | 5 20 | 8 35 | 8d50 | ... |
| INVERNESS | ,, | ... | | Runs up to July 22nd and after August 21st. | ... | ... | ... | 5c10 | 9 8 | ... | ... | 1 50 | ... |
| via Dunkeld | ,, | ... | | | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| DUNDEE ... ... | ,, | 7b15 | | | ... | 8 40 | ... | 1 5 | ... | 6 35 | ... | 9d45 | ... |
| ABERDEEN ... ... | ,, | 9 5 | | | ... | 10 20 | ... | 3 5 | ... | 7 15 | ... | 11d25 | ... |
| BALLATER ... ... | ,, | ... | | | ... | ... | ... | 8c55 | ... | 9 45 | ... | 2 0 | ... |
| INVERNESS— via Aberdeen | ,, | ... | | | ... | ... | ... | 7c35 | ... | 12 5 | ... | 6 0 | ... |

A—Passengers by the 7.45 p.m. from Euston will arrive at Inverness at 8.35 a.m. up to August 14th. This train does not run on Saturday nights.

B—Saturdays excepted.

a—Arrives Oban 7.30 p.m. on Fridays. b—Arrives Dundee (West) 6.50 p.m. Wednesdays and Fridays. c—Sundays excepted. d—On Sunday morning arrive Greenock 8.15 a.m., Perth 8.45 a.m., Dundee 9.15 a.m., and Aberdeen 11.30 a.m.

A Special Train will leave Euston at 6.20 p.m. up to August 14th, Saturday and Sunday nights excepted, for the conveyance of horses and private carriages to all parts of Scotland. A carriage for the conveyance of dogs will be attached to this train.

For further particulars see the Companies' Time Tables, Guides, and Notices.

FREDERICK HARRISON, General Manager, L. & N. W. Railway.
R. MILLAR, General Manager, Caledonian Railway.

July, 1905.

TRAVEL BY WEST COAST ROUTE

BETWEEN . .

ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND.

SPEED and COMFORT.

Hundreds of Pleasure Tours Daily by Rail, Coach and Steamer, on London & North Western and Caledonian systems.

FISHING, SHOOTING, GOLFING, &c., &c., &c.

ACCELERATED TRAIN SERVICE:

LONDON (EUSTON), BIRMINGHAM, LIVERPOOL, AND MANCHESTER

WITH

GLASGOW (CENTRAL), EDINBURGH (PRINCES ST.), ABERDEEN, INVERNESS, OBAN, AND THE NORTH.

Descriptive Guide Books of West Coast Route on application to Mr. R. TURNBULL, Euston Station, London.

For Tourist Programmes and "Summer Tours in Scotland," "Oban and the Land of the Gael," "Through Scotland" Descriptive Guides, apply to Mr. G. Calthrop, Caledonian Railway, Glasgow.

Frederick Harrison, General Manager L. & N.W. Ry.
R. Millar, General Manager Caledonian Ry.

NEW EXCURSION FACILITIES.

EVERY SATURDAY during JULY, AUGUST & SEPTEMBER, CHEAP EXPRESS EXCURSIONS for 3, 6, or 8 days will be run from MARYLEBONE STATION, to over 200 of the PRINCIPAL TOWNS and PLACES in the MIDLANDS and the NORTH.

ALSO for 3, 8, 10, 15 or 17 days to CLEETHORPES, SCARBOROUGH, FILEY, BRIDLINGTON, HARROGATE, BLACKPOOL, SOUTHPORT, NORTH-EAST and NORTH-WEST COAST WATERING PLACES, and DOUGLAS (Isle of Man).

For particulars of the above arrangements and bookings on EVERY SATURDAY, SUNDAY, MONDAY and THURSDAY, see A B C PROGRAMME to be obtained at Marylebone Station and Company's Town Offices.

SAM FAY, General Manager.

Wesleyan Methodist Conference, Bristol.

The direct route to BRISTOL from London, the North, the West, and South Wales is by the

G.W.R.

For fares, etc., write to Superintendent of the Line, Paddington Station, London, W., or apply to any Stationmaster.

By enclosing the amounts shown to defray postage, etc., you can obtain the following beautifully illustrated travel-books—

CORNISH RIVIERA, 3d.

THE LAKES AND LANDSCAPES OF SOUTHERN IRELAND, 6d.

SOUTH WALES, THE COUNTRY OF CASTLES, 3d.

AND

THE HISTORIC SITES AND SCENES OF ENGLAND, 1/-

in which the antiquities of BRISTOL are dealt with.

Digitized by Google

THE METHODIST CONFERENCE AT BRISTOL.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

VOL. XX. No. 442. SATURDAY, JULY 22nd, 1905. PRICE 6D.

Elliott and Fry.

MR. NORVAL WATSON HELME, M.P.

Liberal Member for the Lancaster Division of Lancashire.

(See page 523)

Digitized by Google

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 442. Saturday, July 22, 1905.

Editorial Offices—20, TAVISTOCK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephones—No. 2,748 GERRARD, AND 7961 CENTRAL.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING AND EASTBOURNE.—King Edward has been down to Eastbourne several times since his accession, and his stay at Compton Place last week-end was quite in the nature of a private personal visit. The Duke of Devonshire's Sussex residence is neither so grand nor so ancient as Chatsworth or Bolton, but it is situated in the lovely scenery of the Sussex Downs, which are looking quite their best just now, and its confines border on the picturesque golf links which make Eastbourne attractive to so many holiday-makers. Compton Place has only been in the Cavendish family for three generations, having been previously in the possession of the Comptons. The only daughter and heir of the seventh Earl of Northampton married the grandfather of the present Duke of Devonshire, and it is through her that the seat took its place among the many other properties of the Cavendishes.

THE KING AND WIMBLEDON. — Among the archives of the local authorities at Wimbledon is a note to the effect that there was paid "for mending ye ways when ye Queene went from Wimbledon to Nonsuch . . . 2d." The ways are kept in better general order now, and no special disbursement was needed on Saturday last to prepare the road along which the King and Queen passed to the opening of Queen Alexandra's Court, the handsome block of buildings where homes are provided for the widows and daughters of officers. In view of this week's visit to Bisley, too, there was something peculiarly appropriate in choosing last Saturday for the drive to Wimbledon. Just five and forty years ago Queen Victoria and the Prince Consort drove to Wimbledon Common to open the first meeting of the National Rifle Association. Apart from Bisley, the King has been this week at Newmarket again for the Second July Meeting, and at the end of the week proposes to spend one day at Sandown. At the end of the month there is Goodwood, and Cowes Week, with the visit of the French Fleet, will complete King Edward's list of engagements before his visit to Marienbad, where he will undergo the cure, and incidentally meet a number of brother monarchs, among them the Emperor Francis Joseph, the Shah, and possibly Queen Margherita of Italy.

Copyright.

THE KING AT WIMBLEDON.

On Saturday last the King and Queen paid a semi-private visit to Wimbledon to open Queen Alexandra's Court, the new home for widows and orphans of officers, which has been erected partly at the Queen's expense.

THE KING'S LETTER.—Should nothing happen in the meantime to prevent it, there will be offered for sale on Monday next a letter written by the Kaiser's mother to King Edward in 1858. It may well be that many people will wonder how these things come into public hands, and many would be surprised to learn the enormous lengths a certain class of collector will go in order to obtain documents bearing Royal signatures, or any sort of souvenir of a member of a reigning family. King Edward since he came to the throne has been especially pestered in this way. As is well known, he smokes a special brand of cigars, with a distinctive band, and to one of these a most amusing story attaches. At Marienbad there was a wealthy American staying at the same time King Edward was there last year. This person followed the King about, dogging his footsteps with a tenacity that would have been creditable if only he had been a detective watching over the Royal person. One day King Edward, reflectively preparing to smoke, slipped the band off his cigar and dropped it into the gutter. Like a hawk the American pounced upon it, and fastening his treasure around his own cigar walked away, and in half-an-hour was showing the weed to friends as one that had been given him by the King. Since that time King Edward has taken to destroying his cigar bands.

Digitized by Google

Lafayette, Manchester

THE KING AND QUEEN AT MANCHESTER.

The opening of the new dock by the King. As soon as the new dock was open, two steamers passed in, drawing up alongside the railway pavilion, which had been beautifully decorated for the occasion by Waring's.

Illustrations Bureau.

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AT NORWOOD AND CHELSEA.

Last week the Duke of Connaught paid visits to the Royal Normal College for the Blind at Norwood, and to the Duke of York's School at Chelsea, where he inspected both the veterans and the youngsters.

Redfern, Sheffield.

THE KING AND QUEEN IN SHEFFIELD.

Although they only spent a few hours in Sheffield, the King and Queen had a very varied programme to get through, including the opening of the new University buildings and luncheon at the Town Hall.

Digitized by Google

Chusseau Flaviens.

ADMIRAL MAY IN BREST.

Admiral Sir William May leaving the Prefecture Maritime after the garden party.

Chusseau Flaviens.

THE FRENCH NATIONAL FETE.

President Loubet and his staff at the review at Longchamps on July 14.

Chusseau Flaviens.

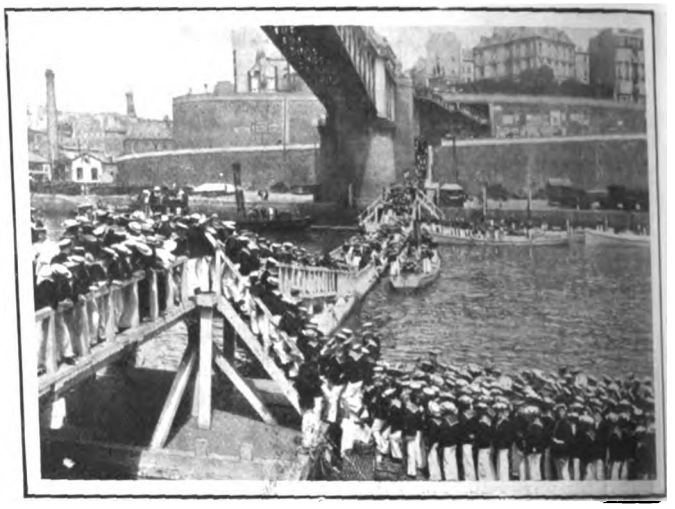
FELLOW-MIDDIES.

Officers from the British and French vessels at the Prefecture Maritime.



Cribb.

BRITISH SEAMEN.

Officers and bluejackets going ashore for the banquet and review on July 14.

J. Russell

THE RECENT HOUSE PARTY AT ADMIRALTY HOUSE, PORTSMOUTH.

Those shown in the above illustration are, reading from left to right: Back row—Mrs. Hayhurst, Mrs. Sloman, Miss Neville, Flag-Lieutenant Hayhurst, and [illegible] Hawkes. Middle row—Miss Douglas, General Sir William Nicholson, Lady Douglas, — Mr. Sto, and Admiral Neville. Front row—Admiral Sir D. H. Bo[illegible] Admiral Sir A. Douglas, Princess and Prince Arisugawa, Viscount Hayashi, and Captain Osawa.

Digitized by Google

Copyright.

ETON v. HARROW.

The great public school match at Lord's this year ended in a draw, the two last Eton batsmen having to keep their wickets up half-an-hour to avert defeat for their side.

Copyright.

THE ASHBURTON SHIELD.

Harrow boys watching their team firing the last few shots in the public schools competition at Bisley. Fifty teams were entered for this event this year, and some very good scores were made.

W. A. Rouch.

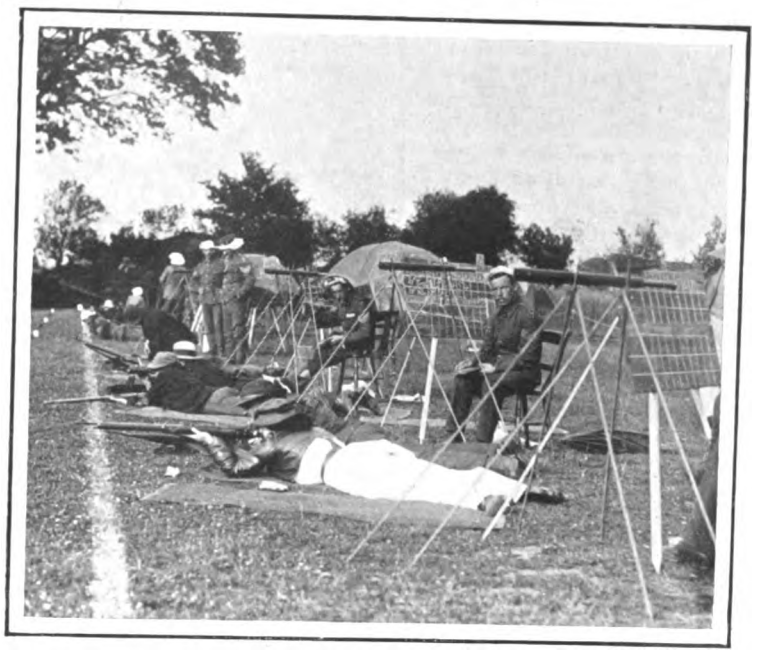
CROQUET AT ROEHAMPTON.

A team of the ten best players who competed for the Croquet Association's Champion Cup. The winner, Mr. R. C. J. Beaton, is standing behind the cup.



LADY SHOTS AT BISLEY.

There have not been so many ladies in the firing line at this year's meeting, but Mrs. Way, the Transvaal lady shot, has done well.

Gibbs, Knaphill.

THE SCOTTISH EIGHT

Winners of the Elcho Shield with a total score of 1,607, of which Mr. G. Crombie made 214.

Gibbs, Knaphill.

THE HARROW TEAM

Winners of the Ashburton Shield with a score of 473. Rugby were second, and Bedford third.

Digitized by Google

OLD CITY SIGNS.—Near the Royal Mint there existed but a few days ago a quaint old hostelry bearing the sign of the Hoop and Horseshoe, one of the least common of public-house names. But the all-devouring maw of "improvement" has swept the inn away, and with it go memories of the time when Richard Wagner first landed on English soil, and of the first night he spent in the new country. Arriving late in the evening at St. Katherine's Dock, with a purse none too plentifully lined, he found his way to the quietest and most respectable house he could. The study of old London signs, not only inn boards, but business signs, is a most interesting pursuit, and the wonderful collection at the Guildhall Museum is a history of the trade of the metropolis which the meanest intelligence can grasp. In the days when Board schools were not, and "the man in the street" was not practised in reading halfpenny paper headlines, signs were very necessary as an indication of the business carried on in the shop, and even to-day there are some old houses still known by the names given them when a sign was the only indication understanded of the people.

SAGHALIEN.—The name that for a decade or more has been a synonym for a penal settlement must now be erased from the maps. The Japanese have no sooner set foot on the island of Saghalien than they find a new name for it, and Kabafuto is the designation they give to their regained territory. We may say regained advisedly, for it is but half a century since that Russia, by a policy of combined treachery and bluff, wrested the island from the then baby Empire. Since those days many fish have been caught in the waters around the island; but Japan bided her time. Slowly but surely she is regaining all the lands out of which Russia has "bounced" her, and she is doing it by a straightforward, honest policy of aggression that is in striking contrast to the underhand means by which the territory was filched from her.

AFRICANDER RIFLE SHOTS.—The only lady rifle shot who has come home for Bisley is a South African. She is a Johannesburger. This is what one might expect, for, owing to the numbers and character of the black population, many of the white women learn to shoot for protection. Mrs. Way, whose tent at Bisley is a centre of interest, is a Boer, and a very clever one. In this she resembles the late Mrs. Colenbrander, who was not only a big-game hunter, but a beautiful and charming woman. She, it will be remembered, was one of the privileged few who accompanied Cecil Rhodes to the Indaba in the Matoppos. Before the Raid, owing to the lawlessness of Kaffirs on the Rand, Englishwomen practised revolver-shooting under the direction of the late Drummond Dunbar. So eager was one lady that, before he could say "three" as a signal for starting, she fired, and shot away the little finger of his right hand.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Copyright.

MISS EVELYN THORNHILL

Grand-daughter of Sir William Howard Russell, C.V.O. From a photograph by her cousin, Mr. Lewis Longfield.

THE SHAH IN PARIS.—From Contrexéville to Paris is not a very far cry, and no doubt during his stay in the Ville Lumière his Majesty of Persia will meet many people by whom he has been surrounded at the German Spa. Although he is staying incognito in Paris, the Shah has arranged to emerge from his seclusion for a short time in order to pay visits of ceremony to M. Loubet. From Paris, all being well, he will pass to Havre for the regatta, from Havre to Ostend, and thence to the Hague, where he will pay a State visit to the Queen of Holland. And persistent rumour has it that the middle of August may find him, like King Edward and the Emperor of Austria, visiting beautiful Marienbad. For, after all, King Edward has decided against Nauheim. The old love has not yet lost her fascination for him, despite the somewhat serious inconvenience its growing popularity gives him.

SIR JAMES FERGUSSON.—Sir James Fergusson, who was received recently in connection with the presentation of sleeve links by the Grenadier Guards, is a notable figure in English public life. Now in his seventy-fourth year, he has been soldier, Member of Parliament, Colonial and Indian Governor, and Cabinet Minister. He was Guardsman in the stirring days of the Russian War, from which he returned wounded and a captain, since when he has served his Sovereign in India, Australia, New Zealand, and London. His last post was the Postmaster-Generalship in Lord Salisbury's second Administration. As a talker, Sir James is entertaining as well as interesting. Not only does he know the Empire as few English politicians know it, but he was intimately acquainted with most of the famous men of the last century. His second wife was a South Australian, and one of his sons married Miss Gettia Williams, a pretty New Zealander.

A MATTER OF BIRTHPLACE.—The pother made in Finsbury as to the birthplace of the rival candidates was rather childish. It might have been offensive, but for the fact that Canadians are familiar with questionable election devices in their own country. There is nothing new in a Parliamentary candidate who is a Canadian. The Dominion has sent us seven members of the House of Commons not including Dr. Macnamara and Mr. Ian Malcolm, who were born across the water by accident, and three who will contest seats at the next General Election. What is new is the use to which such a simple fact has been put. A man is neither the better for being born in Finsbury, nor the worse for being born in Canada. To have suggested anything of the kind was a tactical mistake, which one may hope, will not happen again. It does not tend to Imperial harmony.

THE DUKE OF SAXE-COBURG-GOTHA.—The coming of age celebrations for the Duchess of Albany's son have naturally been marked by a certain formality in consequence of his being a reigning Duke. But as nearly all those who have been present as the representatives of foreign monarchs are blood relations of the young Duke's, there has been a family gathering at Gotha for the occasion. The departing Regent, Prince Ernst of Hohenlohe Langenburg has held the reins of Government well during his Regency, and has done much to make the youthful ruler popular in the Dukedom. Now that he has resigned his power into the hands of the Duke he will to some extent retire into obscurity. Among the guests at Gotha during the week have been the Duke of Connaught and Prince Arthur, who must by now be almost as much at home in Germany as in England, and Prince Eitel Fritz, the young Duke's fellow student. It was a graceful act on the part of the King to send his second son as his representative.

Digitized by Google

THE THEATRICAL GARDEN PARTY.

THE THEATRE ROYAL COMPANY.

Miss Irene Vanbrugh, Miss Nancy Price, Mr. Cyril Maude, Mr. Lennox Pawle, Mr. G. P. Huntley, Mr. Arthur Williams, and Mr. Eric Lewis.

THE GREAT CRICKET MATCH

Ladies v. Gentlemen. Miss Vane Featherstone goes in for cricket à la Jessop.

THE THEATRE ROYAL, ROYAL BOTANIC GARDENS

Where Mr. G. Bernard Shaw's new and original tragedy, "Passion, Poison, and Petrifaction; or, The Fatal Gasogene," was produced. The ladies and gentlemen whose photographs appear above took part in the play.

(From photographs by Bassano, Ltd

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY
Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

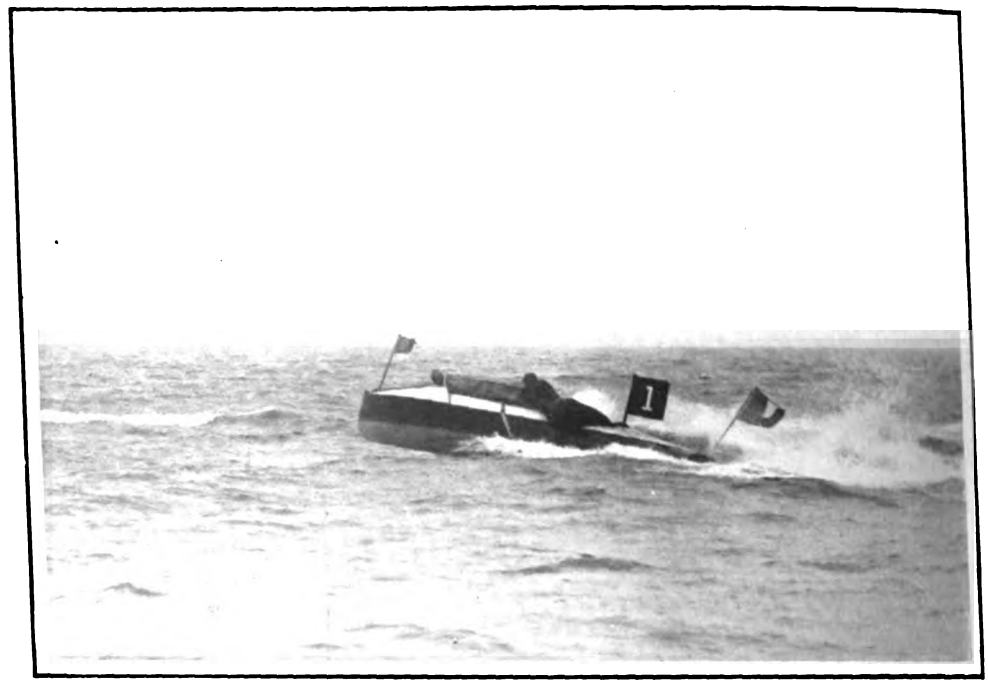
IT is usual among some agents and makers, especially those who deal in the more expensive types of car, to decry what is called the "standard" body. Where the total cost of the car is a matter of little importance to the buyer, he may possibly obtain greater satisfaction by having the carriage-work built in accordance with his own particular fads and fancies; but it is a mistake to believe all the hard things that are said of the bodies turned out in series by the makers themselves or their appointed coach-builders. The cheap French tonneau, costing from £20 to £25, is often a very poor piece of work, though I have known some that looked well after a year's hard running. The medium-priced bodies, however, which are turned out in hundreds by French firms of good reputation, are usually excellent value for the money, and will stand a vast amount of hard wear. The reason is not far to seek. All the bodies are made to one precise pattern, and the work is probably spread over the entire year, instead of each order varying from the others in important details, and the rush coming only in the spring and summer. As a result there is a marked economy in manufacture, and no temptation to hurry the work. The high-class standard body, as sold by the makers or any big agent, will cost from £40 to £75, whereas very few special bodies can be obtained for less than £100, and from my own experience I can say, without hesitation, that the former represent by far the better value for the money. It is apt to be forgotten by the inexperienced that the maker of the chassis supplies the wheels, springs, and framework of the complete car, and the price charged for the body is over and above these expensive portions of an ordinary carriage.

Those who complain so bitterly of the dust nuisance may be reminded that road dust was a constant source of annoyance long before the motor car appeared on the scene. A correspondent points out that in 1830 this old trouble was graphically described in "Our Village," by Miss Mitford: "Woe to white gowns! Woe to black! Drab was your only wear. If we happened to meet a carriage coming along the middle of the road, what a sandy whirlwind it was! What choking! What suffocation! No state could be more pitiable, except, indeed, that of the travellers who carry this misery about with them. I shall never forget the plight in which we met the coach one evening last August, steeds and driver, carriage and passengers, all in dust." The coming of the railway laid the dust, in a sense, for the highways became deserted and grass-grown; but contemporary records prove that the evil was as great in the early part of the nineteenth century as it is to-day. Nor can the modern car be blamed solely for the modern revival. It is the pounding and grinding of horses' hoofs and the crushing action of iron-tyred wheels on the surface of poorly-made roads that creates the dust which the pneumatic tyre raises into the air. The responsibility for the nuisance may, therefore, be fairly divided between the various classes of traffic, if we except a strong east wind, which causes more inconvenience than all the cars in the kingdom. Reform in road construction is bound to come in the near future, and the next generation will bless the motor for having given it good and clean highways, under a central and economical system of administration.



"LA RAPIERE"

Winner of the cross-Channel race from Boulogne to Folkestone and back on Saturday last.

COMING TO THE STARTING-POINT. Topical

The scene in Boulogne Harbour at nine o'clock on Saturday morning.

Some of the leaders of the motor industry in this country have been giving their views on the subject of motor-racing in the columns of the Motor, the Car, and other papers. It is interesting to note that although their opinions are somewhat divergent, they one and all seem to consider that racing as at present conducted has lost a part at least of its former value. Mr. Austin, the manager of a firm which gained its reputation by building reliable touring vehicles, and has only comparatively recently taken up the manufacture of racing machines, has a high opinion of the educative value of motor-racing, as in no other way can a maker discover "the extreme limits to which he may go in dimensions and design of a road vehicle." He also states that the winning of a race improves the business of the successful firm. Mr. Rolls thinks that useful lessons are still being learnt by the builders of racing cars every year, but is unable to see that the firms who have not the luck to get "placed" get anything to compensate them for the thousands they have spent on the race, the delay in the regular output of the works, the disappointment of customers, and the cancellation of orders. "Racing in its present form," says Mr. Rolls, "cannot continue much longer."

Mr. Edge favours the Tourist Trophy form of competition, and is inclined to think that racing with very high-powered cars will die out, useful though it has been in the past. Mr. Jarrott "cannot say that automobile racing at the present time is of very much value, because the rules under which it is carried out necessitate the building of vehicles which in themselves assist very little in the construction of the commercial touring vehicle." Mr. Jarrott is even more emphatic than Mr. Rolls as to the disorganisation of regular business that results from motor-racing, and his words fully bear out what I have often asserted in this column. He says that the sums spent in racing are added to the cost of the commercial models, and that if automobile racing ceased to exist the factories could give more time to the perfection of their touring vehicles, and there would be no delay in deliveries. Mr. Jarrott is known to have a fondness for motor-racing as a sport, but as agent for a foreign firm which builds racing machines he doubtless knows where the shoe pinches. Mr. Sturmey thinks that racing is played out, and of very little value nowadays to the motor-car-builder. As to its effect on the design of touring cars, he is of opinion that the influence is "productive of harm rather than of good." Mr. Sturmey, like Mr. Edge, has some faith in races of the Tourist Trophy order, if rules can be devised whereby "freak" machines are eliminated.

Digitized by Google

Lord Windsor's defence in the House of Lords of the order excluding motor-cars from Hyde Park during certain hours of the afternoon was particularly unconvincing. He impliedly admitted that electric carriages were free from all cause of offence, but considered that it was unfair to place upon the police and park keepers the responsibility of discriminating between the different types of motor vehicles. If by now the police are really incapable of distinguishing an electromobile from a petrol-car they must be far more lacking in intelligence than is generally supposed. Lord Windsor's scepticism as to the damage that his order may do to the trade indicates that he has entirely failed to grasp the situation. The popularity of the motor is due to the fact that, besides having peculiar advantages of its own, it can be used exactly in the same way as a horsed carriage.

RADIATOR.

Bean, Singapore.

THE MOTOR IN THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

Mrs. Dare, the first and only lady motorist in Singapore, with her Malay chauffeur.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

THE BECKENHAM LADIES' MEETING.
Mrs. Bartlett putting on the 15th green.

THE Parliamentary Tournament was brought to a close last week with the match of thirty-six holes between Sir Edgar Vincent, M.P., and Mr. A. B. Tennyson of the House of Lords. The match was played over the interesting course of Sunningdale, and the result was an easier win than had been expected for Sir Edgar Vincent, by 6 up and 5 to play. Mr. Tennyson's defeat was mainly due to the fact that he failed to hit his tee shots—certainly one of the strongest features of his game. As a rule, Mr. Tennyson is a very long driver, and it is not often that he shows weakness in this part of his game; but against Sir Edgar Vincent, to whom he had to concede the heavy handicap of 8 strokes per round, it was particularly important that, if he were to have a chance of success, the margin of error in his game should be reduced to the lowest limits possible. Unfortunately, however, though playing a brilliant game in the intermediate departments, his uncertainty off the tee made it impossible for him to keep Sir Edgar Vincent well in hand.

Sir Edgar Vincent, the new winner of the Parliamentary Tournament, though not an old golfer, judged by the number of years he has played the game, has made extremely rapid progress. During all this year he has acquired a steadiness and accuracy which have made him a formidable opponent in all matches and tournaments wherein his handicap odds have had to be allotted to him. Almost from the opening of this year's Parliamentary Tournament the prediction was freely made that Sir Edgar Vincent, judged by the extraordinarily good form which he showed on the opening day at Deal, would become the eventual winner of the handicap. This prediction has now been verified, with the natural result, of course, that he will have to pay the penalty of his substantial success by receiving the scrutinising attentions of his fellow-members on the handicap committee. Since the beginning of May Sir Edgar has played a good deal of golf, and in all of his matches he has clearly established the fact that his game is sound, steady, very often brilliant, and, as a rule, straight and accurate. His most notable match before the final with Mr. Tennyson was the part he took in the Amateur Championship of France, played at La Boulie two months ago. He won all his matches with a fair amount of ease, and it was only in the last few holes of the final round that he was deprived of victory by Mr. Crosfield. Sir Edgar Vincent, who is essentially one of our "open-air" members of Parliament, is, of course, well known for his interest in the Turf, while his list of outdoor recreations includes yachting, cycling, and driving in a motor-car.

* * *

The Stock Exchange Golfing Society have just concluded their first handicap match tournament, which was begun in April last. There was an entry of 210 players, involving the playing of eight heats, with thirty-six holes for the final match. Throughout the tournament the play was extremely interesting and well contested in the majority of matches, showing that among the members of the Stock Exchange there is a large fund of excellent golfing talent available. The final was played at Sunningdale

Miss Bishop driving at the 3rd tee.

THE BECKENHAM LADIES' MEETING.
Mrs. Michael at the 4th tee.

Miss Fenn driving towards the 15th green

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

last week between Mr. E. A. Smirke and Mr. Hugh S. Castle, both scratch players. After a very good match, Mr. Smirke, who has played twice in the Amateur Championship, gained a victory by 4 and 3 to play. In the afternoon Mr. Castle was 7 down, with 13 to play, and made a gallant effort to stave off defeat. The match—illustrations of which are given this week—was followed by a large number of spectators.

* * *

The London Solicitors' Golfing Society held their summer meeting at Ashford Manor last week, and a very interesting gathering was the result. The President's Cup was won by Mr. Leslie Blunt with a net score of 77, and Mr. O'Brien Taylor and Mr. H. C. Meyers tied for the prize given for the best nine holes.

* * *

During the first three weeks of August there will be a series of prizes competed for at Baden-Baden, with the somewhat high-sounding titles of "The Grand International Amateur Handicap Challenge Cup," open to all comers, "The Open Amateur Championship of Baden," and "The Open Amateur Championship of the Black Forest." There will be other competitions arranged for, and in expectation of a good attendance of players a number of improvements have been carried out on the links, with the object of making them longer, as well as more varied.

* * *

All over Switzerland at present arrangements are being made for the British golfer bent upon spending his holidays abroad. Tournaments are being organised among all the clubs in places where the British tourist is fond of passing a month or two every autumn; and the advantage of golf even among the mountains of Switzerland is that though the male members of the party may prefer to enjoy the genial exhilaration of mountaineering, the ladies can always vary their amusement by taking part in two or three of the open tournaments for handsome prizes. It is generally found, therefore, that the open meetings arranged for lady competitors are well attended by players representative of America, the British Isles, and Europe.

THE FINAL ROUND.

A portion of the crowd following the finalists in the Stock Exchange Tournament - going towards the 3rd green.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE TOURNAMENT.

This tournament, begun in April last with an entry of 210 players, was won at Sunningdale last week by Mr. E. A. Smirke (scratch), who beat Mr. Hugh S. Castle (scratch) by 4 and 3 to play. Mr. Smirke has played twice in the Amateur Championship.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE TOURNAMENT.

Mr. Hugh S. Castle, the runner-up, playing out of the rough at Sunningdale.

In France also there will be a good deal of open competition play throughout August and September. From Dieppe, Boulogne, and Le Touquet announcements are forthcoming of the great autumn prize gatherings. This fact shows that all those abroad who cater for the health and the amusement of British visitors have found it to be, not only expedient, but absolutely necessary, if the attractiveness of resorts was to be sustained, to give visitors an opportunity of indulging in the favourite pastime followed by them at home. It is a late development in the features of foreign watering places, but no one can doubt its wisdom from the point of view of the municipal and other authorities abroad who take the enlightened view that their own prejudices and tastes must give way to the fancies and needs of their visitors.

* * *

The final arrangements for the professional foursome for £400 between Vardon and Taylor v. Braid and Herd are now completed. As at present fixed, the match will be played over three English greens and one in Scotland. The three English greens are Deal, August 2, Lytham and St. Anne's, August 16, Sunningdale, August 23, while St. Andrews, on August 9, is chosen for the second round. It is possible, however, that the people who are using St. Andrews at this time of the year may not be very willing to give up the crowded green for a whole day's play to the foursome, and make an appeal to the loyalty of golfers as a body. If there should be a whisper of unwillingness, it should be easy for the authorities governing the foursome to secure a private course in Scotland quite accessible to the large towns. In any case care should be taken beforehand to see that there will be no unwillingness shown to the inroad of the foursome at St. Andrews during the busiest golfing month of the year.

* * *

The Bromley and Bickley Club have brought two interesting competitions to a close in the final for the Huson-Morris Challenge Cup and the Madden Championship Challenge Trophy. In the first-named competition, the final was played between Mr. E. F. Evans and Mr. G. C. Bower. At the end of thirty-six holes the two players were all square, and other nine holes were played in order to decide the tie. These also were halved, and the decision of the tie was carried to the remaining nine holes, when

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

Mr. Evans won the match by 3 and 2 to play. Mr. Evans was also one of the final players for the Madden Trophy, his opponent being Mr. S. C. Wyatt, who eventually won by 3 and 2 to play.

* * *

Prince and Princess Gustavus Adolphus, in the course of their honeymoon sojourn at Adare Manor, County Limerick, the seat of the Earl of Dunraven, played a good deal of golf on the Adare Manor links. McGrath, the local professional, acted as their coach, and their Royal Highnesses are described as having improved their golf a great deal during their short stay in Ireland.

GOLF IN THE HIMALAYAS.

SIMLA is, doubtless, one of the most fascinating spots in the East; but often as it has been described, I doubt whether anyone has written of its unique little golf course. In the Himalayas, when you are not climbing up at an angle of 40-deg., you are sliding down at an angle of 45-deg., and one can picture the pioneers of golf sitting perched on the top of Jakko, vainly scanning the surrounding ocean of hills and valleys for so much level country as would make a single green.

It says a great deal for the ingenuity of these ardent golfers, that, at last, they did spy out a shelf of land some few acres wide and over 6,000-ft. above sea-level, twelve miles away from Simla, at Naldera, in the Native State of Koti.

Not the least part of a day's golf at Naldera is the journey to reach it—no express trains or special tickets in Koti. You must mount a hill pony, or trust yourself in a rickshaw with five stalwart Jampanies, or rickshaw runners. The first part of the way from Simla to Naldera lies along the great Hindustan-Thibet road, a ledge blasted out of the mountain-side, and not above 6-ft. wide in places, where an endless string of laden mules pick their way along, bringing their wares to Simla bazaar, driven by wild shaggy hillmen from Kulu, whose close skull caps, long tangled elf locks, and monkish-looking robes of grey homespun give them the look of wayfarers from some legend of the Middle Ages. Branching from the Thibet road, the way to Naldera winds along the face of the hills, through thick woods that overhang the roads, and by little mountain streams where the Jampanies halt to drink, each falling out of line in turn and as quickly catching up their places again without the sahib being conscious of a check. A little further on the road runs along a ridge that falls away on either side, the cliffs dropping down almost out of sight, whilst opposite the great silent mountains rise, splendid in their solemn loneliness. It is said that rain falling on this ridge drains, on the one side, to the Punjab, and on the other to the Persian Gulf. Along this ridge the rickshaw spins softly over a carpet of pine needles that are sweet and keen to smell in the clear hill air; and so the track runs on from one wooden hamlet to another, where, in the little patches of garden, women are working, dressed, for the most part, in pink pyjamas, lemon-yellow head shawls, and a profusion of silver and metal necklaces and ear-rings. At last one seems to have climbed to the shoulder of the ridge, and here the road runs through a desolation of the boulder-strewn hillside where no living thing seems to exist, only here and there a tall gaunt tree where the hill-folk have hung their rough-cut hay to dry on the lower branches. There is a legend that this was once the site of a city great and prosperous, whose people incensed the gods by their sins till, in vengeance, city and people were hurled into the valley below. A little

GOLF IN THE HIMALAYAS.
A couple of Pahari tramps crossing the golf course at Naldera.

GOLF IN THE HIMALAYAS.
Some of the movable impediments that get in the way of the golfer on the Naldera course.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

GOLF IN INDIA.

The above are a few instantaneous photographs taken by Lieutenant H. Whale, I.M.S., of officers of the Gurkha Brigade playing golf in India. The Gurkhas have been manœuvring this winter at Hoshiarpur, in the Punjab jungle, half a day's journey from the nearest station. To pass the spare time, which hung heavily on their hands, they made this course. The bunkers include several sandy pits, from 20-yds. to 40-yds. wide, and high hillocks covered with bushes. Bogey for the nine holes is 44, and this score allows for very few mistakes indeed. The greens are really "browns," or hard-beaten sand, daily swept and rolled by coolies. Caddying is done by the Gurkha orderlies seen in the photographs, who take a keen interest in the game. (1) Lieutenant H. Whale, I.M.S., approaching the 9th green. (2) Captain Maxwell, 4th Gurkhas, driving at the 1st tee. (3) Lieutenant St. J Sime, 4th Gurkhas, approaching the 3rd hole. (4) Lieutenant Hogg, 4th Gurkhas, driving at the 4th tee. (5) Lieutenant McGillivray, I.M.S., putting on the 6th green. (6) Colonel Macintyre, 4th Gurkhas, driving at the 8 h tee. (7) Lieutenant St. G. Scott, 4th Gurkhas, approaching the 5th hole.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

GOLF IN THE HIMALAYAS.
A view of a hazard on the Naldera golf course near Simla.

beyond this gloomy spot the spur comes to an end. Before the point is reached the track—for it no longer deserves to be called a road—suddenly doubles back and zigzags down the side of the khud (cliff) to where, in the shelter of a ravine, lie a few huts and a little temple decked with red flags, and sacred to the gods of the hill people. Beyond this the hillside seems in some long-past age to have slipped in such a way as to leave a slanting ledge or shallow basin, where beyond the edge nothing is to be seen but the blue hills beyond far-distant valleys. This is Naldera, and a prettier spot you would not find for any purpose but a golf course. On the crest of the hill is a thick wood of deodars, and here is the same carpet of pine needles, the same scented air, a view that never palls over the hills and valleys of the Himalayas. The road runs through the course, and the turf is kept close cropped by herds of nomad sheep and cattle. In this strange spot a sporting little course has been devised, as may be imagined from the illustrations. The pond where the cattle are drinking makes an excellent hazard, and the only wayfarers who have to guard themselves at the call of "fore" are such as are shown—a typical Pahari couple tramping along in fair weather and foul, or wild-looking horsemen on their rough ponies that scurry along at a kind of run—men and animals equally unkempt and shaggy, clothes and horse all of the same dun mousy colour.

At first sight the wooden pagoda among the deodars might be taken for a picturesque club-house, as indeed I did so take it the first time I saw Naldera, whereas it is in fact a temple sacred to those same hill gods who so ruthlessly destroyed the legendary cities of the Masobra ridge.

Perhaps Naldera is the only golf course actually planned round a Pagan temple. Certainly I think few can rank beyond it as to remoteness from all British surroundings. It lies in the lands of one of those "kings in a small way"—the Simla hill Rajahs, who hold to this day the power of "la haute justice, la moyenne, et la basse"—the old Scottish "pit and gallows," subject only to the consent of the British Raj in case of a death sentence.

GOLF IN THE HIMALAYAS.
The first impression of the golfer will be that this is the Naldera club-house; in reality it is a wooden temple adjoining the course, sacred to the rites of the hill gods.

THE COURSE AT NALDERA.
A general view of the golf course at Naldera, near Simla, showing the character of the ground, and the natural hazards.

In the summer the Viceroy has his camp at Naldera, when the heat and dust of Simla become wearisome; but in midwinter, when these pictures were taken, it is the perfection of romantic solitude and beauty, where in the valleys below life runs on much as it may have done in England 500 years ago.

ADAM FITZADAM.

FIXTURES.

July 22.—Hanger Hill ("Bogey").
July 29-31.—Lytham and St. Anne's, Summer Meeting.
July 31.—Irish Open Amateur Championship, at Dollymount.
August 1.—Royal and Ancient, Calcutta Cup.
August 3.—Hunstanton, Foursome Competition.
August 4.—Seaford, Summer Meeting.
August 4.—Royal West Norfolk, Summer Meeting.
August 5.—Ipswich, Wood Cup.
August 5.—Rye, Monthly Medal.
August 5.—Hythe, Summer Meeting.
August 5.—Royal Ashdown Forest, August Meeting.
August 5.—Frinton, Summer Meeting.
August 5-7.—Rochester, Royal Marine Challenge Shield.
August 7.—Bushey Hall, Bank Holiday Competition.
August 7.—Hanger Hill, Bank Holiday Competition.
August 7.—Hunstanton, Residents' Cup.
August 7.—West Cornwall, Ladies' Summer Meeting.
August 7.—Royal Liverpool, Summer Meeting.
August 7.—Royal Isle of Wight, Summer Meeting.
August 7.—Buxton and High Peak, August Meeting.
August 7-8.—Littlehampton, Open Summer Meeting.
August 8.—Enfield, Ladies' Summer Meeting.
August 12.—Hanger Hill, Medal.
August 13.—Boulogne v. Le Touquet.
August 22.—Hunstanton, Ladies' Competition.
August 26.—Hanger Hill ("Bogey").
August 30-31.—Hunstanton, Summer Meeting.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. LII.—Mr. Norval W. Helme, Liberal M.P. for the Lancaster D.vision of Lancashire, and a prominent member of the Wesleyan Methodist Conference at Bristol.

AT the present moment Lancashire sends no less than twenty-three representatives to Westminster. Of those elected in 1900, seventeen were Conservatives and six Liberals. From a time-worn Parliamentary Guide just a century old, one learns that when Mr. John Dent and Mr. Peter Patten sat for John of Gaunt's ancient stronghold, as their predecessors had done ever since the twenty-third year of King Edward I., the members from Lancashire were six all told. In 1805 "the cotton industry, for which this borough is famous," seems to have introduced "a new interest, different to that which prevailed in former times when the slave trade flourished here"; but although Mr. Dent opposed Mr. Wilberforce's great reform as "contrary to that policy by which the nation had been enriched" (an opinion, by the way, shared by a large proportion of the worthy citizens of Bristol in those days), he had redeemed his character by bringing in a Bill for the suppression of bull-baiting, while Mr. Patten was the author of a vote of censure condemning the Addingtonians on no less than six different heads. The manufacture of oil-cloth was as yet unthought of, and no one dreamed of the halcyon days when its pioneer should be ennobled and, as Lord Ashton, endow the scene of his great commercial success with a park, a town hall, a kursaal, and a statue of the great Sovereign to whom he owes his title. Lancaster continues to thrive exceedingly, although politically it is now merged in the division of which it is the capital. From time immemorial there have been Helmes in Lancashire-over Sands, and a generation ago James Helme moved to Lancaster, and there founded a prosperous business in connection with what is now the staple industry of the town, and of which the sitting member for the County Division of Lancaster is to-day the head. When a son was born to him fifty-five years ago he received the name of Norval, after a maternal relative, who, it may be as well to say at once, was in no way related to the famous shepherd of the Grampians. In due course Norval Helme went to the Lancaster Grammar School, which had been responsible for the up-bringing of two of the most famous educationalists of the nineteenth century, William Whewell, Master of Trinity College, Cambridge, and Sir Richard Owen, the naturalist. After profiting largely by Dr. Lee's excellent tuition, Mr. Helme went into his father's business, and in 1877 married Mary, elder daughter of the late Thomas Wilson of Caldbeck, Cumberland. Their two sons have been educated at The Leys School, and Trinity College, Cambridge, and both are now graduates of that University. Like their father before them, they have elected to follow a commercial career.

Mr. Norval Helme's apprenticeship to public life began in the ancient corporation which boasts an unbroken existence of seven centuries. He became an Alderman of Lancaster, and served as Mayor in the year of Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee. He has also represented Lancaster in the County Council, and for some time prior to the last Dissolution was president of the Lancaster Liberal Association. But the whole of Mr. Helme's time has not been given up either to the exigencies of business, municipal duties, or politics. Like his father and grandfather before him, Norval Helme belongs to the Wesleyan Methodist Church, for the well-being of which he has laboured indefatigably for the greater part of his life. He has been a successful Sunday school teacher and superintendent from his youth up, and his special knowledge on the subject of education in its broadest sense, developed on the Technical Committee of the County Council, enabled him to render useful service in Parliament when the Education Bill of 1902 was before the House of Commons. He served on the small Liberal advisory committee of which the Right Hon. James Bryce was chairman. If Mr. Helme has not spoken too often in the House of Commons, he can fairly claim the credit of having successfully piloted the Bill for the prevention of the indiscriminate sale of firearms to children. For twenty years Mr. Helme has never missed attending, in an official capacity, the annual Conference of his co-religionists. He is a member of the executive committee of the Million Fund, and the committees of Foreign and Home Missions. He is also a trustee of the Connexional Buildings — the great central Church House of Methodism, which will shortly arise on the site of the demolished Westminster Aquarium, almost in the shadow of the adjoining Abbey. The estimated cost is not less than £150,000, exclusive of site, and when finished the metropolitan home of the Wesleyan Methodists will take rank with the Epworth Memorial Church in America amongst the great ecclesiastical edifices of the world. Mr. Helme is not a little proud of the fact that the Liverpool District for Foreign Missions, of which he is the treasurer, can boast of an annual contribution roll amounting to £10,000. Before he entered Parliament Mr. Helme did a good deal of useful work on the asylums and other committees of the Lancashire County Council. He is a Justice of the Peace for the county.

Copyright.

SPRINGFIELD HALL, LANCASTER

The residence of Mr. Norval Watson Helme, Liberal Member for the Lancaster Division of Lancashire.

During the last quarter of a century North Lancashire has oscillated pretty regularly between the two political poles. Represented by Lord Winmarleigh, Lord Hartington, Colonel F. A. Stanley, now Earl Derby, and Colonel Martin, the seat was won for the Liberal Party by Mr. Williamson, and on his elevation to the Peerage in 1895 Colonel Foster restored it to the Tories with a majority of 634. In 1900 Mr. Norval Helme provided the surprise par excellence of the General Election, as far as Lancashire was concerned, proving very conclusively the fallacy of the axiom that no man is a prophet in his own country. Up to the very eve of the Dissolution Mr. Helme declined any suggestion of fighting the Liberal battle in person, and it was not till the prospect of a default seemed inevitable that he consented, malgré lui, to enter the arena. His canvass was necessarily a short one, but the prediction of those who knew him, that he was the one man alive who might send the pendulum back once more, even in the face of the then all-powerful "khaki ticket," was verified. Norval Helme became member for Lancashire (North) by a majority of 44.

Since then London has seen more of Mr. Helme and Lancaster less, but he has contrived to discharge his responsibilities as far as the Executive Council of the Free Churches and the needs of Methodism are concerned, although he has seen too little of Springfield Hall and its beautiful old-fashioned gardens on the outskirts of the town of castles and sieges. Mrs. Helme is president of the local Women's Liberal Association, but neither she nor her daughter can be described as very militant politicians.

Digitized by Google

THE FÊTES AT BREST.

SCENES IN AND AROUND THE FRENCH NAVAL PORT.

(1) Vice-Admiral Sir William May landing at the jetty on his way to pay official visits at the Prefecture. (2) The meeting of the Admirals. Vice-Admiral Caillard and Sir William May on the quarter-deck of the "King Edward VII." (3) British seamen and marines on the roundabouts at Brest Fair. (4) The garden party at the Prefecture Maritime. (5) L'Entente Cordiale in the flesh. (6) Lady May and the Breton peasant women in the grounds of the Prefecture Maritime.

(Photographs by Chusseau-Flaviens.)

Digitized by Google

THE FÊTES AT BREST.

BRITISH PICKET-BOATS ALONGSIDE THE JETTY.

During the visit of the British Fleet to Brest, a standing invitation was given to all the townspeople to visit the vessels lying in the roadstead, and large numbers availed themselves of the opportunity. The passage from the jetty to the British war-vessels was always successfully accomplished, and the visitors have all expressed themselves as delighted with the attentions shown them by the midshipmen who constituted themselves a corps of guides for the ladies.
(Photographed by Hutin, Trampus & Cie.)

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

JUDGING from the state of chaos into which the arrangement of regattas has fallen, the revival of a "fixtures conference," as promised at the annual meeting of the Yacht Racing Association, should be welcomed alike by club committees and all those yachtsmen who like to take in as many regattas as possible in the course of a season. As at present managed, committees are confronted with the probability, if not almost a certainty, of clashing with some other club's regatta, no matter what date they select for their fixture; while, on the other hand, the racing fleets become scattered, and all the regattas suffer from paucity of entries. Poor entries result in a decline of interest, and the sport suffers accordingly.

It must have been with extreme regret that the committee of the Royal Irish Yacht Club determined upon abandoning the annual regatta at Kingstown. This regatta has hitherto been managed in alternate years by the Royal Irish and the Royal St. George Clubs, both of which have fine quarters at Kingstown, and for many years it has ranked as one of the most important fixtures in the British Isles. So also was the Queenstown Regatta, held under the flag of the Royal Cork, the oldest yacht club in existence; but that was abandoned some years since, and the offer of a cup by the King three years ago failed to revive it. It now looks as though there is a possibility of the Dublin Bay fixture following, and one is led to wonder if the Belfast Lough regattas would long survive. Is the Royal Irish committee's action to be construed as a mild protest against the proposed race from the Clyde to Cowes, which would take yachts right past the port? It has always been recognised that the lack of entries at all the Irish regattas was coincident with the decline of the sport on the Clyde, and it was believed that a revival of racing in Scotch waters would be followed by a corresponding improvement in the sport at the Irish ports. This hope has not been fulfilled this year.

Certainly, one can hardly point to any marked revival on the Clyde yet. A few more yachts than might otherwise have been present were attracted North by a special race, the strangest feature of which was the fact of the race in question being arranged by a Southern club. As a return compliment, apparently, the Clyde clubs offered prizes for a race back to Cowes, thus holding out an inducement to the yachts to neglect both the Royal Ulster and the Royal Irish Regattas.

It is just possible that the total abandonment of the Kingstown fixture may serve a good purpose ultimately, by directing attention more forcibly to the necessity of giving the whole question of arrangement of dates serious consideration, if many of our old regattas are to survive.

Another series of regattas that seems to be in danger of collapsing is the Plymouth Week. For many years these have closed the season, and some owners had finished their engagements for the season before the dates of these fixtures, the entries for which have consequently been gradually declining in numbers. This year the Plymouth clubs determined upon trying an alteration of dates, and fixed upon next week for their annual week. It was known early in the year that an effort would be made to attract yachts to the Clyde, and the Plymouth clubs, believing that any yachts going North would return in what has hitherto been regarded as the orthodox manner—by taking in the Irish regattas on their way South—naturally hoped to catch them all on their return. These clubs, however, did not reckon upon the Clyde to Cowes race, and are therefore in much the same position as the Irishmen, and the best they can hope for is the presence of the 52-footers, admittedly the most interesting class, or, to be strictly accurate, the only "class" out, yet one class does not make a regatta programme. In view of the unsatisfactory division of the racing fleets during the earlier portion of the season, the Cowes Week by comparison assumes an even greater importance, for here at least there is no clashing date, and all the scattered divisions of fleets meet. This year, given fine weather, the Cowes Week should be more than up to the average of more recent seasons. It will be interesting to see some of the famous old 90-footers in commission, and it is to be hoped that an effort will be made to arrange a match in which old fliers like Satanita and Ailsa would have an opportunity of meeting. Such matches would serve to remind us of what the sport was like in the palmy days of the big class racers.

There have been more than an average number of mishaps already this year to hollow spars, and in some quarters there is a disposition to advocate their abandonment, at any rate, for masts. The question is not merely that of constant expense incurred in replacing sticks, although this has, of course, to be taken into serious consideration, but there is also the delay caused by such accidents, and the consequent loss of racing engagements which an owner has to submit to. Under present circumstances, whenever there is a hard blow, owners have to face the possibility of a "carry away," and they are, therefore, to be pardoned if they hesitate now and again to run the risk of losing a week's racing or more by turning out on a heavy day.

CORINTHIAN.

Copyright.

HILDEGARDE

Schooner, 284 tons Thames measurement, owned by Mr. E. R. Coleman. She is of steel construction, and was built in 1897 at Wilmington, U.S.A., by Messrs. Harlan and Hollingsworth, from designs by A. S. Chesebrough.

FIXTURES.

July 22.—Ostend Regatta. Closing day.
July 24.—Ostend to Flushing.
July 25.—Flushing to Antwerp
July 26.—Antwerp to Bath and back.
July 26 to 29.—Plymouth Week.
July 31 and August 1.—Island S.C. Annual Regatta Cowes.
August 5.—Royal Southampton Yacht Club.
August 7.—Royal Lond on Yacht Club.
August 8 to 11.—Royal Yacht Squadron. Cowes Week.
August 12.—Royal Portsmouth Corinthian Yacht Club.
August 15-18.—Royal Victoria Yacht Club. Ryde
August 19.—Royal Southern Yacht Club.
August 21-22.—Royal Albert Yacht Club. Southsea.

Digitized by Google

YACHTS OF THE YEAR.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

NORLANDA

Schooner, 103 tons. This vessel was launched early in the present season. She was built at Gosport from designs by C. E. Nicholson to the order of Mr. F. Milburn.

Digitized by Google

The 161st Methodist Conference at Bristol.

JULY 19—AUGUST 2, 1905.

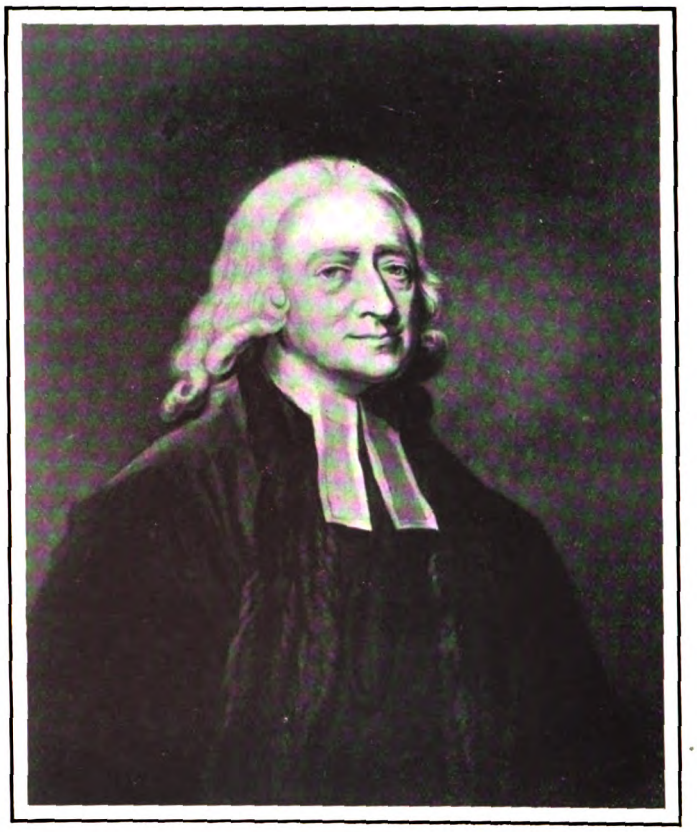
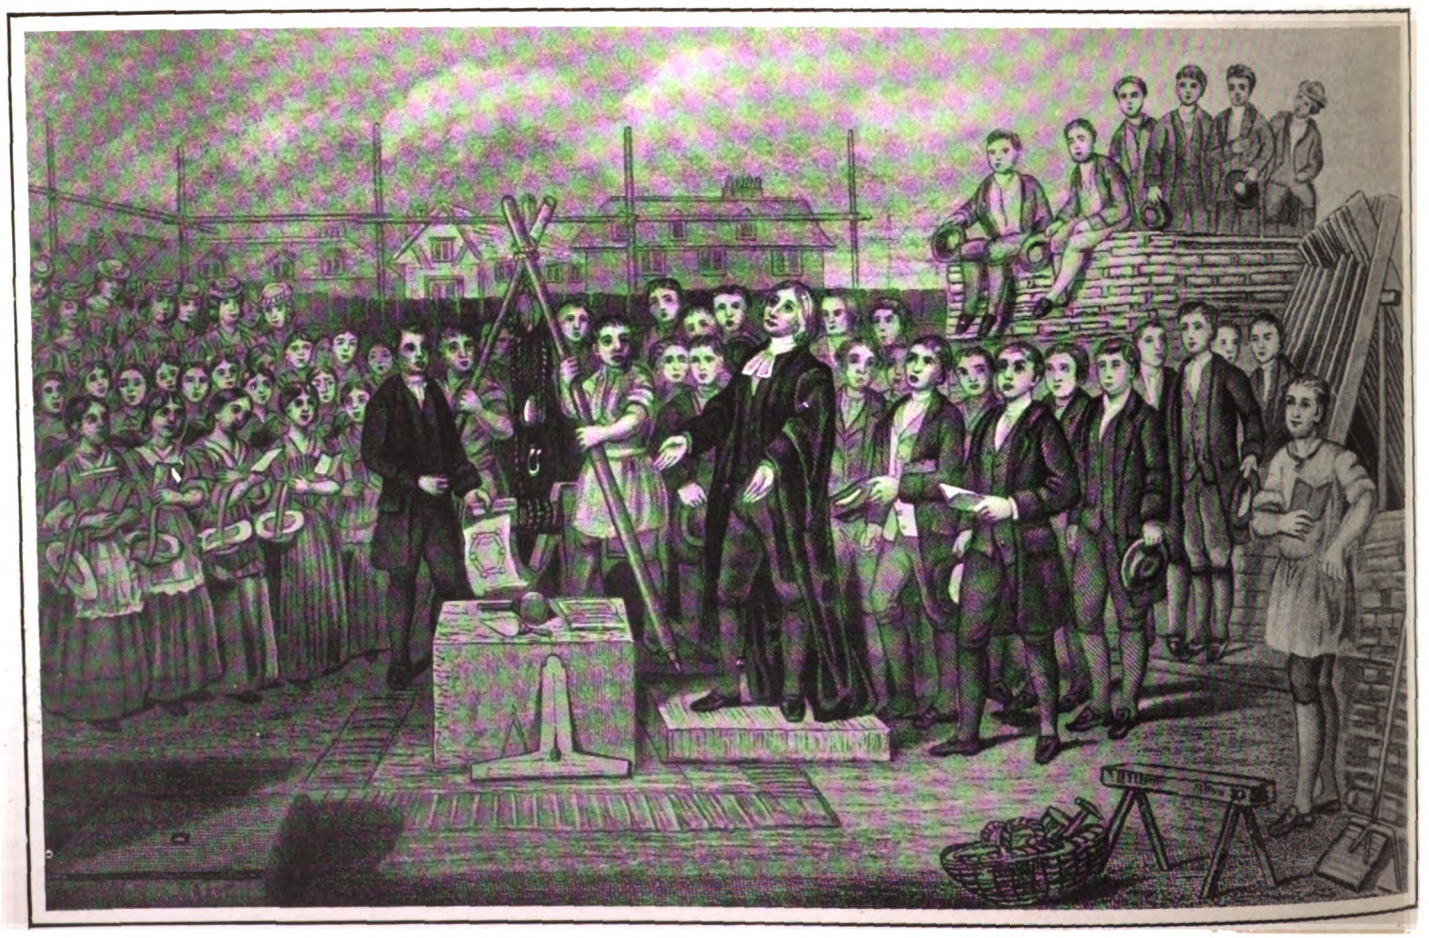
FOR the fourteenth time since John Wesley went to his rest the Methodist Conference takes place in Bristol, a city which during five centuries at least has played an all-important part in the history both of the Old World and the New. To many Methodists on either side of the Atlantic Bristol is regarded as a very Mecca of the Faith. Neither London nor Newcastle entered more extensively into the life and work of John Wesley than Bristol, where he built, as long ago as May, 1739, his first chapel, that at Kingswood being commenced almost immediately after. It was here, too, he began, on April 2 in the same year, his career as an open-air preacher, and originated the class-meeting system in which the Methodist Church still finds a tower of strength. From 1749 to 1771 the Methodists of Bristol enjoyed the pastoral oversight of the Rev. Charles Wesley. The oldest "class-ticket" in existence comes from Bristol; it was in Bristol that Charles Wesley first printed his hymns, and that the beautiful portrait of his brother and leader was published. Nor do the Methodists of America, who have consecrated the splendid Epworth Church to the immortal memory of John Wesley, forget that it was in Bristol his eloquence converted Captain Webb, who, after labouring as a local preacher in Bristol, became the pioneer of the powerful Methodist Church which now flourishes exceedingly in every part of the United States. Of the 10,000 letters which John Wesley is supposed to have written, many were dated from Bristol; it was in Bristol that he overcame persecution and buffeting; Bristol figures constantly in his diary, and it was there he loved to hold those Conferences which have ever since done so much to promote the unity of Methodism. The Conference of 1905, after the lapse of more than a century, derives a peculiar and striking interest from the fact that it takes place virtually on the same spot where John Wesley, in 1790, held the last "annual gathering" honoured by his presence. Vivid details of the intimate connection of Bristol with the annals of Methodism will be found in John S. Pawlyn's "Bristol Methodism in John Wesley's Day," and in Mr. R. Burrough's excellent account of the "Centenary History of Old King Street Chapel, 1795—1895."



JOHN WESLEY
From a photograph of the famous Bristol portrait.

In the "Homes, Haunts, and Friends of John Wesley," Bristol occupies a conspicuous place, and it may surely be hailed as a happy omen that the Bristol Conference of 1905 coincides almost exactly with the appearance, under the auspices of the Religious Tract Society, of the Rev. Richard Green's "John Wesley, Evangelist," which will henceforth rank as one of the great standard works on the first phases of the Methodist Faith. From this well-written volume — by permission of the publishers — are reproduced the historic Conference Seal and the Bible—doubtless



THE LAYING OF THE CORNER STONE OF THE FIRST METHODIST CHAPEL AT BRISTOL.
John Wesley performing the ceremony, May 12, 1739.

Digitized by Google

THE WESLEYAN CONFERENCE AT BRISTOL.

(1) The Rev. C. H. Kelly, President-Elect. (2) Rev. Silvester Whitehead, last year's President. (3) Rev. J. Scott Lidgett, M.A., President-Elect of the Free Church Council. (4) Rev. Thomas Rippon, Chairman of the Bristol and Bath District (5) Rev. W. Herbert Parkin, General Secretary to the Conference Arrangements Committee. (6) Rev. Dr. Guest, Secretary of the Conference Hall Committee. (7) Councillor P. Endres Gan , Member of the Hall Committee. (8) Mr. S. E. Hosegood, Joint-Treasurer of the Con erence. (9) Mr. H. C. Perry, Joint-Treasurer of the Conference. (10) Alderman Charles E. L. Gardner, J.P., a promin.nt Bristol Methodist. (11) Alderman W. Howell Davies, J.P., a well-known Bristo. Methodist. (12) Alderman C. J. Lowe, J.P., a leading Bristol Methodist.

(From copyright photographs.)

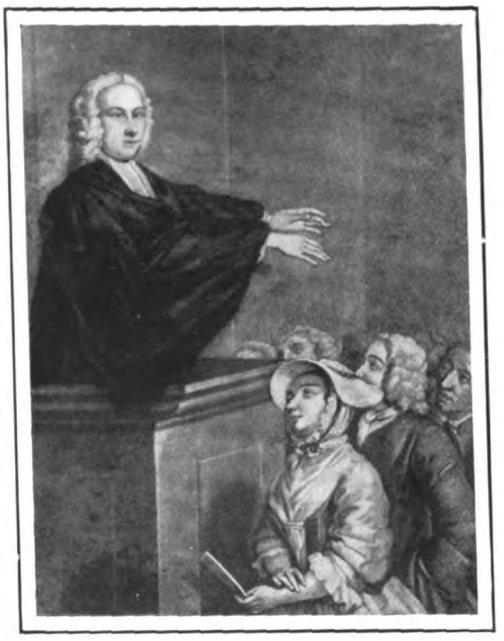
Digitized by Google

once used by John Wesley in Bristol—which will now pass as the insignia of his high office from the outgoing President, the Rev. Silvester Whitehead, to his successor, the Rev. C. H. Kelly. "There is a pleasure in remembrance," and those who attend the Conference of 1905 will assuredly not be displeased to look upon the features of those who, since John Wesley's death, have one after another received their badges of authority in Bristol. The Bristol Presidents of the past are as follows: 1794, Thomas Hanly; 1798, Joseph Benson; 1802, Joseph Taylor; 1808, James Wood; 1814, Adam Clarke; 1819, Jonathan Crowther; 1825, Joseph Entwistle; 1831, George Marsden; 1838, Thomas Jackson; 1846, William Atherton; 1856, Robert Young; 1867, John Bedford; 1877, William Burt Pope; 1890, William F. Moulton.

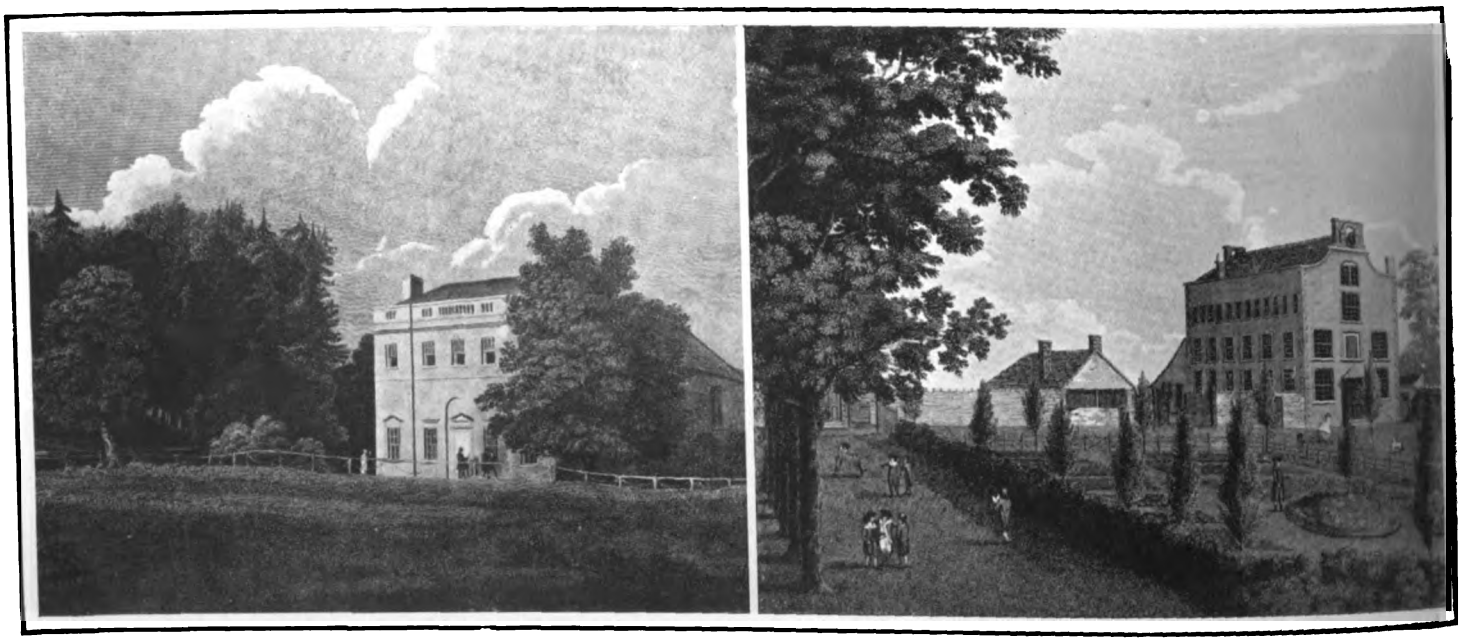
Apart from the Presidents of her Conferences, Bristol must be credited with the possession of an unusually large number of Bristol "worthies." Bristol during the nineteenth century was the scene of the labours of four very distinguished divines, viz., Joseph Benson, Samuel Romilly Hall, W. Morley Punshon, and Samuel H. Waddy. With their portraits is published an illustration of the interior of Portland Street Chapel, and reproductions from photographs by Mr. Thomas Righton of Newbury, who makes a special feature of Methodist subjects, and whose interesting and instructive Methodist postcards circulate over every part of the world. For the American Methodist Portland Street Chapel is a shrine, a place of pilgrimage, second only to City Road Chapel, London, for its history and associations. It was erected and opened in 1793 by the "New Planners," who, after Wesley's death, asserted and secured the right of Methodist ministers to administer the sacraments in their own chapels, and it is now enriched with mural tablets and other memorials of the greatest interest. It is the last resting-place of Captain Thomas Webb, the founder of organised Methodism in America. The portrait in the glass of one of the windows, showing the scarlet-coated officer, with the open Bible beside him, and his sword on the table as he expounds the Scripture, is very quaint. He was one of the founders of the chapel, and in the crypt beneath the chapel an inscribed stone indicates the spot where his remains were laid to rest on December 24, 1796. The vestry contains a very fine engraving of the Romney portrait of John Wesley, and portraits of Samuel Bradburn who preached at the opening of the chapel in 1793, and of Thomas Roberts, who read the Liturgy on the occasion.



THE REV. GEORGE WHITEFIELD.
From a contemporary print, after the painting by John Woolaston, jun.

THE REV. G. WHITEFIELD PREACHING AT LEEDS, 1749.
From a rare contemporary print.

Of late years the important Bristol and Bath District has been singularly favoured in its chairmen. At the Conference of 1880 Dr. Bowden, whose memory is still cherished in the West, was appointed to the chair of the district. His successors were the Rev. George Fletcher, now Governor of Richmond College; the Rev. William Perkins, one of the General Secretaries of the Wesleyan Missionary Society; and the Rev. John S. Simon, who now holds the position of Governor at the Didsbury Theological College. The present Chairman is the Rev. Thomas Rippon, who, by his fidelity to all the duties of his office, worthily maintains the high traditions of the district. Mr. Rippon takes the keenest interest in all historical questions relating to Methodism in his district, the membership returns for which, as presented to the May Synod, 1905, are as follows: Full members, 14,865; on trial, 1,827; junior members, 2,713. In Bristol itself, including the suburb of Clevedon, there are 10 circuits, 31 ministers, 4 lay agents, with a total membership of 5,413; on trial, 966; junior members, 984. During recent years new chapels have been built in the King Street, Redland, Portland,



TWO FAMOUS WESLEYAN SCHOOLS.
The Methodist Academy at Woodhouse Grove, near Leeds. The Methodist School at Kingswood, near Bristol. Erected 1748.

Digitized by Google

Cassell.

THE OLD ROOM IN THE HORSE FAIR, BRISTOL.
The oldest existing Wesleyan place of worship.

Righton.

THE PULPIT END OF THE PORTLAND STREET CHAPEL.
A place of pilgrimage for American Methodists.

Wesley, Bedminster, and Kingswood circuits, and the recently-established Central Mission is full of vigour and promise.

The Rev. W. Herbert Parkin, Resident Minister of the Bishopston Wesleyan Circuit Church in King Street, Bristol, who will discharge the onerous and responsible duties of Conference Arrangements General Secretary of the Bristol Conference, emulates both the energy of Mr. Rippon and his intense love of all that concerns the historical aspect of Methodism. In addition to the portraits of the Rev. Thomas Rippon and the Rev. W. Herbert Parkin, those of the Treasurers, Mr. S. E. Hosegood and Mr. H. C. Perry, and several prominent members of the Executive Committee, are also given. The official programme of the proceedings at Bristol is as follows:

CONFERENCE PUBLIC SERVICES.

1. Official Services:

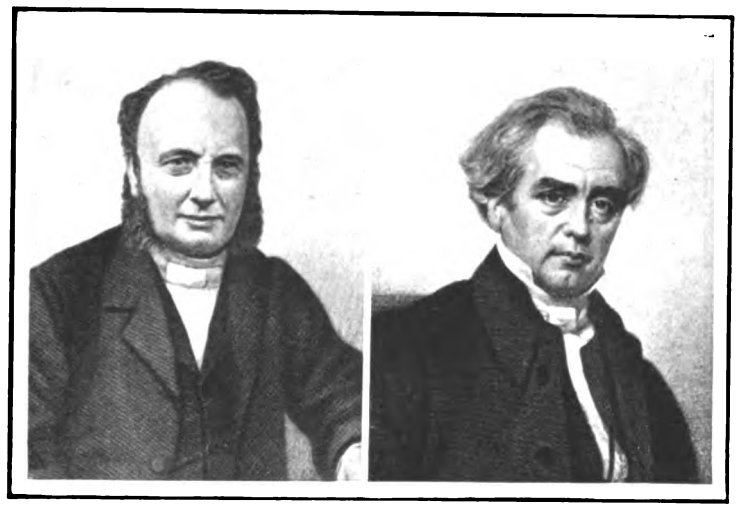
Induction of President, Thursday, July 20, Conference Hall, Victoria Rooms.
Open Session of Conference, Friday, July 21, Conference Hall, Victoria Rooms.
Sacramental Service, Friday, July 21, Victoria Wesleyan Church.
President's Sermon, Sunday, July 23, Conference Hall, Victoria Rooms.
Ex-President's Sermon, Sunday, July 23, Conference Hall, Victoria Rooms.
Conference Prayer Meeting, Thursday, July 27, Conference Hall, Victoria Rooms.
Public Examination of Candidates for Ordination, Thursday, July 27, Bristol (Old Market Street), Bath, and Gloucester.
Conference Love Feast, Sunday, July 30, Old Market Street.



TWO FAMOUS METHODISTS.
Rev. Samuel Romilly Hall. Rev. S. H. Waddy.

Recognition of Returned Missionaries, Tuesday, August 1, Cotham and Weston-super-Mare.
Ordination Service, Wednesday, August 2, Bedminster.

2. Other Public Meetings:

Wesley Guild, Wednesday, July 19, Colston Hall.
London Mission, Thursday, July 20, Colston Hall.
Local Preachers' Convention, Thursday, July 20, King Street.
Class Leaders' Convention, Friday, July 21, Old Market Street.
Women's Auxiliary, Friday, July 21, Victoria.
Children's Home, Saturday, July 22, Colston Hall.
Temperance Meeting, Saturday, July 22, Colston Hall.
Midnight Evangelistic Meeting, Saturday, July 22, Colston Hall.
Public Services (3), Sunday, July 23, Colston Hall.
Home and Foreign Missions (provisional arrangement), Monday, July 24, Colston Hall.
Bermondsey Settlement, Tuesday, July 25, Trinity, Redland.
Army and Navy, Tuesday, July 25, Bath.
Seamen's Mission, Thursday, July 27, Wesley.
Fernley Lecture, Friday, July 28, King Street.
Working Men's Meeting, Saturday, July 29, People's Palace.
Lord's Day Observance, Monday, July 31, Knowle.
Holiness Meeting, Wednesday, August 2, Portland.

It must be remembered that Bristol is connected quite as closely with the career of George Whitefield as it is with that of John Wesley. This fact explains the reproduction by way of illustration of two very scarce engravings of Whitefield in the act of preaching. He first came to Bristol in 1736. It was there he met Dr. Benson of Gloucester, who ordained him. John Wesley was then in Georgia, and when Whitefield resolved to go out and join him, it

Righton.

THE VICTORIA CHAPEL, BRISTOL.
Where the principal services of the Conference will take place.

Copyright.

THE VICTORIA HALL, BRISTOL.
The principal scene of the Wesleyan Methodist Conference of 1905.

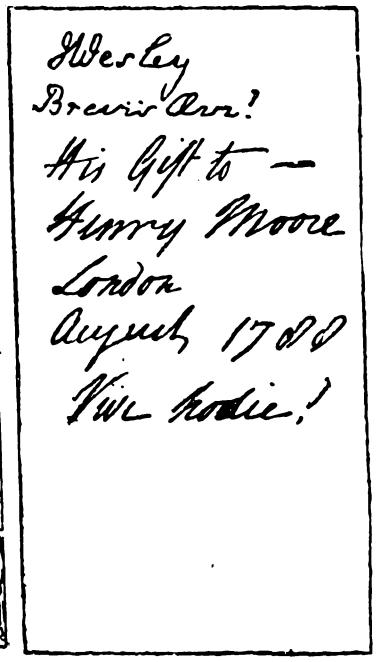
Digitized by Google

was at Bristol that he bade farewell to his friends. In 1739 Whitefield was again amongst them, preaching in the Glasshouse Yards, at Baptist Mills, and in the Bowling Green, and endeavouring to collect money for the Orphan House he had founded in Georgia, despite interdicts and persecution.

Before leaving once more for America Whitefield bade Wesley come to Bristol and carry on the work so auspiciously begun. "Hesitating at first," writes Mr. Pawlyn, "he was decided by casting lots, and arrived at Bristol on Saturday, March 31, 1739, where he at once joined Whitefield at the house of Mr. Greville, an influential grocer in Wine Street . . . The following day Wesley heard Whitefield preach at the Bowling Green, Hanham, and Rose Green, and 'could scarce reconcile himself at first to this strange way of preaching in the fields.' The same evening, however, overcoming his scruples, he 'proclaimed in the highways the glad tidings of salvation, speaking from a little eminence in a ground adjoining the city to about 3,000 people.' Thus Wesley passed the Rubicon, and commenced his marvellous career as an open-air Evangelist. Barely six weeks later Wesley laid the foundation-stone of the first Methodist Chapel in the world on a piece of ground in the Horse Fair. It was opened a few months later, and is now in the possession of a congregation of Welsh Calvinistic Methodists.

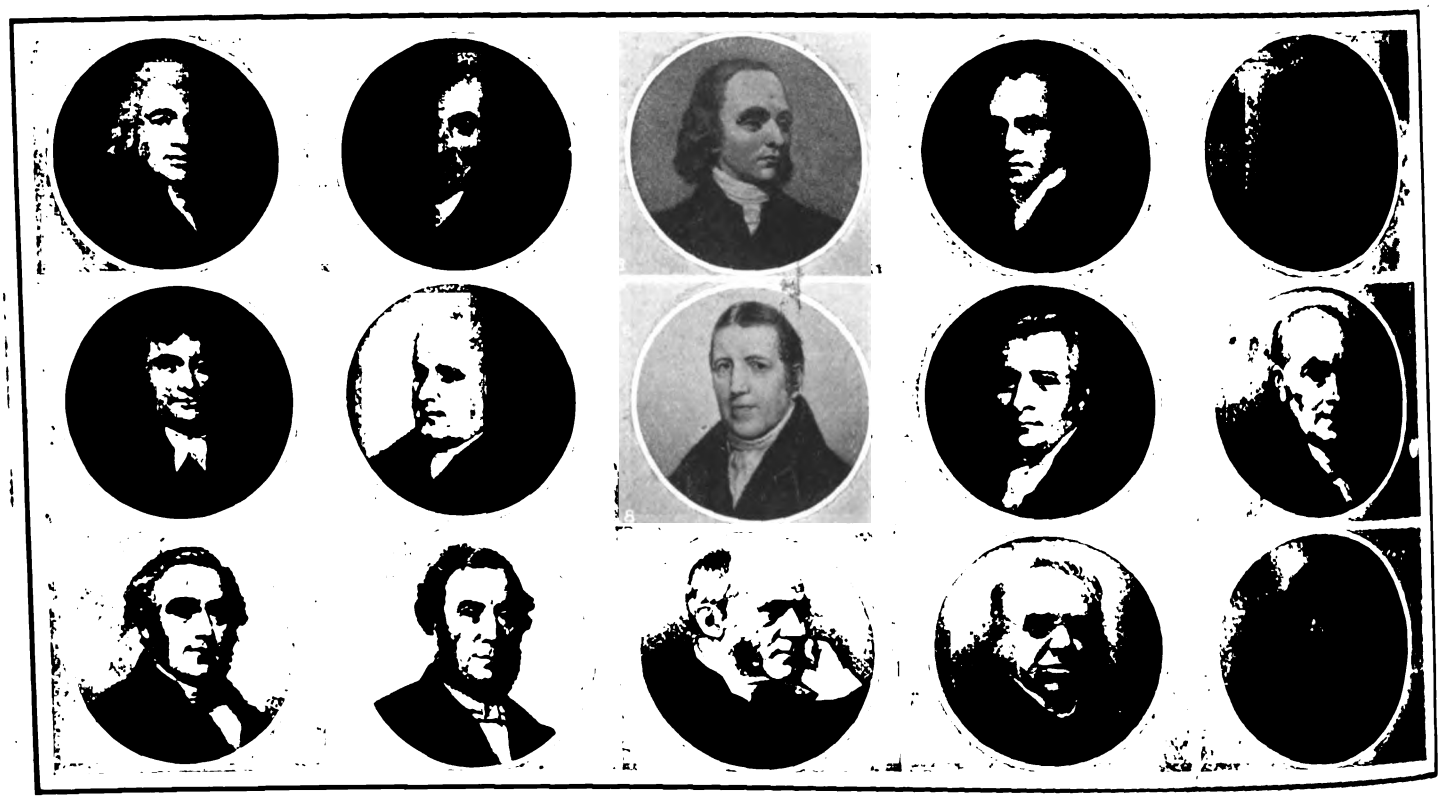
The first Wesleyan Conference was held in London, and the second in Bristol during the succeeding year, so the Bristol Conference of 1905 takes place on or near the 160th anniversary of the Bristol Conference of August 1—August 6, 1745. The site of the first Bristol Conference was the humble preaching-room in the Horse Fair. In those days John Wesley's most hopeful follower could never have dreamed of a representative assembly which will fill the Victoria Hall to overflowing, or of the possibility of Methodism possessing a central home like the Westminster Church House of the near future. The results which Methodism has lately achieved both at home and abroad are the practical outcome of the good work done by those who have inherited the zeal and the ardour, as well as the strong faith, of such men as Whitefield and Wesley. The long line of Bristol Conference past-Wesley Presidents, beginning with Thomas Hanly and ending with Charles Kelly, forms an unbroken chain which links together the days of Whitefield and Wesley with this twentieth century Church, when Methodism is more powerful than ever, and the federation of the Free Churches has added most materially to its strength and influence. The story of its "first phase" has never been so well told as it has in the eloquent pages of "John Wesley, Evangelist," by Mr. Green.

THE OFFICIAL SEAL OF THE METHODIST CONFERENCE.
Kindly lent by the Religious Tract Society.



JOHN WESLEY'S FIELD BIBLE.
Delivered to each succeeding President of Conference, as a badge of office.

While at Bristol many of those who attend the Conference will doubtless take an opportunity of visiting Bath, a city which has also witnessed many remarkable incidents connected with the gradual development of Methodism. It was at Bath (then in the heyday of its prosperity as the great centre of fashion and frivolity) that Wesley administered a well-merited rebuke to the omnipotent Master of Ceremonies who had even dared to disobey the wishes of a Royal Princess, and it was there that he continued to preach in the face of threats and ridicule. Bath was also the scene of the labours of Selina, Countess of Huntingdon, whose personal influence was almost as great as that of Wesley and Whitefield. Although a century has rolled by since she died, the chapel she built in the Vineyards is maintained almost in the same condition as she left it, and the relics of her good works are preserved with reverent care by the members of the Methodist New Connexion, of which she was at once the founder and protector. A. M. B.



SOME FAMOUS METHODISTS.

Presidents of the past. The names are as follows: (1) Thomas Hanly, 1794; (2) Joseph Benson, 1798; (3) Joseph Taylor, 1802; (4) James Wood, 1808; (5) Adam Clarke, 1814; (6) Jonathan Crowther, 1819; (7) Joseph Entwistle, 1825; (8) George Marsden, 1831; (9) Thomas Jackson, 1838; (10) William Atherton, 1846; (11) Robert Young, 1856; (12) John Bedford, 1867; (13) William Burt Pope, 1877; (14) William F. Moulton, 1890; (15) W. Morley Punshon.

Digitized by Google

Merionethshire and her Lord-Lieutenant.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC GATHERING AT DOLGELLY.

MR. W. R. M. WYNNE of Peniarth, Lord-Lieutenant of Merioneth and Chairman of Quarter Sessions, is one of the very few men who enjoy the rare distinction of being regarded as a prophet in his own country. In the good old days when George III. was King and coaches ran between London and Holyhead the halt at the Golden Lion, Dolgelly, was always eagerly looked forward to, and it still retains its old reputation in this twentieth century, when the Great Western Railway brings holiday-makers and pilgrims in quest of the picturesque to Llangollen, Bala, and Dolgelly—all places of rare beauty—in less than five hours. Probably in the whole of its eventful history the Golden Lion never witnessed a more representative or enjoyable gathering than the lunch which followed the public presentation to the popular Lord-Lieutenant of the County of an admirable portrait painted by the Hon. John Collier, a replica of which is to be placed in the County Hall at Dolgelly. The picture was unveiled by Lady Winchilsea, who was accompanied by Lord Winchilsea and Lord Maidstone. Amongst other well-known Merionethshire people present were Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Ellis, the Hon. Mrs. Wynn, the Hon. T. W. Best, Colonel Evans Lloyd, Mr. Edward Lloyd, Dr. Roberts, Dr. John Jones, Mr. Haydn Jones, and Mr. J. C. Hughes, the energetic Secretary of the Presentation Committee. Dr. Robert Roberts concluded his speech with a verse in Welsh, which, when done into English, reads as follows:

"W. R. Maurice Wynne for Meirion
And public weal a deal he's done.
Thousand-old this recognition
Is his due for services done.
On this wall, of the worthy sage
Summon we did his image.
In this Hall—Merioneth's hearth—
We pinnacled Wynne of Peniarth.
Feel sure her dutiful son
Merits the love of Meirion."

Much enthusiasm has been aroused in Llangollen, Bala, and Dolgelly by the prospect of the Great Western Railway devoting the next volume of its popular travel-book series to a description of that portion of North Wales, which exceeds in beauty anything in the Belgian Ardennes or the much-talked-of Black Forest. Of this delightful tract of country, Merionethshire is the centre.

Dixon.

MR. W. R. M. WYNNE, LORD-LIEUTENANT OF MERIONETH.
From the portrait by the Hon. John Collier, presented to Mr. Wynne at Dolgelly on July 6th.

Chidley, Chester.

A GROUP OF THE NOTABILITIES OF MERIONETHSHIRE
Assembled in the garden of the old-world Golden Lion Royal Hotel, Dolgelly, on the occasion of the presentation made on the 6th inst. to Mr. W. R. M. Wynne of Peniarth, the popular Lord-Lieutenant of the County and Chairman of Quarter Sessions. The large portrait is that of Mr. J. C. Hughes of Dolgelly, Secretary of the Wynne Testimonial Committee.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY
Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

BY PRINCE OF WALES'S ROUTE TO KILLARNEY.

ALTHOUGH travel in Ireland may not be quite so rapid as it is at home, still no one can grumble at the splendid way in which the various railways minister to the needs of tourists and others. It is nearly fifty years since the King—at that time Prince of Wales—paid his first visit to Killarney, and the route chosen by the Royal tourists—namely, that of the Cork, Bandon, and South Coast Railway—has since been followed by thousands of others, being recognised as the most direct and picturesque of all. The journey from London is not so long as to tire you, for one has the choice of breaking it either at Dublin, Waterford, or Cork. An alternative route is that offered by the City of Cork Steam Packet Company, whose comfortable steamers run direct from London to Cork, a most delightful little sea voyage for those who enjoy this mode of travel. But whichever route be chosen, remember Cork must be your objective before starting for the famous tour of the Lakes of Killarney.

Cork, the southern capital, and the third city in Ireland, should not be passed over too hurriedly. The surroundings are exceedingly picturesque, while it can boast of a great wealth of historical associations. One of the first places to which the average tourist is usually attracted is Blarney Castle, with its famous stone,

"That whoever kisses
He never misses
To grow eloquent."

The excursion is about six miles from Cork, and can be accomplished either by train or "jaunting-car." Most people will choose the latter mode of travel, on account of its novelty.

Following the picturesque, "Prince of Wales's route" to Killarney, we leave the Albert Quay terminus of the Cork, Bandon, and South Coast Railway, and proceed direct to Glengarriff, though in doing so we miss many lovely and interesting spots along the coast. Those who can spare the time ought certainly to run down to the quaint little seaport of Kinsale, which simply overflows with historical reminiscences. A branch of the Cork-Bandon line takes us to Kinsale, whence the famous Old Head can be reached by a fine drive along the coast. Kinsale will charm the eye of the artist; the narrow, steep streets seem to rise abruptly from the water's edge, and the houses appear to balance one on the top of the other.

Bandon, which Spenser styled "Pleasant Bandon, crowned with many a wood," is another charming spot on the "Prince of Wales's route." Here one can visit Castle Bernard, the beautiful seat of the Earl of Bandon; or take a coach drive through the lovely Innishannon Valley. Golfers travelling in this part of Ireland will not unnaturally be attracted to the new golf links at Harbour View, a pleasant little watering-place reached by road from Bandon. The ancient castle of Kilbrittain, which belonged to the MacCarthys, princes of Carbery, is passed on the way. From Bandon to Bantry is a delightful run, the route being through some very choice scenery. At one time or another practically the whole district from Bandon to Dunmanway was the scene of hotly-contested fights between native septs and English settlers.

As we approach Bantry the country becomes broken and mountainous, the town itself lying in a beautiful glen surrounded by lofty and rugged heights. Bantry occupies a fine site at the head of that world-famous bay, which is declared to be unsurpassed by any other natural harbour in the world. The Channel Fleet visits Bantry Bay every year for the manœuvres, which fact largely adds to its attractions from the sight-seer's point of view.

From Bantry, the terminus of the Cork-Bandon line, commences the most enjoyable portion of the whole tour. A delightful coach drive of about eleven miles, winding around the inlets at the head of the bay, giving a series of magnificent panoramas, takes the tourist to Glengarriff, which has been styled the "Madeira of Ireland." This charming glen, of which Alfred Austin wrote, "As to Glengarriff, I scarcely know how anyone who goes there ever leaves it . . . It is a haven of absolute beauty and perfect rest," lies in the midst of rocks, cliffs, and mountains, which apparently have been brought together in the wildest confusion. Climatically it is recognised by high authorities as one of the finest health resorts in Europe, winter or summer. The

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Photocrom.

THE MEETING OF THE WATERS, KILLARNEY.

One of the most exquisite bits of scenery in the Irish lakeland. Here, just beyond the lofty crag known as the "Eagle's Nest"—famous for its remarkable echo—the Long Range River, which connects the waters of the Upper and Middle Lakes, is divided into two channels by Dinis Island, one of the numerous islets which stud the surface of the famous lakes.

Digitized by Google

tourist will find it hard to tear himself away from this perfect spot, while those who care to remain for a short spell will find the many hotels, romantically dotted about the bay, all that they could wish for.

From Glengarriff to Kenmare, the next stage of our journey, we again proceed by route by way of Sneem, Parknasilla, and Cahirciveen by coach, thence to Killarney by rail—a tour, by the way, that well repays the traveller for the time spent on it.

The coast scenery around Kenmare is remarkable for its bold and massive capes, and abruptly-rising rocks that resemble giant sentinels guarding the coast, the home of myriads of wild sea-birds. The district is a favourite one among anglers, who are rewarded with good sport in the river. From Kenmare the road descends, the scenery assumes a more solitary aspect, and as we proceed a turn in the road unfolds a magnificent view of the Upper Lake of Killarney, its picturesque arbutus-clothed banks sweeping down to the shore, with just a glimpse of the gloomy solitude of the Black Valley stretching away among the fastnesses of the MacGillicuddy's Reeks. No description, however eloquent, would do justice to the lovely lakes. Praise from such men as Sir David Wilkie, Sir Walter Scott, Wordsworth, and Tom Moore should be sufficient testimony. For beauty and grandeur they are certainly not to be surpassed in Europe.

Photochrom.

THE ABBEY RUINS, MUCKROSS.

Muckross, situated about 2½ miles from Killarney, is famous for its beautiful scenery and the ruined abbey. The remains consist of the abbey and church, founded for the Order of Franciscans by McCar hy Mor, Prince of Desmond, in 1340, on the site of an older church destroyed by fire. The cloisters, perhaps the most picturesque feature of the ruins, are overshadowed by a magnificent yew tree of immense size and bulk. In the interior of the abbey are tombs of the MacCarthys, and the O'Donoghues of the Glens.

well-appointed coach, following the road which winds through the beautiful glen, presenting an ever-changing panorama of charming scenery. On reaching Kenmare, the tourist can choose between proceeding direct to Killarney, either by coach or rail, or by a longer

Digitized by Google

NELSON AND THE MUSES.

("The Year of Trafalgar," by Henry Newbolt. Published by John Murray, London, 1905.)

NO one is likely to contest the appropriateness of the author of "Admirals All" telling in his own happy fashion the oft-repeated tale of Trafalgar, including its epilogue of strategy and diplomacy and its prologue of mixed sorrow and exultation. Mr. Henry Newbolt has managed to impart vitality to the dry bones of half-a-dozen highly-respectable but somewhat prosy writers, and if he has not succeeded in throwing any new and startling light on the events of 1805, he has written a book which will doubtless be a boon to a good many Nelson collectors, as well as to those specially interested in the coming centenary. No less than sixty pages of "The Year of Trafalgar" are devoted to a collection of Trafalgar poems. It is at once evident that the writer of a Nelsonian epic has still to reveal himself. If appearances may be trusted, the needful inspiration may still be vouchsafed either to Mr. Thomas Hardy or to Mr. Newbolt himself, whose "Admirals All" makes one hopeful as regards his future. The Poet Laureate of the South African War is certainly no longer in the running as far as Nelson is concerned, and Mr. Hardy's fine lines stand out conspicuously amidst a desert of present and past mediocrity. Mr. Newbolt gives two Trafalgar poems from the pen of Charles Dibdin. A few months ago the writer came across the original drafts of three with other MSS. in a collection of Dibdin music and scrap-books in the possession of Mr. George Mackey, the well-known Birmingham antiquarian. The first and second correspond in the main, but not altogether, with Mr. Newbolt's versions. They are as follows:

I.

"Ah! hark the signals round the coast
  Recall / Proclaim the great event
That gave all hearts to grieve and boast,
  To joy and to lament.

Great Nelson's corse appears in sight,
  Victorious even in death,
Who living did his country right,
  Who dying gave her breath.

For did not fame those tidings tell,
  That laid him on his bier,
The foe whom nothing can repel
  Had ventured to come here.

But now may peace, that balm devout,
  Be laid to every breast;
His mighty deeds have fear and doubt
  For ever laid to rest."

II.

"Be the great twenty-first of October recorded
In the memorable / glorious year eighteen hundred and five,
Let each hero that fell his full fame be awarded,
While one single Briton continues alive. / oak on our Isle shall survive.

Nelson led the gallant van,
  Nelson France and Spain defied;
Nelson spoke, the fight began—
  Nelson, matchless hero, died.

Commemorate this first of men,
  Hang laurel on the cypress bough,
Each Briton did his duty then,
  Let Britons do their duty now."

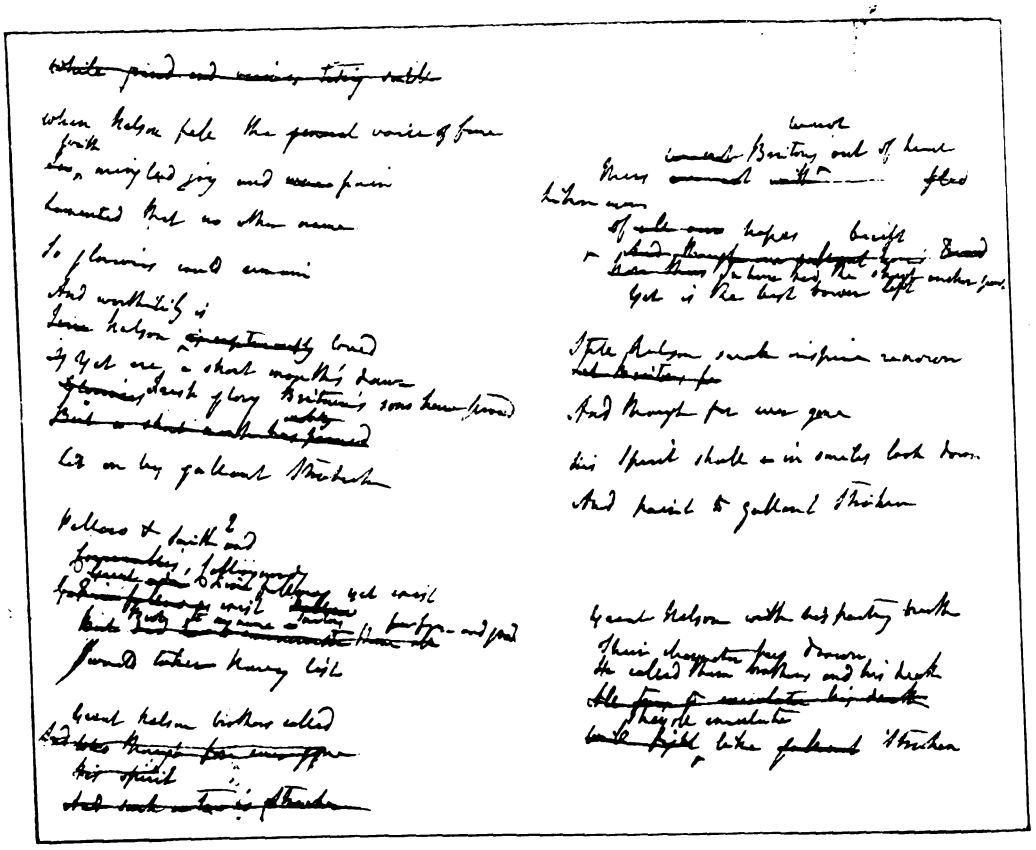
The third has apparently never been published, and refers to the services rendered by Strachan "in putting a finishing touch to the great victory." (Laughton, "Nelson Memorial," page 307.)

III.

"When Nelson fell the voice of fame
  With mingled joy and pain
Lamented that no other name
  So glorious could remain.

And worthily is Nelson loved:
  Yet, ere a short month's dawn,
Fresh glory Britain's sons have proved,
  Led on by gallant Strachan.

Pellew and Smith and Collingwood,
  Fine fellows / sailors yet exist;
But to name sailors good,
  I would take the Navy List.



AN UNPUBLISHED TRAFALGAR SONG BY CHARLES DIBDIN.

From the MS. in a private collection. Copyright of THE KING.

Great Nelson's brothers called,
  And who though for ever gone,
His spirit . . . . . .
  And such a tar is Strachan.

Then Britons be not out of heart,
  Likewise of hopes bereft,
If he did the sheet-anchor part,
  Yet is the best 'bower'* left.

Still Nelson shall inspire renown,
  And though for ever gone,
His spirit shall in smiles look down
  And point to gallant Strachan.

Great Nelson, with his parting breath,
  Their character put down,
He called them brothers, and his death
  They'll emulate like Strachan."

* Strongest anchor.

As far as the "literature of the street" is concerned, Mr. Newbolt has only touched the fringe of it. Many popular songs, broadsides, etc., were published late in 1805 or early in 1806, which have escaped his ken. Some of these are very interesting.

As far as Lord Nelson and the muses are concerned, Mr. Newbolt confines his attention almost wholly to Trafalgar; but between 1795 and the date of his death the hero of the Nile and Copenhagen was the constant theme of popular song. Only the other day the writer obtained from Messrs. Ellis and Elvey a whole series of Nelson ballads issued during the last decade of the eighteenth century and the first portion of the nineteenth, printed on long strips of whitey brown rough paper, and headed by cuts which apparently had already seen service in extolling the prowess of Blake, Shovell, Benbow, Vernon, Anson, and Rodney. One crude portrait bears a suspicious resemblance to the features of the much-execrated but foully-wronged Byng. In the same parcel were songs against Franklin and Washington; songs in honour of Wolfe; "The Busy Crew," sung by Mr. Bannister—the "Jack" Bannister of "Jolly Waterman" fame; "Britannia's Lamentations on the Devastation of War," "The Valiant Sailors," "The Glory of Old England," "Admiral Bembo's (sic) Death in the West Indies," "Briton's Glory, or Rodney Master of the Main," "Grogg (sic) is the Liquor of Life," "Admiral Barrington," and "The Faithful Sailor," sung with great applause by Mr. Arrowsmith at Vauxhall. They all loved Jack in the eighteenth century as much as they do in the twentieth. But this was not all. The conqueror at Copenhagen had one of those quaint "garlands" all to himself. It consisted of eight octavo pages entirely given up to the songs of the "King's Navee." It cost one penny only, was printed and sold by J. Evans, No. 41, Long Acre, and was adorned with a "cut" of a procession of sailors apparently approaching "Good King George" with a row of captured French flags. It was entitled "The Brave Lord Nelson's Garland, being a choice collection of all the songs made and sung on his Lordship's glorious victory, and all those sung this season at Vauxhall, the theatres, and other places of public amusement." We have amongst its contents such choice and highly-spiced items as "A Dumpling for Buonaparte," "A Salt Eel for Monsieur," "Defeat of the French Fleet," "Capture of the French Fleet," "Ben Bowsprit," "Tom Halliard, or the Sailor's Dying Request," "Warren Triumphant," and "My Willy was a Soldier Bold." There is a healthy and hearty ring in such verses as:

"First Howe had a dance on the fam'd first of June
But Monsieur disliked both the steps and the tune
To Brest he retired being rather dismay'd
But not till the piper he full had paid.

. . . . . .

But now let us sing of the great Buonaparte
Of that wonderful hero I'll something impart
They say that bold Nelson has stopped him awhile
And has dash'd his great fleet at the Mouth of the Nile."

Here is a ditty wholly dedicated to Nelson and the Nile:

"Tell how off Egypt's coast
Proud Gallia's naval host
He bravely beat
And how his gallant crews
Down to the shade sent Boney
There to proclaim the news
His dire defeat."

"A Garland of the French Wars," culled from the efforts of the Laureate of Long Acre and others, would be even more interesting than a mere anthology of Trafalgar. In any case, Mr. Newbolt has proved himself to be the man of all others to compile it.

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES

MR. HENRY NEWBOLT, whose book on "Trafalgar" is noticed at length on the opposite page, is a barrister by profession and a man of letters by practice, a "first in Mods." at Oxford, and late editor of the Monthly Review. He has made a special study of the Navy and the sea, and his "Admirals All," "The Sailing of the Long Ships," and "Songs of the Sea," to the last of which Sir Charles Villiers Stanford wrote the music, are books which have worthily achieved a great popularity. Mr. Newbolt, who had a stirring poem in The Times of Saturday last, is a poet whose work will undoubtedly live.

Mr. Henry Newbolt.

* * *

TWO other interesting Nelson books are "A Memorial of Nelson," written by Mr. S. Baring-Gould, and published by Messrs. Skeffington, and Mr. Douglas Sladen's "Letters of Nelson to Lady Hamilton" (Library Press). Mr. Baring-Gould makes good use of his power of telling stories of all kinds in a vivid and impressive manner, and his book would make a capital present for a boy. Mr. Douglas Sladen has already shown in his novel of "The Admiral" that he has made the period and the subject his own, and his book tells over again the story of one of the strangest and most pathetic of life-dramas in the history of our great men.

Nelson.

* * *

THE present year has seen what is, perhaps, the most "romantic" identification of a famous book that has occurred in all the history of bibliography. In January, Mr. G. M. R. Turbutt of Ogston Hall, Derbyshire, brought to the Bodleian a copy of Shakespeare's Works, the First Folio of 1623, for advice as to what had better be done to preserve it. The authorities at the Bodleian, Mr. Falconer Madan, sub-librarian, and Mr. Strickland Gibson, examined it, and found, to their surprise and delight, that, besides being a rarely valuable volume, even for a First Folio, it was the identical copy sent to the Bodleian on publication in 1623, under the agreement between Sir Thomas Bodley and the London Stationers' Company.

The Story of a Famous Book.

* * *

HOW did they identify it? It must be admitted that they were very fortunate in having the means at hand. The volume was sent to the Bodleian unbound, "in sheets," as it is called. The library sent it to an Oxford binder, one William Wildgoose, who bound it and returned it in due course. A list of books sent to Mr. Wildgoose was kept at the Bodleian. On referring to it, the authorities found that with the Shakespeare had gone some other volumes—the Works of Bishop Cowper, John Downame's "Guide to Godlinesse," and others. They turned up these books, which are still in the Bodleian, and found that the "end papers," or insides of the covers, were—like those of the Shakespeare—made of leaves of the works of Cicero, printed at Deventer in the fifteenth century. The inference was obvious. All the volumes had been bound by Wildgoose, who was using these leaves at the time: the Shakespeare, therefore, was the old Bodleian copy. This was borne out by the binding itself, which was easily identified by comparison as the work of the same hand as those of the Cowper and the Downame.

Its Identification.

* * *

STILL further evidence was forthcoming. There were marks on the covers showing that the book had been chained, and the chains torn off somewhat roughly when it was removed. That meant that it had belonged to a public library; and Mr. Madan, with the help of early catalogues and other data, has succeeded in identifying the exact spot at which this historic volume used to stand—at the "Arts End" of the library.

The Evidence Complete.

* * *

NOWADAYS the possessor of a First Folio would not easily let it out of his sight. Things were different in those days. In 1663-64 the Third Folio was published and duly sent to Oxford. It contained seven more plays than the First. Space at the Bodleian was limited, and no one could have guessed then what the money value of a First Folio was destined to become. The Bodleian sold its First Folio, and replaced it by the new and completer Third. Then we lose sight of the book for sixty years. Early in the eighteenth century it appears again, now in the library of a Derbyshire gentleman, Richard Turbutt, Esq., of Ogston Hall, who was interested in the drama (he may even have appeared on the stage in Garrick's company) and a great buyer of books. And there it has remained for nearly 200 years, descending from father to son, none of whom had any notion of the connection of the work with the Bodleian, until its present owner, Mr. G. M. R. Turbutt, brought it by chance to be examined by its first owners.

How did it Disappear?

Hollyer.

MR. HENRY JOHN NEWBOLT
Author of "The Year of Trafalgar." (John Murray.)

* * *

ITS unique value lies in two things. First, it cannot possibly ever have been tampered with. Too many valuable old books have been "restored," that is, they have been rebound, and the booksellers have taken advantage of the process to replace original damaged leaves by sound ones from later or other volumes. Nothing of the kind has happened to the Turbutt First Folio. It has slept for nearly 300 years between its original covers, and remains as it was when William Wildgoose, the binder, sent it back to the Bodleian in 1623. We may add, too, that in itself it is a particularly fine copy, free of many of the misprints and other faults that marked the earliest copies issued from the press. Secondly, it affords valuable evidence, as Mr. Turbutt ingeniously suggested, of the relative popularity of the plays during the forty years of its life in the Bodleian. Books do not get much thumbed in private libraries; and some pages of this Folio are absolutely thumbed (not torn) into holes. This must have been done by young Oxford; and it is plain enough from an examination of the book that young Oxford was most attached to "Romeo and Juliet" and in particular the "balcony scene"; next to "Julius Cæsar" (it was the time of the Civil War in England), and, in general, to the tragedies more than the comedies, and the comedies more than the histories. Even in those days, it would seem, Oxford thought more of the old than of the new—of Rome more than of England!

Its Unique Value.

* * *

A VERY important new work, by Captain A. T. Mahan, entitled "Sea Power in its Relations to the War of 1812," will be published by Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston, and Co., Limited, in October next. The work will be in two volumes, with maps and many full-page plates. In these volumes the author continues his works on "The Influence of Sea Power upon History," treating of a subject of special interest, to which he has brought the knowledge acquired in a lifetime of expert study, together with an exceptional command of Government and private documents; and in such vital matters as the impressment of American seamen and privateer records, he has been able to make valuable additions to the world's knowledge. Captain Mahan presents in a series of vivid pictures the stirring events of the war, the points of single ship fights and squadron actions, giving due attention to the strategic interest of campaigns on the land and the diplomacy of the time.

Sea Power.

* * *

THE new Author's Edition of Miss Braddon's novels was completed by the publication on July 17 of "Lady Audley's Secret." The issue of this edition, which consists of fifty-eight novels, at 2s. 6d. a volume, was begun in December last.

Miss Braddon's Novels.

BOOKS TO READ.

The Game, by Jack London. (Heinemann.)
The Girl Who had Nothing, by Mrs. C. N. Williamson. (Ward, Lock.)
The King's Messenger, by Louis Tracy. (White.)
Tales and Fantasies, by R. L. Stevenson. (Chatto and Windus.)
The Faroes and Iceland, by Nelson Annandale. (Oxford: Clarendon Press.)
In and Around Venice, by Horatio F. Brown. (Rivingtons.)
Ethiopia in Exile; Jamaica Revisited, by B. Pullen-Burry. (Unwin.)
The Tyrol, by W. D. McCrackan. (Duckworth.)
The Fool Errant, by Maurice Hewlett. (Heinemann.)
The Romance of Lohengrin, by Bernard Capes. (Dean.)
Indian Love, by Laurence Hope. (Heinemann.)
A House of Cards, by John Heigh. (The Macmillan Company.)
For Love and Loyalty, by Paul Seaton. (Simpkin, Marshall.)
The Burden of Dreams, and other verses, by Mary Alice Vialls. (Nutt.)
The Scenery of London. Painted by Herbert Marshall; described by G. E. Mitton. (Black.)
Rhymes of the East and Re-collected Verses, by Dum-Dum. (Constable.)

Digitized by Google

THE CRICKET SEASON.

Copyright.

TREMLIN.

This Gloucestershire-born medium fast right-hand bowler who plays for Essex has for several seasons been the best second-class bowler in that county. Whenever he was tried for the county eleven he never did himself justice until this season. He is not a bad field and only a moderate batsman; but his bowling is distinctly good, his fast ball being very fast indeed, without very perceptible change of action. He had a large share in his county's sensational victory over the Australians

Copyright.

BUCKENHAM.

It is well known in any class of cricket, but especially in first-class cricket, that the fast bowler "wants his wicket" By this the state of the pitch is not alluded to, but the capture of the first victim. The match begins, the fast bowler as usual goes on first, he nearly bowls one or two men, a catch is dropped, and he wings up with two wickets for 120 runs. But give him an early victim, and note the difference. Like all other fast bowlers, Buckenham is rather susceptible to the influence of "nothing succeeds like success."

Copyright.

DAVIS, SURREY.

In Davis, the Surrey executive have a cricketer who may one day rival David Denton. His fielding to-day gives undoubted promise in this direction, for his pace, pick-up, and return are alike excellent. He is really a good-hitting bat, but, last season at any rate, was rather cramped in this direction, owing to instructions directly or indirectly conveyed from someone in authority. He can bowl very good slow leg-breaks at times, so that as an all-round cricketer, he should be very useful to Surrey for many years to come.

Hawkins.

K. O. GOLDIE.

This fine upstanding all-rounder was first prominent in Wellington College cricket then at Sandhurst, then for Sussex County, and then, as a matter of course, he did splendidly in Northern Indian cricket during his three or four years out there. He is home on leave this season, and stands a good chance of playing for the Gentlemen before the season closes. A good fast medium bowler, he is also by no means a bad field, and has often made useful scores for Sussex. He is very popular with amateur and professional alike.

Digitized by Google

A NEW FLOATING HOTEL.

Copyright.

THE S.S. "ARAGON," THE LATEST ADDITION TO THE ROYAL MAIL FLEET.

So long as British shipbuilders continue to construct such splendid vessels as the "Aragon"—the latest addition to the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company's fine fleet of steamers engaged in the South American trade—the English Mercantile Marine need have no fear of foreign competition. The Royal Mail s.s. "Aragon," which sailed from Southampton last week for the Argentine, is a twin-screw vessel, built at the famous yards of Messrs. Harland and Wolff of Belfast. If ever a steam-ship was deserving of the title of a "floating hotel," the "Aragon," with her fine spacious saloon, where parties can dine at separate tables, social hall, library, music and smoke rooms—not to mention the daintily-furnished suites of Cabines de Luxe—approaches as nearly as possible to this ideal. Practically all the first-class cabins are on the upper deck. The old-fashioned, stuffy, inside cabin is unknown on the "Aragon," the majority being arranged on the tandem principle, which ensures side lights to each room and an abundance of fresh air. Among other features worthy of note are the gymnasium, where passengers can exercise themselves on the voyage, a handsome social hall, situated on the promenade deck with a well-stocked library, and a children's nursery, which, doubtless, will prove a great boon to those travelling with children. Hitherto it has been necessary for travellers, who expect to be absent a couple of months, to take sufficient linen to last the whole time. This inconvenience will in future be obviated, as there is a fully-equipped laundry on board, where one's linen is carefully handled by an experienced laundress. The second and even third-class accommodation are exceedingly comfortable, and a good menu may be relied upon. On a recent trial trip round the Isle of Wight the vessel proved exceptionally steady. Above will be found reproductions of views of (1) The Royal Mail s.s. "Aragon." (2) The handsome entrance hall, with staircase leading to the promenade deck. (3) The bridge. (4) A corner of the gymnasium. (5) The social hall.

Digitized by Google

Art in the Sale-room.

WILLIAM AND MARY.

"The topsail shivers in the wind,
The ship she's bound to sea;
But yet my heart, my soul, my mind,
Are, Mary, moored with thee."

(London: Published September 26, 1785, by R. Pollard, Engraver, No. 15, Braynes Row, Spa Fields.)

Digitized by Google

A Problem Solved

By a Food Expert.

GRAPE-NUTS fully cooked cereal food is made by taking the portions of wheat and barley containing the nutritive elements, subjecting the different parts to various forms of mechanical treatment, and finally blending them in the proper proportions.

When ready for the market it is in the form of small granules from the size of a pin head to two or three times that size. These pieces glisten when held to the light, showing the sugar crystallized and deposited on each granule. This sugar is one of the most nutritive articles of food known, and is produced and evolved from the starchy part of the grains while in process of manufacture.

No cane or beet sugar is used in making GRAPE-NUTS.

The flavour is a very delicate sweet, and the food itself is crisp and delicious.

Being fully cooked at the factory, no preparation is required, but it is ready to be served instantly, with a little cream or milk, either hot or cold.

All first-class grocers sell GRAPE-NUTS at 7d. per packet.

A marked increase in mental strength is found after ten days' use of GRAPE-NUTS.

The food contains elements which nature uses to rebuild the cellular tissue of the brain.

Grape-Nuts

Kodaks

for the . . .

Holidays.

THE SEVERAL MODELS OF . . .

The Folding Pocket Kodaks

OFFER A SPLENDID and

A UNIQUE CHOICE

to the HOLIDAY MAKER.

Kodak photography is photography simplified. No dark room and no previous experience required. Full instructions enabling anyone to commence at once supplied with every camera.

The 3a F.P.K. - Price 90/-

Size of picture, 5½ by 3¼ inches.

Prices - 26/- to 90/- Complete.

OF ALL DEALERS, AND

KODAK, Ltd., 57-61, Clerkenwell Rd., LONDON, E.C.

Branches: 96, Bold Street, LIVERPOOL; 72-74, Buchanan Street, GLASGOW; 50, Brompton Road, S.W.; 60, Cheapside, E.C.; 115, Oxford Street, W.; 171-173, Regent Street, W.; and 40, Strand, London, W.C.

"The House for Veils."

Largest Selection in London.

CHARLES LEE & SON,

The Royal Specialists for Ladies' Wear, . .

98 & 100, Wigmore St., LONDON, W.,

famous for

The Royal Crescent Veil,

a shaped Patent adjustable Veil, at prices and quality showing a great saving over veiling purchased by the yard.

9d., 1/-, 1/3, 1/6, 1/9, 2/-, 2/3, 2/6, etc

MOTOR VEILS.
MOTOR HATS.
MOTOR VEILS.

The latest and largest selection in London

Messrs. LEE & SON continue to send a box containing a good assortment by post; boxes ready for return—no trouble after selecting.

JOLLY & SON, BRISTOL.

Great . . .

Clearance Sale.

UNPRECEDENTED BARGAINS in all kinds of HIGH-CLASS DRAPERY!

These Sales are always POPULAR because GENUINE.

JOLLY & SON, 40, 41, 42 & 43, COLLEGE GREEN, BRISTOL.

Lists and Patterns Free.

ST. JACOBS OIL

CURES

LUMBAGO, SCIATICA,

RHEUMATISM,

Neuralgia | Soreness
Bruises | Stiffness

And Bodily Aches and Pains.

In 1/1½ and 2/6 sizes.

Of all Chemists.

CONQUERS PAIN!

ROBINSON & CLEAVER, LD., BELFAST.

REGENT ST. & CHEAPSIDE, LONDON; and LIVERPOOL.

Manufacturers to His Majesty the King and H.R.H. the Princess of Wales.

Carriage paid on orders of 20s. upwards in United Kingdom.

CAMBRIC

"Cheapest Handkerchiefs I have ever seen."—Sylvia's Journal.

| | |
|---|---|
| Children's ... | 1/3 per doz. |
| Ladies' ... ... | 2/3 „ |
| Gentlemen's | 3/3 „ |
| HEMSTITCHED. | |
| Ladies' ... ... | 2/9 per doz. |
| Gentlemen's | 3/11 „ |

SAMPLES AND ILLUSTRATED PRICE LISTS POST FREE.

POCKET HANDKERCHIEFS

"The Irish Cambrics of Messrs. Robinson and Cleaver have a world-wide fame."—The Queen.

Damask Table and House Linens, Shirts, Cuffs, Collars, and Ladies' Underclothing at Makers' Prices.

N.B.—To prevent delay all Letter Orders and Enquiries for Samples of above goods should be sent direct to Belfast.

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

L.—THE RELICS AND ANTIQUITIES OF METHODISM-WESLEYANA.

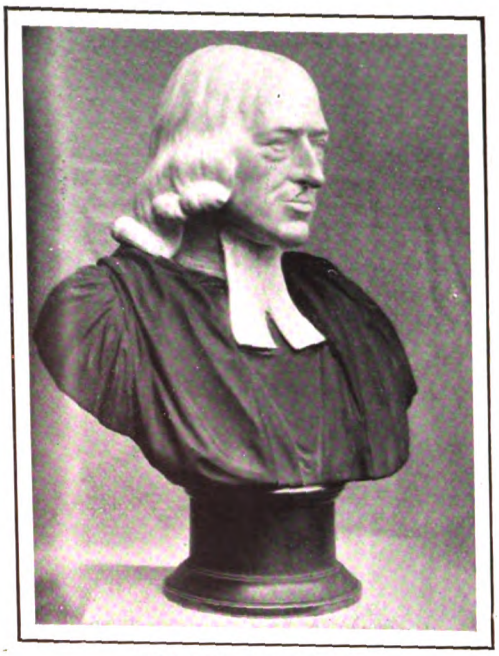
A YEAR ago the Methodist Collection of Mr. R. Thursfield Smith of Whitchurch, Salop, was described in these columns. Another indefatigable gatherer together of Wesley relics of every description relating to the society from its first foundation is Mr. J. G. Wright of San Simeon, Newbridge, Wolverhampton, who some time since contributed a very important article on his collection to the Methodist Recorder. Mr. Wright possesses over 400 portraits of Wesley, including all the rarest and most valuable, and some almost unique. The good work which is being done by the Wesley Historical Society, and the publication of such interesting books as the Rev. Richard Green's "John Wesley, Evangelist," are calculated to largely increase the number of Methodist collectors. Of late years the price of Wesley portraits has risen by leaps and bounds, and notwithstanding the phenomenal number of John Wesley's letters their value is well maintained. A letter of Wesley's, of average importance, rarely fails to fetch from £2 to £3, and those of George Whitefield and Charles Wesley command even more.

Twenty-five years ago the curious little book of poems by John Wesley's father, with the quaint frontispiece-portrait, could be picked up for 10s. It lately figured in a bookseller's catalogue at £27. Mr. Wright's comprehensive collection includes busts, medals, Wedgwood medallions, cameos, portraits, autographs, portraits, and letters of all Presidents of Conference since Wesley's time, contemporary Wesley books and tracts, Scripture playing-cards, seals, and "class" and "band" tickets. The two latter items have always been favourites with Wesley collectors, who often confine their attention exclusively to the formation of an unbroken series of them. Mr. Wright's collection is almost complete. Some, he points out, are exceedingly rare, on account of the custom of burying his or her tickets with a deceased member. It is interesting to note that the oldest class ticket in existence is a Bristol one. We reproduce on this page, by Mr. Wright's courtesy, the rare medallion of Charles Wesley (far scarcer than the John Wesley centennial medal), and the superb bust of John Wesley by Roubiliac. Amongst Mr. Wright's medals is a silver one, dated 1780, bearing the bust of John Wesley and the words "The righteous shall be had in everlasting remembrance."



THE BUST OF WESLEY
After Roubiliac, in the Wright Collection.

MR. WRIGHT'S BEAUTIFUL MEDALLION OF CHARLES WESLEY.
Born, 1708; died, 1788.

The Staffordshire plaque and the Primitive Methodist plate are now in possession of the writer. The latter came from the collection of Mr. R. Elliott of Camberwell Road. By a curious coincidence one of the portraits upon it is that of an ancestor of the Rev. Thomas Rippon, chairman of the Bristol Conference. Mr. R. Thursfield Smith, the Wesley collector, is also closely allied to the Thursfields of pottery fame. Collectors will be interested to learn that the rarest Wesley portrait is one by John Downes, after Williams, dated 1745. It measures 4½-in. by 2¾-in. The bust of Wesley by Coade (preserved at Didsbury College) is believed to be unique. Mr. Joseph Wright possesses no less than twenty-four Wesley medals.

Dr. Punshon of Bristol was, in his day, an enthusiastic collector of Methodist portraits and autographs. Mr. Wright regards the Wesley teaspoons occasionally offered for sale with legitimate suspicion, and the wary Wesley collector should remember that Wesley only used three seals at various periods of his life. One of these, mounted in gold, he bequeathed to his friend and housekeeper, Elizabeth Ritchie. The earliest has a dove, with the olive branch and the motto "Nuncio pacis." The second represents a sunflower turning to the sun, with a Latin motto, "Ubi Soli." The third has the initials "J. W.," with the motto "Believe, love, and obey." When Wesley seals and Wesley teaspoons come into the market it is clearly a case of caveat emptor. Mr. Wright would be glad to know of the existence of any glass-pictures relating to Wesley or his associates. Some of the finer Wesley portraits would have lent themselves admirably to the creation of such beautiful eighteenth century glass-pictures as those often to be seen in the collection of Miss Woollan of Brook Street.

B.

A UNIQUE PLATE
Dealing with the development of Primitive Methodism. Manufactured in 1830.

ONE OF THE STAFFORDSHIRE PLAQUES
Issued in thousands at the end of the eighteenth century. In a private Wesley collection.

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

hold and offer for sale specimens of the
HIGHEST QUALITY
OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE
as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.

EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.
AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.
(Two hours from Paddington.)

Old Brass Stand and Lamp.

THE MISSES
H. & I. WOOLLAN
(Under Royal Patronage)
are showing a
UNIQUE
Collection of
Antiques.

Chippendale, Sheraton, and Hepplewhite Furniture. . . Worcester and Lowestoft Services. Lace, Glass, etc.

Showrooms: First Floor.
28, BROOK STREET, GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

BATH.
GEORGE GREGORY,
BOOKSELLER, Etc.
Write for Catalogues. An inspection of Mr. Gregory's shop should not be omitted by any visitor to Bath. Speciality—Americana. Old Bath. Colour-plate books. Autographs.
Address: 5, ARGYLE STREET.

CATALOGUES OF
ILLUSTRATED BOOKS, VIEWS, PORTRAITS, etc.,
GRATIS.
Books and Engravings Bought.
JAMES RIMELL & SON,
DEALERS IN OLD BOOKS AND ENGRAVINGS,
53, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON, W.

To Portrait & Print Collectors & Extra-Illustrators.
Kindly inspect stock or signify wants to
GEORGE SUCKLING, 13, Garrick Street
(next door to Garrick Club).
Mr. SUCKLING undertakes inlaying, arranging and binding of extra-illustrated books.

AUTOGRAPHS—HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS.
The oldest Dealers in Europe. For Catalogues, issued monthly, and all information write at once to
M. NOEL CHARAVAY,
3, RUE DE FURSTENBERG, PARIS,
where the "AMATEUR DES AUTOGRAPHES," a valuable Monthly Publication, may also be obtained.

JAMES TREGASKIS,
"The Caxton Head," 232, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.
RARE BOOKS, MEDIÆVAL MANUSCRIPTS, DOCUMENTS OF LITERARY & HISTORICAL INTEREST, ORIGINAL DRAWINGS, ENGRAVINGS, AMERICANA, CURIOSITIES, ANTIQUITIES, OBJECTS OF ART.
Catalogues Price Sixpence.

PORTRAITS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.
ENGLISH—FOREIGN—AMERICAN.
RARE ENGRAVINGS OF ALL SORTS.
WRITE FOR CATALOGUES OR VISIT THE SHOWROOMS OF
M. GODEFROY MAYER,
41, RUE BLANCHE, PARIS.

Bookbinding.—The Bedford Bindery.
OLD-ESTABLISHED FIRM.
VERY MODERATE PRICES. Special attention paid to extra-illustrated works.
SPECIMENS ON VIEW.
G. F. AYLING, 1A, CAMBRIDGE ST., EDGWARE ROAD, W.

MAGGS BROS.,
109, STRAND, W.C., LONDON, ENGLAND.
Dealers in RARE BOOKS AND FINE LIBRARY EDITIONS OF STANDARD AUTHORS, Voyages and Travels, Early Printed Books, 1st Editions of 17th, 18th, and 19th Century writers, Illustrated Works. Also Rare Portraits, Line, Stipple, Mezzotints, and Colour Engravings, and Autographs.
Recently issued—Illustrated Catalogues of Rare Books, Voyages and Travels, Engravings, Autographs. Price 6d. each.

THE RELICS OF NELSON AND HARDY.
Those interested in all that concerns the TRAFALGAR CENTENARY should not omit to visit the unique EXHIBITION to be held at the COUNTY MUSEUM, DORCHESTER, Capital of the County of Dorset, which gave England's navy Bingham, the Hoods, Digby, Domett and Hardy. Objects connected with Admiral Sir Thomas Hardy will be the chief feature of the Exhibition.

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

For Spaces in the Register apply to "THE EDITOR."

WANTED.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

Wanted, Autograph Letters of Theatrical People, especially Quin, George Colman the younger, and Miss Farren.—825, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

William Bodham Donne, any good autograph letters.—826, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Freemasonry, Constitutions of. 4to, 1784; in boards preferred. £1 10s. offered.—174, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Jest Books relating to Napoleonic Wars with coloured caricatures of Buonaparte. 10s. 6d. each offered.—175, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Any book or pamphlet relating to the art of colour pictures on glass, 1750-1805. 5s. offered.—175, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Wanted old Staffordshire or other ware figures of Dickensian interest, such as Mr. Pickwick, Sam Weller, etc.—524, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Early Doulton Pottery. Also any Pamphlets relating to the firm.—525, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Boxing. Small old Portraits Cribb and Molyneux—255, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Series of six engraved views of Bath, issued by John Robert Cozens, 1773 £4 set offered.—256, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good specimen of Baxter prints with a short biography of Baxter—257, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Picturesque views of Dorsetshire (coloured), 4to, published by Love, Weymouth, about 1800. £1 10s. offered.—258, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Original Dorse. water colours by Upham. Good price offered—259, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Rare colour portraits of Nelson.—260, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

TAPESTRY, FURNITURE, Etc.

Carved Chippendale Bureau Bookcase.—412, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Bristol Theatre. Old playbills, 1855-57, with name of Marie Wilton (Lady Bancroft) in cast.—748, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Book Plates—Naval, Masonic, Bath, Dorset.—749, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

Miscellaneous—continued.

Playbills and cuttings and any information relating to the London Bridge Theatre in Tooley Street, some time called the Borough Theatre.—750, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Fan papers relating to Nelson or Buonaparte, 1795-1815. Liberal offer.—751, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

BOOKS.

Scrap Book containing almost complete collection of theatrical notices from 1850 to 1865. In good condition.—132A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Ten Battersea Boxes with portraits. What offers.—522, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Set of Champagne Glasses, beautifully cut.—523, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Small Library, theatrical, naval, topographical principally. Would disperse or sell en bloc.—747A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

TAPESTRY,

Venetian Chair, XVIIIth Century.—409A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

THE Hon. John Scott Montagu, M.P., has introduced a Bill into the House of Commons which, if it become law, should place a much-needed check upon the foreign motor-car driver of doubtful antecedents and having no idea of the decencies of the road, who, by reason of his reckless driving, is responsible for no small part of the present agitation. Mr. Montagu would make it a condition precedent to the issue of a driving licence to a non-resident alien that he should produce (a) such evidence in writing from the police authority of his place of residence as the council consider sufficient that his character and conduct as a driver of motor-cars has been satisfactory, and (b) the licence or certificate (if any) authorising him to drive a motor-car in his own country.

* * *

Although the date of the first meeting of the Royal Commission which is to enquire into the working of the Motor Car Act is as yet undecided, and even its composition is unknown, it is of vital importance that motorists should lose no time in preparing their case. In the interests of the movement all instances of flagrant injustice or magisterial prejudice, or anything bearing on the necessity for altering the present law, should be communicated to the Automobile Club or the Motor Union, whose officials are engaged in collecting information to be laid before the Commission.

* * *

An instance of the methods adopted by the police in certain districts in order to obtain convictions is given by a correspondent of the Autocar, which states that the story could be borne out by many persons in court. Two constables had given the usual evidence as to timing a motorist over a measured distance. A third officer then went into the box, and "corroborated in every detail" the evidence of the preceding witnesses. When pressed in cross-examination as to how he could have been present at both ends of the trap at once, he admitted that he was not there at all, but that the superintendent had instructed him to "corroborate" the two men who constituted the trap. The magistrates, nevertheless, inflicted the usual fine, and instead of commenting on the disclosure which had been made, revealed the state of their minds by recounting in court some personal experiences of the risks they had run from reckless motorists.

* * *

Messrs. Michelin are placing upon the market for ordinary touring purposes the new anti-skid which was used for the first time in the French Eliminating Trials. Although of the steel-studded type, it differs widely in construction from any other non-skidding tyre at present in use. A thick and narrow band of leather is dovetailed into the rubber tread, the broad-headed rivets passing through the leather and being secured to the fabric of the cover. The leather and rubber are cemented together by a secret process. It is claimed for the new tyre that it is practically unpuncturable, as resilient as an ordinary pneumatic, an absolute preventive against side-slip with reasonable care in driving, and free from the heating troubles that are so often experienced when the leather band entirely encloses the tyre.

* * *

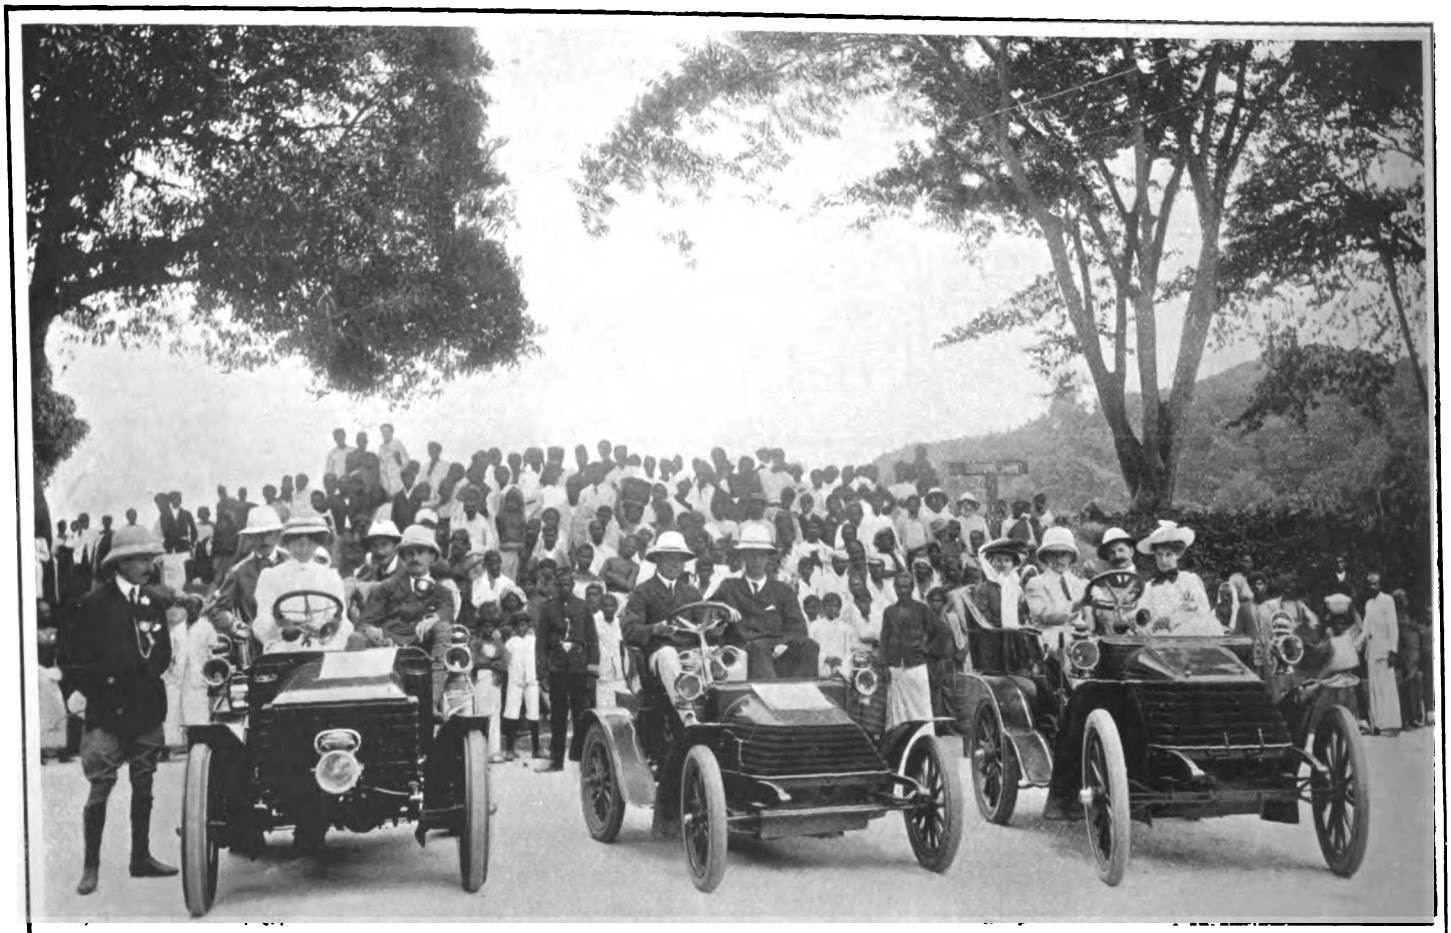
The match between Mr. Siddeley's 18-h.p. Siddeley car and M. Paul Meyan's 24-h.p. De Diétrich commenced on Wednesday in last week, and is due to finish on Wednesday next, should neither car fail to complete a day's run within the appointed time before that day. The stakes are for 10,000-fr. a side, and it will be remembered that the match is the outcome of the claim put forward that a British car holds the world's record for reliability, a Siddeley having successfully completed a 5,000-mile trial last winter under the observation of the Automobile Club.

* * *

The conditions of the contest are very simple. All repairs must be carried out during running time, and the match will come to an end when one car fails to complete a day's journey by 7 p.m. If both vehicles finish the trial without being disqualified on this ground, the winner will be the one that has succeeded most often in maintaining an average of 25 kilometres per hour over the different sections into which the daily runs are divided. Each car will carry an observer on behalf of the other competitor, and timekeepers will be stationed at certain points on the road. The total distance to be covered is 4,400 kilomètres (about 2,750 miles), which is divided into fifteen stages of about 320 kilomètres each.

* * *

Eighteen motor-boats started last Saturday in the cross-Channel race from Boulogne to Folkestone and back. The weather was fine and the sea calm for the greater part of the journey. "Napier II." was the first to finish, in 2-hr. 25-min. 50-sec., closely followed by "La Rapière." In the cruiser class "Forces-Pas," with a Mors engine and a Pitre hull, took 3-hr. 31-min., and "De Diétrich II." 4-hr. 27-min.



THE MOTOR IN CEYLON.

Three Wolseley cars which took part in the recent Reliability Trials at Kandy.

Digitized by Google

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Prevents the Hair from falling off.

Restores Gray or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.

Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no unpleasant odour.

IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin, or even white linen.

Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

Ask your Chemist or Hair-Dresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.

Prepared only by the . . .

ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd.,
33, Farringdon Road, London, E.C.

SULPHOLINE
SKIN LOTION.

Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches,
Entirely fade away.

WHELPTON'S PURIFYING PILLS

For Indigestion, Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Sea Sickness.

INVALUABLE FOR LADIES.

8, 14, and 33 stamps.

G. WHELPTON, 4, Crane Court, Fleet St., London.

A Scientific Method of Growing Hair

The Evans Vacuum Cap provides the scientific means of applying to the scalp the common sense principles of physical culture. Baldness and falling hair are caused by the lack of proper nourishment of the hair roots. This lack of nourishment is due to the absence of blood in the scalp—an abnormal condition. It is the blood which feeds the hair roots, as well as every other part of the body. If you want the hair to grow on the scalp the blood must be made to circulate there. It is exercise which makes the blood circulate. Lack of exercise makes it stagnant. The Vacuum method provides the exercise which makes the blood circulate in the scalp. It gently draws the rich blood to the scalp and feeds the shrunken hair roots. This causes the hair to grow.

Test It Without Expense

You can tell whether it is possible to cultivate a growth of hair on your head by ten minutes' use of the Evans Vacuum Cap. We will send you the Cap with which to make the experiment without any expense to you.

If the Evans Vacuum Cap gives the scalp a healthy glow this denotes that the normal condition of the scalp can be restored. A three or four minutes' use of the Cap each morning and evening thereafter will produce a natural growth of hair. If, however, the scalp remains white and lifeless after applying the vacuum, there is no use in trying further—the hair will not grow.

The Bank Guarantee

We will send you, by prepaid express, an Evans Vacuum Cap, and will allow you ample time to prove its virtue. All we ask of you is to deposit the price of the Cap in the Jefferson Bank of St. Louis, where it will remain during the trial period, subject to your own order. If you do not cultivate a sufficient growth of hair to convince you that the method is effective, simply notify the bank and they will return your deposit in full.

A sixteen-page illustrated book will be sent you on request, postage prepaid in full.

Evans Vacuum Cap Co., 923, Fullerton Bldg., St. Louis, U.S.A.

"CROWN" Lavender Salts

are noted for their delightfully refreshing fragrance.

Of all Chemists and Stores, or post free, 1/2 and 2/3, from

THE CROWN PERFUMERY CO.,
108, Fore Street, London.

PARIS. NEW YORK.

MEDICAL GALVANISM

HAS CONQUERED some of the most obstinate complaints after all other remedies have failed.

HALE'S IMPROVED ELECTRIC BELTS and BATTERIES for wearing next the body without blistering or injuring the skin. These appliances are

PERFECT GENERATORS OF ELECTRICITY, and are most comfortable in wear. Price One Guinea.

RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, and GOUT are speedily REMOVED by this powerful Agent.

ELECTRIC BELT and SUSPENSOR, price 42s., for MEN, for VARICOCELE, Nervous Debility, and Exhaustion, Bladder Weakness, etc.

Pamphlets Gratis. Consultations Free.

HALE & SON, Medical Galvanists,
117, CHANCERY LANE, LONDON.

THE CHARING CROSS BANK. ESTABLISHED 1870.
119 and 120, BISHOPSGATE ST. WITHIN, E.C.,
and 28, BEDFORD ST., CHARING CROSS, London.
Assets, £694,403. Liabilities, £372,291. Surplus, £322,112.
Loans of £5 to £2,000 granted at a few hours' notice in town or country on mortgage of furniture, trade and farm stock, plant, crops, etc., without removal. Also on deeds, policies, and reversions. Distance no object. Easy terms.
2½ per cent. allowed on Current account balances.
DEPOSITS of £10 and upwards received on terms as under.
Subject to 3 months' Notice of Withdrawal 5 per cent. per annum.
" 6 " " 6 " "
" 12 " " 7 " "
Special terms for longer periods. Interest paid quarterly. The Terminable Deposit Bonds pay nearly 9 per cent., and are a safe investment. Write or call for Prospectus.
A. WILLIAMS. } Joint Managers.
H. J. TALL., }

BIRKBECK BANK

ESTABLISHED 1851.

Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.
Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.
Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

SPA, BELGIUM.

(10 Hours from London.)

The Oldest Chalybeate Springs in the World.

Finest Bathing Establishment in Europe. Best cure for Anæmia, Chlorosis, and Heart Affections. Countless attractions, Steeplechases, Horse Show, Concerts, Theatre, Automobile Races, Golf, Balls. For programme write

BUREAU DE PUBLICITE, SPA.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

THE "Leewig" petticoat, invented and patented by Messrs. Charles Lee and Son of Wigmore Street, is one of the most practical, hygienic, and at the same time elegant, inventions of the age.

The foundation of this is a stockinette elastic top, which stretches with every movement of the figure, thus giving perfect ease and comfort in every position to the wearer, and avoiding all fulness around the waist and hips, which are not desirable with the present modes. These tops are made in mercerised spun at 8s. 9d., in pure spun 18s. 9d., in heavy fleeced all-wool 12s. 9d., stockinette 11s. 9d., and heavy spun for winter wear 23s. 9d. In addition to this is the Treves chamois leather top, ventilated, at 21s. Your foundation or foundations selected, you can vary your underskirts as often as you please for each and every occasion. You simply have to unhook one and attach another of these beautifully-made flounces, which are carried out in every conceivable material.

Now is the time to call and select a complete outfit, which can be had at a very great reduction, and you will then be provided with every requisite at a most moderate outlay. If you are unable, or have not the available time, to inspect these personally, by mentioning THE KING you can have a full selection sent you on approval, and you can then try the effect of this invaluable combination at your ease, and I am certain when once you start wearing the "Leewig" you will patronise no other. I notice there are several imitations of this advertised, but they are not the "Leewig," and have not the cachet at all, as you will admit even by glancing at our admirable illustration, which, good as it is, is far excelled by the original. I just mention some of the different prices and varieties, for to go more into detail would be impossible, as I am told there are quite a thousand flounces to select from. I will start with the simple and most practical, in moirette, of a very stout and excellent quality, in navy, black, white, green, and brown, all reduced to 10s. 9d. Then follows an "everlasting" silk moirette in black, at prices varying from 14s 9d. to 21s.; rich glacé flounces from 18s. 11d. to 21s., in various colours. For country and present daily wear are the charming French batiste, lawn, and many other washing materials, starting from 3s. 11d. and gradually rising in price to 21s., according to the amount of elaboration. In evening flounces the variety is simply bewildering.

Bassano.

SOME EXAMPLES OF THE "LEEWIG" PETTICOAT.
(Messrs. Charles Lee and Son, Wigmore Street, W.)

From the three charming examples shown it is difficult to make a selection. The one on the left is of blue glacé, with white sprigged net and bands of glacé, with a full lace flounce at the bottom, and costs only 39s. 6d. The middle one represents a beautiful design in lace over pink glacé, with prettily-festooned double ruchings of lace, at 55s. 6d., and the one on the left is a charming lace over white glacé, and can be had for 49s. 6d. There are also some lovely net-trimmed ones with ribbon ruchings in all colours, and one which greatly took my fancy had seven or eight full frills of soft Valenciennes about 3-in. or 4-in. wide, and was very effective. I must not forget the flounces in broderie Anglaise, which has been such a prominent material with us this season. These are exquisite. Do not forget, when you write for an outfit to be sent you on approval, to ask for one or two of these to be included in the selection. A word in season may be useful to seaside and country girls, and that word is the all-important one, "Complexion." There are so many beauty artists established now in every part of London that it behoves us to be very, very careful, if we patronise any of them, to patronise only the very best of them. There is a very great deal more harm than good done in this respect by using inferior materials. I am making the round of these establishments, and will give you the benefit of my experiences in a week or two, when I have visited more of them, and have a little more space at my command. But the skin is a very delicate thing to experiment upon, therefore I strongly advocate extreme caution in the use of all these skin creams and skin foods, unless we are sure of our beauty doctor. I do know of a very simple and excellent preparation, which seems to me perfectly harmless and most beneficial, and I am having it analysed before recommending it to anyone, as you cannot be too careful in this.

The most useful and suitable hats for seaside and country week-ends are the large round sailor hats, with no other trimming than a long chiffon veil wound round the crown, which is much higher than the usual sailor one, and falling in long ends down the back, with the usual cache-peigne of roses or other flowers.

Open-work stockings are now considered very bad form, and plain silk ones, to match the coloured shoes and general tone of the costume, are the only correct style. White shoes and stockings are still much seen with white morning costumes everywhere.

Digitized by Google

ARIEL

The ALL-BRITISH Touring Car. . . .

Winner of the GOLD MEDAL in the Scottish Trials, beating all comers in the class for 3 or 4 Cylinders.

THE ARIEL MOTOR CO.,

LIMITED,

127-130, Long Acre, London, W.C.

IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

can be given of the 15-h.p. Model, fitted with side entrance body.

£550.

Particulars on request. Free trials arranged.

---

Llangammarch Wells,

CENTRAL WALES.

(The British Nauheim.)

An Ideal Spa for the Treatment of Heart Disease, Gout, and Rheumatism.

THE LAKE HOTEL

A first-class Hotel situated in extensive Private Grounds and lighted throughout with Electricity.

Telegraphic Address: "BARIUM," LLANGAMMARCH WELLS. Apply MANAGEMENT.

GOLF CLUB WITHIN FIVE MINUTES' WALK.

---

LEAMINGTON SPA.

REGENT HOTEL.

ENTIRELY RECONSTRUCTED.

DECORATIONS BY MAPLE.

Electric Light. Telephones in Every Room. Lift. Stabling for 90 Horses.

Garage and Resident Engineer.

APPLY FOR TARIFF.

Telegrams: "REGENT, LEAMINGTON." Tel. No. 0659.

---

Pure JAEGER Wool

EXCLUSIVE MATERIALS & DESIGNS.

Wool "Taffe'a," "Cambric," "Lattice-Web," Fancy Flannels, etc., specially selected for wearing quality, smartness, and for their pleasant and soft handle.

The most comfortable Shirts, Pyjama Suits, and Night Shirts obtainable for gentlemen.

PURE WOOL is known and recommended by Medical Men to be the safest and best for Summer Wear.

SHIRTS, from 8s. 9d.
NIGHT SHIRTS, 12s. 9d.
PYJAMA SUITS, 15s. 9d.

JAEGER

Pure Wool Knitted Golfers,

in plain colours and with coloured collars and cuffs.

Price 10/6.

Pure Wool Sheets and Blankets a Speciality.

Write for PRICE LIST (No. 24) containing Patterns and 230 Illustrations, post free.

LONDON—
126, Regent Street, W.
456, Strand (Charing Cross), W.C.
30, Sloane Street, S.W.
115, Victoria St., S.W.
85 & 86, Cheapside, E.C.

The JAEGER GOODS are sold in most towns. Address sent on application to Wholesale and Shipping Office, 95, Milton Street, London, E.C.

LOOK FOR THE LABEL! To checkmate the dishonest use of the name of JAEGER, look for the label on each article, and insist that the goods be described as "JAEGER" on invoice.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

WE are all busy preparing for our exodus from hot, dusty town to the delights of the country or seaside, as our fancy dictates. The annual summer sales have proved more kind than usual in helping us, and great indeed have been the facilities. Bathing gowns are naturally a most important part of seaside outfits, and this year there are some delightfully smart costumes; it, of course, depends on the bather what style is selected. There are two kinds of bathers—the one who really bathes, swims, dives, and means to get her bathing costume wet, and the one who trips daintily to the edge of the foam-crested wavelets and looks like a fashion-plate.

For the former, nothing is more suitable than white serge, cut square back and front, like a loose blouse with puff sleeves, and put into a band, and the short full skirt eased into the other side of the band. The trimming is of old gold braid, about an inch wide, in conventional Grecian design; a braided Swiss band confines the waist, or an old gold girdle is knotted around, but the band is more practical. The décolleté is outlined with old gold in the same design, only carried out in about half the width. Loose knickers to just below the knees and old gold stockings complete the charming effect. Of course, any colour can be introduced, or any other material can be substituted for the serge. This can be made at home most economically by a clever maid for a very few shillings. For the non-bather, I would suggest, especially for a fair creature, a light make of linen or sateen, in eau de nil, made in flowing draperies—the colour will not matter, for it rarely gets more than a little splashed—and it looks so sweet and so appropriate, with a wreath of green leaves on the pretty golden locks; and should there be by any chance a few rocks near the shore, she can recline gracefully thereon and allow her pretty feet to dangle carelessly in the sea. This is the "Undine" costume, and only suitable for maidens who are shy, or are not particularly proud of their shapeliness.

A THREE-QUARTER COAT IN DUCK'S EGG BLUE.

(Messrs. Ludlow and Cockburn, New Bond Street, W.)

For more shapely mermaidens, the short kilted skirts in pastel shades are advocated, with most elaborately braided or embroidered fitting bodices; with these, of course, corsets are worn, and the sky and sea make a delightful and picturesque background for this dainty silhouette, and a few odd remnants at the sales would make two or three changes of costume.

For afternoon wear, one of our illustrations shows a suitable gown, both dressy and cool. It is in china blue mousseline foulard, with tiny white spots. The full skirt is trimmed at the edge with frills and bands of the material, piped with black and white taffetas. The bodice is finely tucked and pleated and frilled, to correspond with the skirt. It has a chemisette of cream embroidered muslin, with knots of flame-coloured satin. Valenciennes lace trims the chemisette and sleeves. A china blue crinolette hat, with short ostrich tips, is worn with this gown. A most useful and charming three-quarter coat in duck's egg blue fine cloth, trimmed with blue and white embroidery and Valenciennes, is also shown. Miniature buttons with paste rims form a pretty finish. This coat is lined and faced with pink and white brocade. These models are from the firm of Messrs. Ludlow and Cockburn of New Bond Street, who are also selling their summer goods at an immense reduction. Hats and bonnets, the latter a speciality of this firm, range at prices from 10s. 6d. upwards. White Irish guipure blouses are also much lowered, as well as tailor-made coats and skirts, and model silk gowns. The button—large, small, painted, enamelled, smoked, brilliantly coloured, velvet-covered, in fact, any description of button—is quite a feature in the early autumn fashions. But for the next few weeks really it is difficult to judge, for we shall see something of everything, mostly "sale fashions."

A GOWN IN CHINA BLUE FOULARD.

(Messrs. Ludlow and Cockburn, New Pond Street, W.)

The sales of underlinen seem to be particularly fascinating this season, and Messrs. Robinson and Cleaver have a most varied assortment, both simple and elaborate, and their handkerchiefs are marvellously cheap. House and table linens are most tempting, reduced here, also. It is a wonderfully good opportunity for renewing fancy linen tea-cloths and side-cloths, of which they have a most tempting display, and these are so much reduced in price that, in fact, it is a pity to let such an occasion pass by without availing one's self of it. Do not forget that this is the last week of most of the sales and all these bargains will be at an end.

R. D.

(From photographs specially taken for this paper by Miss Mabel Lomnitz, 26, Victoria Street, S.W.)

Digitized by Google

NEW ZEALAND

THE BRIGHTER BRITAIN.

A NEW COUNTRY of marvellous beauty, with a fertile soil and a splendid climate. No extremes of heat or cold.

No droughts. An abundance of water, yet no rainy season.

An Evergreen Land rich in natural products.

A GREAT SHEEP, CATTLE AND DAIRYING COUNTRY.

Cheap farms with helpful assistance to farmers by the Government. Reduced steamer fares from the United Kingdom to New Zealand for persons with small capital.

No private monopoly of Public Utilities; the Government owns and operates Railways, Telegraphs, Telephones and Insurance.

No Lock-outs! No Strikes!! Employment disputes adjusted by Arbitration!!!

NEW ZEALAND IS THE WONDERLAND OF THE WORLD.

Its Thermal Sights are unique in their extent, beauty and weirdness.

The Mammoth Geyser "Waimangu" (Black Water) hurls an immense mass of boiling water, mud and stones over 1,000 feet high.

Hot Mineral Water and Mud Baths; The Curative Baths of Rotorua, Te Aroha and Hanmer are world famous. Government doctors in attendance.

Baths. Gardens. Games. Music.

and picturesque. Here are lakes of great size and depth—canyons that surpass the greatest of other lands—dense forests with a tropical profusion of ferns and flowers—innumerable waterfalls—monoliths of granite many thousands of feet in height—glaciers, snowfields, and the peerless Sounds, with their 400 miles of inside sailing distance.

TRANSIT is convenient throughout New Zealand. Government railways, Express trains, Pullman and Dining Cars. Excellent coastal steamers. Splendid coaching routes. Hotels, good; charges moderate. Government Hotels, Spas, and Accommodation Houses in many of the principal tourist resorts.

Large Mail Steamers with every modern comfort and convenience leave Great Britain for New Zealand fortnightly. Duration of direct journey, 40 days; via Suez and Australia, 44 days; via Canada, 32 days; via San Francisco, 28 days.

The best time to visit New Zealand is during the summer months, from November to April.

ALL INFORMATION regarding Travel, Tourist Routes, Spas, Baths, Sport, etc., etc., is supplied free of charge by the GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENT OF TOURIST AND HEALTH RESORTS, Head Office, WELLINGTON, NEW ZEALAND. Branch Offices throughout the Colony. Information regarding access to New Zealand, Reduced Steamer

HAULING KAURI LOGS THROUGH BUSH, KAURI FOREST, NORTH AUCKLAND.

FELLING KAURI TREE, NORTH AUCKLAND, KAURI FOREST.

WAIRUA FALLS, WAIRUA RIVER, NORTH AUCKLAND.

The ALPINE SCENERY of New Zealand combines the distinguishing features of Switzerland, Norway and America. The Southern Alps extend for 300 miles. Mt. Cook, the highest peak, is belted by the largest glaciers in the temperate regions—the Tasman being 18 miles long and 2 miles wide. Near the foot of Mt. Cook is the Hermitage Hotel. Government guides, Alpine huts, and all necessary Alpine equipment available for use of visitors.

The LAKES of New Zealand are most pleasing in their charm of colour, contour and environment. Rotorua, Rotoiti, Taupo, and Waikaremoana in the North Island; Manapouri, Wakatipu, Te Anau, Wanaka, Kanieri and Mahinapua in the South Island are the most notable. The Lakes of the South Island are surrounded by mountain scenery of singular beauty and magnificence. Steamers and Power Launches. Good Hotels.

The WEST COAST FIORDLAND is indescribably wild

Fares, Settlement Commerce, Industries, Travel, etc., etc., also supplied at the Office of the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, London—Mr. J. G. Gow, Commercial Agent for New Zealand, Durban, South Africa, also supplies general information respecting New Zealand.

Minister for Tourist and Health Resorts: Hon. Sir Joseph G. Ward, K.C.M.G. Superintendent: T. E. Donne, Wellington, New Zealand. The Superintendent invites correspondence.

See Tourist Department's "Itinerary of Travel" and descriptive Guide Books.

An International Exhibition of Products, Manufactures, Arts, Sciences, Amusements, etc., etc., is to be held by the Government of New Zealand in Hagley Park, Christchurch City, commencing 1st November, 1906, and terminating April, 1907. Full particulars obtainable from the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, S.W.

OKOROIRE.

HOT SPRINGS AND SANATORIUM HOTEL.

One of the finest Health Resorts in the Thermal District.

The first place of interest en route to Rotorua, New Zealand.

Delightful NATURAL HOT MINERAL BATHS, free to Guests. Sufferers from Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Affection of the Eyes, Skin Diseases, etc., are often permanently cured by these waters.

CLIMATE.—Beautifully clear and bracing atmosphere, charming surroundings.

SPORT.—The Streams in the hotel grounds are exceedingly well-stocked with Trout. Plenty of Game, viz: Pheasants, Virginian Quail, Wild Duck, Hares, and Deer. Lawn Tennis, Golf, and Croquet.

The drive from Okoroire to Rotorua is one of the most beautiful in New Zealand.

T. MARTIN,
Manager.

NEW ZEALAND.

THE GRAND HOTEL, ROTORUA.

Situated in the Centre of the Hot Lakes District.

Patronised by T.R.H. The Prince and Princess of Wales.

THE HOTEL is in the immediate neighbourhood of the beautifully laid-out Government Gardens, wherein are situated the celebrated "Priest," "Rachel," "Postmaster," "Duchess," and other mineral baths, the curative properties of which are world famous. It has magnificent and lofty apartments, spacious promenade, balconies, snug alcoves, and luxuriously-appointed drawing, music, conversation, reading, smoking, and billiard rooms, perfect sanitation, and is lighted throughout by electricity.

BATH CHAIRS and attendance provided to convey invalids to or from the various bath houses. Tariff 12/6 per day inclusive.

W. J. LEES, Manager.

THE GEYSER HOTEL,

WHAKAREWAREWA, ROTORUA.

Situated in close proximity to the wonderful Geysers and Maori Settlement.

Visitors staying at the Geyser Hotel have continued opportunity of witnessing them as they can be seen plainly from the verandah of the Hotel, also of studying native life and customs.

The Hotel possesses its own private hot and cold curative mineral baths of which the most valued are the "Spout," "Oil," and "Carlsbad" Baths.

It has lately been greatly enlarged and re-furnished in a most comfortable manner. Electric light is established throughout the hotel and baths.

Coaches run regularly between Whakarewarewa, the Rotorua Sanatorium, and Government Gardens.

Tariff 10s. per day or £3 per week, inclusive. For a lengthened stay terms can be arranged

CHAS. E. NELSON, Proprietor.

Digitized by Google

THE KING'S MENU.

SOUFFLE D'ECRIVISSE.

Whisk a gill and a-half of just liquid aspic till white and creamy, then mix into it three gills of cream which has been whipped till perfectly stiff, a tablespoonful of the Escoffier Anchovy Vinegar, and a pinch of coralline pepper. Now mix into this half a pound of crab finely minced, and a teaspoonful of very finely-minced parsley, chives, and chervil. Have ready a soufflé mould, to which has been fastened a paper band rising two inches above the case, fill it with the mixture, and stand in the charged ice cave, or on ice, for an hour and a-half, then just before it is served remove the paper band carefully, pipe on to it a rose of stiffly-whipped cream flavoured with a drop or two of anchovy essence, Escoffier White Tarragon Vinegar, and a dust of coralline pepper. Sprinkle round the top of the soufflé with finely-minced parsley.

RIS DE VEAU A LA JARDINIERE.

Trim two heart sweetbreads, steep them in cold water for a few hours, blanch them—that is, bring them to the boil in slightly-salted water—drain them, and put them to press between two plates, the top one lightly weighted. When cold the best sides of the sweetbreads are larded. Now cut a couple of slices of streaky bacon into dice, and put these into a braising pan, together with an onion and a carrot sliced, a small bouquet of herbs, a couple of cloves, a few peppercorns, and half an ounce of butter; lay the sweetbreads, larded side uppermost, on the top of these, and cook over a bright fire for a few minutes. Now add a gill of good stock, in which has been dissolved a teaspoontul of Lemco, cover with buttered paper, and braise slowly in the oven for fifty or sixty minutes, basting well and frequently, and adding a little more stock as that in the pan reduces. When the sweetbreads are done, lift them out, brush over with liquid glaze, and set them in the oven for a minute or two to crisp and brown the lardoons. Meantime strain off the stock they were braised in, free it from fat, add a little demi-glace sauce to it, boil down together, and then, when the sweetbreads are ready, arrange them on a croûte of fried bread, pour the sauce over them, garnish with jardiniere, and serve. For the garnish use equal quantities of nice young vegetables, such as green peas, French beans cut into short pieces, little olive shapes of young carrots and young turnips, and cauliflower buds, cooking these separately and carefully, then tossing them in a little good demi-glace sauce before arranging them on the dish.

TOMATES EN SURPRISE.

There are several versions of this useful little cold vegetable entremet, one of which latter it is always safer to include in the menu, in place of a second sweet, as so many people refuse these altogether nowadays. The simplest version of the tomates en surprise is to scoop the pulp from some nicely-rounded tomates, as much of a size as possible, and placed on ice first to make them firm and obviate risk of breaking. Now make this tomato pulp into tomato cream, mix into this the heads of carefully-cooked green asparagus (which blend extremely well with tomatoes, as well as with several other vegetables) and artichoke bottoms cut into dice, and fill up the tomatoes again with the mixture. Stand on ice till wanted to serve. For the tomato cream rub the pulp through a fine hair sieve, then to every two tablespoonfuls (half gill) of this purée add a tablespoonful of liquid aspic, two or three drops of carmine, a teaspoonful of the Escoffier White Tarragon Vinegar, a good dessertspoonful of thick mayonnaise, and two tablespoonfuls of stiffly-whipped cream. For a more elaborate version of this dish line some tomato moulds with aspic cream, fill them with the mixture of tomato cream, asparagus heads, and diced artichoke bottoms, and place the moulds in the charged ice cave till required to serve, then unmould, and serve garnished with finely-chopped aspic jelly or on a bed of salad.

CHARLOTTE AUX FRAISES.

Line a mould with sponge fingers, and fill it with the following: Cook and sieve a pint and a-half of strawberry purée, sweeten with four ounces of castor sugar, add a squeeze of lemon juice, mix in an ounce of fine leaf gelatine dissolved in a little water and re-heated in the purée after this has been sieved and measured. Let this purée cool, then mix in a gill and a-half of cream whipped till stiff, and as the mixture begins to set fill up the biscuit-lined mould. Stand on ice till firm, then unmould carefully just before serving. A little liqueur to taste improves this cream mixture, which can also be moulded as it is, or in a mould lined with maraschino jelly, or plain lemon or strawberry jelly.

A JULY LUNCHEON.

SOUFFLE D'ECRIVISSE.

RIS DE VEAU A LA JARDINIERE.

PINTADES A LA WYVERN.

SALADE ROMAINE.

TOMATES EN SURPRISE.

CHARLOTTE AUX FRAISES.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

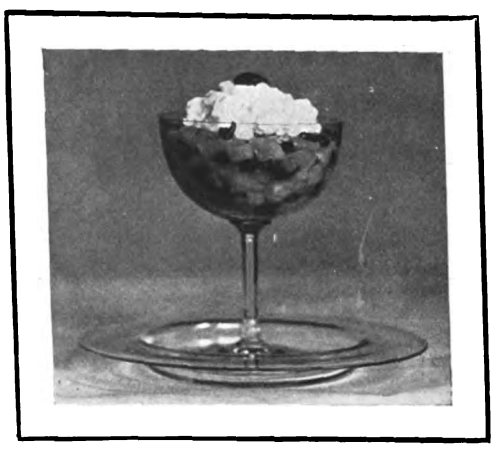
COUPE JACQUES (Contessa).—For this you can either put a macedoine of various fruits, which has been placed on ice for a couple of hours, into high old-fashioned champagne glasses or into ordinary ice glasses or cups made of ice, and cover the macedoine with any cream or water ice to taste, or you can put kinds of ices in layers in separate ice cups, with between them blanched and shredded almonds or other nuts to taste and glacé fruit, which has been marinaded first in liqueur wine or spirit. At this time of year the place of this fruit can be taken by small fresh strawberries, first marinaded and then lightly frozen, or little cubes of pineapple, melon, etc.

PINEAPPLE CUP (Club Butterfly).—Embed a large jug or bowl in a tub of ice and salt; then put in it two slices of pineapple with a dessertspoonful of castor sugar; pour on to this two bottles of good sound claret and five or six lumps of ice as big as an egg. When the cup is wanted add a quart bottle of well-iced sparkling moselle.



COUPE JACQUES.
(Specially prepared and photographed for this paper.)

CHABLIS CUP (Icicle).—I usually make it as follows, but have other recipes if this is not what you want. Make a pint of good strong lemonade with fresh lemons, being careful to remove all pips and pith, and use only the peel cut as thinly as possible and the fruity part, taking care the water is quite boiling when pouring it on to these. When this is quite cold put it into a jug or bowl embedded in ice and salt; add to it a large wineglassful of sherry, a bottle of Chablis, and a small sprig of lemon verbena. Mix these well together, let them stand in the ice-embedded bowl for three-quarters of an hour, then lift out the verbena, add a bottle of well-iced soda water, and serve. The lemonade should be strained through fine muslin before the Chablis and sherry are added to it. Hock or champagne can be substituted for the Chablis in this cup.

BOSTON CREAM CAKES (Mme. Butterfly).—Put two gills of boiling water into a small stewpan, add two tablespoonfuls of castor sugar and four ounces of fresh butter, and bring to the boil again, then stir in seven ounces of fine dry sifted flour, stir well for a few minutes on the stove, then lift the pan from the fire and let the mixture cool. Five eggs are then worked into it by degrees, one at a time, then the mixture is dropped in tablespoonfuls on to a lightly-buttered baking sheet, keeping the cakes a couple of inches apart, mind. Bake in a quick oven. When done they are cut open and filled with either whipped cream, sweetened and flavoured to taste, or with a custard made with two tablespoonfuls of "Patent" cornflour, three gills of milk, two ounces of sugar, a pinch of salt, two eggs (yolks only will do if the whites are wanted for meringues or a white cake), and a little vanilla or other essence to taste.

POTATO SALAD (Spy). — There are a score or more varieties of this. I wonder which particular one it is you want? Here is a simple one, and another that can be elaborated if wished. For the first, slice some freshly-boiled waxy potatoes while hot, season them with pepper, salt, oil, and vinegar very lightly, have ready some well-washed and drained watercress similarly seasoned, toss both together, and serve, garnished with either stoned olives farced with anchovy fillets, or croûtons, half of which are spread with anchovy butter and half with egg butter. For the more elaborate salad, slice some new cold boiled potatoes, and arrange them in the bowl with quartered hard-boiled plover or pheasant eggs, stoned olives, and sliced beetroot, dress with tartare or other of the mayonnaise sauces to taste. A garnish of prawns, crayfish tails, or filleted anchovies can be added if wished, and the salad can be served in a border mould of a salade cuite in an aspic coat.

ICE-PUDDING (Ace).—An ice-pudding, as good as it is simple and inexpensive, is made as follows: Grate and sieve very finely a pint of Daren bread-crumbs (or two gills of these and two gills of powdered ratafias or macaroons are very nice), then scald them with a pint and a-half of new milk and cream mixed which has been brought to the boil, together with a vanilla bean or the zest of a lemon (removed when the milk is well flavoured). Sweeten to taste, remembering that the mixture will be less sweet when frozen, then set aside till cold. Now flavour it to taste with brandy or liqueur, or a liqueur syrup and a little rum together are good. Add pieces of glacé fruit, cut small, cherries and pineapple going well with any form of brown bread pudding or cream, especially if maraschino or noyeau, with a little rum or brandy, be used to flavour the mixture with. Now freeze the mixture half solid, then whip lightly in a gill of cream which has been whipped till stiff, then pack the mixture into a mould and set it in the ice cave for two hours or so. It is then unmoulded as usual. Of course, a custard, more or less rich, can take the place of the plain hot milk and cream if a richer pudding is desired. In either case about six ounces of glacé fruit should be added to the mixture.

THE YACHTING AND RIVER SEASON.

With the advent of this, it is good news that the Escoffier Company have added a long list of delicious soups to the specialités prepared by the recipes and under the supervision of Maître Escoffier. These soups are put up in bottles and tins, and are obtainable now from most high-class grocers and stores, but when any difficulty is experienced in obtaining them, a line to the company's head quarters at Ridgemount Street, Tottenham Court Road, W.C., will bring the name of the nearest agent by return of post. The list of the Escoffier soups comprises the famous Bortsch, so well known to habitués of the Savoy and Carlton Restaurants, with its accompaniment of cream, pot au feu, potage à la Reine, au riz à la Cardinal, à l'Orientale, Crème de tomate, consomme à la Julienne and à la printanier, petite Marmite and croûte au pot, as well as that old English favourite, ox tail, under its French label of hoche-pot.

Digitized by Google

COOLS & REFRESHES THE SKIN.

BEETHAM'S

LAROLA

Regd

PRESERVES THE SKIN from the effects of the SUN, WINDS, and HARD WATER.
Entirely removes and prevents all ROUGHNESS, REDNESS, HEAT, IRRITATION, TAN, etc., and

KEEPS THE SKIN SOFT, SMOOTH, & WHITE

at all Seasons. DELIGHTFULLY COOLING and REFRESHING after Walking, Golfing, Cycling, Motoring, Yachting, etc.

Bottles, 1s., 1s. 9d., and 2s. 6d. each. Of all Chemists and Stores.
M. BEETHAM & SON, CHELTENHAM.

The 'Allenburys' Foods.

MOTHER AND CHILD.
Baby, 6½ months of age. Fed from birth on the 'Allenburys' Foods.

A Pamphlet on Infant Feeding and Management (48 pages) free on request.

The 'Allenburys' Foods.

The Milk Foods closely approximate in composition to human Milk, the natural and therefore best nourishment for the young infant.

They are as easy of digestion as maternal milk, and provide a perfect diet for the formation of firm flesh and strong bones.

The Milk Foods are absolutely free from any noxious germs, and hence are far superior to cow's milk as obtained in towns especially in the summer time.

No diarrhœa, digestive or stomach troubles need be feared from the use of the "Allenburys" Foods.

The Milk Foods can be made in a moment, the addition of hot water only being necessary.

The "Allenburys" Foods are so graduated as to provide the maximum amount of nourishment that the child is able to digest at the periods of life for which the foods are respectively recommended. For the robust and delicate they are alike suitable, and children thrive upon them as on no other diet.

MILK FOOD No. 1. From birth to 3 months.
MILK FOOD No. 2. From 3 to 6 months.
MALTED FOOD No. 3. From 6 months upwards.

ALLEN & HANBURYS Ltd., Lombard Street, LONDON.
UNITED STATES—Niagara Falls, N.Y. CANADA—66, Gerrard St. East, Toronto.
AUSTRALASIA—7, Spring St., Sydney. SOUTH AFRICA—88, Castle St., Cape Town.

THE WHITE WINES OF ENGLAND.

BULMER'S Famous Herefordshire CIDERS and PERRY.

For a beautifully illustrated booklet on Cider, price list, and special booklet for invalids, apply

H. P. BULMER and CO., HEREFORD.

INSALL'S "COMPACTUM" TEA-BASKET.

Carries its own Water Supply.

25/-

With "Sirram" Fittings. Fitted with kettle, stove and stand, tins for spirit and milk, water tank, canister for tea and sugar, provision box, 2 cups and saucers, butter bowl, 2 knives and 2 teaspoons.
Carriage paid. Cash with order.
ADVANTAGES. Small size, being only 10½in. by 7½in. by 8½in. Separate Water Tank. Light Weight. Lid can be used as Tray. Kettle and Stove can be used in the Basket. Metal Lining.

ST. AUGUSTINE'S, BRISTOL. Trunk, Portmanteau, and Bag Manufacturers.

DEVONSHIRE'S DELIGHTFUL DRINK.

WHITEWAY'S PURE CYDER.

DELICIOUS. INVIGORATING. HEALTH GIVING.

Made only of the pure juice from the finest English apples—free from chemical preservatives—and supplied to Royalty and both Houses of Parliament (Lords exclusively).
Recommended by the highest Medical Authorities as a panacea for Gout, Rheumatism, and Obesity.

WHITEWAY'S "CYDRAX" (Registered).

A pure Non-Alcoholic TEETOTAL Beverage.

"Cydrax" possesses a briskness of refreshing natural acidity, containing, in a somewhat lesser degree, the delightful aroma and flavour of Whimple Cider. It is made only of the best fruit obtainable, and contains no drug or preservative whatever.

For free illustrated booklet, price list, etc., write:
WHITEWAY'S, The Orchards, Whimple, Devon,
And 22 & 23, Albert Embankment, S.W. Telephone 173 Hop.

РУБЛЬ КОФЕ
(ROUBLE COFFEE.)

THE COFFEE OF THE EPICURE.

BERRIES, FRESH ROASTED,
2/= PER LB.
WE PAY THE CARRIAGE.

It may not sound cheap, but nothing REALLY GOOD ever is cheap.

Follow our directions, and a revelation awaits you of what REALLY GOOD COFFEE REALLY IS.

METATA AGENTS, 17, DEVONSHIRE SQUARE, LONDON, E.C.

UNDOUBTEDLY

over-indulgence in paper Cigarettes is injurious. Medical men emphatically state that it is responsible for much ill-health. A hygienic substitute is the FLOR DE DINDIGUL CIGARETTE (All Tobacco Leaf—No Paper).

It is far more satisfying, is deliciously mild, mellow to the palate, pure, and dispenses with the evil effects of paper. Doctors recommend and smoke them. They are truly a delightful Whiff. You should try them! Awarded 10 Gold Medals. Sold everywhere, 1d. each, 8/- per 100; and by BEWLAY, 49, Strand. Established 125 years.

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

MR. PATRICK KIRWAN, who with his "Idyllic Players" has been giving a series of pastoral plays in the Botanic Gardens, introduced some interesting novelties this year. As well as the three Shakespearian productions of "The Tempest," "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and "Love's Labour's Lost," there have been performances of one of John Lyly's plays which has never been produced on the modern stage, "Galathea"—a glimpse of the delightful old French chateau life of the time of "The Prince of Court Painters," and an original arrangement of the popular fairy tales, "The Sleeping Beauty" and "Rip Van Winkle."

A NOVEL CAR

Made by the Bristol Wagon and Carriage Works Company.

THE programme for the next season of the Mermaid Repertory Theatre, under the direction of Mr. Philip Carr, which opens at St. George's Hall on September 11, will include a number of new plays. The most important feature of the season will, however, be a complete cycle of the English historical plays of Shakespeare, which will be given during the five weeks from October 16 to November 18. Such a series of performances, although not unknown in Germany, is new to London, and apart from its Shakespearian interest will afford an almost continuous panorama of English history from King John to Henry VIII. Subscription tickets for the season at largely-reduced prices may be obtained from the offices, 3, Old Palace Chambers, Whitehall, if taken before July 22.

A REPRESENTATIVE committee has been formed, under the chairmanship of the Mayor of Winchester, with the object of excavating, preserving, and enclosing the remains of the ancient Abbey of Hyde, the burial-place of King Alfred, his wife Queen Elswitha, and his son King Edward the Elder. The remains of the Abbey are within a short distance of the spot where the fine statue of King Alfred, by Mr. Hamo Thornycroft, R.A., was erected in 1901, to commemorate the 1,000th anniversary of his death; but up to the present time no proper care has been taken for their preservation.

COWES WEEK will be unusually interesting this year on account of the presence at Spithead of the combined French and English Fleets, which are to be reviewed by his Majesty the King. In connection with the review, the Peninsular and Oriental Company announce the despatch from Tilbury to Spithead of the fine new twin-screw steam-ship "Mongolia," and doubtless many will avail themselves of this facility for viewing the magnificent Naval spectacle.

TOILET soap is one of the most dangerous enemies to health if it is impure. There is nothing so easily affected as the skin, and it is only the very best soap that can be applied with safety to the face. Triumphs of the perfumer's art, such as Cook's "Throne," "Russian Violet," and "Savon de Luxe," are, however, in a different category. Soothing and refreshing to the skin, any one of these preparations we have named, and indeed any of Messrs. Cook's preparations, may be used with impunity on the most sensitive skin. The standard of purity is the highest attainable, and being economical in use, they repay the slightly-increased initial outlay in their price.

THE proprietors of the Motorist and Traveller have published a most admirable souvenir of the Gordon Bennett race, which, thanks to the initiative and enterprise of the Topical Press Agency, they have been enabled to illustrate very profusely.

THE second annual Evening Fête and Café Chantant of the Lauderdale Mansions Tennis and Croquet Club was held on the grounds of the club on July 12, and, helped by fine weather and an admirably-arranged programme, was a brilliant success. The services of a number of well-known artists were obtained, and among those who assisted were Miss Marie Dainton, Miss Daisy Jerome, and Mr. Alan Adair. The stage management was in the hands of Mr. Philip Yorke, M. de Penso was the accompanist, and the members of the committee who officiated as stewards worked with a will to add to the success of the evening.

THE "Harzer Verkehrs-Verband" supplies an illustrated pamphlet, of 110 pages, concerning the interesting Harz mountains free of charge through Messrs. Thomas Cook and Son, London, or through the publisher, Rud. Stolle, Bad Harzburg (Germany).

A NEW RAILWAY POSTER.

Amusements.

AVENUE THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. FRANK CURZON.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.45
A MESSAGE FROM MARS.
By Richard Ganthony, in which
Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY will appear.
Preceded at 8, by MISS BRAMSHOTT'S ENGAGEMENT.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 3.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. FRANK CURZON.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
To-night at 8.15,
LADY MADCAP.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.15.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Lessee and Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
To-night at 8.45.
MR. HOPKINSON.
An original farce in three acts by R. C. Carton.
Preceded at 8.15 by Mr. Nelson Jackson.
Matinee every Saturday at 3.

DALY'S THEATRE.
Produced by Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.15.
Matinee Every Saturday at 2.30.
THE LITTLE MICHUS.
By A. Vanloo and G. Duval. Music by Andre Messager.
Adapted for the English stage by Henry Hamilton.
Lyrics by Percy Greenbank.
Box Office 10 to 10.

APOLLO THEATRE.
HENRY LOWENFELD, Sole Proprietor.
TOM B. DAVIS, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON
Every Evening at 8.15.
The Comic Opera, in Three Acts,
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Wednesday at 2.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.
Managers: A. & S. GATTI & CHARLES FROHMAN
Every Evening at 8.15,
THE CATCH OF THE SEASON,
By Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton
The Vaudeville Theatre Company.
Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15

NEW THEATRE.
Proprietor: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM
To-night and Every Evening at 8.30,
CHARLES FROHMAN presents
LEAH KLESCHNA.
A Play in Five Acts, by C. M. S. McLellan
Matinee Every Wednesday at 2.30.
Doors open at 8. Tel. 2473 and 2480 Gerrard.

GAIETY THEATRE.
Manager: Mr. GEO. EDWARDES.
To-night and Every Evening at 8; doors open at 7.40
A New Musical Play, entitled:
THE SPRING CHICKEN.
Box Office open from 10 to 10

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE.
Sole Lessee and Manager: CHARLES FROHMAN
To-night at 9.
Charles Frohman presents J. M. Barrie's New Play
ALICE SIT-BY-THE-FIRE.
At 8.25 sharp, PANTALOON, by J. M. Barrie.
Matinee Every Saturday at 2.25 sharp.

NAVAL, SHIPPING, AND FISHERIES EXHIBITION, EARL'S COURT.
11 a.m. to 11 p.m. Admission 1s.
Naval Construction, Armaments, Shipping & Fisheries.
NELSON'S CENTENARY RELICS.
FISHING VILLAGE. Working Exhibits. Model of "Victory."
GRAND NAVAL AND MILITARY CONCERTS
Go on board the full-size Cruiser.
Real Batteries of 4.7 Guns, Hotchkiss and Maxims
The Cruiser is manned by a crew of 150 Handy-men
PANORAMA OF THE BATTLE OF TRAFALGAR
West's "Our Navy." Maxim's Captive Flying Machine. Fairy Grotto. Indian Canoes. Burton's Great Red Indian Village—Chiefs, Squaws, and Papooses. Voyage in a Submarine. Vanderdecken's Haunted Cabin. Famous Sea Fights. Miss de Rohan's Musical and Dramatic Sketches. Tilliken Canoe.

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Mr. Henry Broadhurst, M.P., J.P. | 539 |
| The March of Events | 540 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 546 |
| On the Links | 548 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 553 |
| The Parisians of Paris—Knights of the Whip | 554 |
| Parisian Players | 555 |
| Under the Burgee | 556 |
| Yachts of the Year | 557 |
| The British Medical Association—The Seventy-third Annual Congress at Leicester | 558 |
| The Leicester Medical Congress | 559 |
| By Sea and Stream | 561 |
| The Traveller—A Land of Sport and Sunshine | 562 |
| The Services | 564, vii. |
| The River Season | 565 |
| Literary Notes | 566 |
| The Racing Season | 567 |
| Cricket | 568 |
| Dorchester and the Navy—An Interesting and Important Local Exhibition in Connection with the Coming Trafalgar Centenary | viii. |
| The Centenary of Trafalgar | x. |
| Leaves from a Collector's Note-book—LI.—"The Gold-Headed Cane." Medical Kariora | xii. |
| Motoring Notes | xiv. |
| Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xvi. |
| The King's Menu | xviii. |
| Here, There, and Everywhere | xx. |

TO LIBRARIES, CLUBS, HOTELS, Etc.

A Reading Case for THE KING can be had post free on application to the Publishers, George Newnes, Limited, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

HOTELS.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

TORQUAY (Population 33,625).—PREMIER HEALTH RESORT. Unrivalled climate. Warm in winter. Sunshine-land. Charming drives and sheltered walks. 120 acres of public gardens. Piers.

TORQUAY. Irreproachable water supply and perfect sanitation. Theatre, concerts, and other musical attractions. Medicated baths of all kinds. Express trains from all parts.

For Illustrated Descriptive Books of Torquay, apply FREDK. S. HEX, Town Clerk.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524.
Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. ,, 858.
Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. ,, 641. Kensington.

Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date. First-class cuisine.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence.

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hôte or à la Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Close to Parades. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address: "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne.

FOREIGN HOTELS.

BIARRITZ.

GRAND HOTEL.—Winter Season.—First-class establishment. Splendid situation, facing the sea. Patronised by the elité; rendezvous of English Society. Every comfort; excellent attendance and cooking.—MONTENAT, Manager.

AXENSTEIN (Lake Lucerne; 2,350ft. above sea level; electric railway Brunnen-Axenstein).—First-class Hotel. World-renowned climatic health resort; patronised by English society. "Axenstein is the loveliest spot I met with on my journey through Switzerland."—QUEEN VICTORIA.

TENERIFFE

HAS THE FINEST WINTER CLIMATE IN THE WORLD.

THE First-class HOTELS there are
the QUISISANA at Santa Cruz,
the AGUERE and CONTINENTAL at La Laguna, and
the MARTIANEZ (late Grand) at Port Orotava.
All under the Management of C. H. TRENKEL. Prospectus, etc., on application.

SHIPPING.

MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

HEREFORD.

THE CENTRE OF THE LOVELY WYE VALLEY

An Ideal Holiday Resort.
Splendid Scenery, Boating, Motoring, and Fishing.
Tourist Tickets from all parts.

All Information on application to the TOWN CLERK.

ENGLAND & SCOTLAND

EAST COAST ROUTE

(G.N., N.E., & N.B. RAILWAYS)

TO EDINBURGH
GLASGOW
PERTH
DUNDEE ABERDEEN
OBAN
AND THE HIGHLANDS

PRINCIPAL EXPRESSES from LONDON (KING'S CROSS), TO EDINBURGH AND SCOTLAND GENERALLY.

| | RESTAURANT TRAINS. | | | | SLEEPING CAR TRAINS. | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | A.M. | A.M. | A.M. | P.M. | P.M. | P.M. | P.M. | P.M. |
| KING'S CROSS, dep. | 10. 0 | 10.10 | 11.25 | 2.20 | 8.15 | 8.45 | 11.30 | 11.45 |
| EDINBURGH, arr. | 6.15 | 6.25 | 8.5 | 10.45 | 4.0 | 5.55 | 7.15 | 7.30 |

Apply to Chief Passenger Agent, Great Northern Railway, King's Cross, or any G.N. Agent for full particulars of Train Service.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

THE COLONEL TAKES THE 19TH (W/HOLE IN ONE!

Head Office: 11, SO. EXCHANGE PLACE, GLASGOW.

J. H. ROGER PROPR.

LESSEE OF

H.M. CUSTOMS (No. 15) BOND, JAMES WATT STREET, GLASGOW.

Special Quotations to Golf Clubs.

"COLONEL BOGEY" WHISKY.

GUARANTEED 7 YEARS OLD.

42/- PER DOZEN. CARRIAGE PAID.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS of every description, including TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT. MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.

Handsome Public Rooms, including 2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.

Terms from MANAGER.

ST. ANNE'S-ON-THE-SEA

(Near BLACKPOOL).

Contains

FOUR GOLF LINKS (18 Holes each).

Also facilities for

BOATING, BATHING, FISHING, CYCLING, TENNIS.

Splendid Beach. Ideal Holiday Resort.

ILLUSTRATED GUIDE FREE on application to

SECRETARY, Advertising Committee, Public Offices, St. Anne's-on-the-Sea.

LELANT, ST. IVES BAY, CORNWALL (close to golf links and station).—Furnished HOUSE, with plate and linen, to LET for Summer months; two large sitting rooms, six bedrooms, one dressing room, bathroom.—"T.B.H.," "Evelyns," Uxbridge.

SOUTHWOLD (best position on the Common; close to Golf Links).—To be LET, well Furnished, for August, the pretty and artistic HOUSE known as "Link's Cottage," containing square hall, two sitting and large recreation rooms, servants' sitting room, seven bedrooms (fourteen beds), bathroom; electric light and telephone.—Apply to Mrs. ROBINSON, on Property.

ON THE BOURNEMOUTH LINKS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hôte, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.

THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.

THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.

A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.

Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads. Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.

Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.

Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.

New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,

Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.

To be obtained from Thos. Cook, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.

Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.

Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL.

SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.

Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head.

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.

Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill.

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 30s. Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address: "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY, Within easy access of London

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers, inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable, being on sand.

DEVONSHIRE'S DELIGHTFUL DRINK.—The very best beverage for GOLFERS is WHITEWAY'S PURE CYDER. Refreshing, cooling, and a panacea for Gout, Rheumatism, and Obesity. Booklets free from WHITEWAY'S, The Orchards, Whimple, Devon, and 22 and 23, Albert Embankment, S.W. Telephone 173 Hop.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer

"'Is it a Private House or an Hotel?' is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

Club Houses can be efficiently and economically lighted by

ACETYLENE.

Write H. BAKER, 49, Victoria Street, S.W.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. COX, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.
MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL. — Brinklea, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY.

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method).—Manager, E. DIELMANN.

"SPALDING WHITE" GOLF BALL.

James Braid used it in the Open Championship.

32s. per dozen. Postage 4d. extra.

A. G. SPALDING & BROS.,

53, 54 and 55, FETTER LANE, LONDON, E.C.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.
Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.
Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.
Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.
MODERATE TARIFF.
Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months.

Perfect Sanitary arrangements.
Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE

Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit.

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL.

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

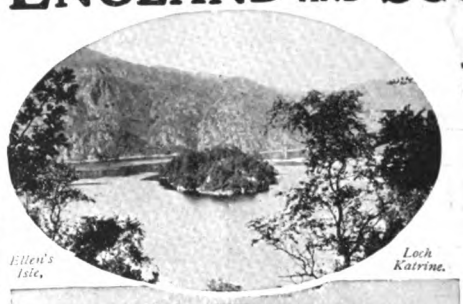
"CRAVEN"—acknowledged throughout the World the Mixture of Merit and Purity. The Favourite Tobacco since its invention in 1867.

Do not fail to give a trial to the "CRAVEN" Cigarette—"The Cigarette of Distinction."

TRAVEL BY
WEST COAST ROUTE
BETWEEN . .
ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND.



Ellen's Isle. Loch Katrine.

SPEED and COMFORT.

Hundreds of Pleasure Tours Daily by Rail, Coach and Steamer, on London & North Western and Caledonian systems.

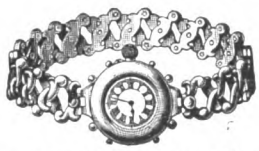
FISHING, SHOOTING, GOLFING &c., &c., &c.

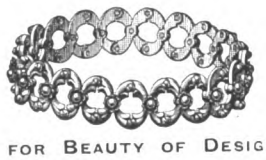
ACCELERATED TRAIN SERVICE:
LONDON (EUSTON), BIRMINGHAM, LIVERPOOL, AND MANCHESTER
WITH
GLASGOW (CENTRAL), EDINBURGH (PRINCES ST.), ABERDEEN, INVERNESS, OBAN, AND THE NORTH.

Descriptive Guide Books of West Coast Route on application to Mr. R. TURNBULL, Euston Station, London.

For Tourist Programmes and "Summer Tours in Scotland," "Oban and the Land of the Gael," "Through Scotland" Descriptive Guides, apply to Mr. G. Calthrop, Caledonian Railway, Glasgow.
Frederick Harrison, General Manager L. & N.W. Ry.
R. Millar, General Manager Caledonian Ry.

When selecting from your Jewellers a Patent
GOLD "SELF-CLOSING" BRACELET
be SURE that you get
SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD'S.





THE ORIGINAL MAKE. UNSURPASSED FOR BEAUTY OF DESIGNS, WORKMANSHIP AND FINISH.

N.B.—These Bracelets have for some time been stamped inside with S. & S.'s Trade Mark "FLEXINE."

Wholesale only—SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD, LTD., LONDON.

"WAKE UP! JOHN"
BUY "MATCHLESS" METAL POLISH
BEST BRASS BRIGHTENER & BRITISH ALL THROUGH.
IN PASTE OR LIQUID FORM.

MANUFACTURERS—THE "MATCHLESS" METAL POLISH Co LTD LIVERPOOL

LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY

BEST EXPRESS TRAINS for FAMILIES, TOURISTS, and SPORTSMEN.

From LONDON (EUSTON)

| To | | |
|---|---|---|
| NORTH WALES ... ... ... | 9a30 a.m. | 11a10 a.m. and 11 15 a.m |
| CENTRAL WALES ... ... ... ... | | ... 11b 0 ,, ,, 1 30 p.m. |
| BLACKPOOL ... ... ... ... ... | | ... 11 30 ,, |
| MORECAMBE... ... ... ... ... | | ... 11 30 ,, |
| ENGLISH LAKE DISTRICT ... ... | | ... 11 30 ,, | a—Runs from July 22nd to August 31st.

b—From July 22nd to August 31st leaves Euston 11.10 a.m.

To IRELAND.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| DUBLIN, via Kingstown ... ... ... | 8 30 a.m. | and 8 45 p.m |
| ,, via North Wall ... ... ... | 11 0 ,, | ,, 10 15 ,, |
| BELFAST, via Fleetwood ... ... ... ... ... | | 5 30 ,, |
| ,, via Liverpool ... ... ... ... ... | | 5 55 ,, |
| ,, via Greenore ... ... ... ... ... | | 7Sx30 ,, |
| ,, via Stranraer ... ... ... ... ... | | 8 10 ,, |

Sx—Saturdays excepted.

To SCOTLAND.

Day Expresses, with Corridor Luncheon and Dining Cars.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| For EDINBURGH ... ... ... | 9c55 a.m. | 11 30 a.m. | 2 0 p.m |
| GLASGOW ... ... ... ... | 10 0 ,, | 11 30 ,, | 2 0 ,, |
| ABERDEEN ... ... ... ... | 10 5 ,, | and | 2 0 ,, |

c—From August 21st to September 30th, leaves Euston at 10.0 a.m.

Night Expresses, with Sleeping Cars.

| | |
|---|---|
| HIGHLAND LINE, INVERNESS, and FAR NORTH ... | 7 45 p.m |
| OBAN, PERTH, and ABERDEEN ... ... ... ... | 8 0 ,, |
| EDINBURGH ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 11 35 ,, |
| GLASGOW ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 11 50 ,, |

The L. & N. W. Route is Noted for its Punctuality and its Freedom from Dust.

FREDERICK HARRISON,
General Manager, L. & N.W. Ry.

EUSTON, July, 1905.

Digitized by Google

THE LEICESTER MEDICAL CONGRESS.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

VOL. XX. No. 443. SATURDAY, JULY 29th, 1905. PRICE 6D.

Elliott and Fry.

MR. HENRY BROADHURST, M.P., J.P.

Liberal Member for Leicester, and ex-Under-Secretary of State for Home Affairs.

(See page 553.)

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Digitized by Google

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY. THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 443. Saturday, July 29, 1905.

Editorial Offices—20, TAVISTOCK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephones—No. 2,748 GERRARD, AND 7,961 CENTRAL.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING AND THE VETERANS.—In the grounds of Buckingham Palace on Monday the King held an inspection of the Chelsea pensioners, which made a curious contrast to the Investiture in the Throne Room earlier in the day. The day in the life of a King is a curious medley of duties, when you come to think of it, and he must needs be a very adaptable person. From the firing-line at Bisley to a performance of "The Little Michus," from a horse-race to the opening ceremony at a new hospital, a monarch must be prepared to pass with the lightness and deftness of touch that, we are told, is only accorded to the true artist.

THE KING AND CHATHAM.—Chatham is a town of many royal memories, and King Edward's visit this week to unveil the South African War memorial arch of the Royal Engineers will by no means be his first visit to the famous Military depôt. Chatham, like Plymouth, is sometimes called "the three towns," and Rochester, Chatham, and New Brompton will all have an opportunity of seeing and cheering the King, as he has arranged quite a long drive through the neighbourhood. The unveiling of the memorial arch will be followed by the formal opening of the new Naval hospital, which is a very handsome building. It might, indeed, be called a little town, for it is absolutely self-contained, and practically independent of outside help, even for provisions.

THE KING IN AUGUST.—After Goodwood the King and Queen are due at Cowes for ten days, firstly, for the visit of the French Fleet, and, secondly, for the regatta. They will stay on board the "Victoria and Albert," and in that vessel will be held the luncheon to the officers of the French vessels, and the various official receptions. From his yacht, too, King Edward will review the united Fleets one day. After these festivities King Edward goes to Marienbad, and Queen Alexandra may pay a belated visit to Denmark, for it will be remembered that she did not go to Copenhagen for King Christian's birthday as usual this spring, and it is hardly to be supposed that she will miss altogether paying a visit to her native country this year. Early in September, however, both she and King Edward will be back again, and on their way to Scotland will pay a call to Lord Savile at Rufford Abbey for the Doncaster races.

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S HOLIDAY.—Since the birth of his infant son, the Prince of Wales has been staying at Sandringham, but he returned to town at the beginning of the week for the Investiture. The Prince and Princess will shortly be leaving Norfolk for Scotland, and the children will go North with them. At Abergeldie Castle the whole staff of servants, keepers and gillies are devoted to the young Princes, who are certainly universal favourites, and Princess Mary has but to utter a wish to have every person in the house secure to gratify it. The devotion of the Scots to the Royal family is well known, and Queen Victoria, in her letters from the journal of the months she and Prince Consort spent together with the children at Balmoral, makes frequent reference to this. Perhaps the secret of it is the courtesy and kindly attention to all and sundry which Queen Victoria always showed, and which she taught her children to show. Certainly her great-grandchildren have the accomplishment of being good listeners in very high degree. Preparations for the Indian tour in the winter are progressing very satisfactorily. And even the Far East may make the acquaintance of the Heir to the Throne if certain pourparlers now in progress reach the desired consummation.

Copyright.

MISS GLWADYS WILSON.

Who is a daughter of Mr. Charles Wilson of Warter Priory, and one of the group of lovely sisters well known in Society, is to be married to Mr. Eric Chaplin on Thursday next.

Digitized by Google

C. Bridgeman.

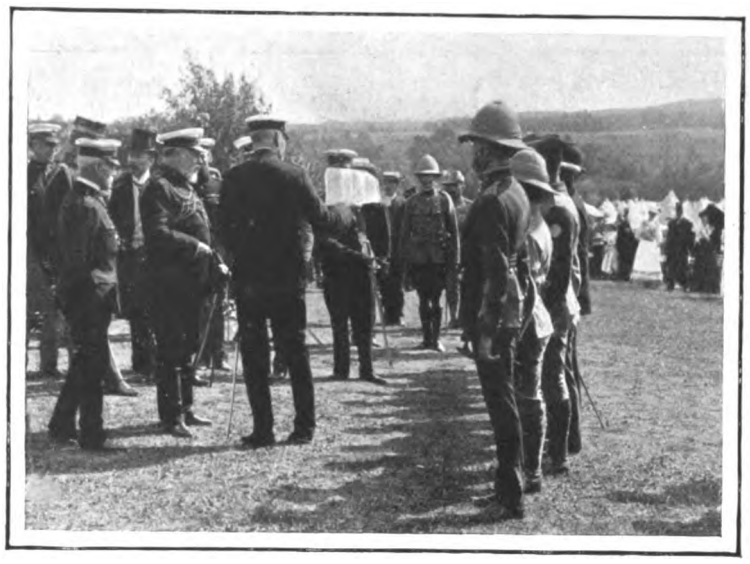
THE LONDON FIRE BRIGADE REVIEW.

Held at Victoria Park on Saturday last, when Mrs. E. A. Cornwall, wife of the Chairman of the London County Council, distributed medals gained by extraordinary bravery.

Gibbs.

THE BISLEY MEETING.

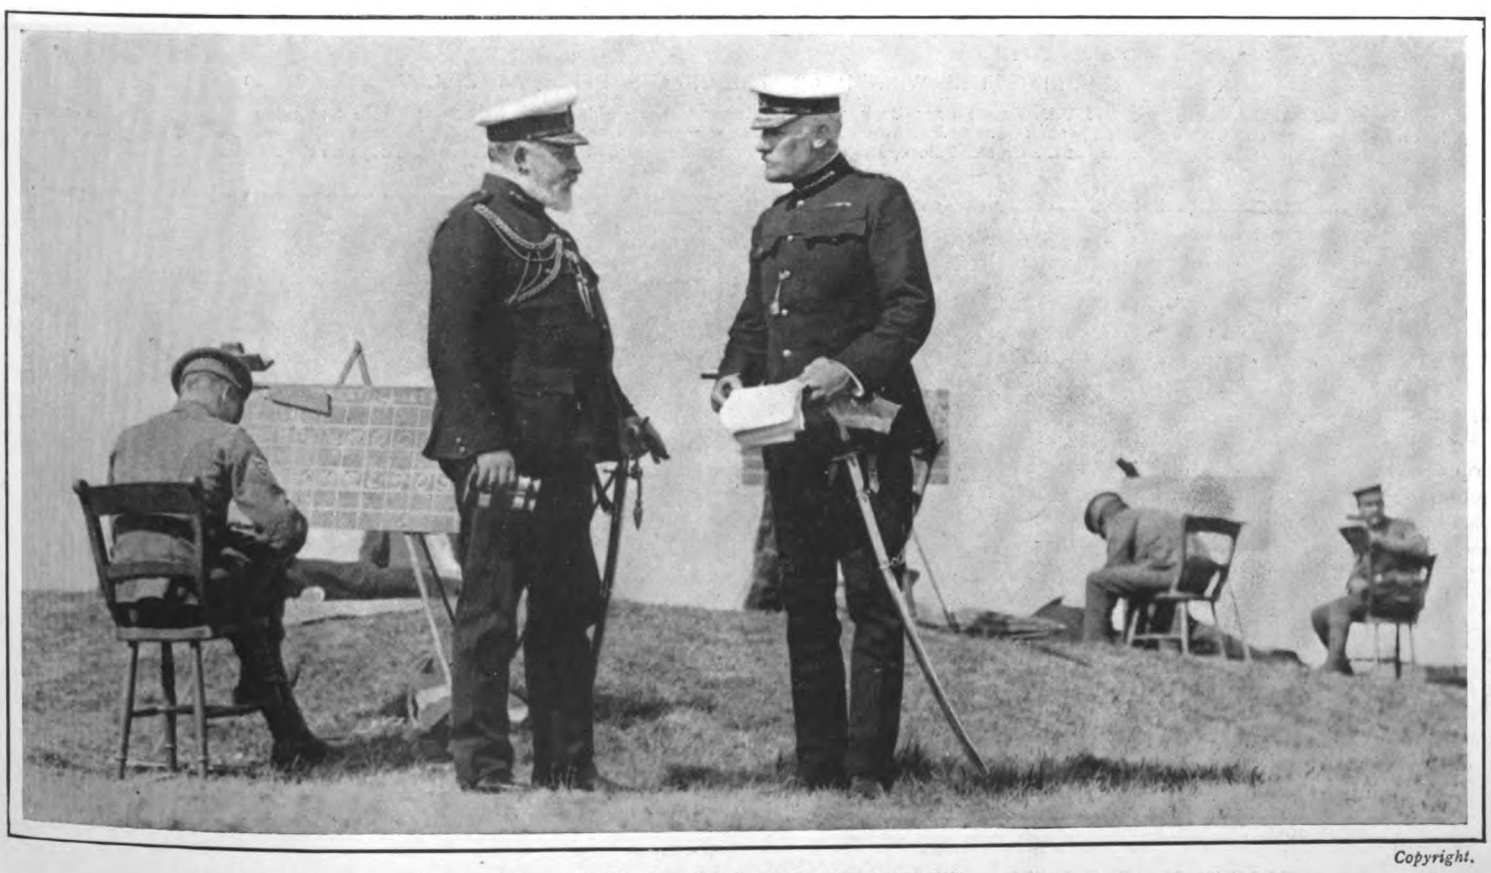
The King at the 1,000-yds. point in the firing for the King's Prize.



Gibbs.

COLONIALS AT BISLEY.

The King inspecting the detachment which visited the meeting this year.

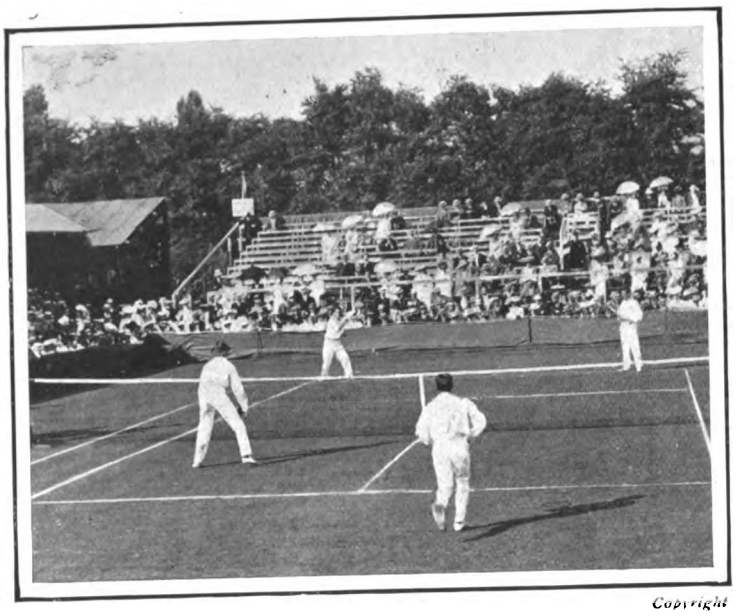


Copyright.

THE VISIT OF THE KING TO BISLEY.

The last day of the National Rifle Association's Meeting was honoured by the presence of the King and the Duke of Sparta. At the close of the meeting his Majesty presented the prizes.

Digitized by Google



Copyright

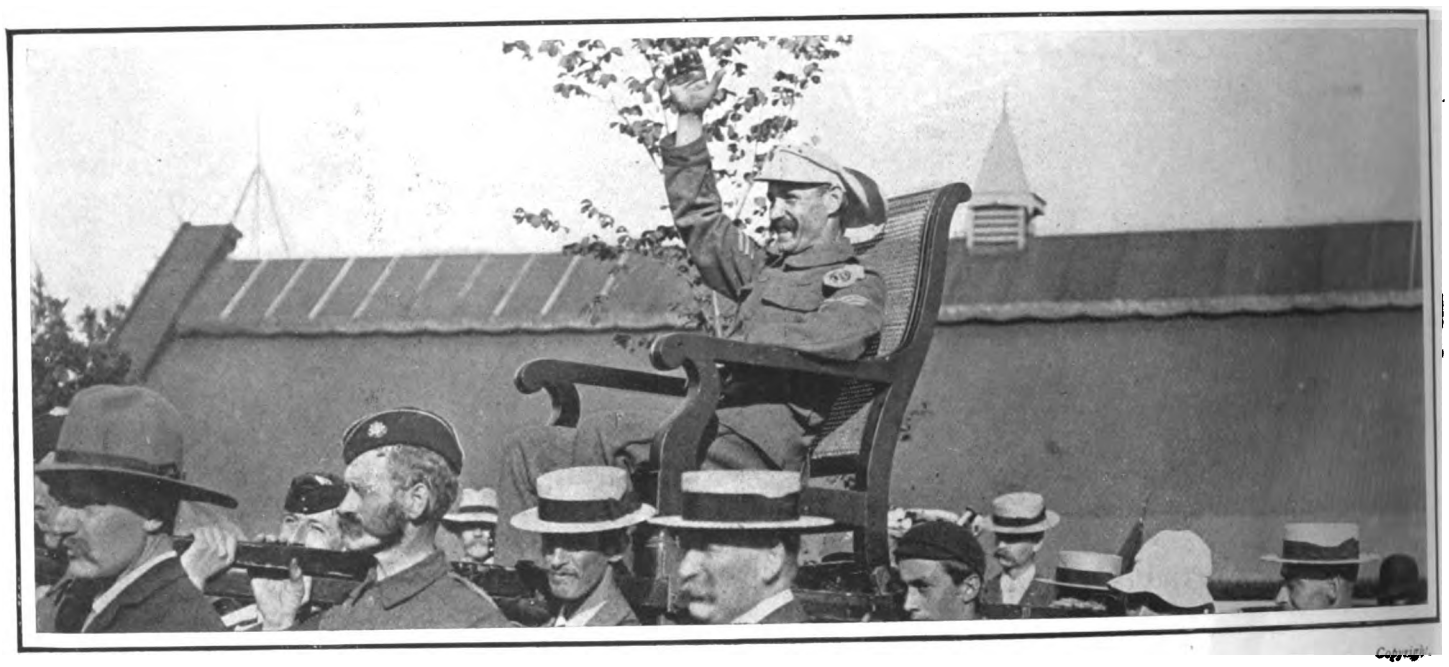
TENNIS AT WIMBLEDON.

The doubles between the Brothers Doherty and Messrs. Ward and Wright in the competition for the Davis Cup. The Dohertys won by three sets to two.

Cribb.

YACHTING IN THE SOLENT.

The vessels becalmed in the middle of a race in the Southampton and Hythe Meeting off the Isle of Wight last week.



CHAIRING THE WINNER OF THE KING'S PRIZE AT BISLEY.

Armourer-Sergeant A. J. Comber of the 2nd V.B. East Surrey Regiment, the winner of the Gold Medal, being carried in triumph round the camp. Born at Wimbledon in 1869, Sergeant Comber served in the South African War, where, as he remarked after his victory, they did not shoot for prizes. In 1903 he won the Miniature Championship at the Crystal Palace, and the year before that secured the Surrey Championship and Gold Medal.

Owers.

SCOTCHMEN AT CARISBROOKE.

Members of the Portsmouth and District Caledonian Society at the famous Castle in the Isle of Wight.

W. A. Rouch.

THE END OF THE SEASON.

After this week the Ladies' Mile in Hyde Park will take on a very neglected aspect, for the season is now at an end.

Digitized by Google

BRIGADE OF GUARDS' SPORTS.

SCENES AT BURTON COURT, CHELSEA.

The annual meeting of the Brigade of Guards was held on Saturday last, when the 3rd Battalion Scots Guards won the McCalmont Challenge Cup, taking three events. Our illustrations show (1) The collapse of the first obstacle, whereby three men were injured. (2) Removing the wreckage and rescuing the men. (3) The final of the 120-yds. Hurdle Race, won by Lance-Corporal Dow, 3rd Scots Guards. (4) The Two Miles Race, won by Private A. Birtwistle, 3rd Scots Guards. (5) Some of the spectators. (6) Mrs. Codrington presenting the prizes after the meeting.

(From copyright photographs specially taken for this paper by W. A. Rouch.)

Digitized by Google

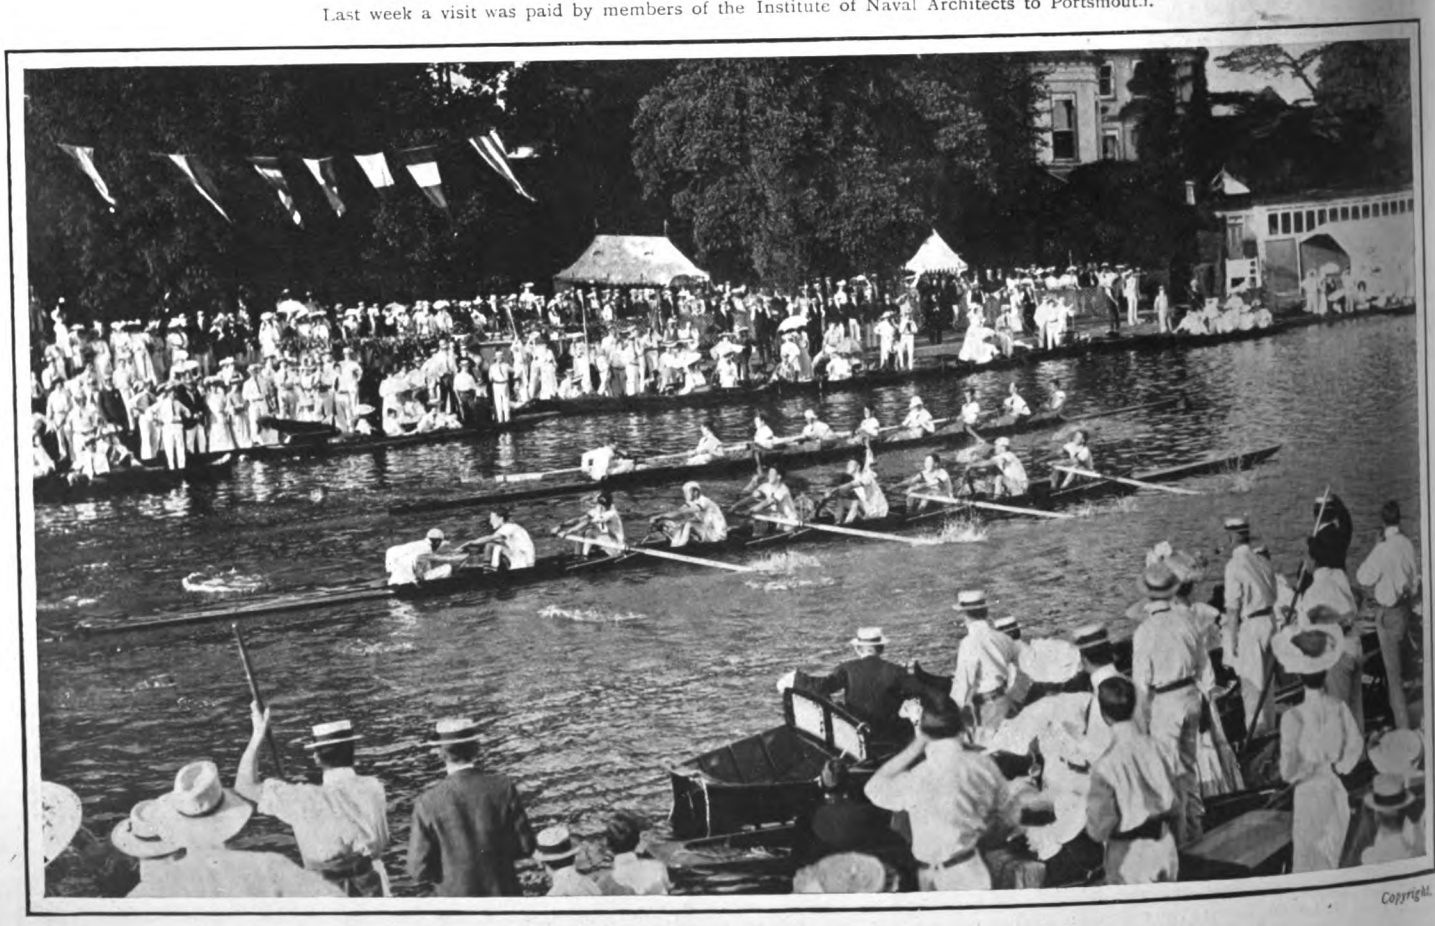
W. A. Rouch.

AT SANDOWN PARK.
In the shade of the trees after watching the race for the Eclipse Stakes.

VAL D'OR
Cantering to the starting-post.

Russell and Sons.

THE INSTITUTE OF NAVAL ARCHITECTS AT PORTSMOUTH.
Last week a visit was paid by members of the Institute of Naval Architects to Portsmouth.



Copyright.

THAMES v. KINGSTON AT MOLESEY REGATTA.
Last year the Molesey Meeting, which ranks next to Henley in importance, was reduced to one day, and in consequence racing has to begin at a very early hour to get through the long programme of events. The number of craft passing through Molesey Lock last Saturday was 2,500, and not a single casualty was reported.

Digitized by Google

IN MAYFAIR.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Langfier.

MRS. MARSHAL ROBERTS

Who is entertaining largely, and who gave a dance last week at her residence in Grosvenor Square, is the daughter of Sir G. H. Murray, K.C.B., and the Hon. Lady Murray. Her husband, who was in the Scots Guards, and is an American, came to this country when he was quite young. He inherited a large fortune on the death of his father, who was one of the richest men in America.

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

THE Brighton Meeting was, in a sense, both a brilliant success and a dismal failure. It was a success from the point of view of the almost perfect organisation and the ideal conditions under which the event was held. On the other hand, it must be admitted that, as a spectacle, short-distance motor-racing has once more proved itself to be a singularly dull form of sport. There were moments of excitement, but they were few and far between, and for the most part the huge crowds, which filled every point of vantage, had little to reward their patience except endless processions of touring cars running down the track at what must have appeared little more than their normal speed. Experience has shown that it is almost impossible to secure close and exciting finishes, even when the distance run is only a mile, and the cars are apparently evenly matched. In nine cases out of ten one car draws ahead at the start, and continues to increase its lead to the finish; so that the vast majority of the races resulted in easy wins, with the second and third cars toiling away hundreds of yards in the rear. Very occasionally the fastest car would make a poor start, and not get into its stride till its rivals had established a good lead. Then, perhaps, there would be a hard-fought race, with the last car gaining all the way, and drawing level almost on the winning-post. I do not think, however, that in all the four days there were more than half-a-dozen events which produced a regular ding-dong race, in which first one and then another of the competitors showed to the front, and kept the spectators in suspense until the finish. Even in the standard-type classes, where cars of the same make and horse-power raced together, one machine would almost invariably draw ahead at the start, and finish an easy winner.

The dulness of the proceedings was happily relieved by the racing cars and bicycles, which provided a novel and exciting spectacle for the crowd. Among the cyclists, Cissac on a 12-h.p. Peugeot made the hit of the meeting, and even hardened race-goers admitted that his attempts on the flying kilomètre were a sight not easily to be forgotten. His best time was 26-sec., a world's record, and equivalent to eighty-six miles an hour, and he certainly produced a huge impression on the crowd as he tore down the track like a projectile from a gun. Some of the racing cars travelled faster, but Cissac, crouching low on his machine, and steering a dead-straight course, gave one the idea of appalling speed. There was a good muster of racing cars, and the eccentricities of one or two of them helped to enliven the proceedings. Mr. Rolls's Dufaux, which had arrived from Switzerland on the morning of the first day, was universally regarded as a monster of the most abnormal type. Its horse-power is said to be 150, and there is no doubt that it has the largest cylinders ever fitted to a car. In order to start the engine it was necessary to run it down the hill to the starting-point and let in the clutch when the machine had gathered way. On several occasions, however, the motor refused obstinately to fire properly, and a great deal of time was wasted, to the distraction of the officials. Most of the racers ran with open exhausts, and Mr. Rolls at one time seemed to be enveloped in flames. Mr. Hutton's 120-h.p. Mercédès, and the six-cylinder Napier driven by Earp, provided the best sport, as, although the Napier was apparently the faster of the two, it generally made a slow start, and by the time Earp had got his top speed in he often had 100-yds. or more to make up.

A word of praise must be accorded to the organisation of the meeting by the Automobile Club, which was loyally supported by the Brighton authorities and the officials of the Sussex Automobile Club. Everything appeared to go from start to finish without a hitch. Indeed there was no contingency for which provision had not been made. On the first day a little anxiety arose as to the ability of the big racers to pull up in the distance allowed to the end of the finish. In a few minutes the barriers were removed, and a large force of police cleared the crowd from the roadway, so that the drivers were given 650-yds. in which to slow down. The telephone arrangements were on a most elaborate scale, and to their perfect working much of the success of the meeting must be ascribed. Thirteen telephone stations were erected on the course, all of which were in communication with a "conning-tower," from which there was a clear view of the entire course. At each station there was a big blackboard, and so well had the men in charge of the telephones been drilled, that the results

THE BRIGHTON MOTOR-RACES.
The opening of the meeting. The first heat in the class for 15-h.p. Darracq cars.

Illustrations Bureau.

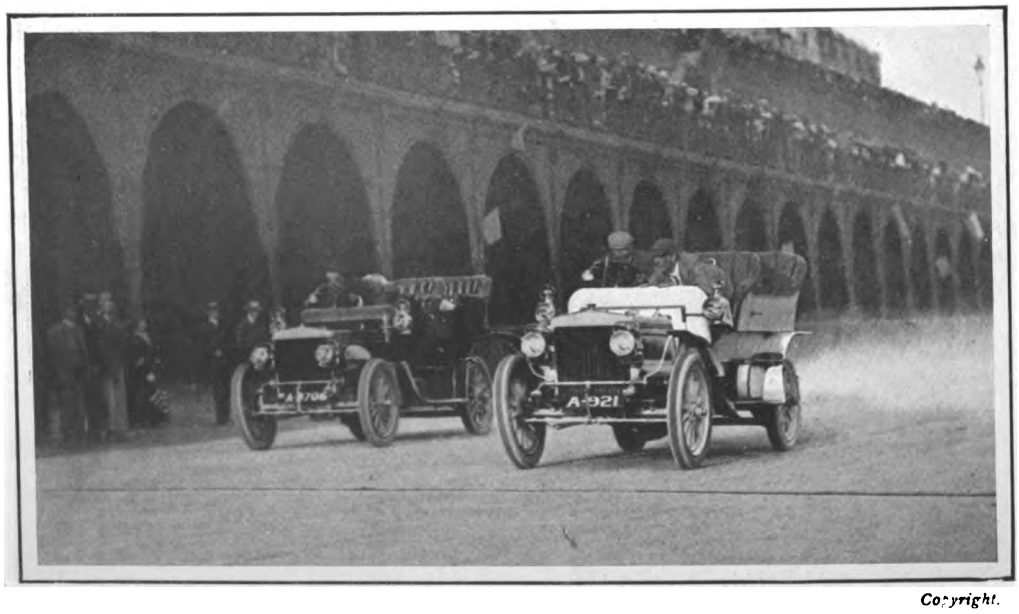
THE BRIGHTON RACES.
Timekeepers at the starting-line.



THE BRIGHTON MOTOR-RACES.
A close finish in the race for 30-h.p. Daimlers. Mr. J. M. Gorham first, and Mr. A. Hordern second.

Digitized by Google

Topical.

THE BRIGHTON MOTOR-RACES.
Earp on the six-cylinder Napier winning the final of the "standing" mile.

each race was known to the spectators all along the track within a few seconds of the winning car passing the post. The head official from his point of observation was in direct communication with starter, time-keepers, judges, marshals, police, and clerks of the course, and so smoothly did the system work that only about 20-min. was lost on the first day, although from 2 p.m. till past six o'clock there was a race every 3-min. The racing cars were responsible for most of the delay, the Dufaux, for instance, having to be towed to the top of the hill twice in order to get its ungainly motor started. The course was in excellent condition, and the tarmac which had been laid down for a kilomètre of the distance provided a fast and fairly dustless surface. The racers succeeded in stirring up a small cloud of dust, but this was generally attributed to the fine sweepings which had been put down to dry up the recently-laid tarmac, and not entirely removed when it had served its purpose.

There is one reason why, I think, these short-distance sprint races are never likely to prove popular among private owners. I spent the whole of the first day at the starting-point, and it was painful to watch the manner in which engines were raced and clutches let in with a jerk in order that the cars might get quickly off the mark. This necessary disregard of the elementary rules of driving must have been extremely detrimental to the whole of the mechanism, and I should be much surprised if the meeting did not result in a heavy crop of damaged gears and twisted shafts. The difficulty might, perhaps, be overcome by having flying starts, but it would result in robbing the racing of such small interest as it now possesses, as close finishes would be even rarer than at present.

RADIATOR.

Topical.

THE BRIGHTON MOTOR-RACES.
A general view of the course from above the winning-post.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

IT is always interesting to mark the genesis of a great golfing movement. The Amateur Championship as one of the principal events of the year only dates from 1886, the year in the political world of Mr. Gladstone's Home Rule Bill. But long before that the idea of such a competition among golfers had been simmering in busy, enterprising minds. The first direct suggestion in favour of the Amateur Championship was contained in a letter published in the Field in September, 1879. It is signed "Driver," and the author of the letter is Mr. Peter Bonthron, a member of the London Scottish Club.

* * *

In this letter Mr. Bonthron, after asking "Why is there no Amateur Championship?" says: "Might I suggest that a competition be held annually at a monster meeting, such as Volunteer shots have at Wimbledon, and with such prizes as to induce all players of note to come forward, and to form an association of the principal golf clubs in the kingdom, which could subscribe a nominal sum annually to defray the cost of prizes and other expenses." The first championship meeting for amateurs was not a large affair compared with the growth it has attained in recent years; but it is always interesting historically to have a date fixed when the movement really took birth.

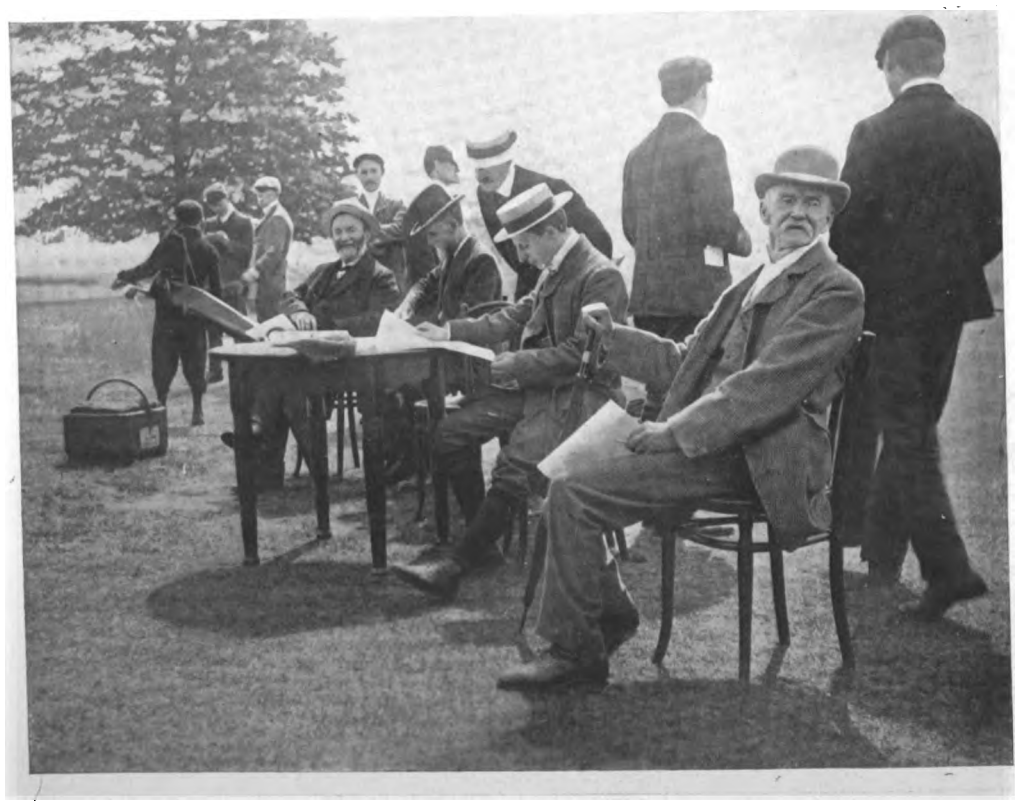
* * *

The Manchester Golf Club held an interesting open amateur and professional competition last week at Old Trafford Park. The principal professionals competing were Herd, Gaudin, Collins, Ray, and Sherlock. Herd was in brilliant form, and with two rounds of 72 each he won the tournament with a gross score of 144, against P. Gaudin's two 74's.

THE MANCHESTER OPEN TOURNAMENT.

The 1st tee on the Manchester Club course, Old Trafford, showing the club-house, formerly the residence of Sir H. de Trafford.

The St. Michael's Golf Club, Leuchars, in Fifeshire, held a "Mercat Faire" last week in the grounds of Earlshall, placed at the disposal of the club by Mr. R. Mackenzie. The object was to raise funds for the new golf course, and the bazaar was held in the open air. Sir Coutts Lindsay took the leading part in the opening ceremony. In his address he said that "Golf was one of the greatest conquerors he knew. It was all over America, and in England it kept its place with cricket, which was saying a great deal. He remembered when there were only two links in Middlesex. At Wimbledon the Scotsmen and the few Englishmen who took up the game were considered crazy, and when they went over the Common they were regarded as harmless madmen. All that was changed now, and golf was at the present time quite as much in the ascendency in England as in Scotland. The other day he was at Naples, and when he went to Sorrento, about thirty miles away, he found there was a golf club. When the members discovered he came from Fife he received the greatest deference." A procession was then formed, headed by the herald and a bugler, then the Mars pipers, the conveners of stalls and their assistants, Sir Coutts Lindsay and Mr. Mackenzie, and the officials, the general public bringing up the rear. They marched through the house gate up to the North Port, where Mrs. Mackenzie handed Sir Coutts Lindsay a key, with which he opened the gate, and the whole company entered. After the bugler had sounded for silence, the herald read the proclamation. It began, "Oyez, oyez, oyez," and then went on to explain "the gouvernance of the mercat." Sir Coutts Lindsay then declared the fair open. The lady stall-holders were picturesquely attired in the quaint dress of the period of Mary Queen of Scots.



THE TOURNAMENT AT MANCHESTER.

The officials who had the supervision of the arrangements in despatching players and checking scores in the recent open tournament at Manchester won by Herd.

* * *

Mr. A. T. W. McCaul, of the Hanger Hill Golf Club, has invented a patent clothes clip for the bathing tent. Struck by the fact that the seaside bathing tent has one great disadvantage, namely, the bather has nowhere to put clothes except on the sand—hence sand in the pockets, sand in the watch, sand in everything—Mr. McCaul has invented a neat brass clip with four clothes hooks. It can be instantly attached and detached, and firmly clips the tent pole, while it is handy enough

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

GOLF AT HANGER HILL.
Mrs. Biddell, who did the best medal round of 90 in the Ladies' Open Meeting.

to be carried in the pocket. At the price of 1s. 6d. the clip can be obtained from Piggott Brothers and Co., Bishopsgate Street Without, E.C.

"SO SIMPLE!"

By DR. MACNAMARA, M.P.

THE three eternal and elemental principles are of course: (1) Eye on the ball; (2) Slow back; and (3) Don't press. But there are others. And to some of these I have attained by much tribulation some daintily embroidered language and many hours of patient industry. Let me set down a few.

There is first of all the right leg. Your eye is on the ball; you do go back slowly; and you certainly do no press. Every movement is a slow pace cinematographic picture according to the latest Beldam plates in every detail. And yet the ball is hopelessly duffed. Like King Gama you really can't tell why! You are standing too near the ball! Good. You take up your stance a little more remote. Result: The ball flies off the toe, sliced away to the half-right. You alter the stance again and come nearer this time. Holy wars! You have ruined a brand-new teeing ground by cutting up a lump of turf big enough to be the first sod cut at the opening of a new railroad. You are tortured by this tantalising thing which has so mysteriously fallen upon you. You seek frantically to diagnose the cause of this blighting ineptitude and get more tied up every time. And yet so simple! You are bending the right knee! So simple!

GOLF AT HANGER HILL.
Mrs. Gilbey, second in the Ladies' Open Meeting, with a score of 92.

GOLF AT HANGER HILL.
Mrs. Bawcomb, who did a medal round of 95 at the Ladies' Open Meeting.

* * *

Thank heaven, you have put that right once for all. No more bending the right knee. All goes as smoothly as a several-thousand-guinea landaulette de luxe. When, falling upon you as a dread dispensation from the unknown, there come again all the old horrible symptoms. Not the right knee this time. You are watching that with menacing ferocity. You shift your stance nearer. You shift it further back. You change your club. You tee the ball lower. You shorten the swing: you shorten the grip. Unhappy ruin that you are; it has come upon you again from a new source, and cannot this time be diagnosed. And yet so simple! You are dropping the right shoulder! So simple!

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

HANGER HILL GOLF CLUB'S LADIES' OPEN COMPETITION.
The putting competition on the lawn in front of the club-house.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

Happy days! All has been going swimmingly for weeks; when, without warning of any kind, up flies your ball from the tee right up the slope of the hurricane of wind that is against you, and back it comes some yards from the spot from which it commenced its mad career. What in the name of the giver of all good things is the matter with Ada now? You tee lower. You turn the driver's face downwards. You bring the feet nearer together. You shorten the swing. Of not the slightest avail. Every time up goes the ball from the tee—a fine line, as someone has cynically said, if the hole were in the skies! You are tortured again; and the more you seek to unravel the mystery the worse things get. You feel abject. Self-contempt assumes proportions that are alarming. What right has such a worm as you to be a free and enlightened elector, a ratepayer, a taxpayer, a churchwarden, and the father of a family. And yet, so simple! You are standing too far behin't the ball! So simple!

* * *

Irritating! Please think of something far more unqualified than that. You are using the little light mashie with artistic delicacy and with patient care. You are gripping the club absolutely according to the book. Your eye is on the ball with grim and unshaken determination. And yet! And yet! What is this deadly plague that is driving you mad? There is the bunker ten paces ahead. There is the putting green immediately beyond with the pin-flag fluttering gaily in the gentle breeze. You walk up to the ball to give it that dainty little wrist flick that is to drop it sweetly over the bunker, and to send it hopping along until it slows down six inches from the pin. Instead of which—a remark which, as we are so frequently reminded nowadays, once fell from the magistrate's lips—what is happening? The ball is shooting out to the right in the most eccentric fashion. Instead of vaulting the bunker and tripping doucely to the pin it has ignominiously hobbled into the jungle growth of tall thick grass on the right. Of course you pick up. The hole is lost. You contemplate the situation askance. By and by the caddie calls your attention to a splash of white paint on the steel part of the shaft of the club. Ministers of Grace! You are "socketting"! You understand. You are standing too near the ball! So simple!

* * *

You try a couple of inches further back. Scissors! The ball is now sliced hopelessly into the right-hand corner of the bunker in front. No! that can't be it. You come nearer. Sémiramide! What has Old England done to deserve this? You have cut viciously into her fair face in the most unprovoked and dastardly way. As the hymnal companion says:

"We plough the fields and scatter."

You try it all over and over again. And yet every time you take up the original stance and deliver the correct mashie wrist flick, Great Cryptoconchoid! away goes the ball socketted to the right, and there is another splash of white at the bottom of the club shaft. Is there no one to explain this weird, this dreadful phenomenon? For Sir Gilbert Parker to see Sir Carne Rasch when he wasn't there is easy enough. But what about this? And yet so simple! You are bringing the body round in front of the club! So simple!

* * *

No! Into the hole they won't go. The fifteen-inch putt trickles confidently up to the hole, looks in, and runs round the lip! Is the hole bewitched? Is it dodging to the right and left as the ball comes up to its mouth? Is the movement of the earth on its axis the explanation? The moon has her influence upon tides. Why should not earth's revolution affect the putt? Really the hole, when the ball reaches it, is not precisely where it was when the ball started on its journey. "The earth revolves on its axis once in twenty-four hours." For years I taught this simple and convincing legend to the engaging schoolboy. But never till I became a golfer and found myself with a putt of thirteen inches from the hole did I completely realise the truth of the statement. And with the knowledge of the earth's gyration conspicuously in your mind, how can you putt? If you putt in the most deadly fashion clean to the middle of the back of the hole, where are you? Of course, before the ball gets there the hole has moved on a shade to the west, and the ball runs round the eastward lip! You allow for this. The putt runs round the other lip! Why? Because scientifically and seismographically speaking the movement of the earth is jerky. And just as you putted it was resting reculer pour mieux sauter! You had not thought of all this. And yet so simple! So simple!

* * *

And having now deliberately become facetious (I began most seriously), let me end up with a really new story. A very pompous, very self-sufficient, and very bad golfer was once playing over an Irish course. He had as his caddie a battered old Irish peasant, with a very knowing twinkle in the corner of his eye. After each stroke—and each

"Whate'er she does, where'er her steps she bends, Grace on each action silently attends."

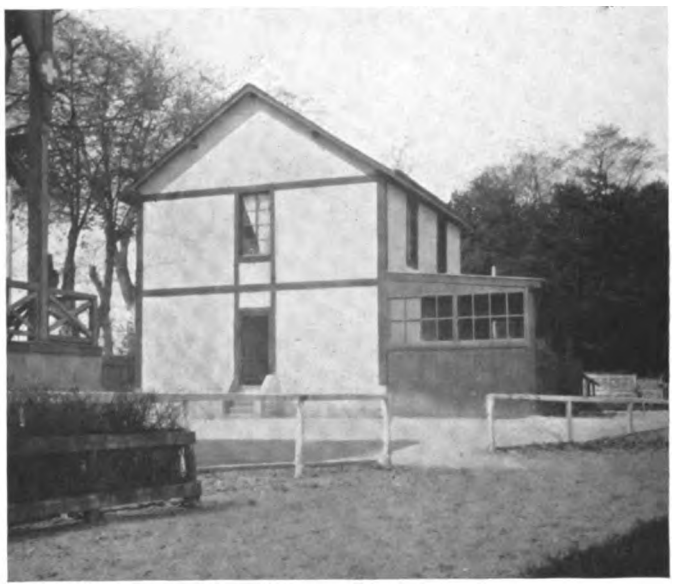
MISS DOROTHY BARKER

Of the Home Park, Surbiton, driving from the 13th tee.



GOLF AT GENEVA.

The club-house—comfortable, but not elegant.

A. H. Robinson.

A PANORAMIC VIEW OF SHERINGHAM.

This photograph gives a good idea of this picturesque Norfolk watering-place, with a view of the 1st tee on the links there.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

MIDLAND COUNTIES LADIES' TOURNAMENT.

This tournament took place at Nottingham on May 16 and 17. On the first day teams of three played for the Club Championship, Worcestershire winning with an aggregate score of 276. The Stroke Competition of thirty-six holes was won by Miss Bryan (Minchinhampton) with 175. (1) The Notts club-house at Hollinwell, where the matches were played. (2) Mrs. Huntley putting. (3) A fine tee shot (4) Miss Bright putting at the home hole. (5) Mrs. Huntley playing an approach shot. (6) Mrs. Blakesley gets well out of a bunker. (7) Miss Hancock playing a brassie shot.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

stroke was cruel hard on the green turf of Ould Oireland—the vain-glorious one said to his caddie in the most lordly fashion, "Replace the turf, Caddie!" Quietly and patiently the caddie went through the performance, thinking volumes and saying nothing at all until the eighteenth was reached. Then, as the last duffed shot stumbled its way to the putting green, and "Replace the turf, Caddie!" rang in his ears for the last time, he turned with a look of ineffable scorn upon his august employer and said, "Arrah, is it replacing the turf you'll be bidding me to do? By the holy fly, it'll be returfing the place we'll be all doing when you're gone!"

GOLF AT GENEVA.

I PLAYED on these links under disadvantageous conditions. The grass was long, the greens were rough, and the lies were bad; but I believe all this is somewhat improved later in the season; in fact, I believe they are not supposed to be ready for play until May 15. The links are situated in the grounds of the Parc des Sports at Charmilles, some two miles out. Here also are the race-course, some tennis courts, football grounds, running tracks, etc. In the distance, too, one can see the snow-covered caps of the neighbouring peaks and ridges.

The course is a nine-hole one; all the holes are short, the longest being 285-yds., so that one gets no brassie play here. The bunkers are both natural and artificial, the latter being sand bunkers and hurdle bunkers. The club-house is small, though convenient, and the links are used exclusively by English and American players, as the Swiss, like the French, have not yet taken to the game. H. M.

* * *

Writing of golf at Geneva, whose links are illustrated in this week's pages, another correspondent states: "Altogether I am afraid that I have no good word to say for the links at Geneva, except that if one spent much time in that delightful city they would be better than no links at all. I send you a few illustrations, but the course does not lend itself to good snap-shots."

Correspondence.

THE PROFESSIONAL FOURSOME MATCH.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE KING."

SIR,—There is a delicious affectation of the way in which golfing homage should be paid to Scottish courses in a recent contribution of the golfing correspondent of the Scotsman with reference to the forthcoming professional foursome. This writer raises his eyebrows and writes: "Some surprise was occasioned"—he means "created," of course—"in Scottish golfing circles last week when the announcement was made that three courses in England and only one in Scotland had been selected for the big match for £200 a side between Taylor and Vardon, and Braid and Herd." Then, after admitting that those who paid the piper had a right to call the tune, he proceeds to argue that, as at present arranged, three courses in England and only one in Scotland "would not be accepted as final in the event of Taylor and Vardon winning. . . . It would be well for all concerned to guard against the possibility of this by sticking to the original conditions of two Scottish and two English greens."

Observe the position assumed here. The £400 for the match are being subscribed by two members of English golf clubs. Scottish golfers have not a creashy pound note in it, and it is unlikely that they will ever subscribe a penny of the amount. But while risking not even the proverbial "saxpence," they have the hardihood to contend that half of the match should be played over their greens in order to provide a golfing holiday for them at someone else's expense. Some of us might be disposed to call this a piece of Scottish humour, but it verges on the border-line of impudence.

If Taylor and Vardon win, let St. Andrews, Troon, Prestwick, and Carnoustie raise £500 among them and issue a challenge on behalf of their Scottish professionals. They will then have a just claim to share in the greens. But as the match at present stands, and considering that English golfers are the main supporters of professional golf, I hope the promoters of the foursome will rigidly stick to their arrangement of having the match played over three English greens at least. Personally, I should hope they would not go to Scotland at all, until Scottish golfers show that they are willing to risk a little money in backing their champions. When they take this rash step they will have a claim to be heard and listened to favourably in the sense conveyed by the writer in the Scotsman.—I am, Sir, etc., J. B. TALFOURD.

THE GENEVA LINKS.
A view of the 1st green and general character of the course.

FIXTURES.

July 29-31.—Lytham and St. Anne's, Summer Meeting.
July 31.—Irish Open Amateur Championship, at Dollymount.
August 1.—Royal and Ancient St. Andrews, Calcutta Cup.
August 2.—Professional Tournament for £100, at Deal.
August 3.—Hunstanton, Foursome Competition.
August 4.—Royal West Norfolk, Summer Meeting.
August 4.—Seaford, Summer Meeting.
August 5.—Felixstowe, Summer Meeting.
August 5.—Frinton, Summer Meeting.
August 5.—Hythe, Summer Meeting.
August 5.—Ipswich, Wood Cup.
August 5.—Royal Ashdown Forest, August Meeting.
August 5.—Royal Portrush, August Meeting.
August 5.—Rye, Monthly Medal.
August 5-7.—Rochester, Royal Marine Challenge Shield.
August 7.—Bushey Hall, Bank Holiday Competition.
August 7.—Hanger Hill, Bank Holiday Competition.
August 7.—Hunstanton, Residents' Cup.
August 7.—West Cornwall, Ladies' Summer Meeting.
August 7.—Royal Liverpool, Summer Meeting.
August 7.—Royal Isle of Wight, Summer Meeting.
August 7.—Buxton and High Peak, August Meeting.
August 7-8.—Littlehampton, Open Summer Meeting.
August 7-8.—Dieppe, Prix de Dieppe.
August 8.—Enfield, Ladies' Summer Meeting.
August 9-11.—Newquay, Atlantic Challenge Cup.
August 10.—Sheringham, Summer Meeting.
August 12.—Hanger Hill, Medal.

THE GENEVA LINKS.
A view of the 6th green and the villas beyond.

GOLF AT GENEVA.
The 4th green, with bunker, and part of the course in the background.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. LIII.—Mr. Henry Broadhurst, Liberal Member for Leicester.

EVER since the first Reform Bill passed into law, and put an end once and for all to such fierce political contests as that of 1826, which lasted for ten entire days, the Leicesterians have, as a rule, selected their members from the Liberal ranks. When Mr. J. A. Picton and Sir James Whitehead retired eleven years ago, their choice fell on that stalwart Radical, Henry Broadhurst, who headed the poll by nearly 2,000 votes, and has maintained that position against all comers ever since, although the khaki wave of 1900 gave him a Tory instead of a Liberal confrère. Henry Broadhurst, who bears the weight of his sixty years more lightly and more cheerily than most men, may be fairly described as the doyen of the class of members in the British Parliament popularly described as "Labour" champions. Twenty years ago he inhabited a comfortable suburban dwelling on Brixton Rise. In those days he had not attained the supreme dignity of the Under-Secretaryship which came to him shortly afterwards. In 1885 his certificate of membership of the Friendly Society of Stonemasons occupied a place of honour amongst his household gods, along with a basket of disused tools, a present of cutlery from the Trades' Council at Sheffield, a picture of one of the great protest meetings in Hyde Park, a tobacco jar of blue jasper, sent him by his old constituents in the Potteries, and a large photograph, inscribed "To Henry Broadhurst, from Lord Carrington. Whitehall, July 1, 1884." At that epoch of his career Mr. Broadhurst had still leisure to learn lessons in la haute politique from the pages of the Fortnightly Review, and smoked the pipe of peace while mastering the contents of the Methodist Times, and going through his correspondence as secretary of the Trades Union Parliamentary Committee. In 1905 the lares et penates of the senior member for Leicester are to be found in one of the pleasantest houses at Cromer, where he breathes the best air in Eastern England, did yeoman service in founding the golf links, and is a near neighbour of King Edward VII., whom he used to meet very frequently nearly a quarter of a century ago, when they were fellow-members of the Royal Commission on the Better Housing of the Poor. In aristocratic Norfolk honours galore have descended on the head of Henry Broadhurst; but history is silent on the subject of a visit to Sandringham. It stands on record, however, that one such "command" was respectfully declined on the ground of the non-possession of a dress suit; but that was in the salad days of the early eighties, when the unorthodox black billy-cock hat, the tool basket, and the stonemason's certificate were still to the fore. At the present moment he is a J.P. and Alderman for the county which gave England Nelson, and is still famous for its dumplings, its turkeys, and its mustard. He is, moreover, a Poor Law Guardian of the Erpingham Union, and Vice-chairman of the Cromer Urban District Council.

Just five-and-sixty years ago a fourth son was born to Thomas Broadhurst, stonemason, of Littlemore, Oxfordshire, and Sarah his wife. In due course he received the name of Henry, and learned his letters in the village where his forbears had been workers in stone for generations. "We lived in a cottage," said the ex-Under-Secretary of State for Home Affairs, while still representing the Bordesley Division of Birmingham at Westminster, "with a quarter of an acre of ground round it, where my father used to work in the evening and produce fruit, flowers, and vegetables, which I sold on a stall in Oxford Market. I only went to school irregularly, and at the age of fourteen took to masonry, in accordance with the custom of the trade. I got a grown man's wages three years later, and married when I was twenty. In my time I have tramped some thousands of miles in search of employment; I have walked fifty miles on sixpence, and have enjoyed the threepenny bed which the relief afforded by the Stonemasons' Union secured me. I helped to build the new Foreign Office at eightpence-halfpenny an hour, and I worked at the Clock Tower of the Houses of Parliament, at Burlington House, and the new buildings in Mayfair. In 1872 a trade dispute occurred, and this brought me to the fore. Three years later I was elected to the secretaryship of the Trades Union Congress, and my name soon became known in the workmen's world, and I turned my attention to politics. I failed once at High Wycombe, but I beat the Conservative candidate in the Potteries in 1880 by a large majority. I have worked hard ever since, and when the debate is especially dull I walk on the Terrace by the Thames, and look at the outline of the great hospital over the water, where I laboured as a journeyman. I do not think my brother workmen have cause to regret their choice. Since I have been at Westminster the Factory and Workshops Amendment Bill, the Canal Boat Bill, and the Franchise Bill have all passed into law; working men have become magistrates for the first time in Manchester, Accrington, and Bolton, and have been appointed to inspectorships of mines and factories. The newly-created inspectorship of canals was offered to me, but I preferred to retain my present appointment. My Leasehold Enfranchisement Bill was rejected, but its principle is now endorsed by a majority of the Royal Commission on the Housing of the Poor. I think I may also claim a little credit for the Bankruptcy Act of 1883, and the Patents Act of the same year. I am personally a Nonconformist, and an out-and-out disestablisher and disendower. Hereditary legislative power should be abolished. I believe firmly in the necessity of free education, and it might well be assisted by some of the revenues of the Church, and the application of many educational funds which have been diverted from their original use. I would, of course, do away with entail and primogeniture, and increase as much as possible the number of the owners of the soil. This is the programme which has found favour with the electors of the Bordesley Divison of Birmingham, who have returned me to Parliament as their member. No great number of wage-earners can seek Parliamentary election till the members are paid for their services. Almost my sole source of income is the two hundred pounds a year I receive as Secretary of the Trades Union Committee, and on this we manage to live."

J. W. Heawood, Leicester.

ABBEY PARK, LEICESTER.

A tranquil spot in the busy Midland town.

Possibly Mr. Broadhurst's worldly position has improved since. In any case, at Cromer he is now able to enjoy the society of such men as Lord Suffield, Lord Battersea, Sir George Lewis, and Mr. Ben Davies, and play golf to his heart's content. His latest speeches both in and out of Parliament, however, show that he remains steadfast to the political creed he professed when he was the pioneer of Labour representation in the British Parliament in the early eighties of the last century, when he represented Stoke-upon-Trent.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

KNIGHTS OF THE WHIP.

THE Paris cabmen, that eccentric body, are a library of life, a queer library, full of weird stories which nobody ever read; for these living volumes do not divulge their secrets, and have good reason not to do so. The corporation of Jehus does not exclusively consist of men whom fate intended to be born and die cab-drivers. We find among them elements of a different kind: men dropped off the social ladder, outcasts, unfortunate wretches come to grief through their own fault, or possibly through that of others; cashiered officers, bankrupt merchants, doctors, barristers, broken-down actors—a motley crowd. The lady on her way to the Bon-Marché little thinks that the man on the box has attended her receptions as an honoured guest; the officer does not recognise in his driver a former mess-mate; nor will it strike Mme. Sarah Bernhardt that the individual into whose dirty hand she puts a pourb ire was once a member of her company. I know of one, a talented musician, a second prize at the Conservatoire, and afterwards first violin at the opera, who now holds the whip between his shaking fingers. He was, and, no doubt, still is, a worshipper of the "Green Fairy"—as the absinthe bottle is poetically called—and she ruined him. Another, a former professor at one of the big public colleges, when he has absorbed more than his average allowance, discloses his identity by addressing his fare in Latin. Once he even startled an old English lady by stopping her cab, and treating her to a scene from "Hamlet." And then there is the venerable poet, a man of great literary ability, once a brilliant journalist. If he is fortunate enough to drive a young couple on pleasure bent, he surprises them with some prettily-turned impromptu verses, which, of course, secure him an extra franc, of which the nearest wine-shop has the benefit.

The reason why these fallen stars have joined the driving brotherhood is not far to seek. It is the only profession here that requires little or no apprenticeship, for our ædiles grant licences to men who do not possess the elementary principles of driving. Hence the extraordinary mishaps we witness daily in the Paris streets.

But the bulk of the cabmen, whence do they come? They hail from the provinces, chiefly from Auvergne, with a fair sprinkling of Savoyards. The Parisian does not care for that kind of work—he finds it too dull; but to the peasant from Saint-Flour it has a wonderful attraction. He has become tired of his homely fare of bacon and potatoes, and has visions of enormous portions of bœuf aux choux consumed in a comfortable and warm corner of the wine-shop, or, in summer, outside on the pavement. When the young countryman arrives in Paris he goes straight to the "Cabmen Academy" in the Avenue de Ségur. He pays forty francs, for which sum a professor takes him in hand. His education lasts about a month. According to the professors of that wonderful establishment a thorough knowledge of the topography of Paris is the all-important thing. The art of driving is considered a trifling detail. During the first fortnight the neophyte is sent every day on fourteen different expeditions, and these itineraries are arranged so as not to leave any part of the capital unexplored. The pupil starts off, on foot, his hands in his pockets, down a long thoroughfare—say the Rue de Rivoli—and he must remember every street, big or small, leading out of it. On his return to the academy he recites his lesson, and if he makes mistakes he has once more to cover the same ground. These yokels appear to be gifted with a marvellous memory; but this is attributed to the fact that the countryman's brain, never overtaxed, is much fresher and more receptive than the muddled head of the townsman. A fortnight later the candidate knows Paris by heart, and is then initiated into the mysteries of driving, harnessing, grooming his horse, etc., and with his licence in his pocket is let loose on the capital. But the subtleties of the profession are not acquired at once. He has yet to find out the best spot to fish for customers, and to dodge the eagle eye of the police when he loiters.

After six months' practice the new cabman has attained a high standard of perfection. He cannot manage his horse—and never will—but he has acquired a beautiful flow of language, and can abuse a colleague or his fare for five minutes, without stopping or once repeating himself. He has knocked down a few old ladies, run over numberless dogs, and has invented some new and unprintable epithets for his pet aversion, the motor-car. At the end of these six months, too, he has been called so many names that he has become proof against every kind of insult. And yet there is a weak spot in his armour. There is one word that will rouse him to anger, and that word is "Collignon." Some fifty years ago a cabman of that name committed a murder; and when the Paris street Arab wants to flick cabby he calls out "Collignon!"—always taking care to indulge in this badinage when beyond the reach of the whip. The cocher de fiacre, aggressive, loud in his talk, ever grumbling, has an instinctive horror of fighting, and never uses his fists. He relies on his tongue and on his wonderful imagination to find new names for his opponents, even for his horse, on whom he practises daily his ever-increasing vocabulary. But there is one moment in the day when the cocher is at peace with the world; and that is when the hour of his midday meal has struck. You are in search of a cab, and discover several outside a wine-shop, but no trace of the drivers. A youth in a white apron is serving some customers outside, and you politely enquire after the cocher of the first cab. "Monsieur is at dinner, inside," is the reply. You look in, and see not only Monsieur, but other messieurs, with glazed hats, red waistcoats, their coats off—etiquette demands this—enjoying their meal. If you are indiscreet enough to call one of them, Monsieur will first wink at you, then solemnly raise his glass, drink your health, and continue his meal. Gentlemen's coachmen, as well as those of hired broughams, belong altogether to a different class. They are experienced men, capital drivers, but held in lofty contempt by the cocher de fiacre. The latter has even invented for them a rather funny name, but which, like the rest of his vocabulary, is unfit for publication.

FRANCES KEYZER.

AN OMNIBUS-DRIVER.

A HIRED BROUGHAM.

ON THE CAB-RANK.

(From photographs by Géniaux, Paris.)

Digitized by Google

PARISIAN PLAYERS.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

MLLE. CARMEN DE VILLERS

The popular actress at the Parisiana.

(From a photograph by Reutlinger.)

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

WE are now practically halfway through the season, but in accordance with the custom of former years, the most interesting fixtures have yet to come, and when in the course of another fortnight the racing fleets are assembled on the Solent, the keen edge of the interest will not have diminished to any perceptible degree as the result of the two months' racing that have already taken place. Even the racing in the 52 ft. class will be followed with renewed interest, notwithstanding the fact that the quartette of boats of which it is composed have been in company ever since the beginning of the season.

Owing to the several mishaps which have occurred in the class, it is difficult even at this period of the year to form any definite opinion of the relative merits of the respective boats If, however, all have found their proper trim by Cowes Week, and gear stands, a quite different aspect may be put on the racing. It would be merely last year's history repeating itself. It was at Cowes that Maymon commenced her victorious career. She had been carefully nursed by her skipper (Bevis) during the earlier part of the season. By the time the Solent regattas came round, her best all-round form had been ascertained; she proved invincible, and practically swept the board of prizes for the remainder of the season.

The mishaps that have occurred to the American boat must have proved most vexatious to her owner, Mrs. Turner Farley, more particularly since she proved herself to be an undoubted flier when she first appeared with her hollow sticks on the Thames.

Wonderfully little has been heard in this country of the Kiel and Baltic Regattas this year, notwithstanding that they were, without doubt, some of the most successful and most pleasant which have ever taken place in German waters. The whole fortnight was a purely yachting festival, with an absence of that Naval pomp and ceremony which have in some former years been prominent features of the week's programme in Kiel Harbour. Favoured with fine weather and good breezes, the racing was excellent, if not actually the most interesting that has taken place in Europe this year so far; and yet it has undoubtedly been given the cold shoulder in this country, and this despite the fact that the finest racing yachts in Europe to-day are those owned by German yachtsmen, and the presence of which at our own regattas would considerably enhance the interest of the racing in home waters.

With the sport by no means too flourishing in our own country, one cannot help wondering if it is expedient to attempt to ignore such an important series of fixtures; or, on the other hand, if the sport at home is to be revived by thus paying no attention to regattas outside our own waters, why are other Continental fixtures always fostered and encouraged, and, as is the case this year, at the expense of old-established fixtures at home? Belfast, Kingstown, and Plymouth have all been sufferers this season. Possibly, all those yachts which were attracted specially to the Clyde this year, may have returned direct South, and gone on to Ostend; nevertheless, in the old order of things, vessels went from the Clyde to Belfast and then to Kingstown, and the organisation of a special race to carry them past these ports, as well as Plymouth, can hardly be viewed with satisfaction by the suffering clubs.

The Royal Cinque Ports Regatta at Dover in the middle of the month was well favoured in point of entries, being in this respect much more fortunate than the Royal Temple Club, whose week at Ramsgate and Deal immediately preceded it. German-owned boats were in evidence, and three of the principal prizes went to vessels flying the German ensign. Those present were Navahoe, the old Herreshoff 90-footer now owned by Herr G. J. Wätjen; Susanne, the schooner built last year by Fife for Herr O. Huldschinsky; and Thérèse, an old Soper design owned by Herr Felix Simon. All are manned by English crews, and the captains are respectively E. Sycamore, R. Wringe, and Embling. Herr Wätjen won his first prize in English waters on the first day, and in the Dover-Boulogne race, although finishing first, only took second prize, Susanne saving her time by less than two minutes.

The racing at Dover suffered from lack of wind on the first day, and the club's new starting-line is a most awkward one. The arms of the new harbour have now extended, so that the start is made outside, which means that all the jockeying for position takes place in the full swing of a hot tide. Another point, but one that often receives no consideration from sailing committees, is that persons ashore interested in the racing can see very little of it, unless they like to make a toilsome climb up the cliffs. A somewhat remarkable incident happened on the Friday. When Navahoe finished her first round, she could not find the mark-boat. She made enquiries of the crew of the Pier Works lightship as to its whereabouts, receiving for reply a suggestion that she should proceed into harbour. She, however, started off on the second round, after which the missing mark-boat was seen proudly in tow for her position again. The mistake cost the leader several minutes, but fortunately did not affect the result of the race. Such an incident has, of course, its humorous side, though those chiefly interested—owner and skipper of the delayed boat—may fail to see the point of the humour at the moment of the occurrence, and a protest from such mistake would, under the circumstances, have been most unfortunate.

CORINTHIAN.

West, Southsea.

A RACE IN THE 36-FT. CLASS.

The leading boat is Edie II., a new yacht owned by Colonel Robins, and built from designs by Mr. A. E. Payne, son of the famous late designer of that name. The second and third boats are, respectively, Falcon, owner Mr. J. A. Leckie, and Ma'oona, owner Mr. Talbot Clifton.

REGATTA FIXTURES.

July 26 to 29.—Plymouth Week.
July 31 and August 1.—Island S.C. Annual Regatta Cowes
August 5.—Royal Southampton Yacht Club.
August 7.—Royal London Yacht Club. Cowes.
August 8-11.—Royal Yacht Squadron. Cowes.
August 12.—Royal Portsmouth Corinthian Yacht Club.
August 15-18.—Royal Victoria Yacht Club. Ryde.
August 19.—Royal Southern Yacht Club.
August 21-22.—Royal Albert Yacht Club. Southsea.

Digitized by Google

YACHTS OF THE YEAR.

Debenham, Ryde.

SAIONARA II.

An old 35-footer now racing on the Solent under Mr. G. Cheston's flag in the handicap class for raters formed this year. At a recent regatta at Cowes, she and a competitor, Eve, were piled up on the rocks as the result of a luffing match. Early in the present year, when it was expected that there would be no regular racing, either in the 36-ft. or 30-ft. classes, a class of old raters was formed for racing on handicap terms, in the hope of reviving interest in yachting in the district.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY
Digitized by Google

The British Medical Association.

THE SEVENTY-THIRD ANNUAL CONGRESS AT LEICESTER.

THE British Medical Association, now rapidly approaching the centenary of its foundation, is, as far as membership is concerned, the most representative organisation of the kind known to exist in any civilised country. It is also the most representative voluntary organisation possessed by any profession in the United Kingdom. The Association enjoys also a highly democratic form of constitution, whereby the rank and file of its members in every district, and in every part of the British Empire, are enabled to take part in determining the administration and policy of the Association. Through the system of small local bodies, called divisions, the members in each district have the means of settling among themselves matters of purely local concern, and can take united action with regard to such matters; through a system of delegation they can also make their opinions and wishes known in the Annual Representative Meeting, which is the ultimate governing body of the Association, having power to make bye-laws, and to give instructions to the central council, which is the executive. At the Annual Representative Meeting any question affecting the government and policy of the Association may be raised either in connection with the annual reports of the council and committees, or upon direct notices of motion by the divisions: and to secure that the divisions shall have a reasonable opportunity of considering such matters, it is required that reports shall have been circulated two months, and motions three months, before the meeting.

The questions so brought up for discussion and decision by this annual parliament of the medical profession naturally cover a very wide range. Taking a few examples from the programme of this week's meeting at Leicester, one finds matters of purely domestic concern, such as the mode of election of new members, the financial relations of the divisions to the parent body, and the publication of reports of the annual meeting. To the large number of questions concerning the interests of the medical profession generally in its relations to the community belong proposals for the reform of Contract Medical Practice, the position of medical men in connection with the Midwives Act, the Public Health Bill, and qualifications and tenure of office of Medical Officers of Health and

Copyright. Hills and Saunders, Oxford.

DR. G. C. FRANKLIN, F.R.C.S.
President of the Seventy-third Annual Meeting of the British Medical Association, held at Leicester.

DR. WILLIAM COLLIER, M.D., F.R.C.P.
President of the British Medical Association, and Litchfield Lecturer in Medicine at Oxford.

J. W. Heawood, Leicester.

THE LEICESTER TECHNICAL SCHOOL

Which will be utilised for some of the meetings of the Congress. The school is situated in "The Newarke," and in the centre of the picture may be seen St. Mary's Church.

Digitized by Google

THE LEICESTER MEDICAL CONGRESS.

Heawood.

THE MAYOR OF LEICESTER

Councillor S. Hilton, will receive the members of the Congress of the British Medical Association.

Russell.

SIR FRANCIS LAKING, G.C.V.O., M.D.

One of the best known and most popular medical men in England.

Heawood.

THE MAYORESS OF LEICESTER

Mrs. Hilton, hostess at the reception given by the Mayor in honour of the Leicester Medical Congress.

Elliott and Fry.

SIR W. B. FOSTER, M.P., M.D.

One of the Vice Presidents of the British Medical Association.

Elliott and Fry.

SIR CONSTANTINE HOLMAN, M.D.

One of the Vice-Presidents of the British Medical Association.

Heawood.

DR. J. COLLEY-BURKITT, M.D.

Vice-President of the Section of Industrial Hygiene and Diseases of Occupation.

Heawood.

DR. R. W. WESLEY

One of the Secretaries of the Ophthalmology Section at the Congress.

Heawood.

DR. C. F. BRYAN, M.R.C.S.

Hon. Secretary of the Section of Industrial Hygiene at the Congress.

Heawood.

DR. M. W. WILLIAMS, M.R.C.S.

One of the Hon. Secretaries of the Obstetric and Gynecological Section at the Congress.

Digitized by Google

FOUR FAMOUS DOCTORS OF THE PAST.

(1) Dr. Daniel Turner (1667-1741), a celebrated London physician. (2) Dr. John Fothergill (1712-1780), celebrated botanist and collector, who first recognised the existence of diphtheria. (3) Dr. William Hunter (1718-1783), the great anatomist of the eighteenth century. (4) Dr. William Buchan (1729-1805), author of the once universally read "Domestic Medicine."

Sanitary Inspectors. The British Medical Association never for a moment forgets that it is mainly to the medical profession that the community must look for guidance in such matters, and accordingly the annual meeting will receive reports of action taken, for example, with respect to the scheduling of diseases which, under the Aliens Bill, should be regarded as barriers to admission to this country; increasing efficiency of vaccination; and the proposal to appoint a Royal Commission to investigate our present national administrative machinery for dealing with public health questions, especially as regards the advisability of converting the Local Government Board into an efficient Ministry of Public Health.

The admirable organisation of the British Medical Association is amply illustrated by the carefully edited "Year Book," which contains a lucid exposition of the leading features of the annual Congress many months before it takes place. The British Medical Association may be fairly congratulated on having chosen a locality of such supreme interest as Leicester, both as regards the past and the present, for its annual meeting of 1905. It is manifestly in the fitness of things that the town, which was so often the scene of our national Parliaments, should in this twentieth century witness the assembly of the annual parliament of medicine.

While visiting the ancient landmarks of historic Leicester, the chosen delegates of the healing art may recall the fact that within fifteen years of John o' Gaunt's death the Parliament of these realms assembled in the Grey Friars' Church, and enacted that all public officers should aid in extirpating heresy, on pain of being burnt.

In 1426 was held the "Parliament of Bats," so called because the members came to Leicester armed with bats and staves, being forbidden to wear arms. Another Parliament met here in 1450, in consequence of disease being prevalent at Westminster. This was the last Parliament held at Leicester, which can probably claim association with more famous men and women of the past than any other town in the Midlands. In the Middle Ages it was the scene of the achievements of such notable warriors and politicians as Simon de Montfort, John o' Gaunt, Hastings, and Buckingham. Wicliff and Latimer preached here; the good Bishop Beveridge was born at Barrow-on-Soar; Archbishop Laud held the living of Ibstock; Doddridge laboured at Kibworth Harcourt, where, also, Dr. Aikin was born, his sisters, Mrs. Barbauld and Lucy Aikin, being equally famous; Crabbe was rector of Muston, in the vale of Belvoir; Robert Hall, whose eloquence and excellent life have gained the reverend admiration of men of all creeds, was born at Arnsby, and was pastor of a Baptist church at Leicester; Dean Alford was rector at Wymeswold; Chaucer must have been a frequent visiter to Leicester; Beaumont and Fletcher, Herrick, Drayton, Swift, Moore, Wordsworth, Byron, and Macaulay were all more or less identified with Leicestershire; while there is great probability that Shakespeare played in the old Guild Hall. That his fellows and contemporaries did there is no doubt, and the building is one of such extraordinary interest that no member of the Medical Congress should omit seeing it.

Leicester is singularly rich in hospitals, both in the old and new sense of the word, for "hospice," "hostel," and "hospital" were once used almost indiscriminately. The Leicester Infirmary was opened in 1771. An Institution for Trained Nurses flourishes in the Aylestone Road, and a Provident Dispensary in Causeway Lane. A Fever and Smallpox Hospital was erected in 1871, and since 1887 the St. John Ambulance Association has done excellent work. But none of these "modern creations," however useful, can pretend to the historic interest which centres in the venerable Trinity Hospital, erected by Henry, Earl of Lancaster, in 1331, rebuilt by George III. in 1776, and very fully described in the excellent local guide just published.

In 1330, Henry, Earl of Lancaster, obtained a Royal licence "to found a hospital to the honour of God and the blessed Virgin Mary, and to build an oratory and houses for one master and certain chaplains, and for the maintenance of fifty infirm men and five women as their nurses." His son Henry, Duke of Lancaster, enlarged the original foundation, and also obtained from the Pope an exemption from penance for all who should visit the hospital. The chapel is at the east end, and is a quaint and interesting building, with lancet lights, decorated altar, and curious tiles and windows. An alabaster tomb in the north-east corner is supposed to be that of Mary de Bohun, first wife of Henry IV. The establishment now consists of about one hundred almspeople, and of these some forty-three reside in the hospital, the remainder being at their own homes. In the kitchen is shown a very large metal pot or caldron which is said to have belonged to John o' Gaunt. There is also shown Queen Elizabeth's nutmeg-grater. This prodigious grater is enclosed in a box with a sliding lid, which bears the following inscription: "Anno Regni Reginæ Elizabeth Angliæ," also "Flee idleness and lle wel occupied. 1579."

"Think wel and say wel, but rather do wel."
"This belongeth to he old Ospital in Leicester."

A. M. B.

FOUR FAMOUS ROYAL PHYSICIANS OF THE PAST.

(1) Sir Theodore Mayerne (1573-1655), physician to James I.'s Queen. (2) Dr. William Ramsey (cir. 1630-1676), physician to Charles II. (3) Dr. Richard Mead (1673-1754), physician to George II. (4) Sir Henry Halford, M.D. (1766-1844), physician to George IV., William IV., and Queen Victoria.

Digitized by Google

BY SEA AND STREAM.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

LONDON FAVOURITES IN HOLIDAY GARB.

(1) Miss Phyllis Dare, who has taken up the leading lady's part in "The Catch of the Season." (2) Miss Adrienne Augarde, who is playing Blanche Marie in "The Little Michus." (3) Miss Zena Dare, who has just left "Lady Madcap" for a holiday. (4) Miss Mabel Green, who is playing Marie Blanche in "The Little Michus."

(From copyright photographs by Bassano, Limited.)

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

IN SOUTHERN SEAS: A LAND OF SPORT AND SUNSHINE.

SUNSHINE and sport! Yes, that is the keynote of life in New Zealand as you like best to recall it. Those are the memories you bring away with you over "the great seas of Kiwa," as the Maoris call the ocean whose league-long rollers break in foam upon their sandy beaches. Amid the noise and the tumult of London's teeming streets you will find your thoughts wandering back

"By ways familiar, under Southern skies," to linger in grateful memory upon dreams of summer seas and snow-clad, shining mountain peaks, and islands rising emerald green from the deep blue waters of some inland lake. To your ear will come again, perhaps, the plaintive murmur of the breeze as it rustles in the raupo, or the bell-bird's liquid note in the deep stillness of the New Zealand bush. Fond memory, one knows, is very prone to idealise the pleasant echoes of the past, and banish those that jar. It is not always summer-time in this imperfect world, and even South Sea paradises have their off days and discomforts incident to travel. Tourists in New Zealand, sad to relate, have been known to get caught in the rain, much to their disgust, just as Antipodean visitors have sometimes, to their astonishment, seen the sun in London. But as I said, the memories of New Zealand that will linger longest in the traveller's mind are fraught with the poetry and the zest of life beneath the Southern Cross.

Copyright.

SPORT IN NEW ZEALAND.

Rainbow trout caught in one afternoon's fishing on Lake Rotorua.

A land of sunshine indeed! In some parts of the country winter means nothing more than a rainy month or two, with many days of summer-like brilliance intervening. The writer lived for many years in Auckland, and never once saw a fall of snow. Fogs, too, are almost equally unknown. Further south the weather grows colder, and snow is plentiful enough in winter-time; but the air is clear and bracing. One recalls with pleasure many a midwinter day of glorious sunshine. The New Zealand bush retains its deep green colouring in the winter-time, for all the native trees are evergreen. If it lacks thereby the delicate shades of colour that are the charm of the English spring, nevertheless its towering forest trees, its vastness, its solemn stillness, affect the beholder with a swelling sense of majesty and awe. The crowning glory of New Zealand is the native bush.

I have called it a land of sport, and with the best of reasons. Nature has made it so, and the sporting instincts of the Anglo-Saxon have leapt to meet the opportunities thus given. Few Englishmen seem to realise what deer-stalking and shooting, what trout and sea fishing, what hunting, polo, and yachting life in New Zealand affords. Red-deer thrive splendidly, and experienced stalkers will tell you that the country about Lake Hawea, with its grand and wild mountain scenery, is one of the most perfect deer forests in the world. Partridges have not flourished since they were introduced, but of other game there is an abundance—quail, wild duck, swamp hens, pheasants, and many other kinds. Thanks to Captain Cook there is also wild pig-hunting. The descendants of some of the porkers which the great navigator landed in New Zealand 130 years ago are running wild in the bush to this day, and "pig-sticking" is a popular up-country diversion, especially when "tucker" (food) is beginning to run short. The huntsmen pursue the boar into the bush with knives and dogs, until the animal is brought to bay. It is sport of the rough-and-tumble order, and a vicious old tusker with his back to the rocks can provide all the excitement that is wanted. As for the trout streams of the Colony, the heart of the fisher rejoices when fortune brings him thither. For years past trout ova have been imported by the acclimatisation societies—one society alone has liberated in the last twelve years 5,500,000 of ova and fry—and the rivers and lakes abound with fish. The price of a fishing licence makes them free to all, and if wild and romantic scenery be an additional attraction, you have it to perfection there. Line-fishing is popular on the coast, for New Zealand waters teem with salt-water fish. Excursion steamers often run out to the fishing-grounds on a summer's afternoon, and come back laden

Copyright.

A "SMALL" BAG.

New Zealand sportsmen have a wonderful choice of game, quail, wild duck, pheasants, wild pig, and red-deer all flourishing in the marvellous woods and mountain fastnesses of the Wonderland of the World.

Digitized by Google

with the spoils of the deep. Sharks and sting-rays are occasionally seen off open beaches, and to "land" a 10-ft. shark is not the easiest or least exciting sport.

The Wellington province abounds in good fishing streams, accessible by rail and coach. For example, by crossing Cook Strait, named after the famous explorer, the angler will find sport of the best kind in the trout streams of Nelson and Marlborough. And even in the remote interior of the Sounds Country, between the great lakes and the West Coast fjords, the angler may ply rod and line along the Clinton River and Lake Ada, surrounded by some of the most magnificent scenery. The fishing season throughout the Colony is from November to April. A licence costs a sovereign, with a reduction for ladies and boys under sixteen.

habitat on the other as far as Arthur's Pass, and patrolling the desolate heads of the chief valleys on both sides of the range. In the North, Ruapehu and Tongariro and the country at the head-waters of the Wanganui and Waipa would suit them well. The most important thing is that, to the hunter, they would be far more accessible than either in the Himalayas or the Rockies. The sport would be everywhere within two days of civilisation, mostly within one; it would be at less altitudes than the tremendous heights of the Himalayan passes; and, consequently, there would, comparatively speaking, be no difficulties of commissariat, and few hardships of mountain travel. In short, in these Southern Alpine regions would be found all the zest of this fine sport without its Indian drawbacks, all the keen enjoyment of the mountain air at a the New Zealander one of the finest cruising grounds in all the world. Little wonder that he proves a born yachtsman. Golf, too, is fast becoming fashionable in the Colony, and those accustomed to playing the "Royal" game at home will find excellent links in the vicinity of all the principal cities and towns of New Zealand.

English people are too apt to associate with New Zealand a sense of great remoteness. The feeling is perhaps a mental echo of the days of the emigrant ships—days when the early pioneers of Colonial adventure bravely snapped the ties which for generations past had bound their forefathers to the soil of Old England. No doubt the Antipodes seemed worlds away to the men and women aboard the slow-moving ships as they sailed out into the great unknown. But that was fifty years

Copyright,

THE NEW ZEALAND RHINE.

Tea-ati-upoko, on Wanganui River, among the most beautiful and awe-inspiring scenery in the Antipodes.

The domestic goat, like the domestic pig, has also gone wild in the wilder country of both islands. He, too, gives good sport, his nimble foot and exceeding wariness testing the hunter's mettle to the keenest extent. He should be the precursor of the chamois of Europe, the big-horn of the Rockies, and the Ovis Ammon of the Himalayas, which give the grandest heads in the world, and in pursuit of which the sportsmen of India have often braved the barbaric laws of Thibet, in other words, exile, torture, and death. All these animals would thrive in the upper region of the Southern Alps, from the wild country between the southern lakes and the western sounds to Mount Cook, roaming the ranges between Mount Aspiring and Mount Earnslaw on the one side, and extending their wandering reasonable and merely bracing cost of physical exertion.

The shooting season lies between March 1 and about May 10, earlier or later, according to circumstances. The licence fees vary from £1 in the Wellington District to £3 in Otago, and the restriction is up to four heads for the season. These restrictions will be relaxed as the deer increase, and as pot-hunters of the various sorts that abound are brought under control.

But the summer pastime to which the young New Zealander takes most naturally, and in which he excels, is yachting. A love of the sea is in his blood. As a child the beach is his playground. He learns to swim and row and fish, and later to sail the white-winged craft that skim about the blue waters of his harbours. In the beautiful Hauraki Gulf Nature has given ago. Wondrous indeed are the changes since then. Tiny outposts of Empire have grown into thriving cities, and infant Colonies sprung to the full vigour of young and hardy manhood. Steam and the electric telegraph have bridged the estranging seas. All this the home-dweller realises, but for the most part in a dim and hazy kind of way. His interest in the Colonies is spasmodic, and his knowledge of them fragmentary. If he would enlarge his mental horizon, let him seize the opportunity, whenever it is his, to seek out these new lands oversea, for, as the poet says, "things seen are stronger than things heard." And realising that, let him remember it is but a six or seven weeks' journey, by pleasant routes and picturesque, to New Zealand and its wonders.

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES.

THE Admiralty have again acted up to the wise principle that in regard to certain high appointments tact and administrative ability are more useful qualifications than a war record, however brilliant. Certainly this principle was fully justified by the selection of Vice-Admiral Sir Arthur Fanshawe for the Commander-in-Chiefship on the Australian station, and its application is likely to be equally successful in the case of Admiral Fanshawe's successor. Vice-Admiral Sir Wilmot Hawksworth Fawkes, K.C.V.O., is best known in connection with the Cruiser Squadron, of which he was Rear-Admiral in Command. He has also had command at various times of the Royal yacht "Osborne," and of the "Raleigh," "Mercury," "Terrible," and "Canopus." For two spells he has served as Private Secretary to the First Lord of the Admiralty, and has also acted as Naval Adviser to the Inspector-General of Fortifications. The Admiralty could hardly have nominated for Australia anyone more closely in touch with every form and shape of our Imperial Naval policy than Sir Wilmot Fawkes, who, by the way, gave a most interesting and suggestive address a short time back to the "St. Vincent" boys on the occasion of what is likely to be the last prize distribution on board that training-ship.

THE Army Council has doubtless good reason for its new regulation affecting officers who act as Press correspondents in the field, and who are forbidden henceforth to use their military rank or to describe themselves as military correspondents in their published communications. But one cannot recall any special inconvenience or other objection that has arisen in regard to this rather trivial circumstance. Surely if an officer is allowed to act as a Press correspondent in the field, there is no great harm in his describing himself as what he is. The real question is whether any but retired or Reserve officers should in any circumstances be allowed to act as Press correspondents on a campaign. Of course, it suits some newspapers very well to have correspondents in the field whose expenses are being paid by the public, on the assumption that their energies are being devoted to their military duties. But the system is open to many objections, and the Army Council might have done better to consider it as a whole than merely to introduce such petty restrictions.

THE War Office might well have experienced some difficulty in finding a successor to Colonel Maunsell as Military Attaché at Constantinople. The right kind of Military Attaché is never a bird very easy to capture, for he has to have marked social and personal qualities, in addition to a head screwed on the right way, and in most cases it is desirable for him to be possessed of a decent private income. In the matter of the Constantinople Embassy there is the additional difficulty of the Turkish language, in which not many British officers are at all proficient. Happily, however, exactly the right man was on this occasion available in the person of Colonel Surtees, D.S.O., who only a short time back gave up the command of the 3rd Coldstream Guards. There are few better or more popular officers in the Army than Colonel Surtees, who holds the Staff College certificate, in addition to having served with distinction in three campaigns. He is peculiarly well qualified to become persona grata at Constantinople, for he has not only passed as interpreter in Turkish, but actually commanded the Turkish Mounted Infantry of the Egyptian Army in the Nile Expedition of 1884 85.

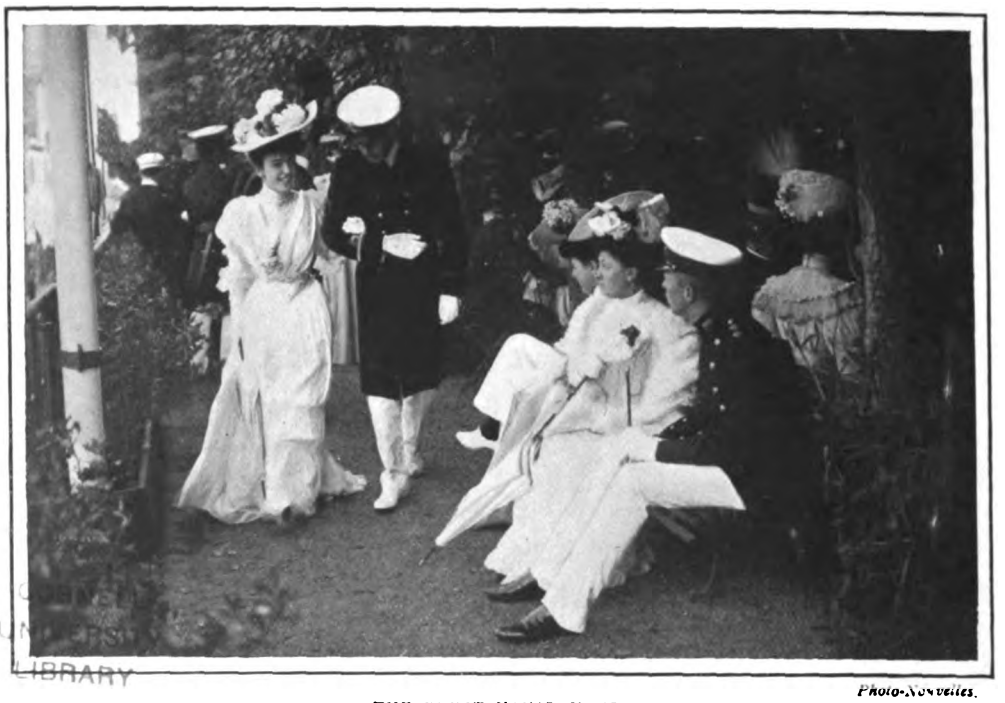

Photo-Nouvelles.

THE BREST NAVAL VISIT.

Many of the acquaintances made during the recent visit of the British Fleet to Brest give promise of developing into firm and lasting friendships.

Photo-Nouvelles.

AT BREST WITH THE FLEET.

Between the officers of the British and French Fleets a spirit of camaraderie was rapidly instituted, but the younger officers, at any rate, found a little difficulty in summoning up courage to be on equally friendly terms with the ladies. Once they were acquainted, however, matters progressed very smoothly.

THE unique distinction of having commanded the forces of six different nations in action is enjoyed by Admiral Rainier, who has recently received promotion to Vice-Admiral on the Retired List, for in 1897, when Captain of the "Rodney," he commanded the English, French, Russian, Austrian, and Italian landing parties during the Cretan insurrection, and, having with this very diversified contingent relieved a Turkish garrison inland, he added the latter to his command, and fought a sharp engagement with the insurgents, whom he repulsed. Admiral Rainier also served with distinction on the Somali Coast, in the West Indies, and at Venezuela during the revolution in 1902, the steps he took in regard to this last meeting with the full approval of the Foreign Office. This distinguished officer is descended from the old Huguenot family of Régnier, and, while his father was a clergyman, he is the grandson and great-grandson of well-known sailors. One of his great-grandfathers, Captain T. Harvey of the "Brunswick," was killed at Lord Howe's victory on the Glorious First of June.

Digitized by Google

THE RIVER SEASON.

THE CUTTING TO SUNBURY LOCK.

Throughout July the pleasure traffic on the Thames has been enormous, and in certain reaches on Saturdays and Sundays it has been almost possible to pass from one bank to the other by stepping from one boat to another. At Hampton this year a regatta is to be held, and as Twickenham has also revived its once famous meeting, there is a plethora of engagements for rowing men. One of the events at the Hampton Regatta is to be a race for employés of the London United Electric Tramway Company, and Lady Clifton Robinson, the wife of the chairman of the company, is presenting a silver cup.

(From a copyright photograph specially taken for this paper.)

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

MR. SWINBURNE'S verse suggests nothing so much as the wash of a tempestuous sea; but nowhere in his recently-published novel, "Love's Cross-Currents" (Chatto and Windus), do we find prophecy of the poet we delight in; no suggestion of the wind that pipes to the wet sheet and the flowing sail is here; the magic timbre is absent; and our interest is nowhere quickened. It is a reprinted product of Mr. Swinburne's literary youth, and he has chosen the epistolary form, and the letters are splashed with foreign words and phrases. This and their monotone, presumptive adolescence will account for; because of it, too, we can pardon similar defects in craftsmanship.

A Buried Bantling.

But what we find less easy to forgive is an anachronistic poem. Dated 1625, it is not good poetry, but for all its archaisms it betrays its origin. Its alliteration apart,

> "stoop to pluck my kiss, > Too pale a fruit for thy red mouth's compassion," is Swinburnean in its essence. We think the sponsor's title far less happy than the author's unpretentious "A Year's Letters," though that is by the way. It remains that Mr. Watts-Dunton, for whose critical faculty we have the highest admiration, has performed a singular disservice to literature in disinterring this "buried bantling" of Mr. Swinburne's intellectual childhood. And he really is unkind to Mr. Swinburne, who has an excellent sense of proportion and a knowledge of relative values.

* * *

MR. MAURICE HEWLETT, in his latest book, "The Fool Errant" (Heinemann), has leaped back to the position he seemed to be losing. There is matter here, as well as manner; a fine study of a "fool"—an unworldly, pure being, a man in his passions, but something of a Saint Francis in his simple honour, his love of purity, his hatred of a stain on his innocence. He is, in fact, like Parsifal, a "reine Thor." His one slip dooms him, as he thinks, to a lifelong expiation, and the story of it and its effect on his open, chivalrous, boyish nature is the theme of a remarkable and very beautiful book, in which Mr. Hewlett has given us of his best. Whether the character and his doings are quite "natural," as we say, is another question. Saints, after all, are not natural, and the average man's sense of pollution and hatred of it are not so strong as his merely human characteristics; but the average man is not such good material for art like Mr. Hewlett's as the strange varieties of the genus. Much the same may be said of Mr. Bernard Capes's new novel, "A Jay of Italy" (Methuen), in which, again, the author has worked to happier results than in several of his later books. Here we have another "fool," a dainty, pretty little Saint of sixteen, who comes to convert the bestial, brutal Court of Galeazzo Sforza at Milan to the gospel of regeneration by universal Love. He ends his mission in a dungeon, starved to death, because the Court soon tires of its new toy; but while he lives and works, indeed, up till the moment of his death, he is a fascinating little apostle. And the picture of the Court at Milan, glowering, brutal, vicious, gorgeous, and vile, is most powerfully and convincingly drawn.

Two Fools Errant.

* * *

MR. GEORGE W. STOW, a well-known geographer and ethnologist, died some years ago, before his important work on "The Native Races of South Africa" was ready for the press. The manuscript was purchased by Miss Lucy C. Lloyd, "the greatest living authority upon the Bushmen," and was lately entrusted to Mr. George McCall Theal, formerly the keeper of the Archives of Cape Colony and now Colonial Historiographer, to be edited and published. It has now appeared with Messrs. Swan Sonnenschein and Co., and a handsome and valuable book it is, crammed with information on the history, customs, and beliefs of the native races. It is not a book to while away an idle hour with, but a solid contribution to the science of ethnology. The spirited art of these peoples is not unknown to any who, like the present writer, have had the opportunity of studying a number of native productions, and we reproduce on this page one of the illustrations of Mr. Stow's work, which show Bushmen's paintings at their highest artistic point.

South African Natives.

BUSHMEN'S PAINTING: FROM CAVE ON THE THORN RIVER, NEAR WINDVOGELBERG.

One of the illustrations in "The Native Races of South Africa," by George W. Stow. (Swan Sonnenschein.)

* * *

MR. ERNEST NEWMAN'S "Musical Studies," published by Mr. John Lane, is a book that no serious lover of music can afford to neglect. It includes a long study of Berlioz and the Romantic Movement, a full analysis of past and present "programme music," and papers on "Herbert Spencer and the Origin of Music," "Maeterlinck and Music," and "Richard Strauss and the Music of the Future." Reprinted from periodical appearance, being, in fact, examples of the best musical criticism of the modern Press, the articles are necessarily a little disconnected in subject; but there is throughout the link of the critic's personality and point of view, and a reading of the book leaves a distinct impression of a strong mind at work on subjects that need elucidation and formulation.

Musical Studies.

* * *

LORD ROBERTS contributes a preface to an important book now being published by Messrs. Watts and Co. for Major Stewart L. Murray, on "The Peace of the Anglo-Saxons." The work is devoted primarily to a consideration of how the peace of the country can best be preserved, and the author arrives at the conclusion that this can only be done for any length of time by the possession of such an armed force as will command peace. The question of invasion is also exhaustively discussed, and the conclusion is arrived at that, in order that the Navy may be strategically free for offensive purposes, a land force capable of adequately guarding this country during the absence of the Fleet is imperatively necessary. A strong appeal is made for the federation of the whole Anglo-Saxon race, including America. Lord Roberts, in his appreciative preface, points out that the problems discussed in the work are of the gravest import, and he urges that, if Major Murray's facts cannot be gainsaid or his arguments refuted, the sooner we set about remedying existing defects and deficiencies the better.

Pax Britannica.

* * *

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON, who make a speciality, an art, indeed, of the publication of handsome great works in serial parts, have sent us the first number of "British Trees," drawn and described by Rex Vicat Cole, R.B.A. Each part is to be a monograph complete in itself, and there are to be two editions—a general edition in thirty fortnightly parts at 1s. net each, and one for subscribers, with twelve additional proof photogravures signed by the artist, and an extra set of the plates, for £3. The publication is intended not only as a guide to landscape students, taking the place in their studies of the anatomy books furnished for figure-painters, but for all lovers of trees who desire to know something of their growth and character. Part I. deals with that most graceful of trees, the ash. All the parts of the tree are well and fully described, and the number is illustrated with a photogravure reproduction of Mr. Vicat Cole's well-known picture, "Young Ash Trees," now in the Leeds Gallery, and no less than twelve other fac-similes of drawings and studies by the same artist. We cannot praise either letterpress or illustrations too highly. Scientific knowledge is skilfully combined with general interest and charm, and the publication in full should be snapped up by any lover of one of the chiefest of England's beauties—her trees.

British Trees.

---

BOOKS TO READ.

The Girl Who had Nothing, by Mrs. C. N. Williamson. (Ward, Lock.)
The King's Messenger, by Louis Tracy. (White.)
Tales and Fantasies, by R. L. Stevenson. (Chatto and Windus.)
The Faroes and Iceland, by Nelson Annandale. (Oxford: Clarendon Press.)
In and Around Venice, by Horatio F. Brown. (Rivingtons.)
The Tyrol, by W. D. McCrackan. (Duckworth.)
The Fool Errant, by Maurice Hewlett. (Heinemann.)
The Romance of Lohengrin, by Bernard Capes. (Dean.)
A House of Cards, by John Heigh. (The Macmillan Company.)
For Love and Loyalty, by Paul Seaton. (Simpkin, Marshall.)
The Scenery of London. Painted by Herbert Marshall; described by G. E. Mitton. (Black.)
Rhymes of the East and Re-collected Verses, by Dum-Dum. (Constable.)
A Jay of Italy, by Bernard Capes. (Methuen.)
Iconoclasts, a Book of Dramatists, by James Huneker. (Werner Laurie.)
Children of Earth, by Sidney Paternoster. (Long.)
The Vegetable Garden, by MM. Vilmorin-Andrieux. (English Edition, Murray.)
The Native Races of South Africa, by George W. Stow. (Swan Sonnenschein.)

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

NO chronicle of Turf events would be in any sense complete which did not contain a more than passing allusion to the retirement of John Porter from an active participation in the calling to which he has devoted a lifetime of hard work and unblemished honour. The famous Kingsclere trainer was born at Rugby in 1838, and the turning-point of his career was reached in 1863, when Sir Joseph Hawley entrusted him with the training of his horses. Space will, unfortunately, not allow me to deal with the many famous horses that have been sent out by John Porter from Kingsclere to do battle for the great prizes of the Turf; but of this the veteran trainer may be assured, that he takes with him into his retirement the good wishes, esteem, and sincere regard of all who have known him.

Although no racing of first-class importance was included in the programme of the Second July Meeting, which commenced on the 18th inst., lovers of quiet racing, and those who can appreciate the many charms of these summer meetings behind the Ditch, found a fresh sweetness in the air induced by the rainfall of the early morning. The Dullingham Stakes, which was doubled in value last year, and is now worth 1,000 sovs., was won amid hearty cheering by Mead, who is the property of his Majesty; 5 to 4 was laid on Cherry Ripe, hailing from Robinson's successful stable, but the wearer of the Royal colours shot out below the distance, and always having the measure of his field, won comfortably by three-quarters of a length. Mead had been a long time on the shelf, and much credit is due to Marsh for having once more got him into condition to stand the preparation for a race.

A good field came out for the Soltykoff Stakes, including Sir E. Vincent's smart filly Ulalume, but Mr. J. B. Joel's American-bred Waterflower, by Watercress out of Pansy, who appears to run better every time she comes out, proved to be good enough to check her winning career, and it is by no means unlikely that, when the winner has fully grown up to her big frame, she will prove to be entitled to a place among the best animals of her age. Morny Cannon rode quite in his old style in the Khedive Plate, and landed Lord Howard de Walden's Certosa half a length in front of Souldrop in a field of twenty-one runners.

Matters were very quiet in the sale-rings on Wednesday morning, the chief items of note being the purchase of the colt by Florizel II. out of Limasol for 830 guineas, and the 1,550 guineas paid by Sir R. Jardine for the Merry Miser colt; but a fairly interesting programme provided good sport in the afternoon. In the match Lord Penrhyn's recent acquisition, Aliena, proved altogether too speedy for Lord Cadogan's Currajong. In the Two Year Old Sale Stakes Lord Howard de Walden's His Eminence gave Morny Cannon a winning ride, and Donnetta justified her position in the betting by winning the July Handicap, but it was only after a sharp tussle with Mouraviff, half a length behind whom the wayward Orchid finished a good third, in spite of the weight he was called upon to give. Considerable confidence appeared to be placed in Rouge Croix for the Zetland Plate, and he has either made vast improvement of late, or the class behind him is much worse than it was thought to be, for he ran his race as if a mile and a-half was quite to his liking, and won in a common canter from Commune.

Admirable Crichton, the winner of the Chesterfield Stakes on the concluding day of the meeting, shaped like a good horse, and it may be that he is destined to prove a thorn in the side of Colonel Walker's crack, Black Arrow, for although the half brother to Pretty Polly ran somewhat green, he came out and won his race when asked to readily enough; and Saltpetre, the winner of the Goodwood Cup last year, made hacks of his opponents in the Summer Handicap, and administered a most decisive beating to Palmy Days and Given Up.

Glorious weather, the presence of his Majesty, the brilliant toilettes of the ladies, and the strenuous excitement of the great race itself, combined to make the Eclipse Stakes of 1905 one of the most memorable races on record, to which still further interest was added by the presence of Val d'Or amongst the runners. The great bay son of Flying Fox and Wandora is indeed a splendid specimen of a thorough-bred race-horse, and hearty indeed were the cheers that greeted the victory of M. Blanc's orange jacket and blue cap. The story of the race is briefly told. The friends of Cicero, the winner of the Derby, would not be denied, and 13 to 8 was freely laid on him, while at the finish 3 to 1 was laid against Val d'Or. Very little time was wasted at the start, and Polymelus settled down in front of his field, and remained there till making the bend for home, where Cicero took up the running. Val d'Or, who had been hampered more than once in his efforts to get through, finally cleared himself of his difficulties, and tackled Cicero in earnest. Side by side they raced home, but the mighty stride of the French horse told its inevitable tale, and he strode home a gallant winner of a memorable race by half a length.

CAURIRE.

W. A. Rouch.

THE WINNER OF THE ECLIPSE STAKES.
M. Blanc's Val d'Or, by Flying Fox—Wandora.

W. A. Rouch.

LORD ROSEBERY'S CICERO
Which ran second in the Eclipse Stakes last week. Mr. L. Neumann's Llangibby was third.

Digitized by Google

THE CRICKET SEASON.

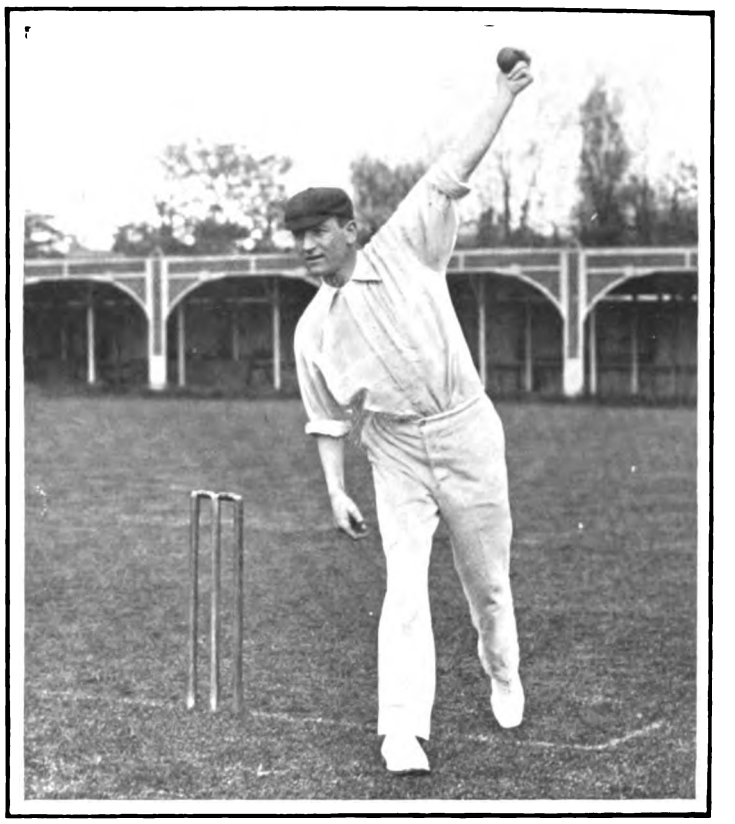
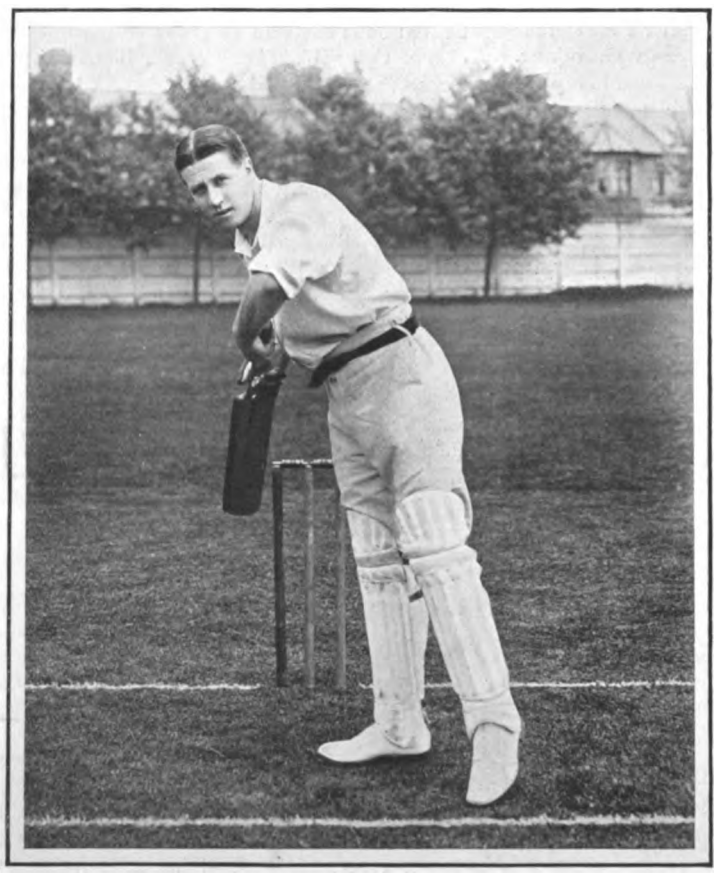
J. DOUGLAS, MIDDLESEX.

It is not difficult nowadays, when so much is written of cricket and cricketers, to make now and then a rather extravagant statement concerning the ability or class of this or that player. But when one says that J. Douglas, the Dulwich, Cambridge, and Middlesex player, would be one of the first choices for England if he was in a position to play regularly, one has not in the least exaggerated. A splendid field anywhere, he saves a large number of runs in every match, and when he bats he usually doubles or trebles the number he has saved.



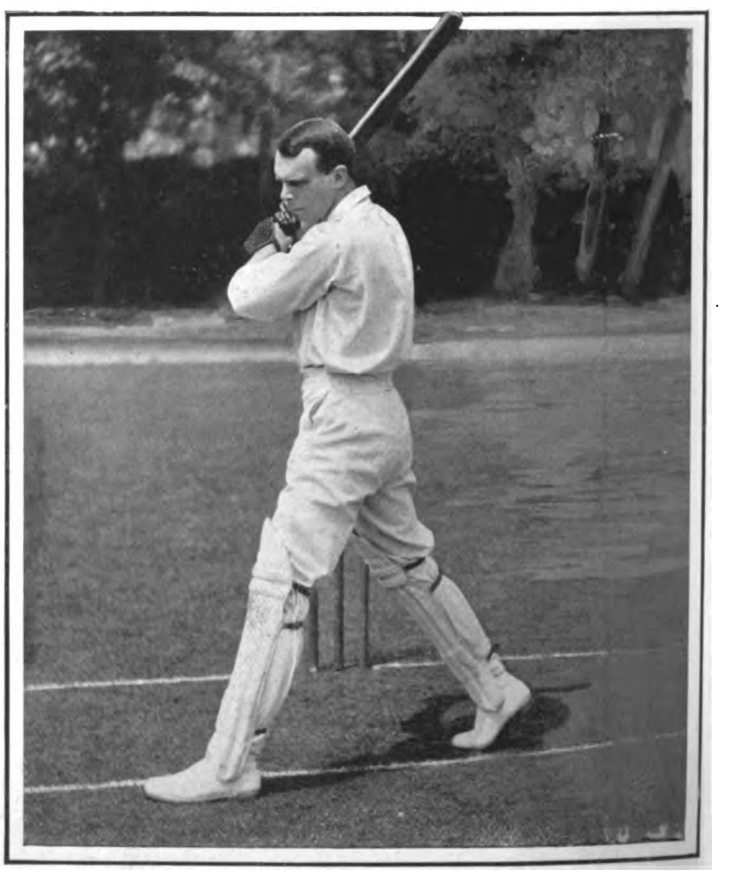
F. A. TARRANT.

This Anglo-Australian was the favoured of Dame Fortune when he made his début at Lord's for Middlesex against Sussex. For he had a bowler's wicket to perform upon, and good use he made of it, with something like a dozen wickets to his credit in the match. The Essex batsmen meet him for the first time this week at Lord's, and they will find his slow ball a very elusive thing to deal with. And even if he gets no wickets he is generally catching someone out, or getting runs in his own quiet way.



J. H. W. T. DOUGLAS, ESSEX.

No relation of "Jimmy," the Amateur Boxing Champion of 1905 is known to his friends as "Johnny." He might almost be known as Alphabet Douglas. Educated at Felstead School, where he was in both elevens, and several years public schools boxing champion at different weights. Grit to the backbone, he has yet to make a name for himself on the first-class cricket-field, where his fielding is not so good as his batting, and not compensated for yet by his bowling. He is young and very keen, which must, in due season, bring its reward.



REV. F. H. GILLINGHAM.

Though he was educated at Dulwich College and Durham University, the Rev. F. Hay Gillingham was not a contemporary of "Jimmy" Douglas, unless he was a very small boy when Douglas was in XI. and XV. The "punching par on" some habitués of the Leyton ground call this grand specimen of muscular christianity, who by the way, is the only one of the cloth to have scored 200 or over at Lord's. He did this last year for Essex v. Middlesex, and was promptly chosen to play for an England XI. v. South Africans at Lord's.

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES.

Cavalry Training in Ireland.

HELIOGRAPH SIGNALLING

Transmitting orders for the landing of a Naval brigade.

ON THE LUSK SANDS.

Officers at play after the labours of a day in the field.

IN THE FIELD.

A heliograph station receiving messages.

THE NAVAL BRIGADE.

Officers of the cruiser " Donegal " in camp.

Some interesting exercises were carried out recently at Lusk, County Dublin. Thr e regiments of cavalry were embarked in the transport " Kansas," and landed on the coast the horses and men being made to swim ashore. The cruiser " Donegal " acted as convoy, and a brigade for service in the field was landed a ter the cavalry had all got ashore These conjoint Naval and Military operations on a small scale have been very frequent of late, and have added not a little to mutual understanding and goodwill between the Services.

(From copyright photographs by Eva West.)

Digitized by Google

Dorchester and the Navy.

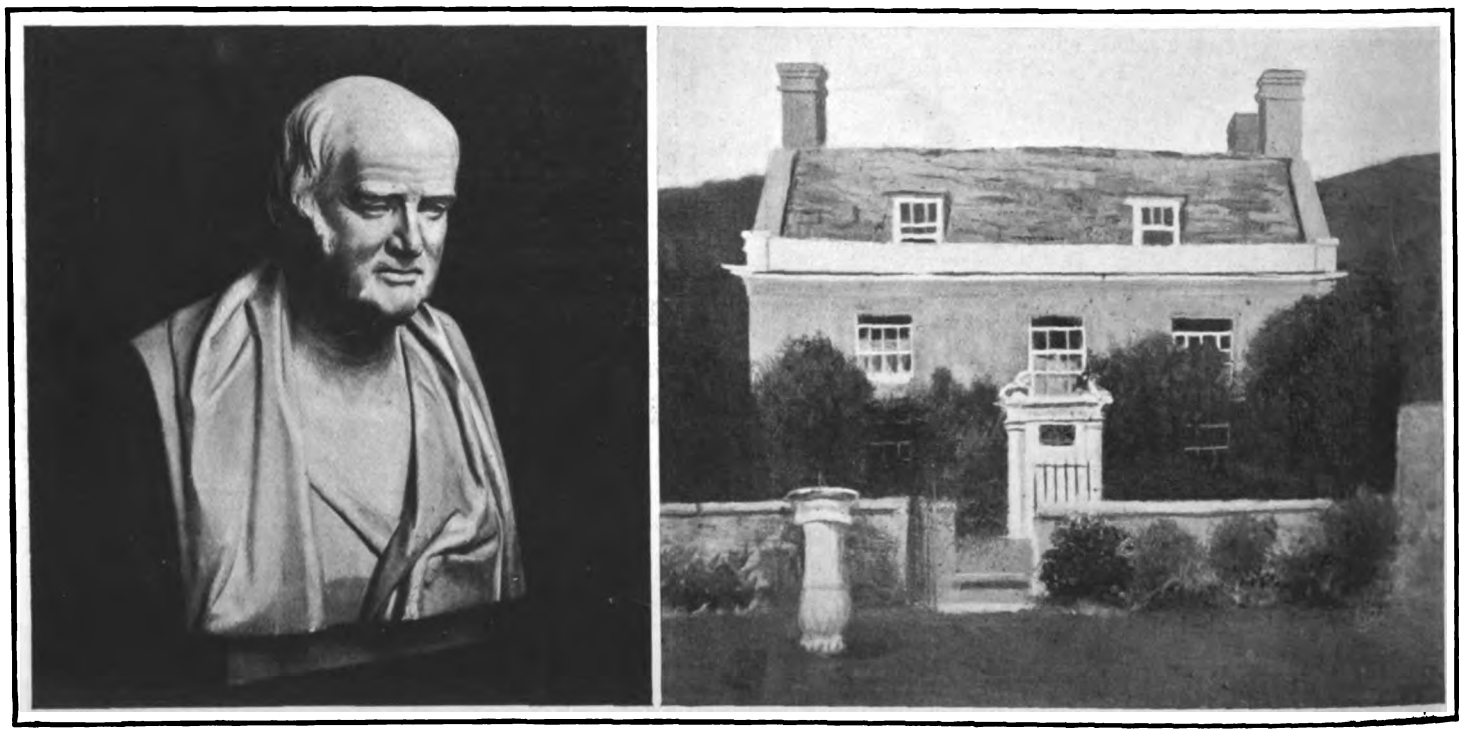
AN INTERESTING AND IMPORTANT LOCAL EXHIBITION IN CONNECTION WITH THE COMING TRAFALGAR CENTENARY.

THE intimate connection of Dorsetshire and the sons of Dorset with the fortunes and annals of the King's Navy dates from the days of the Conquest, and even before that Saxons and Danes fought many a battle in sight of Portland Bill and Thorncombe Beacon. In Henry VIII.'s reign Bridport manufactured the whole of the rope used for our ships of war, a circumstance which gave rise to the old-world saw of being "stabbed with a Bridport dagger," or, in other words, coming to an untimely end by the hangman's noose. When the King of Spain sent the Armada to invade our shores, gallant little Dorset contributed no less than nine vessels to the opposing fleet, and it was off the cliffs of Portland that the Dons first discovered that the word "invincible" was a misnomer. Dorsetshire has given England some of her most celebrated sailors — Bingham, Somers, the discoverer of Bermuda, the three Hoods, Robert Digby, Sir William Domett, and last, but not least, Sir Thomas Masterman Hardy, K.C.B., in whose arms Nelson died, and into whose eyes he gave his last look. A hundred years have gone by since then, and the traditions of the past are well maintained. There is hardly an ironclad afloat to-day which does not count several Dorsetmen on her muster-roll. Hardy is buried at Chelsea Hospital, but William Domett sleeps at Hawkchurch, and Sir George Somers is buried at Whitechurch, close to the shrine of St. Candida. The Rev. S. E. V. Filleul, the able organiser of the Dorchester Trafalgar Exhibition, may be congratulated on having got together an exceptionally interesting collection of relics of every description, while the Rev. R. Grosvenor Bartelot, who has undertaken to deliver a series of lectures, on Dorset worthies and other kindred subjects, has made so profound a study of the life of the captain of the "Victory" that we may almost expect a Hardy biography full of new and startling facts from his pen before the centennial year of Trafalgar is over. Hardy is still represented in his native shire by descendants in the female line. To one branch belongs the well-known portrait from which the familiar print was engraved; to the other, the Hardy-Manfields of Portesham, who live in the shadow of the hill crowned by the Hardy monument, belong the desk, the rare water-colour sketch of Nelson, the latter of which we reproduce by kind permission of the present owner. The Nelson portrait was given to Hardy by the Admiral while with him in Sicily. At the back is an inscription in Italian, which leads one to believe it to be the work of a foreign artist, and not that of John Downman, as has been supposed. The sketch is slightly coloured. The present Lord Nelson possesses a very similar portrait in pencil. From one of Hardy's letters which has now come to light, it clearly appears that Hardy was at Dorchester on his way to join the "San Josef" at Plymouth early in January (probably the 12th), 1801. He was taken ill just before his arrival, and was so seriously indisposed that he thought he would have died in his carriage. He probably passed the night at the King's Arms, then, as now, Dorchester's principal hotel. In the exhibition is to be seen an original water-colour of the King's Arms, by Rowlandson, as it was in Nelson's time. In the department of Nelson caricatures and colour-prints illustrating life in the Navy between 1795 and 1805, Mr. Filleul has been specially successful, and has secured a number of rare local items, e.g., an engraving of Mr. John Penn drilling the Portland Volunteers, and scarce portraits of Lords Hood and Bridport and Sir Samuel Hood, together with an original allegorical drawing of the death of Nelson by Isaac Cruickshank, and the first water-colour sketch of the funeral car. For outsiders the Thomas Hardy collection will probably prove the most powerful attraction. Thanks to the enterprise of the Great Western Railway, one can leave Paddington at 12.35 p.m., and be in Dorchester by 4.10 p.m. The exhibition, which will remain open from the 24th to the 29th inst., will take place in the County Museum, which contributes the fine bust of Hardy, illustrated on this page. The exhibition is certainly one with great attractions for all those who take an interest in Naval matters.

A.

LORD NELSON.

From a pencil drawing in the possession of the Hardy family.



BUST OF SIR THOMAS HARDY.

A collection of relics connected with the career of Nelson's Hardy is on view at the Dorchester County Museum this week.

HARDY'S HOME AT PORTESHAM.

Which is still in possession of descendants of the Hardys in the female line. It was from this old Dorset homestead that Hardy went to sea.

(From photographs by A. H. Evans, Dorchester).

Digitized by Google

BENGER'S Food

"Retained when all other foods are rejected."
London Medical Record.

Benger's Food is distinguished by the ease with which it can be digested and absorbed and is quite different from any other food obtainable.

For Infants Invalids and The Aged

---

LEAMINGTON SPA.

REGENT HOTEL.

ENTIRELY RECONSTRUCTED.

DECORATIONS BY MAPLE.

Electric Light.
Telephones in Every Room. Lift.
Stabling for 90 Horses.

Garage and Resident Engineer.

APPLY FOR TARIFF.

Telegrams: "REGENT, LEAMINGTON." Tel. No. 0659.

---

CHARLES LEE & SON,

42/-

Specialist Ladies' Outfitters,
98 & 100, WIGMORE STREET
(ONLY ADDRESS).

CAUTION.—Messrs. Lee & Son have no branches, and warn the public against imitations of their goods.

An example in Finest Quality English Crêpe de Chine, with Valenciennes Lace Yoke and Guipure Points, 42/-.

A Blouse suitable for any figure.

POST ORDERS.—The Lady's Pictorial states:—"If you live in the country, have an account with Lee & Son, Wigmore Street; they send the choicest selection of goods by post, while they are cheap for the best Costumiers, Furriers, Lacemen, Specialists in Trousseaus, The Leewig Petticoat, Royal Crescent Veil, Hosiers, Glovers, Milliners, etc.

CHARLES LEE & SON.
WIGMORE STREET.

---

ROBINSON & CLEAVER, LD., BELFAST,

REGENT ST. & CHEAPSIDE, LONDON; and LIVERPOOL.

Manufacturers to His Majesty the King and H.R.H. the Princess of Wales.

Carriage paid on orders of 20s. upwards in United Kingdom.

IRISH Fish Napkins, 2/11 per doz. Dinner Napkins, 5/6 per doz. Table Cloths, 2yd. square, 2/11; 2½yd. by 3yd., 5/11. Kitchen Table Cloths, 11½d. each. Irish Linen Pillow Cases, 10/6 per doz. Real Irish Linen Sheeting, fully bleached, 2yd. wide, 1/11 per yard. Roller Towelling, 3½d. per yard.

SAMPLES AND PRICE LISTS POST FREE. DAMASK Surplice Linen, 10½d. per yard. Dusters from 3/3 per dozen. Glass Cloths 3/11 per dozen. Frilled Linen Pillow Cases, from 1/4½ each. Fine Linens and Diaper, 9½d per yard.

TABLE AND HOUSE LINEN.

N.B.—To prevent delay all Letter Orders and Enquiries for Samples of above goods should be sent direct to Belfast.

---

GANESH FOREHEAD STRAP (Patent), price £1 5s 6d., cures the deep lines between brows, at the corners of the eyes, and on the forehead.

GANESH CHIN STRAP (Patent) is a certain cure for double chins, restores lost contours, and takes away the line running from the mouth to chin, and keeps the mouth closed during sleep. Price £1 1s. 6d. Stronger Straps, 25s.

Mrs. ADAIR

PATRONISED BY ROYALTY AND RECOMMENDED BY THE MEDICAL PROFESSION.

90, NEW BOND STREET, W.,
83, Carlton House, High Street, Birmingham,

5, Rue Cambon, Paris, 52, West 35th Street, New York, where the Ganesh Treatments and preparations may be obtained.

Eastern Muscle Oil, fills out hollows and removes lines, £1 10s. 6d., 10/6, 5/6.

Diable Skin Tonic, closes and cleanses the pores, cures puffiness under the eyes, £1 1s. 6d., 10/6, 7/6.

Lily Sulphur Lotion (prescription made by a doctor), improves, whitens, and makes the skin soft and smooth, is antiseptic, 5/6 & 10/6.

Read "How to retain and restore the youthful beauty of face and form," post free.

Consultations Free.

LADIES ONLY RECEIVED. LADIES TAUGHT.

Mrs. Adair will reduce all her prices for Ganesh Preparations and Straps by 4s. in the £1, between the date July 20th and August 5th, to any client mentioning the name of this paper.

---

GRANDE·MAISON·DE·BLANC

PARIS.
6, BOULEVARD DES CAPUCINES.

LONDON, W.
62, NEW BOND STREET.

(No Branch in America)

Table & Bed Linen, Handkf's, etc.

Woven by Hand on our own Looms.

LADIES' LINGERIE

LOUVET Frères, Proprietors. O. BOYER, Director, formerly of New York.

Digitized by Google

Trafalgar Centenary Pottery.

A DESIGN FOR A NELSON MUG

Showing Nelson and his four chief captains, with scenes from the battle of Trafalgar.

WITH the British and French Fleets fraternising at Brest and Portsmouth this year, and King Edward given the rank of Admiral à la suite of the Spanish Navy, with exhibitions of Naval and Nelson relics all over the country, and with a general recrudescence of interest in the Navy, there will probably be many visitors to this country in the year 1905 who will take back with them mementoes of the greatest Naval genius the world has ever seen. There is not perhaps to-day so much demand for pottery figures and effigies of popular heroes, in the form of cups, mugs, and jugs, as there was in the days when every sailor, and many a good landsman too, considered the best gift he could bestow on Poll was a large mug, wherefrom he, in the days when they were married, might be able to quaff his cider or his ale. But as a lasting and decorative memento there is nothing superior to pottery, as the existence to-day of some fine old specimens that have been in the possession of one family for generations goes to show.

In this Trafalgar Centenary year, therefore, what more appropriate than that Messrs. Doulton, the famous Lambeth and Burslem firm, should make a bold attempt to revive interest in Naval pottery, by putting on the market a series of original pieces and some replicas of their own century-old designs? The Royal Doulton Potteries have a name as historically interesting as it is financially and artistically sound, and any goods bearing their mark are worthy of a place on the shelves of every collector.

As long ago as 1650 Dutch potters had established themselves in Lambeth, but there are pieces of Lambeth delft in existence bearing the even earlier date of 1631. The founder of the Royal Doulton Potteries at Lambeth served his apprenticeship in the neighbouring district of Fulham, where he was with White's, a firm established in 1671, by John Dwight, an M.A. of Oxford, and one of the many claimants to the title of inventor of porcelain in England. The late Sir Henry Doulton's efforts to promote the potter's art brought him distinction from many quarters, and at the Lambeth works in 1885 the King, then Prince of Wales, presented him with the Gold Albert Medal of the Society of Arts "for the impulse given to the production of art pottery in England."

THE NELSON STATUETTE.

Copied from the figure on the Trafalgar Square Memorial.

Among the Nelson items which are now being made by the Royal Doulton Potteries are a statuette and a medallion, and with commendable foresight they have also placed on the market a Togo medallion, which should prove well-nigh as popular as that of the great British Admiral. Our illustrations will give some idea of the various pieces that are to be obtained, and another item, which we do not illustrate, is a replica of the Doulton-Watts jug, or rather pitcher. The original of this is now both scarce and costly, and is held to be one of the finest portraits of Nelson extant. The replica is also a wonderful piece of work, and shows the remarkable standard of excellence attained in the art of pottery. One hundred years hence these Nelson Centenary memorials should be as highly prized as are their prototypes of 1805. But we of this generation are all bitten somewhat with the craze for collecting, and no doubt "centenary pottery" will be easier to find in 2005 than are the pieces commemorative of the battle itself in this present year of grace. F.

NELSON CENTENARY POTTERY.

A teapot and cider mug, designed by the Royal Doulton Potteries in commemoration of the centenary of the battle of Trafalgar.

Digitized by Google

NEW ZEALAND

THE BRIGHTER BRITAIN.

A NEW COUNTRY of marvellous beauty, with a fertile soil and a splendid climate. No extremes of heat or cold.

No droughts. An abundance of water, yet no rainy season.

An Evergreen Land rich in natural products.

A GREAT SHEEP, CATTLE AND DAIRYING COUNTRY.

Cheap farms with helpful assistance to farmers by the Government. Reduced steamer fares from the United Kingdom to New Zealand for persons with small capital.

No private monopoly of Public Utilities; the Government owns and operates Railways, Telegraphs, Telephones and Insurance.

No Lock-outs! No Strikes!! Employment disputes adjusted by Arbitration!!!

NEW ZEALAND IS THE WONDERLAND OF THE WORLD.

Its Thermal Sights are unique in their extent, beauty and weirdness.

The Mammoth Geyser "Waimangu" (Black Water) hurls an immense mass of boiling water, mud and stones over 1,000 feet high.

Hot Mineral Water and Mud Baths; The Curative Baths of Rotorua, Te Aroha and Hanmer are world famous. Government doctors in attendance.

Baths. Gardens. Games. Music.

and picturesque. Here are lakes of great size and depth—canyons that surpass the greatest of other lands—dense forests with a tropical profusion of ferns and flowers—innumerable waterfalls—monoliths of granite many thousands of feet in height—glaciers, snowfields, and the peerless Sounds, with their 400 miles of inside sailing distance.

TRANSIT is convenient throughout New Zealand. Government railways, Express trains, Pullman and Dining Cars. Excellent coastal steamers. Splendid coaching routes. Hotels, good; charges moderate. Government Hotels, Spas, and Accommodation Houses in many of the principal tourist resorts.

Large Mail Steamers with every modern comfort and convenience leave Great Britain for New Zealand fortnightly. Duration of direct journey, 40 days; via Suez and Australia, 44 days; via Canada, 32 days; via San Francisco, 28 days.

The best time to visit New Zealand is during the summer months, from November to April.

ALL INFORMATION regarding Travel, Tourist Routes, Spas, Baths, Sport, etc., etc., is supplied free of charge by the GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENT OF TOURIST AND HEALTH RESORTS, Head Office, WELLINGTON, NEW ZEALAND. Branch Offices throughout the Colony. Information regarding access to New Zealand, Reduced Steamer

HAULING KAURI LOGS THROUGH BUSH, KAURI FOREST, NORTH AUCKLAND.

FELLING KAURI TREE, NORTH AUCKLAND, KAURI FOREST.

WAIRUA FALLS, WAIRUA RIVER, NORTH AUCKLAND.

The ALPINE SCENERY of New Zealand combines the distinguishing features of Switzerland, Norway and America. The Southern Alps extend for 300 miles. Mt. Cook, the highest peak, is belted by the largest glaciers in the temperate regions—the Tasman being 18 miles long and 2 miles wide. Near the foot of Mt. Cook is the Hermitage Hotel. Government guides, Alpine huts, and all necessary Alpine equipment available for use of visitors.

The LAKES of New Zealand are most pleasing in their charm of colour, contour and environment. Rotorua, Rotoiti, Taupo, and Waikaremoana in the North Island; Manapouri, Wakatipu, Te Anau, Wanaka, Kanieri and Mahinapua in the South Island are the most notable. The Lakes of the South Island are surrounded by mountain scenery of singular beauty and magnificence. Steamers and Power Launches. Good Hotels.

The WEST COAST FIORDLAND is indescribably wild

Fares, Settlement Commerce, Industries, Travel, etc., etc., also supplied at the Office of the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, London—Mr. J. G. Gow, Commercial Agent for New Zealand, Durban, South Africa, also supplies general information respecting New Zealand.

Minister for Tourist and Health Resorts: Hon. Sir Joseph G. Ward, K.C.M.G. Superintendent: T. E. Donne, Wellington, New Zealand. The Superintendent invites correspondence.

See Tourist Department's "Itinerary of Travel" and descriptive Guide Books.

An International Exhibition of Products, Manufactures, Arts, Sciences, Amusements, etc., etc., is to be held by the Government of New Zealand in Hagley Park, Christchurch City, commencing 1st November, 1906, and terminating April, 1907. Full particulars obtainable from the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, S.W.

OKOROIRE.

HOT SPRINGS AND SANATORIUM HOTEL.

One of the finest Health Resorts in the Thermal District.

The first place of interest en route to Rotorua, New Zealand.

Delightful NATURAL HOT MINERAL BATHS, free to Guests. Sufferers from Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Affection of the Eyes, Skin Diseases etc., are often permanently cured by these waters.

CLIMATE.—Beautifully clear and bracing atmosphere, charming surroundings.

SPORT.—The Streams in the hotel grounds are exceedingly well-stocked with Trout. Plenty of Game, viz: Pheasants, Virginian Quail, Wild Duck, Hares, and Deer. Lawn Tennis, Golf, and Croquet.

The drive from Okoroire to Rotorua is one of the most beautiful in New Zealand.

T. MARTIN,
Manager.

NEW ZEALAND.

THE GRAND HOTEL, ROTORUA.

Situated in the Centre of the Hot Lakes District.

Patronised by T.R.H. The Prince and Princess of Wales.

THE HOTEL is in the immediate neighbourhood of the beautifully laid-out Government Gardens, wherein are situated the celebrated "Priest," "Rachel," "Postmaster," "Duchess," and other mineral baths, the curative properties of which are world famous. It has magnificent and lofty apartments, spacious promenade, balconies, snug alcoves, and luxuriously-appointed drawing, music, conversation, reading, smoking, and billiard rooms, perfect sanitation, and is lighted throughout by electricity.

BATH CHAIRS and attendance provided to convey invalids to or from the various bath houses. Tariff 12/6 per day inclusive.

W. J. LEES, Manager.

THE GEYSER HOTEL,

WHAKAREWAREWA, ROTORUA.

Situated in close proximity to the wonderful Geysers and Maori Settlement.

Visitors staying at the Geyser Hotel have continued opportunity of witnessing them as they can be seen plainly from the verandah of the Hotel, also of studying native life and customs.

The Hotel possesses its own private hot and cold curative mineral baths of which the most valued are the "Spout," "Oil," and "Carlsbad" Baths.

It has lately been greatly enlarged and re-furnished in a most comfortable manner. Electric light is established throughout the hotel and baths.

Coaches run regularly between Whakarewarewa, the Rotorua Sanatorium, and Government Gardens.

Tariff 10s. per day or £3 per week, inclusive. For a lengthened stay terms can be arranged

CHAS. E. NELSON, Proprietor.

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

LI.—"THE GOLD-HEADED CANE." MEDICAL RARIORA.

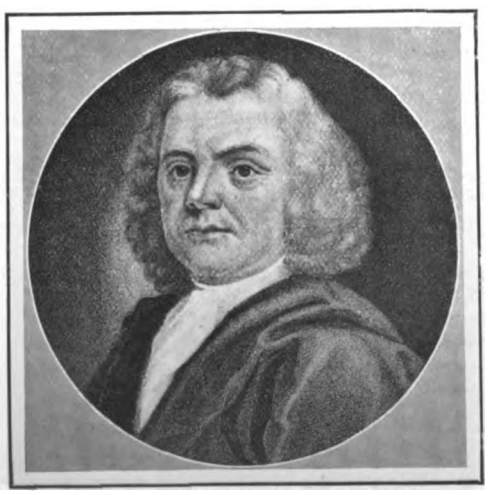
DR. WILLIAM HARVEY (1578-1657)
Discoverer of the circulation of the blood.

DR. THOMAS SYDENHAM (1624-1689)
The pioneer of scientific medicine.

DR. JOHN RADCLIFFE (1650-1714)
Founder of the Radcliffe Library and Infirmary.

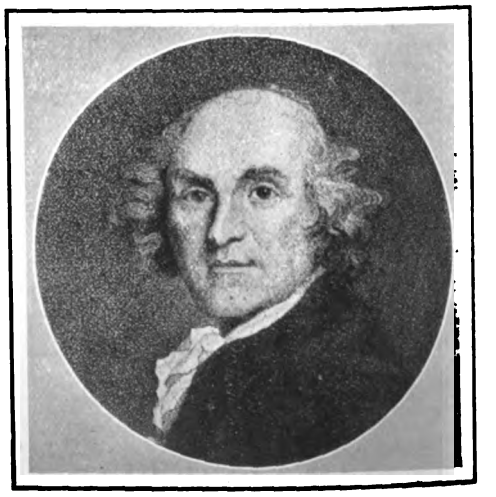
ALTHOUGH the modern doctor has apparently an intense dislike to advertising, either direct or indirect, and shuns with becoming modesty anything which a too-censorious world might construe into réclame, the iconography of the Faculty is exceedingly rich. By the cruel irony of Fate no members of the learned professions have been made the target of the lampooner and caricaturist more constantly and more audaciously than the retiring disciples of Æsculapius, and it would not be difficult to form a series of medical caricatures and satirical ballads as numerous as the three or four fine collections of medical portraits known to exist. Portraits of famous physicians of the past, dating from the days of Queen Elizabeth downwards, exist in great abundance, and a very favourite subject for extra-illustration is "The Gold-headed Cane," a clever collection of sketches, originally published by John Murray about 1825. A note in the writer's copy ascribes it to Dr. Macmichael, but in the edition of 1884 (Longmans) the author is announced to be William Munk, M.D., F.S.A., Fellow and Late Censor of the Royal College of Surgeons. The famous cane is supposed to have been made under the direction of Dr. Radcliffe, who located a vinaigrette in its head, which the cautious doctor held to his nose when he entered the sick chamber, so that its fumes might protect him from contagion. Radcliffe bequeathed the cane to Mead, from whom it passed to Askew, Pitcairn, and Baillie. The widow of the latter left it to the College of Physicians. The majority of the portraits now reproduced might be used as illustrations of this curious book. Amongst the best-known doctors of the earlier part of the nineteenth century were William Wadd and William Kitchiner. Both were wits and enthusiastic collectors. Wadd could draw nearly as well as Rowlandson or Cruickshank, and he illustrated an amusing little book which he christened "Comments on Corpulency." Kitchiner accumulated song-books, and wrote amusingly on a variety of subjects—cookery especially. Wadd made an enormous collection of portraits, and reproduced a good many in his "Mems, Maxims, and Memoirs of Surgeons and Medical Science" (1827). Doctors' bills might very well make a novel subject for collecting. "Quacks and Quackery" is already a favourite subject, and one might endeavour to make up a complete set of Court Physicians from the days of Mayerne downwards. One would be puzzled how to treat Lamb, whose conduct in the last illness of James I. gave rise to a very early medical caricature.

Of seventeenth and early eighteenth century books filled with nostrums and "infallible remedies" there are no end. Mr. John Timbs's "Doctors and Patients" (2 vols., 1873) would, at the present time, possibly afford a better basis for a collection of medical portraits and other items than "The Gold-headed Cane." In nearly every jest-book published between 1700 and 1825 the Faculty figures conspicuously, and medical anecdotes and bon mots are often more numerous than any other. Curiously enough, however, there is no "Doctors' Jest-book," although very ample materials for such a work exist. Abernethy was, in his day, a fortune to the jest-book compiler, and all sorts of smart sayings were fastened on him and two or three of his medical contemporaries. In collections of walking-sticks, the orthodox doctor's cane in vogue between 1700 and 1800 is sure to be found. "The Gold-headed Cane" gives much interesting information about fees. As their fortunate recipients have long since ceased to take them, they can be spoken of without the smallest suspicion of the forbidden "puff." Radcliffe made over £7,000 a year in the height of his fame; Mead (who attended Elizabeth Montagu and prescribed a blister on the back as a remedy for a swollen lip), £5,000 to £6,000; Baillie, £9,000 to £10,000; and Sir Henry Holford, £10,000 to £11,000. As to special fees, Radcliffe once received £1,600 for visiting Lord Albemarle at Namur, and so forth; but the fee of all fees was netted by Dimsdale (an ancestor of a recent Lord Mayor of London), who got £12,000 cash, a pension of £500 a year for life, and the dignity of a Baron of the Empire, for going to St. Petersburg in 1768 for the purpose of inoculating the Empress Catherine and her son. The portraits of illustrious foreign physicians are very nearly as numerous as those of their British confrères, and at least ten varieties exist of Dr. Tronchin, the great Swiss doctor, whose practice in Paris rivalled that of his English contemporary, the much-sought-after Dr. Mead, the second possessor of Radcliffe's "Gold headed Cane." B.



DR. HERMANN BOERHAAVE (1668-1738)
The father of modern medicine.

DR. EDWARD JENNER (1749-1823)
The discoverer of vaccination.



DR. JOHN HUNTER (1728-1793)
From whom the annual oration derives its name.

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

hold and offer for sale specimens of the

HIGHEST QUALITY

OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE

as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.

EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.

AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.

(Two hours from Paddington.)

Old Brass Stand and Lamp.

THE MISSES

H. & I. WOOLLAN

(Under Royal Patronage)

are showing a

UNIQUE

Collection of

Antiques.

Chippendale, Sheraton, and Hepplewhite Furniture. . . Worcester and Lowestoft Services. Lace, Glass, etc.

Showrooms: First Floor.

28, BROOK STREET, GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

BATH.

GEORGE GREGORY,

BOOKSELLER, Etc.

Write for Catalogues. An inspection of Mr. Gregory's shop should not be omitted by any visitor to Bath. Speciality—Americana. Old Bath. Colour-plate books. Autographs.

Address: 5, ARGYLE STREET.

CATALOGUES OF

ILLUSTRATED BOOKS, VIEWS, PORTRAITS, etc.,

GRATIS.

Books and Engravings Bought.

JAMES RIMELL & SON,

DEALERS IN OLD BOOKS AND ENGRAVINGS,

53, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON, W.

To Portrait & Print Collectors & Extra-Illustrators.

Kindly inspect stock or signify wants to

GEORGE SUCKLING, 13, Garrick Street

(next door to Garrick Club).

Mr. SUCKLING undertakes inlaying, arranging and binding of extra-illustrated books.

AUTOGRAPHS—HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS.

The oldest Dealers in Europe. For Catalogues, issued monthly, and all information write at once to

M. NOEL CHARAVAY,

3, RUE DE FURSTENBERG, PARIS,

where the "AMATEUR DES AUTOGRAPHES," a valuable Monthly Publication, may also be obtained.

JAMES TREGASKIS,

"The Caxton Head," 232, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.

RARE BOOKS,
MEDIÆVAL MANUSCRIPTS,
DOCUMENTS OF LITERARY & HISTORICAL INTEREST,
ORIGINAL DRAWINGS,
ENGRAVINGS,
AMERICANA,
CURIOSITIES,
ANTIQUITIES,
OBJECTS OF ART.

Catalogues Price Sixpence.

PORTRAITS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.

ENGLISH—FOREIGN—AMERICAN.

RARE ENGRAVINGS OF ALL SORTS.

WRITE FOR CATALOGUES OR VISIT THE SHOWROOMS OF

M. GODEFROY MAYER,

41, RUE BLANCHE, PARIS.

Bookbinding.—The Bedford Bindery.

OLD-ESTABLISHED FIRM.

VERY MODERATE PRICES. Special attention paid to extra-illustrated works.

SPECIMENS ON VIEW.

G. F. AYLING, 1A, CAMBRIDGE ST., EDGWARE ROAD, W.

MAGGS BROS.,

109, STRAND, W.C., LONDON, ENGLAND.

Dealers in RARE BOOKS AND FINE LIBRARY EDITIONS OF STANDARD AUTHORS, Voyages and Travels, Early Printed Books, 1st Editions of 17th, 18th, and 19th Century writers, Illustrated Works. Also Rare Portraits, Line, Stipple, Mezzotints, and Colour Engravings, and Autographs.

Recently issued—Illustrated Catalogues of Rare Books, Voyages and Travels, Engravings, Autographs. Price 6d. each.

THE RELICS OF NELSON AND HARDY.

Those interested in all that concerns the TRAFALGAR CENTENARY should not omit to visit the unique EXHIBITION to be held at the COUNTY MUSEUM, DORCHESTER, Capital of the County of Dorset, which gave England's navy Bingham, the Hoods, Digby, Domett and Hardy. Objects connected with Admiral Sir Thomas Hardy will be the chief feature of the Exhibition.

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

For Spaces in the Register apply to "THE EDITOR."

WANTED.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

Wanted, Autograph Letters of Theatrical People, especially Quin, George Colman the younger, and Miss Farren.—825, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

William Bodham Donne, any good autograph letters.—826, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Freemasonry, Constitutions of. 4to, 1784; in boards preferred. £1 10s. offered.—174, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Jest Books relating to Napoleonic Wars with coloured caricatures of Buonaparte. 10s. 6d. each offered.—175, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Any book or pamphlet relating to the art of colour pictures on glass, 1750-1805. 5s. offered.—178, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

The Vocal Magazine. Vol. II., 1778. 10s. offered.—176, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Boxiana. Vols. IV. and V. In perfect condition, with plates. 50s. offered.—177, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Early Doulton Pottery. Also any Pamphlets relating to the firm.—525, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

TAPESTRY, FURNITURE, Etc.

Carved Chippendale Bureau Bookcase—412, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Naval Prints published by any of the following:—C. Sheppard, 74, Little Britain; C. Taylor, Holborn (date 1791); J. Fairburn, 110 and 146, Minories (1800-1838); Tabart and Co, London; E. Rushton, Paradise Street, Liverpool; W. Belch, Bridge Street, Boro'; I. Houlston, Strand; R. Sly, 41, Union Street, Somers Town; J. Marshall, Aldermary Churchyard, London.—237, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good Impressions with good margins of engravings of old London, especially Covent Garden, the Temple, the Strand, Lincoln's Inn.—249, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Boxing. Small old Portraits Cribb and Molyneux.—255, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good specimen of Baxter prints with a short biography of Baxter.—257, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Picturesque views of Dorsetshire (coloured), 4to, published by Love, Weymouth, about 1800. £1 10s. offered.—258, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Rare colour portraits of Nelson.—260, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Bristol Theatre. Old playbills, 1855-57, with name of Marie Wilton (Lady Bancroft) in cast.—748, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Book Plates—Naval, Masonic, Bath, Dorset.—749, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Fan papers relating to Nelson or Buonaparte, 1795-1815. Liberal offer.—751, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

BOOKS.

Scrap Book containing almost complete collection of theatrical notices from 1850 to 1865. In good condition.—132A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Ten Battersea Boxes with portraits. What offers.—522, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Set of Champagne Glasses, beautifully cut.—523, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Small Library, theatrical, naval, topographical principally. Would disperse or sell en bloc.—747A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

TAPESTRY.

Venetian Chair, XVIIIth Century.—409A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

THE programme of the first day of the Brighton Meeting commenced with a race for standard 15-h.p. Darracqs, which produced eight entries. The first heat was won by Mr. Hugh Kennedy, Mr. Hall being second, 5 4-5-sec. behind, a remarkable illustration of the difficulty of securing close finishes even when the cars are apparently closely matched. A handicap for autocycles followed, which resulted in a win for W. Genn on a Minerva, who was one of the scratch men. Event three was for cars the list price of which does not exceed £200. Seventeen of the little machines were entered, the majority of which ran very well. Two 8-h.p. Rovers and an 8-h.p. Stanley steamer showed the best speed, Mr. Lewis's Rover finally beating the Stanley by 3-5sec. There were forty-three entries in the next class, for cars of which the chassis price is between £400 and £500, Darracqs, White Steamers, and 15-h.p. Orleans being largely represented. The Darracqs, however, proved too fast for their rivals, the final falling to Mr. Keele's car.

* * *

In the race for cars costing between £700 and £800, chassis price, the final lay between a 30-h.p. Ariel, driven by Miss Victoria Godwin, and a last year's 28-h.p. Daimler, owned by Mr. G. H. Warne. The latter car ran magnificently, considering its age, weight, and long wheelbase, and, to everyone's surprise, beat the Ariel by 30-yds. after a hard-fought struggle. Miss Godwin, however, had twisted a gear-shaft at one of the earlier starts, and was unable for some distance to get her top gear into mesh. The best race of the day was seen in the class for 30-h.p. Daimlers, which was next on the programme. In the final Mr. Anthony Hordern won from Mr. Gorham, the finish being so close that there was barely a length between the two cars.

* * *

There were several absentees in the class for racing cars, but some redoubtable machines gave what must have been to the majority of the onlookers their first sight of a racer in full flight. In the final the six-cylinder Napier, driven by Earp, had an easy win from Mr. Hutton's 120 h.p. Mercédès, although the later obtained a long lead at the start. Earp's finishes throughout the meeting were made at a phenomenal speed, and on several occasions he must have been travelling over 100 miles an hour. His best time on the first day for the standing mile was 45 1-5-sec., an average of 80 miles an hour.

* * *

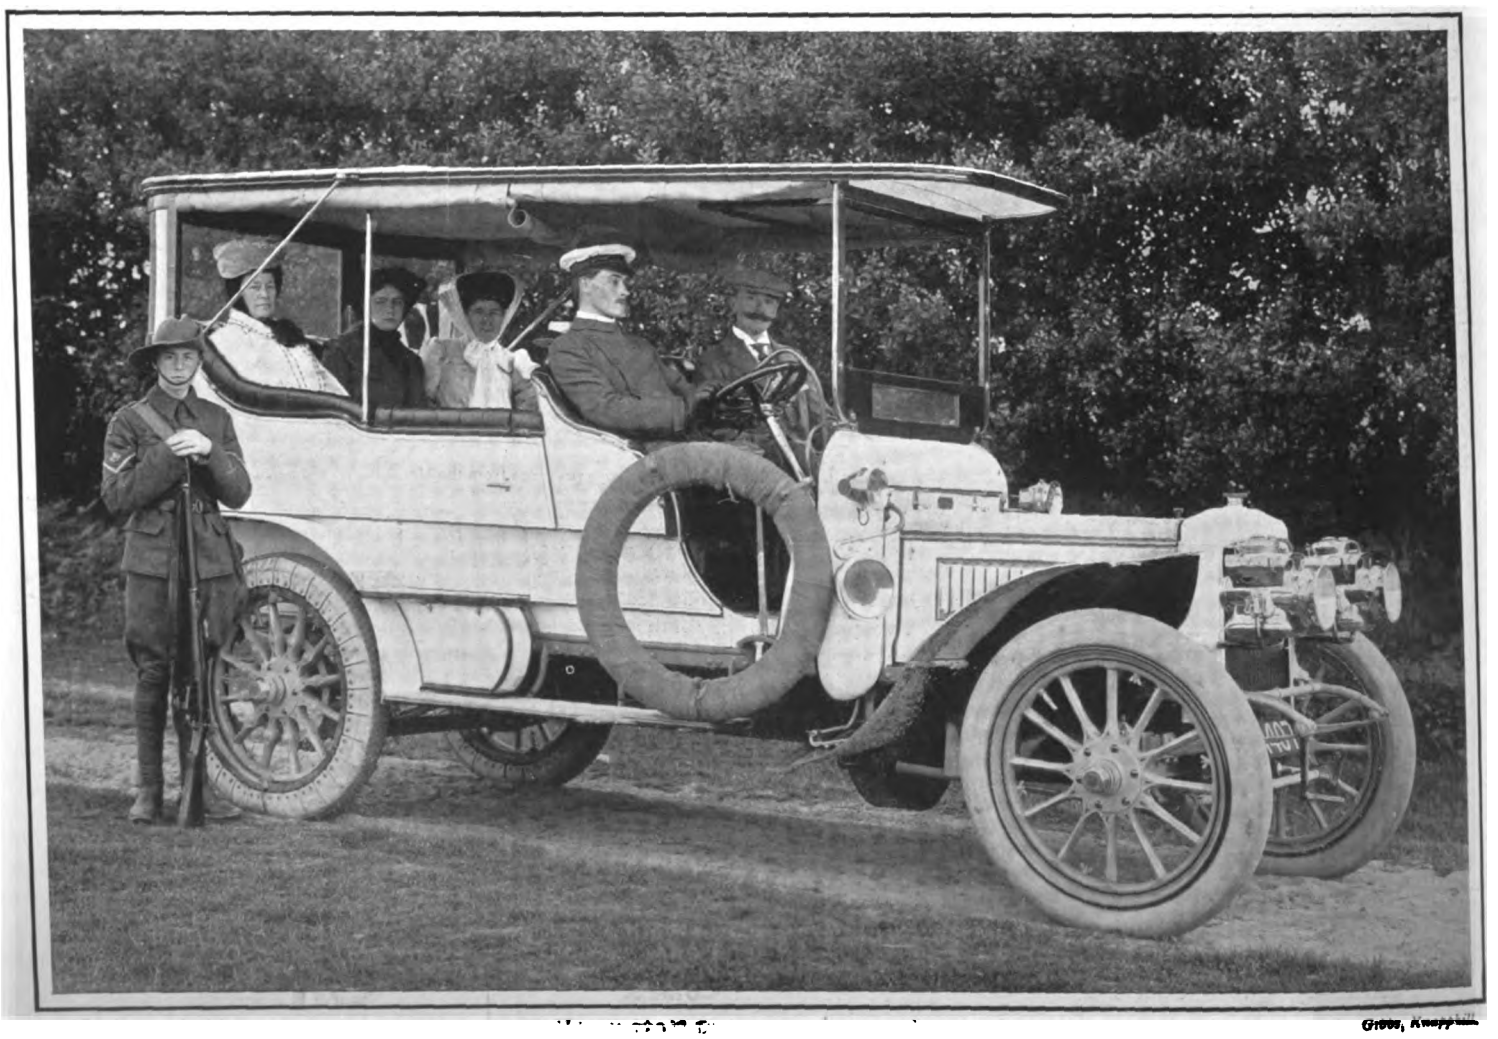
The feature of Thursday's racing was the flying kilomètre race for motor-cycles. This resulted in the lowering of several records. Cissac, on a 12-h.p. Peugeot, covered the kilomètre in 26-sec., and the standing mile in 53 1-5-sec., while Rignold, in a special run, did the flying mile in 46 1-5-sec. The racing cars were run in pairs over the standing mile, Mr. Hutton on his 120 Mercédès succeeding in beating Earp in the final by 1-5-sec., the time of the winner being 48 2-5-sec. The race for cars costing not more than £250 resulted in an easy win for an 8 – 10-h.p. Humber, which in the final passed the line 8 2-5-sec. ahead of the 14-h.p. Minerva, which was placed second. A 30-h.p. Darracq was first in the £500 to £600 class, and a 28-h.p. Daimler in the £600 to £700 class, both events attracting a very large entry. The £800 to £900 class was made up chiefly of 30-h.p. Daimlers, and in the first round there was a magnificent race between Mr. Percy Martin and Mr. Anthony Hordern, only a few feet separating the two cars at the finish. The final was won by Mr. Martin.

* * *

Friday's programme was the most interesting of the meeting. It commenced with a Ladies' Handicap, which was won by Mrs. Lloyd with her 30-h.p. Daimler, which received 18-sec. start from the scratch car, a 35-h.p. Daimler driven by Mrs. Manville. The big event for the racers was the Daily Mail Challenge Cup over a flying kilomètre, the winner being the driver who made the best average time for three runs. Earp carried off the trophy with an average of 23 1-5-sec., or 93 miles per hour, his fastest attempt being a level 23-sec. There were five competitors in the race for 35-h.p. Daimlers, which fell to Mrs. Manville, the Hon. J. Scott Montagu, M.P., being second. Mr. Clive Bowring easily won the event for 15-h.p. White Steam cars. A Handicap Sweepstake for touring cars followed. A 35-h.p. Daimler was scratch, and the limit car, a 7-h.p. Panhard, which received 121-sec. start. In the final the Panhard won by 15-sec. from a 28-h.p. Daimler, whose starting allowance was 22-sec. The class for 15-h.p. Orleans cars was won by Mr. Astell, with Mr Jenner second.

* * *

The chief event on Saturday was the Autocar Challenge Cup for the flying kilomètre. All the racers competed, Mr. Lee Guinness's 100-h.p. Darracq carrying off the trophy with an average for three runs of 25 1-15-sec., or 89·3 miles per hour. A Handicap Sweepstake for touring cars resulted in a dead heat between a 24-h.p. Germain and a 24-h.p. Beaufort.



MOTOR-CARS AT BISLEY.
Mr. James Percival and family in their 35-h.p. Daimler.

Digitized by Google

ARIEL

The ALL-BRITISH Touring Car. . . .

Winner of the GOLD MEDAL in the Scottish Trials, beating all comers in the class for 3 or 4 Cylinders.

THE ARIEL MOTOR CO., LIMITED,

127-130, Long Acre, London, W.C.

IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

can be given of the 15-h.p. Model, fitted with side entrance body.

£550.

Particulars on request.
Free trials arranged.

---

The GARDEN

The Leading Gardening Newspaper for Amateur and Professional Gardeners.

PRICE 1D. Weekly.

The Flower Garden. The Rose Garden.
The Kitchen Garden. The Fruit Garden.
New and Rare Plants, Orchids, etc., etc.

GARDENING FOR BEGINNERS AND ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS A SPECIAL FEATURE.

A Coloured Plate is Given with Alternate Issues.

Consult the Advertisement Pages for Every Requisite for the Garden.

To be had of all Newsagents and Bookstalls.

Specimen Copy post free from the Manager, The Garden, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.

---

UNDECIDED?—

Then let it be

WREN'S BOOT POLISHES

For JUST A SMEAR AND A RUB will give you such pleasing results—and from an economical point of view they are yet to be beaten!

Send 7½d. in stamps for samples (black and brown), and put them to the test!

WREN & CO., NORTHAMPTON.

---

---

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S

HIGH-CLASS CIGARETTES.

TEOFANI'S Cigarettes receive the Highest Awards at all International Exhibitions, and are Sold by Leading Purveyors throughout the WORLD.

TEOFANI & CO., LONDON.

---

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY OF SPORT.

Now Ready.

SHOOTING,

In Two Vols.

Price 25/- Nett. (12/6 Nett per vol.)

Published at the Offices of "Country Life," Limited, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by George Newnes, Limited, 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

---

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY OF SPORT.

FISHING.

IN TWO VOLUMES.

Price 25/- Net . (12/6 Nett per Vol.)

Published at the Offices of "Country Life," Limited, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by George Newnes, Ltd., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

---

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY OF SPORT.

NOW READY.

CRICKET.

Price 12/6 Nett.

Published at the Offices of "Country Life," Limited, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by George Newnes, Ltd., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

THE sales are happily nearing their end, and I wonder who will be more pleased, the tired shop assistants or the indefatigable bargain-hunters—this tropical weather does not seem to have deterred the latter in the slightest. The 31st of the month is the closing day of Messrs. Robinson and Cleaver's of Regent Street sale, and really everything is marvellously reduced, and whatever you purchase there has one very great advantage—it is always worth having, and those who are regular customers there know their sale is genuine. Just a few of the greatest bargains I cannot resist quoting; for instance, they are showing black chiffon taffetas robes of excellent wearing quality, nicely made and well shaped, all ready to join up the back seam, and bodice material included, for 52s. 6d. Those who go in for sports of various descriptions should not fail to procure some of their admirably-cut all-round skirts, for which bodice material can be obtained most reasonably. These are to be had in cream house flannel for 7s. 9d. Cheviot serges and Donegal tweeds and various other tweeds in several useful colourings from the low prices of 9s. 11d. to 15s. 6d. These are excellent value. Capital voile robes, in all shades, with bodice material, for 1 guinea.

In the millinery department they have almost sold out, but what is left of the stock is greatly reduced. They have some charming and most becoming motor-caps; one model in white alpaca, with a very practical arrangement that keeps the dust from the hair at the back by means of a new patented flap is sold at 4s. 11d. Then the mushroom shape, which is most becoming, in various shades, at 12s. 9d., and the Beaufort, also suitable for boating, tennis, and golfing, at 12s. 9d.

Gentlemen, do not neglect to purchase your sleeping suits, which are of exceptional value at this firm. In splendid quality Ceylon flannel you can have them at 8s. 11d., and in your favourite mercerised Oxford, which is such pleasant wear, at 9s. 11d., reduced from 17s. 6d.; in fact, I feel shy at going into detail, but all underwear is well worth buying at such low prices. If you have no room to keep the big supply you will be tempted to purchase, this firm supply the Imperial trunks at 20 per cent. below the usual prices.

Bassano.

A PASTEL BLUE HAT.
(Mme. Retta, 8, Old Cavendish Street, W.)

I have often wanted to show you some hats from Mme. Retta's of 8, Old Cavendish Street, Cavendish Square, but her charming models are always so much in request that she has never been able to spare me any to be photographed; but I have at last succeeded in obtaining the two here reproduced. The one is in pastel blue lace with velvet trimming, and a long drooping ostrich feather, the tip of which hangs so gracefully. A velvet bandeau gives it the requisite poise. The other is a soft grey fancy crinoline, with the cache-peigne of forget-me-nots and lilies of the valley. The charm of Mme. Retta's creations

Bassano

A GREY FANCY CRINOLINE HAT.
(Mme. Retta, 8, Old Cavendish Street, W.)

lies in the dainty workmanship and beauty of materials employed. Her style also is most apart, and you can always rely on her exquisite taste. Nothing is too much trouble for her, and the clever French milliners she has on her premises are ready to make up models for special costumes at the shortest notice. She is at the present moment in Paris, where she goes frequently, and herself selects all the newest and most attractive toques and hats money can buy. Her prices are really most moderate. I know of one or two big firms who purchase their French models at the same places and charge twice as much as this milliner does for hats no better in value.

Before the sales are all finished, do not forget to secure some of Messrs. Charles Lee and Son's of Wigmore Street Leewig petticoats and extra flounces. This is the original petticoat of which several imitations that are placed on the market are much inferior to that of Lee of Wigmore Street in every way and shape. Millinery is almost being given away the last few days of this month, as Mr. Lee cannot cope with the demands of his customers in his present premises, so he intends to extend the same and start with an entirely new stock for the autumn season.

Just one hint to those who are purchasing lengths of materials for early autumn—buy a little extra, for the long coat, which will be general, takes a little more than the coatee or bolero, so much patronised during this warm weather. The Directoire and Incroyable styles will be the most general. Length of line is the essential point for this elegant mode. Slenderness must be cultivated by those who wish to follow closely the reigning fashions, therefore all those who are a little inclined to more buxom proportions have plenty of time before the autumn starts to go into training, and I can tell them a very simple and satisfactory way of accomplishing their object without any fear of affecting their general health. This is the prescription: Never drink with your meals. A cup of tea or glass of claret, or any wines preferred, afterwards, and in a very short time the miracle will be effected.

R. D.

Digitized by Google

Preserve your Teeth!

BY USING FRAGRANT FLORILINE

It imparts a
FRAGRANCE TO THE BREATH
that is rare and delightful,
IT PREVENTS ALL TARTAR and COMPLETELY ARRESTS DECAY.

IS THE CHOICEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.

PRICE Per bottle 2/6 in case.

SOLD EVERYWHERE. THE ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd., Proprietors.
33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE TOOTH-POWDER.
For use with or without FLORILINE.
1/- per large Jar.

BIRKBECK BANK
ESTABLISHED 1851.
Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.
Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.
Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

SULPHOLINE SKIN LOTION.
Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches,
Entirely fade away.

FDB
FREEMANS' DARVEL BAY.
SEGARS
"A really good Borneo Segar of excellent aroma and flavour."
—Army and Navy Gazette.
3d. each, 5 for 1/-, 9/6 per Box of 50.
OF ALL PRINCIPAL DEALERS.
An interesting Illustrated Booklet on Borneo will be sent Post Free on application to J. R. FREEMAN and SON, London, N., or Grangetown, Cardiff.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
The charmingly situated Seaside Resort on the Dorsetshire Coast.
WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Unequalled for its Marine and Land Excursions. Golfing and Fishing.
WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Beautifully Illustrated Guides sent free of charge by the Town Clerk, on receipt of cost of postage, 3d.

TO H.M. THE KING.

THE POPULAR
SCOTCH
IS
"BLACK&WHITE"
WHISKY.

TO H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.

Sole Proprietors: JAMES BUCHANAN & Co, LTD.,
26, Holborn, London, E.C.

A Scientific Method of Growing Hair

The Evans Vacuum Cap provides the scientific means of applying to the scalp the common sense principles of physical culture. Baldness and falling hair are caused by the lack of proper nourishment of the hair roots. This lack of nourishment is due to the absence of blood in the scalp—an abnormal condition. It is the blood which feeds the hair roots, as well as every other part of the body. If you want the hair to grow on the scalp the blood must be made to circulate there. It is exercise which makes the blood circulate. Lack of exercise makes it stagnant. The Vacuum method provides the exercise which makes the blood circulate in the scalp. It gently draws the rich blood to the scalp and feeds the shrunken hair roots. This causes the hair to grow.

Test It Without Expense

You can tell whether it is possible to cultivate a growth of hair on your head by ten minutes' use of the Evans Vacuum Cap. We will send you the Cap with which to make the experiment without any expense to you.

If the Evans Vacuum Cap gives the scalp a healthy glow this denotes that the normal condition of the scalp can be restored. A three or four minutes' use of the Cap each morning and evening thereafter will produce a natural growth of hair. If, however, the scalp remains white and lifeless after applying the vacuum, there is no use in trying further—the hair will not grow.

The Bank Guarantee

We will send you, by prepaid express, an Evans Vacuum Cap, and will allow you ample time to prove its virtue. All we ask of you is to deposit the price of the Cap in the Jefferson Bank of St. Louis, where it will remain during the trial period, subject to your own order. If you do not cultivate a sufficient growth of hair to convince you that the method is effective, simply notify the bank and they will return your deposit in full.

A sixteen-page illustrated book will be sent you on request, postage prepaid in full.

Evans Vacuum Cap Co., 923, Fullerton Bldg., St. Louis, U.S.A.

"MY OWN"
THE PERFECT TOBACCO

A Superb Mixture of Matchless Tobacco.
Sold in 2oz., ¼-lb., ½-lb., and 1-lb. Tins. 6/8 per lb. Post Free.
'Mexdolla' Mexican Cigars
Composed of the Choicest Mexican Leaf raised upon Virgin Soil from Picked Leaves of the young Tobacco Plant.
Price 25/- per 100, post free.
Shipped direct from Vera Cruz by
FREDK. WRIGHT,
Cigar Importer, Cheltenham: 112, High St.; Gloucester: The Cross; and Bath: 17, Northgate.

THE CLOTH FOR GOLF SUITS.
"Hydea"
is the best English cloth—made of the best English wool—grown on the HYDE Farm, Gloucestershire. It is delightfully soft and elastic—absolutely the best for sportsmen—most durable for out-o'-doors—most handsome for town suits—long thread—refined finish.
THE KING WEARS IT,
and pays no more than you—because there's only one quality at one price. "HYDEA" is stamped on every two yards of the selvedge—that's how you may know it—that, and its excellent surface! Send for FREE Booklet:—
APPERLY, CURTIS & Co., Ltd.,
Dudbridge Mills, Stroud, West of England.

Digitized by Google

THE KING'S MENU.

WHEN economy has to be considered, there is no question as to the relative cheapness of preparing the food for picnics and river parties at home, instead of turning the whole thing over to a purveyor. The dishes in the menu given—which is sufficient for from twenty to thirty people, while for a smaller number the capons, the ham, and the foie gras moulds could be omitted—are well within the capacity of a good plain cook. Of course for a smart picnic or race luncheon the menu differs little from a ball supper, except that neither consommé nor hot entrées are given. But for these to-day's menu is not intended.

A PICNIC LUNCHEON.

COLD SALMON—CUCUMBER—RAVIGOTTE SAUCE.
GALANTINE OF TURKEY.
BONED AND STUFFED CAPONS.
BRAISED HAM.
COLD QUARTER OF LAMB AND CHERRY SALAD.
TERRINE OF PIGEONS AND QUAILS.
LITTLE MOULDS OF FOIE GRAS IN ASPIC.
BOUCHEES OF SWEETBREAD.
STUFFED ROLLS.
FRUIT MACEDOINE.
CREAM PANACHEE.
JELLY A LA RUSSE.
ASSORTED PASTRY. ASSORTED CAKES.
CHEESE BISCUITS.
CREAM CHEESE.
FRUIT.

LITTLE MOULDS OF FOIE GRAS IN ASPIC.

If preferred, the moulds for these can be lined and filled up with either aspic cream or good meat jelly. This last is easily made by dissolving fine leaf gelatine in the proportion of a full ounce to every three and a-half gills of wine-clear consommé. It is then used to line the mould just as it is setting. When it is firm put a cube of foie gras truffé in each, fill up with the just liquid meat jelly or aspic, and set aside, preferably on ice, till firm. Pack as they are, only unmoulding when wanted to serve. For the aspic cream the proportions are one part of cream to two of just liquid aspic, say two tablespoonfuls of cream to a gill of jelly, or a gill of cream to half a pint of aspic, and so on in these proportions.

CREAM PANACHEE.

For this any jelly and stiffened custard or fruit bavaroise mixture to taste can be used, the method being always to line the mould with the jelly selected and then fill it, when this casing is firm, with alternate layers of the jelly and the stiffened custard, or cream, or bavaroise mixture. If one of the jelly packets now obtainable so cheaply be used, only taking rather less water than the quantity given in the directions, and this made up with wine, spirit, or liqueur to taste, most excellent results are obtainable with very little trouble. The expense can be further kept down by using a cornflour custard made with a tablespoonful of cornflour and the yolks of one or two eggs to each pint of milk, with sugar and almond or other flavouring essence to taste, and stiffened with a good ounce of fine leaf gelatine. The result is a pretty and most attractive sweet at a very small cost.

FRUIT MACEDOINE.

This can be either served in the usual way, or it can be served à la gelée. In this last case have ready some nice lemon or liqueur flavoured jelly, rather stiff, and just liquid, stir in the fruit — the more kinds the better, of course, and if used fresh (as it can be for this) previously marinaded in syrup flavoured with lemon juice or liqueur—and mould. Set aside on ice till perfectly firm before packing, and do not, of course, unmould till at its destination. This macedoine de fruits à la gelée is often served turned out into a large bowl piled up roughly and garnished with whipped cream.

JELLY A LA RUSSE.

For this divide some good clear lemon jelly into three parts; flavour one with a glass of curaçoa and colour it with a drop or two of liquid yellow; flavour another with cherry brandy and colour it with a little carmine, and leave the third lot plain. Two must be kept just tepid while one is whipped till frothy and nearly set, when it is moulded, then another portion is whipped and moulded, and then the third, care being taken that each layer is perfectly firm before the next is added, so that they may each be sharply defined.

"GLEBE" CANE SUGARS AND GOLDEN SYRUP.

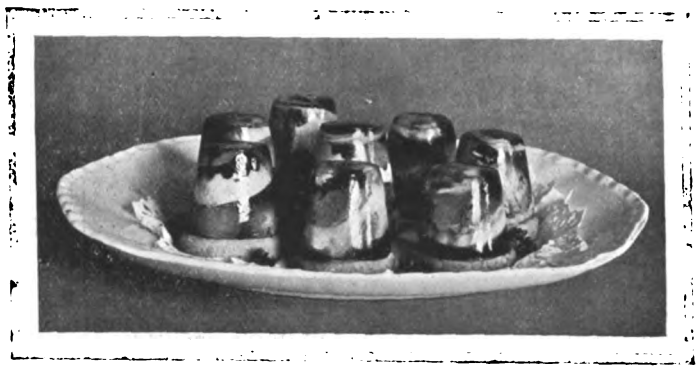
Now that the preserving season is in full swing, the "Glebe" brand of absolutely pure cane sugars deserve to be widely known, for it cannot be too strongly insisted on that to make jams, store jellies and syrups, and bottle fruits with anything but really pure cane sugar is simply a waste of time and material, for the chances are ten to one that they will not keep. Inferior sugar in this case is no economy, for to the loss of its price must be added that of the fruit, fuel, and labour. The wonder is that housekeepers still abound who persist in this "penny wise and pound foolish" policy in this matter, and ask for information as to chemicals for use in preserving, to counteract the bad effects of the cheap beet sugar they will use. The inevitable injury to health, especially in the case of children, and consequent doctor's bills, never seem to weigh with them if only they can get beet sugar a farthing a pound or so less.

Another regrettable fact in connection with the present very general use of beet sugar in England, is that many of the British sugar refineries use foreign-grown beet instead of supporting British or Colonial sugar-cane growers. One is glad, therefore, to know that the Glebe brand sugars and syrup are refined entirely from sugar-cane grown in British Colonies or Dependencies, and their freedom from the slightest trace of adulteration can be absolutely relied upon.

The castor sugar is the finest made, and I have never seen any so good for table use, especially with dessert fruits, such as strawberries, melons, etc. Like the granulated, it is packed by machinery at the Glebe Company's Refinery in attractive white cotton bags of various sizes, from two pounds net weight and upwards, while the loaf sugar—cut in fine regular cubes—is packed in cardboard boxes, also of various sizes and weights, while the golden syrup is in tins weighing from one pound up to fourteen pounds.



LITTLE MOULDS OF FOIE GRAS IN ASPIC.
(Specially prepared and photographed for this paper.)

As I pointed out in these columns a week or two ago, this "packet grocery" system is very attractive to the housewife of dainty tastes, for it entirely does away with the handling of the sugar at the retailer's, such as takes place when sugar of no particular refinery's brand is bought in paper packages.

This, to my mind, is not the least of the reasons for insisting on one's grocer or stores always in future supplying the Glebe brand of sugars, every bag or packet of which bears this trade mark stamped on it in red letters. Indeed, if we did but see the dirty, perspiring human hands too frequently used for filling the ordinary paper packages of sugar, especially in the small seaside and country stores, on which so many holiday-makers during the next few weeks will depend for their supplies, I doubt if any of us would ever use any other sugar again!

When there is any difficulty in obtaining it, write to the Glebe Sugar Refining Company, St. George's House, Eastcheap, E.C., and ask the manager to arrange for your local purveyor to stock it for you. The leading London stores, including Harrod's, the Army and Navy, and Messrs. J. Barker and Co., already stock it.

In some cases, owing to the cost of inland transit in England, its cost may be just a trifle higher than that of beet sugar, but it is well worth it in every way, though the great value of pure cane sugar as a muscular food, and its power of increasing the resistance to fatigue during prolonged exertion, do not seem to be generally known in England. In Germany the Emperor's action in largely increasing the rations of cane sugar in his Army for this special reason, has, of course, drawn attention to its great value as a muscle food. This explains children's craving for sugar, and it is most important that while their muscles are growing and developing, and, therefore, need more of it than do those which have reached maturity, parents and guardians should see that it is cane sugar they are given. Dietetic specialists say, too, that its free use is one of the best preventatives to be found for the maladies contingent on worms, from which so many children suffer.

Then, again, there is the question of patriotism, most practically shown at the present time by supporting the industries and firms of our own Empire, instead of purchasing foreign grown or made goods. In this connection it is good news that already by those in authority at an important depôt of one branch of the Services the Glebe brand of sugars and syrup are now being used exclusively.

It is much to be wished that regimental messes and canteens and the Naval Stores authorities would give proof of a practical Imperial spirit in such matters by confining their patronage to firms who, like the Glebe Refining Company, make a point of getting their raw material from our fellow-subjects overseas, instead of from foreign competitors, whose Government take good care tariff walls prevent their manufacturers following this latter bad example — should they desire to do so.

ANSWER TO CORRESPONDENT.

FRUIT PAINS (The Country Girl).—These are amongst the simplest and nicest of summer sweets. Rub sufficient of the crushed fruit to produce a pint of pulp through a hair sieve, sweeten to taste with castor sugar, add a squeeze of lemon juice, and half to three-quarters of an ounce of leaf gelatine first dissolved in a little warm water. Mould and set on ice if possible. Turn out, and garnish with whipped cream, or, if a border mould is used, fill the centre with the cream mixed with sliced fruit—whatever has been used for the pain, of course—first marinaded in a little liqueur. You can also for fruit pains make the fruit into a fool, then mix in the dissolved gelatine, and mould, etc., as before.

SYBARITE.

Digitized by Google

Vegetables Up-to-Date.

Vegetables

play a prominent part in our daily dietary, and are never more appetising or enjoyable than when served with a Sauce made with

Brown & Polson's "PATENT" Corn Flour

as the basis. Many people make vegetable sauces from ordinary wheat flour, but good Corn Flour makes a smoother and more delicately flavoured sauce. Brown & Polson's "Patent" Corn Flour is the best that can be made. See that your cook uses it always for thickening all kinds of sauces.

Brown & Polson publish a Recipe Book entitled "Fish and Vegetable Sauces." A copy will be posted to any lady sending 1d. stamp to Brown & Polson, Paisley. It is well worth the trouble of writing for.

MEDICAL men all over the country are rapidly becoming acquainted with the medicinal qualities of the high-class dry Cyders of Whimple, with the result that they are not only using these Cyders personally, but are constantly prescribing them in a variety of cases subject to dietic treatment.

It is a proved fact that regular consumers of Cyder are exempt from many distressing maladies, such as stone and gravel. Cyder is also an effective remedy for gout and rheumatism.

Not only the phosphorus, but the acids of the apple are of singular use for persons of sedentary habits, whose livers are apt to be slow of action. These acids aid the liver in its work of eliminating from the body the noxious matter which makes the brain heavy and dull, and causes rheumatism and other kindred ailments.

The Uses of Cyder:

(a) as a health giver.

(b) as a delicious beverage.

If you would drink Devonshire's Delicious Drink at its very best—if you would realise to the full what a really enjoyable drink Cyder is—you should procure only that brand which comes from the presses of Messrs. Whiteway & Co.

Whiteway's Cyders are made only of the pure juice from the finest English apples, and are absolutely free from chemical preservatives.

Write for Booklet, Price List, etc., to WHITEWAY, WHIMPLE, DEVON; or 22 and 23, ALBERT EMBANKMENT, LONDON, S.W.

Henry Whiteway & Co., Ltd.

РУБЛЬ КОФЕ.

(ROUBLE COFFEE.)

THE COFFEE OF THE EPICURE.

BERRIES, FRESH ROASTED,

2/= PER LB.

WE PAY THE CARRIAGE.

It may not sound cheap, but nothing REALLY COOD ever is cheap.

Follow our directions, and a revelation awaits you of what REALLY GOOD COFFEE REALLY IS.

METATA AGENTS, 17, DEVONSHIRE SQUARE, LONDON, E.C.

ECONOMY HEALTH PURITY

NO BEETROOT USED.

"GLEBE"

REFINED GENUINE

CANE SUGAR

AND

CANE GOLDEN SYRUP

GLEBE SUGAR REFINING CO., Greenock, Glasgow, and St. George's House, Eastcheap, London.

"Tears never yet wound up a clock or worked a steam ingin'."

—PICKWICK PAPERS.

FRY'S PURE CONCENTRATED COCOA gives the feeling of "briskness," without which work or recreation may become irksome.

"My Ideal of Perfection."

—DR. ANDREW WILSON, F.R.S.E., &c.

THE WHITE WINES OF ENGLAND.

BULMER'S Famous Herefordshire CIDERS and PERRY.

For a beautifully illustrated booklet on Cider, price list, and special booklet for invalids, apply

H. P. BULMER and CO., HEREFORD.

BUTLER'S "KEEN" RAZOR

HOLLOW GROUND.
SPECIAL STEEL.
HAND FORGED.

"I know that Razor, it comes from Sheffield."

HIGHEST AWARDS.
GUARANTEED PERFECT, AND BRITISH MADE THROUCHOUT.

"Keen as this razor's edge invisible." (Love's Labour Lost.)

Black Handles ... ... each 3/- & 5/- | Ivory Handles ... ... each 5/- & 7/6
*Per pair, in best Case, 15/-; 7-day set, 50/- | *Per pair in Russia Case, 21/-; 7-day set, 70/-
"CAVENDISH" CARVERS (Regd. brand) keep "an edge that won't come off."
Fine Ivory, 20/-; Imitation ditto or Stag, 10/6 per pair. Post Free of all Dealers.
Sole Makers, GEORGE BUTLER & CO., Trinity Works, SHEFFIELD.

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

LONDON'S latest Society fashion of pigskin-covered walking-sticks and umbrella and parasol handles will doubtless soon be "the correct thing" in Tokio. The Prince and Princess Arisugawa were delighted with them when their Imperial Highnesses, during their recent stay in London, honoured Messrs. Brigg of St. James's Street with a visit, and gold-mounted leather was greatly in evidence in their large purchases made from this famous firm of manufacturers.

THE new booklets published for the Town Councils of Hastings, Harwich, Falmouth, and Lowestoft, by the Health Resorts Development Association, will be sent free if a post-card request is sent to the Town Clerks.

WITH its cool green and white interior and its dainty equipments, the Cecil Café, which is the newest offshoot of the Hotel Cecil, makes a very pleasant halting-place in the Strand. Close to all the West End theatres, and having the advantages to be derived from the excellent hotel cuisine, the Cecil Café has special attractions for the neighbourhood of the Strand.

MESSRS. RAPHAEL TUCK'S third post-card competition, in which prizes to the value of £3,000 will be distributed, closes on September 25, and as only 300 Tuck's post-cards are necessary to compete, there is still ample time for intending competitors to enter.

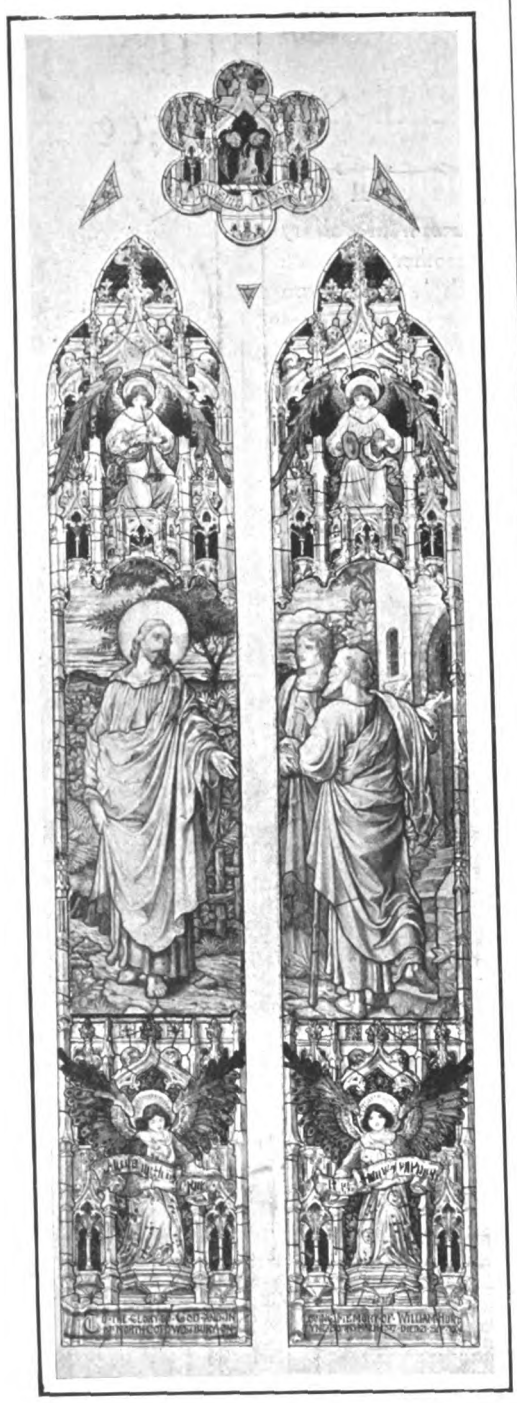
THE CHECKOGRAM is a marvellously ingenious instrument, which records, both mechanically and electrically, the number of persons passing through a turnstile, and exhibits its totals simultaneously on its own dial and on an indicator erected in any office or room which may be selected. No mere carelessness can effect the inviolacy of its records; no dishonest tampering can influence the inflexibility of its tally. It registers the passer-in; it checks the passer-out. It ensures arbitrary accuracy; it saves official time. And, whether placed at the entrance to the theatre or the music-hall, the race-course or the running-grounds, the cricket-field or the agricultural show, it equally and absolutely bars that ever-present drain upon the showman's revenue—the "deadhead."

A PRESS view of a combined new wheel and tyre, on entirely novel lines, was given at the offices of its promoters, 5, Maddox Street, Regent Street, last week. It would appear that at last we are to have in this invention, if it comes up to all its inventors claim for it, just the tyre containing the advantages the public are looking for. To be brief, the following are some of the advantages claimed for the invention: The wheel and tyre are lighter and stronger than those in ordinary use, and the tyre, although pneumatic and resilient, has no inner tube, and is easily taken off and replaced; punctures can never affect the air chamber; there is freedom from skidding, absence of creeping, and the minimum of dust-raising.

IN the tourist and excursion programme of the London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway Company will be found announced cheap week-end tickets to be issued on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday to all places on the South Coast, from Hastings to Portsmouth inclusive, and to all places in the Isle of Wight, also to Dieppe, the Parisian's favourite seaside resort on the Normandy coast, with its handsome casino, new marine promenade, fine golf links, and good roads for cycling. In connection with the Paris services, viâ the Newhaven, Dieppe, and Rouen Royal Mail route, tickets are issued for tours in France (including Normandy and Brittany, the Loire Valley, and Pyrenees), Switzerland, Italy, Austria, Germany, the Tyrol, Black Forest, Algeria, Tunis, etc.

WHEN a woman takes to aiding Nature in regard to her face, she needs to be very careful with whom she deals. The face, more than any part of the anatomy, resents careless or improper treatment, and there have been those who, trying to beautify, have only succeeded in ruining their countenances for all time. At her handsome apartments in New Bond Street, Mrs. Adair has spared no pains to discover the utmost possibilities of science for the benefit of the fair sex, and the results of her treatment are seen in the clear skins, bright eyes, and upright carriage of those who put themselves in her charge. In Paris, London, New York, and Birmingham Mrs. Adair has now opened branches, and her success in the line she marked out for herself has been remarkable.

AT one of the Conference meetings in Bristol last week a stained-glass memorial window to the late Mr. William Hunt, a prominent Methodist, was unveiled. The window was



THE HUNT WINDOW.
Stained-glass window in Bristol unveiled last week designed and executed by Messrs. Joseph Bell and Son of Bristol.

THE gardens of the Royal Botanic Society looked their best on Thursday last, when the Playgoers' Club held their annual evening fête, which was a brilliant one. The band of the Royal Horse Guards (Blue) discoursed music on the lawn and in the conservatory, and in one of the byeways of the gardens the Drolls, headed by Herbert Fordwych of Aldwych, gave excerpts from what they are pleased to call their "not unamusing repertoire." The fête lasted until the small hours, and Mr. Hannaford Bennett and the committee are to be congratulated on a most enjoyable evening.

Amusements.

APOLLO THEATRE.
HENRY LOWENFELD, Sole Proprietor.
TOM B. DAVIS, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
Every Evening at 8.15.
The Comic Opera, in Three Acts,
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Wednesday at 2.

AVENUE THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. FRANK CURZON.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.45
A MESSAGE FROM MARS.
By Richard Ganthony, in which
Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY will appear.
Preceded at 8.15 by 327 FINSBURY.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 3

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. FRANK CURZON.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
To-night at 8.15,
LADY MADCAP.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.15.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Lessee and Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
To-night at 8.45.
MR. HOPKINSON.
An original farce in three acts by R. C. Carton.
Preceded at 8.15 by Mr. Nelson Jackson.
Matinee every Saturday at 3.

DALY'S THEATRE.
Produced by Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.15.
Matinee Every Saturday at 2.30.
THE LITTLE MICHUS.
By A. Vanloo and G. Duval. Music by Andre Messager.
Adapted for the English stage by Henry Hamilton.
Lyrics by Percy Greenbank.
Box Office 10 to 10.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.
Managers: A. & S. GATTI & CHARLES FROHMAN.
Every Evening at 8.15,
THE CATCH OF THE SEASON,
By Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton.
The Vaudeville Theatre Company.
Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

NEW THEATRE.
Proprietor: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.30,
CHARLES FROHMAN presents
LEAH KLESCHNA.
A Play in Five Acts, by C. M. S. McLellan.
Matinee Every Wednesday at 2.30.
Doors open at 8. Tel. 2473 and 2480 Gerrard.

GAIETY THEATRE.
Manager: Mr. GEO. EDWARDES.
To-night and Every Evening at 8; doors open at 7.40.
A New Musical Play, entitled:
THE SPRING CHICKEN.
Box Office open from 10 to 10.

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE.
Sole Lessee and Manager: CHARLES FROHMAN.
To-night at 9.
Charles Frohman presents J. M. Barrie's New Play,
ALICE SIT-BY-THE-FIRE.
At 8.25 sharp, PANTALOON, by J. M. Barrie.
Matinee Every Saturday at 2.25 sharp.

NAVAL, SHIPPING, AND FISHERIES EXHIBITION, EARL'S COURT.
11 a.m. to 11 p.m. Admission 1s.
Naval Construction, Armaments, Shipping & Fisheries.
NELSON'S CENTENARY RELICS.
FISHING VILLAGE. Working Exhibits. Model of "Victory."
GRAND NAVAL AND MILITARY CONCERTS.
Go on board the full-size Cruiser.
Real Batteries of 4.7 Guns, Hotchkiss and Maxims. The Cruiser is manned by a crew of 150 Handy-men.
PANORAMA OF THE BATTLE OF TRAFALGAR
West's "Our Navy." Maxim's Captive Flying Machine. Fairy Grotto. Indian Canoes. Burton's Great Red Indian Village—Chiefs, Squaws, and Papooses. Voyage in a Submarine. Vanderdecken's Haunted Cabin. Famous Sea Fights. Miss de Rohan's Musical and Dramatic Sketches. Tillikum Canoe.

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Mr. J. Compton Rickett, M.P. | 569 |
| The March of Events | 570 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 576 |
| On the Links | 578 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 583 |
| The Parisians of Paris—Belleville Weddings | 584 |
| Parisian Players | 585 |
| The Member for the Isle of Wight | 586 |
| The Cowes Week | 587 |
| Yachting at Cowes | 588 |
| The Traveller—In the Garden of England | 592 |
| Plays and Players | 594, 595 |
| French Fleets in English Waters. | 596 |
| Cricket | 597 |
| The Racing Season | 598 |
| The Services—The Story of the Threatened Naval Memorial | vii. |
| Literary Notes | viii. |
| Leaves from a Collector's Note-book—LII.—The Pioneers of "Potting" at Worcester. John Wall, M.D.—His Associates and Historian | x. |
| Motoring Notes | xii. |
| Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xiv. |
| The King's Menu | xviii. |
| Here, There, and Everywhere | xx. |

TO LIBRARIES, CLUBS, HOTELS, Etc.

A Reading Case for THE KING can be had post free on application to the Publishers, George Newnes, Limited, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S

HIGH-CLASS

CIGARETTES.

TEOFANI'S Cigarettes receive the Highest Awards at all International Exhibitions, and are Sold by Leading Purveyors throughout the WORLD.

TEOFANI & CO., LONDON.

HANSEN'S

UNKET

TABLETS.

THIS IS JUNKET TIME.

Hansen's Junket Tablets make the best Junket. Each tablet will make a quart of delicious nourishing junket with the least amount of trouble. Hansen's Junket Tablets are double the value of the next best, uniform in quality, and more reliable.

Sold by all Grocers, Chemists, etc., in Glass Tubes, containing 24 Tablets, each sufficient to make a quart of Junket. Sample Tube and Book of over 30 Recipes, 6d. post free from Hansen's Depôt 77, St. Thomas's Street, London, S.E.

HOTELS.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

TORQUAY (Population 33,625).—PREMIER HEALTH RESORT. Unrivalled climate. Warm in winter. Sunshine-land. Charming drives and sheltered walks. 120 acres of public gardens. Piers.

TORQUAY. Irreproachable water supply and perfect sanitation. Theatre, concerts, and other musical attractions. Medicated baths of all kinds. Express trains from all parts.

For Illustrated Descriptive Books of Torquay, apply FREDK. S. HEX, Town Clerk.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524.
Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. ,, 858.
Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. ,, 641. Kensington.

Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date. First-class cuisine.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence.

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hôte or à la Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Closes to Parades. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address: "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne.

FOREIGN HOTELS.

BIARRITZ.

GRAND HOTEL.—Winter Season.—First-class establishment. Splendid situation, facing the sea. Patronised by the elité; rendezvous of English Society. Every comfort; excellent attendance and cooking.—MONTENAT, Manager.

AXENSTEIN (Lake Lucerne; 2,350ft. above sea level; electric railway Brunnen-Axenstein).—First-class Hotel. World-renowned climatic health resort; patronised by English society. "Axenstein is the loveliest spot I met with on my journey through Switzerland."—QUEEN VICTORIA.

TENERIFFE

HAS THE FINEST WINTER CLIMATE IN THE WORLD.

THE First-class HOTELS there are
the QUISISANA at Santa Cruz,
the AGUERE and CONTINENTAL at La Laguna, and
the MARTIANEZ (late Grand) at Port Orotava.
All under the Management of C. H. TRENKEL. Prospectus, etc., on application.

SHIPPING.

MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

HEREFORD.

THE CENTRE OF THE LOVELY WYE VALLEY

An Ideal Holiday Resort.
Splendid Scenery, Boating, Motoring, and Fishing.
Tourist Tickets from all parts.

All Information on application to the TOWN CLERK.

THE LEAS HOTEL, Folkestone.

Under New Proprietorship.

300ft. above the sea. Remodelled and furnished by Waring's.

Delightfully situated, commanding extensive views of sea, with ornamental private grounds. Excellent Cuisine, Lawn Tennis, Passenger Lift, Electric Light throughout.

Illustrated Tariff on application to T. H. VINNICOMBE.

ROYAL DUBLIN SOCIETY GREAT IRISH HORSE SHOW, 1905,

AUGUST 22nd, 23rd, 24th, and 25th.

The Largest Show of Hunters in the World. Trotting, Driving, and Jumping Competitions. Programme on Application.

(By order) RICHARD J. MOSS, Registrar.

Patronized by H.M. The King.

DOVERCOURT BAY, ESSEX,

HOTEL ALEXANDRA.

The Finest Health and Pleasure Resort on the East Coast. Delightful Climate. Bracing Air. The Hotel, which has recently been visited by H.M. KING, is luxuriously Furnished. Charming Situation. Facing the Sea. Electric Light. Excellent Cuisine. Tennis, Croquet. Motor Garage and Pit. 1 hour 40 minutes express from London.

For Illustrated Tariff, apply A. H. THIEM, Proprietor.

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY OF SPORT.

Now Ready.

SHOOTING,

In Two Vols.

Price 25/- Nett. (12/6 Nett per vol.)

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, LIMITED, 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

The whole Treatment worth 20/- for 3/-, Ointment, Tablets, and Soap.

A WONDERFUL REMEDY FOR YOU.

YOU MUST USE ECZOLINE REMEDIES FOR CURING ECZEMA,

RASHES, SPOTS, BAD LEGS, AND ANY SKIN DISEASE.

Because they are the finest and best remedies it is possible to obtain; THEN GET THEM.

Because they may be used on the tender skin of a baby; therefore they cannot hurt yours.

Because they have cured when the best of Hospitals and Specialists have owned defeat; they will do so for you.

Because they stop all irritation at once; that alone is worth the trial.

Because they have cured cases of long standing up to 20 years; they will cure you.

Because Doctors prescribe them and use them for their patients; if these were not genuine they would NOT do so.

Then send 3/- to-day to any Chemist, or

HUNTER, REGENT ST., SWINDON, WILTS, ENG.

MENTION THIS PAPER.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

THE COLONEL TAKES THE 19TH (W/HOLE IN ONE!

Head Office:
11,
SO. EXCHANGE PLACE,
GLASGOW.

J. H. ROGER
PROPR.

LESSEE OF

H.M. CUSTOMS
(No. 15) BOND,
JAMES WATT STREET,
GLASGOW.

Special Quotations to Golf Clubs.

"COLONEL BOGEY" WHISKY.

GUARANTEED 7 YEARS OLD.

42/- PER DOZEN. CARRIAGE PAID.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS of every description, including TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT. MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.

Handsome Public Rooms, including 2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.

Terms from MANAGER.

CLEVEDON (Somerset).

SEASIDE HYDRO HOTEL.

Holiday, Health, and Pleasure Resort. Near Golf Links and Pier. Good centre for excursions by road, rail, or sea. Resident Physician. Fine Baths. Liberal Table.

SECRETARY, Hydro, Clevedon, Somerset.

LELANT, ST. IVES BAY, CORNWALL (close to golf links and station).—Furnished HOUSE, with plate and linen, to LET for Summer months; two large sitting rooms, six bedrooms, one dressing room, bathroom.—"T.B.H.," "Evelyns," Uxbridge.

SOUTHWOLD (best position on the Common; close to Golf Links).—To be LET, well Furnished, for August, the pretty and artistic HOUSE known as "Link's Cottage," containing square hall, two sitting and large recreation rooms, servants' sitting room, seven bedrooms (fourteen beds), bathroom; electric light and telephone.—Apply to Mrs. ROBINSON, on Property.

ON THE BOURNEMOUTH LINKS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hôte, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.

THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.

THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.

A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.

Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads. Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.

Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.

Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.

New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,

Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.

To be obtained from Thos. COOK, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.

Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.

Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL.

SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.

Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head.

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.

Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill.

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 30s. Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address: "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY,

Within easy access of London

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers, inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable, being on sand.

DEVONSHIRE'S DELIGHTFUL DRINK.—

The very best beverage for GOLFERS is WHITEWAY'S PURE CYDER.

Refreshing, cooling, and a panacea for Gout, Rheumatism, and Obesity.

Booklets free from WHITEWAY'S, The Orchards, Whimple, Devon, and 22 and 23, Albert Embankment, S.W. Telephone 173 Hop.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer).

"'Is it a Private House or an Hotel?' is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGRESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

Club Houses can be efficiently and economically lighted by

ACETYLENE.

Write H. BAKER, 49, Victoria Street, S.W.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. COX, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL.—Brinklea, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY.

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method). - Manager, E. DIELMANN

SHERINGHAM, NORFOLK.

THE SHERINGHAM HOTEL,

ADJOINING GOLF LINKS (18 HOLES).

LARGEST HOTEL IN SHERINGHAM. Open all the year round. Handsome Dining Hall, 67ft. long. Numerous spacious Suites of Rooms commanding beautiful Sea and Land Views. Billiard and Smoking Rooms. Excellent and Improved Sanitary arrangements. Extensive Private Grounds. Lawn tennis, croquet. First-class Stables. Accommodation for Motors and Cycles. Through Trains from King's Cross, Peterborough, Birmingham, Leicester, etc.

Telegrams—"Sheringham Hotel, Sheringham."

National Telephone: No. 3. F. EDENS, Manager.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.
Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.
Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.
Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.
MODERATE TARIFF.
Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months
Perfect Sanitary arrangements.
Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE
Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit.

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

GREAT EASTERN RAILWAY.

THE EAST COAST
FOR THE ## SUMMER HOLIDAYS.

CROMER
MUNDESLEY-on-Sea.
YARMOUTH
LOWESTOFT
GORLESTON-on-Sea.
HUNSTANTON
SOUTHWOLD
ALDEBURGH
FELIXSTOWE
DOVERCOURT
CLACTON-on-Sea.
FRINTON-on-Sea.
WALTON-on-Naze.
SOUTHEND

TOURIST, FORTNIGHTLY, AND FRIDAY TO TUESDAY TICKETS available by all trains.

IMPROVED EXPRESS SERVICE

Non-Stop Trains: YARMOUTH, 2 hrs. 30 mins. FELIXSTOWE, 1 hr. 51 mins.

CROMER, 2 hrs. 55 mins.
LOWESTOFT, 2 hrs. 36 mins.
CLACTON, 1 hr. 44 mins.

Yachting, Fishing, Golfing, combined Rail and Boat Tours, and many other attractions.

BREAKFAST & DINING CARS.

AUGUST BANK HOLIDAY.

Write to the Superintendent of the Line, Liverpool Street Station, E.C., for Programme containing full particulars of Additional Trains and Cheap Tickets.

TRAVEL BY WEST COAST ROUTE
BETWEEN . .
ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND.

SPEED and COMFORT.

Hundreds of Pleasure Tours Daily by Rail, Coach and Steamer, on London & North Western and Caledonian systems.

FISHING, SHOOTING, GOLFING, &c., &c., &c.

ACCELERATED TRAIN SERVICE:
LONDON (EUSTON), BIRMINGHAM, LIVERPOOL, AND MANCHESTER
WITH
GLASGOW (CENTRAL), EDINBURGH (PRINCES ST.), ABERDEEN, INVERNESS, OBAN, AND THE NORTH.

Descriptive Guide Books of West Coast Route on application to Mr. R. TURNBULL, Euston Station, London.

For Tourist Programmes and "Summer Tours in Scotland," "Oban and the Land of the Gael," "Through Scotland" Descriptive Guides, apply to Mr. G. Calthrop, Caledonian Railway, Glasgow.

Frederick Harrison, General Manager L. & N.W. Ry.
R. Millar, General Manager Caledonian Ry.

VOGELER'S CURATIVE COMPOUND

PURIFIES THE BLOOD AND CURES INDIGESTION,
CONSTIPATION, LIVER ILLS, SKIN DISEASES.

"I must honestly say your Vogeler's Curative Compound has done me a lot of good. My face and neck are quite clear of the Eczema, and I feel so much better in every respect since taking the medicine. I used to have indigestion and wind very bad after eating, but I am now quite free from both these ailments."

(Signed) Miss S. MORRIS,
June 2nd, 1904. Ash Cottage, Court Road, Malvern.

Price 1/1½ and 2/6; of all Chemists.

LARGE FREE SAMPLE
sent on receipt of penny stamp for postage (mentioning this paper) by the Sole Proprietors, ST. JACOBS OIL, Ltd., 45, Farringdon Road, London.

42/-

CHARLES LEE & SON,
Specialist Ladies' Outfitters,
98 & 100, WIGMORE STREET
(ONLY ADDRESS).

CAUTION.—Messrs. Lee & Son have no branches, and warn the public against imitations of their goods.

An example in Finest Quality English Crêpe de Chine, with Valenciennes Lace Yoke and Guipure Points, 42/-.

A Blouse suitable for any figure.

POST ORDERS.—The Lady's Pictorial states:—"If you live in the country, have an account with Lee & Son, Wigmore Street; they send the choicest selection of goods by post, while they are cheap for the best Costumiers, Furriers, Lacemen, Specialists in Trousseaus, The Leewig Petticoat, Royal Crescent Veil, Hosiers, Glovers, Milliners, etc.

CHARLES LEE & SON,
WIGMORE STREET.

FIELD'S CANDLES.
NIGHT LIGHTS.
TOILET SOAPS.

LIGHT. LIGHTFUL. DELIGHTFUL.

Grand Prize, St. Louis, 1904.

J. C. & J. FIELD, Ltd., LAMBETH, S.E. Established 1642.

Digitized by Google

THE COWES WEEK.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

VOL. XX. No. 444. SATURDAY, AUGUST 5th, 1905. PRICE 6D.

Parkinson and Kay.

MR. JOSEPH COMPTON RICKETT, M.P.

Liberal Member for Scarborough.

(See page 583.)

Digitized by Google

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 444. Saturday, Aug. 5, 1905.

Editorial Offices—20, TAVISTOCK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephones—No. 2,748 GERRARD, AND 7,961 CENTRAL.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

EDITORIAL.

photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING AND GOODWOOD.—Goodwood the honoured, Goodwood the delightful, and Goodwood the great is one of the many functions which make the London season; but there is about the Sussex meeting more freedom and less ceremony than about many of the others. In the past hundred and four years Goodwood has never looked back from its Royal and aristocratic beginning, and has remained, despite the rivalry of Ascot, the favourite meeting with what has been wittily termed the frocks and frills brigade. The Duke of Richmond and Gordon has again acted as the King's host, and Queen Alexandra has also been at the Duke's Chichester home for the meeting. By the way, how many people know that since Charles II. created the first duke in 1675 Duke of Richmond, Earl of March, and Baron Settington, there have only been seven holders of the title, including the present duke.

THE KING AND COWES.—On board the "Victoria and Albert" King Edward will next week play the dual rôle of keen yachtsman and genial host, for while the racing under the auspices of the Royal Yacht Squadron is going on, he will entertain the Admiral Commander-in-Chief and other principal officers of the French Fleet which will be here on a visit. And no doubt at the Royal Yacht Squadron Club-house these officers will receive better treatment than did certain compatriots of theirs in 1625, who were caught smuggling, and "clapt straight into the dungeon that others might take heed thereto not to transgress," as the old chronicler puts it. Cowes Castle, which owes its origin to Henry VIII., was used as a Governor's residence until the fifties of the last century. In the castle, too, was imprisoned Davenant, who wrote there part of his poem "Gondibert." Charles I., whose history is so bound up with that of the Isle of Wight, first landed at Cowes when he was a boy of nine in 1609, and holding a muster of the forces of the island. Nine years later he was there again, and it was at Cowes that in 1647 he landed, a fugitive and a suppliant, to the long imprisonment at Carisbrooke Castle, whence he only emerged to go to his death in London. James II. also stayed at Cowes, and in view of next week's muster of the Fleets it is interesting to read that in 1620 men-of-war and their prizes, to the number of 300, were anchored in the roads.

Esme Collings. Lafayette.

SIR CLIFTON AND LADY ROBINSON

The Chairman of the London United Electric Tramway, and his wife, who have been entertaining largely at their riverside home.

THE KING AND THE FRENCH FLEET.—Vice-Admiral Caillard and his officers and men will of course have a very hearty and cordial welcome from all classes on the occasion of their visit to Cowes and Portsmouth, and had it not been that he had already arranged to be there for Cowes Week, it is practically certain that the King would have gone down in order to welcome the guests in person. Naval reviews at Spithead are wonderful sights, and to the uninitiated the sight of such a large congregation of ships in orderly rows, firing numerous salutes, is as mysterious as it is awe-inspiring. But for the King these functions are no new experience, though it will no doubt be a great pleasure to him that the result of his strenuous efforts in the direction of promoting a better feeling between the two neighbours is thus visibly demonstrated. And not only by means of a Naval review and a banquet in the "Victoria and Albert" will he show his interest. A large number of French officers are to journey to Windsor to see the famous riverside home of the British Royal House, and to take lunch there, and for nearly all of them that will be an experience as novel as memorable. London will have a chance, too, of joining in the welcome, and, sunny skies or grey skies, will know how to give a hearty cheer for those who so royally entertained our Atlantic Fleet at Brest.

THE BABY PRINCE.—This week the christening ceremony of the youngest child of the Prince and Princess of Wales takes place at Sandringham, and the names chosen for the infant Prince have naturally been influenced by the fact that King Carlos of Portugal has stood godfather to the Royal baby. There can be no doubt that both in this country and in Portugal the news will be welcomed with pleasure. England and Portugal have so much in common, and the friendship between the two countries has become so warm, that the honour King Carlos does the Prince of Wales and his youngest son will be very fully appreciated here.

Digitized by Google

Russell.

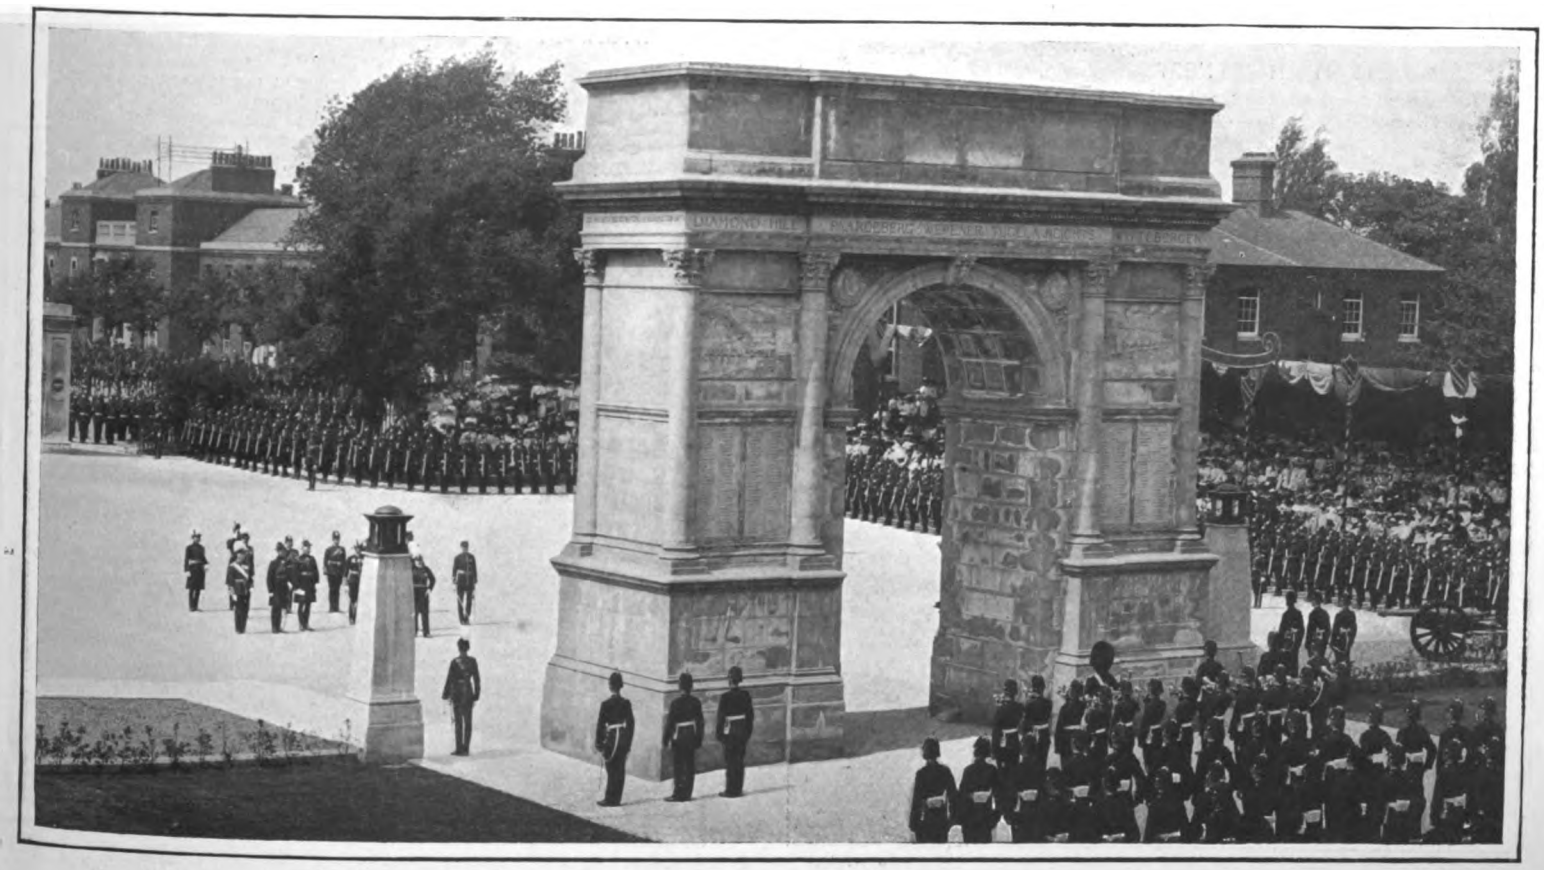
PRINCE CHRISTIAN AT WINDSOR.

The site of the new municipal police station, police court, and fire stations at Windsor were visited on Friday last week by Prince Christian, who is Lord High Steward of the Royal Borough, and the foundation-stone of the new buildings was laid.

Copyright.

PRINCESS ALEXANDER OF TECK AT ETON.

On Saturday last the foundation-stone of the memorial buildings at Eton College, which are being erected in honour of the memory of Etonians who fell in the South African War, was laid by Princess Alexander of Teck, and among the visitors were Earl and Countess Roberts.



Copyright.

THE KING AT CHATHAM.

The memorial arch erected by the Royal Engineers to the memory of their comrades who fell in South Africa was unveiled by King Edward, who went down to Chatham for the occasion. On the same day his Majesty opened the new Naval Hospital, which has been erected to accommodate 600 patients.

Digitized by Google

W. A. Rouch.

ARCHERY AT BEDDINGTON PARK.

The annual prize meeting of the Beddington Park Club on the club ground last week. There were a large number of entries, and the meeting was in every way a great success.

Copyright.

GORING AND STREATLEY REGATTA.

London, winners of the Challenge Eights, putting off from the landing-stage for the final.

Copyright.

MISS C. DE H. BENEST

Third prize winner at the fencing competition at the Ladies' Army and Navy Club.

W. A. Rouch.

MISS BRIDGES

Gold medallist and first prize winner at the Beddington Park Archery Club.

Copyright.

MISS C. DURAND

First prize winner at the fencing competition at the Ladies' Army and Navy Club.

Copyright.

GORING AND STREATLEY REGATTA.

This popular meeting took place on Saturday last, racing going on practically all day. Our illustration shows "Willow Grange," the winners of the dongola race.

Sharp.

THE VICTORIA MEMORIAL AT NOTTINGHAM.

The Duchess of Portland unveiling the statue in the Great Market Place last week.

Digitized by Google

"AS YOU LIKE IT."

PASTORAL PLAYERS AT THAMES DITTON.

(1) The audience, among whom were many well-known actors and actresses. (2) Celia (Miss May Congdon), Rosalind (Miss Madge Mackintosh), and Orlando (Mr. Graham Browne). (3) The last act. (4) Mrs. G. P. Huntly and a programme seller. (5) Melancholy Jaques in the forest.

(From copyright photographs specially taken for this paper by W. A. Rouch.)

Digitized by Google

THE KAISER AND BELGIUM.—It is nearly always the unexpected that happens with the Emperor William of Germany. And while it is not by any means an unprecedented thing for him to contemplate a visit to Belgium, the fact that he has actually decided to go there, and that immediately after the celebration of the Diamond Jubilee of Belgian Independence, will be a matter for no little comment in the political circles of the Continent. This country is not so much or so directly affected by this contemplated tour, but for us the doings of the Kaiser are always second in interest only to those of our own King and Queen. Following his example, some of the other rulers of European States may find a visit to Belgium desirable. But in this, as in other instances, it looks like a case of the Kaiser getting there first.

A WARNING TO AUSTRALIA.—General Gordon in Australia, like Lord Roberts in England, has warned his countrymen of their Military deficiencies. He, too, is a soldier whose opinion carries weight, from his age and experience. Born in Scotland, he was, in his early days, an Artillery officer, but he retired and settled at the Antipodes. Here he became connected with the Military forces, with which his career has been identified for twenty-three years. In 1892 he was made commandant, and in the South African War acted as Chief Staff Officer of the Australasian forces in the field. For his services in this connection he was created a C.B. On his return home he was again made commandant, but on the reorganisation of the Military system of the Commonwealth he retired. It is, therefore, as a soldier-citizen that he warns Australia of the consequences of the change in the balance of power in the Pacific. Will he make any deeper impression on Colonials than Lord Roberts has on Englishmen?

THE SPANISH TREASURE-SHIP.—The romanticists of the olden days took their heroes needlessly far from home in search of adventure and wealth, if half that we are hearing now about the wonderful treasure-ship in Tobermory Bay be true. The "Florida," or the "Florentia," or the "Admiral Florence," for by all these names she is referred to by the various chroniclers, was sunk in 1589 by Donald Glas Maclean, a relative of Sir Lauchlan Maclean of Dowart, who was at the time an outlaw, but who subsequently obtained a remission of the ban on the strength of his kinsman's services to the country. Young Donald was on board the Spanish vessel as prisoner of war, and the magazine being near his cabin, he forced his way in one night and successfully fired it. Of the crew of three hundred and more only three men and a dog escaped, or, at least, that is what tradition in the Isle of Mull says. Millions of "pieces of eight" are believed to be imprisoned somewhere in the hulk of the old vessel, and ever since 1688 attempts have been made to recover this treasure. But so far only a few old guns and other relics and thirty-three coins have been recovered.

AN AUSTRALIAN LAWYER.—Colonel Morgan's leading counsel on the War Stores Enquiry is the Hon. B. R. Wise, perhaps the first Colonial to act in such a capacity on a Royal Commission in England. He is an Australian of the very best type, handsome in presence, courtly in manner, and persuasive in voice. In his youth he was a friend and associate of Arnold Toynbee, and at college took part in the debates of the Oxford Union with the Hon. George Curzon, now Viceroy of India, and other young men since become famous. As an athlete he was distinguished, and from 1879 to 1881 held the Amateur Mile Championship. He is a Free Trader, but is willing to realise his ideal by way of Preference. In Sydney he has a large practice, and is a leading figure in the political world, having been Attorney-General in more than one Ministry. His present visit to England is a long one, and he came home by way of South Africa, where he was the guest of Lord Milner.

Lafayette, Dublin.

BARONESS DE FOREST

Who was married to the Baron last year, is the sister of Baron Gerard. Baron de Forest is a peer of the Austrian Empire, but is also a naturalised British subject, an officer in the Staffordshire Imperial Yeomanry, and a thoroughly good sportsman.

PERFUMES.—There is evident to-day a great liking for delicate, fragrant scents, which is in great contrast to the preference for the heavy scented essences of the East which was so noticeable a few years back. No doubt Queen Alexandra has been the arbiter of this change, for she has recently abandoned her favourite Ess Bouquet to some extent and taken to Sweet Pea, a very delicate and refreshing perfume. Queen Victoria always preferred Lavender Water to any other perfume. The Empress of Russia probably uses more scent than any other Royalty, and she, too, is faithful to one kind, Violet, made from flowers specially cultivated at Grasse. Two scents that are in great demand this season are Green Shamrock and Sofranor, both of which come to us from Paris.

BANANAS.—When Theophrastus described the fruit upon which the wise men of India fed, he invented a name for the banana which the botanists of old made use of in calling the tree Musa sapientum. But there is a far more interesting and curious old belief attaching to the banana in the Canary Islands and Brazil. It is there regarded as an affront to the Saviour to cut the fruit with a knife, as when this is done a crucifix may be seen in the centre of the banana. The cross is only clearly marked in fruit which is just ripening or which has been fresh picked. In a poem on horticulture published in 1620 we get in a description of the banana the following two lines: "If with a knife the fruit in two you reave, A perfect cross you shall therein perceive."

AN ELECTRICAL MAGNATE—When Sir Clifton Robinson joined the staff of the late George Francis Train on the first tramway in Europe, he started out upon a way which has led him to equal fame and a greater fortune than it did his then chief. For to-day he is closely connected with nearly every important tramway in this country, and controls in addition the systems of San Francisco and Los Angeles, California, where he constructed the first cable and electric tramways. In London, too, he was the pioneer of electric traction, and over ten years ago he foresaw with admirable exactitude that it was to the electric tram that London would have to look for the solution of the traffic problem. It is to his energy and initiative in large measure that the electrification of our underground railways is due, and he is largely interested in the many "Tube" railways now constructing. A Lancashire man by birth, he married an Irish girl, and there are few hostesses whose receptions are more willingly attended than those which Lady Robinson holds at Garrick's Villa at Hampton. The visitor to this famous house needs no assurance that Sir Clifton Robinson is fond of horses and dogs.

Digitized by Google

PRIZE DAY IN THE "WORCESTER"

ON BOARD THE THAMES NAUTICAL TRAINING COLLEGE AT GREENHITHE.

(1) Leonard Alan Robertson, winner of the King's Gold Medal. (2) Some visitors; names reading from left to right: Mrs. Batt-Mills, Mr. W. Lund, Sir Thomas Sutherland, G.C.M.G., LL.D. (Chairman of the College), Miss Fellowes, Miss McDonald, Lady Sutherland, Captain Kaburaki, the Japanese Naval Attaché, Admiral the Hon. Sir E. R. Fremantle, G.C.B., C.M.G. (Vice-Chairman), and Sir John Glover, J.P., who distributed the prizes. (3) Manning yards in honour of the arrival of the visitors. (4) Leaving the yards after the visitors have come on board. (5) The distribution of prizes The captain of the ship calling for three cheers for the King as the winner of the King's Gold Medal steps up on to the platform to receive his decoration. (6) W. Crutchlow, winner of the gold watch given annually by the P. and O. Company to the boy who is second in the gold medal competition.

(From copyright photographs by Our Special Correspondent. No. 4 by the Illustrations Bureau.)

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

THE motor-omnibus is, admittedly, in its infancy, but it is a very promising infant, and no one can say how important a future may lie before it. It is, therefore, a pity that the report of the Royal Commission on London traffic should contain only one short paragraph, and that a somewhat contemptuous one, dealing with the new vehicle. The majority of the Commissioners are firm believers in the tramcar, and "cannot recommend the postponement of tramway extension in London on the ground of any visible prospect of the supersession of tramways by motor-omnibuses." I fancy that the new vehicle must have had a somewhat disturbing effect on the deliberations of the Commissioners, as at the time they were appointed the motor-omnibus was practically unknown, and it was not until their labours were nearly completed that it made a sudden and successful appearance on the London streets. Apparently, to avoid the appearance of being hopelessly out of date, a clause referring to the motor-omnibus was added to the report, and, presumably, evidence was heard on the subject, but it is impossible to believe that the Commissioners have seriously studied the future possibilities of the motor in helping to relieve the congestion of the London streets.

Sir George Bartley, M.P., who presents a separate report, traverses the opinions of his colleagues in the following paragraph: "The report seems to suggest that motor-omnibuses will not take the place of tramways as a means of popular locomotion. This may not be so, but the evidence does not appear to be conclusive either way, though tending rather in favour of motor-omnibuses than the reverse. That motor-omnibuses are quicker than tramway cars in crowded streets has been ascertained; that they are better in narrow streets can hardly be doubted; and it would appear to be unwise to prophesy what they may accomplish, seeing what they have already done in so short a time. Whether they will ultimately compete successfully with tramways is at least an open question, but it seems to be sufficiently doubtful to render it scarcely wise to extend tramways in narrow streets, at a great cost to the public, until more experience has at least been gained as to the future of the motor-omnibus." There are many competent authorities who agree with Sir George Bartley, and, considering that the motor-omnibus, successful and practical vehicle though it has already proved to be, is, admittedly, still in a more or less experimental stage, it would certainly be wiser to wait for a year or two before a multitude of schemes are put forward for covering London with a network of tramways.

There are few more delightful methods of spending a summer holiday than in taking a leisurely tour by motor through the northern parts of France. A few words as to the customs and driving regulations in force on the other side of the Channel may therefore prove of value at the present time. The duty on automobiles is about £1 per cent., but the money is refunded in full when the car leaves the country, if only a temporary visit is intended. In the case of cars of French construction no customs duty is demanded, if the owner has taken the precaution to obtain a document called the "Passavant" when the vehicle is first brought out of France. This is a receipt from the customs which is valid for one year only, but can be renewed if application is made before the date of expiry. Purchasers of French machines should therefore insist on the "Passavant" being obtained from the authorities when the car is being sent over from the makers. Members of the Automobile Club have special advantages in regard to touring abroad, as they may settle all the customs formalities at the club and make the necessary deposit before leaving England, and thus avoid a great amount of trouble at the port of entry.

Before driving a car in France it is necessary to obtain two separate permits—the Carte Grise and a driving certificate. Before the former can be obtained the car must be examined by a Government official as to its suitability for use on the roads. This, of course, is a mere formality, but it is one that is apt to cause an irritating delay. An appointment should be made some time beforehand for the examination of the car at a certain time, and the letter (written on papier timbré) should be addressed to the nearest Prefecture to the port of entry. French cars need not be examined if the document called the "note descriptive" can be obtained from the makers. The permit when issued will assign a number to the car, which must be carried as in England. In order to obtain a driving certificate the applicant must pass an examination as to his skill, which, however, is not a very formidable matter. An appointment is made with the Prefect in the same manner as in the case of the examination of the car. Both examinations can be held at the same time, but two letters must be written. The application for the driving certificate

Topical

THE MOTOR-RACES AT BLACKPOOL
A view near the finish of the course.

Topical.

MOTOR-RACING AT BLACKPOOL.
A bird's-eye view of the course, from the top of the tower.

Digitized by Google

must be accompanied by two small mounted photographs of the head and shoulders of the driver. Here again members of the Automobile Club are able to avoid a vast amount of trouble and delay. If the secretary is advised a few days before the member leaves England of the date of his arrival at the port of entry an agent will meet the car on the quay with the Government official, who will immediately carry out the necessary examinations. I believe this arrangement is only in force at present at Havre and Bordeaux, but assistance is given at any port. In the case of a French car the club can generally obtain the Carte Grise and the registered number before the owner leaves England.

overcome their early difficulties, and succeeded in turning out a craft which is the equal of the steam launch in reliability. There are bound to be some failures out of the thirty-seven vessels entered, which range in size from an 18-ft. open launch, driven by a 6-h.p. petrol motor, up to fair-sized sea-going yachts, one of which is 60-ft. in length, and fitted with a producer-gas plant for supplying its huge engine with the necessary explosive mixture.

Without entering at length into the rules which govern the trials, it may be said that they consist of two continuous runs of ten hours each, during which any stop will involve a heavy loss of marks. No repairs or adjustments will be permitted between the runs, and most valuable guide to the merits and defects of all the principal types of motor-boat at present on the market.

There are two courses, a sheltered and an open one, and only those boats which are entered for the latter are required to cover it. The sheltered course is entirely within Southampton Water, and approximately rectangular, the starting being in a line with Hythe Pier, and the boats proceeding as far as Calshot Castle before turning. This should afford a sufficient test of the suitability of the boats for river, harbour, or estuary work. The open course, which need be covered only once each day, the remainder of the time being spent in circling the sheltered course, will take

Wakefield.

MR. AND MRS. VICTOR MILLER IN THEIR 24-H.P. FIAT.

In refreshing contrast to the orgy of speed demonstrations, with which automobilists have been satiated during the last few months, come the Reliability Trials for motor boats which are taking place this week in Southampton Water. The ability to start quickly and keep on running in the most adverse circumstances are of far more importance to a motor-boat than in the case of a car, for whereas a breakdown on the road merely results in delay and inconvenience, the failure of the engine at sea may have the most serious consequence if it occurs at a critical moment. The motor-boat, like the car, has to live down a reputation for uncertain behaviour, and the trials now in progress will, I hope, serve to demonstrate that a large percentage of the makers have only ten minutes will be allowed for the necessary preparation before the start on the second day. Every type of vessel will be placed on an equality in this respect, and it will be interesting to note how the two steam launches which are entered compare with the boats driven by internal-combustion engines in regard to the time required to get under way. Marks will be awarded under the heads of reliability, general condition after trial, speed (every boat has to maintain a given mean speed throughout the twenty hours), arrangement and protection of fuel tanks and piping, economy of fuel, efficiency of reversing arrangements, design and finish of mechanism, ease of control, and silence. It will thus be seen that the judges' report when issued will be a the competitors down the Solent as far as the gas buoy on the Solent Banks. According to the list of entries before me eighteen out of the thirty-seven boats have definitely decided to brave the dangers of the open course, while eight others are apparently still in a state of uncertainty. It is to be hoped that the weather will not prove too kind, as a strong ebb tide and brisk south-westerly breeze raise a choppy sea off West Cowes, which would give the smaller craft an excellent opportunity of displaying their sea-going powers. And with the Admiralty considering the possibility of adapting motor-boats to Naval needs, for launch service and the like, such a test of their capabilities would be very timely.

RADIATOR.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

WITH the opening of August the golfing exodus begins. The holiday period, so ardently looked forward to throughout the winter, and found to be an absolute necessity in days when the thermometer mounts to between 80-deg. and 90-deg. in the shade, has at last arrived, and bustling preparation to leave the pent-up city and to change the scene is the dominant note in every household at the present moment. The principal idea is to escape from the heat and the dust of the town, to get somewhere near the sea, where a cool breeze always mitigates the scorching fierceness of the sun, and makes life less of a burdensome trial than when business interests or unforeseen illness chains one to the old familiar round of domestic cares and scrutinising double entry. Thus at every railway station—one might almost say in every suburban street and flat—the rattle of the golf clubs can be heard as they lie loosely huddled in the bag. Among trunks and kit-bags the iron and wooden heads of golf clubs peep out as one of the indispensable accompaniments of the family equipment during the weeks to be spent either at home or abroad. The universality of the golf club among the luggage shows not only the great spread of the game among all classes of society, but how popular the recreation on the links has become with men and women of the well-to-do classes, especially at holiday times.

* * *

It would thus seem that the spread of golf, throughout these isles, at any rate, is leading to greater variety in the character of seaside amusements. The ladies like a round of the links as well as their husbands and brothers. The satirists have said a great deal in years gone by about the ladies of the household when they were on holiday bent changing the scene but not the amusements which they have been accustomed to enjoy throughout the year, or even the accustomed tenor of their social habits. The golf links have now become as much an indispensable part of seaside amusements as the pier or the promenade. Corporations of seaside boroughs are waking up tardily to the fact that there is a great deal of money in good links, and the ratepayers, too, though rather averse at first from the notion that they should put their hands in their pockets to cater for the amusement of the rich, have willingly borne an increased rate in order to make their little town a permanent attraction for the golfer throughout the year. The result is that where links are found on the outskirts of a seaside town, otherwise charmingly attractive, families return there year after year quite satisfied with the enjoyment they have earned, and the rich store of health they have laid up as a precious reserve for the hard winter that may come.

Copyright.

THE GOG-MAGOG LINKS, CAMBRIDGE.

Mr. G. Hoffmann, the Cambridge University Captain, playing out of a bunker. The ball can be seen just beyond the flying sand.

* * *

One sees, therefore, on nearly every seaside green at this season of the year a goodly string of mixed foursomes leaving the first tee in the early morning. Even when the players have no pretensions to be described as even fair in playing form, the mixed foursome, as thus arranged among fathers, mothers, daughters, and brothers, is an exhilarating exercise. It is sociable, entertaining, stimulating to the mind, and bracing to the body. It adds a new interest to life at the seaside, which, without this welcome change of a pastime, is apt, perhaps, to become monotonous for lack of something definite to do. A morning round with the male members of the family, or with neighbours, leaves the ladies free for the promenade or the pier in the afternoon, while the men adhere with allegiance to the golfing law that no higher form of amusement can be provided for them than that of completing as many rounds of the links as can be crowded in before darkness absolutely shuts out a dim view of the home hole.

Mathew, Towyn.

THE HARLECH LINKS.

A view of the home hole on the Royal St. David's course at Harlech; Mr. H. Hilton is just about to putt.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

Sometimes the question arises as to whether the coast towns on the other side of the Channel should be given a short trial for golf at this time of the year. The golfing habit has almost become as persistent in France, Belgium, and Switzerland as it is with ourselves. If the natives of those countries do not as yet show any particular enthusiasm to play the game themselves, they are at least wideawake enough to see that facilities to play the game on some kind of makeshift links mean an added money attraction to the resort. The foreigners, however, have not been content merely to lay out a golf course; they spend lavishly in providing cups and other prizes for competition. Thus at Dieppe, Wimereux, at many of the popular holiday resorts in Switzerland, at Carlsbad, Baden-Baden, Homburg, and many other places on the Continent largely visited by English golfers in August and September, there are many "open" competitions advertised for valuable prizes in match and score play. In many cases the local town councils give handsome prizes out of the public funds, thus making it a high honour for golfers from this side to enter and to win, in order that they may be able to grace their dining-room with a silver golf trophy designed and made abroad.

* * *

The great professional foursome for £400 opens this week at Deal. All the players seem to be in brilliant form, and if they maintain collectively this form during the progress of the match it should be a real heroic battle, which will be decided by a very narrow margin. Last week Herd followed up his success at the Manchester Open Tournament by winning for the second year in succession the Leeds Challenge Cup of the Northern Section of the Professional Golfers' Association at Bradford. His score was 70 (a record) and 75, F. Leach of Northwood and B. Snowball of Scarborough Town coming next with 75 and 75. This was the qualifying round for the tournament for £240 and medals, presented by the proprietors of the News of the World, to be held at Walton Heath in October. Herd was putting brilliantly.

* *

Braid, Taylor, Vardon, and Williamson have taken part in a professional tournament on the course of the Sheffield Club at Lindrick. Braid and Vardon each went round in 77, and Taylor was 72—marvellously fine scoring. A four-ball foursome in the afternoon resulted in Braid and Taylor winning by a hole against Vardon and Williamson, after being 3 down at the fourth hole. The best-ball scores were 68 and 69 for the eighteen holes.

THE PROFESSIONAL AT ALDERSHOT.

James Merrilees, the professional at the Aldershot Club, whose links are on Cove Common. He learnt his game at North Berwick when apprenticed to Hutchison. Since he took over the charge of the green it has been twice extended, and now numbers twelve holes.

GOLF AT ALDERSHOT.

Major G. Haines choosing a ball from Merrilees, the professional.

ALDERSHOT CLUB-HOUSE.

The club-house is on Cove Common, and here a view is obtained of the Queen's Hotel at the back.

The Open Amateur Meeting at Romford was a great success, among the players being Mr. Hilton and Mr. Fry. The best score was returned by Mr. J. Hall (Romford), whose net score was 154, Mr. S. Feast winning the prize for the best score under handicap for eighteen holes.

GOLF PHILOSOPHY IN SLIPPERS.

IV.—On Stymies.

INTRINSICALLY, I do not think the stymie has any great merit. If to be great or good is to be for the greater happiness of the greatest number, I fear stymies will not come under that category. Indeed, I am not sure but what they inflict pain more than they afford pleasure. The stymie that has decided the match at the last hole, that would otherwise have been halved, will rankle more bitterly in the mind of him who has lost than it will afford pleasure to him who has won, who, poor sinful man, is too prone to ignore the stymie that gave him the match, and to attribute his victory to his superior play at some other hole.

No one intends to lay a stymie on purpose. If it is laid by an approach shot it is, of course, an arrant fluke; while if both balls are within putting distance of the hole, it is surely better to try and hole out than to stop anywhere near the hole in the line of your adversary's putt. The joy of lofting a stymie, which I admit is great, and so easy to do when practising on the club lawn, or while waiting at a tee, is seldom vouchsafed to us in a match. Yet, on the whole, I think the weight of evidence is rather against them than not. But then stymies are historically so intensely interesting. For more than 400 years they have been a bone of contention, and have aroused the evil passions of all true lovers of golf.

By no means the first, but certainly one of the most powerful, agitations for the abolition of stymies that have convulsed the golfing world, occurred during the latter part of the sixteenth century. This was got up by the Papists at the instigation of the Pope of Rome. As far as I have been able to gather—from fragments—it came about in this wise. About the year 1595 or 1596 the Pope was sitting in solemn conclave, considering how he could best bring back certain lost sheep to the fold, and the conversation had turned on Scotland, when a dour-visaged, lanthorn-awed Cardinal, speaking Italian with a strong Aberdeen accent, remarked, apparently to the ambient air, "A kingdom divided against itself cannot stand." The Pope somewhat testily assented to the truth of this assertion, but hinted that as they were sitting in camera platitudes might be dispensed with. "Get up an agitation that shall divide them into factions," went on the Cardinal. "Yes, but how?" said the Pope. "Get up an agitation about stymies," said the Cardinal. "About what?" said the Pope. "Stymies," repeated the Cardinal. "How do you spell it?" said the Pope. "S-t-y-m-i-e," said the Cardinal. The Pope asked for further information, which the Cardinal gave, and after some additional conversation the conclave broke up. But Cardinal MacAntonio was asked to remain after the others had gone. Towards the end of that same year a prominent Roman Catholic nobleman electrified the members of the Carnoustie Club by remarking at luncheon that stymies were "alle rotte." He had, I believe, just come in from a round that had been decided on the last green. Shortly after this similar views were expressed all over the country, and an agitation began which soon shook the kingdom to its foundations. But King Jamie—he who shortly afterwards, in the year of grace 1603, succeeded to the throne of England, and forthwith founded the Blackheath Golf Club, and who, although not entirely an ideal King, was a good golfer—put his foot down firm. And, after much bitterness of spirit displayed on both sides, stymies were preserved to us.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

Since then hardly ever have twenty consecutive years elapsed without an agitation on this subject, while in our own time they have been of quinquennial occurrence. And I have known many an ardent Scotsman travel from the South of Europe expressly to be present at a St. Andrews meeting when this vexed question was to be discussed. Who, then, after looking back through these long centuries of controversy, would have the heart to advocate their final abolition?

And remember always that in the course of a long and honourable golfing life, you will probably lay your adversary as many stymies as he will lay you. C. DE LACY LACY.

GOLF IN RHODESIA.

GOLF has its keen partisans in Southern Rhodesia as elsewhere in the British Empire, and three of its towns can boast of nine-hole courses, namely, Salisbury, Bulawayo, and Umtali. Golf is usually indulged in during the rainless winter months,

GOLF IN RHODESIA.

The captain driving over the sluit at the 208-yds. hole when the 5-ft. grass and shrubs have been cut down, and the appropriate parts of the course "scuffled," that is to say, cleared of all vegetation. From this it will be understood that play is on bare earth, and the greens are really browns. A narrow strip is "scuffled" at each hole and is guarded on each side by the unscuffled portion with its growth of grass, which forms a very good hazard. At Bulawayo and Umtali there are sluits which are formidable hazards, but at Salisbury the course is on open veldt, and artificial bunkers are raised.

The course at Umtali is the most picturesque and the most varied. The illustrations are all of the Umtali course. The holes are very varied in length. One is 86-yds. long, and is shown in one of the illustrations. It is a short pitch between two trees and over a yawning sluit, and the hole is guarded beyond by thorny bush.

The sluit has spoiled many a score of the over-anxious player. It is easy to get into, but oh! the getting out! The same hazard has to be crossed at the next hole, which is 208-yds. long; but it does not seem to have the same terrors as at the short hole. The variety of the holes is shown as follows: One hole under 100-yds., two more under 200-yds., two under 300-yds., two between 300-yds. and 400-yds., and one 645-yds. long. The long hole appears very much longer when one thinks of the possibility of soft lies on the earthy surface.

The course is an excellent training for accurate iron work on the soft sandy lies. The golf-house, although primitive, is the scene of many a festive occasion on Saturday afternoons, for the course is reserved on that day for ladies, who may, and usually do, invite the sterner sex to join in the game on their special afternoon. A shorter course is marked out for the ladies. The Umtali community is a gallant as well as a sporting one. I fancy it would make the hair of old golfers at home stand on end if they were told that they could not have a male single or foursome on a Saturday! Out of a population of 1,111 in the district there are about 200 members of the golf club, and their keenness has had its reward, because they were able to win the Champion Cup of Rhodesia from the Salisbury Club, which rather fancies itself.

T. Delavanay, Inverness.

GOLF AT DORNOCH.

The Dornoch Station Hotel, showing the golf course, which lies just in front of the hotel.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

GOLF AT MONTREUX.

(1) Spectators at a recent putting and approaching competition. (2) The driving competition: Mr. de Watterville driving, Mr. Dunsford nearest to the box. (3) Colonel Evans-Gordon, the hon. secretary, driving from the 1st tee. (4) A group of lady competitors. (5) Mr. Lawson driving; Mr. Leslie Smith, Major Clayton, Mr. Wickham, and Colonel Evans-Gordon on his right. (6) The Montreux club-house. (7) A group of Swiss caddies.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

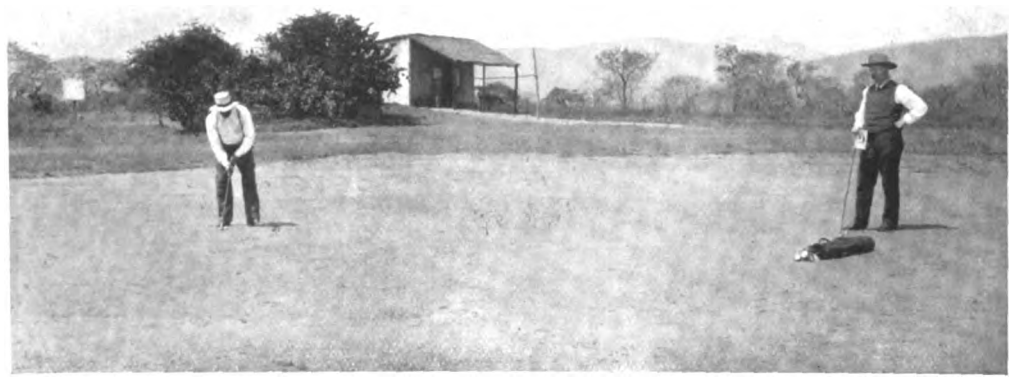
From the nature of the course special local rules had to be adopted, particularly with regard to the greens. To render the greens of uniform texture, if such a word can be used, they are sprinkled with sand. This sand gets very uneven with many feet trampling upon it, so that putting becomes a mere game of chance. However, a player is allowed to smooth the sand with the handle of his club. The record in club competitions for the course is 81, and is held by Mr. S. Elkin; but a round of 75 has been done by Mr. H. B. Douslin, a Salisbury player.

The native Mashonas are used as caddies, and they are excellent at finding balls in the bush or long grass. It is very difficult, however, to initiate them into the mysteries of the game, so that in inter-club competitions, where one club provides all the caddies, it is agreed that if a ball strikes a caddie it is taken as a rub of the green.

The badge of the club is a crow, and the origin of the badge is an incident that occurred in the early history of the club, and before Rhodesian crows quite understood the game. A ball was driven off from one of the tees, and as soon as it stopped a crow pounced on it and carried it off in its beak. Certain versions of the story say that the crow proceeded in its flight to the hole and dropped it in, so that the hole was done in one. But this is too tall, even for a Rhodesian tale. The first part of the tale is vouched for by two well-known members of the club.



GOLF IN RHODESIA.

The captain, Major Snodgrass, putting at the last green, or brown. The primitive club-house is seen in the background.

There is a plentiful supply of artificial bunkers, which would be improved if they were filled with sand. To an ordinary good golfer no difficulty presents itself, and altogether the course is easy, the lies fair, and the subscription moderate. The May competitions lasted fifteen days. Miss Thorpe won the two Ladies' Challenge Cups, and Miss Evans-Gordon the prize offered by Mr. Jenkins, the captain of the club. Mr. Leslie-Smith won the cup given by the Grand Hotel, Territet, and Mr. Dunsford that given by the club. Mr. Wickham gained the Whitehouse and the Captain's Cups. The consolation prize, given by Mrs. Clayton, was won by the captain, to the satisfaction of all.—I am, etc.,

H.

Correspondence.

THE MONTREUX GOLF CLUB.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE KING."

SIR,—These links (views of which are given on another page) are situated near Aigle, about eight miles from Montreux, in the Rhône Valley. Convenient trains carry golfers from Lausanne, Vevey, Montreux, Territet, and Bex, and for those who wish to live nearer the Grand Hotel d'Aigle is delightful, and the Beausite (somewhat nearer) very moderate in its charges. The links (nine holes) have been open three or four years, and though on the flats themselves, have on three sides some of the highest Alpine peaks, including the Dent-du-Midi, Les Diablerets, and others. They are open all the year round, but it is almost too hot and the ground too hard to play during July and August. May is a very good month here, and competitions are held then. The holes are, if anything, rather short, the longest being about 400-yds., and the shortest some 130-yds.

FIXTURES.

August 5.—Felixstowe, Summer Meeting.
August 5.—Frinton, Summer Meeting.
August 5.—Hythe, Summer Meeting.
August 5.—Ipswich, Wood Cup.
August 5.—Royal Ashdown Forest, August Meeting.
August 5.—Royal Portrush, August Meeting.
August 5.—Rye, Monthly Medal.
August 5-7.—Rochester, Royal Marine Challenge Shield.
August 7.—Bushey Hall, Bank Holiday Competition.
August 7.—Hanger Hill, Bank Holiday Competition.
August 7.—Hunstanton, Residents' Cup.
August 7.—West Cornwall, Ladies' Summer Meeting.
August 7.—Royal Liverpool, Summer Meeting.
August 7.—Royal Isle of Wight, Summer Meeting.
August 7.—Buxton and High Peak, August Meeting.
August 7-8.—Littlehampton, Open Summer Meeting.
August 7-8.—Dieppe, Prix de Dieppe.
August 8.—Enfield, Ladies' Summer Meeting.
August 9-11.—Newquay, Atlantic Challenge Cup.
August 10.—Sheringham, Summer Meeting.
August 12.—Hanger Hill, Medal.
August 13.—Boulogne v. Le Touquet.
August 14.—Southwold, Ladies' Open Meeting.
August 16.—Royal Cromer, Open Amateur Meeting.
August 22.—Hunstanton, Ladies' Competition.
August 22-25.—Waveney Valley, Open Summer Meeting.
August 23.—Royal Guernsey, Tradesmen's Cup.

THE UMTALI COURSE.

The captain in the sluit, which forms a formidable hazard at the short hole.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. LIV.—Mr. Joseph Compton Rickett, Liberal M.P. for Scarborough, and Prospective Liberal Candidate for the Osgoldcross Division of the West Riding of Yorkshire.

At the present moment Yorkshire returns no less than thirty-nine members to the House of Commons. A century ago, although the City of York and the towns of Malton, Pontefract, and Scarborough had each two representatives, the whole of the three Ridings forming the county were only privileged to elect a similar number. For all that, Yorkshire was the scene of many of the most memorable contests known in Parliamentary history—amongst them the famous fifteen days' struggle in which William Wilberforce and Viscount Milton defeated Mr. Lascelles, as some of the great territorial families were permanently impoverished in consequence. Scarcely less celebrated was the fierce fight which some years later preceded the triumph at the polling booth of Henry Brougham, and paved the way to the Chancellorship. Scarborough was entirely in the hands of a close corporation of forty-four members, with the two bailiffs as returning officers. According to the unwritten law of heredity, their sphere of selection was limited to the younger scions of the noble houses of Mulgrave and Rutland. The members for Scarborough in those days were consequently, as a rule, either a Phipps or a Manners. Reform Bills have left Scarborough with a single representative, and for many years the choice of the electors—the ancient form of suffrage being abolished—has oscillated pretty evenly between the Tories and the Liberals.

Ten years ago Mr. Joseph Compton Rickett won the seat for the latter with a majority of 24, and in 1900, when he once again crossed swords with his old opponent, Sir George Sitwell, that majority rose to 107. Since then the member for Scarborough—who has in many ways made his mark both outside and inside the House of Commons—has accepted an invitation to fight the battle of Liberalism at the next General Election in the Osgoldcross Division, which has "gone" consistently for the Radicals ever since 1886, when Sir John Austin, M.P.—now an octogenarian—defeated Sir J. W. Ramsden by about a thousand votes.

Joseph Compton Rickett, though born in London just eight-and-fifty years ago, was the eldest son of Joseph Rickett of East Hoathly, Sussex. Before he entered his teens he was sent to the Bath Grammar School, an institution which, since its foundation by King Edward VI., has been more or less responsible for the education and up-bringing of such men as William Prynne, the militant Puritan pamphleteer; Sir Sidney Smith, the dauntless hero of Acre; Thomas de Quincey, the author; William Edward Parry, the Arctic explorer; Francis Kilvert, the antiquarian; and Sir Bartle Frere, the well-known Indian administrator. Here he had the good fortune to become the private pupil of the Rev. Henry Stuart Fagan, who was not only an able teacher, but an experienced journalist. When on the point of exchanging the discipline of school for a 'Varsity career at Trinity College, Cambridge, the state of his father's health compelled him to go into business. Before he finally retired from commercial pursuits only three years since, he had become the chairman of one of the largest and most important combinations in the coal trade, besides playing a prominent part in the successful development of the roller flour-milling industry in London. When only just of age he married Miss Catherine Sarah Gamble, the daughter of the Rev. Henry J. Gamble of Upper Clapton, a popular and influential Congregational minister. The prospective candidate for the Osgoldcross Division is not only a hard-headed man of business, a patient searcher after truth, a sound political economist, and a clear and convincing speaker, but he wields the pen of a ready writer so skilfully, that those who only know him either in the City or at Westminster have some difficulty in recognising the literary idealist who, while now and then straying anonymously into the realms of poetry, has delighted thousands of readers with such works as "Christianity in Common Speech," "The Quickening of Caliban," and "The Christ that is to be." In the latter Mr. Compton Rickett may be read at his best, and few of his critics were inclined to find fault with a wit which now and then reminds one of Bunyan when applied by its possessor to a picture of futurity with an underlying parable obviously relating to the present. Two centuries and a-half separate the Bath school-days of Joseph Compton Rickett from those of William Prynne, but the former possesses all the independence of thought, strength of character, and intensity of purpose which distinguished the latter, who, if he had lived in Queen Victoria's reign, instead of those of James I. and his son, might very well have written the last of Mr. Rickett's three best-known productions.

Mr. Rickett is a Free Churchman amongst Free Churchmen, and in him the indefatigable secretary of the great Free Church Federation movement, the Rev. Thomas Law, has a far-seeing and capable helper. In the next Parliament, which will in all probability be known as that of the Free Churches, the position of Mr. Rickett is likely to be one of no small influence and considerable usefulness. For many years Mr. Rickett declined all invitations to enter the arena of practical politics. When he at last consented, Mr. Tom Ellis, the Chief Liberal Whip, wished him to contest the Stroud Division of Gloucestershire, then to be vacated by Mr. Brynmor Jones; but Mr. Compton Rickett preferred the more difficult task of leading an assault on the Conservative citadel at Scarborough, where he was entirely unknown to Parliament three months before his return as its representative. Five years later, in spite of the difficulties caused by the war in a garrison town, and an agitation which culminated in a riot, Mr. Compton Rickett succeeded in retaining the seat with an increased majority. He is the only member who has been returned twice in succession since the ancient borough became a single-member constituency. He has, however, after mature consideration, decided not to contest Scarborough for a third time, preferring a constituency which offers a larger field for political and social questions, and possesses a political complexion of a more decided character than that of the beautiful and well-known Yorkshire seaside resort, where parties are closely divided, and personal considerations have too often a preponderating influence.

Tear.

MRS. AND MISS RICKETT.
The wife and daughter of Mr. Joseph Compton Rickett, the Member for Scarborough.

---

Previous articles in this series include:

| | |
|---|---|
| Mr A. E. W. Mason | August 27, 1904. |
| Mr. A. W. H. Ponsonby | September 3, 1904. |
| Mr. A. Rendell | October 15, 1904. |
| Mr. J. J. Haye | October 22, 1904. |
| Mr. J. E. Sears | October 29, 1904. |
| Alderman W. H. Davies | November 5, 1904. |
| Mr. A. E Dunn | November 12, 1904. |
| Mr. T. J. Lennard | November 19, 1904. |
| Mr. A W. Wills | November 26, 1904. |
| Mr. W H Dickinson | December 3, 1904. |
| Mr. R W. Perks | December 10, 1904. |
| Mr. F. T. Leyland Scarisbrick | December 24 1904. |
| Alderman A Wakerley | December 31 1904. |
| Alderman L. L. Morse | January 7, 1905. |
| Mr. Donald Maclean | January 21, 1905. |
| Mr. Stephen Collins | January 28, 1905. |
| Mr J. Meir Astbury | February 4, 1905. |
| Mr. R. Laidlaw | February 18, 1905. |
| Mr. R. A. Germaine | March 4, 1905. |
| Mr. G. P. Gooch | March 25, 1905. |
| Mr. S. J. Pocock | April 8, 1905. |
| Captain Malcolm Kincaid-Smith | April 22, 1905. |
| Mr. R. White | May 6, 1905. |
| Mr. Timothy Davies, L.C.C. | May 27, 1905. |
| Mr. S. K. Hocking | June 10, 1905. |
| Mr. H. Greenwood | June 17, 1905. |
| Mr. G. A. Hardy | June 24, 1905. |

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

BELLEVILLE WEDDINGS.

A WEDDING among the lower strata of the Paris middle classes affords a curious subject for the student of human nature, always supposing him to be robust enough to follow the bridal party through their peregrinations, a long and arduous task. On that great day the mechanic or employé blossoms into a huge snob, for he, too, has a Mrs. Grundy before whom he quails, and who decrees that he has to do everything on a lavish scale, or be held in contempt by his neighbours.

The festivities begin at an early hour, when the guests meet at the marchand de vin to inaugurate the eventful day with several glasses of "madère," after which the party proceed to the Mairie, the Town Hall, for the celebration of the civil marriage. The bride drives there in state, in an imposing-looking coach with glass all round, so that she may be seen to advantage, back, front, and sideways, the guests following in carriages or in four-horse brakes holding about forty people. The religious ceremony is, as a rule, dispensed with, especially when luncheon-time is drawing near and the company is getting hungry. The populous Belleville quarter is flooded with places where wedding-parties can be accommodated; but the classical establishment for these important functions is the Lac Saint-Fargeau, which boasts of a garden and a huge dancing-hall. The average price of a wedding luncheon there is 2s. per head, including wine and coffee. It is rare that rabbit does not figure on the menu. Altogether, rabbits seem to enjoy even a greater popularity in Belleville than in any other part of the city. In the long and steep Rue de Belleville the shops display quantities of them, and on the signboards of the restaurants they are represented in various attitudes to tempt the passer-by. The meal only lasts about an hour, for a heavy programme has to be gone through. As the company issue from the banqueting-room they are pounced upon by a photographer, huddled into a group, and snap-shotted, after which they drive in solemn procession to the Bois de Boulogne, round the lake, the bride resplendent in her white dress and orange-blossom, the bridegroom in black, with one arm round her waist, and a cigar between his lips. And as driving promotes thirst, a few halts are made on the road, the refreshments being generously offered by the guests.

By that time the dinner-hour has struck — the most important moment of the day—and the horses' heads are once more turned towards the Lac Saint-Fargeau. The banquet lasts a considerable time, for many healths have to be drunk, and numberless bottles are emptied to an accompaniment of songs and recitations, very apropos but decidedly risqué. Etiquette demands that the bride should also contribute a song, and the lady rarely fails to oblige the company.

The company then scatter about the garden, and the fun becomes fast and furious, for rival parties have also taken possession of the grounds, and an entente cordiale is established, brides, bridegrooms, and guests getting strangely intermixed. And if mine host of the Lac Saint-Fargeau establishment is to be believed, this fraternising sometimes leads to complications which even the fertile brain of a farce writer has never invented. But all's well that ends well, and the fun which has cost a heap of money is kept up till dawn, when all go home dead tired, but conscious of having celebrated the great event in a worthy manner.

Geniaux, Paris.

THE GUESTS LEAVING FOR THE WEDDING.
Assisting the ladies of the bridal party into the brake.

One of the things that strikes you at a Belleville wedding is the grace with which the young girls of the party wear their toilettes. Be the grade of society to which they belong ever so humble, their dresses invariably bear the delightful cachet of the Parisienne. Never showy, always tasteful, their hair done to perfection, these girls are really pleasant to look upon.

The men's appearance, I am sorry to say, is less prepossessing. They look woefully uncomfortable in their clothes, and no wonder. These gentlemen's wardrobe rarely or ever contains a dress-coat, or even a frock-coat, and the article, therefore, has to be hired from specialists, who must do a roaring trade, for they are to be found at every street corner in the humbler quarters. For 10s. or 12s. the specialist supplies a complete suit—dress-coat or frock-coat—and for an extra 4s. an opera hat and an overcoat. The conditions on which these articles are let out are curious. Stains are considered unavoidable. The hirer can return the garments with a souvenir of every dish of which he has partaken, but the smallest rent has to be paid for. It is a lucrative business for the specialist, for, thanks to the process of cleaning wherein the French are past-masters, these clothes can be let out dozens of times. But, curiously enough, the man who does not mind spending 20-fr. to look, as he thinks, smart before his friends, has never had the courage to part with the 60-fr. or 70-fr. that would make him the proud owner of a gala suit. Perhaps he thinks he may never again require such an outfit unless he becomes a waiter. But while the young girls with nimble fingers invariably make their own dresses, their seniors frequently follow the men's example, and have recourse to a lady specialist. With them the selection of a dress is a delicate matter. The ladies who let out dresses never keep a shop. They transact their business in an apartment, and the client reclines in an easy-chair whilst the marchande à la toilette displays the treasures of fashion before admiring eyes. "Take this satin dress with the long train, my dear," says the temptress; "you will look like a duchess!" And the victim smiles, and gently presses her hand over the warm satin, thinking that 15-fr. is not too big a price to pay for the pleasure of looking like a duchess.

Geniaux, Paris

AT THE LAC SAINT-FARGEAU.
The artist implores the group to keep still.

Among the higher classes, when the daughter of the house "comes out," she has every opportunity to meet young men, one of whom, she hopes, is destined to become her husband. The girls of the lower middle classes have no such chances, and their papas, therefore, have organised among themselves private clubs where they and their families meet once a month. There are dozens of these associations here in Paris, all on the same lines, each with about fifty members, who pay 3-fr. per month, for which they have the right to introduce not only their own family, but also a couple of friends. The monthly subscription is sufficient to cover all expenses, including the hire of the hall, and the young people can dance to their hearts' content. Between these different coteries there is often a sense of rivalry, each trying to outdo the other in the quantity of marriages that are brought about. But the result is a good one, and the happy dénouement takes place at the Lac Saint-Fargeau.

FRANCES KEYZER.

Digitized by Google

PARISIAN PLAYERS.

MLLE. LAUSELINE

A clever and vivacious comedienne, who has been appearing at various Parisian theatres during the past season.

(From a copyright photograph by Reutlinger.)

Digitized by Google

The Member for the Isle of Wight.

No. LV.—Major J. E. B. Seely, D.S.O., Member for the Isle of Wight.

THOUGH Major Seely has been in Parliament only since 1900, he has made his mark. He comes of a family with a Parliamentary tradition, for his father, Sir Charles Seely, served in three Parliaments as a Liberal, and in one as a Liberal Unionist. His eldest brother is M.P. for Lincoln, a constituency represented by his grandfather, who was a colliery-owner in the Midlands. Major Seely himself has created a Parliamentary record, for he is the only member of the House who has been elected twice in four months during his absence from this country. He was returned in May, 1900, at a contested bye-election, and again in November at the General Election, when he was unopposed. At this time he was serving with the Hants Troop of Imperial Yeomanry in the South African War. In the Isle of Wight within the recollection of the oldest inhabitant there has never been an uncontested election but once, and that was in 1886, when Lord Alverstone, then Sir Richard Webster, was appointed Attorney-General.

Major Seely also belongs to a family whose connection with the Army and Auxiliary Forces has been long and honourable. His father was an officer in the Robin Hood Rifles for eighteen years. He and his eldest brother are in the Imperial Yeomanry, three of his sisters are married to Yeomanry or Volunteer officers, and a fourth to an Artillery officer, while his father-in-law, Colonel the Hon. H. G. L. Crichton, is one of the leading figures in the Volunteer movement in Hants. It is, therefore, natural that Major Seely should speak authoritatively in the House on the Auxiliary Forces. His speech on Mr. Arnold-Forster's now famous circular was lucid and concentrated. He denies that "in a Volunteer Force, unpaid, one can have reduction and efficiency at the same time." He sees, too, that every man should serve, not as a conscript, but as a citizen who voluntarily gives all he can to secure the safety of the State. Mr. Arnold-Forster's action with regard to the Volunteers he described in a trenchant phrase as "throttling the patriotic aspirations of the people."

The youngest son of Sir Charles Seely, who is a well-known figure in the Isle of Wight as well as in the Midlands, Major Seely was educated at Harrow and Trinity. He was called to the Bar of the Inner Temple in 1897, but it was not until the South African War that he came before the public. He went to the front with the 4th Battalion of Imperial Yeomanry, among the members of which he was extremely popular. He was mentioned in despatches, and received in recognition of his services the D.S.O.

Mrs. Seely is a niece of the Earl of Erne, and has four beautiful children. She belongs to a family even better known in Hants than her husband's. Like so many wives of members of Parliament, she is a considerable factor in her husband's success; for, in these days, it is the womanly woman, not the purely political woman, who wins the most votes. Tact, social distinction, and a hundred and one feminine weapons are all employed very much as they ever were. But it is a new feature in our political life for ladies to take the place of their husbands at an election. Mrs. Lyttelton played the part very effectively during her husband's illness a year or two ago, and Mrs. Seely played an equally effective part in 1900. The seat was contested by Mr. Godfrey Baring in the Liberal interest. But he was as ardent a supporter of the war as the other side. "Vote for Baring and back up 'Bobs'" was the legend displayed on his placards, and the Conservatives could only urge the electors to "Vote for Seely, who is Hughes and Mullins.

MAJOR J. E. B. SEELY, M.P., D.S.O.
Member for the Isle of Wight.

backing up 'Bobs.'" Piquancy was lent to the situation by the fact that Mrs. Seely's father married, as his second wife, Lady Jane Baring, daughter of the Earl of Northbrook.

For a time it looked as though the struggle would be a close one. A member who took part in it said that it was won by Mafeking; but it is generally supposed that the credit is due to Mrs. Seely's letter to the constituency. It was lithographed, and circulated everywhere in the Island. Never before in an electoral campaign did a more simple or touching letter prove a factor so potent in the victory of a candidate. After asking the electors to vote for her husband, Mrs. Seely went on to say, "I know how very much he would appreciate the honour of being selected by his friends and neighbours as member for the Isle of Wight, and you will realise how anxious I am for his success." The appeal was irresistible, and Major Seely was returned by a majority of over a thousand.

In times of transition like these Parliament reflects the seething in the popular mind. Familiar political names, familiar political distinctions, and familiar political principles are being swallowed up in the melting-pot of new ideas and new policies, and there is a breaking up of powers. That is why there are parties within parties at Westminster, and Mr. Balfour has gained the support of several Radicals, and Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman has gained the support of several Conservatives. When each side sees its way clearly, the old stable order of things will come about as a matter of course. At present matters political are rather mixed. The only other member who has done more than Major Seely to make this evident to popular perception is Mr. Winston Churchill. Both were returned in the Conservative interest, and both now sit on the Opposition benches. When a member crosses the floor of the House the incident is always marked; but in the case of these two able young men there were circumstances which made it positively dramatic.

Major Seely in particular disagrees with the Government on nearly every great issue of the day. He is one of the most stalwart opponents of Chinese labour in the Transvaal. On this question he is a thorn in the side of Mr. Lyttelton. He is also a Free Trader, so that he has no sympathy either with Mr. Balfour or Mr. Chamberlain in their Fiscal policy. As for the checks on Parliamentary eloquence devised of late years, the growth of party organisation, and the development of class interests, he believes that they are undermining individual liberty. He himself is eloquent witness that individual liberty has suffered less than he imagines. But in an address to the League of Young Liberals some time ago, he said that "the return of the Liberal Party would be the death-knell of these growing evils." He is, therefore, looking forward to the fall of the present Government. As his grandfather and father both sat in the House as Liberals, there is nothing curious in Major Seely's presence in the Opposition. The only curious thing is that he was elected in 1900 as a Conservative. His seeming inconsistency is, however, due to the times, and not to temperament; and in view of the visit of the French Fleet it is interesting to remember that he has received a Gold Medal of Honour from the French Government for saving life at sea.

---

Previous articles of Conservative Candidates in this series include:

| | |
|---|---|
| Mr. A. H. Burgoyne | September 10, 1904. |
| Sir V. Caillard, K.B. | October 1, 1904. |
| Mr. A. S. Benn | December 17, 1904. |
| Mr. A. Fell | February 11, 1905. |
| Mr. J. Kebty Fletcher | February 25, 1905. |
| Sir H. Johnston, K.C.B. | March 11, 1905. |
| Major Dalrymple White | April 15, 1905. |
| Mr. D. B. Hall | April 29, 1905. |
| Mr. P. Rose-Innes | May 13, 1905. |
| Colonel Welby | May 20, 1905. |
| Mr. Sanders | June 3, 1905. |
| Mr. Ion H. Benn | July 8, 1905. |

Previous articles of Labour Candidates in this series include:

| | |
|---|---|
| Mr. John Burns, M.P. | September 24, 1904. |
| Alderman C. W. Bowerman | January 14, 1905. |

Digitized by Google

The Cowes Week.

HOME again! would be quite a fitting expression of the feelings with which the great majority of yachtsmen are inspired as they drop anchor in Cowes Roads. Yachting and Cowes have become so closely associated that the mere mention of the former always seems to arouse thoughts or memories of the latter. A remark that one is interested in yachting always draws a reply, "Then you know Cowes well."

There may be other districts as charming. The Clyde, with panoramas of delightful scenery, changing with every few yards sailed; Belfast Lough with its rugged beauty; "sweet Dublin Bay"; Queenstown Harbour; Plymouth Sound, containing some of the finest views in Europe; picturesque Torbay and Dartmouth—all these and others have their attractions for yachtsmen, all of whom, however, seem to find a never-ending enjoyment in the placid beauties of the Solent. Some may miss the Clyde for a season, others may be unable to fit in the Irish regattas with their arrangements, others again may not remain in commission long enough to visit the Western ports; but no yachtsman would consider he had done the season if he missed Cowes Week.

In some quarters the Solent is spoken of in disparaging terms as a racing district. "If you try to cheat the tides you get on a sand-bank," is a remark one often hears applied to it, and yet races always draw good entries here. Then periodically during the past few years the Royal Yacht Squadron has been severely criticised as being antiquated in its methods, and not justifying its position in the sport; and yet it can always rely upon loyal support from members and others alike for its annual regatta.

The easy access to London tells very greatly in favour of the Solent as a yachting district throughout the year. Although some ninety miles separate Cowes from the metropolis, an excellent service of trains on the London and South Western Line enables those who cannot get away for a lengthened period to leave town in the morning, indulge in a few hours' racing, and return in the evening.

The position which Cowes Regatta occupies in the yachting world is, of course, due in a great measure to the fact that it takes prominent place in the calendar of social events. For many years it has been a proud boast that the anchorage in Cowes Roads during the week presents a sight to be seen nowhere else in the world, and the spectacle is truly a remarkable one. From Old Castle Point, westward to Egypt, a distance of two to three miles, are rows of the finest yachts afloat, including every type of craft in existence, from steam auxiliary vessels which a generation back were deemed magnificent ships to stately floating palaces, rivalling in size the liners of a few years ago; and from the dainty little rater to the beautiful big class vessels of various rigs, the whole containing a floating population for the week equal to that of a moderate-sized town.

Viewed from the purely yachting standpoint, there is no other district that can compare with the Solent in the number of historic contests which have taken place on its waters, and the trophies now sailed for annually during Cowes Week are regarded as the blue ribands of the British season. Apart from the value of the trophies then sailed for, an extra sporting value attaches to them, owing to the fact that the contestants always include the best boats of the season, and the entries for the various races usually far outnumber those obtained for similar contests at other ports, thus enhancing the merit of the victories.

Debenham, Kyde.

DUET

24-ft. linear rater. This boat was one of the latest designed by the late A. E. Payne, and is owned by Mrs. Schenley and Miss Cox, both well known in Solent yachting circles. She sails regularly in her class at the regattas in the Solent.

The week will open on Monday as usual with a series of matches under the Royal London burgee. The Squadron programme will open on Tuesday, on which day his Majesty's Cup will be sailed for. This is always a handicap race, open to yachts on the Squadron list—that is, owned by members. On the following day the big prize is the Emperor's Cup, presented by the German Emperor. There are special conditions attaching to this contest, which, however, is open to yachts of any club. Yachts in this race have to sail in cruising trim, which means that the crew of each vessel is limited to the number carried in ordinary cruising, and all boats have to be carried as on a cruise. The prizes presented by the town of Cowes will be sailed for on Thursday, and on Friday the Squadron regattas conclude with races for the 52-footers and South Coast class.

Races are provided for the 52-footers on three of the Squadron days; they also find a place in the Royal London programme on Monday, and the Royal Portsmouth Corinthian Club caters for them on Saturday, so that with five events in one week the principal racing class of the year is amply provided for.

The week this year will be more than usually attractive from the popular point of view owing to the presence of the French Fleet at Spithead, and doubtless more than ordinarily large crowds will be drawn to Cowes in the daily steam-ships, though, to tell the truth, Cowes residents do not regard "trippers" with any great degree of favour, at any rate during the "Week." It is some years since there was any particular foreign interest attaching to the Cowes Regatta, the last occasions being those when the German Emperor was present in his fine steam yacht Hohenzollern. One year he was accompanied by some German battle-ships.

In years gone by the tricolour was a much more familiar ensign in yachts visiting Cowes than has been the case during more recent times. Napoleon III. became a member of the Squadron in 1859, and the ex-Empress Eugenie still visits the port, and is usually present during the week in her yacht Thistle. The King's famous old cutter Britannia will once more be in commission, and has undergone a fairly complete overhaul preparatory to fitting out. Although it is now some years since she took part in any race, she is always in commission for the Cowes Week for short cruises, and as a rule she is out every day with a large party of guests on board. When Britannia is under way with the King on board she flies his Admiral's flag at the truck, and many a steamer crowded with excursionists passes her, the passengers in ignorance of the fact that it is the old Royal cutter they are passing with the King on board, as, being unacquainted with the niceties of flag etiquette, they do not expect to find a

Digitized by Google

YACHTING AT COWES.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Robertson, Gourock.

BRITOMART

52-footer. Built on the Clyde this year from A. Mylne's design for Mr. W. P. Burton, an enthusiastic yachtsman, who always sails his boat himself. Mr. Burton has for many seasons been one of the principal supporters of this class, and has owned boats designed by Payne and Fife, in addition to the one in which he hoists his flag this year. The class numbers four yachts this season, but racing has suffered to a certain degree by reason of several mishaps to gear in the different boats.

Digitized by Google

YACHTING AT COWES.

Robertson, Gourock.

MOYANA

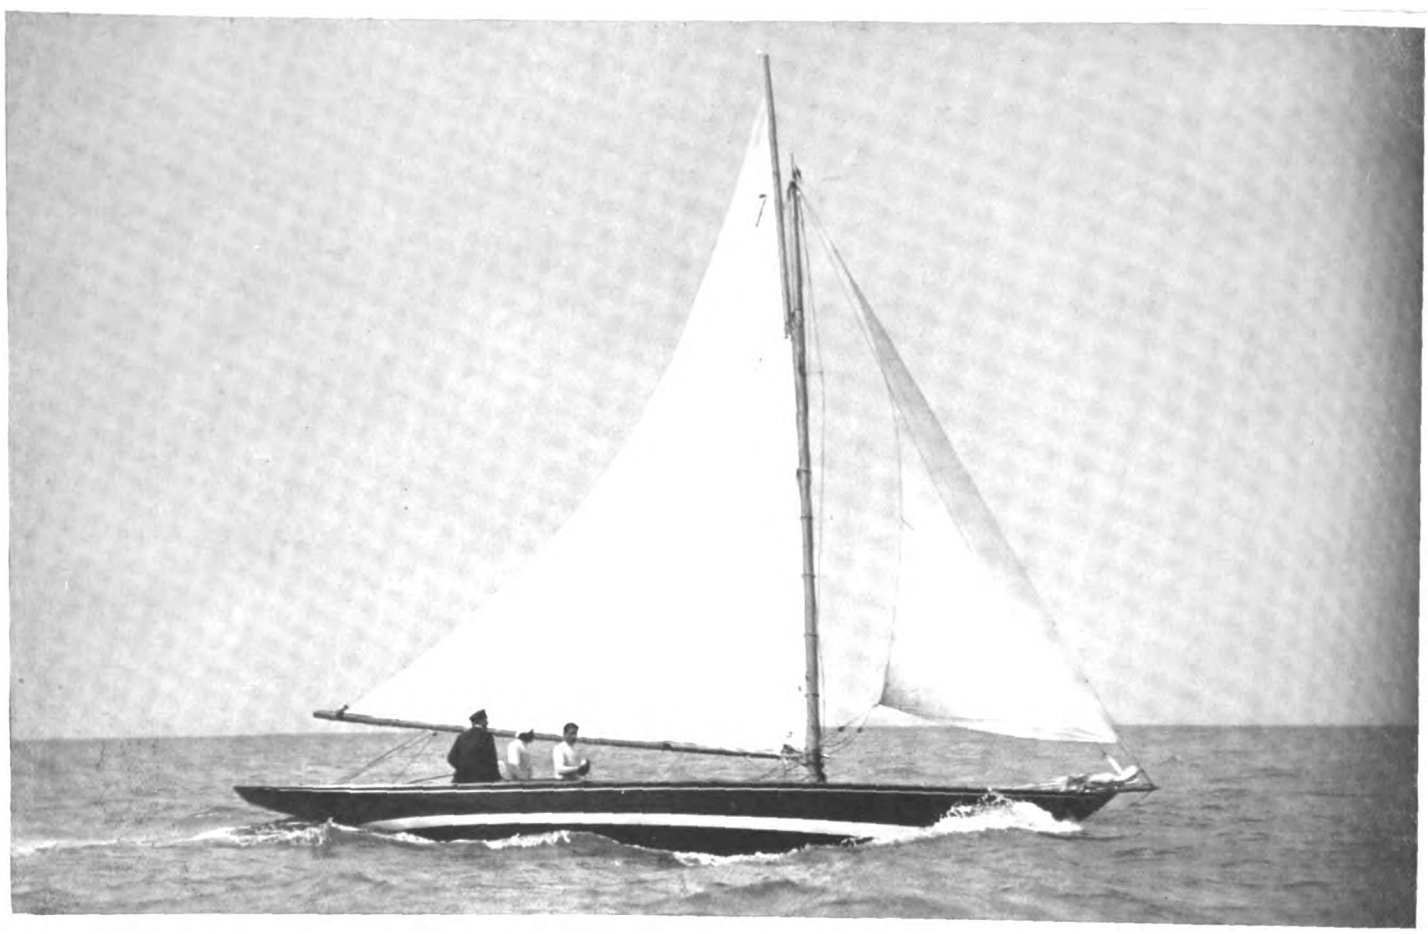
52-footer. This boat, belonging to Mr J. W. Leuchars, is the oldest in the class, but has made a remarkably good record during the present season. She was built in 1903 by McAllister of Dumbarton, from A. Mylne's design. Her success this year is all the more creditable, when it is considered that she is opposed by two new boats, Britomart and Sonya, the latter built in America this year from Herreshoff's design, specially for racing in this class. She sails regularly at all the races for her class at the various regattas round the coast.

Digitized by Google



LALAGE

A. Debenham and Co.

24-ft. Y.R.A. class yacht, racing regularly in the Solent class regattas. She was built this year to the order of Mr. C. Rivett-Carnac, who, two years ago, sailed in the South Coast class.

W. U. Kirk and Sons.

NYLEPTHA II.

Y.R.A. 24-footer. She is owned by Mr. W. W. Greenhill, and sails regularly at all the regattas in the Solent. The class provides some of the most interesting racing in the district.

Digitized by Google

THE COWES WEEK.

Royal personage sailing in a vessel under any but the Royal Standard. John Carter, the captain, in whose hands the cutter made her remarkable record, still stands by the old vessel, and is in charge every year for her short term of commission.

An old opponent of Britannia's is at present in British waters. This is Ailsa, which, under Mr. Barclay Walker's colours, sailed many a close race with the Royal cutter. She has been in America for some few years, and was a competitor in the race across the Atlantic last May. She, however, has not remained in commission, and is going into winter quarters at Southampton. Sir Maurice Fitzgerald's yawl Satanita will be seen in Cowes Roads. She was contemporary with Britannia in her racing days, but has not raced for several seasons.

The cruising yachts which will be taking part in the various handicaps of the week are all well-known boats, the most modern of which race at various important regattas round the coast. Amongst these may be numbered Sir James Pender's Brynhild, Mr. Myles B. Kennedy's White Heather, Dr. Douglas Kerr's Valdora, Mr. A. K. Stothert's Rosamond (all yawls), and Mr. C. T. Cayley's schooner Adela, to name a few of the more prominent big vessels. Herr Max Guilleaume's schooner Clara usually pays a visit to the Solent, and three other German craft were present at the Dover regattas—Navahoe, Susanne, and Thérèse; but at the time of writing it is impossible to state definitely whether these will come to Cowes, though there is reason to hope that they will.

The quartette of 52-footers — Moyana, Maymon, Sonya, and Britomart—will make some fine racing, and little, if any, of the keenness is worn off the interest by the matches already sailed during the season, as no followers of the sport believe that either of the two new boats has as yet shown her best form. Mishaps, more particularly in Sonya's case, have been too frequent to allow of proper tuning up; so that the performances of these craft will be watched with almost as much interest as though they had not already engaged in competition, and it is to be hoped that their racing will not be spoiled by any further accidents. With a clear week's rest from racing before the opening of Cowes Week, there will be opportunity of overhauling gear, and getting everything into the best possible trim for the long series of regattas immediately ahead. There will be about a dozen races for the class before the Solent season closes.

With fine weather, the success of the week will be assured, and although there will be some who may refer to the decadence of yachting as compared with some former years, yet Cowes Week, 1905, will not have to be written down as the least interesting on record.

CORINTHIAN.

FIXTURES.

COWES WEEK.

August 7.—Royal London Yacht Club Regatta.
Royal Yacht Squadron.
August 8.—His Majesty's Cup, for Squadron yachts.
Race for 52-footers.
August 9.—The Emperor's Cup, for yachts over 40 tons.
Handicap for yachts over 24 tons and not exceeding 50 tons.
Race for 52-footers.
August 10.—The Town Prizes for yachts over 100 tons.
Handicap for yachts over 40 tons and not exceeding 100 tons.
Race for South Coast class.
August 11.—Handicap for yachts over 100 tons.
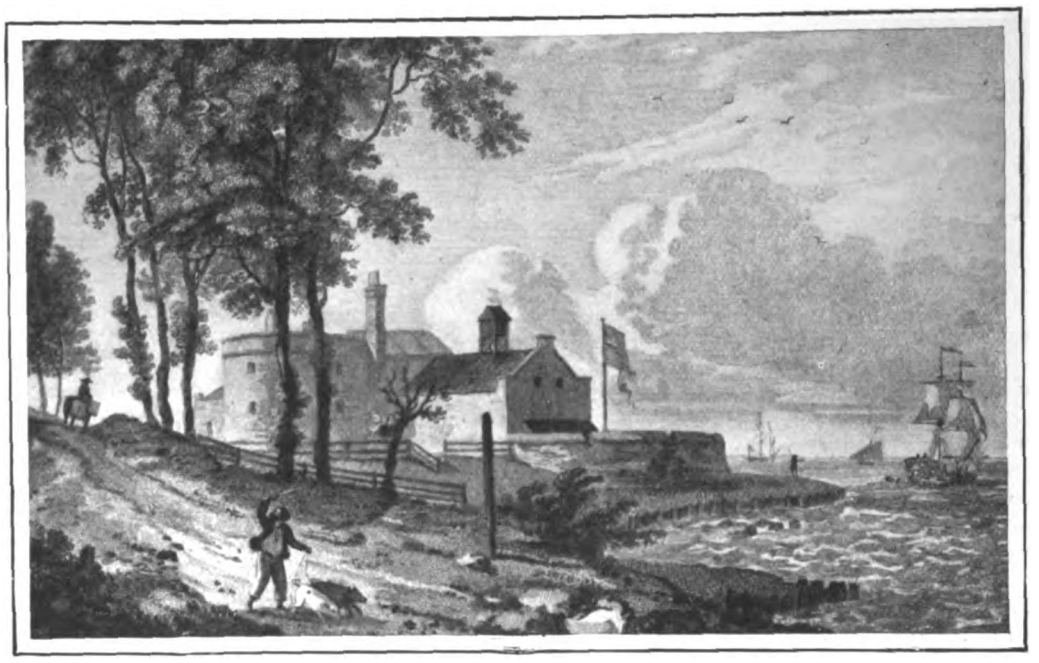
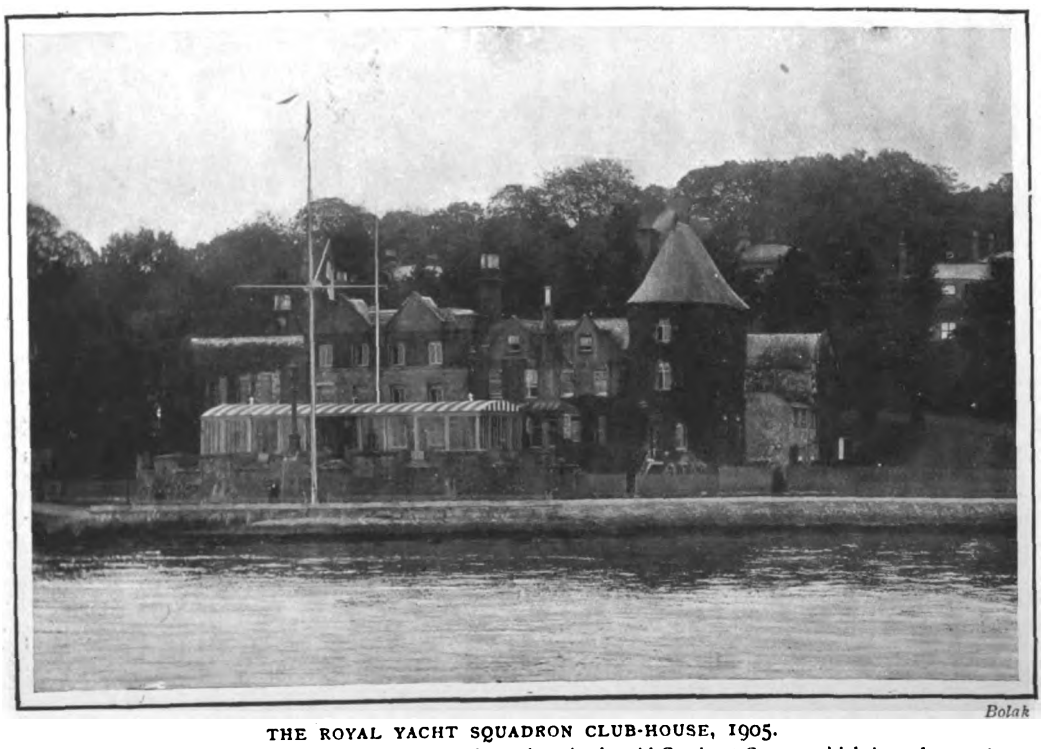
Countess of Dudley's Challenge Cup for 52-footers.



COWES CASTLE IN 1780.
From a contemporary painting by P. Sandby, R.A.

THE CASTLE AND PARADE IN 1823.
From a contemporary print.



Bolak

THE ROYAL YACHT SQUADRON CLUB-HOUSE, 1905.
Many and various are the changes which have taken place in the old Castle at Cowes, which is to-day the headquarters of the Premier Yacht Club of the World.

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

IN THE GARDEN OF ENGLAND.

THERE are probably few of us who, at some time or other, have not paid a fleeting visit to the Isle of Wight. A more beautiful or restful spot wherein to pass one's holiday now or in the autumn would indeed be difficult to find within so easy reach of the metropolis. Although nearly a century has elapsed since Sir Walter Scott described it as "that beautiful island which he who once sees never forgets, through whatever part of the wide world his future path may lead him," there yet remains quite a considerable area untouched by the hand of the improver. Its attractions are so numerous and varied that the tastes of practically every class of holiday-maker are well provided for.

Kirk, Freshwater.

FRESHWATER BAY.

The gate to Freshwater, near which is Farringford, the late Lord Tennyson's home. Freshwater Bay is one of the breeziest places in the Isle of Wight, and in a gale the sea dashes on to the front with tremendous force.

For those who wish to see about the island as much as possible within a prescribed time, Ryde, of course, is an admirable centre. It should be scarcely necessary to mention that one has the choice of two routes, namely, the "South Western" from Waterloo and the "Brighton" from Victoria and London Bridge. An excellent summer service is maintained between the island and mainland, the run to Ryde being accomplished in less than three hours from town. For the convenience of those visiting the western portion of the island, including Yarmouth, Totland Bay, and Freshwater, the South Western Company also run a number of daily expresses to Lymington, on the Hampshire coast, whence steamboats cross to the island, landing one either at the Totland Bay Hotel Company's private pier, or at Yarmouth, whence the journey can be continued by train to Freshwater. The journey by this route occupies roughly four hours.

Apart from its inherent attractions for the holiday-maker, Ryde has long been the chosen spot of yachtsmen, a fact that is fully testified to by the large number of smart yachts usually to be seen lazily riding at anchor in the Solent. The Royal Victoria Yacht Club, probably the best known club in the world, under the patronage of the King, has long made its headquarters here. The commodious club-house lies a little to the westward of the town. At one time a favourite resort of the élite, Ryde's popularity as a holiday centre has to some extent diminished during the past few years. Much of the ordinary tourist traffic has been diverted to such favourite watering-places as Sandown, Shanklin, and Ventnor, where the conditions are even better suited to those requiring rest and entire change of air.

Frith.

BONCHURCH, NEAR VENTNOR.

One of the leading beauty spots in the Isle of Wight. Bonchurch is a very favourite excursion from Ventnor, and no visitor to the Island who has the opportunity should miss seeing this quaint little village.

Digitized by Google

Photochrom.

TOTLAND BAY.

From Totland Bay in Wester Wight one may make some delightful excursions to Alum Bay and some of the lesser-known villages in the north-west corner of the island. Totland Bay s connected with he mainland by a good service of steamboats.

Throughout the island the hotel accommodation leaves little to be desired, and in Ryde the Marine would be difficult to beat. Practically every room commands a view of the Solent, and Mr. Frank Band has a well-earned reputation for the excellence of his cuisine. If we regard Ryde solely in the light of an excursion centre, it would be difficult to beat. The Isle of Wight and the Isle of Wight Central Railways run to practically every point of interest in the island. One of the most popular excursions from Ryde is to go by steamer round the island. The boats keep so close to shore as to afford the voyageur good views of Osborne, Cowes, Totland and Alum Bays, the Needles, Ventnor, Bonchurch, and Sandown. The trip usually takes from six to seven hours, and its cost is extremely reasonable. For a modest shilling another pleasant day trip can be made along the north coast of the island, to Yarmouth and Totland and Alum Bays; while those who enjoy a good blow at sea will find the short cruise to Bournemouth most exhilarating. A number of well-appointed coaches leave Ryde daily for all parts of the island. This is by far the most enjoyable way of viewing the lovely inland scenery of the "Garden of England." For the younger members of the family, Sandown Bay, with its great wealth of firm sands and excellent sea-bathing, is, perhaps, the most popular place in the island; moreover, it has the reputation for more hours of bright sunshine than any other spot round the coast. There are good golf links within easy distance of the town, and first-rate accommodation is offered to visitors in the numerous hotels and boarding-houses.

Shanklin, one of the most picturesque spots in the British Isles, whose romantic scenery can scarcely be surpassed, is reached on the way to Ventnor. Like Sandown, it, too, has beautiful smooth, firm sands, with a pier and countless other attractions. Continuing along the coast, Ventnor is the next town of importance reached. Scarcely should it be necessary to dwell long upon this charming spot, which is perhaps one of the most celebrated winter resorts for invalids in Great Britain.

Mention has already been made of two routes to the Isle of Wight—one viâ Portsmouth and Ryde, the other by way of Lymington and Yarmouth. There is a third from Stokes Bay, which will be found very convenient to a considerable number of travellers. Passenger steamers also start from Southampton, and this journey, occupying about an hour, is the most interesting of the four. It will thus be recognised that passengers have ample choice in the way of reaching the island. Once there they may take advantage of train, coach, or motor for their tours.

Photochrom.

SANDOWN BAY.

Situated in the south-east corner of the island, Sandown Bay has the double advantage of being very warm in winter and getting some cool breezes in summer. The beautiful sands and clear water at Sandown Bay make sea-bathing a great attraction.

Digitized by Google

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

F. W. Burford.

"A MESSAGE FROM MARS."

This popular play has just completed a successful revival at the Avenue Theatre, with Mr. Charles Hawtrey and Mr. Arthur Williams in their original parts. Mr. Hawtrey is to appear at the Criterion Theatre during this month, and will then go to the Haymarket for some time.

ON THE STAGE OF THE NEW YORK HIPPODROME.

A scene from the grand spectacular production of the West Point Military Academy, at the time of the outbreak of the Civil War. The New York Hippodrome, which claims to be the largest theatre in the world, was only recently opened.

Digitized by Google

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

Foulsham and Banfield.

MISS GERTIE MILLAR.

Despite the obvious presence of summer, "The Spring Chicken" continues to chortle nightly at the Gaiety with all the vigour and vivacity we are accustomed to expect at that house; and though the holiday season has removed one or two prime favourites from the cast for a time, others remain to bear the burden and heat of the day. Our illustration shows Miss Gertie Millar in one of the many bewitching costumes she wears in the play.

Digitized by Google

French Fleets in English Waters.

PREVIOUS PACIFIC INVASIONS OF PORTSMOUTH BY THE NAVY OF FRANCE

IT is fourteen years since last a French Fleet paid this country a visit, as the small squadrons which came over to represent the Republic at the time of the Diamond Jubilee and on the occasion of the Coronation Review can hardly be ranked as visiting Fleets; and Vice-Admiral Caillard is, therefore, the immediate successor of Admiral Gervais, who commanded the French vessels, with his flag in the "Marengo," which came in the year of the great Naval Exhibition at Chelsea, to pay a visit to Queen Victoria at Osborne.

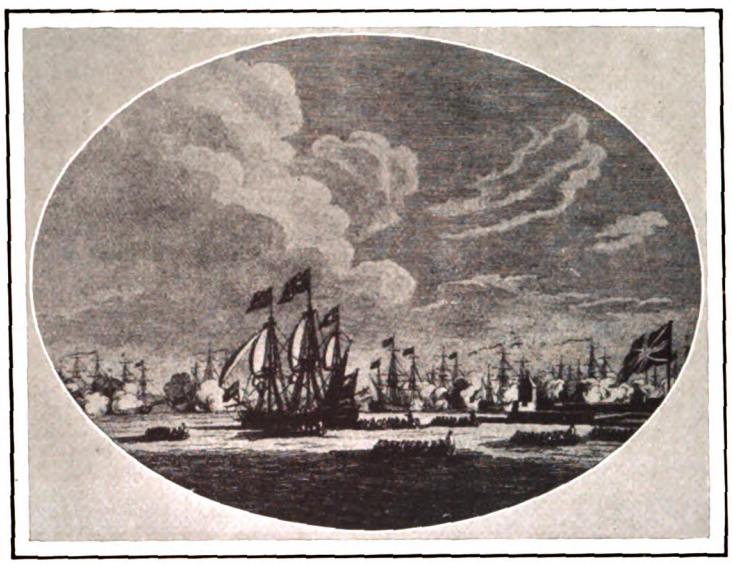
But it must be confessed that visits from French Fleets have been less frequent during the past century than one would have wished. Single ships have, of course, frequently called at our Naval ports, and at other points on the coast, and have everywhere been made very welcome; but visits of ceremony, such as that of next week, have been all too few.

The earliest record of a visit of a French Fleet to England on a peaceful mission is in 1672, when the London Gazette contained an account of the visit of Charles II. and his Queen to the combined English and French Fleets in English waters.

In 1844, two years after Queen Victoria held her first great Naval review, a Fleet crossed to Spithead on a peaceable mission and was well received; but no other visit was paid for twenty-one years, when the Comte de Bouet-Willaumez brought his Fleet over to repay the call made at Cherbourg and Brest the previous week by a British Fleet. On the occasion of the 1844 visit, the first French paddle-steamer was seen in English waters, and it was from her that our "Terrible" was designed.

The 1865 visit only covered the last three days of August, but during that time a great many functions were carried out, and the visitors given a very good time.

Twenty-six years were destined to elapse before a third visit was paid to our shores, and this was the famous week which it is the intention of all to eclipse on the present occasion. Fourteen years makes many gaps in the higher ranks, and of those who held the first place in the festivities of 1891, very few are left to see the fraternisation of the Fleets in the year of the Trafalgar centenary.

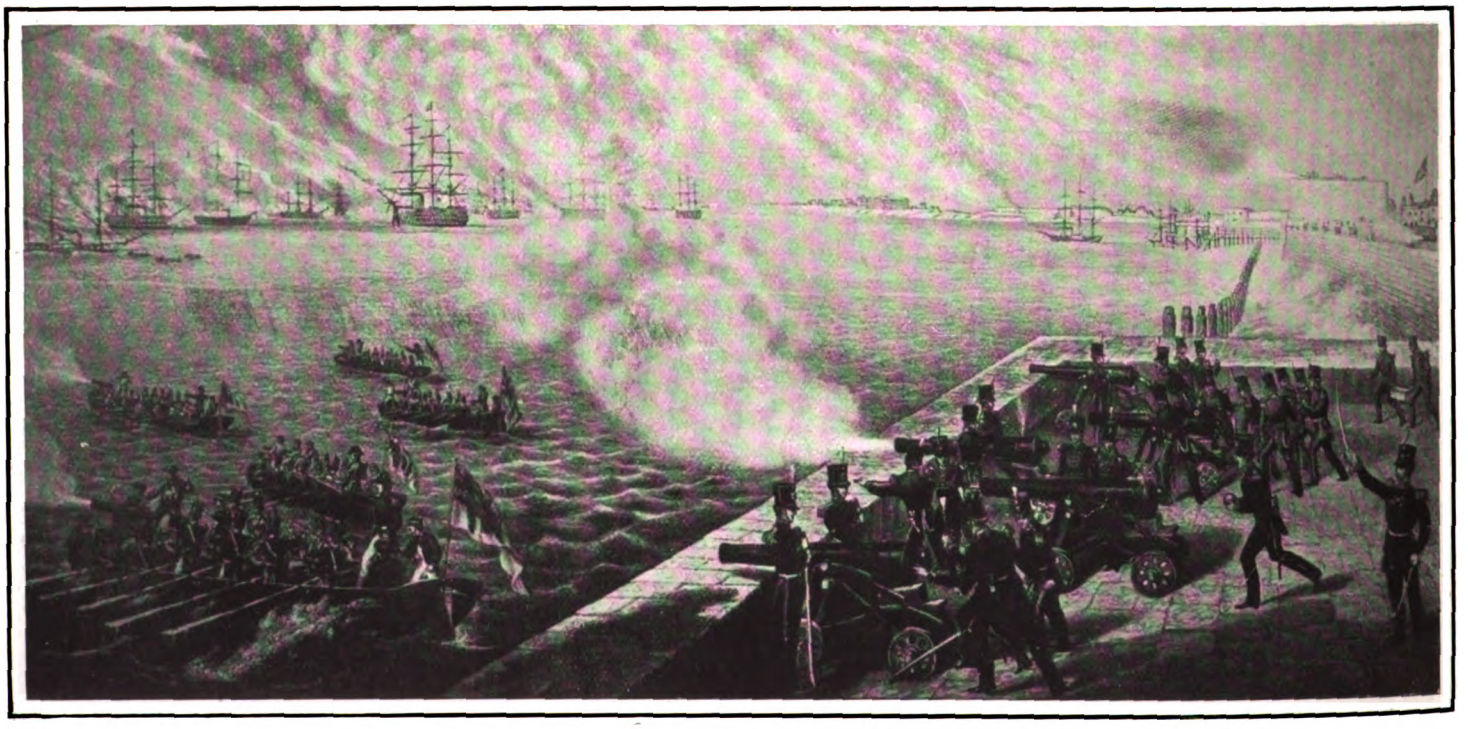


A NAVAL REVIEW IN 1794.

From the frontspiece to a poem published in the same year. It was inscribed to Admiral Sir Charles Saunders, and was written by the Rev. Robert English, "late chaplain to his Majesty's ship the 'Royal George.'"

The Fleet which came under Admiral Gervais's orders was composed of the "Marengo," 7,750 tons, flag-ship; the "Marceau," a barbette ship, then only four years old, of 10,851 tons; the "Requin," two years older, an iron and steel barbette ship of 7,200 tons; and the "Furieux," of much the same design, but launched in 1883, and displacing only 5,700 tons. In addition to these were the cruiser "Surcouf," of 1,848 tons, the "Lance," torpedo gunboat, and two torpedo-boats. The figures given for these ships show more than could any amount of argument the enormous strides that have been made in Naval architecture during the past twenty-five years.

The Fleet that Vice-Admiral Sir Michael Culme-Seymour commanded included the battleships "Nile," "Rodney," "Anson" (flag), "Howe," and "Camperdown" (flag), with the cruisers "Immortalité," "Aurora," "Pallas," and a number of gunboats and small craft. To recapitulate the fêtes and functions that then took place would be unnecessary. The programme this time will be very much the same, and this the fourth visit of our neighbours to our shores since those stirring times when we were more ready to cut each other's throats than to drink to one another's health and prosperity, will no doubt live in the annals of Portsmouth and of the Navy as one of the most enjoyable and most historical weeks in the many such which we have on record. Vice-Admiral Caillard and his colleagues hold a high place among contemporary Naval officers. We must make their welcome worthy of their rank. F.



THE NAVAL REVIEW AT SPITHEAD IN 1856.

At the conclusion of the Russian War Queen Victoria held a grand review of the Fleet, which numbered over 200 vessels. After the review the screw line of battle-ships and the gun-boats manœuvred, and there was a sham attack on Southsea Castle.

(From a Baxter colour-print.)

Digitized by Google

THE CRICKET SEASON.

Copyright.

H. W. PERSSE, HANTS.

At the beginning of the present season Hants hoped against hope they had found the long-sought-for treasure—a fast bowler. They are not, by the way, alone in this particular hunt. H. W. Persse, a young amateur, gave much promise, and besides getting good wickets, showed he could hold catches in the slips. He has not quite maintained early promise, and though there may be reason to fear that novelty got him several wickets, he is still young, and may train on to creditably fill the gaps caused by Hesketh Prichard's inability to play regularly.

Copyright.

T. RUSSELL, ESSEX.

This very popular professional gets his well-deserved benefit this week at the Essex County Ground, Leyton. He originally appeared for Essex as a fast bowler. Chance one day gave him the gloves in a club match, and for a dozen years he "kept" Essex's wicket, most of the time to C. J. Kortright at one end and Pickett—now "coach" at Clifton College—at the other. Few, if any, wicket-keepers have had such an ordeal. For very many years on the ground staff at Lord's, there is not to-day a more popular professional than old Tom Russell.

Copyright.

COX, SUSSEX.

More than one supporter of Sussex would like to see highest honours awarded this indefatigable slow left-hand bowler, who has a very telling faster swerving delivery. Cox suffered some seasons ago when Ranjitsinhji led the fortunes of Sussex from his skipper's depreciation of his (Cox's) value. Since that fine all-rounder, C. B. Fry, has been in command "George" gets quite his share of bowling to do. Over 100 wickets annually fall to him. And he is a batsman of much better value than is generally supposed to be the case.

Foster.

C. M. WELLS, MIDDLESEX.

In the game for Russell's benefit will be found one of Middlesex's powerful August reinforcement, to wit, Cyril M. Wells. Like his schoolfellow, Jimmy Douglas, Wells finds his profession—he is a master at Eton—prevents him from playing before the end of July or early in August. Never did Wellington wait more anxiously for Blücher than Gregor McGregor does annually for August. A fine forcing bat, first-rate slow bowler, and great fieldsman, profession alone prevents C. M. Wells from getting his England cap.

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

SPACE will hardly permit of dealing in detail with the entries for the Derby and Oaks of next year, but it is very satisfactory to notice that in both cases the list is headed by the nominations of his Majesty. It is somewhat curious that no engagement for either of the great classics has been made by M. E. Blanc, although his famous stallion Flying Fox will be represented in the Derby by two of Mr. H. Cholmondeley's entries and one of Mr. B. A. Brice's. Lord Clonmell is responsible for three Gallinules, and half-a-dozen entries stand in Lord Derby's name. Lord Falmouth and the Duke of Portland are well represented, and Colonel Hall-Walker has one by Count Schomberg, two by Gallinule, and fillies by Persimmon and Isinglass to do battle for him.

With a note of preparation for Goodwood in the air, the principal racing event of the past week was the Liverpool Meeting, at which the success of horses trained by Mr. George Lambton has constituted quite a remarkable feature. A steady downpour of rain, however acceptable from a trainer's point of view, had a somewhat deterrent influence upon the general public, and the curtain drew up to a comparatively scanty audience when the horses went down to the post for the Windermere All-Aged Plate, which fell to Mr. H. Lindemere's Salford. Cyllene was credited with another winner when Lord Durham's Cyrus won the Seaforth High Handicap, after which the serious business of the day commenced with the Great Lancashire Breeders' Produce Stakes, with the result of which the fielders must have been hugely pleased, for although the actual favourite was Garnock at 5 to 2, there was any amount of money forthcoming for Goldwin at 3 to 1, whereas the actual winner, Anniversary II., started at 8 to 1, and was clearly lucky to beat Goldwin by a head. The finish of the race was by no means devoid of interest, for to all appearances Dillon, who is an exceptionally careful and capable horseman, thought he had won his race, and was only watching the Perfect Dream colt, when Maher shot up on the inside and robbed him of the spoils.

Mr. G. Thursby rode a really good race in the St. George Stakes of 1,726-sovs., which he won on Standen by half a length from Pure Crystal, with Lord Stanley's Stadtholder close up third. In a scrimmage before the barrier went up Higgs, the rider of Shilfa, had his heel cut open by a kick from Stadtholder, and by permission of the stewards his place was taken by Halsey, who, curiously enough, was within an ace of meeting with a similar accident. Only two runners came out for the Selton Plate, and Lord Derby's Altcar had no difficulty in disposing of Palace Yard.

On the second day of the meeting Mr. G. Thursby again rode a most determined race in the Knowsley Dinner Stakes, but had to put up with a head beating at the hands of O. Madden on Lord Derby's Persinus, but it should be remembered that he was giving 20-lb. to the winner. Mr. Dunne's Irish-bred Earla Mor won the rich Molyneux Plate from a field of good horses, with Sweet Katie and Countermark filling second and third places respectively, and the performance of the winner should draw the attention of breeders to his sire, Desmond, who is by St. Simon out of L'Abbesse de Jouarre. The Mersey Stakes of 680-sovs. fell to Sir John Thursby's Bill of the Play.

With the advent of "Cup Day" the tameness which had characterised the opening days of the Liverpool Meeting vanished from the proceedings, and both actors and audience woke up in a positively startling fashion. There was plenty of speculation about the great race of the day, and in the actual betting Andover, Whistling Crow, Song Thrush, and Bachelor's Button were quoted in the order named, with Chaucer standing at 12 to 1. Fifteen horses went down to the post, and certainly no one would deny the "class" of the runners. The white flag went up at 2.50, but owing to a good deal of bad behaviour on the part of Vril, Powder Puff, and Bibiani, there was a delay of nearly a quarter of an hour before the horses were despatched on their journey. As soon as they settled down Chaucer showed slightly in front, and remained there for a quarter of a mile, when Song Thrush took up the running, and swept round the bend in front of Chaucer, Vril, and Whistling Crow. On they came, with but little alteration in their places, till about a quarter of a mile from home, when Chaucer took his place to win his race, and came on from Song Thrush and Whistling Crow, with Sun Bonnet creeping up. Neither of the two latter could make any impression on the leaders, and Chaucer, drawing away at every stride, won easily by three lengths from Song Thrush, with Sun Bonnet just beating Whistling Crow for third place. Lord Derby's colours are so popular and so much respected that winners and losers alike were pleased to see the cup pass into his possession; but the victory must have been somewhat of a surprise even to the trainer of the winner, as hitherto Chaucer has been looked upon as being anything but a stayer; in fact, he had not previously won over any distance beyond a mile. However, he was very leniently handicapped, and Wheatley made plenty of use of his advantage in the matter of weight. A big entry for the Croxteth Plate dwindled down to four runners; but if the field was small, the excitement over the race was great. Sight jumped off with the lead directly the barrier went up, and held his place till nearing home, when Airlie and Wolfshall challenged right and left, and a battle royal took place between the three. Wheatley, Saxby, and Maher all rode their hardest, and there was no sign of flinching on the part of their mounts; it was anybody's race, and as they swept past the post, no one could even guess which had won. The judge could not separate Wolfshall and Sight, and his verdict was that the dead-heaters had finished a short head in front of Airlie. There was no division of the stakes, and in the run off Wolfshall waited on Sight until the distance, when he drew out and won by a length. Lord Derby tried to repeat his victory of last year in the Atlantic Stakes, but could get no nearer than third with Altcar, the race falling to Mr. Neumann's Nirvanah, who beat Rievaulx by a good length and a-half. Mr. J. L. Dugdale won the Jolliffe Two Year Old Stakes with Picton, steered by Mr. G. Thursby.

CAURIRE.

Copyright

THE LIVERPOOL CUP: AT THE POST.

This year there were fifteen runners in the race for the Liverpool Cup, the field being the largest for a number of years.

Copyright.

THE WINNER OF THE LIVERPOOL CUP.

Lord Derby's Chaucer, by St. Simon—Canterbury Pilgrim.

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES.

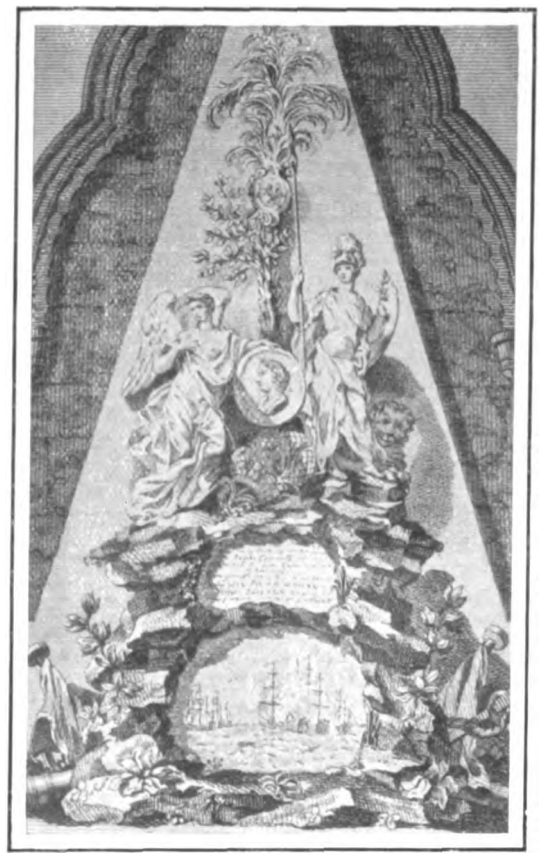
THE STORY OF THE THREATENED NAVAL MEMORIAL.

THERE may have been those who have looked upon the opposition which has been offered to the removal, and the inevitable damaging, of the monument erected in Westminster Abbey to Captain James Cornewall as a mere outbreak of family amour-propre, and who hold that the Dean of Westminster's statement that the consent of the family was obtained for the removal of the monument satisfactorily disposes of all objections. But this matter is not a family one. It concerns the nation, for, as Mr. Julian Corbett has so justly observed, Captain Cornewall was the first to set the right example, and he was the first to receive the reward, which so many after him won by the inspiration of his great spirit. For though his superior officer's conduct in the battle off Toulon in 1744 was long the subject of political discussion and party dispute, Cornewall's bravery called forth nothing but encomiums.

The battle of Toulon was fought on February 11, 1744, and has been truly enough described as a "feeble and disreputable" affair. The allied French and Spanish Fleet under De Court, a veteran of eighty years, and Navarro was composed of twenty-seven vessels, and had Lestock obeyed the signals of Mathews, the British Commander-in-Chief, there is no doubt that the result would have been an overwhelming victory for the British arms. But Mathews was left in the lurch by his second in command, who pleaded subsequently that the Admiral's signals were contradictory, and only half the available force was engaged in the fight.

Mathews in the "Namur" tackled the "Real" (100), Navarro's flag-ship, and Rear-Admiral Rowley, in the "Barfleur," attacked De Court's flag-ship, the "Terrible." Mathews was ably supported, in the words of an old chronicler, by his seconds, the "Marlborough" (Captain Cornewall) and the "Norfolk" (Captain Forbes); and to Rowley's aid went the "Princess Caroline," in command of Captain Osborne, and the "Berwick," under Hawke, who with Cornewall did most to stem



THE CORNEWALL MONUMENT.

The first Naval memorial erected by vote of Parliament, which it is now proposed to move.

the tide of defeat. The fight lasted all day, and it was a terribly battered squadron that welcomed the arrival of the night. In three hours' fighting 500 men were killed in the Spanish flag-ship, and the "Marlborough's" loss was 171 officers and men, including her captain. Early in the fight Cornewall had both his legs shot off, but he received his death blow from a spar, when the main and mizzen masts of the "Marlborough" were shot away. Lieutenant Cornewall, his nephew, took command of the vessel after the captain's death, and he, too, lost a limb in the action, his right arm being shot away.

Of Captain Cornewall a brother officer wrote soon after the battle: "Courage was far from being his only endowment; his genius and knowledge were equal to any task that could be set him in his profession; few persons came up to him, and none surpassed him." Had he lived, there seems little reason to doubt that he would have played as prominent a part in the Naval history of the next twenty-five years as Hawke. We perhaps realise too little to-day what it meant, in the days when Naval personnel was impressed and of very rough calibre, to have men like Hawke and Cornewall to lead, and that which Nelson both did and put into words, Cornewall was content to do. To George II.'s recognition Hawke owed his preferment, and Cornewall his memorial. And we cannot forget that the monument to Captains Hutt and Harvey, two of the heroes of the Glorious First of June, was broken up some time back, part being re-erected in Eastney Church, near Sandwich. That, again, was with the consent of the family.

If it be necessary to move the Cornewall memorial now, would not Trafalgar Square be a fitting place to re-erect it? There it would be in appropriate company, and would be more in the public eye even than it is in the Abbey. But to allow it to be lost, or to be hidden in some unseen corner, would be little short of a national disgrace.

W. M. Crockett.

SPORT AT THE ROYAL NAVAL ENGINEERING COLLEGE.

In the big swimming bath on the occasion of the annual display. Competitors negotiating the second obstacle in the obstacle race.

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

OUR illustration shows the gateway of Sir Walter Scott's house at Abbotsford, and is taken from Messrs. A. and C. Black's latest picture-book, "Abbotsford," painted by William Smith, jun., and described by the Rev. W. S. Crockett. Mr. Crockett—who must not be confounded with Mr. S. R. Crockett, the novelist—is minister of a parish in Peeblesshire, and has written a number of works on Scott and his country (including "The Scott Country," in Messrs. Black's series). He tells in a graphic and interesting manner the story of Abbotsford, that palace "built of ink"; and Mr. Smith's pictures are admirable, showing, as they do, a little warmth and colour of a country which most people think of, for some reason, as cold and grey. No author is so closely identified with his home as Scott with Abbotsford. It contains the story of his rise to matchless success, his heyday, and the blow that saddened all the late years of that noble life. To it his heart turned in exile; it was the very expression of the main characteristics of his great mind. You cannot know Scott without knowing Abbotsford, and you cannot know Abbotsford without knowing Scott. Mr. Crockett's letterpress and Mr. Smith's pictures are an admirable introduction to, and reminder of, both.

Abbotsford.

* * *

LORD BROOKE, the son and heir of the Earl of Warwick, spent nine months with the Russian Army in Manchuria, and followed the campaign as a soldier, joining the Russian forces not long after the loss of the Yalu, and leaving them some three weeks before the battle of Mukden. It was inevitable, perhaps, that he should write a book about his experiences; but there is always room for so modest, graphic, and cool-headed a book as his, "An Eye-witness in Manchuria," which has been published by Mr. Eveleigh Nash. Clearly Lord Brooke watched the campaign with a professional eye, and drew his own conclusions on the strategy employed, the worth of the troops, and their chance of success. He has nothing but praise for the Russian soldier, and not nearly so much of it for the Russian officer. He tells, in fact, the old story, but with a freshness that will make his book acceptable to many who are not specialists in military matters, and are, perhaps, a little tired of reading about the war.

Lord Brooke in Manchuria.

* * *

CONNOISSEURS in cookery have always told us that we make but poor use in England of the fruits of the earth, which generously goes on supplying us with a lot of good vegetable food we never have the enterprise to use. The truth becomes still more clear on turning to the large volume on "The Vegetable Garden." The authors of the work are MM. Vilmorin-Andrieux of Paris, and the English edition is published under the direction of Mr. W. Robinson by Mr. Murray. The full title will give an idea of the scope of a volume which no owner of a vegetable garden can henceforth afford to be without—"Illustrations, descriptions, and culture of the garden vegetables of cold and temperate climates"—and the book claims to be the first book in any language which classifies, describes, and illustrates the products of the vegetable garden. The importance of the vegetable garden to the whole question of food reform is pointed out in Mr. Robinson's able preface, and the book gives a vast amount of indispensable information.

The Vegetable Garden.

* * *

THE new golfing story hails from America. Its title is "John Henry Smith"; its author, Mr. Frederick Upham Adams; its illustrator ("for Mr. Smith"), Mr. A. B. Frost; and its publishers, Messrs. Hutchinson. It is capital fun; we can even imagine it interesting people who do not play golf. The conversion of Mr. Smith, by golf, from misogynism to love is the theme of the book, and it is Grace Harding, at once a pretty girl and a good golfer, who contrives the change. Incidentally Mr. Smith makes money, and the curtain rings down (at St. Andrews) on a very happy couple. There are some capital pictures by Mr. Frost, who has a strong sense of humour of his own to match that of the author, and the last picture is one that will appeal to all who have a golf-maniac in the family. Harding père, gazing at Vesuvius, remarks that it is quite a bunker, but that with a little more practice he believes he can carry it!

A Golfing Romance.

THE GATEWAY, ABBOTSFORD.

One of the illustrations from "Abbotsford," painted by W. Smith, jun., and described by the Rev. W. S. Crockett. (A. and C. Black.)

* * *

MR. JOHN LONG has acquired the rights of all Nat Gould's new stories. We have before us two editions of a new novel, "One of a Mob," in cloth at 2s. 6d., and in the familiar "yellow-back" illustrated covers at 2s. It is a capital story of life in Queensland, racing, gold-digging, and other familiar elements beloved of Mr. Gould's many readers. In August Mr. Long will publish "The Selling Plater," and in October "The Lady Trainer."

Nat Gould's Stories.

* * *

IT is announced by Messrs. Sampson Low that the 1905 issue of Mr. Fred T. Jane's "All the World's Fighting Ships" will be ready at the end of this month. The changes in this year's edition are said to be drastic, as capped projectiles and increased velocities have made great differences to Naval gunnery. The section of the Russo-Japanese War is illustrated by special photographs, few of which have appeared before, some being of the highest technical interest and importance. The price of the volume is raised to one guinea net.

Fighting Ships.

* * *

WHEN a man composes his poems during a war, and scribbles them down in note-books, you do not expect a new Tennyson, Browning, or Swinburne. And "Centurion," the author of "Ante-Room Ballads" (Routledge), is none of these. He is, however, a writer of sound sense, shrewd humour, manly sentiment, and considerable fluency in rhyme, and we can commend his tiny book of verses to the casual reader. Many of them are on the topic of the war, and very spirited they are. Many are amusing, all are straightforward, vivid, and clearly the work of a man who knows more of poetry than his modest preface confesses.

Ante-room Ballads.

* * *

HINTS on the stable, by Mrs. Power O'Donoghue, are published by Messrs. Thacker and Co. in a revised and up-to-date edition, under the title of "Riding for Ladies." The book has nearly seventy illustrations by the well-known artist, Mr. A. Chantrey Corbould. Among the chapters are articles dealing with "Ought Children to Ride?" "Lady's Dress on Horseback," "How to Canter and Trot," etc., with special advice as to how to fall off. It will prove a most useful book to every horsewoman.

Riding for Ladies.

* * *

"AND who shall say that bridge is dead?" Here, from Messrs. Thomas de la Rue and Co. are the sixth edition of Mr. W. Dalton's "Bridge Abridged, or Practical Bridge" (3s. 6d. net), and the second edition of the same authority's "Bridge at a Glance" (1s. 6d. net). The latter is, so to speak, an abridgment of "Bridge Abridged," arranged for those who wanted some little book in which they could go straight to the point required, without wading through other sound but irrelevant matter. Both books, as bridge players do not need to be reminded, are excellent.

Bridge.

---

BOOKS TO READ.

The Scenery of London. Painted by Herbert Marshall; described by G. E. Mitton. (Black.)
London to the Nore. Painted and described by W. L. and Mrs. Wyllie. (Black.)
An Eye-witness in Manchuria, by Lord Brooke. (Nash.)
Some Famous Women of Wit and Beauty, by John Fyvie. (Constable.)
James Macpherson: An Episode in Literature, by J. S. Smart. (Nutt.)
A Jay of Italy, by Bernard Capes. (Methuen.)
The Parish Nurse, by May E. Mann. (Methuen.)
Hugh Rendal, by Lionel Portman. (Alston Rivers.)
Children of Earth, by Sidney Paternoster. (Long.)
The Vegetable Garden. (Murray.)
Country Cottages: How to Build, Buy, and Fit them up, by "Home Counties." (Heinemann.)
Arachnia, by James Robertson. (Macmillan.)
Shrewsbury, by Thomas Auden. (Methuen's Ancient Cities.)

Digitized by Google

Grape-Nuts

MAKE STURDY PEOPLE.

There's a reason:

All the needed portions of wheat and barley—the brain, nerves, bone and teeth building elements—are in this scientific food.

The starch is turned into grape sugar, in which form it is accepted without protest by the most sensitive stomachs.

GRAPE-NUTS are fully cooked at the factory, and therefore ready for instant serving. Never a sticky, under-cooked mess. It entirely supersedes porridge.

The price is right—7d. per packet of 14 portions at all dealers.

Try this Ideal Summer Food.

GIVE ME

the luxuries, I will dispense with the necessaries, is a well-known saying. Cook's "THRONE" Toilet Soap is well called "luxury's necessity." It is characterised by a very soft soothing lather and perfume.

4d. per Tablet; 10½d. per 3-Tablet Box.

OF ALL CHEMISTS AND STORES.

Six Dainty Samples of Cook's Pure Toilet Soaps sent, post free, for six penny stamps.

EDWARD COOK & CO., Ltd., The Soap Specialists, LONDON, E.

UNDOUBTEDLY

over-indulgence in paper Cigarettes is injurious. Medical men emphatically state that it is responsible for much ill-health. A hygienic substitute is the

FLOR DE DINDIGUL

CIGARETTE (All Tobacco Leaf—No Paper).

It is far more satisfying, is deliciously mild, mellow to the palate, pure, and dispenses with the evil effects of paper. Doctors recommend and smoke them. They are truly a delightful Whiff. You should try them! Awarded 10 Gold Medals. Sold everywhere, 1d. each, 8/- per 100; and by BEWLAY, 49, Strand. Established 125 years.

LEAMINGTON SPA.

REGENT HOTEL.

ENTIRELY RECONSTRUCTED.

DECORATIONS BY MAPLE.

Electric Light. Telephones in Every Room. Lift. Stabling for 90 Horses.

Garage and Resident Engineer.

APPLY FOR TARIFF.

Telegrams: "REGENT, LEAMINGTON." Tel. No. 0659.

MODES.

MAISON LEWIS,

16, Rue Royale, PARIS.

Entrance, 422, Rue St. Honoré.

Place du Casino, MONTE CARLO.

7, Place de la Mairie, BIARRITZ.

210, Regent Street, LONDON. W.

Llangammarch Wells,

CENTRAL WALES.

(The British Nauheim.)

An Ideal Spa for the Treatment of Heart Disease, Gout, and Rheumatism.

THE LAKE HOTEL

A first-class Hotel situated in extensive Private Grounds and lighted throughout with Electricity.

Telegraphic Address: "BARIUM," LLANGAMMARCH WELLS. Apply MANAGEMENT.

GOLF CLUB WITHIN FIVE MINUTES' WALK.

TRAVEL BY THE

G. W. R.

WEEKLY and AUGUST EXCURSIONS

TO ALL HEALTH AND PLEASURE RESORTS IN

CORNWALL, DEVON, SOMERSET, DORSET, CHANNEL ISLANDS, ISLE OF MAN, IRELAND, NORTH AND SOUTH WALES, MIDLANDS, BERKS, BUCKS, WILTS, WORCESTER, GLOUCESTER, SHROPSHIRE, WARWICK, HEREFORD, ETC., ETC.

EXCURSION FARES FROM PADDINGTON:

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| PENZANCE | 27/- | NEWQUAY | 25/- | WEYMOUTH | 13/6 |
| ST. IVES | | PLYMOUTH | 21/- | SWANSEA | 17/6 |
| FALMOUTH | 26/- | EXETER | 16/- | CARDIFF | 15/- |
| HELSTON | | ILFRACOMBE | 20/6 | TENBY | 22/6 |

LONG-DISTANCE NON-STOP ORDINARY EXPRESS TRAIN.

WORLD'S RECORD ORDINARY EXPRESS LONDON and PLYMOUTH.

246 Miles in 265 Minutes.

DAILY SERVICE EACH WAY.

ENTIRELY NEW TRAINS. 1st and 3rd Class only. Seats Reserved on payment of 1/- above the fares.

MALE AND FEMALE ATTENDANTS TRAVEL WITH THIS EXPRESS TRAIN TO WAIT ON PASSENGERS, ATTEND INVALIDS, CHILDREN, ETC, ETC.

For all information apply at the Company's Stations or Offices, or send post-card to Superintendent of Line, Paddington Station. James C. Inglis, General Manager.

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

No. LII.—THE PIONEERS OF "POTTING" AT WORCESTER. JOHN WALL, M.D.—HIS ASSOCIATES AND HISTORIAN.

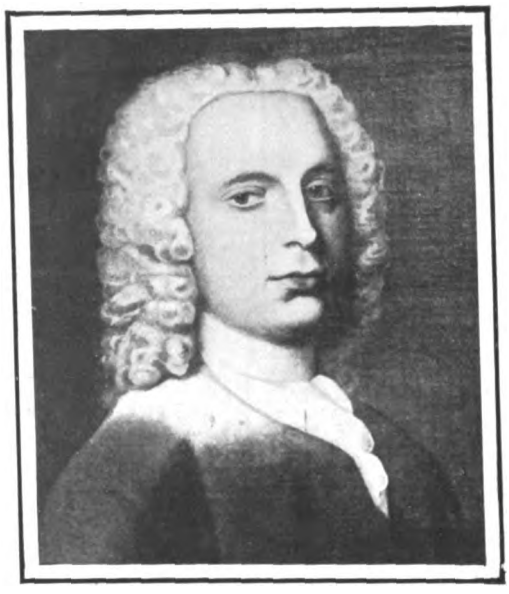
EARLY WORCESTER CHINA.

(1) A British ship portrayed on a cider mug, about 1755. (2) Cider cup, showing political emblems suggestive of the alleged origin of the porcelain works. (3) A milkmaid mug.

THE story of the rise and progress of porcelain-making at Worcester occupies a unique place in the history of British ceramics. By a curious coincidence it will form a not altogether unappropriate sequel to the observations made last week on the artistic ability often displayed by professors of the healing art, for the pioneer of Worcester "potting" (to borrow the homely phrase of Mr. R. W. Binns, its able historian) was a man who, if he had not been a distinguished physician and practical chemist, would have certainly won name, fame, and fortune as a celebrated painter. As it is, John Wall is entitled to a place amongst English potters very little inferior to that occupied in France by Bernard Palissy, and in Italy by Luca della Robbia or Maestro Georgio. John Wall was indubitably the Josiah Wedgwood of Worcester. He was beyond the possibility of quibble the founder of one of the best-known and most successful of our national industries, yet "The Dictionary of National Biography" is wholly and provokingly silent on this important feature in his many-sided career, preferring to immortalise him as the writer of erudite essays on the employment of musk in cases of hiccough and fevers, the use of cinchona bark as a remedy for small-pox, the nature of angina pectoris, and the treatment of putrid sore throat! Wall, it seems, was the first man to call attention to the curative properties of the Malvern Waters, and the medicinal attributes of olive oil. He was born in 1708, matriculated at Worcester College, Oxford, at the age of eighteen, graduated four years later, took the degrees of M.A. and M.B. in 1736, and that of M.D. in 1759, eight years after he had turned Warmstry House on the banks of the Severn into a prosperous porcelain factory. He passed the whole of his life at Worcester, but died at Bath on June 27, 1776. His son states in the preface to his father's tracts, which he published in a collected form at Oxford after his death, that "an unremitting attachment to the art of painting engaged almost every moment of his leisure hours from his infancy to his death," but not a syllable escapes him either as to the pottery works at Worcester, or the stained-glass windows at Hartlebury and Oxford, although the presence of pictures by him at both Hagley Park and Merton College is faintly indicated.

If Worcester china is the only form of English porcelain which owes its existence to the skill and enterprise of a medical man, its raison d'être is not a whit less extraordinary. "However true it may be," writes Mr. Binns, "that between 1740 and 1750 Worcester required a manufacture of some kind to employ the working classes, then suffering from loss of trade, we are disposed to believe that had not that manufacture conduced to bring together a number of intelligent artificers,



JOHN WALL, M.D.

The pioneer of "potting" at Worcester. Born 1708, died 1776.

who should be eligible as electors for the city, and also enable the proprietors to create voters, who should be devoted to their cause, in the apprentices who were bound to their manager, we should not have had Worcester porcelain."

It appears, therefore, that the present prosperous Royal Porcelain Works at Worcester owe their first inception to the exigencies of local politics and the skill of a local medical practitioner, who was at the same time an artist, a chemist, and an ardent supporter of what was then called the "low" party. The election of 1747 was one of the fiercest ever known, even in the "City of Many Sieges," which appears to have been a veritable political cock-pit from time immemorial. Mr. Binns believes that this election was the direct incentive to the establishment of a new manufacture in Worcester, "as it induced the leading members of the 'low' or anti-Tory party to deliberate as to the means by which they might more easily and more certainly return a member favourable to their views."

A patent taken out by one Thomas Frye of Bow in 1749 very likely influenced the train of thought which two years later led Wall to associate himself with Winnington, Ingram, Vernon, and other stalwart Whigs in acquiring Warmstry House, and starting on the banks of the Severn a manufactory destined, before Dr. Wall's death, to acquire celebrity in every part of the world, both for the beauty of the china itself, as well as for the taste displayed in its decoration. It is also said that politics influenced many of the earlier subjects chosen for illustration. The King of Prussia appears constantly on the mugs and plates, and so does the head of George II., accompanied by all sorts of Republican emblems, like the specimen now reproduced. As early as 1752 a woodcut of the Worcester "works" appeared in the Gentleman's Magazine. By this time the historic "crescent" mark had been adopted from the "cross molyn between four crescents" of the Warmstry arms, and it was announced that "a sale of this manufacture will begin at the Worcester Music Meeting on September 20 with great variety of ware, and 'tis said at a moderate price." The whole of the illustrations now given belong to the first decade of the "factory's" existence.

B.

EARLY WORCESTER WARE.

(1) Masonic beer mug engraved by Ross, probably about 1770. (2) Plate and tobacco jar of milkmaid pattern. (3) A Worcester mug with portrait of Shakespeare.

Some of the previous subjects dealt with in the "Collector's Note-book" have been:

Famous Dorsetshire Medals. April 8, 1905.
Engraved Shakespeare Portraits. April 22, 1905.
Freemasonry—Relics and Curiosities. April 29, 1905.
Three Centuries of British Broadsides. May 20, 1905.
Oak-apple Day and Its Associations. May 27, 1905.
Welsh Porcelain: Nantgarw China. June 10, 1905.
Waterloo Medals — British and Foreign. June 17, 1905.
Relics of Independence Day. July 1, 1905.
Eary Editions of the "Pilgrim's Progress." July 15, 1905.
Antiquities of Methodism - Wesleyana. July 22, 1905.

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

hold and offer for sale specimens of the

HIGHEST QUALITY

OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE

as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.

EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.

AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.

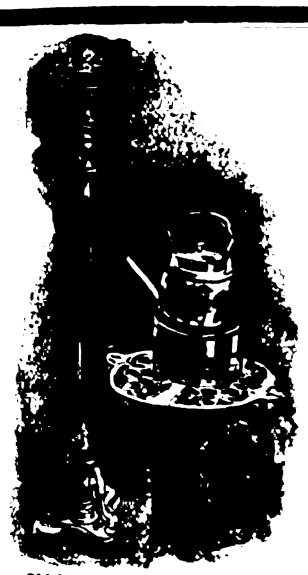
(Two hours from Paddington.)



Old Brass Stand and Lamp.

THE MISSES

H. & I. WOOLLAN

(Under Royal Patronage)

are showing a

UNIQUE

Collection of

Antiques.

Chippendale, Sheraton, and Hepplewhite Furniture . Worcester and Lowestoft Services Lace, Glass, etc.

Showrooms—First Floor

28, BROOK STREET, GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

CATALOGUES OF

ILLUSTRATED BOOKS, VIEWS, PORTRAITS, etc.,

GRATIS.

Books and Engravings Bought.

JAMES RIMELL & SON,

DEALERS IN OLD BOOKS AND ENGRAVINGS,

53, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON, W.

FOR SALE.

96 VOLUMES OF

THE ANNUAL REGISTER,

Numbered 2 to 97 inclusive, dates 1759 to 1855.

BOUND WHOLE CALF. IN GOOD CONDITION.

Offers to No. A 1000, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

To Portrait & Print Collectors & Extra-Illustrators.

Kindly inspect stock or signify wants to

GEORGE SUCKLING, 13, Garrick Street

(next door to Garrick Club).

Mr. SUCKLING undertakes inlaying, arranging and binding of extra-illustrated books.

AUTOGRAPHS—HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS.

The oldest Dealers in Europe. For Catalogues, issued monthly, and all information write at once to

M. NOEL CHARAVAY,

3, RUE DE FURSTENBERG, PARIS,

where the "AMATEUR DES AUTOGRAPHES," a valuable Monthly Publication, may also be obtained.

JAMES TREGASKIS,

"The Caxton Head," 232, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.

RARE BOOKS,
MEDIÆVAL MANUSCRIPTS,
DOCUMENTS OF LITERARY & HISTORICAL INTEREST,
ORIGINAL DRAWINGS,
ENGRAVINGS,
AMERICANA,
CURIOSITIES,
ANTIQUITIES,
OBJECTS OF ART.

Catalogues Price Sixpence.

PORTRAITS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.

ENGLISH—FOREIGN—AMERICAN.

RARE ENGRAVINGS OF ALL SORTS.

WRITE FOR CATALOGUES OR VISIT THE SHOWROOMS OF

M. GODEFROY MAYER,

41, RUE BLANCHE, PARIS.

BATH.

GEORGE GREGORY,

BOOKSELLER, Etc.

Write for Catalogues. An inspection of Mr. Gregory's shop should not be omitted by any visitor to Bath. Speciality—Americana. Old Bath. Colour-plate books. Autographs.

Address: 5, ARGYLE STREET.

Bookbinding.—The Bedford Bindery.

OLD-ESTABLISHED FIRM.

VERY MODERATE PRICES. Special attention paid to extra-illustrated works.

SPECIMENS ON VIEW.

G. F. AYLING, 1A, CAMBRIDGE ST., EDGWARE ROAD, W.

MAGGS BROS.,

109, STRAND, W.C., LONDON, ENGLAND.

Dealers in RARE BOOKS AND FINE LIBRARY EDITIONS OF STANDARD AUTHORS, Voyages and Travels, Early Printed Books, 1st Editions of 17th, 18th, and 19th Century writers, Illustrated Works. Also Rare Portraits, Line, Stipple, Mezzotints, and Colour Engravings, and Autographs.

Recently issued—Illustrated Catalogues of Rare Books, Voyages and Travels, Engravings, Autographs. Price 6d. each.

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

For Spaces in the Register apply to "THE EDITOR."

WANTED.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

Wanted, Autograph Letters of Theatrical People, especially Quin, George Colman the younger, and Miss Farren.—825, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

William Bodham Donne, any good autograph letters.—826, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Freemasonry, Constitutions of. 4to, 1784; in boards preferred. £1 10s. offered.—174, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Jest Books relating to Napoleonic Wars with coloured caricatures of Buonaparte. 10s. 6d. each offered.—175, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

The Vocal Magazine. Vol. II, 1778. 10s. offered.—176, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Boxiana. Vols. IV. and V. In perfect condition, with plates. 50s. offered.—177, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Any book or pamphlet relating to the art of colour pictures on glass, 1750-1805. 5s. offered.—178, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Early Doulton Pottery. Also any Pamphlets relating to the firm.—525, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

TAPESTRY, FURNITURE, Etc.

Carved Chippendale Bureau Bookcase.—412, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Naval Prints published by any of the following:—C. Sheppard, 74, Little Britain; C. Taylor, Holborn (date 1791); J. Fairburn, 110 and 146, Minories (1800-1838); Tabart and Co., London; E. Rushton, Paradise Street, Liverpool; W. Belch, Bridge Street, Boro'; I. Houlston, Strand; R. Sly, 41, Union Street, Somers Town; J. Marshall, Aldermary Churchyard, London.—237, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good Impressions with good margins of engravings of old London, especially Covent Garden, the Temple, the Strand, Lincoln's Inn.—249, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Boxing. Small old Portraits Cribb and Molyneux.—255, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good specimen of Baxter prints with a short biography of Baxter.—257, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Picturesque views of Dorsetshire (coloured), 4to, published by Love, Weymouth, about 1800. £1 10s. offered.—258, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Rare colour portraits of Nelson.—260, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Bristol Theatre. Old playbills, 1855-57, with name of Marie Wilton (Lady Bancroft) in cast.—748, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Book Plates—Naval, Masonic, Bath, Dorset.—749, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Fan papers relating to Nelson or Buonaparte, 1795-1815. Liberal offer.—751, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

BOOKS.

Scrap Book containing almost complete collection of theatrical notices from 1850 to 1865. In good condition.—132A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Ten Battersea Boxes with portraits. What offers.—522, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Set of Champagne Glasses, beautifully cut.—523, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Small Library, theatrical, naval, topographical principally. Would disperse or sell en bloc.—747A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

TAPESTRY.

Venetian Chair, XVIIIth Century.—409A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

THE Siddeley-Meyan match resulted in a dead heat, as both cars completed the 4,400 kilomètres within the prescribed time, and fulfilled all the conditions of the competition; that is to say, they averaged about 185 miles a day for fifteen days over very trying country, and maintained a mean speed of more than 25 kilomètres per hour on each of the numerous sections into which the itinerary was divided. This perhaps is not surprising, as both the 18-h.p. Siddeley and the 24-h.p. De Diétrich are cars of the highest standing. It is interesting to learn that the competing vehicles had covered many thousands of miles in ordinary use before they set out on this long reliability trial.

* * *

It is worth while to recall the fact that the match was in reality the outcome of a somewhat amusing mistake. An advertisement appeared in The Times setting forth the merits of British-built cars in general, and asserting that the world's record for reliability was held by a car of native origin, a statement which was obviously based on the successful result of the 5,000-mile official trial which a Siddeley had undergone during the winter. The French papers, presumably misled by their London correspondents, got the mistaken notion that The Times had been devoting a series of leading articles to the praise of the British motor industry, and fired by the allegation that the Siddeley was the most reliable car in the world, M. Meyan issued his challenge to run his De Diétrich against any vehicle built on this side of the Channel, with the result now known to everybody.

* * *

The Autocar has published some interesting statistics concerning the number of motor-vehicles in this country. According to the figures which have been obtained from the various registration authorities there were 31,129 cars, 34,706 motor-bicycles, and 868 commercial motors on the road at the end of June last. The total number of motor-vehicles registered on that date was, therefore, 66,703, showing an increase of 26,842, or 67 per cent., since the corresponding date in last year. These figures, by the way, take no account of the large number of machines which are registered under a manufacturer's general identification mark.

* * *

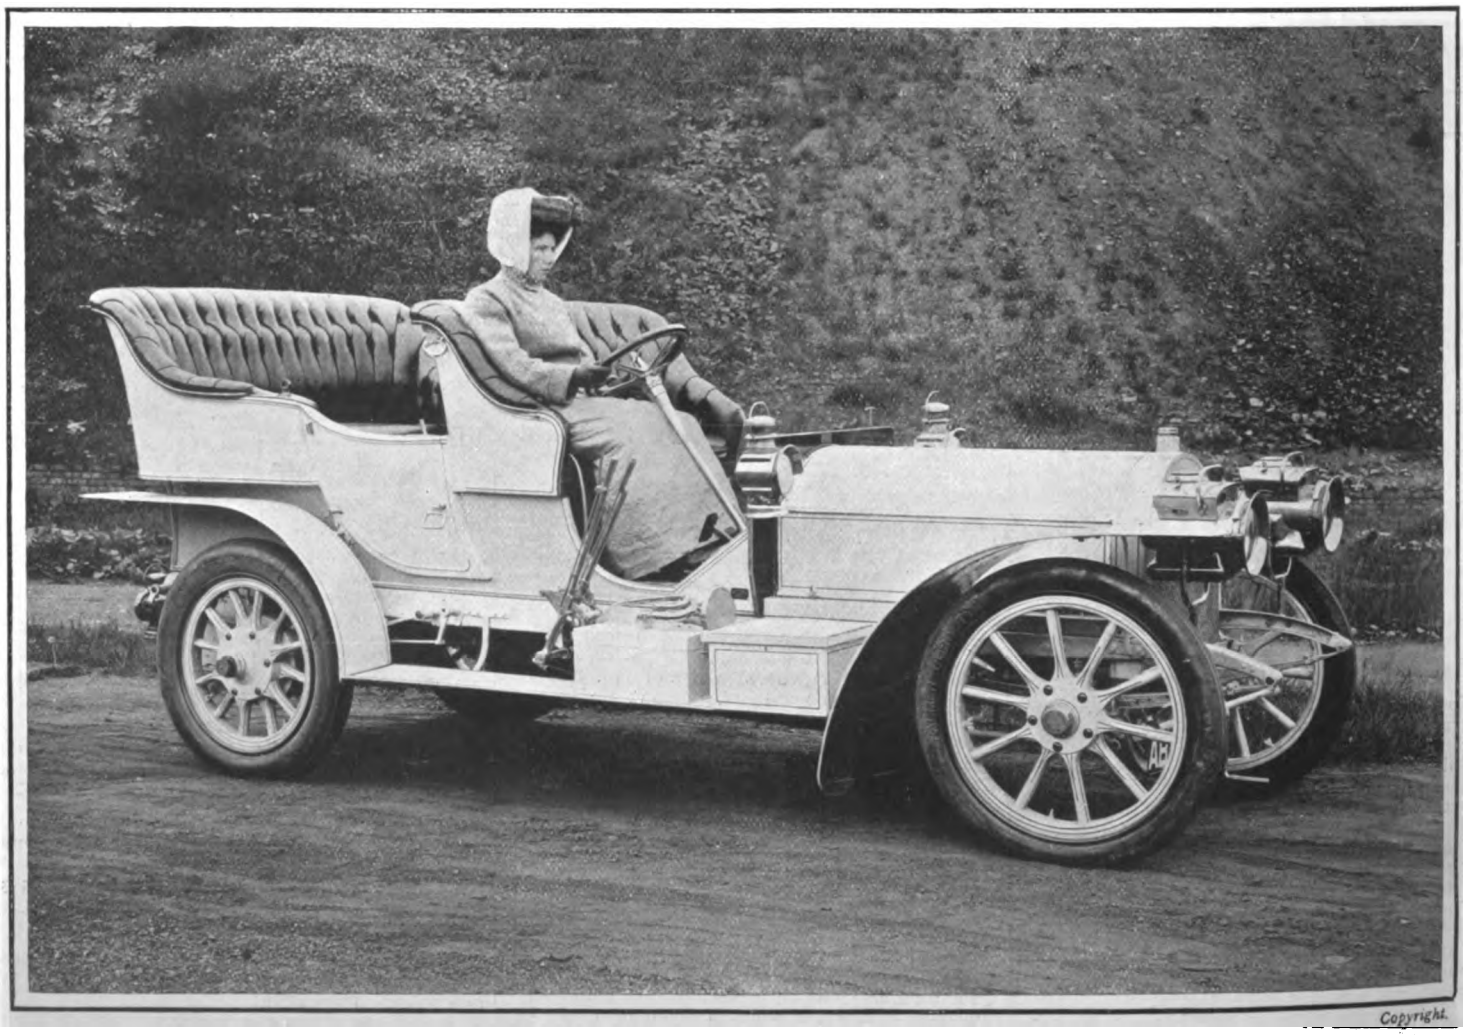
The Blackpool Meeting was confined to racing cars and bicycles and big touring vehicles stripped of their ordinary bodies and run in racing trim. In the latter class the Daimlers again proved invincible. In a scratch race of one and a-half miles with a standing start for cars whose chassis price does not exceed £1,250, Mr. A. Birtwistle's 35-h.p. Daimler proved an easy winner, although among the other starters were a 70-h.p. Darracq, a 60-h.p. Berliet, a 40-h.p. Léon-Bollée, a 50-h.p. Itala, and a 40-h.p. Hermes. Another 35-h.p. Daimler was second, driven by Mr. Percy Martin. In another race for chassis priced at not more than £1,500, Mr. Birtwistle, with the same car, again proved victorious over a 60-h.p. Mercédès, a 50-h.p. Panhard, and a 70-h.p. Darracq, Mr. Instone's Daimler running second.

* * *

In the racing classes Cissac, on his 12-h.p. Peugeot, rode the flying kilomètre in 25 3-5-sec., equivalent to a speed of 88 miles an hour, beating his own world's record of 26-sec. at Brighton. Among the big racers the six-cylinder Napier, driven by Earp, won the flying mile with an average for three runs of 38·07-sec., or 94·7 miles per hour. His best attempt was 37 2-5-sec., or 96·25 miles per hour. Mr. Lee Guinness was second on his 100-h.p. Darracq, with an average of 40·7-sec.

* * *

Friday's racing was over the flying kilomètre, and some remarkable results were achieved. In the £1,250 class, Mr. Percy Martin's 35-h.p. Daimler averaged 30·5-sec., or 73·5 miles per hour for three runs over the distance. A 70-h.p. Darracq was second, less than one mile per hour slower. In the £1,500 class, in which many of the same cars competed, the order was reversed, the Darracq being placed first, with an average of a fraction under 30-sec., with Mr. Martin's Daimler second. Three other Daimlers competed, as well as a 100 h.p. Darracq, a 60-h.p. Mercédès, and a 60-h.p. Napier. In the racing class the six-cylinder Napier, driven by Earp, was easily first, its times being 23 1-5-sec., 22 4-5-sec., and 22 4-5-sec. for the three runs. Towards the conclusion of the meeting, Earp, running with the wind behind him, made a series of attempts on the world's record for the flying kilomètre. The time for his first effort was 21 3-5-sec., which on his second run he improved by 1-5-sec., thus tying with the world's record made by Baras on a 100-h.p. Darracq at Ostend. Earp's time is really more meritorious than the Frenchman's, as the Blackpool track has a slight curve, and the wind which favoured the English car on Friday last was less strong than that which blew behind Baras on the long, straight Ostend road. The time works out at 104·46 miles per hour. The Lancashire Handicap, over a mile and a-halt, resulted in a win for the 8-h.p. Coventry Humber, which received an allowance of 60-sec.



MISS VICTORIA GODWIN
On the 30-h.p. Ariel car which she drove at the Brighton Meeting.

Digitized by Google

MERCÉDÈS

A CLASSIC MODEL

AS USED BY

H.M. Edward VII., King of England.
H.I.M. Wilhelm II., Emperor of Germany.
H.M. Leopold II., King of the Belgians.
H.M. Carlos I., King of Portugal.

40 h.p. short chassis, fitted with Roi des Belges coach body, with canopy and wind shield, painted and upholstered in Mercédès red; entrance through the front seat.

IMMEDIATE DELIVERY.
PARTICULARS ON REQUEST.

Sole Concessionnaires:
Cannstatt Mercédès, Ltd.,
127, Long Acre, W.C.

The World is our Oyster
We open it for you

TOURIST DEAN AND DAWSON AGENTS

If on business or pleasure bent, seek our advice. — We will save you time and money.

We issue Official Tickets of Railway and Steamship Companies.

We arrange Pleasure Tours and Cruises.

Our British, Scotch and Irish Tours for short or long periods are of the Cheapest and Best.

We issue Rundreise Tickets for Continental Travel at about 30 less than ordinary fares.

Tell us where you wish to go in any part of the World and we will fix up the lowest rates by the best routes.

Our services will cost you nothing.

82, STRAND - (Approach Hotel Cecil) W.C. and Branches.

French Fleet at Portsmouth

AUGUST 7th to 13th.

PORTSMOUTH and the ISLE OF WIGHT by the BRIGHTON & SOUTH COAST RAILWAY.

Week-day Fast Through Trains and Boat Service:—

| FROM | | a.m. | a.m. | a.m. | p.m. | p.m. | p.m. | p.m. | p.m. | p.m. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Victoria | dep. | 10 30 | 11 35 | ... | 1 42 | ... | 3 55 | ... | ... | 4 55 |
| London Bridge | ,, | 10 25 | ... | 11 35 | .. | 1 50 | ... | 4 0 | 4 55 | 5 0 |
| Portsmouth | arr. | 12 55 | 1 36 | 2 16 | 3 47 | 4 22 | 5 53 | 6 39 | 6 59 | 7 40 |
| Ryde | ,, | 1 50 | 2 20 | 3 5 | 4 30 | 5 15 | 6 35 | 7 45 | 7 45 | 8 40 |
| Sandown | ,, | ... | 2 52 | 3 38 | 4 57 | 5 50 | 7 3 | 8 24 | 8 19 | 9 8 |
| Shanklin | ,, | ... | 2 58 | 3 30 | 5 4 | 5 56 | 7 8 | 8 30 | 8 30 | 9 13 |
| Ventnor | ,, | ... | 3 10 | 3 38 | 5 15 | 6 7 | 7 20 | 8 40 | 8 49 | 9 25 |
| Cowes | ,, | ... | 3 18 | 3 35 | 5 50 | 5 5[illegible] | 8 5 | 8 5 | 9 10 | 9 20 |
| Newport | ,, | ... | 2 55 | 4 7 | 6 15 | 6 15 | 7 32 | 8 40 | 8 40 | 9 55 |
| Freshwater | ,, | ... | 3 35 | 5 10 | 7 0 | 7 0 | 9 30 | 9 30 | 9 30 | |

SPECIAL EXPRESS TRAINS, MONDAY, August 7th.

| a.m. | | |
|---|---|---|
| 6.15 and 11.35 | Victoria | RETURN FARE, |
| 6.35 | London Bridge | 10/- |

The tickets are available to return by Late Special Trains from Portsmouth Harbour at 11.5 p.m., or 11 45 p.m., or by Ordinary Trains on August 7th, 8th and 9th.

STEAMBOAT TRIPS TO VIEW THE FLEET AND WITNESS THE ILLUMINATIONS.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, August 7th, 8th and 9th, the Company's Steamers will make trips to the Fleet during the day.

WEEK-END CHEAP TICKETS, Cheap Day Return, and 8 or 15-Day Tickets are issued to all the above-mentioned Seaside places.

Details of SUPERINTENDENT OF LINE, L.B. & S.C. Ry., London Bridge.

PRICE'S CANDLES.

GOLD MEDAL
PALMITINE
FOR DINING & DRAWING ROOMS

GRAND PRIZE
PARASTRINE
FOR USE UNDER SHADES

Digitized by Google

FASHIONS OF TO-DAY AND TO-MORROW.

Lemaitour and Co.

A PICTURESQUE EVENING GOWN IN WHITE FLOWERED SILK.

(Robinson and Cleaver, Regent Street, W.)

Digitized by Google

NEW ZEALAND

THE BRIGHTER BRITAIN.

A NEW COUNTRY of marvellous beauty, with a fertile soil and a splendid climate. No extremes of heat or cold.

No droughts. An abundance of water, yet no rainy season.

An Evergreen Land rich in natural products.

A GREAT SHEEP, CATTLE AND DAIRYING COUNTRY.

Cheap farms with helpful assistance to farmers by the Government. Reduced steamer fares from the United Kingdom to New Zealand for persons with small capital.

No private monopoly of Public Utilities; the Government owns and operates Railways, Telegraphs, Telephones and Insurance.

No Lock-outs! No Strikes!! Employment disputes adjusted by Arbitration!!!

NEW ZEALAND IS THE WONDERLAND OF THE WORLD.

Its Thermal Sights are unique in their extent, beauty and weirdness.

The Mammoth Geyser "Waimangu" (Black Water) hurls an immense mass of boiling water, mud and stones over 1,000 feet high.

Hot Mineral Water and Mud Baths; The Curative Baths of Rotorua, Te Aroha and Hanmer are world famous. Government doctors in attendance.

Baths. Gardens. Games. Music.

and picturesque. Here are lakes of great size and depth—canyons that surpass the greatest of other lands—dense forests with a tropical profusion of ferns and flowers—innumerable waterfalls—monoliths of granite many thousands of feet in height—glaciers, snowfields, and the peerless Sounds, with their 400 miles of inside sailing distance.

TRANSIT is convenient throughout New Zealand. Government railways, Express trains, Pullman and Dining Cars. Excellent coastal steamers. Splendid coaching routes. Hotels, good; charges moderate. Government Hotels, Spas, and Accommodation Houses in many of the principal tourist resorts.

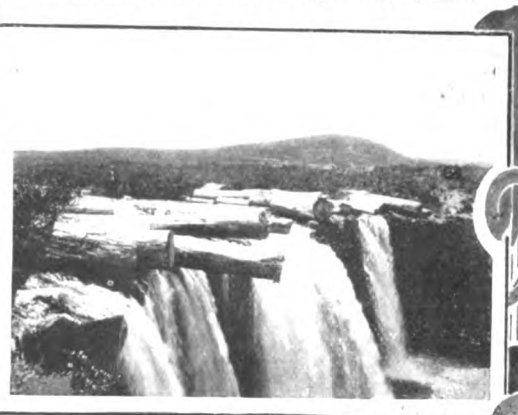
Large Mail Steamers with every modern comfort and convenience leave Great Britain for New Zealand fortnightly. Duration of direct journey, 40 days; via Suez and Australia, 44 days; via Canada, 32 days; via San Francisco, 28 days.

The best time to visit New Zealand is during the summer months, from November to April.

ALL INFORMATION regarding Travel, Tourist Routes, Spas, Baths, Sport, etc., etc., is supplied free of charge by the GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENT OF TOURIST AND HEALTH RESORTS. Head Office, WELLINGTON, NEW ZEALAND. Branch Offices throughout the Colony. Information regarding access to New Zealand, Reduced Steamer

HAULING KAURI LOGS THROUGH BUSH, KAURI FOREST, NORTH AUCKLAND.

FELLING KAURI TREE, NORTH AUCKLAND, KAURI FOREST.



WAIRUA FALLS, WAIRUA RIVER, NORTH AUCKLAND.

The ALPINE SCENERY of New Zealand combines the distinguishing features of Switzerland, Norway and America. The Southern Alps extend for 300 miles. Mt. Cook, the highest peak, is belted by the largest glaciers in the temperate regions—the Tasman being 18 miles long and 2 miles wide. Near the foot of Mt. Cook is the Hermitage Hotel. Government guides, Alpine huts, and all necessary Alpine equipment available for use of visitors.

The LAKES of New Zealand are most pleasing in their charm of colour, contour and environment. Rotorua, Rotoiti, Taupo, and Waikaremoana in the North Island; Manapouri, Wakatipu, Te Anau, Wanaka, Kanieri and Mahinapua in the South Island are the most notable. The Lakes of the South Island are surrounded by mountain scenery of singular beauty and magnificence. Steamers and Power Launches. Good Hotels.

The WEST COAST FIORDLAND is indescribably wild

Fares, Settlement Commerce, Industries, Travel, etc., etc., also supplied at the Office of the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, London—Mr. J. G. Gow, Commercial Agent for New Zealand, Durban, South Africa, also supplies general information respecting New Zealand.

Minister for Tourist and Health Resorts: Hon. Sir Joseph G. Ward, K.C.M.G. Superintendent: T. E. Donne, Wellington, New Zealand. The Superintendent invites correspondence.

See Tourist Department's "Itinerary of Travel" and descriptive Guide Books.

An International Exhibition of Products, Manufactures, Arts, Sciences, Amusements, etc., etc., is to be held by the Government of New Zealand in Hagley Park, Christchurch City, commencing 1st November, 1906, and terminating April, 1907. Full particulars obtainable from the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Westminster Chambers, 13, Victoria Street, S.W.

OKOROIRE.

HOT SPRINGS AND SANATORIUM HOTEL.

One of the finest Health Resorts in the Thermal District.

The first place of interest en route to Rotorua, New Zealand.

Delightful NATURAL HOT MINERAL BATHS, free to Guests. Sufferers from Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Affection of the Eyes, Skin Diseases, etc., are often permanently cured by these waters.

CLIMATE.—Beautifully clear and bracing atmosphere, charming surroundings.

SPORT.—The Streams in the hotel grounds are exceedingly well-stocked with Trout. Plenty of Game, viz: Pheasants, Virginian Quail, Wild Duck, Hares, and Deer. Lawn Tennis, Golf, and Croquet.

The drive from Okoroire to Rotorua is one of the most beautiful in New Zealand.

T. MARTIN,
Manager.

NEW ZEALAND.

THE GRAND HOTEL, ROTORUA.

Situated in the Centre of the Hot Lakes District.

Patronised by T.R.H. The Prince and Princess of Wales.

THE HOTEL is in the immediate neighbourhood of the beautifully laid-out Government Gardens, wherein are situated the celebrated "Priest," "Rachel," "Postmaster," "Duchess," and other mineral baths, the curative properties of which are world famous. It has magnificent and lofty apartments, spacious promenade, balconies, snug alcoves, and luxuriously-appointed drawing, music, conversation, reading, smoking, and billiard rooms, perfect sanitation, and is lighted throughout by electricity.

BATH CHAIRS and attendance provided to convey invalids to or from the various bath houses. Tariff 12/6 per day inclusive.

W. J. LEES, Manager.

THE GEYSER HOTEL,

WHAKAREWAREWA, ROTORUA.

Situated in close proximity to the wonderful Geysers and Maori Settlement.

Visitors staying at the Geyser Hotel have continued opportunity of witnessing them as they can be seen plainly from the verandah of the Hotel, also of studying native life and customs.

The Hotel possesses its own private hot and cold curative mineral baths of which the most valued are the "Spout," "Oil," and "Carlsbad" Baths.

It has lately been greatly enlarged and re-furnished in a most comfortable manner. Electric light is established throughout the hotel and baths.

Coaches run regularly between Whakarewarewa, the Rotorua Sanatorium, and Government Gardens.

Tariff 10s. per day or £3 per week, inclusive. For a lengthened stay terms can be arranged

CHAS. E. NELSON, Proprietor.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

THE railway stations are truly worth seeing at the present time; they are blockaded with trunks, bicycles, mail-carts, and children of all sizes. The eager, excited faces of the little ones, as they cluster round their tired mothers and nurses, are interesting indeed to a lover of children. This is to them the all-important season of the year. The mothers, alas! do not always look forward to this summer exodus with unmitigated delight. It is not a holiday to them. I think it would be an excellent idea to let pater-familias take his offspring to the seaside alternate years, and let mother have a holiday by herself. I overheard one man telling his meek little wife, one day last week, "I am not going away with the caravan this year, my dear; I shall take a trip alone for a few weeks—I need rest, perfect rest." I smiled to myself as I looked at the great robust-looking man and the delicate little woman at his side, doubtless with a tribe of little ones, and wished I possessed Fortunatus' cap, and could have reversed their positions during the summer holidays. Fortunately all women are not so meek and mild in these days, and some of them do manage to get a little amusement occasionally.

The shooting season will soon be here now, and the ladies' dresses are most practical and charming at the same time. Tartans, in blues and greens, made in flat-pleated skirts, are to be much worn, with plain cloth short coats, double-breasted and tight-fitting, some trimmed with soft leather in the same colours; boots and stockings all to correspond.

The Aquascutum Company of 100, Regent Street have an absolutely waterproof material of which their coats and capes are made, and entirely free from the unpleasant rubber smell. I give here an illustration of a useful coat, suitable for shooting, riding, golfing, and all outdoor exercises. For motoring these coats are invaluable. They are to be had in several varieties of colourings.

I hear of some marvellously beautiful gowns and costumes, designed by some of our leading houses for Homburg, which will be more frequented than usual this season. Some of these creations are perfectly simple in make, but the charm is in the material and exquisite cut. Lace and batiste artistically blended are most desirable for morning wear, and really some are of such delicate fabrics, and so beautifully made, that they are suitable for any dressy occasion. The sprigged Russian and Brussels nets, in cream and white, with wide insertions of handsome lace, are most useful acquisitions. I saw a very pretty young girl's evening dress the other day, which could be easily made at home. A spotted net over white glacé, the skirt had two wide insertions of silk guipure, which had a narrow quilling of Valenciennes top and bottom, and three or four flat graduated folds to the hem. The bodice was very simply draped over a turquoise blue corselet, and a guipure berthe outlined the décolletage. Those who have been fortunate in their sale bargains could easily copy this idea for very little money. Another charming evening gown is the one illustrated on another page of this issue, and emanates from the well-known firm of Messrs. Robinson and Cleaver of Regent Street. This is composed of white gros grain silk, with a charming floral design in delicate pink and green tints in perpendicular lines. This is most quaintly and picturesquely made in long plain panels, which open at regular intervals, showing an under-skirt of soft Valenciennes in tiny ruffles from the waist downwards. The bodice is delightfully simple and becoming, and the whole effect is charming and original. Lingerie is more dainty than ever, and some beautiful combinations of corset-covers and skirts are to be had in the finest of nainsooks and Indian muslins, with Swiss muslin insertions and wide frills. Open-work beadings connect the corset-cover and skirt, through which coloured ribbons are run, and form the waist. Petticoats are more elaborate than ever, and the laundry bills must be a large item. With the treatment received in the London way of washing these confections will not last very long. Therefore I cannot impress it enough on everyone to send their laundry work to country places, not only for the care taken of the clothes, but also for sanitary purposes. During this season of the year, more than at any other, when pure air is more than necessary, they should take advantage of the many admirable laundries that have the personal superintendence of able managers, with sun and fresh air and abundance of water.

Bassano.

A WATERPROOF COAT.
(The Aquascutum Company, Regent Street, W.)

I am told by good authorities that suède leather of a beautifully soft, pliable substance will be much used for early autumn promenade costumes. Some of the coats will be made in a modernised Russian blouse form, entirely of this kid, which clings most beautifully to the figure and gives a very svelte appearance.

Skirts are to be very tight-fitting, and all semblances of crinolines are obsolete. The tall, slim woman is the correct figure for autumn and winter. The new coats being designed in Paris and Vienna for that period are, from all accounts, most fascinating, but also most costly. Boots and shoes are worn to match quiet-toned costumes, but the brighter colours are dropping out again, as they do not look very good style.

I am pleased to observe that men, or at least some of them, are breaking the hard-and-fast rule and departing from the hot tweed suits and wearing entire suits of Tussore, and one or two have even had courage enough to go through London in white linen suits, and most charming and becoming they were. Certainly the wearers we remarkably handsome, broad-shouldered specimens of mankind, and could well afford to laugh at "fashion."

I have not forgotten the new face lotion I mentioned a week or two ago; indeed, it has more than answered my expectations, as it is "working wondrous well," and I have been astonished at its good effects. In the course of a few weeks I can tell you where to procure this valuable addition to your toilette necessaries. R. D.

Digitized by Google

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Prevents the Hair from falling off.

Restores Gray or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.

Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no unpleasant odour.

IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin, or even white linen.

Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

Ask your Chemist or Hair-Dresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.

Prepared only by the . . .

ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd.,
33, Farringdon Road, London, E.C.

WHELPTON'S PURIFYING PILLS

For Indigestion, Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Sea Sickness.

INVALUABLE FOR LADIES.

8, 14, and 33 stamps.

G. WHELPTON, 4, Crane Court, Fleet St., London.

SULPHOLINE SKIN LOTION.

Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, Entirely fade away.

A Scientific Method of Growing Hair

The Evans Vacuum Cap provides the scientific means of applying to the scalp the common sense principles of physical culture. Baldness and falling hair are caused by the lack of proper nourishment of the hair roots. This lack of nourishment is due to the absence of blood in the scalp—an abnormal condition. It is the blood which feeds the hair roots, as well as every other part of the body. If you want the hair to grow on the scalp the blood must be made to circulate there. It is exercise which makes the blood circulate. Lack of exercise makes it stagnant. The Vacuum method provides the exercise which makes the blood circulate in the scalp. It gently draws the rich blood to the scalp and feeds the shrunken hair roots. This causes the hair to grow.

Test It Without Expense

You can tell whether it is possible to cultivate a growth of hair on your head by ten minutes' use of the Evans Vacuum Cap. We will send you the Cap with which to make the experiment without any expense to you.

If the Evans Vacuum Cap gives the scalp a healthy glow this denotes that the normal condition of the scalp can be restored. A three or four minutes' use of the Cap each morning and evening thereafter will produce a natural growth of hair. If, however, the scalp remains white and lifeless after applying the vacuum, there is no use in trying further—the hair will not grow.

The Bank Guarantee

We will send you, by prepaid express, an Evans Vacuum Cap, and will allow you ample time to prove its virtue. All we ask of you is to deposit the price of the Cap in the Jefferson Bank of St. Louis, where it will remain during the trial period, subject to your own order. If you do not cultivate a sufficient growth of hair to convince you that the method is effective, simply notify the bank and they will return your deposit in full.

A sixteen-page illustrated book will be sent you on request, postage prepaid in full.

Evans Vacuum Cap Co., 923, Fullerton Bldg., St. Louis, U.S.A.

MEDICAL GALVANISM

HAS CONQUERED some of the most obstinate complaints after all other remedies have failed.

HALE'S IMPROVED ELECTRIC BELTS and BATTERIES for wearing next the body without blistering or injuring the skin. These appliances are

PERFECT GENERATORS OF ELECTRICITY, and are most comfortable in wear. Price One Guinea.

RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, and GOUT are speedily REMOVED by this powerful Agent.

ELECTRIC BELT and SUSPENSOR, price 42s., for MEN, for VARICOCELE, Nervous Debility, and Exhaustion, Bladder Weakness, etc.

Pamphlets Gratis. Consultations Free.

HALE & SON, Medical Galvanists,
117, CHANCERY LANE, LONDON.

THE CHARING CROSS BANK. ESTABLISHED 1870.
119 and 120, BISHOPSGATE ST. WITHIN, E.C.,
and 28, BEDFORD ST., CHARING CROSS, London.

Assets, £694,403. Liabilities, £372,291. Surplus, £322,112.

Loans of £50 to £5000 granted at a few hours' notice in town or country on mortgage of furniture, trade and farm stock, plant, crops, etc., without removal. Also on deeds, policies, and reversions. Distance no object. Easy terms.

2½ per cent. allowed on Current account balances.

DEPOSITS of £10 and upwards received on terms as under.

| | | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Subject to 3 months' Notice of Withdrawal | | | | 5 | per cent. | per annum. | |
| " | 6 | " | " | 6 | " | " | |
| " | 12 | " | " | 7 | " | " | |

Special terms for longer periods. Interest paid quarterly. The Terminable Deposit Bonds pay nearly 9 per cent., and are a safe investment. Write or call for Prospectus.

A. WILLIAMS, H. J. TALL, } Joint Managers.

BIRKBECK BANK

ESTABLISHED 1851.

Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.
Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.
Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

SPA, BELGIUM.

(10 Hours from London.)

The Oldest Chalybeate Springs in the World.

Finest Bathing Establishment in Europe. Best cure for Anæmia, Chlorosis, and Heart Affections. Countless attractions, Steeplechases, Horse Show, Concerts, Theatre, Automobile Races, Golf, Balls. For programme write

BUREAU DE PUBLICITE, SPA.

MAGNA CIDER.

"The Sparkling Wine of Somerset."

A delicious appetising beverage. Guaranteed genuine apple juice. Declared by Lancet absolutely pure. Strongly recommended by doctors in cases of Gout, Rheumatism, and Obesity. Brut Cider a speciality. Send 22s. for specimen case, containing 1 doz. quarts of Speciality and 1 doz. quarts of a sweeter blend; or 25s. for 2 doz. pints of each quality. Carriage, bottles, and cases included.—MAGNA CIDER CO., Marston Magna, Somerset.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
The charmingly situated Seaside Resort on the Dorsetshire Coast.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Unequalled for its Marine and Land Excursions. Golfing and Fishing.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Beautifully Illustrated Guides sent free of charge by the Town Clerk, on receipt of cost of postage, 3d.

Digitized by Google

THE KING'S MENU.

WHILE the dishes in to-day's menu are purposely less substantial than those usually given for a quiet shooting luncheon, they are all easily managed by a plain cook. If wished, the spiced or pickled beef so frequently the pièce de résistance on these occasions can, of course, be included, but only a thoughtless hostess sends such a thirst promoter to the hillside in August.

MACEDOINE OF FISH IN ASPIC.

This is a very useful dish, and can be varied considerably. For instance, the aspic lining of the mould can be either plain or of tomato aspic, aspic cream, cucumber aspic, or a plain fish stock jelly, flavoured with a little tarragon vinegar, can be used. The various aspics named are obtained by mixing a gill of cream, tomato, or cucumber purée with two gills of liquid aspic, tamnying, and using when cooling for lining moulds or masking, etc. For the filling of the mould layers of finely-flaked salmon, crab, or lobster, minced prawns, shrimps, or crayfish, or a mixture of two or three of these, are used, after mixing the fish selected with the following: Mix a gill each of tartare sauce and stiffly-whipped cream with two gills of just liquid aspic. The fish is put in layers alternately with the contents of a bottle of vegetable macedoine, over each layer of which must be run a very thin layer of whatever aspic is used for lining the mould. Instead of the ready prepared bottled macedoine, one of freshly-cooked young vegetables, such as peas, asparagus heads, artichoke bottoms, young carrots, and potatoes all cut into dice, French beans cut into diamonds, etc., can be used. Whether the macedoine be fresh or bottled, however, the vegetables must be well seasoned with oil, vinegar, salt, and pepper, before moulding. When the mould is full finish the top with a good layer of aspic. It should then be set on ice, and not unmoulded until it reaches its destination. When fish is not desired for the filling, use finely-flaked cold game or poultry, alone or mixed with diced foie gras. Sweetbread, tongue, or ham can be used like this, which is a very attractive way of using up any dainty odds and ends. Moreover, for a small family little individual moulds can be used, and a pretty little cold entrée evolved out of the veriest scraps of game, etc., when eked out like this with sauce and vegetables.

CASSEROLE OF PIGEONS AND STEAK.

